Inst: 4 divertimento/cassatio, A-LA, SEI, H-Bn; Sym., C, Kleine Quartbuch, ii, p.42, no.49, A-GÖ, attrib. J. Haydn (HI:C1); str trios, duets, pf works, mentioned in Kühnel catalogue, 1802

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (O. Wessely)
R.N. Freeman: 'Marie Antoinettes Hochzeitsbesuch im Stifte Melk – 1770', Stift Melk: Geschichte und Gegenwart, i (1980), 172–84
R.N. Freeman: 'Robert Kimmerling: a Little-Known Haydn Pupil', Haydn Yearbook 1982, 143–79 [with work-list]
R.N. Freeman: The Practice of Music at Melk Abbey: Based upon the Documents, 1681–1826 (Vienna, 1989)

ROBERT N. FREEMAN

Kim Min-ki [Kim Min'gi] (b 1951). Korean singer and composer of South Korean popular music. He graduated from the department of painting at Seoul National University. His musical career began in 1970 when he composed the song Ach'im isŭl 'Morning Dew'. This song, released by the rising singer Yang Hŭiŭn, won great popularity among university students and became a prominent part of Korean modern folk music and youth culture. In 1971 Kim produced a solo album, but because he participated in the anti-government student movement and the rebellious grass-roots cultural movement, his songs were forbidden and he was banned from any official activity by governmental authorities. The songs he wrote, however, were distributed through underground routes, and he became a symbol of the oppositional student movement. In 1978 he produced a music drama tape, Kongjang Ŭi Bulbit 'The Light of Factory', about the labour struggle of the 1970s; this was one of the most significant forms of progressive cultural activity in the 1980s. Until the late 1980s Kim was not allowed to take part in any official music activity, and he worked in a factory and on a farm for some time. With the gradual democratization of South Korean society after 1987, he was again able to work freely as a musician, and in 1993 he produced an album of his collected works on four CDs. Since then he has concentrated on rock musicals, engaging himself in both production and translation. At the end of the 20th century he was the manager of a little theatre, Hakchŏn, and explored ways to create original rock musicals in Korean style.

KIM CHANG-NAM

Kim Sohŭi [Kim So-hee] (b Koch'ang, North Chŏlla Province, Korea, 1917; d Seoul, 1995). Korean performer of the dramatic narrative vocal genre p'ansori. She was probably the best known Korean female singer of the 20th century. Like many other traditional singers, Kim came from South-west Korea. Starting at the age of 12, she studied with a number of noted teachers, in particular Song Man'gap, Chŏng Chŏngnyŏl, Pak Tongsil and Chŏng Ŭngmin. She won the Namwŏn P'ansori Singers' Competition at the age of 13 and was making recordings by the age of 19. She was especially noted for her performance of The Story of Sim Ch'ŏng, one of five extended stories in the modern repertory, in which a dutiful daughter sacrifices her life in order to restore her father's eyesight.

The training of a p'ansori singer is arduous and in most cases produces a strong but raspy voice; Kim was able to retain a powerful and rich basic voice without losing the variety of sound required for this dramatic form. She was also a talented performer on the kayagŭm, an accomplished dancer and a noted calligrapher. She was made an Intangible Cultural Treasure in 1964 for her performance of The Story of Ch'unhyang, and many recordings preserve her distinctive style.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M.R. Pihl: The Korean Singer of Tales (Cambridge, MA, 1994), 105–9

Yi Pohyŏng: 'P'ansori myŏngch'ang Kim Sohŭi' [Famous p'ansori singer Kim Sohŭi], P'ansori yŏn'gu [Studies in p'ansori], v (1995), 325–39 [interview]

ROBERT C. PROVINE

Kim Sŏngjin (b Seoul, 1916). Korean taegŭm player. He studied in the training school of the Korean Royal Court Music Institute (Yiwangjik aakpu) in the 1920s and thus is a direct link to masters of the late Chosŏn period (1392–1910), the last of Korea's royal dynasties. He retained what he learnt there through the difficulties of the Japanese colonialization of Korea (1910–45), which included repression of native Korean arts. He was for many years a noted member of the National Center for Korean Traditional Performing Arts (Kungnip kugagwŏn), rising to the position of head musician.

Kim is particularly known for his performance of a solo flute piece called Ch'ŏngsŏng chajin hanip, which is in the repertory of every Korean flute player; his performance has great depth of feeling and is the perfect exemplar of good taste against which all other performances are judged. He was named an Intangible Cultural Treasure for court music taegŭm in 1968, as well as for the orchestral music performed at the Royal Ancestral Shrine (Chongmyo) in Seoul. He is extremely active as a teacher, and nearly every traditional flute player in Korea has come under his influence either directly or indirectly.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Chungyo muhyŏng munhwajae haesŏl: ŭmak p'yŏn [Description of intangible cultural treasures: music] (Seoul, 1985), 365–6 [pubn of the Cultural Properties Preservation Bureau]

Myŏngin myŏngch'ang [Famous musicians and singers] (Seoul, 1987), 105–113 [pubn of eds. of Ŭmak tonga]

ROBERT C. PROVINE

Kim Sunnam (b Seoul, 28 May 1917; d Sinp'o, 1983). Korean composer. Born in Seoul during the Japanese colonial period, he travelled to Tokyo in November 1937, enrolling in the Tokyo Music School in the spring of 1938. He returned to Korea in 1943, and was soon associated with the independence movement. After the defeat of Japan, Kim was involved with a series of left-leaning musician and artist collectives. He was head of composition in the Korean Proletarian Music Union, founded in September 1945, and the Korean Musicians' Union, founded in December. Elected to the central committee of the Nationalist People's Battle Forces (1946), he was soon under police surveillance and, with many other artists, he moved northwards to ally himself with the socialist regime. He was appointed head of composition at the Pyongyang National Music School (1948), and subsequently served on a number of central committees. Kim was the most prolific of revolutionary song writers in the first five years following liberation. His political and nationalist ideas are well expressed by the songs Kŏn'guk haengjin'gok, Sangnyŏl, Haebang ŭi norae and Inmin Hangjaengga. His lyric songs, cast in a style inherited from Japan earlier in the century but with texts describing the beauty of Korea, include Sanyuhwa and Chindallae kkot. Abstract works such as the Piano Trio and Piano Concerto develop from the Expressionist mould.

In 1952, after being appointed a teacher at Pyongyang Music University, Kim was sent to Moscow for further study with Khachaturian. Six months later, having written only a piece for oboe in Moscow, Kim's promising career was abruptly ended. Ordered back to P'yŏngyang, along with many artists who had emigrated from what was now the capitalist South Korea, he found himself alienated from the proletarian ideals he had fought for as Kim Il Sung purged him and all potential opposition to his leadership. Forbidden to compose, he was eventually sent to Sinp'o, an isolated port on the east coast in South Hamgyŏng province. He was rehabilitated in late 1964, and for three years some of his works were heard and published in the capital. By 1970 he had again been sent to Sinp'o; little is known about the last period of his life. A fuller account of his career is given in No Tongŭn: Kim Sunnam, kŭ salmkwa yesul ('Kim Sunnam, his life and art', Seoul, 1992).

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Pf Conc., 1946; Sym no.1, 1947; Chin'gyŏk [Onward March]; Namnyŏk ŭi wŏnhanŭil itch'i marara [Desire for Unification], 1966

Chbr and solo inst: Pf Sonata no.1, 1939; Kyŏrhon [Marriage], pf trio, 1944; Pf Sonata no.2, 1944; Pf Trio, 1944; Piece, ob, pf, 1952; Irŭn pom [Early Spring], vn, pf, 1966; folksong arrs., pf pieces

Vocal (1v, pf, unless otherwise stated): Kyŏngsa yoga [School Song], 1934; Sangnyŏl [Mourning Rank] (O Changhwan), 1944; T'aengja [Hardy Orange Tree] (Pak Noch'un), 1944; Chosŏn yŏja ch'ŏngnyŏn tongmaengga [Song for the Union of Korean Young Women], SA, 1945; Haebang ŭi norae [Song of Liberation] (Im Hwa), 1945; Inmin ŭi norae [People's Song], *c*1945; Kŏn'guk haengjin'gok [Foundation March for the Nation] (Kim T'aeo), 1945; Uri ŭi norae [Our Song] (Yi Tonggyu), 1945; Nongmin'ga [Farmers' Song] (Pak Aji), 1945; Tongnip ŭi ach'im [Morning of Independence] (Yi Chuhong), 1945; Inmin Hangjaengga [Song of Resistance], 1946; Nam Chosŏn hyŏngjeyŏ itch'i marara (Im Hwa), 1946; Para – tae, SATB, str orch, *c*1946; Yemaeng ŭi norae (Im Hwa), 1946; Ch'ohon [Dusk] (Kim Sowŏl), 1947; Chosŏn minju aeguk ch'ŏngnyŏn tongmaengga [Korean People's Youth Union Anthem] (Im Hwa), 1947; Pada [Sea] (Kim Sowŏl), 1947; Sanyuhwa [Mountain Flower] (Kim Sowŏl), 1947; Yugyŏktae ŭi norae [Song of the Commando Group], 1947; Chindallae kkot [Azalea Flower] (Kim Sowŏl), 1948; 8 Lullabies, 1948; Pak Hŏnyŏngege tŭrinŭn norae [Song for Pak Hŏnyŏng], 1948; Haebyŏng ŭi norae [Song of the Marines] (Cho Ryŏngch'ul), 1950; Kaesŏn haengjin'gok [Victory Procession] (Im Hwa), 1950; Kohyang ŭi ŏmŏni [Mother of Home] (Chŏng Sŏch'un), 1950; Kŭnwibudae ŭi norae [Royal Army Song] (Pak Seyŏng), 1950; Nodongja ŭi norae [Song of the Workers], *c*1950; Sŭngni ŭi Oratorio [Victory Orat], *c*1952; 11 folksong arrs., 1966

Music for theatre: Inmin yugyŏktae [The People's Commando Group], 1949

KEITH HOWARD

Kim Young Dong [Kim Yŏngdong] (b Seoul, 29 Jan 1951). Korean composer and taegŭm flute performer. He followed what has become a standard route for Korean musicians, training at the Korean Traditional Music School and Seoul National University, then performing at the National Centre for Korean Traditional Performing Arts. Refusing to observe the strictures of traditional music, he emerged in the 1970s as a composer of populist songs and film and TV soundtracks. He typically adds synthesizers and guitars to traditional instruments, often playing the taegŭm in his own compositions. He has foreshadowed trends, first in his songs setting texts of dissidents and thereby endearing the songs to university students, and most recently in creating ambient music. Sŏn (1989) has a Buddhist theme: crickets give way to temple gongs and drums, and a synthesizer supports the chanting of monks. The popularity of his compositions has encouraged many imitators.

Kim has never been happy imitating the old; he considers the addition of Western instruments in his pieces as a way to broaden the appeal of indigenous music. His characteristic use of Korean modal melodies supported by simple diatonic harmony is already present in his first dramatic score, Hanne ŭi sŭngch'ŏn (1974). This style was extended to works for traditional ensembles once his reputation was secure, notably in Maegut (1981) and Tan'gun shinhwa (1983), both modelled on folk tales. In the 1990s, work as a broadcaster for the Buddhist Broadcasting Service and as a conductor in Pusan and, latterly, for the Seoul City Traditional Music Orchestra, limited the time he could devote to composition, and Kim concentrated on arrangements of traditional music and short songs for children. Among his contributions to Korean periodicals is 'Who is Isang Yun?', Shin Tonga (May 1989).

WORKS

Orch (Korean insts): Hanne ŭi sŭngch'ŏn [The Life of Hanne] (music for drama), 1974; Mul t'oridung [The Sound of Water] (music for drama), 1978; Wech'ŏn [The Esteemed Place], 1981; Maegut [Shaman Ritual to a Falcon], 1981; Tan'gun shinhwa [The Spirit of Korea's Founder], 1983; Aniri [Narration], 1988; Sujech'ŏn and Sangnyŏngsan, arr. of court music, 1990; Kwiso [Home], 1991; Yŏmyŏng [Dawn], 1991; Ach'im ŭi sori [Morning Song], 1991; Ch'amhoe [Penitence], 1991; Ch'immuk, Taedam [Silence, Talk], 1991; Asura, 1991; Sŏn II: Myŏngsang ŭmak [Meditation Music], fl, orch, ens, 1991; Toedori, shaman ritual scene, 1991; Hwin kungnak kang [White Paradise River], 1992; Pada agane [Infant Sea], 1993; Ch'ŏnpaehwimun wa taegŭm shinawirŭl wihan kŏp, music inspired by Buddhism, fl, orch, 1998

Music for dance (Korean orch): Ch'um sori [Dance Song], 1980; T'aejon, 1980; Ttang kut [Earth Ritual], 1980; Han ture [One Team], 1986; Changsaengdo [Picture of Long Life], 1988; Kuro arirang [The Song of Kuro], 1989; Noksaek ŭi pulkil [Green Fire], 1989; Ttang ŭi Sori [Song of the Earth], 1989

Chbr and solo inst: Abae ŭi kajok [The Family of Abae] (incid music for TV), 1980; Salp'o kanŭn kil [The Road to Sal Port] (incid music for TV), 1981; Ŏdum ŭi chashiktŭl [Children of Darkness] (film score), 1981; Pŏngŏri Samnyong [Dumb Samnyong] (incid music for TV), 1982; P'amun [Ripples], Korean ens, 1983; Ttanengbyŏt [The Ribbon of Sunshine] (film score), 1984; Adada (film score), 1988; Chŏlmŭn nal ŭi ch'osang [Portrait of the Young Day] (film score), 1990; Pyŏnhwa [Change], haegŭm, ens, 1990; Ibyŏl ŭi ch'um [Dance of Separation], ens, 1990; Tari ttŭgŏdŭn [Burning Moon], ens, 1991; Kaebyŏk [Creation] (music for theatre), 1991; Yŏnghon ŭi p'iri sori [Spirit of the P'iri's Sound], p'iri, 1992; Muje [Untitled], kayagŭm, 1992; Kŏp [Kalpa], taegŭm, 1993; T'oji [Land] (music for theatre), 1995; Ttŏdonŭn sori [Wandering Song], haegŭm, 1997

Vocal: 8 Tongyo [8 Childrens' Songs], 1978; 6 Lyric Songs, 1982–8; Hakkyo kanŭn kil [School Road], vv, 1982; Sŏn: Myŏngsŏng ŭmak [Meditation Music], Buddhist chanting, fl, synth, 1989; Sin sarangga, folksong arr., vv, 1991; Amazon, Bar, fl, gui, synth, perc, 1992; Ssuktaemŏri (arr. from p'ansori repertory), 1v, 1992, Chahwasang, 1v, 1992, Ŏmŏni [Mother], 1v, synth, gui, 1992; Sansae [Mountain Bird], 1v, gui, synth, 1992; Kaebyŏk [Creation], SATB, 1993; Kuwŏn ŭi pippŭm [Eternal Grace], SATB, 1995; Ŏrŭndŭrŭn we kŭraeyo? [Children, why is it so?], childrens' songs, 1997

arr. of Aegukka [National Anthem], 1993; other songs and inst pieces

Principal publisher: Seoul Records

KEITH HOWARD

Kincaid, William (b Minneapolis, 26 April 1895; d Philadelphia, 27 March 1967). American flautist. He began to play the flute at the age of eight. In 1911 he moved to New York, where he entered the Institute of Musical Art, studying theory and composition and becoming the prize flute pupil of Georges Barrère. From 1913 to 1918 he played in the New York SO under Walter Damrosch. Following war service in the US Navy he played from 1918 to 1921 with the New York Chamber Music Society. In 1921 Stokowski invited him to join the Philadelphia Orchestra as solo flute, a post he held until his retirement in 1960. His appearances as soloist with the orchestra on more than 150 occasions did much to establish public acceptance of the flute as a solo instrument. He made many recordings, both as a soloist and as a member of the Philadelphia Woodwind Quintet, with which he played from 1952 to 1957. He taught at the Curtis Institute from its foundation in 1924 until 1967, and numbered many eminent American flautists among his pupils. From 1939 until his death he played on a platinum flute made by Verne Q. Powell of Boston.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Krell: Kincaidiana: a Flute Player's Notebook (Culver City, CA, 1973/R)

PHILIP BATE/JOHN SOLUM

Kind, (Johann) Friedrich (b Leipzig, 4 March 1768; d Dresden, 25 June 1843). German writer. He studied at the Thomasschule (1782), where he came to know Johann August Apel. He began writing poetry while pursuing his legal studies; then, settling in Dresden (1792), he published some novels and poetry, also doing much occasional writing and journalism. He was a member of the 'Dichter-Thee', later 'Liederkreis', that included Helmina von Chezy and subsequently Weber. His play Van Dycks Landleben was produced in Dresden in 1816, and in the same year he took on the editing, with Karl Winkler ('Theodor Hell'), of the Dresdner Abendzeitung. Kind first met Weber in 1816, and they subsequently collaborated on a number of projects. Weber's triumph at the première of Der Freischütz (Berlin, 1821) embittered Kind, as he felt that insufficient credit was given to his libretto; this was to stimulate him to a series of more ambitious literary projects that earned him some renown in his day. He withdrew from the Abendzeitung in 1826, and retired from literary life in 1832, dying in obscurity.

Kind wrote librettos for Marschner and Kalliwoda, and his play Das Nachtlager von Granada was the basis for Conradin Kreutzer's opera of the same name. He is remembered today only as the author of the text for Der Freischütz, a libretto that has often been recognized for its suitability for musical setting. Though he insisted that he found the story in a 'browning, dusty quarto' in the Leipzig Ratsbibliothek with Apel (Unterredungen aus dem Reiche der Geister, by Otto von Graben zum Stein – not a quarto), his evidence is suspect and he almost certainly took it not from there but from Apel and Laun's treatment in their popular Gespensterbuch (1810) and other sources. He gave his version of the events, together with the original text and much other relevant Freischütz material, in his Freischützbuch (Leipzig, 1843).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (W. Pfannkuch)

J.G.T. Grässe: Die Quelle des Freischütz (Dresden, 1870)

H.A. Krüger: Pseudoromantik: Friedrich Kind und der Dresdner Liederkreis (Leipzig, 1904)

K. Goedeke: Grundriss zur Geschichte der deutschen Dichtung, ix (Dresden, 2/1910) [with complete list of writings]

F. Hasselberg: Der Freischütz: Friedrich Kinds Operndichtung und ihre Quellen (Berlin, 1921)

H. Goldschmidt: 'Und immer wieder Freischütz: ein Befund', MG, xxxvi (1986), 568–72

J. Reiber: Bewahrung und Bewährung: das Libretto von Webers Freischütz im literarischen Horizont seiner Zeit (Munich, 1990)

U. Weisstein: 'Carl Maria von Weber's Der Freischütz: "Nummernoper" oder "Gesamtkunstwerk"?', The Romantic Tradition: German Literature and Music in the Nineteenth Century, ed. G. Chapple, F. Hall and H. Schulte (Lanham, MD, 1992), 281–307

J. Reiber: 'Friedrich Kind: Versuch einer Würdigung', Weber-Studien, i (1993), 224–36

JOHN WARRACK/JAMES DEAVILLE

Kindermann, August (b Potsdam, 6 Feb 1817; d Munich, 6 March 1891). German bass-baritone. In 1836 he joined the chorus of the Berlin Hofoper, and in 1839 he was engaged at Leipzig, where he took part in the first performance of Lortzing's Caramo. He also created the title role of Lortzing's Hans Sachs (1840) and Eberbach in Der Wildschütz (1842). In 1846 he went to Munich, where he was engaged at the Hofoper until his retirement in 1889. His very large repertory included Mozart's Figaro and Sarastro, Hidraot in Gluck's Armide, Indra (Le roi de Lahore) and many of Wagner's baritone and bass roles. He sang Wotan in the first performances of Das Rheingold (1869) and Die Walküre (1870); his repertory also included King Henry (Lohengrin), Fafner, Hunding, Hagen, King Mark and Titurel, which he sang at the first performance of Parsifal at Bayreuth (1882). For the 40th anniversary of his engagement at Munich he sang Stadinger in Lortzing's Der Waffenschmied (1886). His son and three daughters all became singers, the best known of them being Hedwig Reicher-Kindermann.

ELIZABETH FORBES

Kindermann, Hedwig Reicher-. See REICHER-KINDERMANN, HEDWIG.

Kindermann, Johann Erasmus (b Nuremberg, 29 March 1616; d Nuremberg, 14 April 1655). German composer and organist. His was the most imaginative and adventurous music written in Nuremberg in the 17th century: he adopted all possible means for the expressive setting of a text. He is important too in the teacher–pupil tradition in 17th-century Nuremberg that began with his teacher Johann Staden and continued through Kindermann to his foremost pupils Heinrich Schwemmer and Georg Caspar Wecker, who themselves taught Johann Krieger and Johann Pachelbel.

1. LIFE. Kindermann probably attended one of the Nuremberg Latin schools, where he would have learnt singing and the rudiments of music. His lessons with Staden must have begun early, for at the age of 15 he was already receiving an annual salary of four gulden for participating in Sunday afternoon concerts at the Frauenkirche. His duties were to sing bass and play the violin (as he noted later in a letter), and he continued to do so until late in 1634 or early in 1635, when the city council gave him permission and money to visit Italy to study the new music at its source. Information about his stay in Italy is lacking. Like other Nuremberg composers before him (Hans Leo Hassler) and after him (Paul Hainlein and Johann Philipp Krieger) he probably went to Venice, where he could have studied with – or at least met – Monteverdi and Cavalli. He may also have known Carissimi, Frescobaldi and Merula, since he published music by them alongside works of his own. The Nuremberg council had given him two years leave of absence, but after about one year, in January 1636, they called him back to take the position of second organist at the Frauenkirche.

In 1640 Kindermann was briefly employed as organist at Schwäbisch-Hall at an annual salary of 100 gulden (as well as 12 bushels of wheat, six wagon loads of wood and free housing). A few weeks after his arrival in August, however, he informed the city council that he had 'come down with a fever' and requested that Georg Dretzel (i) be given the position in his stead, to which they agreed. Kindermann's 'fever' came on shortly after the death of the organist of the Egidienkirche, Nuremberg. This is the kind of position he must have been waiting for in Nuremberg, and, having been appointed to it, he remained in it for the rest of his life; only two posts for musicians in Nuremberg were more important – those of organist of St Sebaldus and St Lorenz.

Kindermann was much in demand as a teacher: not only Schwemmer and Wecker (as mentioned above) but also Johann Agricola and Augustin Pfleger were among his many pupils. His fame was apparently widespread, for W.C. Printz described him in his Historische Beschreibung, 1690, as 'a very famous Nuremberg composer and musician in his day'.

Johann Erasmus Kindermann: engraving by Johann Friedrich Fleischberger after Daniel Preissler, after 1654

2. Works. Kindermann's works exemplify many of the instrumental and vocal forms of his day. His instrumental music is specially noteworthy for being written with the characteristics of specific types of instrument in mind instead of being in a style adaptable to a variety of instruments and voices, as with many earlier composers. Harmonia organica has regard for the acoustical and technical possibilities of the organ, including an early German use of obbligato pedal, and is not adaptable to the clavier. This collection of 25 brief contrapuntal pieces, 14 of which are preludes in the seven authentic and seven plagal modes, includes a remarkable triple fugue on three chorale melodies. It is also important in the history of music printing, for along with Christian Michael's Tabulatura (1639, 2/1645) it is the last printed German organ tablature and among the earliest, if not the first, German music to be engraved. The 30 dance movements in a manuscript tablature that also includes works by Froberger, Martino Pesenti and Adam Krieger (D-Bsb) are arranged in the usual order of the keyboard suite of the time: allemande–courante–saraband. The four parts of Deliciae studiosorum contain 126 pieces (headed 'Symphonia', 'Sonata', 'Ritornello', 'Aria', 'Ballet', 'Intrada', etc.) for three to five wind or string instruments; they are modelled on similar pieces by Johann Staden. The fourth instrumental collection, an early example of German violin music and a forerunner of Biber's sonatas, is Canzoni, sonatae, which contains 41 works for one to three violins, cello and continuo: 27 are designated 'canzon' and nine 'sonata', but consist of four or five short sections made independent by changes in tempo or metre, as in similar works by Frescobaldi and Massimiliano Neri. Unlike Deliciae studiosorum ten years earlier, Canzoni, sonatae is specifically conceived for violins and includes the use of scordatura, perhaps for the first time in Germany.

Most of Kindermann's output consists of vocal works, which exemplify the transitional character of German music during his generation, when the basso continuo and the concertato style were generally being adopted. There are motets with and without continuo in Cantiones pathētikai and Musica catechetica. The first two and the fourth pieces in the latter collection are in the concertato style. However, Kindermann used this style more expertly in the four manuscript cantatas Wachet auf, Ich will singen, Lasset uns loben and Herr Gott, dich loben wir, which are among the earliest works in Nuremberg to show a contrast between choral and solo movements, a distinguishing trait of the cantata. Like Schütz's Kleine geistliche Concerten (1636–9) and the first two sets of Symphoniae sacrae (1629–47), Kindermann's many concertos for solo voices have a sectional structure, a contrapuntal texture and little repetition of the text: the first five works in Musicalische Friedens Seufftzer, the first eight in Concentus Salomonis and the manuscript works Turbabor sed non perturbabor and Befihl dem Herren are good examples. An interesting experiment with recitative, not found again in Nuremberg until two generations later in the music of Johann and Johann Philipp Krieger, is a work for tenor and continuo, Dum tot carminibus, 'in stylo recitativo': the repeated notes and unprepared dissonance are striking departures from the motet-like melodic style of his other works and those of his teacher Johann Staden, although the work is far from the declamatory style of Monteverdi.

Of Kindermann's several dialogues, Mosis Plag is significant for its recitative and contemplative choruses, which did not become common features of the German oratorio until much later. Unlike the songs of his Nuremberg contemporary S.T. Staden, only four of his songs are of the old type for four voices. The 22 strophic songs in Göttliche Liebesflamme are for soprano and continuo. The 177 songs for one to three voices in the three parts of Evangelische Schlussreimen are settings, largely homophonic, of brief poetic texts written by J.M. Dilherr as closing statements of his sermons. In his Opitianischer Orpheus and Musicalische Friedens Freud, which together contain 38 songs for one or two voices, continuo and, for the ritornellos, usually two violins, Kindermann introduced to Nuremberg the type of instrumentally accompanied song associated particularly with Heinrich Albert in which an instrumental ritornello separates each stanza of the text. Considering Nuremberg's conservative, bourgeois culture in the 17th century, it is surprising that Kindermann published four humorous works, three in Musicalischer Zeitvertreiber (RISM 1655[4]) and one in Intermedium musico-politicum. One of them, a dialogue between two drunken soldiers, a Jew, and a peasant, is remarkable for the clever, simultaneous presentation of the four distinct characters by means of masterly counterpoint and an original approach to melody. Another of the four is remarkable for its title: In honorificabilitudinationibusque.

WORKS

published in Nuremberg unless otherwise stated

Edition: Johann Erasmus Kindermann: Ausgewählte Werke, ed. F. Schreiber, DTB, xxiv, Jg.xiii; xxxii, Jg.xxi–xxiv (1913–24)

VOCAL

Cantiones [pathētikai], hoc est Ad memoriam passionis . . . Jesu Christi (motets), 3, 4vv, bc (1639)
Friedens Clag (3 motets), 3vv, bc (1640)
Concentus Salomonis, das ist Geistliche Concerten auss dem Hohen Lied dess hebraïschen Königes Salomonis (Opitz), 2vv, 2 vn, bc (1642)
Dialogus, Mosis Plag, Sünders Klag, Christi Abtrag, 1–6vv, bc (1642)
[8] Musicalische Friedens Seufftzer, 3, 4vv, bc (1642)
Opitianischer Orpheus, das ist [13] Musicalischer Ergetzligkeiten (2 pts) (Opitz), 1, 2vv, 2 vn, vle/bn, bc (1642)
Dess Erlösers Christi, und sündigen Menschens heylsames Gespräch (dialogue, J.M. Dilherr), 7vv, bc (1643)
Musica catechetica, das ist Musicalischer Catechismus (12 motets), 5vv, bc (1643)
Lobgesang über den Frewdenreichen Geburtstag . . . Jesu Christi, 4vv, sampt 1 Sinfonia, a 4 (1647)
Musicalische Friedens Freud (14 strophic songs), 1, 2vv, 3 viols, bc (1650)
Eines Christglaubigen Bekenners Hertzens Seuffzere, 2vv, 3 viols, bc (1648)
Göttliche Liebesflamme, das ist Christliche Andachten, Gebet und Seufftzer (Dilherr), S, bc (1640, text only; 2/1651)
Erster Teil J.M. Dilherrns Evangelische Schlussreimen (3 pts), 1–3vv, bc (1652)
Occasional: Sunt hostes, Momique, bonis crebraeque, T, T, 2 va, bc (1639) [wedding music]; Dum tot carminibus te lugent undique cives (L. Röselius) T 'in stylo recitativo' (1647), Was ist unser Lebensstand? (J.G. Schwingshärle), C or T, bc (1647) [both on the death of M. Lunssdörffer]; Von Gottes milder Vatters-Hand, 2vv (1650) [wedding-song]; Ich hab ein guten Kampff gekämpfft, 6vv (1651) [on the death of T. Peller]; Fahr hin, Gottfried, du Friedens Sohn, 4vv (1651) [on the death of G. Polycarp]; Ich hab ein guten Kampff gekämpfft, 1v, 4 viols, bc (1654) [on the death of A.C. von Rägnitz]
Cants.: Wachet auf, 4vv, insts, ?RUS-KA; Ich will singen, 5vv, insts, ?PL-WRu; Lasset uns loben, 5vv, insts, D-F; Herr Gott, dich loben wir, 6vv, insts, Bsb
Solo concs.: Turbabor sed non perturbabor, 3vv, insts, Kl, S-Uu; Befihl dem Herren, S, S, B, 2 vn, bc, D-Ngm
1 song in Intermedium musico-politicum (1643); at least 3 songs in 1655[4]
Ach bleib bey uns Herr Jesu, 2vv [attrib. 'J.E.K.'], in Das Jahr ist fortgelauffen (n.p., n.d.)
Nun wohlauf ihr meine Sinnen, inst acc. to song by G. Neumark, in Fortgepflanzter musicalisch-poetischer Lustwald (Jena, 1957)

INSTRUMENTAL

Deliciae studiosorum (4 pts), a 3–5, bc (1640–43)
Harmonia organica, in tabulaturam germanicam (5 pts) (1645)
[27] Canzoni, [9] sonatae (2 pts), 1–3 vn, vc, bc (1653)
30 suite movts, kbd, D-Bsb, ed. in HM, lxi (1950)
Lost: Musicalische Felder- und Wälderfreund, lv, bc (1643); Musicalische Herzentrost-Blümlein, lv, 2 b viols, bc (1643); Frühlings und Sommer freud, lv, bc (1645); Neu-verstimmte Violen Lust, 3 viols, bc (Frankfurt, 1652) [see Beughem]; Wer ist, der so vom Himmel kommt, 5vv, insts [see Schmidt]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (H. Samuel)
C. à Beughem: Bibliographia mathematica et artificiosa (Amsterdam, 1688), 339
J.G. Doppelmayr: Historische Nachricht von den nürnbergischen Mathematicis und Künstlern (Nuremberg, 1730)
R. Eitner: 'Johann Erasmus Kindermann: Bibliographie', MMg, xv (1883), 37–9, 81–3, 137–41
F. Schreiber: Der Nürnberger Organist Johannes Erasmus Kindermann (1616–1655)), DTB, xxiv, Jg. xiii (1913)
E. Schmidt: Die Geschichte des evangelischen Gesangbuches ehemaligen freien Reichsstadt Rothenburg ob der Tauber (Rothenburg, 1928), 270ff
H.H. Eggebrecht: 'Zwei Nürnberger Orgel-Allegorien des 17. Jahrhunderts', Musik und Kirche, xxvii (1957), 170–81
A. Pernye and D. Benkö: 'Daniel Croner . . . Tabulatura . . . 1681 . . . Wratislavia', SM, xix (1977), 297–324
H.E. Samuel: The Cantata in Nuremberg during the Seventeenth Century (Ann Arbor, 1982)
F. Krautwurst: 'Johann Erasmus Kindermanns Bezichungen zu Augsburg', Musik in Bayern, xxxiii (1986), 29–49

HAROLD E. SAMUEL

Kindersley [Kennersley, Kinnerley, Kynnersley], Robert (d 9 March 1634). English composer and instrumentalist. He replaced Roger Major as a member of the 'lutes and voices' of Charles I at 20p a day plus livery on 2 February 1626. He is listed among both violins and lutes in a Royal Subsidy of 1628. After his death, his post was taken by Robert Tomkins.

For Leighton's Teares or Lamentacions of a Sorrowfull Soule (RISM, 1614[7]; ed. in EECM, xi, 1970) Kindersley wrote two settings: O God to whom all hearts are seen, for four voices and mixed consort; and Judge them O Lord, for five voices. Three galliards and one almain for solo lute by him survive (GB-Cu Dd.5.78.3, Lbl Add.38539); a much simplified version of the almain appears as 'The Gillyflower' in the Board Lutebook (facs. in Musical Sources, ix, Leeds, 1976). The lute pieces are well-crafted but written in a style that seems antiquated in the context of the 'lutes and voices', suggesting the works may have been composed much earlier.

DIANA POULTON/MATTHEW SPRING

Kindī, al- [Abū Yūsuf Ya'qūb] (b ?*c*801; d ?*c*866). Arab philosopher and theorist. He was a figure of great importance in the early development of Islamic philosophy. His father was the governor of Kufa, and he was educated at Basra, a lively intellectual centre at the time. During the reigns of al-Ma'mūn (818–33) and al-Mu'taṣim (833–42) he was attached to the Abbasid court in Baghdad, coming into close contact with the scholars who were beginning to make Greek philosophical works available in Arabic. Known as the 'philosopher of the Arabs', he was a prolific author with wide-ranging interests, and his works include a number of short treatises on music, at least five of which have survived. Reflecting his general receptiveness to the Aristotelian, neo-Platonic and Pythagorean traditions, they are eclectic in approach and cover a rather wider range of subjects than many later writings.

His analysis of intervals and scales uses Greek concepts such as the Greater Perfect System, but the presentation is in terms of strings and frettings on the indigenous 'ūd (short-necked lute), a pattern followed by all the other major theorists. Unlike them, however, he did not regard the lute as a mere adjunct to theoretical demonstration, and he also provided both a fairly detailed description of it and the verbal equivalent of a tablature for an elementary exercise. No explicit link is made between the scale structures he presents and the contemporary modes, and melody is discussed in the abstract, invoking visual images such as 'spiral' and 'braid'; on the other hand, current practice is evidently the source for his pioneering, but brief and somewhat elliptical, definitions of rhythmic cycles.

Another important area of concern for al-Kindī was musical cosmology. In this he was to be followed by the Ikhwān al-Ṣafā' and several later writers, but other important theorists tended to downgrade or ignore the topic. He laid emphasis on sets of associations in which number and numerical relationships provided the chief common factors. On to the four strings of the lute were mapped sets of four such as humours, elements, seasons and points of the compass as well as more arbitrary selections from disparate phenomena such as colours and perfumes.

WRITINGS

Al-risāla al-kubrā fī al-ta'līf [Grand treatise on composition]; ed. Z. Yūsuf in Mu'allafāt al-Kindī al-mūsīqiyya [Al-Kindī's musical works] (Baghdad, 1962)

Mukhtaṣar al-mūsīqī fī ta'līf al-nagham wa-ṣan 'at al-'ūd [Summary on music with regard to the composition of melodies and lute making] (MS, D-Bsb 5531); ed. Z. Yūsuf (Baghdad, 1962); ed. A. Shiloah: 'Un ancien traité sur le 'ūd d'Abū Yūsuf al-Kindī', Israel Oriental Studies, iv (1974), 179–205

Risāla fī ajzā' khabariyya fī al-mūsīqī [Treatise in informative sections on the theory of music] (MS, D-Bsb 5503); ed. Z. Yūsuf (Baghdad, 1962)

Risāla fī al-luḥūn wa-'l-nagham [Treatise on melodies and notes]; ed. Z. Yūsuf (Baghdad, 1965)

Risāla fī khubr ṣinā'at al-ta'līf [Treatise concerning inner knowledge of the art of composition] (MS, GB-Lbl Oriental 2361, fol. 165–8); ed. C. Cowl: 'The Risāla fī ḥubr ta'līf al-alḥan of Ja'qūb ibn Isḥāq al-Kindī', The Consort, no.23 (1966), 129–66, ed. Y. Shawqī with Eng. trans. (Cairo, 1969)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EI2 (J. Jolivet and R. Rashid)

H.G. Farmer: Sa'adyah Gaon on the Influence of Music (London, 1943), 17ff

B. Reinert: 'Das Problem des pythagoräischen Kommas in der arabischen Musiktheorie', Asiatische Studien, xxxiii (1979), 199–217

E. Neubauer: 'Der Bau der Laute und ihre Besaitung nach arabischen, persischen und türkischen Quellen des 9. bis 15. Jahrhunderts', Zeitschrift für Geschichte der arabisch-islamischen Wissenschaften, viii (1993), 279–378

E. Neubauer: 'Die acht "Wege" der Musiklehre und der Oktoechos', Zeitschrift für Geschichte der arabisch-islamischen Wissenschaften, ix (1994), 373–414

O. WRIGHT

Kindler, Hans (b Rotterdam, 8 Jan 1892; d Watch Hill, RI, 30 Aug 1949). American conductor and cellist of Dutch birth. He studied the cello and piano at the Rotterdam Conservatory, receiving his degree in 1906. In 1911 he became principal cellist at the Charlottenburg opera, Berlin, and professor at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory there. He went to the USA in 1914 and remained after the outbreak of World War I, becoming principal cellist of the Philadelphia Orchestra (1914–20), with which he made his début as a conductor in 1927. The following year he conducted the première of Stravinsky's Apollon musagète at the Library of Congress. Having maintained a career as a soloist, in 1931 he gave that up in order to form the National SO, Washington, DC. During his 17-year directorship the orchestra gave many first performances, toured the USA, and made radio broadcasts and recordings. Among Kindler's recordings with the orchestra were works by Chadwick, Mary Howe, Dai-Keong Lee and Schuman.

□

King. American record company. It was formally established in Cincinnati by Syd Nathan in August 1944, though issues began in November the previous year; at first the catalogue consisted solely of country music including recordings by Moon Mullican and the Delamore Brothers. A race label, Queen, was established in 1945. Items by several small groups from Lucky Millinder's band were among the company's first releases. Recordings were also acquired from 20th Century and from J. Mayo Williams's labels Southern and Harlem. Blues artists represented included Lonnie Johnson, Memphis Slim and Wynonie Harris.

In July 1947 the company began issuing recordings by Earl Bostic on Queen, but discontinued the label the following month. Thereafter King itself became the race label, though Queen's numerical series was continued and the country series remained separate. In 1948 King acquired De Luxe, which it operated until 1949 as a separate subsidiary. In 1950 the company established another label, Federal, to which James Brown was signed in 1956; this label continued until the mid-1960s.

In 1961 King acquired Bethlehem, thus becoming the owner of highly regarded material recorded in 1956 by Duke Ellington, and much important swing, 'hard-bop' and West Coast jazz. Following Nathan's death in 1968, King was purchased by Starday, which remained the owner until 1971 and instigated a programme of reissues; this was continued after 1975 by the company Gusto.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Rotante, ed.: 'The "King" of R & B Labels', Record Research, (1959), no.22, pp.9–10; no.24, p.11 only; no.25, p.14 only

A. Shaw: Honkers and Shouters: the Golden Years of Rhythm and Blues (New York, 1978), 275

B. Daniels: 'Queen Records', Whiskey, Women, and ..., no.11 (1983), [12–14]

M. Ruppli and B. Daniels: The King Labels: a Discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1985)

T. Burke: 'Syd Nathan and the King Records Story', Blues & Rhythm: the Gospel Truth, no.113 (1996), 10

HOWARD RYE

King, Albert (b Indianola, MS, 25 April 1923; d Memphis, TN, 21 Dec 1992). American blues guitarist and singer. His early style was based on the big band rhythm and blues of the 1940s and in particular the electric guitar playing of T-Bone Walker. He first recorded in Chicago and St Louis and his first hit on the rhythm and blues chart was Don't throw your love on me so strong in 1961. In 1966 he signed a recording contract with Stax Records of Memphis, a company best known for soul music. King was accompanied by the soul group Booker T and the MGs and their precise groove proved to be the perfect foil for King's grandiloquent guitar solos and his imposing, impassioned voice. Born under a Bad Sign (co-written by Booker T and soul singer William Bell) was his best-known recording while his instrumental skills were showcased on Cold Feet and Laundromat Blues. In concert, playing a left-handed Gibson Flying V model, King could bend notes through half tones and full tones and kept the audience enwrapt throughout the lengthiest guitar improvisation. He influenced a younger generation of both white and black guitarists including Eric Clapton who recorded Born under a Bad Sign with the group Cream.

DAVE LAING

King, Alec [Alexander] Hyatt (b Beckenham, 18 July 1911; d Southwold, 10 March 1994). English bibliographer and musicologist. He was educated at Dulwich College and at King's College, Cambridge (Jebb Scholar 1932), where he read classics (BA 1933). In 1934 he joined the Department of Printed Books at the British Museum and in 1944 succeeded William C. Smith as superintendent of the Music Room. In 1948 he was elected to the RMA council, edited its Proceedings from 1952 to 1957, became a vice-president in 1969 and president from 1974 to 1978. In 1948 he was appointed honorary secretary of what became the British Union Catalogue of Early Music; in 1951 he was elected vice-president of IAML, and from 1955 to 1959 was its president. He was a member of the Internationale Stiftung Mozarteum from 1953. He was president of the United Kingdom branch of the RISM committee from 1953 to 1968 and vice-chairman of the committee itself from 1963. In 1970 he joined the British Academy committee of EECM.

In 1959 he became deputy keeper of the British Museum Department of Printed Books, and in 1961 was Sandars Reader in bibliography at Cambridge. For these lectures and for Some British Collectors of Music (1963) he drew largely on sales catalogues, and his work in this field continued in 1973 when he began the edition of a series of reprints of music auction catalogues. At the British Museum he organized many successful music exhibitions. He retired in 1977.

King's writings reveal an unusual breadth of interests and perceptive and thorough scholarship. His contributions to Mozart studies are well known, and his bibliographical writings, as is well demonstrated in his admirable Four Hundred Years of Music Printing (1964), have been meticulous and wide-ranging. Like his British Museum colleague, C.B. Oldman, he was one of the leading Mozart scholars of his generation, laying particular emphasis on bibliographical and textual studies.

WRITINGS

'The Forsytes and Music', ML, xxiii (1942), 24–36
'"Charles Auchester": a Novel of the Age of Mendelssohn', MO, lxviii (1944–5), 133–6
'Mountains, Music and Musicians', MQ, xxxi (1945), 395–419
'The Musical Glasses and the Glass Harmonica', PRMA, lxxii (1945–6), 97–122
'The Musical Side of Norman Douglas', ML, xxvii (1946), 215–20
'Music for the Stage', 'Bibliography', Schubert: a Symposium, ed. G. Abraham (London, 1946/R), 198–216, 259–66
Chamber Music (London, 1948)
'English Pictorial Music Title-Pages, 1820–1885: their Style, Evolution and Importance', The Library, 5th ser., iv (1949–50), 262–72
'The Importance of Sir George Smart', MT, cvi (1950), 461–2
'The First Complete Edition of Purcell', MMR, lxxxi (1951), 63–72
Handel's Messiah (London, 1951) [British Museum exhibition catalogue] with C. Humphries: Catalogue of Printed Music in the British Museum: Music in the Hirsch Library (London, 1951)
'The Music Room of the British Museum, 1753–1953: its History and Organization', PRMA, lxxix (1952–3), 65–79
'The Past, Present and Future of the Thematic Catalogue', MMR, lxxxiv (1954), 10–13, 39–46
Mozart in Retrospect: Studies in Criticism and Bibliography (London, 1955, 3/1970/R) [incl. King's articles on Mozart up to 1955]
Mozart in the British Museum (London, 1956, 2/1968)
'Some Notes on the Armonica', MMR, lxxxvi (1956), 61–9
'William Barclay Squire, 1855–1927, Music Librarian', The Library, 5th ser., xii (1957), 1–10
'The Royal Music Library: Some Account of its Provenance and Associations', Book Collector, vii (1958), 241–52
'Fragments of Early Printed Music in the Bagford Collection', ML, xl (1959), 269–73
'Frederick Nicolay, Chrysander and the Royal Music Library', MMR, lxxxix (1959), 13–24
'Portrait of Bibliophile V: Frederick Nicolay, 1728/9–1809', Book Collector, ix (1960), 401–13
Henry Purcell 1659(?)–1695; George Frideric Handel 1685–1759 (London, 1959) [British Museum exhibition catalogue]
'The History and Growth of the Catalogues in the British Museum Music Room', Festschrift Otto Erich Deutsch zum 80. Geburtstag, ed. W. Gerstenberg, J. LaRue and W. Rehm (Kassel, 1963), 303–8
Some British Collectors of Music c.1600–1960 (Cambridge, 1963)
Four Hundred Years of Music Printing (London,1964, 2/1968)
'C.G. Röder's Music-Printing Business in 1885', Brio, ii/2 (1965), 2–7
'Das neue Köchel-Verzeichnis', Mf, xviii (1965), 307–13
ed., with M. Carolan: E. Anderson: The Letters of Mozart and his Family (London, 2/1966)
Handel and his Autographs (London, 1967)
Mozart Chamber Music (London, 1968/R)
Mozart: a Biography, with a Survey of Books, Editions & Recordings (London, 1970)
'Rastell Reunited', Essays in Honour of Victor Scholderer, ed. D.E. Rhodes (Mainz, 1970), 213–18
'The Significance of John Rastell in Early Music Printing', The Library, 5th ser., xxvi (1971), 197–214
'Some Aspects of Recent Mozart Research', PRMA, c (1973–4), 1–18
'The Royal Music Library in the British Museum', Beiträge zur Musikdokumentation: Franz Grasberger zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. G. Brosche (Tutzing, 1975), 193–201
'The Musical Institute of London and its Successors', MT, cxvii (1976), 221–3
Mozart Wind and String Concertos (London, 1978)
'Music Circulating Libraries in Britain', MT, cxix (1978), 134–8
Printed Music in the British Museum: an Account of the Collections, the Catalogues, and their Formation, up to 1920 (London,1979)
A Wealth of Music in the Collections of the British Library (Reference Division) and the British Museum (London, 1983)
A Mozart Legacy: Aspects of the British Library Collections (London, 1984)
'The Mozarts at the British Museum', Festschrift Albi Rosenthal, ed. R. Elvers (Tutzing, 1984), 157–80
Musical Pursuits (London, 1987) [collection of essays]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F.R. Noske: 'King of the Music Room on his Sixtieth Birthday, 18 July 1971', FAM, xviii (1971), 2–3
O. Neighbour, ed.: Music and Bibliography: Essays in Honour of Alec Hyatt King (London, 1980)

DAVID SCOTT/R

King, B.B. [Riley B.] (b Itta Bena, MS, 16 Sept 1925). American blues singer and guitarist. He grew up on a black tenant farm in the Mississippi Delta, and was self-taught on the guitar. Giving himself the name Blues Boy (later abbreviated to B.B.), he appeared as a blues singer, guitarist and disc jockey for the WDIA radio station in Memphis. His recording of Three O'Clock Blues (1952, RPM) brought him some success as a blues performer, but his breakthrough to international fame came in the early 1960s when, as the idol of British rock musicians, he had a formative influence on such figures as John Mayall, Eric Clapton and Mick Jagger. Since then he has been a leading figure on the urban blues scene with a large international and multi-racial following.

King occupies a commanding position among contemporary blues singers, analogous to that of Bessie Smith in the 1920s. Even his early recordings reveal a distinctive mixture of jazz, swing, gospel and rhythm-and-blues styles which he synthesized without a trace of stylistic inconsistency or incongruity. Although not notably original, his guitar playing is both distinctive and characteristic, and owes something to the earlier jazz guitarists Django Reinhardt and Charlie Christian, as well as his blues predecessors T-Bone Walker and Muddy Waters. He has the finest voice among blues singers – a high tenor which, when he was younger, easily reached c″ and d″, with an upward extension to f″ in falsetto. Although he can also sustain a melody successfully, he is most convincing when performing blues in the declamatory tradition, with its fusion of speech and song. The blues attained respectability in the 1960s and 70s largely on account of the eloquence of King's singing and his benign personality both on and off the stage; throughout these decades he enjoyed considerable commercial success, many of his recordings appearing on the rhythm-and-blues chart. He continues to record and perform. His album There Must Be a Better World Somewhere (1981, MCA) earned a Grammy Award in 1981, but perhaps his finest recorded work is Live at the Cook County Jail (1970, ABC).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SouthernB
C. Keil: Urban Blues (Chicago, 1966/R)
P. Garland: 'King of Blues', The Sound of Soul (Chicago, 1969), 98
C. Gillett: The Sound of the City: the Rise of Rock and Roll (New York, 1970, enlarged 2/1983, 3/1996)
CBY 1970
K. Mohr: 'B.B. King', Soul Bag, no.32 (1973), 19; no.47 (1975), 1 [discography]
S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)
C. Sawyer: The Arrival of B.B. King: the Authorized Biography (Poole, 1980)
R. Denyer: The Guitar Handbook (London, 1982), 14–15
J.S. Richardson: The Blues Guitar Style of B.B. King (diss., U. of Memphis, 1987)
J. Richardson and R. Bourman: 'Conversation with B.B. King: "King of the Blues"', BPM, xvii (1989), 135–52
B. Gibbons and J. Obrecht: 'B.B. & Billy: Memphis and the Early Years', Guitar Player, xxv/7 (1991), 24–35
D. Erlewine: 'B.B. King: Talking about Lucille', Guitar Player, xxvi/6 (1992), 78–86

HENRY PLEASANTS

King, Ben(jamin) E(arl Nelson) (b Henderson, NC, 28 Sept 1938). American popular singer. He was the principal vocalist with the Five Crowns and the Drifters, recording with the latter the hit songs There Goes My Baby and Save the Last Dance for Me. He began a solo career in 1961 with recordings including Otis Blackwell's Brace Yourself and a duet with LaVern Baker, How Often. In the early 1960s he made three highly successful recordings in association with leading New York composer-producers: Spanish Harlem with Phil Spector included Latin rhythms and percussion, Don't Play that Song was composed by King and Ahmet Ertegun, while Stand by Me was co-written by King with Leiber and Stoller. The stark arrangement of the last song made it a classic of the emerging soul music genre and King's recording had a new lease of life when it was used in a 1986 film named after the song. King's later recordings of the 1960s showed his versatility but were less memorable. He sang a version of the show ballad I (Who Have Nothing) before shifting in 1964 to the more declamatory style associated with Solomon Burke for It's All Over and Seven Letters. His final hit came in 1975 with the disco-styled Supernatural Thang but he continued to perform in concert and cabaret into the 1990s.

DAVE LAING

King [Klein], Carole (b Sheepshead Bay, Brooklyn, NY, 9 Feb 1942). American songwriter and singer. As a child she was taught the piano but, at an early age, appeared more interested in composition. While at school she formed an all-girl group (the Cosines) and, after a meeting with Paul Simon, began writing on her own, then in partnership with Gerry Goffin, whom she married. Through Neil Sedaka – King wrote Oh Neil! in response to his Oh Carole! – she began to work at the celebrated Brill building, subsequently epitomising its associated style.

Although she found minor success singing It might as well rain until September (Dimension, 1962), written for Bobby Vee (1962), King had decided to concentrate on songwriting and, in a short time, she and Goffin turned out a string of hits, beginning with Will you love me tomorrow? (1961). Others included Take good care of my baby, Up on the Roof, The Locomotion and Some of your Lovin', recorded respectively by Bobby Vee (1961), the Drifters (1961), Little Eva (1962) and Dusty Springfield (1965). However, with the rise of the singer-songwriter, Goffin and King found themselves in eclipse and by 1967 they had split both professionally and personally. King returned to Los Angeles where she formed the band City, who broke up after one album (Now that Everything's been Said, Ode, 1968).

With Writer (Ode, 1970) King made her first album as a singer-songwriter, featuring such Goffin and King numbers as Up on the Roof and Goin' Back. Her Tapestry (Ode, 1970), was an artistic success, personal and universal in its expression, its carefully crafted lyrics offset by sophisticated piano works. The twelve songs included a melancholic cover of Will you love me tomorrow?, revealing depths well-hidden in the Shirelles' 1961 recording. Tapestry, which won four Grammy awards, remains a milestone in pop history and an inspiration to a generation of female singer-songwriters.

Of her subsequent albums only Rhymes and Reasons (Ode, 1972) and Thoroughbred (Ode, 1976), which featured James Taylor, David Crosby and Graham Nash and found King once again working with Goffin, made any real impact. In 1995 Aretha Franklin, the Bee Gees, Rod Stewart and others paid tribute to King and her work in Tapestry Revisited, on which each offered an interpretation of one of Tapestry's songs.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E.M. Thomson: 'Portrait of the Artist', The History of Rock, (London, 1982), 1714–15
G.G. Gaar: She's a Rebel: the History of Women in Rock and Roll (London, 1993)

LIZ THOMSON

King, Charles (b Bury St Edmunds, 1687; d London, 17 March 1748). English cathedral musician and composer. He was a chorister of St Paul's Cathedral under Blow and Jeremiah Clarke (i), to the latter of whom he was subsequently apprenticed. In July 1707 he took the degree of BMus at Oxford, his exercise being an Ode in Praise of Musick. On Clarke's suicide later that year he succeeded him as almoner and Master of the Choristers at St Paul's; not until 1730 was he formally admitted a vicar-choral, though he had evidently continued to sing as a supernumerary after his voice broke. In 1715 he also became organist of St Benet Fink, a post he held until his dismissal in 1747. King married Clarke's sister in October 1707, and assumed responsibility for the publication of his brother-in-law's Choice Lessons for the Harpsichord or Spinett (1711). A second marriage is said to have brought him a fortune of £7000 and a villa at Hampton Court, which was later owned by David Garrick. Among his chorister pupils at St Paul's were Maurice Greene, William Boyce, John Alcock (i), Thomas and Joseph Baildon, Robert Wass (who sang for Handel) and Robert Hudson. He also served as Master of a short-lived lodge of freemasons that met at the Ship without Temple Bar in 1725.

According to Samuel Arnold, King left a valuable collection of services and anthems to St Paul's, but there seems to be no trace of this now. However, a good deal of his music (in his own hand) is in the library of the Royal Academy of Music. Four of his anthems are printed in Arnold's Cathedral Music (1790), and there are another four in Page's Harmonia sacra (London, 1800). The words of four early anthems are included in Divine

Harmony (London, 1712), the first Chapel Royal word-book, and three anthems are in the fifth volume of Tudway's collection (GB-Lbl Harl.7341). Bumpus (1908) claimed that Rejoice in the Lord, O ye righteous was 'composed, with accompaniment for strings … for the Thanksgiving at S. Paul's, 17 February 1708', but he was confusing King's setting with that of John Weldon. With more service settings to his name than any other composer of the period, King owes his niche in music history to the remark (allegedly by Greene) that Mr King was 'a very serviceable man'. The services are not so much bad as merely commonplace; widely performed, they set a pattern of dull competence hardly broken until the time of T.A. Walmisley and S.S. Wesley over a century later.

WORKS

in GB-Lam 96–9 unless marked with a †*

Collection: Cathedral Music, ed. S. Arnold (London, 1790) [A]

SERVICES

In F (TeD, Jub, Mag, Nunc), full, 1706 (with addl re and Cr), 1721, A
In B♭ (TeD, Jub, San, re, Cr, CanD, DeM), verse, 1708, A
In b (TeD, Jub, CanD, DeM), verse, 1720
In A (TeD, Jub, Mag, Nunc), verse, 1726, A
In D (TeD, Jub, re, Cr, Mag, Nunc), full with occasional verses, 1735–6
In A (TeD, Jub, re, Cr, CanD, DeM), verse, 1739, A (morning canticles only)
In G (TeD, Bte, re, Cr, Mag, Nunc), full, 1741
† In C (TeD, Jub, re, Cr, Mag, Nunc), full, [1747], A (TeD, Jub (inc.) only)
TeD, Jub in C, S, S, S, A, A, T, B, SAATB, 2 tr, 2 ob, bn, str
TeD in e, full
San in A, full, 'Performed before the Bishops and the rest of the Clergy, when they meet at St. Paul's to choose a Prolocutor for the Convocation'

ANTHEMS

As pants the hart, full, 1733
† Hear my crying, O God, verse, before 1712, Lbl
† Hear, O Lord, and have mercy upon me, full with verse, before 1712, Lbl
I will always give thanks, verse, [1740]
Lift up your heads, O ye gates, full, 1739 [intended to go with Service in A (1739)]
Lord, remember David, full with verse, 1723
O be joyful in God, all ye lands, full with verse, 1739 [intended to go with Service in D]
O give thanks unto the Lord for he is gracious, verse, 1734
O pray for the peace of Jerusalem, full with verse, 1720
†Rejoice in the Lord, O ye righteous, full with verse, ?1747, A, Divine Harmony, coll. R. Langdon (London, 1774) (inc.) [intended to go with Service in C]
† Sing unto God, O ye kingdoms, verse, before 1712, Lbl
The Lord hath prepared his seat in heaven, verse, 1706
The Lord is full of compassion, full with verse, 1741
The Lord is my shepherd, verse, 1735
Turn thy face from my sins, full with verse, 1716
Unto thee, O Lord, will I lift up my soul, full, 1726
† Wherewithal shall a young man, verse, A

Make a joyful noise unto God (? verse extracted from a lost anthem), Tr, SS, bc (London, *c*1720)

SECULAR

† Ode in Praise of Musick (Musick, soft charm of heav'n; E. Smith), BMus exercise, 1707, music lost
Part of Mr. Dryden's Ode in Honour of St. Cecilia's Day ('Twas at the royal feast), A, A, B, SSAATB, 2 fl, 2 ob, str
The Dialogue between Oliver Cromwell and Charon (Haste, Charon, haste), T, B, SATB, 2 vn, bc, 1731
O Absalom, my son, catch, A Collection of Catches, Canons and Glees, coll. E.T. Warren (London, 1763)

Cebell, Paspie, G, hpd, The Lady's Banquet (London, 1704), by 'Mr. King'

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.S. Bumpus: The Organists and Composers of S. Paul's Cathedral (London, 1891)
J.S. Bumpus: A History of English Cathedral Music (London, 1908/R)
D. Dawe: Organists of the City of London 1666–1850 (Padstow, 1983)
I. Spink: Restoration Cathedral Music 1660–1714 (Oxford, 1995)

WATKINS SHAW/H. DIACK JOHNSTONE

King, E(lisha) J. (b Wilkinson Co., GA, *c*1821; d nr Talbotton, GA, 31 Aug 1844). American composer and singing-school teacher. In collaboration with B.F. White he compiled The Sacred Harp (published in Hamilton, GA, printed in Philadelphia, 1844, 3/1859/R, 4/1869), a collection of folk hymns, revival spirituals, fuging-tunes, odes, and anthems, which became the most widely used tune book in four-shape notation. It went through numerous editions and revisions in the late 19th century and early 20th and remains in use at numerous singings and weekend conventions in the southern states (see SHAPE-NOTE HYMNODY, §2). The number of songs attributed to King in the first edition is larger than that by any other composer; they include the tunes of the hymns The Child of Grace, Bound for Canaan and Gospel Trumpet. Two of his brothers, Joel King and Elias L. King, also made contributions to the volume. Other tune books containing King's works are Hauser's Hesperian Harp (1848), McCurry's Social Harp (1853), and William Walker's Southern Harmony (later editions) and Christian Harmony (1867). King also achieved some prominence as a singing-school teacher.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B.E. Cobb: The Sacred Harp: a Tradition and its Music (Athens, GA, 1978, 2/1989)

BUELL E. COBB, HARRY ESKEW

King, G(ilbert) R. See HARRISON, SUSIE FRANCES.

King, James (Ambros) (b Dodge City, KS, 22 May 1925). American tenor. After study with Martial Singher and Max Lorenz he began his career as a baritone. As a winner of the American Opera Auditions in Cincinnati, he was sent to Europe in 1961 where he made his professional début in Florence, singing Cavaradossi. His first resident appointment took him to the Deutsche Oper, Berlin (1962), and engagements followed at Salzburg (1962), Vienna (1963), Bayreuth (1965) and La Scala (1968). In the USA he sang at San Francisco, making his début in 1961 as Don José, and at the Metropolitan, where he first appeared in 1966 as Florestan. He sang the Emperor in both the Metropolitan and Covent Garden premières of Die Frau ohne Schatten. King's bright, incisive tone, easy top voice and remarkable stamina made him particularly successful in the more lyrical Wagner roles such as Walther von Stolzing, Parsifal (recorded under Boulez at Bayreuth) and Lohengrin, and as Bacchus in Ariadne auf Naxos, which he recorded with Kempe; his repertory also included Otello, Siegmund (which can be heard in Böhm's Bayreuth recording of the Ring), the title role in Pfitzner's Palestrina and Aegisthus, which he sang at Salzburg in 1989. King was also a sterling soloist in works such as Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, Verdi's Requiem and Mahler's Das Lied von der Erde, all of which he recorded.

MARTIN BERNHEIMER/ALAN BLYTH

King, Karl L(awrence) (b Paintersville, OH, 21 Feb 1891; d Fort Dodge, IA, 31 March 1971). American bandmaster and composer. After appearing as a baritone player in several town and circus bands, he became bandmaster for Sells Floto-Buffalo Bill (1914–16) and Barnum & Bailey's Greatest Show on Earth (1917–18), with which he made experimental recordings. In 1920 he became leader of the Fort Dodge Military Band, and held the position for 38 years. The band operated in the manner of the earlier Sousa, Gilmore and Pryor bands, touring, playing at fairs and training many capable musicians. King was one of the founders of the American Band Masters Association (1930), of which he was named honorary life president in 1967.

King's most famous composition is the march Barnum & Bailey's Favorite; among others written for circuses are Robinson's Grand Entry, Sells Floto Triumphal, The Big Cage and Circus Days. He also wrote marches and fight songs for many American universities, and much tuneful, engaging music designed for the burgeoning school band movement. He published 11 volumes of music including Marching to Victory Band Book (1942) and The Uncle Sam A-Stout Book (1943); in contrast to the simpler works, these contain the massive 'triumphals' and 'grand entries' that have challenged the capabilities of top circus bands.

MSS in US-Cp

Principal publishers: Barnhouse, Kalmus, King

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveA (T. Parkinson)
J.L. Gerardi: Karl L. King (diss., U. of Colorado, 1973)
T.J. Hatton: Karl L. King: an American Bandmaster (Evanston, IL, 1975) [incl. complete list of works]
B.E. Kopetz: 'Karl L. King: a Biographical Sketch of the Early Years (1891–1920)', Journal of Band Research, xxv/2 (1990), 47–63

TOM PARKINSON

King, Matthew Peter (b London, *c*1773; d London, Jan 1823). English composer. Little is known of him beyond a catalogue of his works, though he was probably a child prodigy, as his earliest compositions appeared under the name of 'Master King'. Before 1800 he published a series of keyboard works, and around the turn of the century several theoretical treatises, including A General Treatise on Music, Particularly Harmony or Throughbass (London, 1801) and Thorough Bass Made Clear to Every Capacity (London, ?1809). When he was about 30 he began composing songs for plays and 'operas', mostly written by James Kenney and S.J. Arnold, and staged at the two patent houses (Drury Lane and Covent Garden) and at Arnold's Lyceum theatre (the English Opera House). Kelly, Braham and Davy also wrote songs for some of the plays – Braham exclusively for himself to sing – though they were not collaborations in any real sense. King was undoubtedly a talented musician, but most of his theatrical songs were incidental to their dramatic context. Musically they exhibit a short-breathed, harmonically simplistic charm similar to the stage music of Henry Bishop. After the enormous success of Bishop's The Miller and his Men in 1813, King wrote no further works for the stage and returned to more serious music (his music in J. Tobin's 1819 melodrama The Fisherman's Hut was probably not originally composed for it). The aria 'Eve's' Lamentation' from King's oratorio The Intercession was especially successful and was widely circulated. His son C.M. King was also a composer.

WORKS

all performed in London and published in year of performance

LCG – Covent Garden
LDL – Drury Lane

Matrimony (comic op, 2, J. Kenney), LDL, 20 Nov 1804
Too Many Cooks (musical farce, 2, Kenney), LCG, 12 Feb 1805
The Weathercock (comic op, 2, J.T. Allingham), LDL, 18 Nov 1805
False Alarms, or My Cousin (comic op, 3, Kenney), LDL, 12 Jan 1807, collab. J. Braham
Ella Rosenberg (melodrama, 2, Kenney), LDL, 19 Nov 1807, GB-Lbl
Up All Night, or The Smuggler's Cave (comic op, 3, S.J. Arnold), Lyceum, 26 June 1809, Act 2 Lbl
Oh, This Love, or The Masqueraders (comic op, Kenney), Lyceum, 12 June 1810
Plots!, or The North Tower (melodramatic op, Arnold), Lyceum, 3 Sept 1810
The Americans (comic op, 3, Arnold), Lyceum, 27 April 1811, collab. Braham
Timour the Tartar (melodrama, M.G. Lewis), LCG, 29 April 1811
One o'clock, or The Knight and the Wood Daemon (grand romantic op, 3, Lewis), Lyceum, 1 Aug 1811, rev. of M. Kelly
Turn Him Out, or Tyrant and Parasite (musical farce, 2, Kenney), Lyceum, 7 March 1812
The Fisherman's Hut (melodrama, J. Tobin), LDL, 20 Oct 1819, collab. J. Davy

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Brown-StrattonBMB; EitnerQ; FétisB; SainsburyD
The Stage Cyclopaedia (London, *c*1910)

CHARLES CUDWORTH/BRUCE CARR

King, Reginald (Claude McMahon) (b Hampstead, 5 Oct 1904; d South Anston, S. Yorks, 31 Aug 1991). English composer and pianist. He trained at the RAM and appeared in the Henry Wood Promenade Concerts as a pianist, but his career, as performer and composer, was mostly in light music. He formed orchestras to play in Swan & Edgar's West End restaurant, on the BBC (1929–64) and, after World War II, at Whitby and Bridlington. King retired in the mid-1960s, perhaps feeling his style of music to be old-fashioned, but continued to compose, mainly for solo piano, up to his death. Many of his popular genre pieces, including his signature tune Song of Paradise, were originally written and published for piano then later orchestrated, sometimes by others. King also composed considerably for orchestra: suites (reminiscent of Coates in their titles, if rather less vigorous), marches and intermezzos. His overture The Immortals was praised for its perky rhythms and rich instrumentation.

King, however, was primarily a composer for the piano: besides his lighter movements he produced a sonata in F♯ minor, preludes and a fantasy with orchestra. The charm of his invention, which was sustained into his late compositions, earned him a particular niche in British music. His work is discussed in P.L. Scowcroft: British Light Music: a Personal Gallery of Twentieth-Century Composers (London, 1997).

WORKS

(selective list)

Orch suites: In the Chilterns, 1938: Country Life; Dreams in Exile; Rural Characters; Youthful Days
Marches: Lime Grove, 1955; Knight of the Garter
Many single movts incl. Windflowers, 1935; Summer Breezes, 1936; Melody at Dusk, 1938; Lilacs in the Rain, 1942; Julia, 1943; Spring Meadows, caprice (1946); Green Valleys, 1953; Whispering Violin, 1959; Daybreak; The Immortals, ov
Pf solo: Sonata, f♯, *c*1920; 4 Preludes, op.5, 1923; 3 Miniatures, op.8 (1927); Song of Paradise (1934); Dresden Dream (1959) (orch, 1960); Elegy, 1989; Meditation, 1990; Reverie, 1990; 3 Impressions, op.3; 3 Pieces, op.4; 5 Preludes, op.7
Many orch arrs. of solo pf movts

PHILIP L. SCOWCROFT

King, Robert (i) (*b c*1660; d ?aut. 1726). English violinist, recorder player, harpsichordist and composer. Anthony Wood wrote that he was 'a teacher of music in London, plays on the harpsicon in the King's Playhouse, and plays on the violin in Salisbury court', and Edward Lowe described him as of St Martin-in-the-Fields in London when he copied some of his consort music around 1680 (GB-Ob Mus.Sch.E.443–6). Wood may have been confused, for King would have had to have been born in the 1640s to have played in the Salisbury Court Theatre, destroyed in the Fire of London in 1666, yet his music and career profile suggest someone born around 1660: the 14 consort pieces published in 1677 in Tripla concordia sound like the work of an inexperienced teenager, and nothing is known of his working life before 6 February 1680, when he was sworn in as a member of the 24 Violins.

King retained his place at court under five monarchs, becoming a royal composer in 1689, and was awarded a Cambridge BMus in 1696. He was also heavily involved in London's commercial musical life. He contributed music for at least eight plays produced by the United Company between 1684 and 1692, and wrote the ode for the 1690 St Cecilia celebrations. He was given a licence on 25 December 1689 to set up 'a concert of music'. He collaborated with J.W. Franck, first probably at the Two Golden Balls in Bow Street, Covent Garden, and from March 1691 at the Vendu in Charles Street. In January 1698 he moved to York Buildings with a new partner, John Banister (ii). They also gave concerts at Exeter Exchange, and sold copies of imported music, including Corelli's op.5 in 1700 and Nicola Cosimi's op.1 in November 1702. He gave his address as York Buildings in the advertisement for the latter, and may have lived there from at least 1686, when he gave a dinner party in the music room. There is no record of his concert activities after 12 May 1702, when he and John Weldon performed music composed 'on purpose for the occasion' at Somerset House Gardens, though he retained his court post until he was replaced on 6 November 1726.

King was a prolific composer, mostly of domestic music, which suggests he spent much of his life teaching. He wrote a fair amount of keyboard music and published two engraved collections of his songs, complaining that 'most of my former Songs in the Common Printed Books about Town were not only imperfect but in a very bad Caracter'. Like Henry Purcell, he turned towards the Italian style in the 1680s: he claimed to have 'imitated the Italians in their manner of Ariettas' in his first song collection, and was probably the first Englishman to write a solo violin sonata. His mature music is unfailingly suave and accomplished, though it lacks Purcell's ambition and profundity.

WORKS

MUSIC FOR PLAYS

solo songs with basso continuo unless otherwise stated

Ah poor Olinda never boast, in A Duke and No Duke (N. Tate), 1684 (London, 1684)
O why did e'er my thoughts aspire, in The Disappointment (T. Southerne), 1684, 1685[5]
Where would coy Aminta run, in Valentinian (J. Wilmot, Earl of Rochester), 1684 (London, 1684)
2 songs: As I gazed unaware, 1v, bc, O be kind my dear, 2vv, 2 vn, bc, in Sir Courtly Nice (J. Crowne), 1685, 1685[6]
I once had virtue wealth and fame, in The English Friar (Crowne), 1690, 1691[6]
The fire of love in youthful blood, in The Amorous Bigotte (T. Shadwell), 1690, 1691[6]
How long must women wish in vain, in The Rape (N. Brady), 1692, 1693[6]
Suite, a 4, in The Spanish Friar (J. Dryden), early 1690s, GB-Cmc (inc.), Lbl (inc.)

OTHER VOCAL

[26] Songs, 1–3vv, org/hpd (London, ?1693)
A 2nd Booke of [32] Songs Together with a Pastorall Elegy, on the Blessed Memory . . . of Queen Mary, 1–4vv, bc (London, *c*1695)
50 songs, 1684[3], 1684[4], 1685[5], 1685[6], 1685[8], 1686[3], Quadratum musicum (London, 1687), 1687[4], 1687[5], 1687[6], 1688[7], 1688[8], 1689[9], 1690[5], 1691[6], 1691[7], The Gentleman's Journal (London, 1692–4), 1693[6], 1693[8], 1694[7], *c*1695[10], 1695[12], 1696[9], 1699[4], Wit and Mirth, or Pills to Purge Melancholy (London, 1719–20), GB-Lbl
Awake my drowsy soul (A Divine Hymn), 2vv, bc, 1693[1]
2 hymns: My God to thee, Mercy I will and judgement sing, 2vv, The Divine Companion (London, 1701)
I will always give thanks (anthem), 3vv, The Divine Companion (London, 1701)
O Sacred Harmony, prepare our lays (T. Shadwell), ode for St Cecilia's Day, 1690, lost
Once more 'tis born the happy day (P. Motteux), ode for the Earl of Exeter's Birthday, 1693, lost

OTHER INSTRUMENTAL

14 airs, C, d, e, E, f, F, 2 vn, b, 1677[4]
2 airs, G, g, vn, 1691[5], 1693[5]
Ov., a, rec, b, 40 Airs Anglois, ii (London, 1702/R)
3 suites, g, c, d, 2 rec, 1693[8], 1694[7]/R
Prelude, A, vn, Select Preludes or Volentarys (London, 1704/R)
2 cibells, D, G, vn, The 2nd Part of the Division Violin (London, 4/1705)
Sonetta after the Italion way, A, 2 vn, bc, GB-Ob, ed. I. Payne (Hereford, 1999)
Suite, g, 2 vn, b, bc, Ob
Suite, E, a 4, US-LAuc
3 airs, a, G, a 4, GB-Cmc
Untitled theatre suite, US-NH (inc., b pt only)
Untitled theatre suite, NH (inc., 2 vn pts only)
19 pieces, kbd, The Harpsicord Master, i (London, 1697), ed. C. Hogwood (London, 1980), The Ladys Banquet (London, 1704), GB-CDu, Lbl, Ob
Sonata, F, vn, bc; Sonetta, g, vn, org: Ob [anon., probably by King]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AshbeeR, i, ii, v, viii; BDA; BDECM; Day-MurrieECM; LS; SpinkES
W.H. Husk: An Account of the Musical Celebrations on St. Cecilia's Day (London, 1857)
'Index to the Songs and Musical Allusions in The Gentleman's Journal, 1692–4', MA, ii (1910–11), 225–34
M. Tilmouth: 'A Calendar of References to Music in Newspapers Published in London and the Provinces (1660–1719)', RMARC, no.1 (1961) [whole issue]
C.A. Price: Music in the Restoration Theatre (London, 1979)
D. Lasocki: Professional Recorder Players in England, 1540–1740 (diss., Iowa U., 1983), ii, 835–7
P. Holman: 'Valentinian, Rochester and Louis Grabu', The Well Enchanting Skill: Music, Poetry and Drama in the Culture of the Renaissance: Essays in Honour of F.W. Sternfeld, ed. J.A. Caldwell, E.D. Olleson and S. Wollenberg (Oxford and New York, 1990), 127–41

PETER HOLMAN

King, Robert (John Stephen) (ii) (b Wombourne, Staffs., 27 June 1960). English conductor. Having been a chorister at St John's College, Cambridge, he returned there to read music, graduating in 1982. He founded the Baroque orchestra, the King's Consort, in 1980 and made his London début in 1983; in 1991 he first conducted at the Proms, and the following year made his opera début, with Handel's Ottone, in Japan. His recordings, on the Hyperion label, had already included such imaginative projects as Handel's Water Music in its original large-scale wind scoring (24 oboes, 12 bassoons) when the Purcell tercentenary (1995) generated a prodigious archive of polished, if to some tastes slightly undercharacterized, recordings including the complete odes and welcome songs, the complete sacred music (with the choir of New College, Oxford) and all the secular songs. He has also made several recordings of Handel oratorios, including the first recording of Joseph and his Brethren (1996). King has appeared as guest conductor with ensembles in many European countries. His commitment to the music of Handel and Purcell has generated many performing editions and a major biography, Henry Purcell (London, 1994).

GEORGE PRATT

King, Thea (b Hitchin, 26 Dec 1925). English clarinettist. She won a scholarship as a pianist to the RCM, where she studied the piano with Arthur Alexander and the clarinet with Frederick Thurston. She played for Britten at Aldeburgh in the 1950s and 60s, and succeeded Gervase de Peyer as principal clarinet of the London Mozart Players, with which she played from 1955 to 1984, the English Chamber Orchestra and the Melos Ensemble, which she joined in 1974. She taught at the RCM from 1961 to 1987, and was appointed to the GSM in 1988. As a soloist King has made a special study of lesser-known clarinet works of the 18th and 19th centuries, notably the music of Crusell, and has also given the first performances of many works by British composers. Among the compositions dedicated to her are Howard Blake's Concerto, Benjamin Frankel's Quintet, Gordon Jacob's Mini Concerto and Maconchy's Fantasia. She has made many recordings of both solo and chamber music repertory. Her promotion of modern British works, and to a large extent her style of playing, follow in the tradition of Frederick Thurston, whom she married in 1953. She was made an OBE in 1985.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Weston: Clarinet Virtuosi of Today (London, 1989), 156–62

PAMELA WESTON/ROBERT PHILIP

King, William (b Winchester, *c*1624; d Oxford, 17 Nov 1680). English organist and composer. The son of George King, organist of Winchester College, William King became organist of New College, Oxford, in 1664 at the exceptionally high salary of £50 a year. As he was admitted to the privileges of the University on his appointment it is unlikely that he can be identified with the Magdalen College chaplain William King, who graduated BA on 5 June 1649, MA on 29 April 1652, became a probationer Fellow of All Souls College in 1654 and was incorporated at Cambridge in 1655. The organist's will, in the University archives, suggests that he was not related to the London musician Robert King.

The Songs and Ayres of 1668, distinguished by a serious declamatory style and imaginative word-setting, is one of the relatively few English songbooks to have been published outside London. Most of King's church music survives in incomplete sources including the partly autograph New College partbooks (now GB-Ob Mus.c.48, d.162 etc.), manuscript additions to the Hereford Cathedral set of John Barnard's First Book of Selected Church Musick (now Och Mus 544–53), and organbooks such as GL 111 (in the hand of Daniel Henstridge), Och Mus 437, Ojc 315 (William Ellis's book) and US-BEm 751, from Winchester. This wide distribution indicates that King's sacred music, in which largely homophonic chorus writing is sometimes contrasted with elaborate solo passages, was highly regarded by his contemporaries. His Fantasia is evidence that he shared Narcissus Marsh's interest in earlier musical forms.

WORKS

SERVICE

† – movement complete in score in GB-Lbl Add.30933 or Harl.7338

In B♭, SATB (†TeD, †Jub, Lit, †Sanctus, †Commandments, Gospel Response, †Cr, Mag, Nunc), GB-CA, GL, H, Lbl, Ob, Och, Ojc, WB, WO

VERSE ANTHEMS

Behold a virgin, GB-Ob
Behold I bring you glad tidings, Ob
Have mercy on me, O God, Ob, WO, US-BEm
Hear my prayer, GB-GL
In the day of thy power, GL
I will always give thanks, CL, DRc, GL, Lbl, LF, Ob, WO
I will give thanks, Ob
Lord how are they increased, CL, DRc, GL, Lbl, LF, Ob
Lord who shall dwell, LF, Ob, WO
Now that the Lord hath re-advanced the crown, GL, Lbl, Ob, Y
O sing unto the Lord, GL, Och, WO, Y
Out of the deep, LF, Ob
Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem, LF, Ob
Praise the Lord, O my soul, Ob, WO
Praise ye the Lord, DRc, GL, Lbl, LF, Ob, Och, WO
Thou art gone up on high, GL, Lcm, Ob, WO
Turn thee again, GL, Ob, Ojc
Unto thee O Lord, GL, Lbl, Ob

FULL ANTHEMS

O be joyful in the Lord, GB-Ob, Och, WB, US-BEm
O Lord our governor, SATB, GB-CA, GL, Lbl (score, attrib. G. King), Ob, Och, WB, US-BEm
The Lord is King, SATB, GB-GL, Lbl (score, attrib. G. King), Mp, Ob, Och, Ojc, WB, US-BEm

SECULAR

23 songs, 1668[9]: 21, 1v, bc; 1, 2vv, bc; 1, 3vv, bc
Cantate domino, D, S, A, B, SAB, bc, act song, Ob
6 dances, D, 2 vn, bc, act music, Ob
Fantasia, a 4, IRL-Dm Z2.1.13

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SpinkES
J. Griffiths: An Index to Wills proved in the Court of the Chancellor of the University of Oxford (Oxford, 1862)
M. Burrows: The Register of the Visitors of the University of Oxford from A.D. 1647 to A.D. 1658 (London, 1881)
J. Foster: Alumni Oxonienses: the Members of the University of Oxford 1500–1714 (Oxford, 1891–2), ii, 855
J.B. Clark: 'A Re-Emerged Seventeenth-Century Organ Accompaniment Book', ML, xlvii (1966), 149–52
I. Cheverton: English Church Music of the Early Restoration Period, 1660–c.1676 (diss., U. of Wales, Cardiff, 1984), ii, 545; iii, 694–703
H.W. Shaw: The Succession of Organists of the Chapel Royal and the Cathedrals of England and Wales from c.1658 (Oxford, 1991)
I. Spink: Restoration Cathedral Music 1660–1714 (London, 1995)
R. Herissone: The Theory and Practice of Composition in the English Restoration Period (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1996), 144–5

ROBERT THOMPSON

King Crimson. English rock group. Formed in 1969, it quickly became one of the most important forces in 1970s British progressive rock. The band's dêbut album, In the Court of the Crimson King (Isl., 1969), is the first classic progressive rock LP. Featuring Robert Fripp (b Wimbourne, 16 May 1946; guitar), Greg Lake (b Bournemouth, 10 Nov 1948; bass and vocals; later in Emerson, Lake and Palmer), Ian McDonald (b London, 25 June 1946; keyboards and flute; later in Foreigner), Michael Giles (drums) and Peter Sinfield (lyrics), the album contains 'Twenty-First Century Schizoid Man', 'Epitaph', and 'In the Court of the Crimson King', tracks that would greatly influence groups such as Genesis and Yes. King Crimson frequently mixes aggressive and angular passages in odd metres with lyrical and pastoral sections employing the mellotron. Despite the innovation and success of its first album, the group experienced personnel problems almost immediately after its release, and the 1972–4 version of the group included Bill Bruford (drums), John Wetton (bass and vocals), David Cross (violin) and Jamie Muir (percussion). This line-up recorded Lark's Tongue in Aspic (Isl., 1973), Starless and Bible Black (Isl., 1974) and Red (1974), which contain frequent passages employing atonality and free improvisation. Fripp dissolved the group in 1974 and reformed it in 1981 with Bruford, Tony Levin (bass) and Adrian Belew (guitar and vocals). The three albums they recorded, Discipline (EG, 1981), Beat (EG, 1982) and Three of a Perfect Pair (EG, 1984), display the marked influence of American minimalism. King Crimson reformed again in 1994, this time with the 1980s line-up augmented by the drummer Pat Mastellotto and the stick-player Trey Gunn. Thrak (Discipline, 1995) returns in many ways to the group's 1970s style, even displaying a strong Beatles influence. Far more than the other internationally successful progressive rock groups, King Crimson has tended to embrace avant garde aspects of post-World War II classical music; this is borne out by their THRaKaTTaK (Discipline, 1996), which is a collection of live free-form improvisations.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Eldridge: 'Year of King Crimson', Melody Maker (18 Oct 1969)
C. Crowe: 'K. Crimson's Fripp: "Music's Just a Means for Magic"', Rolling Stone (6 Dec 1973)
Freff: 'Crimson: Organizing Conflict in Time and Space', Musician, no.70 (1984), 28–34, 106
E. Tamm: From King Crimson to Guitar Craft (Boston and London, 1990)
R. Fripp: disc notes, The Essential King Crimson: Frame by Frame, Virgin 354 338 (1991)

JOHN COVACH

King Curtis [Ousley, Curtis] (b Fort Worth, TX, 7 Feb 1934; d New York, 13 Aug 1971). American tenor saxophonist and bandleader. As one of the most versatile studio saxophonists of the 1950s and 60s in New York, King Curtis appeared on countless recordings as a session musician, mostly for Atlantic Records. He worked with artists as diverse as the post-doo-wop Coasters (notably Yakety Yak) and the rockabilly singer Buddy Holly (Reminiscing, which he co-wrote). In addition, he recorded successfully under his own name (1962–70). These recordings capitalized on the popularity of soul jazz, using blues-derived harmonic progressions, open-ended vamps and syncopated riffs. In the late 1960s he became the musical director for Aretha Franklin and was working on John Lennon's album Imagine at the time of his death in 1971. King Curtis was inspired by such saxophonists as Louis Jordan, Illinois Jacquet, Earl Bostic and Gene Ammons. Although he was influenced by the rhythm and blues 'honkin'' style of the 1940s and 50s, his playing reveals a debt to jazz as well. With a searing edge to his sound resembling gospel vocal tones, his style frequently featured a staccato, stuttering technique, combined with melodic mobility and a variety of slurs, bends and use of the instrument's harmonic register.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Shaw: Honkers and Shouters: the Golden Years of Rhythm and Blues (New York, 1978)
C. Escott: [disc notes] Instant Soul: the Legendary King Curtis (1994), Razor & Tie Music 852 and 853

DAVID BRACKETT

King's Singers [King' singers]. British ensemble. The original members were Nigel Perrin and Alastair Hume, countertenors; Alastair Thompson, tenor; Anthony Holt and Simon Carrington, baritones; Brian Kay, bass. With the exception of Holt, who was at Christ Church, Oxford, they were all choral scholars at King's College, Cambridge. Hume and Carrington were professional double bass players, the others freelance singers, before the group became established with the above personnel in January 1970 (it had made its original début at the Queen Elizabeth Hall in London in May 1968). Subsequently the ensemble underwent various changes in personnel. In 2000 its members were David Hurley and Nigel Short, countertenors; Paul Phoenix, tenor; Philip Lawson and Gabriel Crouch, baritones; and Stephen Connolly, bass. The group gained a unique reputation founded on a thorough vocal ensemble training as choral scholars. The diversity of its repertory (and consequent widespread popularity) is due in part to its extension of the distinctive Oxford and Cambridge choral sounds to vocal chamber music. More pertinently, it adapted to two very different traditions: the Renaissance consort repertory explored by pioneers like the Deller and Purcell Consorts; and the American close-harmony group repertory, derived from the barber-shop quartet, but more directly influenced by the recorded performances of such American artists as the Ink Spots, the Mills Brothers, the Four Freshmen and the Hi-Los.

The King's Singers' distinctive constitution has enabled it to produce, in association with scholars, authentic performances of 16th-century vocal music, as recordings of French Renaissance chansons and Scottish consort songs show. On the lighter side, with a judicious choice of arrangers, it has performed increasingly sophisticated versions of standard popular songs, with great verve and variety. The singers have not restricted themselves to these particular strengths but have encouraged composers to write works for them, including Penderecki, Berio, Bennett, Maxwell Davies, McCabe, Ligeti and Patterson. They have also collaborated with leading international singers, including Placido Domingo, Kiri Te Kanawa and Barbara Hendricks. During May and June 1998, the year in which the group celebrated its 30th birthday, the King's Singers undertook an extensive UK tour with the percussionist Evelyn Glennie, featuring the première of Street Songs by Steve Martland. The group's reputation for versatility and entertaining presentation brought quick, worldwide success. They have made innumerable appearances at festivals in Britain and abroad, and on radio and television. The legacy of the King's Singers is perpetuated not only through performances and recordings, but also through education. The group is Prince Consort Ensemble in Residence at the RCM and conducts workshops and masterclasses throughout the world.

LESLIE EAST/R

King's Theatre. A leading London opera house, in the Haymarket, between 1705 and 1910; it was known as the Queen's Theatre during Anne's reign, and Her Majesty's or the Royal Italian Opera during Victoria's. See LONDON (i), §V, 1 and §VI, 1(i), and figs.15 and 18.

Kinkel [Mathieux; née Mockel], Johanna (b Bonn, 8 July 1810; d London, 15 Nov 1858). German composer, writer, pianist, music teacher and conductor. She received early music instruction from Franz Anton Ries. Under her direction the Gesangverein formed by Ries's pupils made an important contribution to concert life in Bonn. In 1832 she married Johann Paul Mathieux, but left him, citing abuse, after six months. Mendelssohn, whom she met in Frankfurt in July 1836, became her mentor. From 1836 to 1839 she pursued music studies in Berlin with Wilhelm Taubert (piano) and Carl Böhmer (composition); she also performed in social gatherings with Fanny Hensel and Bettina Brentano, and wrote humorous occasional pieces and stage works. Critics such as Rellstab and Schumann praised her song and duet collections.

Returning to Bonn, she re-established the Gesangverein, co-founded the literary circle Der Maikäferbund and became a successful piano teacher. In 1843 she married the poet, protestant theologian and art historian Gottfried Kinkel, with whom she raised four children; many of her songs and two stage works are based upon his poems and librettos. He was condemned to life imprisonment for his participation in revolutionary uprisings of 1848–9. Unique among women of her day, Johanna wrote and set texts promoting revolutionary ideals. After Gottfried Kinkel's adventurous escape, the family emigrated to England. Johanna held 'Singing Classes for Young Ladies', wrote musicological essays and gave lectures. She fell to her death from a window of their London home.

Probably owing to financial reasons, Gottfried Kinkel never realized his plan to publish his wife's compositions, and they have been largely forgotten. Her songs are characterized by lyrical melodies, rich harmonies, the prominence of the piano, expressive piano introductions and independent vocal lines. Her compositions and other works are deserving of wider acclaim.

WORKS

Most MSS in D-BNsa and BNu; works published before 1848 issued under the name Mathieux

Stage: Die Landpartie (comic operetta, J. Mathieux), *c*1837; Das Malzthier, oder die Stadt-bönnischen Gespenster (Spl, 1, Mathieux), 1840; Friedrich der Rothbart in Suza, oder Vasallentreue (Liederspiel, 3, G. Kinkel), 1841; Otto, der Schütz (Liederspiel, 1, Mathieux), 1842; Die Assassinen (Spl, 3, G. Kinkel), 1843; Verrückte Komödien aus Berlin: Der Wettstreit der schottischen Minstrels, Hänneschen als Wunderkind, The Baker and the Mice, Die Fürstin von Paphos, lost

Songs, 1v, pf: 6 Lieder, op.7 (Berlin, 1838); Gelbi's Liebe (G. von Arnim), 1838; 6 Gedichte von Emanuel Geibel, op.8 (Berlin, 1838); Gedicht von Heine ('Es ragt in's Meer der Runenstein') (Berlin, 1838); Das Schloss Boncourt (A. von Chamisso), op.9 (Berlin, 1838); 6 Lieder, op.10 (Berlin, 1839); 6 Lieder, op.6 (Leipzig, 1839); Don Ramiro, Ballade (H. Heine), A/Bar, op.13 (Cologne, *c*1840); 3 songs (Heine) in Rhein-Sagen und Lieder i/1, i/3 (Bonn, *c*1840); Der deutsche Rhein (N. Becker) (Bonn, *c*1840); 6 Lieder (G. Kinkel, Mathieux, J.W. von Goethe), A/Bar, op.15 (Cologne, 1841); 6 Lieder (Mathieux, G. Kinkel, Goethe, S. Longard), op.16 (Leipzig, 1842); Hymne auf den Tod des Marco Botzaris, 1v, pf/gui (Cologne, 1843); 6 Lieder (G. Kinkel, Mathieux, Geibel), op.18 (Berlin, 1843); Männerlied (G. Kinkel), *c*1846, lost; 6 Lieder für eine tiefe Stimme, op.17 (Berlin, 1847); 6 Lieder, A/Bar, op.19 (Cologne, 1848); Demokratenlied (J. Kinkel) (Bonn, 1848); Am Gefängnissthurme von Rastatt (Der gefangene Freischärler) (J. Kinkel), 1849, lost; Der letzte Glaubensartikel (G. Kinkel), *c*1850, lost; 6 Lieder für eine tiefe Stimme (G. Kinkel, J. Kinkel), op.21 (Mainz, 1851)

Duets: 6 Duetten, S, A, *c*1838; Drei Duetten (Heine), S, A, pf, op.11 (Berlin, 1839); Drei Duetten (Goethe, W. Müller), S, S, pf, op.12 (Berlin, 1840); Duet arrs., 1853

Choral: Hymnus in Coena Domini, op.14 (Elberfeld, 1840)

Other: Die Vogel-Kantate (Mathieux), 5vv, pf, op.1 (Berlin, 1838); Trinklied (Mathieux), 1 solo v, 4vv, pf (1838); Anleitung zum Singen, op.20 (Mainz, 1849); Tonleitern und Solfeggien A, pf, op.22 (London, 1852)

WRITINGS

(selected list)

numerous articles in the Neue Bonner Zeitung (1848–50)

with G. Kinkel: Erzählungen (Stuttgart, 1849, 2/1851, 3/1883)

Acht Briefe an eine Freundin über Clavier-Unterricht (Stuttgart, 1852/R; Eng. trans., 1943)

'Friedrich Chopin als Komponist', Deutsche Revue, xxvii/1 (1902), 93–106, 209–23, 338–60

'Aus Johanna Kinkel's Memoiren' [written 1856], ed. G. Kinkel [jun.], Zeitgeist [suppl. to the Berliner Tage'blatt], xxxix–xlvii (27 Sept to 22 Nov 1886); repr. in Internationales Jb der Bettina-von-Arnim-Gesellschaft, viii/ix (1996/7), 239–71

Hans Ibeles in London (Stuttgart, 1860/R) [autobiographical novel]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. von Asten-Kinkel, ed.: 'Johanna Kinkel über Mendelssohn', Deutsche Revue, xxvii/1 (1903), 89–100

E. Thalheimer: Johanna Kinkel als Musikerin (diss., U. of Bonn, 1922)

P. Kaufmann: 'Johanna Kinkel: neue Beiträge zu ihrem Lebensbild', Preussische Jahrbücher, ccxxi (1930), 290–308; ccxxii (1930), 48–67

M. Bröcker: 'Johanna Kinkels schriftstellerische und musikpädagogische Tätigkeit', Bonner Geschichtsblätter, xxix (1977), 37–48

E. Weissweiler: Komponistinnen aus 500 Jahren: eine Kultur- und Wirkungsgeschichte in Biographien und Werkbeispielen (Frankfurt, 1981)

A.W. Lemke: '"Alles Schaffen ist wohl eine Wechselwirkung von Inspiration und Willen": Johanna Kinkel als Komponistin', Annäherungen an sieben Komponistinnen, ix, ed. C. Mayer (Kassel, 1998), 53–70 [with complete list of works]

A.W. Lemke: 'Briefe einer Bettina-Verehrerin: ein Beitrag zur frühen Rezeption von Goethe's Briefwechsel mit einem Kinde', Internationales Jb der Bettina-von-Arnim-Gesellschaft, x (1998), 23–46

ANN WILLISON LEMKE

Kinkeldey, Otto (b New York, 27 Nov 1878; d Orange, NJ, 19 Sept 1966). American musicologist and librarian. After schooling in New York he studied at the College of the City of New York (AB 1898), at the University of New York (MA 1900) and music with Edward MacDowell at Columbia University (1900–02); concurrently he was organist and choirmaster at the Chapel of the Incarnation (1898–1902) and taught in New York schools. He continued his study of music, literature and philosophy in Berlin (1902–9), with Kretzschmar at the university and Radecke at the Königliches Akademisches Institut für Kirchenmusik, taking the doctorate (a rare achievement for an American in a German university at that date) in 1909 with a dissertation on 16th-century organ and keyboard music. During this time he was organist and choirmaster of the American church in Berlin (1903–5) and was sent by the Prussian government on a tour of the central German states (1906–7) to catalogue the music and music literature in church, ducal and civic libraries. In 1909 he was offered the posts of librarian at the Breslau Königliches Institut für Kirchenmusik and instructor in music theory and the organ at Breslau University, where he subsequently became lecturer in music history with the honorary title of professor (1912–14); he was also appointed to the board of directors of the Breslau Opera. Despite the university's offer to create an extraordinary chair for him, the outbreak and continuation of war prompted him to return to New York, where he became head of the public library's music division (1915–23) and organist of All Souls, Brooklyn; after the war (during which he served as a training officer, 1917–19) he travelled in France, Spain, Germany and Italy making purchases for the library. After a period as head of the music department at Cornell University (1923–7) he returned to the library (1927–30), but was drawn back to Cornell by the offer of the first American chair of musicology, created specially for him; he was also made university librarian (1930–46). Before his retirement in 1958 (because of increasing difficulties in hearing) he also taught at Harvard, Princeton, Texas, Illinois, Berkeley, Boston and Washington State.

Kinkeldey was the founder of American musicology. It was owing to him more than to any other individual that musicology, after a long struggle for recognition as a serious discipline, became an accepted subject in the curriculum of American universities; and it was chiefly to him that subsequent American music scholars, many of the first generation directly, and all of them indirectly, owed (and often acknowledged) their livelihood. In establishing the subject he drew on his experience of German music scholarship, and throughout his work he maintained that intellectual breadth, exacting standards and close adherence to the music itself are essential in an approach to any topic. His ability as a performing musician informed his interpretation of musical texts and history, while his wide range of interests in the humanities and comprehensive grasp of the current state of research, as well as an uncanny power of defining the essential issues with clarity, force and common sense, made him an outstanding teacher. His demanding concept of the librarian's role was evident in his statement that it necessitates a knowledge of archaeology, palaeography, art history, acoustics, economics, education and literature. He promoted his educational principles in all his own teaching and in his work as founder-president of the Music Library Association, founder-president of the American Musicological Society and a leading member of its predecessor, the Music Teachers National Association. In his research he was similarly a pioneer: he was one of the first investigators of early keyboard music and Renaissance dance, and his Orgel und Klavier in der Musik des 16. Jahrhunderts (1910), combining his characteristic attributes of breadth and thoroughness, remains a fundamental exploration.

WRITINGS

'Luzzasco Luzzaschi's Solo-Madrigale mit Klavierbegleitung', SIMG, ix (1907–8), 538–65

Orgel und Klavier in der Musik des 16. Jahrhunderts (diss., U. of Berlin, 1909; Leipzig, 1910/R)

'Die Musik in Schlesien', Schlesische Landeskunde, ed. F. Frech and F. Kampers (Leipzig, 1913), 342–50

'The Influence of Folk-Music upon Artistic Progress', Musical Teachers National Association: Proceedings, x (1915), 272–84

'Music in the Universities of Europe and America', Musical Teachers National Association Proceedings, x (1915), 79–91; see also xxix (1934), 20–28

'The Harmonic Sense: its Evolution and its Destiny', Music Teachers National Association: Proceedings, xviii (1923), 9–26

'Beginnings of Beethoven in America', MQ, xiii (1927), 217–48

'American Scholarship in Music since 1876', Music Teachers National Association: Proceedings, xxiii (1928), 244–56

'Schubert: Dance-Composer', MQ, xiv (1928), 610–19

'A Jewish Dancing Master of the Renaissance (Guglielmo Ebreo)', Studies in Jewish Bibliography ... in Memory of Abraham Solomon Freidus (New York, 1929), 329–72; also pubd separately (Brooklyn, NY, 1966)

'Musicology in American Colleges and Universities', Yearbook of the Music Educators National Conference 1934, 125

'The Preparation of the College Student for Graduate Study', Music Teachers National Association: Proceedings, xxix (1934), 165–70

'Changing Relations within the Field of Musicology', PAMS 1936, 42–57; also in Music Teachers National Association: Proceedings, xxxi (1936), 246–61

'The Artist and the Scholar', PAMS 1940, 126–36; also in Music Teachers National Association: Proceedings, xxxv (1940), 67–79

'Waldo Selden Pratt', MQ, xxvi (1940), 162–74

'Palm Leaf Books', William Warner Bishop: a Tribute, ed. H.M. Lydenburg and A. Keogh (New Haven, CT, 1941), 88–115

'Thomas Mace and his Tattle de Moy', A Birthday Offering to Carl Engel, ed. G. Reese (New York, 1943), 128–42

What We Know about Music (Ann Arbor, 1946)

'Musical Scholarship and the University', JRBM, i (1946–7), 10–18

'Franchino Gafori and Marsilio Ficino', Harvard Library Bulletin, i (1947), 379–82

'Johannes Wolf', JAMS, i/1 (1948), 5–12

'The Music Teacher and the Library', Music Teachers National Association: Proceedings, xlii (1948), 81–6

'Oscar George Theodore Sonneck', Notes, xi (1953–4), 25–32

'Bach embellecido por si mismo', Revista de estudios musicales, iii (1954), 271–80 [on BWV156]

'Dance Tunes of the Fifteenth Century', Instrumental Music: Cambridge, MA, 1957, 3–30, 89–152

'Equal Voices in the "A cappella" Period', Essays on Music in Honor of Archibald Thompson Davison (Cambridge, MA, 1957), 101–9

'Kinnor, Nebel-Cithärä, Psalterium', The Joshua Bloch Memorial Volume, ed. A. Berger, L. Marwick and I.S. Meyer (New York, 1960), 40–53

EDITIONS

P.H. Erlebach: Harmonische Freude musikalischer Freunde, DDT, xlvi–xlvii (1914)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E.J. Dent: 'Otto Kinkeldey', MQ, xxiv (1938), 405–11

G.S. Dickinson: 'Otto Kinkeldey: an Appreciation', MQ, xxiv (1938), 412–18

'Otto Kinkeldey in Honor of his Seventieth Birthday, November 27, 1948', Notes, vi/1 (1948–9) [incl. C. Sprague Smith: 'Otto Kinkeldey', 27–37]

E.T. Ferand: 'Otto Kinkeldey zum 80. Geburtstag am 27. November 1958', Mf, xii (1959), 3–4

P.H. Lang: 'Editorial', MQ, xlv (1959), 85–7

C. Seeger: 'Otto Kinkeldey', AcM, xxxi (1959), 7–8

'A Musicological Offering to Otto Kinkeldey upon the Occasion of his Eightieth Birthday', JAMS, xiii (1960)

R. Benton: 'Early Musical Scholarship in the United States', FAM, xi (1964), 12–21

Obituaries: G. Reese, JAMS, xix (1966), 433–4; D.J. Grout, AcM, xxxix (1967), 1–2; P.H. Lang, MQ, liii (1967), 77–9; J. LaRue, Mf, xx (1967), 121–2

C.E. Steinzor: American Musicologists, c.1890–1945: a Bio-Bibliographical Sourcebook ot the Formative Period (New York, 1989), 125–33

DONALD JAY GROUT

Kinks, the. English pop group. It was formed in London in 1963 by the brothers Ray(mond Douglas) Davies (b London, 21 June 1944; vocals, guitar, piano) and David Davies (b London, 3 Feb 1947; guitar), with Peter Quaife (b Tavistock, 31 Dec 1943; bass guitar, later replaced by John Dalton) and Michael Avory (b London, 15 Feb 1944; drums). They began as part of London's growing rhythm and blues scene, focussed on Alexis Korner, Cyril Davies and the Rolling Stones, but their first singles were founded on more minimalist textures, led by raw, insistent riffs. In this manner they had seven hit records between August 1964 and November 1965 including You really got me and Till the End of the Day. A change of management coincided with a change of style, and a string of mellower songs followed, celebratory of a mythical Englishness treated with a mixture of bleakness and compassion unusual among their generation. Waterloo Sunset was the best of these, which also included Sunny Afternoon, Dead End Street (preceding the Beatles' Penny Lane) and Autumn Almanac. The 1968 album Village Green Preservation Society (Pye) followed this theme and was one of the few aesthetically successful concept albums. By this time, however, fashion had begun to pass them by. Three further songs, including Lola, made the top 20 between 1970 and 1972. Another hit, Come Dancing (1983), was a rare highlight. Personnel changes in the 1970s, together with Ray Davies's increasing personal problems (two drug overdoses in the early 1970s and two divorces), coincided with the decline of the band.

Together with the Who, they were the most consistently inventive 1960s band after the Beatles, due to Ray Davies's leadership and songwriting, and were still recording well into the 1990s. Ray Davies's influence on subsequent generations has been enormous and gratefully received. In the mid-1970s the punk movement learnt from his early, bare, riff-based style. Contemporaneous new wave artists such as Ian Dury, Elvis Costello and the Jam were influenced by his observational, detached songs of the later 1960s, as were many britpop bands of the 1990s, particularly Blur.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Dawbarn: 'Ray: the Patriotic Kink', 'How Kinky Are the Kinks?', Melody Maker (16 April, 28 May 1966)
R. Cook: 'A Well Reflected Man', New Musical Express (29 Oct 1983)
J. Rogan: The Kinks: the Sound and the Fury (London, 1984)
J. Savage: The Kinks (London, 1984)
C.S. Murray: 'Tales of Drunkenness and Cruelty', Q, no.36 (1989), 70–80
N. Marten and J. Hudson: The Kinks: Well Respected Men (Chessington, 1996)

ALLAN F. MOORE

Kinloch, William (fl ? 1568–1582). Scottish composer. He may be connected with the Dundee family of that name which numbered scholars, doctors and burgesses among its members. There is a possible reference to him in London church registers listing foreign residents: for 1568 there appear under 'Aldrichegate Warde, The Parishe of St Leonardes in Fosterlane ... James Caldwell, a Scott, mynstrell, and William Kenloughe dwellinge with hym'. As secret messenger between the Catholic faction in Scotland and the captive Mary Queen of Scots, he is almost certainly the 'Mr William Kynlowgch' mentioned in a letter from James Lauder (musician and also personal envoy of Mary) to his son, dated 2 October 1582, and described as being 'in this country [Scotland] at present and ready to pass to London'. All of Kinloch's surviving pieces are for keyboard, and most are preserved in Duncan Burnett's Music-book of *c*1615 (GB-En; some ed. K. Elliott: Early Scottish Keyboard Music (London, 1958, 2/1966) and Early Scottish Music for Keyboard (forthcoming); some ed. in MB, lv, 1989). Kinloch has left ten named pieces, but a further four may be attributed to him on grounds of style. There are three extended pavan-galliard pairs: one on an original theme entitled the Lang pavan and galliard (ed. in Elliott, 1958, nos.3–4), the others on the well-known Pasmessour (i.e. Passamezzo) and Quadrant basses. Kinloch wrote at least one set of variations on a ground, a lively Batell of pavie and a toccata-like Fantassie (ed. in Elliott, 1958, no.7), whose opening section requires a two-manual keyboard instrument for performance. Kinloch's style is close to that of contemporary English keyboard music, and is marked by a direct melodic, harmonic and rhythmic idiom, with exuberant, even flamboyant, passage-work.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Maxwell: Old Dundee, Ecclesiastical, Burghal, and Social, prior to the Reformation (Edinburgh, 1891)
R.E.G. and E. Kirk, eds.: Returns of Aliens Dwelling in the City and Suburbs of London from the Reign of Henry VIII to that of James I, iii (Aberdeen, 1907), 353
W.K. Boyd, ed.: Calendar of State Papers relating to Scotland and Mary, Queen of Scots, 1547–1603, vi: 1581–3 (Edinburgh, 1910), 185
T. Dart: 'New Sources of Virginal Music', ML, xxxv (1954), 93–106
H.M. Shire: 'Musical Servitors to Queen Mary Stuart', ML, xl (1959), 15–18
K. Elliott: Music of Scotland, 1500–1700 (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1960), i, 149ff, 350ff
K. Elliott and F. Rimmer: A History of Scottish Music (London, 1973), 38–40

KENNETH ELLIOTT

Kinner von Scherffenstein, Martin (b Leobschütz, Upper Silesia [now Głubczyce, Poland], 1534; d Baumgarten, nr Prenzlau, 24 March 1597). German poet and composer. He matriculated at the University of Wittenberg on 12 October 1553 and took his master's degree in 1557. He then became professor of poetry and history at Wittenberg, and later was chancellor-in-chief at Leobschütz. He was a close friend of Melanchthon. As poet and composer he is known by a wedding publication, Melodia epithalamii (n.p., 1567), comprising three pieces, two for four voices and one for five and the posthumous Silvulae musicae (Hildesheim, 1605). There are also four pieces by him in a collection of German, French and Latin partsongs (RISM 1550[23]). This collection has been only tentatively dated 1550, and the fact that Kinner was then only in his 16th year suggests that this date is rather too early.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ADB (R. Eitner); EitnerQ; FétisB; GerberNL
C.J.A. Hoffmann: Die Tonkünstler Schlesiens (Breslau, 1830/R)
H. Mendel, ed.: Musikalisches Conversations-Lexikon, vi (Berlin, 1876)

INGRID SCHUBERT

Kinnhalter (Ger.). See CHIN REST.

Kinnor (Heb.). Ancient Jewish lyre. See BIBLICAL INSTRUMENTS, §3(iv) and LYRE (i), §2.

Kinsella, John (b Dublin, 8 April 1932). Irish composer and viola player. He studied the violin from 1948 and the viola with John Mackenzie at the Dublin College of Music from 1953 to 1957. After a career as a computer programmer he joined RTE, the Irish national broadcasting service, in 1968. He became deputy music director in 1979 and was the head of music (1983–8) when he retired to pursue composition full-time. Self-taught as a composer, Kinsella won the Marten Toonder award, one of the most prestigious Irish composition prizes, in 1979 and became a member of Aosdána in 1982. He also acted as an advisor on musical affairs to the Irish government and has been on the board of the National Concert Hall, Dublin.

Kinsella's first recognition as a composer followed the Dublin Festival of 20th-Century Music in 1969, by which time he had completed two string quartets (1960, 1968), a Cello Concerto (1967) and a few other instrumental works. While employing the compositional techniques of the Central European serialist avant garde, these works frequently turn towards emotional expressiveness. His most important compositions from this period are the second and third (1977) string quartets, Rhapsody on a Poem of Joseph Campbell (1975, rev. 1993), Rondo for Orchestra (1969) and Music for Cello and Chamber Orchestra (1971). His third string quartet has become a standard work in the contemporary Irish repertory. Written during the final illness of his first wife, its three movements develop with much rhythmical vigour and emotional intensity from a basic note row.

Around 1980 Kinsella's music underwent a profound stylistic change. Desiring to communicate more directly with his audience, he adopted a more accessible musical language. A sizable body of compositions including eight symphonies (1984–99), a second violin concerto, several other orchestral works, and a fourth string quartet (1993) are written in this new style.

WORKS

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: 2 Pieces, str, 1965; Vc Conc., 1967; Rondo, 1969; Montage II, 1970; Music for Vc and Chbr Orch, 1971; The Wayfarer 'Rhapsody on a Poem of Pádraig Pearse', 1979; Essay, 1980; Vn Conc. no.1, 1981; Sinfonietta 'Pictures from the Odyssey', wind qnt, str, 1983; Sym. no.1, 1984; Dawn 'Rhapsody on a Poem of Francis Ledwidge', 2 vn, orch, 1987; Sym. no.2, 1988; Vn Conc. no.2, 1989; Nocturne, str, 1990; Sym. no.3 'Joie de vivre', 1990; Sym. no.4 'The Four Provinces', 1991; 2 Slow Airs, accdn, str, 1993; Sym. no.6, 1993; Festive Overture, 1995; Sym. no.7, 1997; Jubilee Fanfare, 1998; Sym. no.8, 1999

Chbr and solo inst: Allegro vivace, vn, pf, 1959; Cl Trio, 1960; Str Qt no.1, 1960; Chbr Conc., vn, eng hn, 2 hn, 4 vc, drum, 1964; Allegro giocoso, Irish hp, 1966; Str Qt no.2, 1968; Dialogue, hn, pf, 1970; Pf Sonata no.1, 1971; Dialogue, bn, pf, 1972; Gui Fantasy, 1974; 2 Airs by Carolan, vn, 1975; Rhapsody on a Poem by Joseph Campbell, vn/va, 1975; Str Qt no.3, 1977; Aberration, fl, vn, 1980; Pf Qt, 1985; Synthesis, str qt, 1987; 3 Pieces 'Ideas from my 2nd Sym.', vn, pf, 1988; A Reeling Rhapsody, 2 vn, 1989; Dialogue, va, 1991; Str Qt no.4, 1993; Reflection, pf, 1995; Sonata, 2 vn, 1996; Sym. for Five, fl, cl, vn, vc, mar + perc, 1996

VOCAL

Choral: A Selected Life (T. Kinsella), T, spkr, SATB, orch, 1973; 3 Children's Songs (E. Lear), SATB, perc, 1977; Jubilate Deo, 1982; Dawn (F. Ledwidge), 1986; Ps cl (Praise the Lord), chorus, fl, 2 vn, pf, 1995

Solo: Montage (J.R. Dunne), Mez, eng hn, cl, bn, hn, va, vc, perc, vib, 1965; 2 Poems (J. Campbell), T, pf, 1976; Last Songs (F. Ledwidge), S, pf, 1983; The Splendid Years (P. Pearse), spkr, whistle, str qt, 1990; Sym. no.5 'The 1916 Poets' (J. Plunkett, T. MacDonagh, Pearse), Bar, spkr, orch, 1992

MSS in Contemporary Music Centre, Dublin

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Dervan: 'A Fresh Approach at RTE', Soundpost, iii/5 (1983), 13–15

M. Dungan: 'A Significant Contribution', New Music News [Contemporary Music Centre, Dublin] (1996), Feb, 9–11

A. Klein: Die Musik Irlands im 20. Jahrhundert (Hildesheim, 1996)

AXEL KLEIN

Kinsky, Georg L(udwig) (b Marienwerder, West Prussia, 29 Sept 1882; d Berlin, 7 April 1951). German musicologist. After a classical education in Marienwerder, he went to Berlin in 1898 and worked in a music shop and in an antiquarian bookstore. Though entirely self-taught in music, he was nevertheless made assistant to A. Klopfermann at the Prussian State Library in 1908 and in the following year became curator of the Heyer Musikhistorisches Museum at Cologne. Here, until the museum was disbanded in 1927, he catalogued and expanded the collection and organized popular lectures and concerts with historical instruments. From 1921 to 1932 he was lecturer in musicology at the University of Cologne, where he took the doctorate in 1925 with a dissertation on double reed instruments. The main fruits of these years were the valuable catalogues of the Heyer Museum, with meticulous introductions and numerous illustrations, and the Geschichte der Musik in Bildern (1929). After 1932 he worked privately. In 1944 his home and his private library and collection were confiscated and he was sentenced to a year of hard labour under the Nazi regime. Already a sick man, he went in 1945 to Berlin, where he worked on a thematic catalogue of Beethoven's works until his death.

Kinsky's importance lies in the example that he has given in describing and classifying instruments and in cataloguing and exploring musical manuscripts and early prints. In this way he influenced the work of associations such as the Galpin Society, the IMS and the IAML, and opened new possibilities for international research in different areas of music history, especially the 19th century. His thematic catalogue of Beethoven's works has not only been fundamental to further research (such as that by Willy Hess), but has also stimulated performance of little-known works. He enriched and popularized music history through visual evidence and together with Scheurleer was a pioneer in the field of musical iconography. His example led to the formation of RIdIM in 1970.

WRITINGS

Musikhistorisches Museum von Wilhelm Heyer in Cöln: Katalog, i–ii, iv (Cologne, 1910–16) [vol.iii was not published; most of the manuscript is now lost]

'Musikinstrumentensammlungen in Vergangenheit und Gegenwart', JbMP 1920, 47–60

Doppelrohrblatt-Instrumente mit Windkapsel (diss., U. of Cologne, 1925); AMw, vii (1925), 253–96

'Glucks Reisen nach Paris', ZMw, viii (1925–6), 551–72

ed.: Glucks Briefe an Franz Kruthoffer (Vienna, 1927)

with R.M. Haas and H. Schnoor: Geschichte der Musik in Bildern (Leipzig, 1929; Eng. trans., 1930, 2/1951)

'Beethovens Werke in Erst- und Frühausgaben: Instrumental- und Vokalmusik', Antiquariatskatalog no.XXXVI der M. Lengfeld'schen Buchhandlung in Köln (1929), 85–96

'Erst- und Frühdrucke von Werken Franz Schuberts und anderer Meister der Romantik und Neuromantik', ibid, no.xxxvii (1930), 1–27

'Musikbibliotheken', Philobiblon, vi (1933), 55–67

Erstlingsdrucke der deutschen Tonmeister der Klassik und Romantik (Vienna, 1934); see also Philobiblon, vii (1934), 347–66

'Die Erstausgaben und Handschriften der Sinfonien Beethovens', Philobiblon, ix (1936), 339–51

Die Originalausgaben der Werke Johann Sebastian Bachs: ein Beitrag zur Musikbibliographie (Vienna, 1937/R)

ed. M.-A. Souchay: Manuskripte, Briefe, Dokumente, von Scarlatti bis Stravinsky: Katalog der Musikautographen-Sammlung Louis Koch (Stuttgart, 1953)

Das Werk Beethovens: thematisch-bibliographisches Verzeichnis seiner sämtlichen vollendeten Kompositionen (Munich, 1955) [completed by H. Halm] with F. Rothschild: Nicolò Paganini: Ausgewählte Kompositionen aus seinem Nachlass (Vienna, 1922)

EDITIONS

J.S. Bach: Präludium und Fuge h-moll (bwv544) (Vienna, 1923) [facs. edn]

Ludwig van Beethoven: Sechs Gesellschafts-Menuette, für zwei Violinen und Violoncell (woo15) (Mainz, 1933)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E.E. Mueller von Asow: 'Georg Kinsky', Mf, iv (1951), 361–5

H. Halm: 'Vorwort', in G. Kinsky and H. Halm: Das Werk Beethovens (Munich, 1955), ix–xv

ALFONS OTT

Kinura. See under ORGAN STOP.

Kinzer, Giovanni. See CHINZER, GIOVANNI.

Kipnis, Alexander (b Zhitomir, Ukraine, 1/13 Feb 1891; d Westport, CT, 14 May 1978). American bass of Ukrainian birth. He studied conducting at the Warsaw Conservatory and singing in Berlin with Ernst Grenzebach. Interned as a Russian alien on the outbreak of World War I, he was soon released and began his career at Hamburg and Wiesbaden. In 1919 he joined the Berlin Charlottenburg opera (later the Städtische Oper), where he became leading bass (1922–30). Thereafter he was a member of the Berlin Staatsoper (1930–35) and the Vienna Staatsoper (1935–8). In 1934, however, he became an American citizen.

By then he had established himself everywhere as an outstanding Wagner and Mozart bass and a highly distinguished interpreter of Italian and Russian roles. He was much in demand at Bayreuth, singing there between 1927 and 1933, and appeared at the 1937 Salzburg Festival as Sarastro under Toscanini. In England he sang often at Covent Garden (first as Marcel in Les Huguenots, 1927) and for one season at Glyndebourne (Sarastro, 1936). But his career took him increasingly to America, both North and South. He was particularly appreciated in Chicago, where he was a regular member of the company from 1923 to 1932, and where his 30 roles included as many in Italian and French operas as in German. Between 1926 and 1936 he took part in six seasons at the Colón, Buenos Aires. After a surprisingly late début at the Metropolitan (in 1940 as Gurnemanz) he remained in New York until his retirement in 1946, singing his first Boris Godunov there in 1943. Pogner, King Mark, Ochs and Philip II were among his other most successful roles. With a voice of wide range and variety of colour, as well as of unusual refinement and flexibility for a bass, he also made his mark as a lieder singer, contributing extensively and valuably to the albums of the Hugo Wolf and Brahms Song Societies. The best of his many operatic recordings are those made in Berlin in the early 1930s, especially Osmin's first song from Die Entführung and 'Il lacerato spirito' from Simon Boccanegra.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GV (L. Riemens; J. Stratton)

A. Frankenstein, E. Arnosi and J. Dennis: 'Alexander Kipnis', Record Collector, xxii (1974–5), 51–79 [with discography]; xxiii (1976–7), 166–71 [addenda by C. Dillon]

DESMOND SHAWE-TAYLOR/R

Kipnis, Igor (b Berlin, 27 Sept 1930). American harpsichordist, fortepianist and critic, son of ALEXANDER KIPNIS. After studying at the Westport School of Music, Connecticut, and at Harvard, he worked as art and editorial director of Westminster Records (1955–9), as director of recorded music for a chain of radio stations based in New York (1959–61) and as a music critic (from 1955). In the meantime he took up the harpsichord professionally. Although essentially self-taught, he was guided and encouraged by a number of musicians, notably Thurston Dart. He made his début in a radio broadcast in New York in 1959 and gave his first recital there in 1962. He has performed widely as a soloist with leading orchestras and as a recitalist, touring Europe, Israel, South America, Australia, the Soviet Union and East Asia. His teaching career began in 1964 at the Berkshire Music Center, where he taught Baroque performance practice, and continued at Fairfield University, Connecticut, where he was associate professor of fine arts (1971–5) and artist-in-residence (1975–7). In 1982 he was appointed visiting tutor at the RNCM, Manchester. He has also edited harpsichord music and is a frequent contributor to periodicals.

Kipnis's enormous repertory includes a large selection of harpsichord music of every national school, as well as many contemporary and jazz works. His playing, while founded on a solid technique, stresses the expressive and stylistic features of the music rather than its purely instrumental qualities. His performances of 17th- and 18th-century music are noteworthy for their bold and imaginative free ornamentation. He has made numerous recordings, some of which have received awards in Europe and the USA.

HOWARD SCHOTT/DENNIS K. McINTIRE

Király, Ernő (b Subotica, 16 March 1919). Hungarian composer and ethnomusicologist. For most of his career he has lived and worked in Yugoslavia. He studied the trumpet at the Subotica High School for Music (1948–53) and on graduating began his own course of study. Until 1953 he was a member of the Subotica National Theatre Orchestra and the Subotica PO, and from then until his retirement in 1983 he was editor of Hungarian folk music for Radio Novi Sad; concurrently, from 1958, he was head of folk music at the Vojvodina Museum in Novi Sad. He is a member of the Serbian Folklorists' Association and the Yugoslav Composers' Federation, and in 1995 he became a full member of the Hungarian Academy of Arts.

Király developed an unconventional, individual style by using elements from Hungarian folk music (mostly those belonging to an older tradition, for example sighs and cries) and by demanding free interpretation, sometimes with the aid of graphic notation; in Acezantez (1978), for example, the performers are drawn into the creative, decision-making process, while Folklore Sounds is an aleatory work scored for 'zitherphone' or 'citraphon', his own electronic instrument constructed (1974) from Hungarian folk zithers of different sizes. His musical language has evolved from a fairly modern means of expression, as in Diptychon I (1958), to avant-garde experimentation, as in Flora V – Ikebana (1980).

In his search for new sonorities, Király has created in addition to the 'zitherphone' a multimedial 'tablophone' (on which it is possible to play music and draw at the same time) and uses unconventional playing techniques in works such as Három darab ('Three Pieces', 1967) for flute and piano.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: A kis torkos [The Little Glutton] (children's op, P. Balaž), 1962; Lamento, dancers, zitherphone, tape, 1966; Sandwich (music theatre), dancers, inst ens, tape, slide projections, 1991

Vocal: Vajdasági magyar népdalok [Hungarian Folksongs from Vojvodina], 2–3vv, 1961; Reflexziók I–V, 1v, gui, zither, 1967–70; Vocalizzazioni (Ernő), chorus, 1969; Reflexió VI (V. Popa), 1v/trbn, str, 1971; Abszurd mese [Absurd Story] (K. Ladik), nar, 1v, perc, 1971; Refleksija VII, 1v, zitherphone, tape, 1974; Phonostrip, SATB, 1976; Spiral (improvised text), 1v, 2 inst ens, tape, light show, 1976; Kötábla [Stone Plate] (cant.), SATB, inst ens, 1977; Hangképek I–X [Sound Pictures I–X], solo vv, SATB chbr orch, 1978 [on Hung. folk themes]

Inst: Tema con variazioni, str qt, 1956; 2 sonatines, pf, 1957; Diptychon I, orch, 1958; Poema o zori [A Poem about Dawn], synthetic music, orch, 1960; Nebo [The Sky], synthetic music, orch, 1962; Bacchanale 1, study for tamburitza orch, 1964; 3 darab [3 Pieces], fl, pf, 1967; Bacchanale 2, study for tamburitza orch, 1969; Toccata pentatonica, pf, 1972; Sonata geometrica, graphic score, pf/other insts, 1974–7; Tačke i linije [Dots and Lines], 2 zitherphone, 1975; Acezantez, graphic score, orch, 1978; Flora I–IV, graphic score after plant photos, inst ens, 1978; Flora

V – Ikebana, aleatory music after flower compositions of I. Tosiko, zitherphone/inst ens, 1980; Narcissus, str qt, 1982; Burlesca, ww qt, 1989; Tačke i linije [Dots and Lines], tablophone, 1989; Zingarella, orch, 1993; Varijacije na slovo B [Variations on the Letter B], tablophone, 1997
Film scores, incid music

WRITINGS

'Vajdasági magyar munkásmozgalmi dalok nyomában' [Tracing the revolutionary and militant songs among Hungarians in Vojvodina] Zbornik radova SAN, lxviii (1960)
Magyar népdalok [Hungarian folksongs] (Novi Sad, 1962)
'Pokladno vesekje kod Madjara u Vojvodini' [Carnival festivities of the Hungarians in Vojvodina], Yugoslav Folklore Association: Congress IX: Mostar 1962
'Citra narodni muzički instrument kod mađara u Jugoslaviji' [The zither as a folk instrument used by Hungarians in Yugoslavia], Rada vojvođanskih muzeja, nos.12–13 (1964), 103–39
'The Peasant Zither of the Hungarians in the Danube Region', Zbornik Matice srpske za scenske umetnosti i muziku, nos.8–9 (1991), 167–91
Zbirka romskih narodnih pesama iz Vojvodine [A collection of gypsy folksongs from Vojvodina] (Budapest, 1992)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ZL
O. Pándi: 'U potrazi za novin zvukom' [In search for a new sound], Zvuk, no.91 (1969), 23–6
S. Đuric-Klajn: 'Ernő Király', Muzička enciklopedija, ed. K. Kovačević (Zagreb, 2/1971–7)
H.C. Ryker: 'New Music in Yugoslavia', Numus-West, I/3 (1973), 37–45
Leksikon jugoslavenske muzike, ed. K. Kovačević (Zagreb, 1984)
M. Zoltán: 'Terc–kvint–kvart változatok' [3rd–5th–4th variations], Új symposion, nos.11–12 (1987)

TIJANA POPOVIĆ-MLADJENOVIĆ

Király, László (b Zalaegerszeg, 19 Jan 1954). Hungarian composer. He studied the double bass and composition at the Bartók secondary music school in Budapest (1968–72) and continued his composition studies at the Liszt Academy of Music (1973–8) under Szervánszky and Petrovics. He then took part in composition masterclasses in Bulgaria and the Netherlands under the guidance of Goleminov in the former, Ton de Leeuw and Nobre in the latter. Király has worked as a répétiteur at the Academy of Dramatic and Film Arts (1975–9) and as contemporary music adviser to the Hungarian National Philharmonia (1984–93); in 1981 he became a freelance music director for Hungarian radio.

Initially, his compositional style was influenced by the music of Bartók, Kodály, Prokofiev and Stravinsky; later, by the new Viennese and Polish schools, particularly Krause, Kilar and Górecki. His first significant composition was a setting of poems by Paul Klee, Négy dal ('Four Songs', 1977), which made free use of dodecaphonic techniques. Research he conducted while on a state scholarship in 1980 at the University of Ghent's electronic music studio led to the composition entitled Piano Piece. The sound material of this work derives from various modulated piano sounds recorded onto tape and altered through such means as speed changes, low pass filters and montage and collage techniques.

After a lull in creativity at the beginning of the 1980s, his Öt kórusmű ('Five Pieces for Chorus', 1983) marked a change of direction, a course that redefined the role of harmony in his music and which led to his alignment with the 'new tonality'. Boswili kirándulások ('Boswil Excursions', 1986) is written in a neo-romantic, tonal style; by 1989, in Akácok városa ('City of the Acacias'), he is completely at ease writing triadic and four-part harmony, the texture of which is governed by conventional melodic-harmonic hierarchies. In the 1990s he has composed mainly orchestral works.

WORKS
(selective list)

Op: A vakok [The Blind] (1, S. Galamb, after M. de Ghelderade), 1988
Orch: Boswili kirándulások [Boswil Excursions], 1986; Suite concertante, 2 cimb, str, 1987; Suite no.1, 'Akácok városa' [City of the Acacias], 1989; Suite no.2, 'Zalatáj', 1990; Elégia egy gordonkás halálára [Elegy on the Death of a Cellist], vc, str, 1993; Valse triste, vn, small orch, 1994; Concertino, vn, perc, orch, 1996; Ifjúsági zongoraverseny [Pf Conc. for Youth], 1997
Choral: 5 kórusmű [5 Pieces for Chorus] (L. Szabó), female/girls' chorus, 1983; Halk szélben [In Soft Wind] (D. Keresztury), female/girls' chorus, 1984; A szülőföld lelke [Soul of the Fatherland] (Zala poets), 1984; Magyar rekviem [Hungarian Requiem], S, female chorus, chbr orch, 1985; 2 dunántúli tájkép [2 Transdanubian Landscapes] (Keresztury, I. Simon), 1986; Cant. no.1 (Keresztury), Bar, chorus, orch, 1994
Solo vocal: 4 dal [4 Songs] (P. Klee), Mez, fl, vn, cimb, hmn/org, 1977; 3 spanyol dal [3 Spanish Songs] (L. de Vega, anon.), S, bn, 1982; Egy szerelem korszakaiból [From the Ages of a Love Affair], Mez, orch, 1992; 8 haiku, Mez, chbr ens, 1995; Les adieux (Hung. poets), T, orch, 1996
Chbr: Variations, cl, db, pf, 1973; 12 Miniatures: 1–3, fl, pf; 4–6, fl, hp; 7–9, fl, org; 10–12, fl, perc, 1977; 4 Studies, vn, perc, 1977; 3 Movts, perc qt, 1978; Nosztalgia és scherzo, cl, pf, 1993
El-ac: Echo, 1978; Musica naturae, 1979–81; Piano Piece, 1980; Repetitive Etudes, 1982
Incid music, folk music arrs., work for wind band

Principal publisher: Musica (Budapest)

Principal recording company: Hungaroton

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B.A. Varga, ed.: Contemporary Hungarian Composers (Budapest, 5/1989), 183–6
M. Hollós, ed.: Az életmű fele: Zeneszerzőportrék beszélgetésekben [Half the oeuvre: portraits of composers in conversations] (Budapest, 1997), 34–9

LÁSZLÓ GOMBOS

Kirby, F(rank) E(ugene) (b New York, 6 April 1928). American musicologist. He received the BA from Colorado College in 1950, and studied musicology under Leo Schrade as a graduate student at Yale, where he took the PhD in 1957. He taught at the universities of Virginia (1958–9), Texas (1959–60), West Virginia (1961–3) and Washington (1973–4). In 1963 he joined the faculty of Lake Forest College, Illinois; he retired in 1993.

Kirby has a wide range of scholarly interests, including German Renaissance theory, the history of keyboard music, the music of Beethoven, and such literary figures as Herder and Goethe. His Short History of Keyboard Music (1966) has been praised for its comprehensive and systematic coverage. His Introduction to Western Music (1970) presents a new approach to introductory music education for college students: he uses a thorough discussion of the music of Bach, Beethoven, Wagner and Stravinsky as the basis of a history of Western music from the Baroque to the present.

WRITINGS

Harpsichord Manual (Kassel, 1960, 2/1968) [trans. of H. Neupert: Das Cembalo (Kassel, 1933, 3/1956)]
'Hermann Finck on Methods of Performance', ML, xlii (1961), 212–20
'Herder and Opera', JAMS, xv (1962), 316–29
A Short History of Keyboard Music (New York, 1966, rev. 2/1995 as Music for Piano: a Short History; Jap. trans., 1979)
'Beethoven and the "geselliges Lied"', ML, xlvii (1966), 116–25
'Brahms and the Piano Sonata', Paul A. Pisk: Essays in his Honor, ed. J. Glowacki (Austin, 1966), 163–80

An Introduction to Western Music: Bach, Beethoven, Wagner, Stravinsky (New York, 1970)
'Beethoven's Pastoral Symphony as a sinfonia caracteristica', MQ, lvi (1970), 605–23; repr. in The Creative World of Beethoven, ed. P.H. Lang (New York, 1971), 103–21 with D.E. Lee: 'Die Rolle der Musik bei der Entstehung von Goethes West-östlichen Divan', Interpretationen zum West-östlichen Divan Goethes, ed. E. Lohner (Darmstadt, 1973), 176–227
Music in the Classic Period (New York, 1979)
'The Germanic Symphony in the 18th Century', JMR, v (1985), 52–83; vi (1986), 357–62
Music in the Romantic Period (New York, 1986)
'The Germanic Symphony of the Nineteenth Century: Genre, Form, Instrumentation, Expression', JMR, xiv (1995), 193–221

PAULA MORGAN

Kirby, Percival (Robson) (b Aberdeen, 17 April 1887; d Grahamstown, 7 Feb 1970). South African musicologist of Scottish birth. He studied with Terry at the University of Aberdeen, where he graduated in 1910, and under Stanford at the RCM. In 1914 he emigrated to South Africa as music organizer of the Natal Education Department. He was appointed professor of music at University College, Johannesburg (later the University of the Witwatersrand), in 1921 and held this post until his retirement in 1952. A professional timpanist from his London years, he published The Kettle-Drums in 1930. He founded and conducted the Johannesburg SO (1927) and the university orchestra (1930), for which he wrote and arranged incidental music for many university productions; he composed over 100 songs.

Kirby is best known for his work on the indigenous music of South Africa. From 1930 he engaged actively in field research, which took him on study tours of the Transvaal, Bechuanaland (Botswana), Swaziland, Vendaland and Ovamboland. He published this research in The Musical Instruments of the Native Races of South Africa (1934). An expedition to the Kalahari Desert in 1936 resulted in important studies of Khoisan music. He was made an FRCM (1924) and a Fellow of the Royal Anthropological Institute (1937) and received doctorates from the universities of the Witwatersrand (1931) and Grahamstown (1965).

WRITINGS

'Some Old Time Chants of the Mpumuza Chiefs', Bantu Studies, ii (1923–6), 23–34
'Horn Chords: an Acoustical Problem', MT, lxvi (1925), 811–14
'Some Problems of Primitive Harmony and Polyphony with Special Reference to Bantu Practice', South African Journal of Science, xxiii (1926), 951–70
'A Thirteenth-Century Ballad Opera: an Essay on "Le Jeu de Robin et de Marion" by Adam de la Hale', ML, xi (1930), 163–71
'A Study of Negro Harmony', MQ, xvi (1930), 404–13
The Kettle-Drums: a Book for Composers, Conductors and Kettle-Drummers (London, 1930)
'The Recognition and Practical Use of the Harmonics of Stretched Strings by the Bantu of South Africa', Bantu Studies, vi (1932), 31–46
'The Reed-Flute Ensembles of South Africa: a Study in South African Native Music', Journal of the Royal Anthropological Institute, lxiii (1933), 313–88
The Musical Instruments of the Native Races of South Africa (London, 1934, 2/1965)
'A Study of Bushman Music', Bantu Studies, x (1936), 205–52
'The Musical Practices of the /?Auni and ≠Khomani Bushmen', Bantu Studies, x (1936), 373–431
'Weber's Operas in London, 1824–1826', MQ, xxxii (1946), 333–53
'The Trumpets of Tut-Ankh-Amen and their Successors', Journal of the Royal Anthropological Institute, lxxvii (1947), 33–45
'Rossini's Overture to "William Tell"', ML, xxxiii (1952), 132–40
'Captain Gordon, the Flute Maker', ML, xxxviii (1957), 250–59
'The Indonesian Origin of Certain African Musical Instruments', African Studies, xxv (1966), 3

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Bryer: Professor Percival Robson Kirby ...: a Bibliography of his Works (Johannesburg, 1965)
P.R. Kirby: Wits End (Cape Town, 1967) [autobiography]
M.M. de Lange: Catalogue of the Musical Instruments in the Collection of Percival R. Kirby (Johannesburg, 1967)
J.P. Malan, ed.: South African Music Encyclopedia, iii (1984)

JOHN TYRRELL

Kirbye, George (d Bury St Edmunds, bur. 6 Oct 1634). English composer. He was one of the most important contributors to East's psalter (RISM 1592[7]). He was employed as a domestic musician at Rushbrooke Hall near Bury St Edmunds, the seat of Sir Robert Jermyn, to two of whose daughters he dedicated his single volume of madrigals (1597). Four years later he contributed With angels face to The Triumphes of Oriana (1601[16]; in the second edition the text 'Bright Phoebus greets' was substituted). At Rushbrooke, Kirbye was only a few miles from Hengrave Hall, where Wilbye was also a resident musician, and the two men must have had personal contact. On 16 February 1598 Kirbye married Anne Saxye at Bradfield St George nearby. Later he moved to Bury St Edmunds, living in Whiting Street. His wife was buried at St Mary's Church on 11 June 1626. During the next two years his name appears in the parish registers, evidently as churchwarden. Kirbye's own burial is recorded at St Mary's; his will reveals that he died a man of some substance.

Kirbye's basic musical training seems to have been in a pre-madrigalian style. This is shown not only in the deeply expressive Latin setting, Quare tristis es/Convertere, anima mea, but even more obviously in eight secular pieces (GB-Ob Mus.f.20–24), which set mostly moralizing verse, and which are clearly viol-accompanied songs in which words have been fitted to the instrumental parts, after the style of Byrd's Psalmes, Sonets & Songs of Sadnes and Pietie (1588). Kirbye was, however, well acquainted with Italian music, and among his possessions at his death was a set of partbooks (now GB-Ob Mus.f.1–6) containing works by 16 Italian composers. All the compositions in the 1597 volume are genuine madrigals, yet despite an indebtedness to certain features of Morley's style, Kirbye set no light verse of the sort that had filled Morley's volumes printed during the preceding four years. All Kirbye's madrigals maintain the prevailing seriousness of pre-madrigalian English music, and all the 1597 works are in a minor mode (his Oriana madrigal, With angels face, alone shows how admirably he could handle a brilliant and forthright manner). His madrigalian style shows an assured consistency, with a flexible and refined response to the text, fluent harmony, a discreet yet telling use of occasional chromaticism, and admirable rhythmic plasticity. Kerman observed that 'superficially, Kirbye is one of the Englishmen most impressed with Marenzio's style', though he shows more restraint in his imagery than was typical of an Italian madrigalist. Kirbye's collection contains two settings of Sleep now my Muse, of which the one for six voices is a reworking of that for four voices. Just as none of Kirbye's more routine works is really weak, so neither are any of his more inventive ones as outstanding as the best madrigals of Weelkes and Wilbye. Among the English madrigalists he is the supreme master of the generalized madrigal, an impeccable craftsman of unfailing taste, possessing a musical inventiveness that lifts him far above the level of an accomplished artisan like Lichfild, yet lacking the imaginative boldness or penetrating insight that can transform talent into genius.

WORKS

SACRED

All my belief, score, GB-Ob Tenbury 711
O Jesu, looke, 5vv, Lbl Add.29372–7
Quare tristis es (2p. Convertere, anima mea), 4vv, Ob Mus.f.17–19 (lacks Tr)
Vox in Rama, 6vv, Ob Tenbury 807–11 (lacks B)
3 sacred contrafacta of madrigals in Och 750–53, 1074–7: Sleepe, restles thoughtes, 4vv (formerly Sleep now my Muse); Vayne worlde adiew, 4vv (formerly Farewell my love); Woe is me, my strength fayles, 4vv (formerly Woe am I, my hart dies)
19 contributions to The Whole Booke of Psalmes (1592[7])

SECULAR

The First Set of English Madrigalls, 4–6vv (London, 1597); ed. in EM, xxiv (1922, 2/1961)
Madrigal, 6vv, in 1601[16] (later pr. with text Bright Phoebus greets most cleerely); ed. in EM, xxxii (1923, 2/1962)
8 pieces, 5vv, in Ob Mus.f.20–21, 23–4 (1 ptbk missing), 8 madrigals, 4–6vv, Lcm 684 (only 4 ptbks survive): all ed. in EM, xxxix (1988)

INSTRUMENTAL

Pavane, a 5, Lbl Add.30826–8 (lacks 2 pts)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KermanEM
E.H. Fellowes: English Madrigal Verse, 1588–1632 (Oxford, 1920, enlarged 3/1967 by F.W. Sternfeld and D. Greer)
E.H. Fellowes: The English Madrigal Composers (Oxford, 1921, 2/1948/R)
C. Monson: 'George Kirbye and the English Madrigal', ML, lix (1978), 290–315
I. Payne: 'George Kirbye (c.1565–1634): Two Important Repertories of English Secular Vocal Music Surviving Only in Manuscript', MQ, lxxiii (1989), 401–16
K.S. Teo: 'The Significance of John Baldwin's Commonplace Book in the Development of Chromaticism in England', MR, liii (1992), 165–78, esp. 169–71

DAVID BROWN

Kirchbauer, Alphons (fl 1731). German composer. He was a monk at the Benedictine Neresheim Abbey, near Dillingen. Unlike most of the German monastic composers of the early 18th century, he seems to have had a fairly successful ecclesiastical as well as musical career, having been chancellor to the Bishop of Chur.

His one known publication, Jubileus curiae caelestis (Augsburg, 1731), contains seven masses for four voices, two violins and organ, and is typical of the small-scale church music for parish choirs of the time. Kirchbauer was one of the earlier composers to follow the lead given by Valentin Rathgeber in writing simple, tuneful music for ordinary churches. This publication is unusual in that it does not appear to have included the optional trumpet and drum parts supplied with most publications, but it must have been popular as it was reprinted in 1740 (according to FétisB), a distinction which few liturgical publications of this type received.

ELIZABETH ROCHE

Kirchentonart (Ger.). See CHURCH MODE.

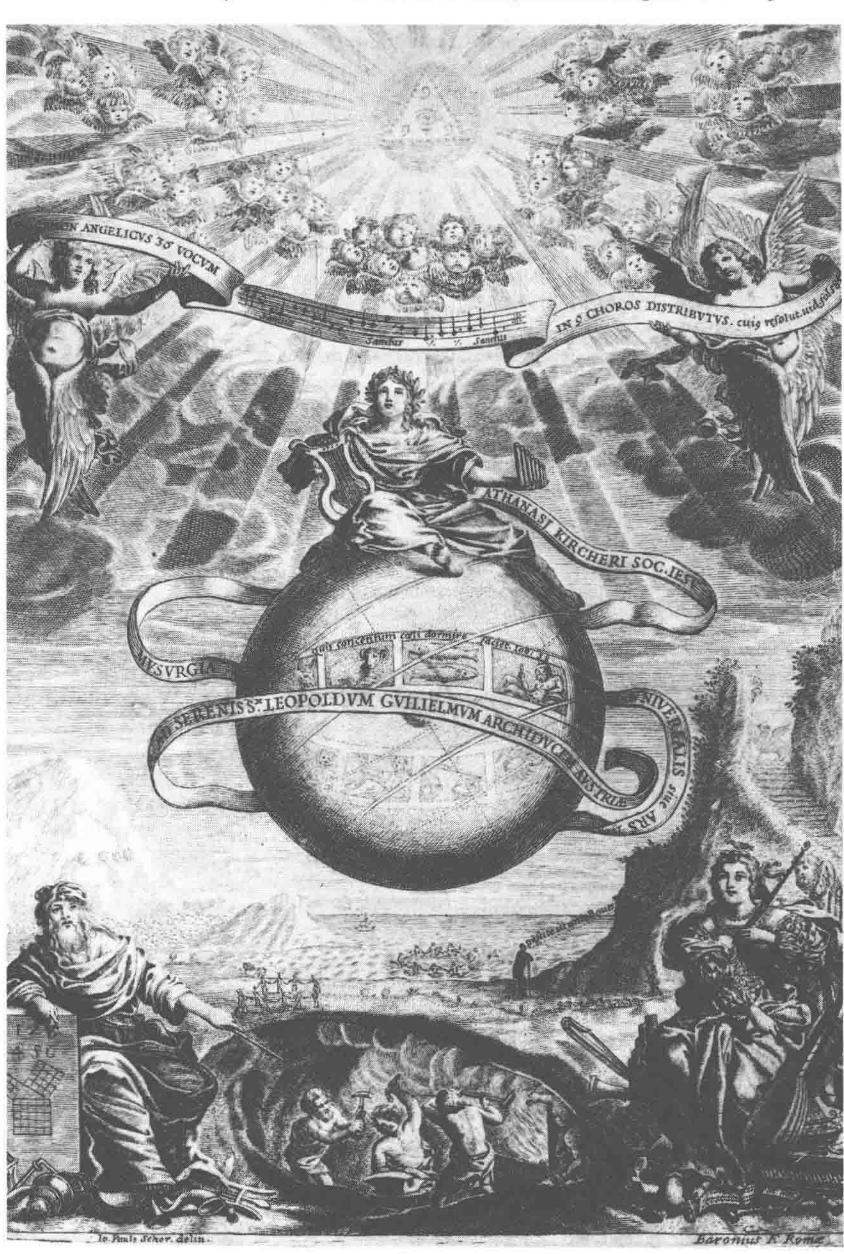
Kircher, Athanasius (b Geisa, nr Fulda, 2 May 1601; d Rome, 27 Nov 1680). German polyhistorian, theologian and music theorist, active mainly in Italy. He is important for music as the author of Musurgia universalis, one of the most influential of all music treatises and specially notable among those of the Baroque period.



1. LIFE. Kircher related the few known facts of his early life in an autobiography (see Seng's translation of Langenmantel). His father, who received a doctor's degree in philosophy and theology from Mainz University, was apparently also a musician, for Kircher credited him with his first instruction in music. After starting his education in his home town, he entered a Jesuit school at Fulda in 1612. On 2 October 1618 he became a novice at the Jesuit college at Paderborn, thus initiating a long period of intensive training in various Jesuit schools in both humanistic and scientific subjects. In 1622 he was forced to leave Paderborn because of the ravages of the Thirty Years War and went to Cologne to continue his studies in the physical sciences and philosophy. The following year he underwent further language training at Koblenz but was soon required to move to Heiligenstadt, near Göttingen, to teach Greek. Probably in the same year he was sent to the residence of the Archbishop of Mainz, Johann Schweikard von Kronberg at Aschaffenburg. In 1624 he began four years of theological study at Mainz, where in 1628 he was ordained. A final year of teacher training, which he pursued at Speyer, was required of him before he received his first appointment in 1629 as professor of mathematics, philosophy and oriental languages at the University of Würzburg. Two years later, when the Swedish army threatened Würzburg, he fled to France: he was sent first to Lyons and shortly afterwards to Avignon, where at a Jesuit college he took up a position similar to the one he had held at Würzburg. At Avignon he began an intensive study of the natural sciences and at this time became acquainted with Senator Nicolas Peiresc of Provence, whose similar enthusiasm for the sciences and especially for the study of ancient eastern civilizations led to a lasting friendship that soon influenced Kircher's career.

In 1633 Kircher received an appointment as court mathematician to the Emperor Ferdinand II at Vienna. He decided to travel by way of Rome, which he reached on 14 November. However, through the influence of Peiresc, who urged both Cardinal Francesco Barberini and Pope Urban VIII to keep him in Rome, he found on his arrival that he had been appointed to the Collegio Romano as professor of mathematics, physics and eastern studies. He remained there for the rest of his life except for brief visits to other parts of Italy and a longer journey, in 1637–8, to Malta as the father confessor to Landgrave Friedrich of Hesse-Darmstadt. Eventually he was released from teaching so as to be able to devote himself entirely to research and writing. In his later years he often went for reasons of health to the chapel of S Maria della Mentorella at Guadagnolo, a village near Palestrina, and after his death his heart was interred there.

2. WORKS. Scharlau summarized the content and importance of Kircher's writings on music and was also the first to examine systematically his voluminous correspondence surviving in Rome (see also Langenmantel). Kircher wrote 30 books, several of them vast, in which he sought to embrace the entire corpus of accumulated knowledge and to organize and relate it to Christian philosophy. The magnitude of his achievement precludes even a summary here. It may be noted, however, that he was one of the first to solve the meaning of Egyptian hieroglyphics, and his Oedipus aegyptiacus (1652–4), though often inaccurate and prone to imaginative conclusions, was in the 17th century a major source for the popularizing of ancient Egyptian culture and civilization. Like many of his contemporaries, among them Mersenne, Fludd and Kepler, Kircher often erred by failing to evaluate the accuracy of his scientific data. Nevertheless, he compiled, especially in the massive Musurgia universalis, a compendium of musical facts and speculation that is still essential to an understanding of 17th-century music and music theory (see illustration).

Musurgia universalis, one of the really influential works of music theory, was drawn upon by almost every later German music theorist until well into the 18th century. Its popularity was greatly aided by a German translation of a major part of it in 1662. Kircher wrote about music as an essentially conservative German rationalist, who saw it as a natural element in the Quadrivium, as part of mathematical order and, by extension, as a unique symbol of God's order expressed in number. He continued to support the essentially medieval view that the cosmos was revealed in musical ratios and that musical harmony mirrored God's harmony. This profoundly theological viewpoint of 17th-century German music theory (see Buelow) clearly extends as far as the music of Bach. Much of Kircher's contrapuntal doctrine derives from Zarlino, and in this and some other respects Musurgia universalis presents a synthesis of 16th- and 17th-century Italian and German compositional practices. A specifically German feature, however, is the description of the affective nature of music, in which Kircher brought the concept of musica pathetica into relation with the formal constructive elements of rhetorical doctrine. He examined rhetorical structure, poetic metre and musical–rhetorical figures in some detail. In this way he suggested the means for achieving an emotionally expressive yet rationally controlled musical style. His ideas concerning the classification of musical styles, based on sociological as well as national characteristics, are also original and important for the study of Baroque music (see Katz). Although he was apparently not a practising musician he was able to identify the best music composed and performed in his own (and earlier) times. In Musurgia universalis he quoted frequently extensive music examples from composers such as Agazzari, Gregorio Allegri, Carissimi, Froberger, Gesualdo, Kapsberger, Domenico Mazzocchi and Morales. Other aspects of his treatise that contribute to an understanding of 17th-century musical thought include the lengthy discussions of acoustics, musical instruments (see WATER ORGAN, fig.1), the history of music in ancient cultures and the therapeutic value of music.

Title-page of Kircher's 'Musurgia universalis' (Rome, 1650): engraving after Johann Paul Schor

Kircher's insatiable curiosity about ancient cultures, the natural sciences and music, together with his extensive contacts with scholars throughout the world, led him to assemble a museum of antiquities and musical curiosities. This Museum Kircherianum was for long an attraction for visiting musicians as well as for tourists; it was eventually dispersed among various Roman museums in the 19th century. Kircher was fascinated too by all aspects of mechanics and created a composing machine – the arca musarithmica – that made automatic composition possible. Although frequently criticized for his attitudes which to later writers seem unscientific, and often neglected because of his difficult Latin prose, he was nevertheless one of the leading figures in the music theory of the Baroque period.

See also MICHELI, ROMANO and NOTATION, fig.104.

THEORETICAL WORKS

only those on music

Magnes, sive De arte magnetica (Rome, 1641, 2/1643)
Ars magna lucis et umbrae (Rome, 1646, 2/1671)
Musurgia universalis, sive Ars magna consoni et dissoni (Rome, 1650/R); inc. trans. A. Hirsch as Philosophischer Extract und Auszug aus dess Welt-berühmten teutschen Jesuiten Athanasii Kircheri von Fulda Musurgia universali (Schwäbisch Hall, 1662)
Oedipus aegyptiacus (Rome, 1652–4)
Itinerarium exstaticum (Rome, 1656; rev. 2/1660 by C. Schott as Iter extacticum coeleste)
Organum mathematicum (Würzburg, 1668) [collab. C. Schott]
Ars magna sciendi (Amsterdam, 1669)
Phonurgia nova, sive Coniugium mechanico-physicum artis et naturae (Kempten, 1673/R; Ger. trans., 1684 as Neue Hall- und Thon-Kunst)
Tariffa Kircheriana (Rome, 1679)
Vita admodum reverendi P. Athanasii Kircheri SJ viri toto orbe celebratissimi (MS, *c*1669, incl. in Langenmantel and Seng)
Letters, see Langenmantel and Scharlau

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.A. Langenmantel: Fasciculus epistolarum adm. R.P. Athanasii Kircheri Soc. Jesu, viri in mathematicis et variorum idiomatum scientiis celebratissimi (Augsburg, 1684); Ger. trans. by N. Seng in Die Selbstbiographie des P. Athanasius Kircher (Fulda, 1901)
A. de Backer and others: Bibliothèque de la Compagnie de Jésus, ed. C. Sommervogel, iv (Brussels, 1893); ix (Brussels, 1932)
E. Katz: Die musikalischen Stilbegriffe des 17. Jahrhunderts (Berlin, 1926)
R. Dammann: Der Musikbegriff im deutschen Barock (Cologne, 1967)
U. Scharlau: Athanasius Kircher (1601–1680) als Musikschriftsteller (Marburg, 1969)
G.J. Buelow: 'Symposium on Seventeenth-Century Music Theory: Germany', JMT, xvi (1972), 36–49
J. Godwin: Athanasius Kircher: a Renaissance Man and the Quest for Knowledge (London and New York, 1979)
O. Wessely: 'Zur Deutung des Titelkupfers von Athanasius Kirchers Musurgia universalis (Rom 1650)', Römische historische Mitteilungen, xxiii (1981), 385–405
J. Fletcher: 'Athanasius Kircher and his Musurgia universalis (1650)', Musicology, vii (1982), 73–83
J. Fletcher, ed.: Athanasius Kircher und seine Beziehungen zum gelehrten Europa seiner Zeit (Wiesbaden, 1988) [incl. J. Fletcher: 'Athanasius Kircher: a Man under Pressure', 1–15; J. Godwin: 'Athanasius Kircher and the Occult', 17–36; U. Scharlau: 'Athanasius Kircher und die Musik um 1650: Versuch einer Annähung an Kirchers Musikbegriff', 53–67]
J. Manika: 'Athanasius Kirchers Exemplifizierung zur Affektenlehre: ein Beitrag zur Geschichte der Musikpsychologie', BMw, xxxi (1989), 81–94

GEORGE J. BUELOW

Kirchgässner [Kirchgessner], Marianne [Mariane, Maria Anna] (Antonia) (b Bruchsal, 5 June 1769; d Schaffhausen, 9 Dec 1808). German glass harmonica player. She was blind from the age of four. Having learnt the glass harmonica from J.A. Schmittbaur at Karlsruhe, she made numerous successful concert tours; on the first (1791), accompanied by the music journalist H.P.C. Bossler and his wife, she visited Munich, Salzburg, Linz and Vienna. Mozart heard her in Vienna and composed the Adagio and Rondo (K617), the Fantasie (KAnh92/616*a*) for glass harmonica, flute, oboe, viola and cello, and Adagio (K356/617*a*) for her instrument. In London in 1794 Fröschel made her a new instrument which she used from then onwards, and Salomon wrote a sonata for her. In 1799 she retired to Gohlis, near Leipzig, but later made several concert tours, including visits to Goethe in Karlsbad in the summer of 1808. Musicians admired her playing but regretted that she failed to bring out the true qualities of the glass harmonica, through a wrong method of execution. Her death was attributed to deterioration of her nerves caused by the unusually piercing vibrations of the instrument.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (B. Hoffmann)
K.M. Pisarowitz: 'Zum Bizentenar einer Blinden', Acta mozartiana, xvi (1969), 72–5
H. Ullrich: Die blinde Glasharmonikavirtuosin Mariane Kirchgessner und Wien: eine Künstlerin der empfindsamen Zeit (Tutzing, 1971)
H. Schneider: Der Musikverleger Heinrich Philipp Bossler, 1744–1812 (Tutzing, 1985)

C.F. POHL/KARL MARIA PISAROWITZ

Kirchhoff, Gottfried (b Mühlbeck, nr Bitterfeld, 15 Sept 1685; d Halle, 21 Jan 1746). German composer and organist. He was one of a family of Stadtpfeifer whose members held appointments in Weissenfels, Bitterfeld, Leipzig, Quedlinburg and other centres; Andreas Kirchhoff, an 'excellent instrumentalist' active in Copenhagen about 1670, was probably a member of the family. Along with Handel, Kirchhoff was one of Zachow's most brilliant pupils, schooled in the tradition of the Leipzig organists' and Stadtpfeifer's art. In 1709 he was Kapellmeister to the Duke of Holstein-Glücksburg (possibly through the good offices of Andreas Kirchhoff, then in Denmark) and in 1711 he was appointed organist in Quedlinburg, before moving in 1714 to Halle, where he was organist and director musices at the Liebfrauenkirche; the post was previously declined by J.S. Bach. In 1716 Bach, Kuhnau and Rolle came to examine the organ, newly built by Cunzius. Kirchhoff composed two cantatas on the organ's dedication and also wrote and directed the music in honour of academic festivities (1733) and the bicentenary of the Reformation in Halle (1741).

Kirchhoff's works include cantatas in the tradition of Zachow, J.S. Bach and Erdmann Neumeister, using successions of brief arioso movements and sometimes linking accompanied recitative and chorale. Ties with Bach are seen in his setting in 1717 of Christen, ätzet diesen Tag (cf BWV63) and in L'ABC musical: Praeludia und Fugen aus allen Tönen (lost). His organ pieces and in particular chorale preludes (in D-Bsb, RUS-KAu) show the influence of the Pachelbel school as well as Zachow; their characteristic features include imitative treatment of chorale melodies, free figuration, melisma and dominance of the upper voices. They do not however appear to bear out his reputation as a virtuoso organist. But his other keyboard works and his violin sonatas show that his high reputation was well founded. One of the violin sonatas appears as a five-movement sonatina in Leopold Mozart's Notenbuch for his son (1762).

WORKS

2 cants., S, B, str, B-Bc; ed. in EDM, 1st ser., xxxv (1957)
Christen, ätzet diesen Tag, cant., 1717
Chorale preludes, org, RUS-KAu; 4 ed. E. Kooiman in Koraalbewerkingen rondom J.S. Bach (Hilversum, 1990)
Pieces, org, D-Bsb
Kbd pieces; some ed. in NM, no.3 (1927)
12 Sonaten, vn, hpd, vc ad lib; ed. W. Serauky (Mainz, 1960); no.10 ed. H. Abert in Leopold Mozart's Notenbuch (Leipzig, 1922)
L'ABC musical: Praeludia und Fugen aus allen Tönen, lost [cited in Gerber]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; FrotscherG; GerberNL
H. Mendel and A. Reissmann, eds.: Musikalisches Conversations-Lexikon (Berlin, 1870–80, 3/1890–91/R)
W. Serauky: Musikgeschichte der Stadt Halle: music examples and notes to, ii/1 (Halle and Berlin, 1939/R)
H.T. David and A. Mendel, eds.: The Bach Reader (New York, 1945, 2/1966)
H.J. Moser: Die evangelische Kirchenmusik in Deutschland (Berlin, 1954)
H. Joelson-Strohbach: 'Nachricht von verschiedenen verloren geglaubten Handschriften mit barocker Tastenmusik', AMw, xliv/2 (1987), 91–140

G. KRAFT

Kirchmann. See KIRKMAN family.

Kirchner, Leon (b Brooklyn, NY, 24 Jan 1919). American-born composer, pianist and conductor of Russian extraction. When he was nine years old his family moved to Los Angeles where he was raised and educated at a time when the city's intellectual and artistic life was undergoing fundamental changes, due in large part to the influx of leading figures fleeing Hitler's Europe. He thus enjoyed the early encouragement of Toch who, impressed with his musicality and creative potential, recommended him to Schoenberg who became his principal mentor and the determining force, aesthetically and ethically, of all his subsequent work. Though he eschewed strictly dodecaphonic techniques, his music owes much of its characteristic forward drive to the Viennese tradition as represented by Schoenberg and to a certain extent Berg. Kirchner's work ranges from agonizing ruminations over the human condition to the liberating interplay of rhythmically energized pitches and timbres. Invariably it is governed by the same distinctive sense of structural discipline that underlies his ever insightful and imaginative renditions of a wide range of music, whether as a pianist in a Mozart concerto or conductor of a Bruckner symphony. These qualities, reflective of a profoundly humane individual, have distinguished him no less as a teacher at Harvard from where he retired in 1989.

Kirchner's own studies were primarily with Bloch at the University of California at Berkeley, where, in 1942 he was awarded the George Ladd Prix de Paris. By then, however, study in France was out of the question, and Kirchner settled in New York to work with Sessions, himself a one-time Bloch pupil. After four years of military service he returned to Berkeley for further study with Sessions. Although Kirchner later disavowed much of the creative result, it brought him the early recognition of a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1948–9, after which he obtained an appointment at the University of Southern California, rising from assistant to full professor in four years. In 1954 he became Luther Brusie Marchant Professor at Mills College, Oakland which he occupied until moving to Harvard in 1961 where, in 1966 he succeeded Piston as Walter Bigelow Roser Professor of Music. Having already distinguished himself as a performer at Mills College, he initiated at Harvard a novel course which combined musical analysis with performance; this in turn gave birth to the Harvard Chamber Orchestra.

In the footsteps of Schoenberg, Kirchner has remained consistently individual, unimpressed by changing fashion where 'idea, the precious ore of art, is lost in the jungle of graphs, prepared tapes, feedbacks and cold stylistic minutiae'. His music unfolds freely, unencumbered by technical straightjackets, imaginatively responding only to the underlying idea, Schoenberg's Gedanke, though with due regard to instrumental possibilities and limitations. His effectively written concertos offer every opportunity for virtuosity in display, but never at the expense of an unfailing seriousness of purpose. One critic's assessment of the Second Piano Concerto (1963) as 'occasionally difficult to follow, always interesting, and charged with a sense of urgency and power' (Goldman, 1975) may stand for Kirchner's output as a whole. The poetic, emotionally demanding 'duo-drama' Of things exactly as they are for two singers, chorus and orchestra (1997) exhibits a similar compelling force.

Kirchner's powerful strain of musical communication has led to recognition and awards from such institutions as the Guggenheim Foundation, the American Academy of Arts and Letters (1962), the American Academy of Arts and Sciences (1963) and the Center for Advanced Study of Behavioral Sciences (1974). The New York Critics Circle honoured him twice with its annual award (for the First and Second String Quartets); his First Piano Concerto led to a Naumburg Award and the Third Quartet to the Pulitzer prize (1967).

Copland observed in the 1950s that there were moments in Kirchner's music that seemed nearly 'out-of-control'. However, in the course of time such youthful ardour – especially evident in the Piano Trio of 1954 – inevitably yielded to more reflective manifestations of 'inner necessity'. Thus, the Second Piano Trio (1993) evokes, rather, some particularly passionate episodes in late Romantic music, Mahler certainly inspiring the closing portion of this single-movement work, which ends almost demonstratively in C sharp minor. Nor is Mahler's unmistakable stamp missing from certain parts of the later 'duo-drama'. But even direct allusions to Das Lied von der Erde, its probable model, assume entirely new meanings in this very individual context.

By and large, Kirchner has come to favour compact structures based on a minimal number of motifs. Ever new intervallic combinations of, in particular, characteristically Schoenbergian 2nds and 3rds, generate abundant energy for an expressive flow of ideas, due in no small part to judicious metre and tempo changes. Such 'rhapsodic' traits are discernible not only in a purely melodic composition like Triptych for solo violin and cello but also in the second of two works entitled Music for Orchestra (1989). By the same token, though, in Lily, Kirchner's only operatic venture to date, a measure of tension between the very fertility of his musical imagination and certain strictly literary aspects of his textual choice (Saul Bellow's Henderson, the Rain King), appears to persist at times. Fortunately, some of its finest musical moments have been recaptured in an identically titled chamber work as well as in the separately published solo piece Flutings for Paula (1977).

WORKS

Op: Lily (3, Kirchner, after S. Bellow: Henderson, the Rain King), 1973–6; New York, 14 April 1977, arr. S, tape, chbr ens, 1973

Orch: Piece, pf, orch, 1946, unpubd; Sinfonia, 1951; Pf Conc. no.1, 1953; Toccata, str, wind, perc, 1955; Conc., vn, vc, 10 wind, perc, 1960; Pf Conc. no.2, 1963; Music for Orch, 1969; Music for Fl and Orch, 1978; Music for Orch II, 1989; Music for Vc and Orch, 1992

Chbr and solo inst: Duo, vn, pf, 1947; Piano Sonata, 1948; Little Suite, pf, 1949; Str Qt no.1, 1949; Sonata concertante, vn, pf, 1952; Trio, vn, vc, pf, 1954; Str Qt no.2, 1958; Fanfare for Brass Trio, 1965; Str Qt no.3, 1966; Flutings for Paula, fl, 1973 [from op Lily]; version for fl, opt. perc, 1977; A Moment for Roger, pf, 1978; 5 Pieces, pf, 1984; Fanfare, 7 brass, 1985; Music for Twelve, 1985; Illuminations, brass ens, 1986; Vc Solo, 1986; 5 Pieces, pf, 1987; Vn Solo, 1987; 2 Duos, vn, vc, 1988; Triptych, vn, vc, 1988 [consists of Vc Solo, 1986 and 2 Duos, 1988]; Vn Solo II, 1988; Interlude, pf, 1989; Trio, vn, vc, pf, 1993; For the Left Hand, pf, 1995

Vocal: Letter (S. Alexander), S, pf, 1943, unpubd; The Times are Nightfall (G. Hopkins), S, pf, 1943, unpubd; Dawn (F. García Lorca), chorus, org, 1943–6, unpubd; Of Obedience (W. Whitman), S, pf, 1950, unpubd; The Runner (Whitman), S, pf, 1950, unpubd; Words from Wordsworth, chorus, 1968; Lily (S. Bellow), S, chbr ens, tape, 1973 [arr. of op]; The Twilight Stood (E. Dickinson), song cycle, S, pf, 1983; Of Things exactly as they Are, S, Bar, chorus, orch, 1997

Recorded interviews in US-NHob

Principal publishers: Associated

WRITINGS

'A Boo for the Boos of Boulez', New York Times (22 June 1969)

'Notes on Understanding', Daedalus: Proceedings of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, xcviii/3 (1969), 739–46

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CBY 1967; EwenD

A.L. Ringer: 'Current Chronicle: San Francisco', MQ, xlii (1956), 244–7

A.L. Ringer: 'Leon Kirchner', MQ, xliii (1957), 1–20

R.F. Goldman: 'Current Chronicle: New York', MQ, xlvi (1960), 71–6

R.F. Goldman: 'Current Chronicle: New York', MQ, xlviii (1962), 93–9

R.F. Goldman: 'Current Chronicle: New York', MQ, li (1965), 399–406

ALEXANDER L. RINGER

Kirchner, (Fürchtegott) Theodor (b Neukirchen, Saxony, 10 Dec 1823; d Hamburg, 18 Sept 1903). German organist, pianist and composer. He was an accomplished organist by the age of eight. In 1838 he went to Leipzig, where he studied with Julius Knorr and C.F. Becker; he also received advice from Mendelssohn and joined Schumann's circle. He went to Dresden in 1842 but returned to Leipzig the following year to study at the conservatory. Mendelssohn recommended him for the post of organist in Winterthur, and Kirchner spent his time there very successfully, teaching, composing and organizing the musical life of the town. Bülow, Liszt and Wagner admired his organ playing, and he was called upon to accompany the rehearsals of Wagner's Ring. He was in touch with musical activity in Zürich, and in 1862 settled there, first assuming the direction of the subscription concerts and the leadership of a choir and later becoming organist at St Peter's. During his Zürich period Kirchner became friends with Theodor Billroth and Brahms, whose antipathy towards the New German School of Liszt and Wagner he came to share.

In 1872 Kirchner took a post as music teacher to Princess Maria in Meiningen, but he remained there only a year. He led an irregular life, often changing residence and activity: in 1873–4 he directed the newly founded music school in Würzburg; from 1875 to 1883 he taught in Leipzig and from 1883 to 1890 he taught chamber music at the Dresden Conservatory; from 1890 he lived in Hamburg. Although he had an adequate income, his eccentric way of life led him into financial difficulties and only a collection taken up by his friends and publishers saved him from destitution. At the end of his life he was crippled and nearly blind.

Kirchner wrote about 1000 individual works for the piano and was a master of the character-piece and cyclic form. His style, which varied little, is akin to Schumann's. Among his chamber music works, his string quartets are noteworthy for their craftsmanship.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (R. Sietz) [with list of works]

A. Niggli: Theodor Kirchner (Leipzig, 1888)

O. Klauwell: Theodor Kirchner (Langensalza, 1909)

P.O. Schneider, ed.: T. Kirchner: Briefe aus den Jahren 1860–1868 (Zürich, 1949)

R. Sietz: Theodor Kirchner: ein Klaviermeister der deutschen Romantik (Regensburg, 1970)

K. Hofmann: 'Die Beziehungen zwischen Johannes Brahms und Theodor Kirchner', Festschrift Hans Schneider zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. R. Elvers and E. Vogel (Munich, 1981), 135–49

LUISE MARRETTA-SCHÄR/JAMES DEAVILLE

Kirchner, Volker David (b Mainz, 25 June 1942). German composer. He studied the violin with Günter Kehr and composition with Günter Raphael at the Peter Cornelius Conservatory, Mainz (1956–9). He went on to study composition with Bernd Alois Zimmermann at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik, Cologne (1959–63), and the viola with Tibor Varga at the Hochschule für Musik, Detmold (1964–5). He played the piano and clarinet in jazz groups during his student years in Cologne, and played the viola in ensembles including the Rheinisches Kammerorchester Köln (1962–4), the Kehr-Trio (1964–7) and the Frankfurt RSO (1966–88). In 1989 he moved to Mainz to work as a freelance composer. He became an adviser to the Villa Musica foundation in 1992. His awards include the Förderpreis (1974) and arts prize of Rheinland-Pfalz (1977), and the music prize of the Rheingau Festival (1994).

Best known as a composer of music theatre, Kirchner had already written over 20 incidental scores and a chamber theatre piece (Riten, 1970–71) when he completed his first opera, Die Trauung (1974). Its successful première led to commissions from several opera houses. His stage works are characterized by an attempt to expand the operatic genre without relinquishing its traditional, generic structures. His concert works also demonstrate a respect for tradition, employing a style that can be described as 'augmented late-Romanticism'. Harmony, timbre, melodic contour and rhythmic patterns share much with the late Romantic repertory, but are enhanced by new elements such as noise, tone clusters, speech sounds and taped insertions. Quotations from earlier music also play an important role in many works. The First Symphony (1980), for example, probes fragments of Romantic music, emphasizing their status as quotations through repeated presentation or disruptive placement. A sombre quality, often heightened to the edge of catastrophe is also characteristic. Alienation, violence, the decline of values, the abuse of power and death are central themes in the theatre works of the 1970s and 80s. Optimistic elements, however, begin to reappear in later music, especially in the Requiem (1988) and Missa Moguntina (1992–3).

WORKS

STAGE

Riten für kleines Klangtheater (1, textless), 1970–71, Wiesbaden, Hessisches Staatstheater, 15 March 1971

Die Trauung (op, 3, D. Kirchner, after W. Gombrowicz), 1974, Wiesbaden, Hessisches Staatstheater, 27 April 1975

Die fünf Minuten des Isaak Babel (requiem, 12 scenes, H. Weirich), 1977–9, Wuppertal, Städtische Bühnen, 19 April 1980

Belshazar (music drama, 2, H. Weirich), 1984–5, Munich, Staatsoper, 25 Jan 1986

Das kalte Herz 'Ein deutsches Märchen' (scenic ballad, 3, M. Günther, after W. Hauff), 1987, Munich, Staatstheater, 27 Oct 1988

Erinys Threnos (2, Kirchner, after Aeschylus: Oresteia), 1986–9, Wuppertal, Städtische Bühnen, 15 April 1990

Inferno d'amore 'Shakespearion I' (scenic moment, 1, Kirchner, after W. Shakespeare: Romeo and Juliet and Michelangelo: Sonette), 1992, Hanover, Ballhof, 12 March 1995

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Fragmente, 1961–7; Nachtstück 'Varianten über eine Wagnersche Akkordverbindung', va, orch, 1980–81; Sym. no.1 'Totentanz', 1980; Bildnisse I, 1981–2; Vn Conc., 1981–2; Bildnisse II, 1983–4; Shibboleth 'Poème concertant', va, orch, 1989; Bildnisse III, 1991; Sym. no.2 'Mythen', 3 female vv, orch, tape, 1991–2; Das Souper des Monsieur Papagenor 'Ein musikalisches Hors d'oeuvre', 1992–3; Hortus magicus, 1994; Hn Conc., 1996

Chbr and solo inst: Chorale variations, 15 solo str, 1967–8, rev. 1990; Nachtmusik, fl, cl, va, vc, db, 2 perc, 1970; Pf Trio, 1979; Der blaue Harlekin 'Hommage à Picasso', grotesque, fl, cl, 2 bn/dbn, 2 tpt, 2 trbn, 1981; Trifoglietto: 1 – Canonetto, 2 fl/pic, 2 cl, 2 ob, 2 bn/dbn, 2 tpt, 1981; Str Qt, 1982–3; Mysterion, a fl, hn, viola d'amore, vc, pf, 1985; Pf Sonata, 1985–6; Lamento e danza d'Orfeo, hn, pf, 1986–7; 3 poemi, hn, pf, 1986–7; Und Salomo sprach ..., vc, 1987; Saitenspiel, vn, vc, 1993; Exil, cl, vn, vc, pf, 1994; Gethsemani, nocturne, 2 vn, 2 va, 2 vc, 1994; Dybuk, mar, 1995; Tango, pf, 1995

VOCAL

Golgatha (epitaph, chorale text), 3 children's voices, ens, 1979; 3 Lieder (J.W. von Goethe), mid v, hn, vn, vc, pf, 1985–6; Orfeo (R.M. Rilke), Bar, hn, pf, 1986–7; Requiem 'Messa di pace', S, Mez, B, 3 boys' vv, chorus, orch, 1988; Missa Moguntina, boy's v, S, Mez, T, 2 B, 3 choruses, orch, 1992–3

Principal publishers: Schott, Kurt Neufert

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Ely: 'Volker David Kirchner', NZM, Jg.142, no.4 (1982), 21–5

L. Thaler: 'Rufer in der Wüste', NZM, Jg.151, no.6 (1990), 21–8 [interview]

L. Thaler: 'Gesang der geschundenen Menschen', NZM, Jg.152, no.10 (1992), 17–22 [interview]

ERIKA SCHALLER

Kirckman. See KIRKMAN family.

Kiriac-Georgescu, Dumitru (b Bucharest, 18 March 1866; d Bucharest, 8 Jan 1928). Romanian composer and conductor. He began his musical training at the Bucharest Conservatory with Gheorghe Brătianu and Eduard Wachmann, and then studied from 1892 to 1899 in Paris, with Dubois, Bourgault-Ducoudray and Widor at the Conservatoire and with d'Indy at the Schola Cantorum. At the same time he conducted the choir of the Romanian Chapel and a French choral society, Les Enfants de Lutèce. After his return to Romania he became in 1900 a professor at the Bucharest Conservatory, and in the following year founded the 'Carmen' society, one of the most important Romanian choirs of the 20th century. In 1928 he helped to organize a library in Bucharest that was to become the Folklore Institute. With Enescu and Brăiloiu he was among the founder-members of the Society of Romanian Composers in 1920.

As a composer, Kiriac-Georgescu worked on the development of new choral and vocal genres, and as a scholar with deep knowledge of folk and church modes he created a new style of Romanian music. Use of the Locrian, Dorian and other modes underlies the harmonic structure of his music. In addition to the Liturgia psaltică and the Cîntările liturgice, he wrote many choruses and songs influenced by Romanian folklore and popular life.

WORKS

(selective list)

Edition: D. Kiriac-Georgescu: Opere alese [Selected Works], ed. I.D. Chirescu and G. Breazul (Bucharest, 1955) [13 choruses, 2–4vv, 22 songs, 1v, pf acc.]

Coruri populare romînesti [Romanian Popular Choruses] (Bucharest, 1905); Cîntările liturgice [Liturgical Songs], 4vv (Tîrgu-Jiu, 1962); Liturgia psaltică [Psalmic Liturgy], 4vv (Bucharest, n.d.); several vols. of school choruses, collections of folktunes and folkdances

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (G. Breazul)

Z. Vancea: Creatia muzicală românească, sec. XIX–XX (Bucharest, 1968)

V. Cosma: Muzicieni români: lexicon (Bucharest, 1970)

G. Breazul: D.G. Kiriac, ed. T. Moisescu (Bucharest, 1973)

ROMEO GHIRCOIAŞIU

Kiribati, Republic of. From 1979 the name of the Gilbert Islands. See MICRONESIA, §III.

Kirkby, (Carolyn) Emma (b Camberley, Surrey, 26 Feb 1949). English soprano. She studied classics at Oxford and singing with Jessica Cash. Her pure, light-textured voice, deployed with minimal vibrato, her natural declamation and her sensitivity to words have been widely admired by interpreters of early and Baroque music and have served as a model for many specialists in this repertory. She made her operatic début as Mother Nature in Locke and Christopher Gibbons's Cupid and Death at Bruges in 1983 and her first American appearances as Dorinda in Handel's Orlando in a 1989 tour. Kirkby has sung frequently under the direction of Andrew Parrott, Anthony Rooley and Christopher Hogwood in a repertory ranging from 14th-century Italian songs to arias by Haydn and Mozart, and has been a regular member of Rooley's Consort of Musicke. In 1989 she sang Venus in Daniel Purcell's, Weldon's and Eccles's settings of The Judgment of Paris at the BBC Promenade Concerts. Her many recordings include Dido and Aeneas, Venus and Adonis, Orlando, Monteverdi's Orfeo, Hasse's Cleofide, discs of Handel arias, and a wide range of Italian cantatas and madrigals, English songs and Baroque and Classical choral works.

NICHOLAS ANDERSON

Kirkby-Lunn, Louise. See LUNN, KIRKBY.

Kirkendale [née Schöttler], Ursula (Antonie) (b Dortmund, 6 Sept 1932). American musicologist of German birth. She studied musicology, art history and classical archaeology at the universities of Munich and Vienna, and took the doctorate (1961) at Bonn University with a dissertation on Caldara. She did editorial work for Knud Jeppesen in Florence during 1962; from 1964 she taught musicology at the University of Southern California, the University of California at Santa Barbara and Duke University. In 1969–70 she was visiting associate professor at Columbia University.

In her research she has concentrated on the Italian Baroque. Her book on Antonio Caldara (1966), which deals especially with the composer's career until he became vice-Kapellmeister in Vienna in 1716, combines archival research with a wide knowledge of artistic, literary and cultural history; it provides new information on Caldara's life and places his oratorios of about 1690–1716 in the context of the Venetian style and the developing galant style. She has also found documentary material on Handel in the Fondo Ruspoli in the Vatican and has thereby established the chronology of about 50 cantatas between 1707 and 1711. She has also undertaken work on Bach's Musikalisches Opfer, and the more general field of musical rhetoric.

WRITINGS

Leben und venezianisch-römische Oratorien von Antonio Caldara (diss., U. of Bonn, 1961; Graz, 1966 as Antonio Caldara: sein Leben und seine venezianisch-römischen Oratorien; It. trans. of chap.1 in Chigiana, new ser., vi–vii (1969–70), 223–346)

'The War of the Spanish Succession Reflected in Works of Antonio Caldara', AcM, xxxvi (1964), 221–33

'The Ruspoli Documents on Handel', JAMS, xx (1967), 222–73, 517–18

with W. Kirkendale: 'Caldara, Antonio', DBI

'The Source for Bach's Musical Offering: the Institutio oratoria of Quintilian', JAMS, xxxiii (1980), 88–141

'Orgelspiel im Lateran und andere Erinnerungen an Handel', Mf, xli (1988), 1–9

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Gmeinweiser, D. Hiley and J. Riedlbauer, eds.: Musicologia humana: Studies in Honor of Warren and Ursula Kirkendale (Florence, 1994) [incl. list of writings, 575–9]

PAULA MORGAN

Kirkendale, (John) Warren (b Toronto, 14 Aug 1932). American musicologist of Canadian birth. He took the BA at the University of Toronto (1955) and continued his studies at the universities of Berlin, Bonn and Vienna, taking the doctorate at the University of Vienna in 1961 under Erich Schenk. After a year of research in Florence (1962), where he also worked as an assistant for Knud Jeppesen, he went to the USA to join the staff of the music division at the Library of Congress. From 1963 to 1967 he taught at the University of Southern California; in 1967 he became associate professor, and in 1975 professor, of musicology at Duke University, where he remained until 1982. During his residency in the USA he continued to conduct research in Italy; he was also visiting scholar at the Harvard University Center for Italian Renaissance Studies, Florence (1975, 1982). In 1983 he was appointed professor at Regensburg University and he has been visiting professor at Pavia University (1988), Moscow State University (1994) and the Hungarian Academy of Sciences (1996). In 1992 he retired and moved to Rome.

Kirkendale's principal areas of research are 18th-century Austrian music and Italian music from the 16th century to the 18th, and Florentine musicians, 1537–1737. His approach is strongly influenced by the broad historical-literary education he received in Toronto and Vienna and his work therefore emphasizes the relationship of music history to other humanistic disciplines, such as classical rhetoric, literature and painting.

WRITINGS

Fuge und Fugato in der Kammermusik des Rokoko und der Klassik (diss., U. of Vienna, 1961; Tutzing, 1966; Eng. trans., enlarged, 1979)

'KV405: ein unveröffentlichtes Mozart-Autograph', MJb 1962–3, 224–39

'The "Great Fugue" Op.133: Beethoven's "Art of Fugue"', AcM, xxxv (1963), 14–24

'More Slow Introductions by Mozart to Fugues of J.S. Bach?', JAMS, xvii (1964), 43–65

'"Segreto comunicato" da Paganini', JAMS, xviii (1965), 394–407

'Beethovens Missa solemnis und die rhetorische Tradition', Beethoven Symposium: Vienna 1970, 121–58; repr. in Ludwig van Beethoven, ed. L. Finscher (Darmstadt, 1982), 52–97; Eng. trans. as 'New Roads to Old Ideas in Beethoven's Missa solemnis', MQ, lvi (1970), 665–701

'Emilio de' Cavalieri, a Roman Gentleman at the Florentine Court', Quadrivium, xii/2 (1971), 9–21

L'Aria di Fiorenza, id est Il ballo del Gran Duca (Florence, 1972)

'Franceschina, Girometta, and their Companions in a Madrigal "a diversi linguaggi" by Luca Marenzio and Orazio Vecchi', AcM, xliv (1972), 181–235; It. trans. in Il madrigale tra Cinque e Seicento, ed. P. Fabbri (Bologna, 1988), 249–331

'Ciceronians versus Aristotelians on the Ricercar as Exordium, from Bembo to Bach', JAMS, xxxii (1979), 1–44

'Alessandro Striggio und die Medici: neue Briefe und Dokumente', Festschrift Othmar Wessely, ed. M. Angerer and others (Tutzing, 1982), 325–53

'L'opera in musica prima del Peri: le pastorali perdute di Laura Guidiccioni ed Emilio de' Cavalieri', Firenze e la Toscana dei Medici nell'Europa del '500, ii, ed. N. Pirrotta (Florence, 1983), 365–95

'Circulatio-Tradition, Maria Lactans, and Josquin as Musical Orator', AcM, lvi (1984), 69–92

'Zur Biographie des ersten Orfeo, Francesco Rasi', Claudio Monteverdi: Festschrift Reinhold Hammerstein, ed. L. Finscher (Laaber, 1986), 297–335

The Court Musicians in Florence during the Principate of the Medici (Florence, 1993)

'On the Rhetorical Interpretation of the Ricercar and J.S. Bach's Musical Offering', Studi musicali, xxvi (1997), 331–76

Emilio de' Cavalieri: Roman Artistic and Musical Director in Florence (forthcoming)

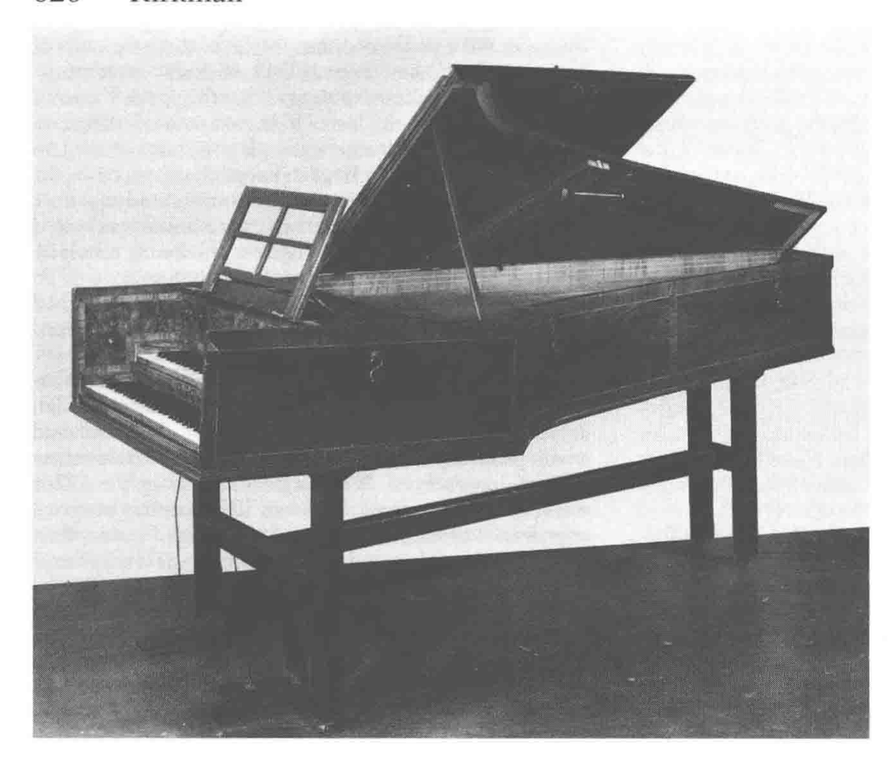
BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Gmeinwieser, D. Hiley and J. Riedlbauer, eds.: Musicologia humana: Studies in Honor of Warren and Ursula Kirkendale (Florence, 1994) [incl. A. Dunning: 'Exordium', 9–12; list of writings, 575–8]

P. Halász: '"Történészként a múlttal élek együtt": beszélgetés Warren Kirkendale-lel' ['As a historian I live with the past': an interview with Warren Kirkendale], Muzsika, xl/1 (1997), 21–5

PAULA MORGAN

Kirkman [Kirchmann, Kirckman]. English family of harpsichord and piano makers of Alsatian origin. Jacob Kirkman (b Bischweiler, 4 March 1710; d Greenwich, buried 9 June 1792) came to England in the early 1730s, and worked for HERMANN TABEL, whose widow he married in 1738. He took British citizenship on 25 April 1755, and in 1772 went into partnership with his nephew, Abraham Kirkman (b Bischweiler, 1737; d Hammersmith, buried 16 April 1794). (The Jacob Kirkman who was organist of St George's, Hanover Square, at this time is probably to be identified with another of Jacob Kirkman's nephews, who died in 1812.) Abraham Kirkman in turn took into partnership his son, Joseph Kirkman (i) (dates of birth and death unknown), whose son, Joseph Kirkman (ii) (*c*1790–1877), worked with his father on their last harpsichord in 1809. The firm continued as piano makers until absorbed by Collard in 1896.



'The first harpsichord maker of the times' was Fanny Burney's description of Jacob Kirkman; but by then Shudi was dead and her father had become increasingly associated with Kirkman, judging by the correspondence with Thomas Jefferson (1786; quoted in Russell), the entries in Rees's Cyclopaedia (1819–20) and other sources. Clearly Kirkman and Shudi had a near monopoly of the English harpsichord at its apogee and various estimates have been made of how many they produced. In the event, over twice as many Kirkmans of one period or another have survived, and Hubbard's phrase 'almost mass produced', though an exaggeration, is an understandable one. It is not known how many men worked for Kirkman in any one year, nor are the details of his organization and working methods entirely clear. Burney related several anecdotes about Kirkman – about his becoming a money-lender (a matter for which there is much documentary proof), his wooing of Tabel's widow and his way of dealing with the competition of the 'keyed guitar' (see ENGLISH GUITAR) – that clung to his reputation; more pertinent to his development as a harpsichord maker are his willingness to make experimental harpsichords (such as the enharmonic instrument for Robert Smith of Trinity College, Cambridge, *c*1757), his realistic approach to new-fangled inventions (such as Walker's quasi-Geigenwerk, the Celestina, popular in the 1780s), his experience in related keyboard instruments (spinets, claviorgans, pianos *c*1770, square pianos *c*1775) and even his membership of the German Reformed Church of the Savoy, with which were associated both a musical repertory and an organ tradition much more cosmopolitan than even the most exceptional London parish churches. The fact that he sued his former worker Robert Falkener in 1771 for putting up for sale as by Kirkman a harpsichord made by somebody else (probably Falkener, like those now in the University of Glasgow and the Russell Collection, with Kirkman nameboards) does not suggest vindictiveness; no doubt his complaint was justified and accords with other masters suing former apprentices at this period (e.g. Gottfried Silbermann and Hildebrandt).

The detailed differences and similarities of construction between a Kirkman and Shudi harpsichord are still being studied, and comparisons of their tone will remain subjective for some years to come. What can be said is that there were three main Kirkman–Shudi harpsichord types: singles of 8′, 8′, singles of 8′, 8′, 4′ and doubles of 8′, 8′, 4′, lute. More often than not there is a buff batten (normally, but not always, for the lower 8′) after *c*1760, but lutes were not included on Kirkman singles; sometimes on singles, the buff was activated by a foot-lever (or 'pedal'). The machine stop, which is unlikely to date before 1765 (and then only at first for special instruments), was a registration aid whereby on being 'cocked' by a hand stop the foot could operate machinery attached to the register ends in such a way that stops could be changed without the hands needing to be removed from the keys. The standard system – though there were others – was that on, for example, the Shudi and Broadwood harpsichord of 1775 now in the Vienna Kunsthistorisches Museum (said to have been Haydn's): on depression, the pedal changed the tutti (I 8′, I 4′ + II 8′) to a softer and different colour (I 8′ only, not coupled to II lute). On such English harpsichords, there was no coupler as such, the common 8′ row of strings being a 'dogleg' stop, that is the jacks were so shaped that they rested on the ends of both manuals' key-levers. This is today commonly regarded as a weakness of design, that the upper 8′ cannot be contrasted with the lower 8′ in two-manual play since the lower manual automatically plays it; but virtually no literature known to an English harpsichord player in the 18th century required such 'manual contrast and equality'. Either way it is unlikely that the upper manual was voiced other than as an echo, although on this point scholarly debate still continues. No English organ builder of 1750 was aware of the possibilities of two well-matched manuals; much the same could be said of the harpsichord makers.

The inner construction of a Kirkman was noticeably more complex, and might be thought more clumsy, than a French harpsichord of the same period, but both had developed fairly directly and clearly from the 17th-century Flemish harpsichord. Why English makers by the 1720s were so firmly committed to an idiosyncratic outward appearance to their harpsichords – veneered inside, then outside, with inlay and occasionally quite exceptional marquetry in the keywell – is less clear; of more importance to the player, Kirkman devised an unusual keyboard and key-bed construction, whereby the keys of both manuals were placed on a three-rail frame with front rail pins, so that the key-fall is limited by a rail at the finger end of the keys, a very unpleasant system for fingers used to a French keyboard. Judging by the music written for French harpsichords in 1750, the manual coupling system, whereby the upper manual slid into and out of play with the lower manual and thus did without dogleg jacks, was not at the time understood to have the subtle advantage over the English dogleg system for which recent authors have given it credit. By 1750 French upper manuals also were required for echoes.

Kirkman harpsichords made from about 1766 may often be found to have two pedals: one for the machine stop, one for the lid (or nag's head) swell (fig.1). The latter was the name given to the device whose mechanism, operated through various types of lever by a pedal, opened a segment of the top lid (shaped like the elongated head of a horse) along the bentside. Some kind of lid swell was incorporated in Plenius's lyrichord or lyrachord (a version of the gut-strung Geigenwerk), of which a description was published in 1755; in 1769 Shudi patented his Venetian Swell, later adopted by Kirkman. Jefferson (in a letter dated 25 May 1786) called the device a 'machine on the top resembling a Venetian blind for giving a swell' and requested one for his commissioned Kirkman harpsichord. This was some years after Burney reported (in his travels in Italy) that the two Kirkmans he saw in Venice, and the Shudi in Naples, were 'regarded by the Italians as so many phenomena', although it is significant that the known exported Shudis (to Berlin, Vienna and Russia) had all the paraphernalia of the mature English harpsichord: machine stop, Venetian swell, four registers and a compass extended to C′. Why Kirkman should extend at least one of his harpsichords to c′′′′ with reversed colouring of the sharps and naturals from g♯′′′ upwards is not known; perhaps in rivalry to Shudi (Kirkman's c′′′′ of 1772; Shudi and Broadwood's C′ for Maria Theresa, 1773) or in inspired anticipation of piano compass (Merlin, 1777, C′ to c′′′′).

It is possible that circumspect experience would suggest Shudi's harpsichords to have a more 'round' tone than

1. Harpsichord by Jacob and Abraham Kirkman, London, 1776 (Victoria and Albert Museum, London)

Kirkman's; if so, such an opinion may be based on the more distant plucking-points reputedly given to Shudi's basic design by John Broadwood after *c*1770, or on the leather (or hard cowhide) plectra that details of jack design suggest to have been used for at least some spinets and harpsichords from about 1785 or earlier. It seems to be true that Kirkman's lute registers pluck nearer the nut than Shudi's, thus pointing to a more incisive, nasal sound. So subjective is this area of study that Hubbard's considered view that such English harpsichords 'are too good. The tone ... almost interferes with the music' could be precisely denied by others who found the tone suitably neutral for music in a very wide stylistic spectrum. All things being equal, the Venetian swells must have dulled the tone, both by interfering with its passage (even when open) and by increasing the weight of the whole structure; but there is no evidence that all things were equal, e.g. that builders did not compensate by voicing more brilliantly. Precise details of voicing and stringing, and of the materials used for both, are still imperfectly understood, although much work has been carried out on these issues in the last two decades of the 20th century. At least one harpsichord from the 1770s has an apparently contemporary machine stop system whereby two foot-levers depressed in a particular order produce the 4′ alone on the lower manual, thus suggesting that the voicing was meant to give the register more character of one sort or another than is usually the case today. The buff, or so-called harp, effect, produced by a batten studded with small pieces of peau de buffle (not felt) brought into contact with the ends of the 8′ strings at the nut, is called 'guitar or harp' by Shudi in the directions on an instrument sent to Frederick the Great; but its purpose can be only conjectured, although special effects in continuo work are the most likely (e.g. in the slow movement of a flute sonata). Machine stops can produce a simulated crescendo–diminuendo effect when applied gradually, while the lid and Venetian swells change the timbre of the sound being produced as much as they do its volume. It has been suggested that, especially as the century neared its end, Kirkman and Shudi harpsichords were intended to be voiced very strongly, and Burney may well have written comparatively when he made his cryptic and unexpected remark about 'quilling, which in France is always weak'. As for the musical repertory of such harpsichords, it is probably fair to regard an enlightened English harpsichord player of *c*1770, with an interest in Scarlatti and Rameau, Handel and Corelli, J.C. Bach and Mozart, Arne and Purcell, Kirnberger and Hasse, C.P.E. Bach and Sammartini, as requiring a particularly, even uniquely, versatile instrument.

2. Portrait of a member of the Kirkman family, believed to be Abraham: drawing by John Nixon, pen and ink with wash, c1785 (private collection)

Like many harpsichord makers in London in the last quarter of the 18th century, the Kirkman family gradually began to build pianos as well as harpsichords. The earliest signed Kirkman piano is a square dated 1775. Until the end of the century, piano making began to increase in volume as the trade in harpsichords diminished. The last surviving Kirkman harpsichord is dated 1800, though Engel says the last one made was in 1809, by which time the firm was fully engaged in the production of pianos, both grands and squares.

A claviorgan by Jacob Kirkman and John Snetzler is illustrated in CLAVIORGAN.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D.H. Boalch: Makers of the Harpsichord and Clavichord, 1440–1840 (London, 1956, rev. 3/1995 by C. Mould) [with details of surviving Kirkman instruments]
R. Russell: The Harpsichord and Clavichord (London, 1959, rev. 2/1973 by H. Schott)
F. Hubbard: Three Centuries of Harpsichord Making (Cambridge, MA, 1965, 2/1967)
J. Barnes: 'Two Rival Harpsichord Specifications', GSJ, xix (1966), 49–57
P. Williams: 'The Earl of Wemyss' Claviorgan and its Context in Eighteenth-Century England', Keyboard Instruments, ed. E.M. Ripin (Edinburgh, 1971, 2/1977), 75–84
C. Mould: The Development of the English Harpsichord, with Particular Reference to the Work of Kirkman (diss., Oxford U. 1976)

DONALD HOWARD BOALCH/PETER WILLIAMS, CHARLES MOULD

Kirkpatrick, John (b New York, 18 March 1905; d Ithaca, NY, 8 Nov 1991). American pianist and music scholar. After attending Princeton University he continued his musical studies with Nadia Boulanger at Fontainebleau during the summers from 1925 to 1928 and at the Ecole Normale de Musique in 1926 and 1927. From 1928 to 1931 he studied the piano with Louta Nouneberg. In 1942 he became chairman of the music department at Monticello College. He then taught at Mount Holyoke College from 1943 until 1946, when he was appointed to the music faculty of Cornell University; he served as chairman of the department there from 1949 to 1953 and as director of the chapel choir from 1953 to 1957. In 1968 he became curator of the Ives Collection at Yale University (Professor Emeritus from 1973).

Kirkpatrick gave first performances of many piano works by American composers, most notably Charles Ives's Concord Sonata in 1939. As a friend of the Ives family, Kirkpatrick was asked after the composer's death to catalogue his music manuscripts; this resulted in a temporary catalogue issued by Yale in 1960. He also edited Ives's memoranda, with additional notes and appendixes, and several of his compositions.

WRITINGS

'Aaron Copland's Piano Sonata', MM, xix (1941–2), 246–50
A Temporary Mimeographed Catalogue of the Music Manuscripts and Related Materials of Charles Edward Ives (New Haven, CT, 1960)
'Performance as an Avenue to Educational Realities in Music', College Music Symposium, iv (1964), 39–46
Preface to C. Ives: Symphony no.4 (New York, 1965)
'The Evolution of Carl Ruggles: a Chronicle Largely in his Own Words', PNM, vi/2 (1967–8), 146–66
ed.: C. Ives: Memos (New York, 1972)
'Thoughts on the Ives Year', Student Musicologists at Minnesota, vi (1975–6), 218–23 [Ives centenary issue]

EDITIONS

C. Ives: Eleven Songs and Two Harmonizations (New York, 1968) with G. Smith: C. Ives: Psalm 90, for Mixed Chorus, Organ and Bells (Bryn Mawr, PA, 1970) with G. Clarke: C. Ives: Varied Air and Variations (Bryn Mawr, PA, 1971)
C. Ives: Johnny Poe, for Male Chorus and Orchestra (New York, 1978) with J. Cox: C. Ives: Waltz-Rondo for Piano (New York, 1978) with G. Smith: C. Ives: Psalm 25, for S.A.T.B., with Organ (Bryn Mawr, PA, 1979)
C. Ives: Study no.20 for Piano (Bryn Mawr, PA, 1981)
C. Ives: Trio for Violin, Violoncello, and Piano (New York, 1987)
C. Ives: String Quartet no.1 (New York, 1988)
C. Ives: Forty Earlier Songs (New York, 1993)

PAULA MORGAN

Kirkpatrick, Ralph (Leonard) (b Leominster, MA, 10 June 1911; d Guilford, CT, 13 April 1984). American harpsichordist, clavichordist and pianist. After studying the piano from the age of six he began to play the harpsichord in 1930 while an undergraduate at Harvard, where he took the AB in fine arts (1931) and was awarded a Paine Travelling Scholarship to study in Europe. In 1931–2 he did research at the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris and studied the harpsichord with Landowska and Paul Brunold and theory with Boulanger. He later studied briefly with Dolmetsch, Heinz Tiessen and Günther Ramin.

Kirkpatrick first performed publicly as a harpsichordist in 1930 in Cambridge, Massachusetts, and as a clavichordist in a radio broadcast from New York in 1946. At his European début (Berlin, 1933) he played Bach's Goldberg Variations with great success. He subsequently toured extensively in North America and Europe, first performing in Britain in 1947. His extensive repertory included all of Bach's keyboard music, a great many sonatas of Domenico Scarlatti, the 18th-century French school and some virginal music. He was also well known as an interpreter of much late 18th-century keyboard music, particularly Mozart's, on the fortepiano. His many recordings included Bach's complete keyboard works played on the harpsichord and clavichord, and the set of 60 Scarlatti sonatas which he also edited. His playing was characterized by rhythmic vitality, stylistic authority and, where appropriate, great bravura. Perhaps in reaction to the romantic excesses of the oldest generation of modern harpsichordists, he sometimes allowed a certain academic dryness to blunt his natural expressiveness.

Although in great demand as a solo harpsichordist and chamber musician Kirkpatrick continued his scholarly work. In 1937 he received a Guggenheim Fellowship for research into 17th- and 18th-century performing practice in chamber music, and began to gather material for his monumental study Domenico Scarlatti (Princeton and London, 1953). His editions included Bach's Goldberg Variations and, in addition to a selection of 60 sonatas, the complete keyboard sonatas of Domenico Scarlatti in facsimile. His teaching career began in 1933–4, when he held a post at the Salzburg Mozarteum. In 1940 he joined the staff of Yale University, and was professor of music, 1965–76. In 1964 he served as first Ernest Bloch Professor of Music at the University of California, Berkeley. He received honorary degrees from Yale and Rochester universities and Oberlin College.

WRITINGS

Interpreting Bach's Well-Tempered Clavier: a Performer's Discourse of Method (New Haven, CT, and London, 1984)
Early Years (New York, 1985)

HOWARD SCHOTT

Kirkpatrick, William J(ames) (b Duncannon, PA, 27 Feb 1838; d Germantown, PA, 20 Sept 1921). American compiler of Sunday-school and gospel hymnbooks, composer of hymns and teacher. He worked as a music teacher in the Philadelphia area, where he became associated with a number of Methodist churches.

His own musical style reflected the developing gospel hymn, which he helped to establish and popularize. In 1878 he joined forces with John R. Sweney, and the two men compiled about 50 songbooks and collections: 'Sweney and Kirkpatrick' became almost a trademark, and sales of their books ran into millions. They collaborated with the leading poets of gospel hymnody, and published nearly 1000 of Fanny Crosby's hymns alone. Kirkpatrick's collections – he produced about 50 further items after Sweney's death – were used in revivals and camp meetings, such as the Methodist gatherings at Ocean Grove, New Jersey, and many of his more animated tunes, for example, that of Jesus Saves (1882), reflect camp meeting and brass band influences. His other popular hymns include Redeemed, how I love to proclaim it (1882), 'Tis so sweet to trust in Jesus (1882), He hideth my soul (1890), Lord, I'm coming home (1892), and Lead me to Calvary (1921).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.H. Hall: Biography of Gospel Song and Hymn Writers (New York, 1914/R)
M.R. Wilhoit: A Guide to the Principal Authors and Composers of Gospel Song in the Nineteenth Century (diss., Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, KY, 1982)

MEL R. WILHOIT

Kirnberger [Kernberg], Johann Philipp (b Saalfeld, bap. 24 April 1721; d Berlin, 26 or 27 July 1783). German theorist and composer. All information relating to his career before 1754 is based on F.W. Marpurg's biographical sketch (1754), an autograph album described by Max Seiffert (1889) and comments found in letters Kirnberger wrote to J.N. Forkel in the late 1770s (published in Bellermann, 1871). He received his earliest training on the violin and harpsichord at home, and attended grammar school in Coburg and possibly Gotha. He studied the organ with J.P. Kellner in Gräfenroda before 1738, and then the violin with a musician named Meil and the organ with Heinrich Nikolaus Gerber in Sondershausen in 1738. According to Marpurg, Kirnberger went in 1739 to Leipzig, where he studied composition and performance with Bach for two years (the autograph book shows that he was in Sondershausen in 1740 and Leipzig in 1741, which does not preclude his period of study with Bach). In June 1741 Kirnberger travelled to Poland, where he spent the next ten years in the service of various Polish noblemen. He also held a position as music director at the Benedictine convent at Reusch-Lemberg.

In 1751 Kirnberger returned to Germany apparently stopping at Coburg and Gotha before going to Dresden, where he studied the violin for a short time. He was then engaged by the Prussian royal chapel in Berlin as a violinist. By 1754 he had resigned that post and obtained permission to join the chapel of Prince Heinrich of Prussia, and in 1758 was given leave to enter the service of Princess Anna Amalia of Prussia, a position he retained to the end of his life.

Johann Philipp Kirnberger: portrait by Schaupp, perhaps after Christian Friedrich Reinhold Lisiewski (Staatsbibliothek zu Berlin, Preussischer Kulturbesitz)

Kirnberger was among the most significant of a remarkable group of theorists, centred in Berlin, which included J.J. Quantz, C.P.E. Bach and Marpurg. Almost without exception his contemporaries described him as emotional and ill-tempered, but dedicated to the highest musical standards. Criticized for being inflexible, conservative, tactless, and even pedantic, his detractors still acknowledged his devotion to his students and friends. These included his employer Princess Anna Amalia (whose famous library he helped to assemble), and such eminent musicians as C.P.E. Bach, J.F. Agricola, the Graun brothers, J.A.P. Schulz (his most important pupil) and the encyclopedist J.G. Sulzer, to whose Allgemeine Theorie der schönen Künste (1771–4) he contributed articles. Most accounts agree that he was a middling performer and that his compositions were correct if uninspired. Many are in a galant style similar to that of C.P.E. Bach; others are in the older 'strict' style in the manner of J.S. Bach, but in neither category does Kirnberger display the harmonic or melodic imagination of his models. Although his musical knowledge was wide and profound, it was, according to his contemporaries, disorganized. He found it so difficult to express his ideas in writing that he had to call on others to edit or even rewrite his theoretical works (Die wahren Grundsätze (1773), for example, was written by J.A.P. Schulz under Kirnberger's supervision). Nonetheless, even his most severe critics, such as Marpurg, considered his theoretical and didactic works to be invaluable.

All but one of Kirnberger's published works appeared after he entered the service of Princess Anna Amalia. Beginning in 1757, he issued theoretical works and music regularly, most of the latter being for solo keyboard, chamber ensembles or solo voice. His compositions appeared in many anthologies edited by others as well as in his own prints. Many unpublished compositions exist in manuscript – a large proportion in the Amalien-Bibliothek (now in D-Bsb).

Kirnberger regarded J.S. Bach as the supreme composer, performer and teacher. He regretted that Bach left no didactic or theoretical works and tried through his own teaching and writing to propagate 'Bach's method'. His devotion to this cause is reflected in 14 years' intermittent effort to obtain the publication of all Bach's four-part chorale settings. Their appearance in the years immediately following Kirnberger's death was the direct result of his selfless persistence in which he offered to forgo all compensation for his share in the work. Kirnberger also edited H.L. Hassler's Psalmen und christliche Gesänge of 1607 and a collection of solo vocal ensembles from various operas by C.H. Graun.

Many of Kirnberger's musical publications were designed to be practical manifestations of his theoretical interests. In his Gedanken über die verschiedenen Lehrarten in der Komposition (1782) he observed that his works on vocal composition, his collections of dances and other works all served to complete the application of the principles set forth in his most important work, Die Kunst des reinen Satzes (1771–9). This juxtaposition of theory and practice is found in his Anleitung zur Singcomposition (1782), which contains a long but disorganized discussion of poetic metre and its relationship to vocal composition, followed by 53 complete vocal works to illustrate the text. His Recueil d'airs de danse caractéristiques (*c*1777) contains a preface advocating the study of dances as a means of improving one's sense of metre and rhythm. The pieces in his Clavierübungen (1762–6) are arranged in order of difficulty and fingered according to the principles set forth in C.P.E. Bach's Versuch (1753).

Kirnberger was vehemently opposed to certain aspects of Rameau's theories, yet his own works incorporated notions of chord inversion and strong and weak bass progressions. Like most of his contemporaries, he recognized the merit of older theories based on species counterpoint (Fux) but regarded them as inadequate for his purposes. Die Kunst des reinen Satzes is typical of the era in using the traditional ratios for constructing scales and intervals and then treating chords and their usage in a harmonic context. Only in later chapters of the work is counterpoint considered a separate discipline. Kirnberger's assertion that the bass is the most important part of music demonstrates the harmonic orientation of his musical thought. Nonetheless, he rejected Rameau's contention that harmony gives rise to melody. He also disagreed with the idea of the chord of the added 6th and with Rameau's idea of the fundamental bass. Instead he hypothesized a fundamental bass of his own that he claimed could explain certain dissonant combinations and their resolution in terms of part-writing. Thus he accounted for 9ths, 11ths and 13ths as retardations and suspensions of consonances rather than as chords formed by the sub-position of intervals below the fundamental bass. His insistence on these ideas demonstrates that his method was based on a harmonically saturated style rooted in basso-continuo practice.

WORKS

printed works published in Berlin unless otherwise stated

THEORETICAL WORKS

Der allezeit fertige Polonoisen- und Menuettencomponist (1757)
Construction der gleichschwebenden Temperatur (1760/R)
'Anmerkung über das Allabreve des Herrn Kirnberger', in F.W. Marpurg: Clavierstücke mit einem practischen Unterricht, iii (1763)
Die Kunst des reinen Satzes in der Musik, aus sicheren Grundsätzen hergeleitet und mit deutlichen Beyspielen erläutert, i (1771/R; with new title-page, Berlin and Königsberg, 1774), ii (Berlin and Königsberg, 1776–9/R); both vols. (2/1793), Eng. trans., 1982 as The Art of Strict Musical Composition
Die wahren Grundsätze zum Gebrauch der Harmonie … als ein Zusatz zu der Kunst des reinen Satzes in der Musik (Berlin and Königsberg, 1773/R, 2/1793) [written by J.A.P. Schulz under Kirnberger's supervision]
Grundsätze des Generalbasses als erste Linien zur Composition (1781/R)
Gedanken über die verschiedenen Lehrarten in der Komposition, als Vorbereitung zur Fugenkenntniss (1782/R, 2/1793)
Anleitung zur Singcomposition mit Oden in verschiedenen Sylbenmassen begleitet (1782)
Methode Sonaten aus'm Ermel zu schüddeln (1783)
Articles on music in J.G. Sulzer: Allgemeine Theorie der schönen Künste (1771) [A–I by Kirnberger, J–S by J.A.P. Schulz under Kirnberger's supervision] publications of music for didactic purposes

Allegro für das Clavier alleine, wie auch für die Violin mit dem Violoncell zu accompagniren … componirt und vertheidigt (1759)
Clavierübungen mit der Bachischen Applicatur in einer Folge von den leichtesten bis zu den schwersten Stücken (1762–6)
Canons in F.W. Marpurg: Abhandlung von der Fuge (1753–4/R)

VOCAL

Lieder, songs: 3 verschiedene Versuche eines einfachen Gesanges (1760); Lieder mit Melodien (1762), 3 ed. in Borris-Zuckermann; [24] Oden mit Melodien (Danzig, 1773), 1 ed. in Borris-Zuckermann; Lied nach dem Frieden vom Herrn Claudius (*c*1779); Gesänge am Clavier (Berlin and Leipzig, 1780), repr. with 1773 Oden as Kleine Oden und Lieder (Berlin and Leipzig, 1789), 2 ed. in E. Lindner: Geschichte des deutschen Liedes (Leipzig, 1871); 3 Gesänge in Musik gesetzt (n.p., n.d.); lieder in contemporary anthologies pubd Berlin, mostly repr. in Lieder (1762)
Other vocal: Cants., all D-Bsb: Ino (K.W. Ramler), S, insts; Der Fall der ersten Menschen (Bodmer), 1780, S, insts (autograph); Christus ist des Gesetzes Ende, 4vv, insts; 6 motets, 4vv, insts/bc, Bsb, Mbs, SWl; Wende dich zu mir, fugue, 4vv, pubd in Die Kunst des reinen Satzes; masses, lost

INSTRUMENTAL

Kbd: Clavierfuge mit dem Contrapunct in der Octava (1760); Vermischte Musikalien (1769); Diverses pièces, hpd (*c*1769–70); 8 fugues, hpd/org (*c*1777); Recueil d'airs de danse caractéristiques, hpd (*c*1777); chorale arrs., D-Bsb, and in Choralvorspiele, ed. J.C. Kühnau (1790); kbd sonatas/partitas in contemporary anthologies, incl. Raccolta delle nuove composizioni, ii (1757) and Collection récréative, ii (Nuremberg, 1761); 1 partita ed. in Borris-Zuckermann; single works in anthologies pubd Berlin (1760–63), incl. Musikalisches Allerley, Musikalisches Mancherley, also in Musikalisches Vielerley, ed. C.P.E. Bach (Hamburg, 1770)
Other inst: 2 fl sonatas (*c*1762); Fl Sonata, Bsb; 12 minuets, 8 insts, bc (1762); Sonata a tre, 2 vn, bc (1763); Musicalischer Circul, pf, vn/fl (n.d.); 2 syms., Bsb, SWl; 2 ovs., A-Wn; 6 Triosonaten, 2 vn, bc, *D-Bsb, extracts ed. in Borris-Zuckermann; Pf Conc., lost

EDITIONS

C.H. Graun: Duetti, terzetti … ed alcuni chori, i–iv (Berlin and Königsberg, 1773–4)
H.L. Hassler: Psalmen und christliche Gesänge [1607] (Leipzig, 1777)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GerberL
F.W. Marpurg: Historisch-kritische Beyträge zur Aufnahme der Musik, i (Berlin, 1754/R), 85
J.A.P. Schulz: 'Über die in Sulzers Theorie der schönen Künste unter dem Artikel Verrückung angeführten zwey Beyspiele von Pergolesi und Graun', AMZ, ii (1799–1800), 257–65, 273–80
J.F. Reichardt: 'J.A.P. Schulz', AMZ, iii (1800–01), 153–7, 169–76, 597–606, 613–20, 629–35
H.M. Schletterer: Joh. Friedrich Reichardt (Augsburg, 1865/R)
C.H. Bitter: Carl Philipp Emanuel und Wilhelm Friedemann Bach und deren Brüder, ii (Berlin, 1868), 314
J.G.H. Bellermann: 'Briefe von Kirnberger an Forkel', AMZ, new ser., vi (1871), 529–34, 550–54, 565–72, 614–18, 628–30, 645–8, 661–4, 677–8; vii (1872), 441, 457
M. Seiffert: 'Aus dem Stammbuche Johann Philipp Kirnbergers', VMw, v (1889), 365–72
C. Sachs: 'Prinzessin Amalie von Preussen als Musikerin', Hohenzollern-Jb (1910), 181–91
A. Schering: 'Johann Philipp Kirnberger als Herausgeber Bachischer Choräle', BJb 1918, 141–50
A. Kirnberger: Geschichte der Familie Kirnberger (Mainz, 1922)
S. Borris-Zuckermann: Kirnbergers Leben und Werk und seine Bedeutung im Berliner Musikkreis um 1750 (Kassel, 1933)
R. Sietz: 'Die Orgelkompositionen des Schülerkreises um Johann Sebastian Bach', BJb 1935, 33–96
H.T. David and A. Mendel, eds.: The Bach Reader (New York, 1945, 2/1966)
F. Bose: 'Anna Amalie von Preussen und Johann Philipp Kirnberger', Mf, x (1957), 129–35
J. Mekeel: 'The Harmonic Theories of Kirnberger and Marpurg', JMT, iv (1960), 169–93
P. Benary: Die deutschen Kompositionslehre des 18. Jahrhunderts (Leipzig, 1961)
W.S. Newman: 'Kirnberger's Method for Tossing off Sonatas', MQ, xlvii (1961), 517–25
K. Hlawiczka: 'Ze studiow na historia poloneza', Muzyka, x/2 (1965), 33–46
E.E. Helm: 'Six Random Measures of C.P.E. Bach', JMT, x (1966), 139–51
M. Vogel: 'Die Kirnberger-Stimmung vor und nach Kirnberger', Colloquium amicorum: Joseph Schmidt-Görg zum 70. Geburtstag, ed. S. Kross and H. Schmidt (Bonn, 1967), 441–9
P. Aldrich: Rhythmic Harmony as Taught by Johann Philipp Kirnberger (New York, 1970)
H. Serwer: 'Marpurg versus Kirnberger: Theories of Fugal Composition', JMT, xiv (1970), 206–36
H.G. Ottenberg: Die Entwicklung des theoretisch-aesthetischen Denkens innerhalb der Berliner Musikkultur von den Anfängen der Aufklärung bis Reichardt (Berlin, 1973)
R. Englehardt: Untersuchungen über Einflüsse Johann Sebastian Bachs auf das theoretische und praktische Wirken seines Schülers Johann Philipp Kirnberger (Erlangen, 1974)
D.W. Beach: The Harmonic Theories of Johann Philipp Kirnberger: their Origins and Influences (diss., Yale U., 1975)
E. May: Kirnberger's Collection of Organ Chorales by J.S. Bach (diss., Princeton U., 1975)
F. Sumner: 'Haydn and Kirnberger: a Documentary Report', JAMS, xxviii (1975), 530–39
C.P. Grant: Kirnberger Versus Rameau: Toward a New Approach to Comparative Theory (diss., U. of Cincinnati, 1977)
D.A. Sheldon: 'The Ninth Chord in German Theory', JMT, xxvi (1982), 26–61
R.B. Nelson and D.R. Boomgaarden: 'Kirnberger's Thoughts on the Different Methods of Teaching Composition as Preparation for Understanding Fugue', JMT, xxx (1986), 71–94
L. Roth: 'Kirnberger's Concept of Reductive Analysis', In Theory Only, ix/8 (1987), 21–9
H.G. Ottenberg: 'Die 1. berliner Liederschule im Urteil der Zeitgenössischen Presse', Studien zum deutschen weltlichen Kunstlied des 17. und 18. Jarhundert (Amsterdam, 1992), 247–68
J. Burns: 'Modal Identity and Irregular Endings in Two Chorale Harmonizations by J.S. Bach', JMT, xxxviii (1994), 42–77

HOWARD SERWER

Kirov Theatre. See ST PETERSBURG, §3(iii).

Kirsch, Winfried (b Dresden, 10 April 1931). German musicologist. After studying singing, the piano and conducting in Berlin, Fulda and Frankfurt, he worked as a concert pianist, accompanist (1947–58) and choral conductor (from 1948). From 1952 he studied musicology at Frankfurt University under Osthoff and Gennrich, with German philology and art history as subsidiary subjects; he took the doctorate at Frankfurt in 1958 with a study of Bruckner's vocal style. He was a research assistant at the university musicology institute (1962–71), and completed his Habilitation in 1971 with a historical study of the motets of Andreas de Silva. In that year he was appointed professor of musicology at the university; he also directed the chorister's school at the Hoch Conservatory in Frankfurt, 1972–81. His writings focus on the sacred music of the Renaissance (particularly the history of the motet and settings of the Magnificat and the Te Deum) and of the 19th century. His other writings include articles on the reception of Palestrina, the music of Bruckner, Chopin and Hindemith and the history of one-act operas; he was editor of the series Palestrina und die Kirchenmusik im 19. Jahrhundert.

WRITINGS

Studien zum Vokalstil der mittleren und späten Schaffensperiode Anton Bruckners (diss., U. of Frankfurt, 1958; Frankfurt, 1958)
'Ein unbeachtetes Chorbuch von 1544 in der Österreichischen Nationalbibliothek Wien', Mf, xiv (1961), 290–303
Die Quellen der mehrstimmigen Magnificat- und Te Deum-Vertonungen bis zur Mitte des 16. Jahrhunderts (Tutzing, 1966)
'Die Klavier-Walzer Op.39 von Johannes Brahms und ihre Tradition', JbSIM 1969, 38–67
Die Motetten des Andreas de Silva: Studien zur Geschichte der Motette im 16. Jahrhundert (Habilitationsschrift, U. of Frankfurt, 1971; Tutzing, 1977)
'Josquin's Motets in the German Tradition', Josquin des Prez: New York 1971, 261–78
'Der späte Hindemith', Hindemith-Jb 1972, 9–22
'Zur musikalischen Konzeption und dramaturgischen Stellung des Opernquartetts im 18. und 19. Jahrhundert', Mf, xxvii (1974), 186–99
'Unterterz- und Leittonklauseln als quellentypische Varianten', Formen und Probleme der Überlieferung mehrstimmiger Musik im Zeitalter Josquins Desprez: Wolfenbüttel 1976, 167–78
'Die Bruckner-Forschung seit 1945: eine kommentierte Bibliographie', AcM, liii (1981), 157–70; liv (1982), 208–61; lv (1983), 201–44; lvi (1984), 1–29
'Das Scherzo bei Brahms und Bruckner', Johannes Brahms und Anton Bruckner: Linz 1983, 155–72
'Nazarener in der Musik, oder Der Cäcilianismus in der Bildenden Kunst', Der Caecilianismus: Eichstätt 1985, 35–73
'Richard Wagners Biblische Scene "Das Liebesmahl der Apostel"', HJbMw, viii (1985), 157–84
'Anmerkungen zu einem Spätwerk: Anton Bruckners 150. Psalm', Anton Bruckner: Studien zu Werk und Wirkung: Walter Wiora zum 30. Dezember 1986, ed. C.-H. Mahling (Tutzing, 1988), 81–99
'Oratorium und Oper: zu einer gattungsästhetischen Kontroverse in der Oratorientheorie des 19. Jahrhunderts', Beiträge zur Geschichte des Oratoriums seit Händel: Festschrift Günther Massenkeil, ed. R. Cadenbach and H. Loos (Bonn, 1986), 221–54
ed., with others: Palestrina und die Idee der Klassischen Vokalpolyphonie im 19. Jahrhundert: Frankfurt 1987 [incl. 'Aspekte der Palestrina-Rezeption', 17–33]
'Franz Liszts "Requiem für Männerstimmen"', KJb, lxxi (1987), 93–108
ed., with others: Geschichte und Dramaturgie des Operneinakters: Thürnau 1988 [incl. 'Dramaturgie einer Sentenz: Eugen d'Alberts "Die Abreise"', 163–84; 'Dramaturgie einer Erkenntnis: Eugen d'Alberts "Kain"', 199–214]
ed., with others: Studien zur Instrumentalmusik: Lothar Hoffmann-Erbrecht zum 60. Geburtstag (Tutzing, 1988) [incl. 'Carl Maria von Webers "Konzertstück" f-Moll Op.79', 363–94]
'Vergangenes und Gegenwärtiges in Haydns Oratorien: zur Dramaturgie der "Schöpfung" und der "Jahreszetten", Florilegium musicologicum: Hellmut Federhofer zum 75. Geburtstag, ed. C.-H. Mahling (Tutzing, 1988), 169–87

'Gioacchino Rossinis "Stabat mater": Versuch einer Exegese', KJb, lxxiii (1989), 71–96
'Mozarts Kirchenmusik im Licht der Kirchenmusiktheorie des 19. Jahrhunderts', Mozarts Kirchenmusik: Freiburg 1991, 73–103
ed., with M. Janitzek: Palestrina und die klassische Vokalpolyphonie: Frankfurt 1991 [incl. '"Wir können den liturgischen Text vielfach schöner und besser darstellen lernen, als Palestrina": zu den Messen-Kompositionen Franz Xaver Witts', 159–92]
'Zur Rezeption der Motetten Josquin Desprez im 19. Jahrhundert', Die Motette: Beiträge zu ihrer Gattungsgeschichte, ed. H. Schneider and H.-J. Winkler (Mainz, 1992), 283–97
'Ludwig van Beethoven, "Christus am Ölberge", Op.85', '"Opferlied" für Sopran, Chor und Orchester, Op.121b u. WoO 126', '"Bundeslied" für Soli, Chor und Bläser, Op.122', Beethoven: Interpretationen seiner Werke, ed. A. Riethmüller, C. Dahlhaus and A.L. Ringer (Laaber, 1994), i, 660–77; ii, 226–31, 231–5
'Chopins Préludes e-Moll und h-Moll (Op.28): ein Analyse- und Interpretationsversuch', Studien zur Musikgeschichte: eine Festschrift für Ludwig Finscher, ed. A. Laubenthal and K. Kusan-Windweb (Kassel, 1995), 572–81
'Hugo Distler: "Um Mitternacht" für Gemischten Chor (aus dem "Mörike Chorliederbuch" Op.19: Versuch einer chorpraxisorientierten Analyse', Chormusik und Analyse, ii/1, ed. H. Poos (Mainz, 1997), 229–47
'Warum ist die "Missa Brevis" von Palestrina so schön? Anmerkungen zur klassischen Vokalpolyphonie', Festschrift Christoph-Hellmut Mahling, ed. A. Beer, K. Pfarr and W. Ruf (Tutzing, 1997), 691–700

EDITIONS

Johannes Hätinel (Galliculus) und anonyme Meister: Drei Weihnachtsmagnificat, Cw, lxxxv (1961)
Drei Te Deum-Kompositionen des 16. Jahrhunderts, Cw, cii (1967)
Andreas de Silva: Opera omnia, CMM, xlix/1–2 (1970–71)
P. Hindemith: Konzert in Es-dur für Violoncello und Orchester, Op.3, Sämtliche Werke, iii/5 (Mainz, 1977)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Ackermann, U. Kienzle and A. Nowak: Festschrift für Winfried Kirsch zum 65. Geburtstag (Tutzing, 1996) [incl. list of pubns, 608–15]

HANS HEINRICH EGGEBRECHT

Kirshbaum, Ralph (Henry) (b Denton, TX, 4 March 1946). American cellist. He studied with Lev Aronson in Dallas (1962–4) and made his professional début with the Dallas SO at 13. He completed his studies with Aldo Parisot at Yale University (1964–8), and after two years in Paris won both the International Cassadó Competition in Florence (1969) and the International Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow (1970). He then embarked upon an international solo career, making his London début at the Wigmore Hall in 1970 and his British orchestral début playing Tchaikovsky's Variations on a Rococo Theme in 1972. His New York recital début was in 1976. In 1970 Kirshbaum joined Peter Frankl and György Pauk to form a piano trio which has gained an international reputation; he has also long been associated with Pinchas Zukerman in performances of chamber music. During the 1980 Proms Kirshbaum, Pauk and Nobuko Imai gave the world première of Tippett's Triple Concerto, of which they subsequently made an award-winning recording. Kirshbaum's repertory ranges from the Bach suites to contemporary works. In 1988 he founded and became artistic director of the RNCM Manchester International Cello Festival. Kirshbaum began to teach at the RNCM in 1976 and gives annual masterclasses at the International Musicians Seminar at Prussia Cove and at the Juilliard School, NY. His playing is admired for its beauty of tone and conviction of interpretation. He plays a cello by Montagnana dated 1729, the 'ex-Piatti'.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CampbellGC
F. Shelton: 'Promise Fulfilled', The Strad, xcviii (1987), 188–90

MARGARET CAMPBELL

Kirsten, Dorothy (b Montclair, NJ, 7 July 1910; d Los Angeles, 18 Nov 1992). American soprano. She studied at the Juilliard School of Music, then in Italy, and made her début in 1940 as Pousette in Manon with the Chicago Opera Company, where she also sang Musetta to Grace Moore's Mimì. She made her début at the New York City Opera, as Violetta, in 1944, and at the Metropolitan, as Mimì, the following year; she sang at the Metropolitan intermittently for 30 years, making her farewell as Tosca in 1975. Her roles in the house included Violetta, Louise (which she had studied with Charpentier), Marguerite, Gounod's Juliet, Manon Lescaut (her favourite part), Minnie and Fiora (L'amore dei tre re). She also appeared regularly at the San Francisco Opera, where she undertook Cressida in the American première of Walton's opera in 1955 and sang Blanche in Poulenc's Dialogues des Carmélites . She also appeared in the film The Great Caruso (1951). Kirsten recorded extracts from several of her roles (most notably her feisty Minnie), which reveal her gleaming, if not particularly beguiling, lirico spinto soprano and her unfailingly secure technique. She published an autobiography, A Time to Sing (1982).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Rasponi: The Last Prima Donnas (New York, 1982), 284
A. Blyth: Obituary, Opera, xliv (1993), 163–4

MAX DE SCHAUENSEE

Kīrtana (Sanskrit: 'telling, repeating, praising'; Hindi, Bengali etc. kīrtan; Tamil kīrtanam). In South Asian religious music a song of praise or devotion to a deity, or the singing of such songs, usually by a group, also known as bhajan(a) (see INDIA, §VI, 1 and 4). In principle open to all participants, kīrtana is an important vehicle for the bhakti devotional movements of popular Hinduism. The songs are strophic, often featuring antiphonal alternation between two groups or solo and chorus. Many regional varieties exist such as the nām-kīrtan of North India, which like the Sufi zikr comprises the endless repetition of the deity's name, or the Bengali tāl-gān kīrtan involving complex rhythmic structures. In South India the kīrtanam overlaps with the kriti genre of art-music, whose poetry is devotional in content but performed by soloists in classical style.

RICHARD WIDDESS

Kirzinger. See KÜRZINGER family.

Kishibe, Shigeo (b Tokyo, 16 June 1912). Japanese musicologist. He studied oriental history at Tokyo University, receiving the bachelor's degree in 1936 and the doctorate in literature in 1960. From 1949 to 1973 he was a professor at Tokyo University; he has also given lectures at other universities and colleges including Tokyo Geijutsu Daigaku (Tokyo National University of Fine Arts and Music) during the period 1952–80, and has been research fellow at the Tokyo National Institute of Cultural Properties (1952–8). In 1957–8 he went to the USA to teach at UCLA, Harvard University and the University of Hawaii. In 1961 he received the Japan Academy Prize. He went to the USA again in 1962–3, this time as a visiting professor at the University of Washington and Stanford University. He is one of the original members of the Society for Research in Asiatic Music, which he has served as president (1978–80 and 1984–93). He has specialized in the history of Asian music, particularly Chinese and Japanese, and has done much fieldwork in Korea, China, India, Iran and the Philippines. The Festschrift Nihon Koten Ongaku Bunken Kaidai [Bibliographic titles on Japanese Classical music] (Tokyo, 1987), marks Kishibe's 70th birthday and contains his biography and a complete list of his work.

WRITINGS

'Engaku meigi kō' [A study of the term 'Engaku'], Tōyō ongaku kenkyū, i/2 (1937), 9–36
'Tōdai ongaku bunken kaisetsu' [A short bibliography of the music of the Tang dynasty], Tōyō ongaku kenkyū, i/1 (1937), 69–73
'Shibugaku kō' [On the system of Sibuyue], Shigaku zasshi, xlix (1938), no.11, p.1–38; no.12, pp.1–46
'On the Origin of the P'i-p'a', Transactions of the Asiatic Society of Japan, 2nd ser., xix (1940), 259–304
'Tō no Rien' [The Liyuan of the Tang], Shigaku zasshi, li/11 (1940), 1–50
'Gakugakukihan no kaihan ni tsuite' [Various printings of the Ak-hak-kwe-bun], Toa ongaku ronso: Tanabe sensei kanreki kinen, ed. S. Kishibe (Tokyo, 1943), 213–44
Shina ongaku-shi yō [A short history of Chinese music] (Tokyo, 1943)
'Sōdai kyōbō no hensen oyobi soshiki' [The history and system of the chang-fang of the Sung dynasty], Shigaku zasshi, liv/4 (1943), 1–45
'Saiiki shichi-chō to sono kigen' [Seven tonalities of ancient Central Asia and their origin], Shigaku zasshi, lvii/9 (1946), 17–80
Tōyō no gakki to sono rekishi [Musical instruments in Asia and their history] (Tokyo, 1946)
'The Four Unknown Pipes of the Shō' [with L. Traynor], 'Tōdai jubugi no seikaku' [The characteristics of the Shih-pu-chi of the Tang dynasty], Tōyō ongaku kenkyū, ix (1951), 26–53; 113–37 with K. Hayashi, S. Shiba and R. Taki: 'Shōsōin gakki chōsa gaihō' [Report on the investigation of the musical instruments in the Shōsōin repository, the Imperial treasury], Shoryōbu kiyō, i (1951), 10–26; ii (1952), 28–53; iii (1953), 74–84
Ongaku no seiryū [Westward stream of music] (Tokyo, 1952; Chin. trans., 1983)
'Saiiki-gaku tōryū ni okeru Ko gakujin raichō no igi' [Visiting musicians of Central Asia in ancient China], Tōkyō daigaku kyōyōgakubu jinbun-kagaku-ka kiyō: rekishi, i (1952), 67–90 [with Eng. summary]
'The origin of the K'ung-hou' [The origin of the Chinese harp], Tōyō ongaku kenkyū, xiv–xv (1958), 1–51
'Chōan Hokuri no seikaku to katsudō' [The character and activity of Peili, the singing-girl's house in Chang'an city of the Tang dynasty], Tōkyō daigaku kyōyōgakubu jinbun-kagaku-ka kiyō: rekishi, vii (1959), 25–54
Tōdai ongaku no rekishiteki kenkyū [A historical study of the music of the Tang dynasty] (Tokyo, 1960–61; Chin. trans., 1973)
'A Chinese Painting of the T'ang Court Women's Orchestra', The Commonwealth of Music, in Honor of Curt Sachs, ed. G. Reese and R. Brandel (New York, 1965), 104–17
The Traditional Music of Japan (Tokyo, 1966, 2/1982)
'Chibetto no bukkyō geinō' [Buddhist theatricals in Tibet], Chibetto no ongaku (Tokyo, 1967), 23 [disc note]
'Japanese Music: Conflict or Synthesis?', World of Music, ix/2 (Basle, 1967), 11–21
'Sō no tsukurikata' [How to make a koto], Sōkyoku to jiuta [Koto music and Jiuta], Tōyō ongaku sensho, iii (Tokyo, 1967), 63–74 articles in Tōdai no gakki [Musical instruments in the Tang dynasty], Tōyō ongaku sensho, ii (Tokyo, 1968), 9–42, 117–56, 157–68, 169–209, 211–40, 241–68, 269–88, 289–305 with M. Kishibe and Y. Suzuki: 'Yamada Kengyō no shōgai to jiseki' [The life and works of Yamada Kengyō], Tōyō ongaku kenkyū, xxvii–xxviii (1970), 1–67
Nihon no ongaku [Music of Japan] (Tokyo, 1972) [incl. cassette]
'A Japanese Traditional Theatre: Noh', Journal of National Centre of Performing Arts, iii/4 (Bombay, 1974), 1–6
Tsugaru Sokyoku Ikutaryū no kenkyū [Study on the Ikuta School of Koto Music in Tsugaru] (Hirosaki, 1976)
'Ethnomusicology in Japan', Asian Culture Quarterly, vii/2 (1979), 28–35
Kodai Shiruku-rōdo no ongaku [Music of the ancient Silk Road] (Tokyo, 1982; Chin. tran., 1988)
Tenpyō no hibiki: Shōsōin no gakki [Sounds from the Tempyo period: instruments preserved in the Imperial store house] (Tokyo, 1984)
Catalogue of the Japanese Musical Instruments of the Museum of Oriental Art in Venice (Venice, 1989)

MASAKATA KANAZAWA

Kisielewski, Stefan (b Warsaw, 7 March 1911; d Warsaw, 27 Sept 1991). Polish writer and composer. He studied composition, the piano and theory at the Warsaw Conservatory (1927–37, mainly with Sikorski) and in Paris (1938–9). From 1945 to 1949 he taught theory at the music academy in Kraków, and thereafter gave composition lessons privately. Honours bestowed upon him included the New York Jurzykowski award (1973), the Union of Polish Composers prize (1982) and the Cavalier Cross of the Order of Polonia Restituta (awarded posthumously).

Kisielewski's lasting significance was as an implacable and popular campaigner for freedom of speech and creative expression (he represented the Roman Catholic 'Znak' group in the Polish parliament between 1957 and 1965). He was editor-in-chief of Ruch muzyczny (1945–8), and in 1945 he began a long if periodic association with the Catholic Tygodnik powszechny, for whom he wrote some of his most trenchant articles. He crossed swords with the Polish communist party on many occasions, most notably during the postwar decade and in the periods 1968–71 and 1981–3, though articles of his that were banned later appeared in underground and foreign publications. Although Kisielewski's writings supported contemporary musical trends in Poland, his own works remained firmly rooted in French neo-classicism. His easy-going style is enlivened by self-mocking wit and by momentary ironic allusions to the avant garde, as in Spotkania na pustyni ('Meetings in a Desert') and Cosmos I.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Conc., chbr orch, 1948; Rapsodia wiejska [Rustic Rhapsody], chbr orch, 1950; Sym. no.2, 1951; Perpetuum mobile, 1955; Sym., 15 players, 1961; Divertimento, fl, str, 1964; Podróż w czasie [A Journey in Time], str, 1965; Sygnały sportowe [Sports Signals], ov., 1966; Cosmos I, 1970; Symfonia w kwadracie [Sym. in a Square], 1978; Pf Conc., 1980–91
Vocal: Melodia kurpiowska [Kurpian Melody], female chorus, folk ens, 1951; 12 pieśni [12 Songs] (K.I. Gałczyński), 1954
Chbr: Str Qt, 1935; Intermezzo, cl, pf, 1951; Suite, ob, pf, 1954; Capriccio energico, vn, pf, 1956; Suite, fl, cl, 1961; Spotkania na pustyni [Meetings in a Desert], 10 players, 1969; Dialogi, 14 insts, 1970; Sonata, cl, pf, 1972; Impresja kapryśna, fl, 1982
Pf: Danse vive, 1939; Serenade, 1945, rev. 1974; Sonata no.2, 1945, rev. 1955; Kaprys wiejski [Rustic Caprice], 1952; Suite, 1955; Kołysanka [Lullaby], 1968; 3 sceny burzliwe [3 Stormy Scenes], 1983
Incid music, film and radio scores
Principal publishers: PWM, Agencja Autorska

WRITINGS

Polityka i sztuka [Politics and art] (Warsaw, 1949)
Poematy symfoniczne Ryszarda Straussa (Kraków, 1955)
Z muzyką przez lata [With music through the years] (Kraków, 1957)
Grażyna Bacewicz i jej czasy [Bacewicz and her times] (Kraków, 1964)
'O psychologii dzisiejszego komponowania' [The psychology of composition today], RM, ix/7 (1965), 4–6
Preface to H. Tomaszewski: Nasze muzyczne dwudziestolecie: reportaż fotografczny 1944–1964 [Our 20 years of music: photo-reportage] (Kraków, 1965), pp.v–xxxiii
Z muzycznej międzyepoki [Between musical epochs] (Kraków, 1966)

'Do czego służy nam muzyka?' [What use is music to us?], Forum musicum, no.11 (1971), 3–17
Muzyka i mózg [Music and the brain] (Kraków, 1974)
Pisma wybrane [Collected writings] (Warsaw, 1996–)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Pociej: 'Stefana Kisielewskiego walki z muzycznym socrealizmem' [Kisielewski's battles with musical socialist realism], RM, i/10 (1957), 19–23
Melos – Logos – Etos: Warsaw 1985 [congress on S. Kisielewski, F. Dąbrowski and Z. Mycielski]
J. Waldorff: Słowo o Kisielu [A word on Kisiel] (Warsaw, 1994)
F. Dąbrowski: Stefan Kisielewski (Poznań, 1995)
J. Skarbowski: 'Stefan Kisielewski jako krytyk muzyczny' [Kisielewski as music critic], Literacki koncert polski (Rzeszów, 1997), 132–41
M. Urbanek: Kisiel (Wrocław, 1997)

ADRIAN THOMAS

Kislovodsk. Town in southern Russia, founded as a spa in 1803 and soon established as a cultural centre of the Caucasian spa towns. Wealthy visitors were regaled with music in parks and salons; the orchestras of the Kuban Infantry Regiment and Tersky Cossack Army also played. The laying of a railway branch line in 1895 gave an impetus to overall and cultural development, and a theatre, still intact, was built. One of the initiators of the new Kurzal (Kursaal) was a retired general, Il'ya Safonov, whose son Vasily was a pianist, conductor and teacher. The Safonovs ran a hotel, which their friends visited; Skryabin, one of Vasily's Moscow pupils, stayed there. Vasily Safonov was also involved in the establishment of the Kislovodsk SO, with which Glazunov, Ippolitov-Ivanov, Lev Shteynberg, Aleksandr Orlov and Yury Simonov later worked. Thanks to such energetic entrepreneurs as Victor Forcatti, Pavel Amirago and Mark Valentinov, stage shows were given by visiting artists, including Chaliapin, Isadora Duncan, Rachmaninoff and Stanislavsky.

In the late 1920s the Gosudarstvennaya Filarmoniya (State Philharmonia) took charge of artistic policy, but the roster of distinguished visitors continued as before; Gilels, Prokofiev, Mravinsky and David Oystrakh all worked in the town. The summer seasons of the 1950s and 60s were particularly splendid, with the cream of Soviet performers arriving for opera and ballet, symphonic and chamber concerts, and lectures, here and in the neighbouring spa towns of Pyatigorsk, Yessentuki and Zheleznovodsk. During the same period winter seasons began, and in the early 1970s orchestral festivals were instituted, with ensembles invited from all over Russia and light music represented as well as serious.

The previous decade witnessed the beginnings of a trend to give performances in old houses and museums: those of Mikhail Lermontov in Pyatigorsk, of the artist Nikolay Yaroshenko in Kislovodsk ('The White Villa') and of Chaliapin, also in Kislovodsk. The Muzey Muzykal'noy i Teatral'noy Kul'turï (Museum of Musical and Theatrical Culture), attached to the Filarmoniya Kavkazskikh Mineral'nïkh Vod (Caucasian Mineral Water Philharmonia), opened in 1965 and is engaged in important educational work. The Lermontov gallery in Pyatigorsk and the Pushkin gallery in Zheleznovodsk became branches of the Kursaal (named after Vasily Safonov in 1992), while in Kislovodsk a comfortable small concert hall was built inside the old theatre, replacing the open-air terraces, the so-called 'musical bandstands'. In the 1980s a concert hall with a Zauer organ was founded. The town hosts competitions (including the Vasily Safonov piano competition), conferences and festivals.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Ye. Pol'skaya and B. Rozenfel'd: Dorogiye adresa: pamyatnïye mesta Kavkazskikh Mineral'nïkh Vod [Precious addresses: commemorative places of the Caucasian spa towns] (Kislovodsk, 1974)
G. Voronina and B. Rozenfel'd: Zvuchala muzïka na vodakh [Music was ringing out on the waters] (Kislovodsk, 1993)
Sezonnïy listok Kavkazskikh Mineral'nïkh Vod: spetsial'nïy vïpusk [Season's leaflet of the Caucasian spa towns: special issue] (Kislovodsk, 1995)

ERA BARUTCHEVA

Kiss, Lajos (b Zombor, Hungary [now Sombor, Yugoslavia], 14 March 1900; d 18 May 1982). Hungarian ethnomusicologist. He studied aesthetics at Budapest University (graduated 1923) and composition with Albert Siklós at the Budapest Academy of Music (graduated 1925). After working as a school music teacher and conductor in Sombor (1926–39), he was deputy headmaster and choir director of the Belgrade Stanković Music School (1939–41), director of the conservatory and conductor at Ujvidék (1941–4) and director of the Győr State Conservatory (1945–50). From 1950 until his retirement in 1970 he helped edit Corpus Musicae Popularis Hungaricae and was a research fellow of the folk music research group of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences; his main interest was collecting Hungarian folk music.

WRITINGS

'A bukovinai székelyek tánczenéje' [Dance music of Bukovina Székelys], Tánctudományi tanulmányok (1958), 67–88
'Bitne značajke mađarskog muzičkog folklora' [The essence of Hungarian folk music], Rad IV kongresa folklorista Jugoslavije: Varaždin 1957, ed. V. Žganek (Zagreb, 1959), 113–22 [inc. Ger. summary]
'A szlavóniai magyar népsziget népzenéje' [Folk music of the Hungarian ethnic group in Slavonia], MTA nyelv- és irodalomtudományi osztályának közleményei, xiv (1959), 269–311
'Népi verbunk-dallamainkról' [Popular verbunk melodies], Tánctudományi tanulmányok (1959–60), 263–95
'Über den vokalen und instrumentalen Vortrag der ungarischen Volksweisen', JIFMC, xv (1963), 74–9
'Zenetörténeti emlékek a szlavóniai virrasztó énekekben' [Surviving musical history in the Hungarian funeral songs of the Slavonia region], Ethnographia, lxxvii (1966), 153–211
'A munkásság dalai Várpalotán és környékén' [Workmen's songs at Várpalota and its neighbourhood], A parasztdaltól a munkásdalig, ed. J. Katona, F. Maróthy and A. Szatmáry (Budapest, 1968), 307–448
'Bulgarische Rhythmen in Bartóks Musik', IIM, xiii (1969), 237–59
'Simonffy Kálmán és a magyar népzene' [Simonffy and Hungarian folk music], MTA nyelv- és irodalomtudományi osztályának közleményei, xxvi (1969), 338ff
'Köszöntők a jugoszláviai magyar népzenében' [Rhyming greetings in Hungarian folk music in Yugoslavia], A hungarológiai intézet tudományos közleményei, iv (1972), 43–84

FOLKSONG EDITIONS

Lakodalom [Wedding], Corpus musicae popularis hungaricae, iii (Budapest, 1955)
Siratók [Laments], Corpus musicae popularis hungaricae, v (Budapest, 1966) [with B. Rajeczky]
Horgosi népdalok [Folksong collection from Horgos] (Senta, 1974)
Lőrincréve népzenéje: Karsai Zsigmond dalai [Folk music of Lőrincréve: the songs of Karsai] (Budapest, 1982)
A Jugoszláviai Magyar népzene tára [Collection of Hungarian folk music in Yugoslavia] (Novi Sad, 1982–4)

BÁLINT SÁROSI

Kissin, Yevgeny (b Moscow, 10 Oct 1971). Russian pianist. He studied with Anna Pavlovna Kantor at Moscow's Gnesin State Institute for Musical Education, made his orchestral début at the age of ten and gave his first Moscow recital the following year. However, it was the masterly performances he gave with the Moscow PO of both the Chopin concertos in 1984, at the age of 13, that fully alerted the world to his extraordinary gifts. Since that time Kissin has played in all the major musical centres and established a reputation as one of the most formidable pianists of his generation. He made his Japanese début in 1986 and in 1988–9 performed with Karajan and the Berlin PO. His wide-ranging discography includes several recitals recorded live (among them his 1990 Carnegie Hall début which contains a performance of Prokofiev's Third Etude as stylish as it is devilish) and concertos by Bach, Beethoven, Chopin (taken from that unforgettable 1984 concert), Schumann, Tchaikovsky, Prokofiev, Rachmaninoff and Shostakovich. Kissin's other recordings include such works as Schumann's Fantasie, Chopin's B minor Sonata, Brahms's Paganini Variations in readings of rare athleticism, poetry and imagination.

BRYCE MORRISON

Kissing dance. See CUSHION DANCE.

Kist, Florentius Cornelis (b Arnhem, 28 Jan 1796; d Utrecht, 23 March 1863). Dutch physician and writer on music. At an early age he took piano lessons and later studied the flute, cello and singing. In 1813 he entered the University of Leiden as a medical student and in 1818 qualified as a doctor. Meanwhile he was heard in concerts in The Hague, Delft and Dordrecht. When he left Leiden, Kist established himself as a physician in The Hague, but in 1825 he abandoned medicine to devote himself to music. He had joined in founding the society known as Diligentia in The Hague in 1821, and in 1828 he started a male choir in Delft – probably the second such choir in the Netherlands – and also established a music school there. Later Kist took lessons in music theory with A.J. Becker in The Hague.

In 1841 Kist moved to Utrecht, where he edited the Nederlandsch muzikaal tijdschrift until 1844, when he established the journal Caecilia; he edited this for the next 18 years, and developed it into the most important Dutch musical review of its time, concerned not only with contemporary music but also with historical studies of Dutch music from the 15th century. He tried to improve Dutch Reformed Church music by founding institutes for the liturgical schooling of organists. In Utrecht he was connected with many local organizations including an amateur orchestra and a singing society. Fully aware of musical events in Europe generally, he was responsible for the first historical concert in the Netherlands with music by Lassus, Schütz, Bach and Handel on 25 May 1837 as well as the first performance in the Netherlands of any music by Wagner, the Tannhäuser overture in Utrecht on 12 March 1853.

WORKS
(selective list; see Fétis)

Ernst und Freude, ov., perf. The Hague, 1840
2 cantatas; other choral works; 25 Een- en tweestemmige koralen (P. Moens, 1842)
Dutch patriotic songs, German songs, Italian cavatinas, French romances

WRITINGS

De toestand van het protestantsche kerk-gezang in Nederland, benevens middelen tot deszelfs verbetering (Utrecht, 1840)
De levensgeschiedenis van Orland de Lassus (The Hague, 1841)
Grondtrekken van de geschiedenis der musijk (Utrecht, 1851) [trans. of K.F. Brendel: Grundzüge der Geschichte der Musik, Leipzig, 1848]
Articles in Amphion, 1820; Nederlandsch muzikaal tijdschrift, 1839–44; Caecilia [Utrecht], 1844–62; Zeitschrift für Deutschlands Musik-Vereine und Dilettanten; Signale; Teutonia

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB
P.A. van Westrheene: [Appreciation], Caecilia, lxxvii (1920), 90–95
E. Reeser: Een eeuw nederlandse muziek (Amsterdam, 1950), 86–94

JOHN LADE

Kistler, Cyrill (b Grossaitingen, nr Augsburg, 12 March 1848; d Bad Kissingen, 1 Jan 1907). German composer and writer on music. His family being poor, he saw in teaching the chance to earn a living and to be active in music at the same time. After attending a teachers' seminary in Lauingen he spent eight years as an assistant master in Augsburg and neighbouring villages. A patroness finally enabled him to study for three years at the Königliche Musikschule in Munich, where he was taught the organ and composition by Rheinberger, Wüllner and Franz Lachner. He became a teacher of music theory at the Sondershausen Conservatory in 1883, and two years later retired to Bad Kissingen, where he directed a private music school and lived as a freelance composer and writer.

Kistler was initially committed to Lachner's conservative attitude, but his friendship with Wagner in Bayreuth crucially affected his views. He adopted Wagner's musical language but did not develop it beyond the stage of mere imitation. Although honoured by Wagner's followers, he failed to achieve widespread and lasting recognition. His most successful work was the folk opera Röslein im Hag, the material for which approached his original preference for popular subjects. This inclination towards the folklike, evident in his other musical works, was also present in his writings (he was the editor of the neo-German Musikalische Tagesfragen), in which he expressed hostile views on everything un-German. Apart from his pedagogical works, his Wagner arrangements are particularly noteworthy.

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE

Kunihild, oder Der Brautritt auf Kynast (romantische Oper, 3, F. Sporck), Sondershausen, 20 March 1884
Eulenspiegel (komische Oper, 2, after A. Kotzebue); rev. H. Levi and L. Sauer (1), Würzburg, 5 April 1889
Baldurs Tod (Musikdrama, 3, von Sohlern), 1891, Düsseldorf, 25 Oct 1905
Im Honigmond (Idyll, 1, B. Wieland), op.112, Bad Kissingen, 1900
Arm Elslein (Märchenoper, 1), op.117, Schwerin, 2 March 1902
Röslein im Hag (Volksoper, 3, T.A. Kolve), Elberfeld, 13 Oct 1903
Der Vogt auf Mühlstein (tragische Oper, 3, B. Straub, after H. Hansjakob), Düsseldorf, 19 April 1904
Faust I. Teil (Musiktragödie, 4, J.W. von Goethe: Faust), 1905
Die Kleinstädter (komische Oper, 3, B. Luovsky)
Die Grossstädter (komische Oper, 3), inc.

OTHER WORKS

Bismarck-Kantate (R. von Gottschall), T, male vv, chorus, 1885; partsongs, mixed and male vv; 5 volumes of songs, 1v, pf; other secular vocal works
Salve regina, mixed chorus; 2 settings of Pange lingua, male vv, org
Marches, etc, orch; Serenade, vn/va/vc, pf/orch
Sonatina, fantasia, numerous dances and short pieces, pf; suite, fantasias, other pieces, org/hmn
Arrs. of excerpts from operas by Beethoven and Wagner

For complete list of published works see PazdírekH

WRITINGS

Harmonielehre (Munich, 1879, 2/1898)
Musikalische Elementarlehre (Chemnitz, 1880)
ed.: Musikalische Tagesfragen, i–xv (1880–81, 1884–94, 1903–6) [incl. articles by Kistler]
Chorgesangschule (Bad Kissingen, 1886)
Musiktheoretische Schriften (Heilbronn, 1898–1908)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PazdírekH
M. Chop: 'C. Kistler', Zeitgenössische Tondichter, ii (Leipzig, 1890), 274–98
C. Kistler: 'Selbstbiographie', Musikalische Tagesfragen, xv (1906), 37
H. Ritter: 'C. Kistler', Lebensläufe aus Franken, ii, ed. A. Chroust (Würzburg, 1922), 228–34
J.A. Fuller Maitland: Masters of German Music (Boston, 1977)
A. Layer: 'Cyrill Kistler, 1848–1907: Komponist', Lebensbilder aus dem Bayerischen Schwaben, xiii (1986), 281–307

HORST LEUCHTMANN

Kistner & Siegel. German firm of music publishers. It was formed in 1923 by a merger between two firms with long-standing traditions. In 1823 Heinrich Albert Probst (1791–1846) founded a music publishing firm in Leipzig which dealt primarily with French music and which was acquired in 1831 by the musical amateur Carl Friedrich Kistner (1797–1844), after whom it was named from 1836. Under his management it prospered and issued works by Schumann, Mendelssohn, Moscheles, David, Joachim, Hauptmann, Gade and Ferdinand Hiller. After his death it was managed by his brother Julius (1805–68) assisted by (among others) Carl Friedrich Ludwig Gurckhaus (1821–84), who became the sole proprietor in 1866. The firm had arrangements with Liszt, Smetana, Reinecke, Franz, Bruch and Goetz, and greatly stimulated the work of contemporary composers. In 1919 it was bought by the brothers Carl and Richard Linnemann, the proprietors of the music business of C.F.W. Siegel, which their family had owned since Siegel's death in 1869. This business had been founded by Carl Friedrich Wilhelm Siegel and Edmund Stoll in 1846, and was almost as important as the Kistner firm: it published works by Schumann, Spohr and Rubinstein and good light music, also issuing the popular collection Der Opernfreund. Under the direction of the elder Richard Linnemann (from 1870) it developed alongside the flourishing choral society movement in Germany. In 1903 Linnemann's sons bought E.W. Fritzsch's book and music publishing firm, and they subsequently brought out a substantial amount of Wagner literature; distinguished musicologists collaborated closely with the firm, which had issued about 30,000 items by 1943. Severe war damage led to the decline of the Leipzig firm; Walter Lott (1892–1948) was its last director. In 1948 the firm of Fr. Kistner & C.F.W. Siegel & Co. was founded in Lippstadt by Lott's brother Rudolf whose daughter, Marianne Feder, moved the firm to Porz (near Cologne). Its publications include musicological literature and chamber and organ music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Verzeichniss des Musikalien-Verlags von Fr. Kistner in Leipzig (Leipzig, 1894–1905; suppls. 1907, 1909, 1911, 1913)
R. Linnemann, ed.: Verlags-Verzeichnis von C.F.W. Siegels Musikalienhandlung (Leipzig, 1903)
R. Linnemann: Fr. Kistner 1823/1923: ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des deutschen Musik-Verlages (Leipzig, 1923)
W. Lott, ed.: Musik aus vier Jahrhunderten, 1400–1800: Katalog aus Veröffentlichungen des Verlags Kistner & Siegel in Leipzig (Leipzig, 1932)
H.-M. Plesske: 'Bibliographie des Schrifttums zur Geschichte deutscher und österreichischer Musikverlage', Beiträge zur Geschichte des Buchwesens, iii (1968), 135–222

HANS-MARTIN PLESSKE

Kit [kytte, treble violin] (Flem. creytertjes; Fr. poche, pochette, pochette d'amour, sourdine; Ger. Posch, Tanzmeistergeige, Taschengeige, Trögl-geige; It. canino, pochetto, sordina, sordino; Lat. linterculus). A small bowed unfretted fiddle, generally with four strings, made in a great variety of shapes and played from the 16th century to the 19th. Kits can be divided into two general types: a member of the rebec family, either pear-shaped or resembling a narrow boat, with a distinctly vaulted back; or a miniature viol, violin, mandore or guitar, with a slightly arched back and a long neck. Not all have a soundpost or bass-bar; their presence depends on the size and shape of each instrument. The tuning is generally in 5ths, sometimes at the pitch of the violin, but more often a 4th or a 5th (occasionally an octave) higher if there are only three strings. Surviving kits range from simple rustic instruments to the products of such makers as Joachim Tielke and Stradivari (who left working patterns for different types of kit, including the boat shape labelled 'canino' and elongated violin shapes of which the last is dated 1733).

1. TERMINOLOGY. The word 'kit' probably arose from the idea that the diminutive instruments were 'kittens' to the larger bowed instruments such as those of the violin family, which were said, however erroneously, to be strung with catgut. The term 'poche' was said by Trichet to describe the leather case in which the instrument was kept; Mersenne said that it was kept in the pockets (poches) of violinists who taught dancing. 'Taschengeige' also relates the instrument to a pocket, and 'Tanzmeistergeige' indicates its use by a dancing-master. 'Sordino' and 'sourdine' are descriptive of its small sound, and 'canino' compares it with a canine tooth. 'Linterculus' points to its resemblance to a small boat.

2. HISTORY. Some kits could be regarded simply as rebecs, but it is to the rebec that the name 'kit' seems first to have been applied. When this happened is uncertain, but the term was in use in England in the first quarter of the 16th century. In the Interlude of the Four Elements (*c*1517) Humanity says: 'This dance would do mich better yet/If we had a kit or taberet'. There is no evidence that this meant anything other than the pear-shaped rebec. In the late 17th century Randle Holme III drew a picture of a rebec and wrote by it 'A Kit with foure bowed strings' (GB-Lbl Harl.2027, f.272). The French term poche also included instruments of the rebec shape, as indicated by several references to its similarity to the mandora. For instance, on 7 January 1625 an inventory was made of the instruments belonging to François Richomme, 'violinist in ordinary to the king, and king of the minstrels of the kingdom of France', and among its items was 'une ... poche façon de mandore'. One of Praetorius's three pictures (Syntagma musicum, 2/1619) of Poschen is identical to a three-stringed rebec.

During the 16th century some members of the rebec family became narrower in proportion to their length than had hitherto been usual. One of these, now in the Museo Civico at Bologna, has the inscription 'Baptista Bressano'. It is in the form of a fish, and was perhaps used for an intermedio or some other dramatic production. A similar instrument can be seen in the woodcut 'Youth', from The Ages of Women by Tobias Stimmer (1539–84). By the end of the 16th century this type was firmly established in the shape of a narrow boat, still with a vaulted back, but sometimes with a clear demarcation between the body and neck, even when they were made from one piece of wood. Perhaps to compensate for its relatively simple shape, it was often lavishly decorated with inlaid wood, ivory, ebony or jewels, such as was another 'poche' from the collection of François Richomme. 'Enriched by rubies, mother-of-pearl and seed pearls', its case was furnished with a lock and key, an indication of the instrument's value. Mersenne, however, remarked that such ornamentation would not improve an instrument's musical qualities. A German or Swiss kit in the Victoria and Albert Museum, London, has its back carved with animals, birds, isolated musical instruments (including a jew's harp) and cherubic dancers and instrumentalists (fig.2*a*). Although it was still being made in the early 19th century, the boat-shaped kit flourished most during the 17th, when it was described in Cotgrave's Dictionarie of the French and English Tongues (1611):

1. Dancing-master with a kit: engraving by Jacques-Philippe Le Bas after Philippe Canot, 1745

Poche: f. ... also, the little narrow, and long Violin (having the backe of one peece) which French dauncers, or dauncing Maisters, carrie about with them in a case, when they goe to teach their Schollers.

Late in the 17th century new shapes appeared, originating mainly in France. The body and neck became quite separate, the former resembling a viol, violin or guitar, but sometimes being a festooned hybrid (fig.2*b*). The viol form, however, was different from its prototype in that it had no frets, and also that the back was often slightly arched like that of a violin. Unlike the boat-shaped kit, this type was rarely decorated, its visual beauty being in the outer design, the wood and the varnish. In the late 18th century Hawkins, having referred to the narrow 'poches' described by Mersenne, added 'In England this instrument is called a Kit, it is now made in the form of a violin'. By this time the influence of the viola d'amore had caused the occasional addition of sympathetic strings, resulting in the pochette d'amour (an example by Giovanni Battista Genova of Turin, *c*1765, is in the Royal College of Music, London; fig.2*c*).

The kit was played at all social levels: it served on the stage, at home and as a toy for children. The writer of The Christian State of Matrimony (1543) condemned those people who came to church with 'a great noise of harpes, lutes, kyttes, basens and drommes, wherwyth they trouble the whole church, and hyndre them in matters pertayninge to God'. Drayton, in his Poly-Olbion (London, 1613) described the kit as being a favourite instrument of wandering fiddlers. In Cesare Negri's dance treatise Le gratie d'amore, performed before Don John of Austria on 26 June 1574, the allegorical figure 'La Perseveranza' was followed onto the stage by a shepherd carrying a 'sordina'. Shepherds are also associated with kits in Monteverdi's Orfeo (1607), but here the instruments are described as 'violini piccoli alla Francese'. In the painting Peasant Children attributed to Antoine Le Nain, now in the Glasgow Art Gallery, one child plays a kit and another a pipe. His Young Musicians (in the private collection of Lord Aldenham) depicts a kit played in consort with a singer and guitarist. Lully's violin-shaped kit is now in the Paris Conservatoire, and at the top of the social scale the grand dauphin, eldest son of Louis XIV, had a boat-shaped kit made by Dimanche Drouyn of Paris (fig.2*d*). This ivory-backed instrument, together with its bow and leather case, is now in the Victoria and Albert Museum. Leopold Mozart wrote in his Violinschule (1756) that the kit was then 'almost obsolete'. However, Robert Bremner in London published among his list of wares (*c*1765):

2. Kits: (a) German or Swiss, first half of the 18th century; (b) Italian, c1700; (c) pochette d'amour by Giovanni Battista Genova, Turin, c1765; (d) by Dimanche Drouyn, Paris, late 17th century ((a), (d) Victoria and Albert Museum, London; (b), (c) Royal College of Music, London)

> Little Violins and Kits
> Bows for small Violins & Kits
> Bridges for Kits, Violins, Tenors, Viol de Gambo's and BassesPegs or Pins for dittoTail Pieces for ditto.

One of his customers may have been Francis Pemberton, described by Hawkins as > a dancing master of London, lately deceased, who was so excellent a master of the Kit, that he was able to play solos on it, exhibiting in his performance all the graces and elegancies of the violin, which is all the more to be wondered at as he was a very corpulent man.

3. Repertory. Very little music was composed specifically for the kit so the performer generally played violin pieces or popular tunes. Hawkins wrote that the powers of the kit were 'co-extensive with those of the violin', but whether or not the performer played above the first position depended on the instrument and the manner in which it was held. A kit by James Aird of Glasgow made in about 1780, complete with a book of tunes written out by a former owner, John Hall of Ayr (1788–1862) is now in the Glasgow Museum. No instrument is specified for the music, but the dance, songs and marches in the book are playable on the violin and some are accompanied. Many of them are suitable for the kit. In 1858,

3. Kit by Antonio Stradivari, Cremona, 1717 (Musée de la Musique, Paris)

when performance on the instrument was rare, Louis Clapisson acquired a kit by Stradivari, and composed a gavotte for it in his opera Les trois Nicolas. This instrument, violin-shaped and dated 1717 (fig.3), was originally brought to France by Luigi Tarisio, and is now in the Musée de la Musique, Paris (Clapisson was its first curator).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

HawkinsH; MersenneHU; PraetoriusSM, ii

P. Trichet: Traité des instruments de musique (Bordeaux, *c*1640); ed. F. Lesure (Neuilly-sur-Seine, 1957/R; Eng. trans., 1973)

A. Kircher: Musurgia universalis (Rome, 1650/R)

F.W. Galpin: Old English Instruments of Music (London, 1910, rev. 4/1965/R by T. Dart)

G. Kinsky: Musikhistorisches Museum von Wilhelm Heyer in Cöln (Cologne, 1910–16)

C. Sachs: Sammlung alter Musikinstrumente bei der Staatlichen Hochschule für Musik zu Berlin: Beschreibender Katalog (Berlin, 1913/R)

D. Fryklund: Studien über die Pochette (Sundsvall, 1917)

L. Greilsamer: 'La facture des instruments à archet', EMDC, II/iii (1927), 1708–52

F. Lesure: 'La facture instrumentale à Paris au seizième siècle', GSJ, vii (1954), 11–52; x (1957), 87–8

D.D. Boyden: 'Monteverdi's violini piccoli alla francese and viole da brazzo', AnnM, vi (1958–63), 387–402

L. Cervelli: Mostra di antichi strumenti musicali (Modena, 1963)

N. and F. Gallini: Museo degli strumenti musicali (Milan, 1963)

E. Halfpenny: 'An Eighteenth-Century Trade List of Musical Instruments', GSJ, xvii (1964), 99–102

S. Marcuse: Musical Instruments: a Comprehensive Dictionary (Garden City, NY, 1964/R)

D.D. Boyden: The History of Violin Playing from its Origins to 1761 (London, 1965/R)

A. Baines: European and American Musical Instruments (London, 1966/R)

A. Baines: Non-Keyboard Instruments, Victoria and Albert Museum: Catalogue of Musical Instruments, ii (London, 1968)

I. Otto: Das Musikinstrumenten-Museum Berlin (Berlin, 1968)

P. Frisoli: 'The Museo Stradivariano in Cremona', GSJ, xxiv (1971), 33–50

C. van Leeuwen Boomkamp and J.H. van der Meer: The Carel van Leeuwen Boomkamp Collection of Musical Instruments (Amsterdam, 1971)

S.F. Sacconi: I 'segreti' di Stradivari (Cremona, 1972; Eng. trans., 1979)

A. Pushman: 'A 16th-Century Pochette', The Strad, lxxxiv (1973–4), 646–7

M. Remnant: Musical Instruments of the West (London, 1978)

A. Buchner: Colour Encyclopedia of Musical Instruments (London, 1980)

W. Salmen: Der Tanzmeister (Hildesheim, 1997)

W. Salmen: '"Pochetten" – mehr als Tanzmeistergeigen', ÖMz, liv/4 (1999), 23–31

MARY REMNANT

Kithara. A large lyre with wooden soundboard (it is classified as a CHORDOPHONE). When the term was first used in ancient Greece, it mostly referred to the large flat-based lyre – that shown on Attic vase paintings of the period *c*625–400 BCE; this instrument is now usually known as the 'concert' kithara (Winnington-Ingram, 14; West, 50). The term has also been used more broadly in modern scholarly literature to designate a variety of large lyres, and has even been applied to large flat-based lyres outside Greece (see M. Duchesne-Guillemin: 'L'animal sur la cithare: nouvelle lumière sur l'origine sumérienne de la cithare grecque', Acta iranica, ix, 1984, pp.129–41). In addition to the concert kithara there are the 'Thamyras' and 'Italiote' kitharas (see below) and the 'cylinder' kithara (see LYRE, §2(ii)).

From the late 7th century BCE the concert kithara was the instrument associated in the visual arts with the god Apollo. The kithara is the Greek version of the various flat-based wooden box lyres known much earlier in Egypt and Asia Minor; Strabo noted that it was often called 'Asiatic', an adjective in fact applied to the kithara in the 5th century BCE. Its distinctive shape is discernible in a Cypriote-Geometric style vase, in the Nicosia Museum, dating from about 900 BCE from Kaloriziki (see LYRE, fig. 4*d*), and can be seen in Greek vase paintings as early as the late 8th century; but the word kithara, a later form of the Homeric word kitharis, is not found until the beginning of the 5th century and is used relatively infrequently until after about 425 BCE.

The term kitharis appears only a few times in the Iliad and Odyssey, and in most cases seems to mean lyre playing in general (as in the statement that kitharis and song are gifts of the gods); phorminx is the word commonly used when a specific instrument is picked up and played. In the Archaic period, when Apollo was gradually less often represented with the phorminx and more frequently with the kithara, the words kitharis and phorminx were both used in connection with his lyre playing; but well into the 5th century, writers continued to prefer to call Apollo's instrument the phorminx.

In the few 7th-century representations of the kithara most of the details of its construction and fittings are already clear: it is a large instrument with a soundbox that tapers slightly towards its flat base; it has a crossbar with knobs at the ends, and it usually has seven strings wound over leather strips (kollopes) on the crossbar. The tops of the arms rise wide and straight above the crossbar, while curving outwards below it, where their inner edges are sculpted in an intricate design. The player supports the instrument with a sling tied around his left wrist and around the outer arm of the instrument, its free ends hanging loose (in later paintings these long strands sometimes seem to be a separate sash). In his right hand he holds a plectrum attached with a cord to the base of the instrument. A 6th-century marble relief at Delphi provides evidence for the surprising depth of kithara soundboxes: in this side view the players' left arms lie over bulging soundboxes that grow shallower only towards the base. Of the kithara's accoutrements only one is not seen until the 6th century: the long, elaborately patterned and often fringed cloth that hangs down behind it and may be attached to one of the arms. Whether it served a protective purpose or was merely decorative is not known, but of the other lyres only the Thracian kithara (see below) has such a cloth.

While it is possible that a few vase paintings made before about 525 BCE represent mortal performers or legendary figures such as ORPHEUS and Amphion (see AMPHION (i)), most of them show APOLLO, who appears in processions, presides at the birth of Athena or walks beside the chariot of Athena or DIONYSUS. Between 525 and 500 BCE the kithara appears more than any other instrument, especially in paintings on amphoras and water jars in the older black-figure style. These paintings often depict Apollo accompanying chariot processions, particularly wedding processions. Another kithara player seen in black-figure paintings, HERACLES, is often portrayed as a contestant, although he wears his traditional lion-skin garb rather than the formal costume of the KITHARODE, and plays in the presence of Athena and sometimes other gods.

On vases in the new red-figure style, mortal kithara players, mostly contestants or players in sacrificial processions, are not uncommon, although mythological scenes are still far more frequent. In one commonly found scene, Apollo stands with his kithara at an altar and holds out a shallow drinking dish that his sister Artemis fills from a pitcher. He accompanies chariot processions celebrating weddings, or Heracles' introduction to Olympus, and is often portrayed among other gods.

There are almost no representations of a kithara-playing Apollo with women identified as Muses until about 425 BCE; when Apollo is accompanied by one or two pairs of unidentified women playing krotala (clappers), they may represent not Muses but maenads, female followers of Dionysus. The kithara seems to have had some connection to the cult of Dionysus, for there is a large number of paintings in both red- and black-figure style in which a satyr, sometimes accompanied by krotala-playing maenads, plays the kithara in the presence of Dionysus.

The kitharode or singer to the kithara, a highly trained or professional musician, always male, who wore a distinctive formal costume, stood while he played (see illustration; performers on the other lyres sometimes played seated). He held his instrument upright, using his left elbow to press it to his side. Since his left wrist was in the sling that helped support the instrument, the movement of his left hand was restricted; but it was used to pluck the strings between thumb and first finger or middle finger, or to dampen the strings or touch them lightly to produce harmonics. Both kinds of hand position are visible in 5th-century vase paintings, although it is not possible to tell which strings are being touched.

Kitharode: detail from an Attic Red-figure amphora attributed to the Brygos Painter, c480 BCE (Museum of Fine Arts, Boston)

The kitharist (kitharistēs; Lat. citharista, fidicen: 'player of the kithara') is typically shown posed with his right hand holding a plectrum near or just beyond the outer edge of the instrument, as though he has just completed an outward motion across the strings (probably not a gentle strum: the works of Aristophanes provide two onomatopoeic words imitating kithara sound, 'toplato-trat' and 'trettanelo', both with hard 't' sounds that suggest a more percussive striking).

Several references of the 4th century and later mention psilokitharistikē, 'bare' kithara playing, apparently an elaborate kind of solo playing (the only kind documented) invented in the 6th century; prizes for it were awarded at the Panathenaia. It seems to have had only a limited role.

Kitharists tuned their instruments, not by turning the knobs at the ends of the crossbar (which seem to be merely decorative), but by adjusting one of the kollopes around the crossbar with the thumb and first two fingers of the right hand. A pin possibly called the strobilon secured each string and its kollops, and no doubt helped to turn them. The player may have sat or, if standing, lifted his knee to support the instrument while he tuned.

Another form of the flat-based lyre, called by modern scholars the Thracian or Thamyras kithara, has some of the features of the standard kithara: knobs, the usual fittings and a patterned cloth hanging behind it (a Thracian zigzag-stripe pattern seems to have been favoured). But its arms remain narrow below the crossbar, often have small bumps or ridges all along both sides and do not share the highly sculpted design of the inner edges of the standard kithara (except in an instance where the two instruments have been conflated – an indication that this instrument was indeed thought of as a kithara). Its soundbox is broad and rounded in a convex curve at the top, where there is often an ornamental border, and the lower corners of the soundbox typically have quarter-circle indentations.

All known representations of the Thracian lyre were made by Athenian 5th-century vase painters, who clearly associated it with Thrace. In about a third of the paintings it is shown in the hands of Thamyras, the legendary musician who boasted that he could win a contest with the Muses (the subject of a play by Sophocles). In another third of the known scenes, a contestant stands on (or mounts) a podium, and there is nothing to indicate that it is Thamyras who is represented; but two other legendary Thracian musicians are depicted holding the instrument: ORPHEUS, on a vase in the National Museum in Athens; and MUSAEUS, on one in the Metropolitan Museum in New York.

In the course of the 4th century BCE kitharas of the standard shape were relegated to mythological scenes such as Apollo's contest with Marsyas; in other contexts the slimmer, less ornamented, longer-bodied Hellenistic kithara began to be seen. Near the middle of the century a completely rectangular kithara, with plain straight arms and a rectangular soundbox, began to appear in vase paintings from the Greek colony of Apulia. This Italiote kithara, seldom found in other parts of the Greek world, typically appears in Apulian wedding scenes. On a marble relief from Mantinea in the Athens museum, the only 4th-century representation from Greece proper, it is held by one of the Muses.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Huchzermeyer: Aulos und Kithara in der griechischen Musik bis zum Ausgang der klassischen Zeit (Emsdetten, 1931)
M. Wegner: Das Musikleben der Griechen (Berlin, 1949)
R.P. Winnington-Ingram: 'Ancient Greek Music 1932–1957', Lustrum, iii (1958), 6–57, 259–60
M. Wegner: Griechenland, Musikgeschichte in Bildern, ii/4 (Leipzig, 1963, 2/1970)
J.M. Snyder: 'Aulos and Kithara on the Greek Stage', Panathenaia: Studies in Athenian Life and Thought in the Classical Age, ed. T. Gregory and A. Podlecki (Lawrence, KS, 1979), 75–95
H.D. Roberts: 'The Technique of Playing Ancient Greek Instruments of the Lyre Type', British Museum Yearbook, iv (1980), 43–76
A. Barker: 'The Innovations of Lysander the Kitharist', Classical Quarterly, xxxii (1982), 266–9
M. Maas and J.M. Snyder: Stringed Instruments of Ancient Greece (New Haven, CT, 1989)
M. Maas: 'Polychordia and the Fourth-Century Greek Lyre', JM, x (1992), 74–88
M.L. West: Ancient Greek Music (Oxford, 1992)
W. Anderson: Music and Musicians in Ancient Greece (Ithaca, NY, 1994)
S. Sarti: 'Kítharis e kithára: origini di un antico stromento attraverso le fonti litterarie e figurative', NRMI, xxix (1995), 529–37

MARTHA MAAS

Kitharode (Gk. kitharoidos; Lat. citharoedus). In ancient Greece, a singer who accompanied himself on the KITHARA. The kitharode, a professional or at least highly trained musician, was associated with formal public religious occasions, among them the festivals that included musical as well as athletic competitions. In these competitions, as can be seen in Athenian 5th-century vase paintings, the performer might stand on a small podium while the judges, wearing wreaths and carrying staves, sat or stood nearby.

The performer usually wore an elaborate costume, a flowing gown with a coloured border, or a long robe with a mantle over it fastened at the shoulder (for illustration see KITHARA). Both the work and the performance might be judged, for the well-known kitharodes at least were the creators of the works they presented. An important part of their repertory consisted of nomoi (see NOMOS), solo songs in several sections created according to specific rules (the basic meaning of nomos is rule or law).

Although the term kitharoidos (which combines the earlier terms kitharistes, 'lyre player', and aoidos, 'singer') does not appear until the 5th century BCE, such singers to the lyre were known centuries earlier. Two of them, Phemius and Demodocus, are mentioned in the Odyssey; and the Iliad recounts how the legendary Thracian musician Thamyras offered to compete with the Muses, who punished his hubris by taking away his 'divine song' and making him forget how to play his instrument.

The first musical competition at the Spartan festival of the Carneia (said to have been won by the poet Terpander) may have been held as early as 670 BCE; in Athens kitharoedic events were part of the Great Panathenaia by the late 6th century. Timotheus, a popular late 5th-century musician whose nomos the Persians was performed long after his death, was punished by the authorities for breaking the rules governing kitharoedic contests, and for performing works considered inappropriate for young people.

Kitharodes continued to perform in musical contests in the 4th century BCE. Plato, who regarded it as a responsibility of his ideal state to regulate them, castigated the musician Kinesias for performing not what might edify but what would only give pleasure to his audience. Festivals including both athletic events and musical competitions (e.g. the Nemean Games) continued to be held in the Hellenistic era, although the customs surrounding them were affected by changes in social and political circumstances.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Abert: 'Kitharoidia', Paulys Real-Encyclopädie der classischen Altertumswissenschaft (Stuttgart, 1921), 530–34
J.D. Beazley: 'Citharoedus', Journal of Hellenic Studies, xlii (1922), 70–98
J.A. Kemp: 'Professional Musicians in Ancient Greece', Greece and Rome, xiii (1966), 213–22
M. Maas and J.M. Snyder: Stringed Instruments of Ancient Greece (New Haven, CT, 1989)
M. Maas: 'Timotheus at Sparta: the Nature of the Crime', Musical Humanism and its Legacy: Essays in Honor of Claude Palisca, ed. N.K. Baker and B.R. Hanning (Stuyvesant, NY, 1992), 37–52

MARTHA MAAS

Kitsenko, Dmitry (b Belaya Tserkov′, Kiev province, 24 July 1950). Moldovan composer. He attended the Kishinyov Institute of Arts where he studied composition with Lobel′. It was there that he began his teaching work in the department of music theory and composition (1977–82). He then served as senior consultant of the Union of Composers of Moldavian SSR (1982–90) before returning to teach at the Musicescu Academy in 1990. He then attended the Bucharest Music Academy as a postgraduate student and studied composition with Tiberiu Olakh. The range of genres in his work is broad. He is drawn towards serious subjects, intensity of content, the treatment of spiritual ideas and themes and a philosophical interpretation of them. This is evident from the titles of his compositions such as Litanies, Schimbarea la fata ('Transfiguration'), Plach Iyeremii ('The Lament of Jeremiah') and De profundis. The unhurried pacing, the concentration and the circumspect manner of the narrative, the propensity towards an epic manner of expression which is alternated with lyrical passages, and his tendency to anchor development and the form as a whole on a solid base make him an adherent of the neo-stylistic trends: his Organ Concerto manifests features of the neo-baroque, while the Second Symphony is decidedly neo-classical in style. Making only occasional use of contemporary techniques, he nonetheless occasionally turns to modality or minimalism, as in his Symphony in D and the Third Symphony. Furthermore, he pays careful attention to rhythm, and in this aspect he relies on principles established by Stravinsky.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Bayan Conc., 1977; Conc., ob, chbr orch, 1977; Divertimento, 1978; Sym. Poem, 1978; Conc., org, str orch, timp, 1982; Sym. in D, 1986; Plach Iyeremii [The Lament of Jeremiah], conc., va, str, 1989; De profundis, conc., trbn, chbr orch, 1990, arr. tpt, chbr orch, 1995; Conc. no.2, trbn, chbr orch, 1991; Conc., vc, chbr orch, 1992; Sym. no.2, chbr orch, 1992; Sym. no.3, 1995; Simfonia aşteptării (Sym. no.4), 1998

Cants.: Govoryat obeliski [The Obelisks Speak], (D. Kugul'tinov, Puppo), SATB, orch, 1976; The Seasons (P. Cărare), children's chorus, orch, 1980; Tainstvo bïtiya [The Sacrament of Being] (R. Tagore), S, T, SATB, 1983; Litanii, S, cl, org, 1987, arr. S, cl, chbr orch, 1987; Stabat Mater, Mez, chbr orch, 1989; Mariengebet, SA, 1999; Trinitatea lupului, C, chbr orch, arr. SA, 1995

Other vocal: Little Suite (Soviet poets), children's chorus, 1975; 2 Songs (I. Bunin), children's chorus, 1977, arr. SATB, 1981; V zooparke [At the Zoo] (suite, L. Nekrasova), children's chorus, 1978; O Beata (motet), SATB, 1990; Ave Maria, S, cl, org, 1993; Alleluja, S, tpt, 1999; many songs and romances

4 or more insts: Str Qt [no.1], 1975; Burlesque, str qt, 1978; 4 Folk Melodies, str qt, 1978; 2 Pieces, str qt, 1979; Epitaph to the Memory of Lobel', str qt, 1981; Str Qt [no.2], 1983; In memoriam Oscar, 13 solo str, 1988; Pastoral'nïye igrï [Pastoral Games], fl, ob, cl, bn, hn, 1988; Câmpina [The Field], brass qnt, 1991; Schimbarea la faţă [Transfiguration], chbr ens, 1991; Exodus, conc., chbr ens, 1994; 4 Pieces on Hungarian Themes, brass qnt, 1996; Kyrie, chbr ens, 1997; Conc. for 'Ars poetica' chbr ens, 1999; Exodus 2, chbr ens, 1999; Stikhira, 4 vc, 1999

1–3 insts: 8 Small Pieces, pf, 1973; Recitative, fl, 1974; Sonata, ob, 1974; Variations, pf, 1974; Suite, bayan, 1977; Prelude and Fugue in Memory of D. Shostakovich, org, 1979; Suite, org, 1980; 3 dialogues, fl, hpd, 1982; 6 Duets, vc, perc, 1984; Trio, ob, bn, pf, 1988; 4 Sonatas à la D. Scarlatti, tuba, pf, 1991; 2 Sonatas à la D. Scarlatti, trbn, pf, 1991; Romantische Reise nach Moldawien, tpt, 1995

Stage works, incid music

Principal publishers: Sovetskiy kompozitor, Literatura artistică

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Ceaicovschi-Meresanu, ed.: Compozitori si muzicologi din Moldova/Kompozitorï i muzïkovedï Moldovï (Chişinău, 1992), 41–4

IRINA SUKHOMLIN

Kitson, Charles Herbert (b Leyburn, Yorks., 13 Nov 1874; d London, 13 May 1944). English organist and music teacher. At first intending to enter the Church, he took his arts degrees at Cambridge where he was organ scholar of Selwyn College, but his music degrees at Oxford as an external student. His first important post was as organist of Christ Church Cathedral, Dublin (1913–20), and while there he became professor of music in University College, Dublin (1915). In 1920 he returned to England and joined the staff of the RCM, but the same year became also professor of music in Trinity College, Dublin, then a non-resident post, from which he retired in 1935. Though his earliest treatise, The Art of Counterpoint, and its Application as a Decorative Principle (Oxford, 1907, 2/1924), did indeed represent a pioneering approach, albeit gingerly and cautious, all his teaching, from the elements upwards, was directed to the style then generally required for English university degrees in music. The Evolution of Harmony (Oxford, 1914, 2/1924), not based on a historical process, is curiously misnamed, and his beginners' books are not inspiriting; his other writings include Elementary Harmony (Oxford, 1920–26, 2/1941).

WATKINS SHAW

Kitt, Eartha (b North, SC, 26 Jan 1928). American popular singer and actress. The daughter of a black American sharecropper, she lived from the age of eight in New York, in a culturally heterogeneous area of Harlem. There she developed her talents, studying dance at the High School for Performing Arts, singing in church, taking piano lessons and learning the languages of her neighbours. At the age of 16 she won a scholarship to study dance with Katherine Dunham, who selected her soon afterwards for a dance troupe to tour South America and Europe. On tour Kitt's singing abilities were discovered; she was taught ethnic songs for the productions and began to sing more frequently. In 1950 she left the company in Paris to pursue a career as a cabaret singer, and her dramatic song interpretations, multilingual repertory and exotic beauty won her instantaneous success with European night-club audiences. Her performance in Orson Welles's Time Runs (1950), a version of the Faust story, brought further praise and established her credibility as a serious actress. In 1952 her first American triumph at the Village Vanguard, New York, where she presented such sophisticated European songs as C'est si bon, led to her appearance in the Broadway revue New Faces of 1952 and its film version two years later.

Since the mid-1950s Kitt has appeared in night clubs, theatres, films and on television, and has made several recordings. She has appeared in the Broadway shows Shinbone Alley (1957) and Timbuktu (1978) and in London in Follies (1988). She is perhaps best known for her sophisticated and sensually enunciated delivery of popular songs. She is also a philanthropist and a supporter of social causes and has written three memoirs, Thursday's Child (New York, 1956), Alone with Me (Chicago, 1975) and I'm Still Here: a New Biography (London, 1989).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'Kitt, Eartha', CBY 1955
M.R. Pitts and L.H. Harrison: Hollywood on Record: the Film Stars' Discography (Metuchen, NJ, 1978)
J. Skowronski: Black Music in America: a Bibliography (Metuchen, NJ, 1981)

MICHAEL J. BUDDS

Kittel. German family of musicians.

(1) Caspar Kittel (b Lauenstein, 1603; d Dresden, 9 Oct 1639). Composer. First as a choirboy and then as a professional musician, Kittel served the Hofkapelle in Dresden from at least 23 September 1616 until his death. He was a pupil and close colleague of Heinrich Schütz. In 1624 his patron, Johann Georg I, Elector of Saxony, sent him to study in Italy, where Schütz eventually joined him. They returned to Dresden in August 1629, and later that year Kittel was put in charge of four choirboys. He taught Weckmann singing during the next few years and was also capable enough on the theorbo to teach it to his brother Jonas, also a musician at the Hofkapelle. In 1632 he became instrument inspector at the court, and in 1638 Schütz left the direction of music in the Hofkapelle in Kittel's hands when he went to Denmark.

With his Cantade und Arien (Dresden, 1638), his only known music, Kittel introduced the term 'cantada' into Germany. The collection contains 30 songs, all accompanied by continuo: five are for solo voice, ten for two voices, five for three and ten for four. The voices in each of the first three categories vary in type. All the solo arias and four duets are strophic variations, while the remaining pieces are simple strophic songs. Although he did not say so, Kittel obviously used the term 'cantada' to denote the strophic variations, just as Alessandro Grandi (i) and other Italian composers had done; he no doubt became acquainted with Italian strophic variations as cantadas when he was in Italy.

The first strophe in each case is essentially syllabic and homophonic, while the subsequent strophes are interrupted by frequent extended melismas. Two works are built on the Ruggiero bass and another on the romanesca. The bass line is altered from strophe to strophe, sometimes with considerable ornamentation, but the outline of the original bass is always clearly present. In the first solo cantata the metre changes from duple to triple for the last two strophes; in the others it is either duple or triple throughout. The seventh item has a ritornello between each strophe. In several cantatas each strophe is in binary form with the tonal scheme tonic–dominant–tonic. Bar form (AAB) and the form ABB occur only in those arias that are not cantatas. Generally in the songs for more than one voice short passages of imitation give way to predominant homophony.

Nearly all the poems are by Martin Opitz, a contemporary of Kittel and possibly, through Schütz, a personal friend. They deal with pastoral love, as do so many German and other western European songs of the time. Kittel was careful to observe the correct rhetorical rhythm of the text in his cantatas, no doubt under the influence of both contemporary Italian recitative and Opitz. In a few instances there is madrigalian word-painting.

Kittel stated in a foreword that he had written the music for his choirboys, who, he said, could learn how to sing powerfully and swiftly from the solos and duets; he promised to write a manual on how to sing in the Italian manner but did not live to do so.

(2) Christoph Kittel (fl Dresden, 1641–80). Organist. Like David and Christian Kittel, also musicians at the Dresden Hofkapelle, he was probably a son of (1) Caspar Kittel. He rose to become the Hofkapelle's principal organist in 1660. In the 1640s he had been one of its leaders in the absence of Schütz, who included in his Zwölff geistliche Gesänge (Dresden, 1657) a song by him, 'O süsser Jesu Christ', for solo voice and instruments.

(3) Johann Heinrich Kittel (b Dresden, 13 Oct 1652; d Dresden, 17 July 1682). Organist and composer, son of (2) Christoph Kittel. He succeeded Adam Krieger as second organist in the Dresden Hofkapelle in 1666 and his father as first organist by 1680. As director of the choirboys he had as pupil in 1669 Johann Kuhnau, who left after a year, however, because 'the instruction was severe'. His set of 12 keyboard preludes in successive keys, Tabulatura Num: 12 Praeambulorum und einem Capriccio von eben 12 Variationen (RO-BRm Mus.808; selections ed. D. Benko and Z. Pertis, Budapest, 1977), written by 1682, is one of the earliest predecessors of Bach's Das wohltemperirte Clavier.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Vetter: Das frühdeutsche Lied (Münster, 1928)
H.J. Moser: Corydon, das ist Geschichte des mehrstimmigen Generalbassliedes und des Quodlibets im deutschen Barock (Brunswick, 1933, 2/1960)
G. Ilgner: 'Einige klärende Nachrichten über das Leben der Musikerfamilie Kittel am Dresdener Hofe zur Schütz-Zeit', Musik und Kirche, x (1938), 170–71
J.H. Baron: 'A 17th-Century Keyboard Tablature in Brasov', JAMS, xx (1967), 279–85; also R. Jackson: communication, JAMS, xxiv (1971), 318
J.H. Baron, ed.: The Brasov Tabulature (Brasov Music Manuscript 808): German Keyboard Studies 1680–1684 (Madison, WI, 1982)

JOHN H. BARON

Kittel, Johann Christian (b Erfurt, 18 Feb 1732; d Erfurt, 17 April 1809). German organist, composer and teacher. He studied with Jakob Adlung, organist in Erfurt, and from 1748 to 1750 was a favourite pupil of the aged J.S. Bach in Leipzig. After serving from 1751 as an organist and teacher in Langensalza he was appointed organist of Erfurt's Barfüsserkirche (1756); in 1762 he transferred to the Predigerkirche there. Despite a low salary and more favourable offers from elsewhere, he remained in Erfurt for the rest of his life, seldom undertaking concert tours and even refusing an invitation in 1790 from Duchess Anna Amalia of Saxe-Weimar to travel to Italy. His fame as a virtuoso organist brought Goethe, Herder and Wieland to his evening recitals, and drew many pupils to him, of whom the most important were M.G. Fischer (his successor at the Predigerkirche), K.G. Umbreit, his nephew J.W. Hässler and J.C.H. Rinck. In 1800 he made a concert tour to Hamburg, where he remained a year while preparing his new book of chorales for Schleswig-Holstein (Vierstimmige Choräle mit Vorspielen, 1803).

Kittel's guiding doctrine, as expressed in his influential textbook Der angehende praktische Organist (1801–8), was 'grounded in the principles of Bach' and had as its aim 'to awaken, maintain and heighten feelings of devotion in the hearts of his hearers by means of music'. In keeping with his emphasis on simple forms suited to liturgical practice, his teaching centred on chorale accompaniment, which he required to be simple with inner parts capable of being sung, and on the chorale prelude, which he thought should suitably introduce the spirit and feeling of the chorale but need not adhere precisely to its melody. Although short, 'characteristic' pieces determined most of his oeuvre, he also wrote large-scale organ works, including double chorale variations which look back to the style of Bach. In the main, however, his works depart from Bach's tradition, despite their contrapuntal forms, and give sympathetic expression to contemporary idioms. The 16 Grosse Präludien juxtapose Bach-like counterpoint with galant passages in contemporary symphonic style, the whole being sustained by an emphasis on melody. In his piano sonatas (1789), his art of 'characterizing' led to a full working-out of contrasting ideas; thus, his own theoretical requirements approached the Viennese Classical style. Further character pieces for organ include his six variations on Nicht so traurig (1797) and, as implicit in their structure, the Vier und zwanzig Choräle mit acht verschiedenen Bässen über eine Melodie (1811). These works dispense with the chorale as cantus firmus and freely incorporate it into settings in the empfindsamer Stil. Such character pieces became decisively influential in German organ music, and in the 19th century the genre was carried even further by Kittel's own pupils.

WORKS

all for org, unless otherwise stated; MSS listed in Dreetz, 1932

6 Sonaten ... nebst einer Fantasie, pf (Gera, 1789); 6 Veränderungen, über ... Nicht so traurig, pf (St Petersburg, 1797); Der angehende praktische Organist, oder Anweisung zum zweckmässigen Gebrauch der Orgel bei Gottesverehrungen in Beispielen, 3 vols. (Erfurt, 1801–8; ii, 2/1808; 3/1831/R); Vierstimmige Choräle mit Vorspielen ... für die Schleswig-Hollsteinischen Kirchen, 2 vols. (Altona, 1803); 24 Choräle mit 8 verschiedenen Bässen über eine Melodie, ed. J.C.H. Rinck (Offenbach, 1811); Grosse Präludien, 2 vols. (Leipzig, n.d.); 24 kurze Choralvorspiele (Offenbach, n.d.); Variationen über 2 Choräle (Leipzig, n.d.); 24 leichte Choral-Vorspiele (Bonn and Cologne, n.d.)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FrotscherG

A. Dreetz: Johann Christian Kittel, der letzte Bach-schüler (Berlin, 1932)

K.G. Fellerer: Beiträge zur Choralbegleitung und Choralverarbeitung in der Orgelmusik des ausgehenden 18. und beginnenden 19. Jahrhunderts (Strasbourg, 1932, 2/1980)

K.G. Fellerer: Studien zur Orgelmusik des ausgehenden 18. und frühen 19. Jahrhunderts (Kassel, 1932/R)

H. Kelletat: Zur Geschichte der deutschen Orgelmusik in der Frühklassik (Kassel, 1933)

R. Sietz: 'Die Orgelkompositionen des Schülerkreises um Johann Sebastian Bach', BJb 1935, 33–96

M. Schneider: Die Orgelspieltechnik des frühen 19. Jahrhunderts in Deutschland dargestellt an den Orgelschulen der Zeit (Regensburg, 1941/R)

G. Fock: 'Zur Biographie des Bachschülers Johann Christian Kittel', BJb 1962, 97–104

J.P. Anthony: The Organ Works of Johann Christian Kittel (diss., Yale U., 1978)

E. Kooiman: 'La technique de pédale: Kittel, Tuerk, Petri et Bach', Bulletin de l'Association François-Henri Cliquot de Poitiers, xiii (1986), 22–33

J. Burg: 'Johann Christian Kittel (1732–1809), un grand pédagogue de l'orgue, maillon important dans la tradition de Jean-Sébastien Bach', L'orgue: cahiers et mémoires, no.228 (1993), 1–12

A. Stocker: 'Orgelmusik zwischen Bach und Mendelssohn II', Singende Kirche, xli (1994), 67–71

KARL GUSTAV FELLERER

Kittl, Jan Bedřich [Johann Friedrich] (b Orlík nad Vltavou, 8 May 1806; d Lissa, Prussia [now Leszno, Poland], 20 July 1868). Czech composer. He studied law at Prague University, the piano with Tomášek's pupil Zavora and composition with Tomášek. He was employed at first by the Czech financial procurators in Prague, but in 1836, after a concert of his compositions (including a nonet, a septet and his very popular song Wär' ich ein Stern), he devoted himself to music. He achieved European success with his second symphony (Jagdsymphonie), which Spohr conducted in Kassel in 1839 and Mendelssohn in Leipzig in 1840. In 1843 he succeeded D.B. Weber as director of the Prague Conservatory, which he ran on progressive lines in the spirit of the new Romantic schools; its orchestral concerts, which he conducted, included many novelties. He became friendly with Liszt and Berlioz during their visits to Prague, while Wagner wrote the libretto for his opera Bianca und Giuseppe (from which a march was adopted by Czech students during the 1848 Revolution). Soon after the successful première of his fourth symphony (1858), written to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Prague Conservatory, his health and energy declined; this, together with financial embarrassments, forced him to resign from the conservatory at the end of 1865. His last years were spent in exile.

Kittl was one of the first Czech Romantics. Though his education was German and he moved in German circles, he wrote several songs and choruses in Czech, beginning in 1835 with the eight songs for Škroup's collection Věnec ze zpěvů vlastenských ('A Garland of Patriotic Songs'). He was a member of the board which recommended the use of Czech in the Prague Conservatory in 1845. His impact on Prague's musical life was decisive: through his contacts with leading German musicians as well as his tactful handling of those around him, he was able to introduce the music of Berlioz and Wagner to a city which still found Beethoven modern. By releasing conservatory students to play in the theatre, he facilitated the Prague premières of works such as Tannhäuser (1854) and Lohengrin (1856). Among his pupils was Vilém Blodek; Smetana too benefited from the invigorating musical atmosphere which he cultivated. His compositions, always technically polished, sometimes incline to shallowness, particularly in the salon-orientated piano music and songs, but his choruses contributed to the growth of Czech choral singing in the 1860s, and his opera Bianca und Giuseppe was one of the most successful operas written in Bohemia before Smetana. Kittl is arguably the most substantial Czech symphonist before Dvořák. His best-known – although not his most accomplished – work in the genre, the Jagdsymphonie, owes its title to the hunting music for four horns which, after a trumpet call, open the work, and from the movements' subtitles, which are all connected with hunting. Though the influence of Mendelssohn is unmistakable, there is a distinctively Czech flavour in the second trio, and a premonition of Smetana in the march-like finale.

WORKS

(selective list)

OPERAS

Daphnis' Grab (idyllische Oper, 1, H. Poeschl), *c*1825, lost

Bianca und Giuseppe, oder die Franzosen vor Nizza (4, R. Wagner, after H. König: Die hohe Braut), op.31, Prague, Estates, 19 Feb 1848, CZ-Pk, vs (Leipzig, *c*1848)

Die Waldblume (lyrische komische Oper, 3, J.K. Hickel), Prague, Estates, 20 Feb 1852, Pk

Die Bilderstürmer (grosse tragische Oper, 3, J.E. Hartmann), Prague, Estates, 20 April 1854, Pk

CHORAL

2 masses, S, A, T, B, SATB, orch: F, *c*1840, Pk; C, 1844, Prague, 31 Oct 1844, Pk

Jubel-Cantate (J. Bayer), male vv, wind, op.34, Prague, 3 June 1854 (Prague, 1854)

Cz., male vv unacc.: *c*10 works, incl. Pro krále a pro vlast [For King and Country] (V. Filípek), 1844, Pnm; Společenská [A Social Chorus], 1846; Tři sbory na slova Gustava Pflegra [3 Choruses to Words by G. Pfleger] (Prague, 1863); Tři sbory vlastenecké [3 Patriotic Choruses] (A. Körschnerová, J. Vorlický, A.V. Šembera), op.60 (Prague, 1862)

Ger., male vv unacc.: Bergmannsleben, Schifferlied, Turnerlied; all in E. Tauwitz, Deutsches Liederbuch (Leipzig, 1865)

SONGS

for 1 voice and piano unless otherwise stated

Ger.: *c*50, incl. Wär' ich ein Stern (J.P. Richter [Jean Paul]) (Prague, *c*1836); [6] Wilde Rosen an Hertha (M.G. Saphir), op.3 (Vienna, 1838); Trost (Kittl, T. Körner and others), 6 Lieder, op.21 (Prague, *c*1842); 6 Lieder (J.W. von Goethe and others), 2vv, pf, op.35 (Prague, n.d.); 7 Gesänge, op.56 (Leipzig, *c*1860)

Cz.: 8 songs for F.J. Škroup's Věnec ze zpěvů vlastenských [A Garland of Patriotic Songs] (J.K. Chmelenský and others) (Prague, 1835–9); Jen si nezoufej! [Just don't Despair!] (V.J. Picek) (Prague, 1862)

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: 4 syms.: no.1, d, op.19, 1836 (Leipzig, n.d.), no.2 (Jagdsymphonie), E♭, op.9, 1837 (Leipzig, *c*1838), no.3, D, 1841–2, op.24 (Mainz, n.d.), no.4, C, 1857, Prague, 7 July 1858, Pk; 3 concert ovs.: D, op.22, 1841 (Leipzig, n.d.), no.2, E, Pk, no.3, lost; 4 marches: 2 as op.32 (Berlin, n.d.), 2 as op.33, arr. pf (Prague, 1859)

Chbr: Grand septuor, E♭, pf, fl, cl, hn, bn, db, op.25, *c*1832 (Leipzig, 1846); Nonet, perf. 1836, lost; Trio, pf, vn, vc, op.28 (Leipzig, *c*1842); 2 trios, 3 fl, opp.11, 12, Pk

Pf: Grande sonate, f, 4 hands, op.27 (Leipzig, 1847); 12 Idyllen; 3 scherzi; 2 Romanze; 24 impromptus; Berceuse; 12 Aquarelles, op.42 (Leipzig, n.d.), op.44 (Leipzig, n.d.), op.45 (Prague, 1858); Nocturne; Stammbuch-Blätter, op.58 (Prague, 1862); other single works, without op. no.

THEORETICAL WORKS

Praktische Orgelschule für Präparandum (Vienna, 1861, 2/1883)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Rychnovsky: Johann Friedrich Kittl (Prague, 1904)

A. Šilhan: 'Louis Spohr a jeho styky s Prahou' [Spohr and his relationship with Prague], HR, ii (1909), 453–63 [correspondence with Spohr]

J. Branberger: Konservatoř hudby v Praze [The Prague Conservatory of Music] (Prague, 1911; Ger. trans., 1911) [Ger. edn. incl. 50th anniversary Denkschrift (Prague, 1858) by A.W. Ambros]

M. Tarantová: Jan F. Kittl (Prague, 1948)

J. Burghauser: Introduction to J.B. Kittl: Symfonie Es Dur (Prague, 1960) [incl. substantial list of works and earlier bibliography]

KARL STAPLETON, JOHN TYRRELL

Kivy, Peter (b New York, 22 Oct 1934). American philosopher. He received MA degrees in both philosophy (University of Michigan 1958) and musicology (Yale University, 1960), then combined these interests for a PhD in the philosophy of music (Columbia University, 1966). Appointed to the faculty of Rutgers University in 1967, he was made professor of philosophy in 1976 and remained at Rutgers throughout his academic career, with the exception of one year (1996) as visiting professor of music at the University of California, Santa Barbara. He has contributed to a wide variety of debates in analytical music aesthetics and has been a central figure in American music aesthetics since the publication of The Corded Shell (1980). One important concern for him has been to propose a solution to the problem of what it is for instrumental music to be 'expressive of' an emotional state. His account relies on the observation that common emotions have characteristic patterns of behavioural expression, which can be understood from appearances alone. Just as a drooping face may be taken as 'expressive of' sadness, even without knowledge of a person's circumstances or subjective state, a falling melodic fragment may be heard as 'expressive of' that state, without imagining that the music itself is 'expressing' anything in an anthropomorphic sense. Kivy denies that music may be expressive of any states which lack an obvious form of behavioural expression. He characterizes a listener's attitude to expressive content as one of detached contemplation, rather than one of being moved to a similar affect. A modified form of his position has been taken up by Stephen Davies, who disputes the last point by seeking to account for instances when a listener's state mirrors that of the music.

WRITINGS

'Child Mozart as an Aesthetic Symbol', Journal of the History of Ideas, xxviii (1967), 249–58

Speaking of Art (The Hague, 1973)

The Seventh Sense: a Study of Francis Hutcheson's Aesthetics and its Influence in Eighteenth-Century Britain (New York, 1976)

The Corded Shell: Reflections on Musical Expression (Princeton, NJ, 1980)

'Mozart and Monotheism: an Essay in Spurious Aesthetics', JM, ii (1983), 322–8

'Mattheson as Philosopher of Art', MQ, lxx (1984), 248–65

'Platonism in Music: a Kind of Defense', The Worlds of Art and the World, ed. J. Margolis (Amsterdam, 1984), 109–30

Sound and Semblance: Reflections on Musical Representation (Princeton, NJ, 1984)

'Platonism in Music: another Kind of Defence', American Philosophical Quarterly, xxiv (1987), 245–52

'Something I've always Wanted to Know about Hanslick', Journal of Aesthetics and Art Criticism, xlvi (1987–8), 413–17

'Live Performances and Dead Composers', Human Agency, ed. J. Dancy (Stanford, CT, 1988), 219–36

'On the Concept of the "Historically Authentic" Performance', Monist, lxxi/2 (1988), 278–90

Osmin's Rage: Philosophical Reflections on Opera, Drama and Text (Princeton, NJ, 1988)

Sound Sentiment: an Essay on the Musical Emotions (Philadelphia, 1989)

Music Alone: Philosophical Reflections on the Purely Musical Experience (Ithaca, NY, 1990)

'A New Music Criticism?', Monist, lxxiii/2 (1990), 247–68

'What was Hanslick Denying?', JM, viii (1990), 3–18

'Is Music an Art?', Journal of Philosophy, lxxxviii/10 (1991), 544–54

'Opera Talk: a Philosophical Phantasie', COJ, iii (1991), 63–77

'Auditor's Emotions: Contention, Concession and Compromise', Journal of Aesthetics and Art Criticism, li (1993–4), 1–12

The Fine Art of Repetition: Essays in the Philosophy of Music (Cambridge, 1993)

'How Music Moves', What is Music? An Introduction to the Philosophy of Music, ed. P. Alperson (University Park, PA, 1994), 147–63

'Speech, Song and the Transparency of Medium', Journal of Aesthetics and Art Criticism, lii (1994–5), 63–8

Authenticities: Philosophical Reflections on Musical Performance (Ithaca, NY, 1995)

Philosophies of Arts: a Study in Differences (Cambridge, 1997)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D.A. Putnam: 'Why Instrumental Music has no Shame (Why only Certain Emotions are Expressed by Instrumental Music)', British Journal of Aesthetics, xxvii/1 (1987), 55–61

S. Davies: 'Violins or Viols? A Reason to Fret', Journal of Aesthetics and Art Criticism, xlviii (1989–90), 147–51

D.A. White: 'Toward a Theory of Profundity in Music', Journal of Aesthetics and Art Criticism, l (1992–3), 23–34; see also N. McAdoo: 'Can Art ever Be just about Itself?, ibid., 131–7

D. Dempster: 'How Does Debussy's Sea Crash? How Can Jimi's Rocket Red Glare? Kivy's Account of Representation in Music', Journal of Aesthetics and Art Criticism, lii (1994–5), 415–28

S. Davies: Musical Meaning and Expression (Ithaca, NY, 1994)

NAOMI CUMMING

Kiyose, Yasuji (b Yokkaichi, Ōita prefecture, 13 Jan 1900; d Tokyo, 14 Sept 1981). Japanese composer. He studied composition privately with Kōsaku Yamada and Kōsuke Komatsu. In 1930 he took an active part in organizing the Shinkō Sakkyokuka Renmei, which later grew into the Japanese section of the ISCM. He is primarily a composer of vocal and chamber music in a style following the German Romantic tradition, though combined with French Impressionist features. Besides these he has drawn on traditional Japanese music, particularly its folksongs and pentatonic scales. This tendency was inherited and developed by his most celebrated pupil, Takemitsu. A collection of his autobiographical essays can be found in Kiyose Yasuji chosakushū: warera no michi ('The Works of Kiyose: Our Ways', Tokyo, 1983).

WORKS
(selective list)

Choral: Hebi-matsuri kōshin [March of the Snake Festival], 1954; Itaziki-yama no yoru [A Night at Mt Itaziki], 1957; Karasu hyakutai [100 Versions of Crows], 1957; Ryūkū min'yō-shū [Folksongs from Ryūkyū], 1960; Fuyu no motekoshi [Now that Winter is Over], 1961; Bokura wa umi ni yuku [We are Going on the Ocean, or Unknown Soldiers], S, T, chorus, orch, 1962; To Ho no shi ni yorite [For Tu Fu's Poem], 1962; Shinda shōjo [Dead Girl], 1964; Tōhoku min'yō-shū [Folksongs from Tōhoku], 1965; Yoso kara kita shōjo [A Foreign Girl], 1972; Takuboku kashū [Songs to Poems by Takuboku], female vv, 1973

Orch: Nihon sairei bukyoku [Japanese Festival Dances], 1940; Pf Conc., 1954; Nihon no sobyō [A Sketch of Japan], 1963

Chbr: 2 sonatas, vn, pf, 1941, 1948; Str Trio, 1949; Sonata, vn, pf, 1950; Str Qt, 1951; Qnt, ww, hp, 1957; 2 Movts, vn, pf, 1960; Octet, 8 Jap. insts, 1964; Qnt, Jap. insts, 1964; Shakuhachi Trio, 1964; Qt, Jap. insts, 1965; Rec Qt, 1969; Duo, rec, pf, 1970; Rec Trio, 1972

Songs: Kakyoku-shū [Vocal Album], nos. 1–2, 1922–66; Mannyō kakyoku-shū [Songs from Mannyō], S, chbr orch, 1942

Principal publishers: Kawai Gakufu, Ongaku-no-Tomo Sha, Zen-on Gakufu

MASAKATA KANAZAWA

Kjaswa. See CACHUA.

Kjellberg, Erik (Daniel) (b Göteborg, 10 March 1939). Swedish musicologist. He studied musicology at Uppsala University, gaining the BA (1965) and the doctorate with a dissertation on musicians of the Swedish royal court during the 17th century (1979). While he was studying he also worked at the university as an amanuensis (1963–5) and music history teacher (1966–82), and at the Swedish Archive of the History of Music (1967–9). From 1978 to 1984 he was an archivist at the Svenskt visarkiv (the Swedish Centre for Folk Song and Folk Music Research) and from 1980 to 1988 he taught jazz at the Royal College of Music in Stockholm. He was appointed senior lecturer in musicology at Uppsala University in 1983, later becoming professor in 1985. His research has focussed mainly on the history of music in Sweden, and in particular music of the Swedish royal court. He has also written extensively on Swedish and Nordic jazz. He was secretary of the Swedish Musicological Society (1969–78) and editor of the journal Svensk tidskrift för musikforskning (1981–90), and was elected a member of the Swedish Royal Academy of Music in 1987 and a member of the board of the academy in 1992.

WRITINGS

Instrumentalmusiken i Dübensamlingen: en översikt (Uppsala, 1968)

Kungliga musiker i Sverige under stormaktstiden: studier kring deras organisation, verksamheter och status ca 1620–ca 1720 (diss., U. of Uppsala; Uppsala, 1979)

ed.: Nordisk jazzforskning: Stockholm 1980

'"Vart går jazzen? framåt eller bakåt?": tendenser i svenskt jazzliv ca 1945–ca 1960', STMf, lxii (1980), 99–122; also pubd separately (Stockholm, 1982)

'Musik och musikutövning vid Gustav II Adolfs och Maria Eleonoras hov', Gustav II Adolf och Uppsala universitet, ed. S. Lundström (Uppsala, 1982), 163–74

'Svenskt visarkiv, jazzen och musikvetenskapen', STMf, lxiv (1982), 61–7

'Musiklivet i stormaktstidens Västergötland', Vi äro musikanter alltifrån Skaraborg, ed. J. Ling (Skara, 1983), 97–128

'Jazzmusik och musikanalys: traditioner, metoder, perspektiv', Jazz: historie, samtid, metoder Copenhagen 1984, 69–82

'Who Played Music on Board the Royal Swedish Flagship Kronan?', ICTM Study Group on Music Archaeology: Conference II: Stockholm 1984, 105–21

ed., with A. Lönn: Analytica: Studies in the Description and Analysis of Music in Honour of Ingmar Bengtsson (Uppsala, 1985) [incl. 'Rena Rama and Lisa's Piano: an Essay in Jazz Analysis', 323–36]

'The Royal Swedish Court and Music During the Schütz-Era', Heinrich Schütz und die Musik in Dänemark: Copenhagen 1985, 25–31

Svensk jazzhistoria: en översikt (Stockholm, 1985)

Dygd och ära: adeln och musiken i stormaktstidens Sverige (Stockholm, 1987) with J. Ling: Klingande Sverige: musikens vägar genom historien (Göteborg, 1991)

'Pieces of Music in Times of War and Peace: Sweden in 17th Century Germany', Weckmann Symposium: Göteborg 1991, 211–60

'Grieg and Sweden', SMN, xix (1993), 87–96

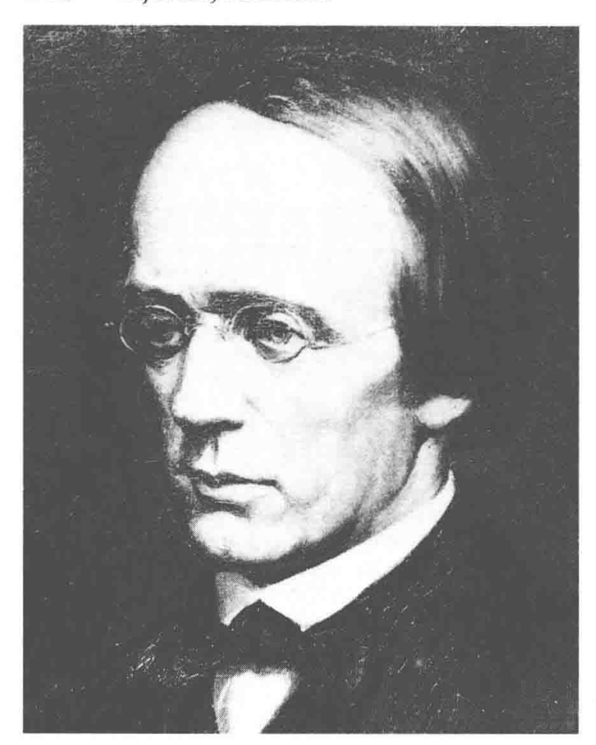
'Frankreich in Schweden: ein Beitrag zur Geschichte der musikalischen Migration im 17. Jahrhundert', Europa in Scandinavia, ed. R. Bohn (Frankfurt, 1994), 173–89

'Hovkapellmästare Gustav Düben och hans musikaliska värld i 1600-talets Sverige', Från stormakt till smånation, ed. S. Dahlgren, T. Jansson and H. Norman (Stockholm, 1995), 239–54



'Lärdomen och praktiken: den långa vägen till och från musiken i Stormaktstidens Sverige', 1600-talets ansikte, ed. S.Å. Nilsson and M. Ramsay (Nyhamnsläge, 1997), 407–23

VESLEMÖY HEINTZ

Kjerulf, Halfdan (b Christiania [now Oslo], 17 Sept 1815; d Christiania, 11 Aug 1868). Norwegian composer and piano teacher. He studied the piano and possibly also music theory as a child, but there were no possibilities for advanced music education in Christiania at that time, nor was it his family's intention that he should become a musician. He began studying law, although his chief interest continued to be music. In 1839 he suffered a serious illness and in the summer of 1840 for health reasons went to Paris, where for the first time he experienced a rich musical life, with concert and operatic performances of Classical and early Romantic works. There, probably also for the first time, he heard performances of real artistic quality; however, as he was still an immature artist, this had no immediate effect on his composing.

Within six months of Kjerulf's return to Christiania in the autumn of 1840, his father, brother and sister died, and as the eldest surviving child he had to give up his legal studies and take up work as a journalist in order to support the family. In the autumn of 1841 his first compositions, six songs op.1, were published; later he considered these works amateurish and lacking finish, and he revised and re-published three of them. While continuing to support himself as a journalist, he studied music theory on his own, became conductor in 1845 of a newly founded male students' choral society, the Norske Studentersangforening, and of a male voice quartet (Kjerulf's Quartet), and began teaching the piano. Kjerulf was first given formal training in composition in Christiania (1848–9) by Carl Arnold, whose recommendation helped him win a stipend to study abroad, first with Gade in Copenhagen (1849–50) and later (1850–51) in Leipzig, where his teachers included E.F. Richter. Returning home in 1851, he settled down as a piano teacher, his principal occupation for the rest of his life; among his several outstanding pupils were Agathe Grøndahl and Erika Nissen. His later years were marked by increasing ill-health, but he enjoyed considerable recognition as a composer; in 1863 he received a medal from King Carl XV, and in 1865 he became a member of the Swedish Royal Academy of Music.

Most of Kjerulf's works were composed after his studies in Copenhagen and Leipzig. He wrote no symphonic music, but restricted his output to smaller forms, of which his songs (about 130) are the most important, both for their intrinsic merit and for their place in the development of Norwegian music. In them influence of lieder by Schubert and Schumann is evident, as is that of folk music, which Kjerulf knew well from published collections and from his travels in Norway. His settings include Norwegian, Swedish, Danish, German and French texts, and the poets include his younger brother Theodor as well as King Carl XV. Inevitably the folk influence is strongest in the Norwegian songs, especially in those set to poems by the nationalist writer Bjørnsterne Bjørnson. The flavour of folk melody is obvious in Synnøves sang ('Synnøve's Song') op.6 no.3 and Aftenstemning ('Evening Mood') op.14 no.1, and Ingrids vise ('Ingrid's Song') op.6 no.4 is rhythmically and melodically modelled after the springdans, a characteristic Norwegian folkdance. The first phrase of Ingrid's Song (ex.1) shows the springdans rhythm with its accent on the second beat of the bar; the use of the open 5th pedal point is also a characteristic borrowed from folk music. In such other songs as Lokkende toner ('Enticing Sounds') op.3 no.6 and Hvile i skoven ('Rest in the Woods') op.5 no.3, both to texts by J.S. Welhaven, the specific features of folk music are less prominent, but the basic Norwegian atmosphere is still perceptible.

Halfdan Kjerulf: portrait by Knud Bergslien (Kunstforening, Oslo)

Kjerulf's songs are usually composed in simple or varied strophic form. In only a few examples, such as Du kommer ('You are Coming') op.17 no.3, does the extent of strophic variation approach Durchkomponierung and nearly all the songs that have a folk musical colouring are simple in structure, a natural consequence of their close relation to the ubiquitous strophic style of Norwegian folksong. Kjerulf generally allowed the voice a certain predominance over the piano part, which is nevertheless carefully worked out and often has an independent prelude, interlude and postlude. The accompaniment normally depicts the general atmosphere of the text by simple means, but in the more elaborate songs it may also reflect the poem's changing moods. In his finest songs Kjerulf achieved an artistic fusion of text and music equal to the masterworks of European Romanticism.

Kjerulf's compositions for male chorus were the direct result of his conducting activities and the first products of his artistic maturity; two of the best-known, Solvirkning ('Sun's Effect') and Brudefaerden i Hardanger ('The Bridal Procession in Hardanger'), were written before 1849. In addition to about 40 original compositions, he made about 60 arrangements of his own compositions, folk-songs and other songs, which occupy an important place in the Norwegian choral repertory.

A third important group of Kjerulf's compositions, his piano works, consists largely of Romantic character pieces, such as the Wiegenlied from op.4 and the Berceuse and Caprice from New Sketches op.12. They are carefully worked out and expressive compositions, but are less interesting than the two volumes of folk arrangements, especially the 25 udvalgte norske folkedandse (1861), some of which point towards Grieg's slåtter arrangements in his op.72. Such pieces as Hildalshalling and Bruresslått from the 1861 collection transform folkdances into a convincing artistic form, and show both effective writing for the piano and a bold treatment of harmony. The strong discord at the beginning of the last bar of the passage from Bruresslått (ex.2) is probably unique in Norwegian music of that period, consisting of a French 6th chord over an A pedal point. Another striking use of dissonance showing the influence of folk music occurs at the beginning of Bondedans ('Farmer's Dance'), which originally belonged to op.4, but was not printed in that volume probably because the style seemed too bold to the publisher (ex.3). The dissonance in the opening chord results from a tonic pedal point played with two notes of the dominant triad. In the same example, the melodic construction of two-bar motifs is another element taken from folk music.

Ex.3

Kjerulf also composed 20 songs and arrangements for mixed chorus, 11 vocal duets and some songs for vocal ensembles (trios and quartets). His works for larger forces include music for comic opera, Søkadetterne iland ('Midshipmen in Port'), and a polonaise for a carnival of 1863 (both orchestrated by the conductor Paolo Sperati).

As already demonstrated, some of Kjerulf's compositions are clearly founded on a Norwegian folk style. In other works the currents of German Romanticism and Norwegian folk music are more nearly fused, and Kjerulf created a stylistic synthesis of the two, but this dualism, controlled by a cultured and self-critical musical intellect, permeates his entire output and is its most prominent characteristic. He virtually created the Norwegian art song with his outstanding single achievement, the transplanting of the German lied to Norwegian soil, and laid the groundwork for Grieg and his successors.

WORKS

Editions: Samlede verker, ed. N. Grinde (Oslo, 1977–97)
H. Kjerulf Album, ed. Kjerulf's Quartet (Christiania, 1868) [KA]
Samling af flerstemmige mandssange, ed. J.D. Behrens (Christiania, 1845–69) [SF]
Sangbog for mandssangforeninger, ed. J.D. Behrens (Christiania, 1870–75) [SM]
Firstemmig mands-sangbog, ed. J.D. Behrens (Christiania, 1876–81) [FM]
H. Kjerulf: Sånger och visor (Stockholm, 1877–84) [KS]
(selective list)

printed works published in Stockholm unless otherwise stated

MALE CHORUSES

Barcarole (J.L. Heiberg); Brudefaerden i Hardanger [The Bridal Procession in Hardanger] (A. Munch); Aftensang [Evening Song] (Munch), Den blide dag [The Mild Day] (J.S. Welhaven); Norges fjelde [Norway's Mountains] (H. Wergeland); Gildesang [Banquet Song] (C. Frimann); Studenter-sommervise [Students' Summer Song] (P.A. Jensen); Tonernes flugt [The Tone's Flight] (H. Hertz); Serenade ved strandbredden [Serenade at the shore] (C. Winther); Frejdigt liv [Peaceful life] (anon.)

Serenade (Hugo), Norges natur (Wergeland); Jaegersang [Hunter's Song] (Welhaven); Morgenvandring [Morning Wandering] (E. Geibel); I skoven [In the Woods] (Geibel); Solvirkning [Sun's Effect] (Welhaven); Unge piger og gammel vin [Young Girls and Old Wine] (Geibel); Sangerhilsen til damerne [Song-Greeting to the Ladies] (Welhaven); Natten [The Night] (Carl XV); Aus dem Schenkenbuch II (Geibel); Kan det trøste [Can it Console] (Winther); Kavalierernes sang af Woodstock [The Cavalier's Song from Woodstock] (W. Scott)

Jubilate (T. Moore); Livets seilads [The Voyage of Life] (A. Stub); Jaegeres sang paa fjeldet [Hunter's Song on the Mountain] (Welhaven); Sanger-hilsen til bruden [Song-Greeting to the Bride] (T. Kjerulf); Serenade (T. Kjerulf); I granskoven [In the Spruce Forest] (J. Monrad); Til Bergen [To Bergen] (Bjørnson); Ton, søde strenge [Sound, Sweet String] (A. Oehlenschläger); Haev dig, vor sang [Let our Song Arise] (Welhaven)

Arrs.: Bonden i Brydlupsgaren [The Peasant at the Wedding] (Nor. folksong); Heimreise fraa saeteren [Journey Home from the Summer Farm] (Nor. folksong); Pilgrimssang (anon. 12th century); Ho Guro (Nor. folksong); Druens pris [In Praise of Wine] (E. Falsen) [melody by F.L.A. Kuntzen]; Astri, mi Astri (Nor. folksong); Døl'n [Mountaineer] (Nor. folksong), KA; Paal paa Haugen [Pål on the Hill] (Nor. folksong); E mindes vael den gøng [I Remember] (Nor. folksong); Du rossignol qui chante (Fr. folksong); Quand la bergère (Fr. folksong)

Les compagnons de la Marjolaine (Fr. folksong); La pêche des moules (Fr. folksong); Le célèbre menuet d'Exaudet (Fr. folksong); Santa Lucia (It. folksong); La gondoletta (It. folksong); [9] Fredmans epistlar (nos.16, 20, 31, 48, 52, 58, 60, 64, 75) (C.M. Bellman); [3] Fredmans sånger (nos.9, 28, 41) (Bellman)

SONGS

op.
1	Sex sange (Christiania, 1841): Nøkken [The Water Elf] (J.S. Welhaven), Romance Agnete og Havmanden (H.C. Andersen), Min skat [My Treasure] (C. Winther), Laengsel [Longing] (Winther), Lied (A. von Platen), Violen [The Violet] (A. Oehlenschläger, after J.W. von Goethe)
2	Romancer (Christiania, 1851–2): Buesnoren [The Bowstring] (Welhaven), Af Alfernes hvisken [From the Elves' Whisper] (Welhaven), Elveløbet [The Torrent] (Welhaven), Paa fjeldet [In the Mountains] (Welhaven), En vaarnat [A Spring Evening] (Welhaven), Syng, syng (T. Kjerulf), Romance af Aly og Gulhundy (Oehlenschläger), Og vil du vaere vennen min [And will you be my Friend] (T. Kjerulf)
3	Sex sånger (1856): Min elskte, jeg er bunden [My Beloved, I am not Free] (Welhaven), Laengsel [Longing] (Winther), Du fragst mich du (E. Geibel), Det var då [It was Then] (J.L. Runeberg), Vidste du vei [If you Knew the Way] (T. Kjerulf), Lokkende toner [Enticing Sounds] (Welhaven)
5	Otte sånger (1858): Chanson (V. Hugo), Så ensam uti natten [So Lonesome in the Night] (Carl XV), Hvile i skoven [Rest in the Woods] (Welhaven), I søde blege kinder [You Sweet Pale Cheeks] (T. Kjerulf), Spansk romans ur Spanisches Liederbuch (trans. P. Heyse and Geibel), Framnäs (Carl XV), Liebespredigt (F. Rückert), I skoven [In the Woods] (Winther)
6	Otte norske viser (1859): Vejviseren synger [The Guide-post Sings] (Welhaven), Ved sjøen den mørke [By the Dark Lake] (H. Wergeland), Synnøves sang (B. Bjørnson), Ingrids vise (Bjørnson), Solskins-vise [Sunshine Song] (Bjørnson), Venevil (Bjørnson), Over de høje fjelde [Over the High Mountains] (Bjørnson), Hjemad [Homeward] (J. Moe)
9	Sex franska romanser (1861): Quand tu dors (Hugo), Romance, from Ruy Blas (Hugo), Les rayons et les ombres (Hugo), Le retour (Hugo), Chanson (Hugo), L'attente (Richer)
11	Syv sange (1863): Naar kommer rosentiden? [When will the Time of Roses Come?] (T. Kjerulf), Bøn for den elskede [Prayer for the Beloved] (T. Kjerulf), Foraarsdigt [Spring Poem] (Welhaven), Aftenstemning [Evening Mood] (Welhaven), Den långa dagen [The Long Day]

(Runeberg), Gud vet det, hvar han vankar [God knows Where he Walks] (D. Klockhoff), Albumsblatt (Hoffmann von Fallersleben)

14 Fem sange (Bjørnson) (1865): Aftenstemning [Evening Mood], Søvnen [Sleep], Dulgt kjaerlighed [Hidden Love], Ved søen [By the Lake], O, vidste du bare! [O, If you Only Knew!]

15 Sex sange (1866): Svundne dage [Bygone Days] (Munch), Den friske sang [The Gay Song] (Welhaven), Taylors sang (Bjørnson), En sommersang (Welhaven), Laengsel [Longing] (T. Kjerulf), Natten paa fjorden [The Night on the Fjord] (A. Munch)

16 Sange (trans. from Eng., Caralis) (1867): Det var så tyst [It was so Silent] (J.J. Callanan), Mit hjerte og min lyra [My Heart and my Lyre] (Moore), Hyrdepigens sang [The Shepherdess's Song] (R.M. Milnes), Serenade (Byron), Skovbaekken [The Brooklet in the Woods] (Moore)

17 Danske og norske sange (Copenhagen, 1867): Hvad har jeg vel andet villet [What More could I have Wanted] (Winther), Ved sundet [By the Sound] (Welhaven), Du kommer [You are Coming] (C. Ploug), Ved afskeden [At the Parting] (T. Kjerulf), Den elsktes naerhed [The Nearness of the Beloved] (E. Aarestrup, after Goethe), Paa fjellet [In the Mountains] (K. Janson)

18 Tre sånger, B, pf (1868): Saknaden [The Absent One] (Runeberg), Der Einsiedler (J. von Eichendorff), Das Schiff (K. Vollheim, after C. Mackay)

19 Fyra sånger (1868): Sjömansflickan [The Sailor's Girl] (Runeberg), Ynglingen [The Youth] (Runeberg), Modren vid vaggan [The Mother by the Cradle] (F.M. Franzén), Förställningen [The Dissimulation] (Runeberg)

20 Fire sange (Geibel) (1869): Lass Andre nur, Des Mondes Silber rinnt, Vöglein wohin so schnell?, Sehnsucht

23 Fem sange (1870): Bergens stift [Bergen's Diocese] (Welhaven), I granskoven [In the Spruce Forest] (M.J. Monrad), Sangfugl fra de dunkle buske [Songbird from the Dark Bushes] (Bjørnson), Alfeland [Fairyland] (Welhaven), Just som jeg favned dit liv [Just as I Embraced You] (Bjørnson)

25 Fyra sånger (1871): Die Schwester (after F. Hemans), Guten Morgen (K. Vollheim, after C. Mackay), Gute Nacht (Vollheim, after Mackay), Ich fuhr über Meer (Sp., trans. Heyse and Geibel)

26 Sange (Moore, trans. Caralis) (1872): Gaa kun glands at vinde [Only go to Win Glory], Vagtskuddet [The Watch's Shot], Om jeg elske vil dig [Will I Love You]

Täuschung (K. Beck); Es stand ein Veilchenstrauss (Geibel); Waldabendlust (C. Mayer); Hjemfart [Journey Home] (Welhaven); Nachwirkung (A. Meissner); Wie rafft ich mich auf (Platen); Scheiden, Leiden (Geibel); Höchstes Leben (Geibel); Nach langen Jahren (Geibel); Serenade (P.A. Jensen); In der Ferne (H. Kletke); Den hvide, røde rose [The White, Red Rose] (Bjørnson); Treibe nur mit Lieben Spott (Sp., trans. Heyse); Murmelndes Lüftchen (Sp., trans. Heyse and Geibel); Ingen vej [No Way] (T. Kjerulf); Taushed og sang [Silence and Song] (Welhaven)

OTHER VOCAL

Søcadetterne iland [The Naval Cadets Ashore] (H. Wergeland), Singspiel, solo vv, chorus, orch [orchd by P. Sperati], N-Oum

Serenade ved strandbredden [Serenade at the Shore] (Winther), T, SSA, pf, op.8 (1861)

Troubadouren (Welhaven), T, SATB, pf, op.17b (1868)

Duets: 4 sange, op.10, 2vv, pf (1863): Ved havet [At the Sea] (Welhaven), Kein Wort und keinen Hauch (M. Harmann), Fuglekvidder [Bird Warbling] (C. Richardt), Barcarole (J.L. Heiberg) for 2 hands unless otherwise stated

PIANO

Intermezzo and Springdance, in Album for piano (Christiania, 1852), as op.27 (Berlin, *c*1870); 3 pieces, op.4 (1857); Bondedans [Farmer's Dance], ed. N. Grinde (Oslo, 1961) [orig. in op.4]; 6 Sketches, op.7 (1860); [6] New Sketches, op.12 (1863); Polonaise, 4 hands, op.13 (1864); March, 4 hands, op.21 (1869); Rondino, 4 hands, op.22 (1869); 4 pieces, op.24 (1871); Scherzo, op.29 (Christiania, *c*1870)

Arrs.: 25 udvalgte norske folkedandse (1861); Norske folkeviser (Christiania, 1867)

Impromptus, sketches and other pieces

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Grønvold: Norske musikere (Christiania, 1883)
C. Elling: Nordmaend i det 19. aarhundre, ii: Halfdan Kjerulf (Christiania, 1914)
O.M. Sandvik: 'Halfdan Kjerulf og poesien', Edda, iv (1915), 357–61
W. Moe, ed.: Halfdan Kjerulf: av hans efterlatte papirer [Kjerulf: from his posthumous papers] (Christiania, 1917–18)
A. Grønvold: 'Halfdan Kjerulf: breve til Professor Gude', Samtiden, xxx (1919), 33–48, 72–87, 188–200, 254–64, 312–23
O.M. Sandvik: 'Fra Halfdan Kjerulfs kreds i 1840-aarene' [Kjerulf's circle in the 1840s], Edda, ix (1918), 81–5
K. Nyblom: Halfdan Kjerulf (Stockholm, 1926)
O.L. Mohr: 'To breve fra Halfdan Kjerulf til Welhaven', NMÅ 1943–6, 31–51
N. Grinde: 'En Halfdan Kjerulf-bibliografi', NMÅ 1954–5, 17–107
D. Schjelderup-Ebbe: 'Modality in Halfdan Kjerulf's Music', ML, xxxviii (1957), 238–46
N. Grinde: 'Halfdan Kjerulfs klavermusikk', NMÅ 1959–61, 9–73
D. Schjelderup-Ebbe: 'Kjerulfs fem sanger fra "Spanisches Liederbuch"', Festskrift til Olav Gurvin, ed. F. Benestad and P. Krømer (Drammen and Oslo,1968), 144–61 [incl. Eng. summary]
E. Solbu and H. Jørgensen, eds.: En levende tradisjon: Jubileumsskrift til 100-års dagen for opprettelsen av Musikkonservatoriet i Oslo (Oslo, 1983)
N. Grinde, Ø. Norheim and B. Quamme, eds.: Halfdan Kjerulfs dagbøker (Oslo, 1990)
N. Grinde: A History of Norwegian Music (Lincoln, NE, 1991)
B. Qvamme: Halfdan Kjerulf og hans tid (Oslo, 1998)

NILS GRINDE

Kkwaenggwari. Small, lipped, flat bronze gong of Korea. It is known by numerous other onomatopoeic names (such as kkaengmaegi), as well as sogŭm ('small gong') and soe ('metal'). Its dimensions are not fixed, but a typical instrument would be about 20 cm in diameter, with a lip of about 4–5 cm. The player supports the instrument by putting the left thumb on top and forefinger beneath the lip, allowing both an open sound (kkaeng) and, by touching the remaining left fingers against the resonating surface, a damped sound (maek); the instrument is struck with a small wood or bamboo mallet with a wooden ball at the end. The sound of the kkwaenggwari is remarkably loud, penetrating and clangorous.

The treatise Akhak kwebŏm (1493) describes a small gong in connection with dance at the Sacrifice to Royal Ancestors (Chongmyo), indicating that it was also used to announce the beginning of the ritual performance. At present the instrument is used chiefly in nongak ('farmers' music'), played by the band leader. Patterns played on the kkwaenggwari are very rapid and complex, being reinforced on strong beats by the CHING (large gong).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Sŏng Hyŏn, ed.:: Akhak kwebŏm [Guide to the study of music] (Seoul, 1493/*R*1975), 8.9b
Chang Sahun: Han'guk akki taegwan [Korean musical instruments] (Seoul, 1969), 123

ROBERT C. PROVINE

Klabon [Klaboni, Clabon, Claboni, Clabonius], Krzysztof [Christophorus] (b ?Königsberg [now Kaliningrad], *c*1550; d in or after 1616). Polish composer, instrumentalist, lutenist and singer. As a child he was a chorister at the court of King Zygmunt II Augustus at Kraków. On 6 January 1565 he was transferred to the group of instrumentalists at the royal chapel and there are records of his performing songs to the lute on festive occasions at court. In about 1576 he became director of the royal chapel, first under King Stefan Batory and then under Zygmunt III Wasa. He held this post until 1601 except between 1596 and 1598. It was because Zygmunt III increased the size of his chapel by appointing a number of outstanding Italian musicians that he had to give up his post: in 1596–8 he was replaced by Marenzio, and he was succeeded by G.C. Gabussi in 1601, after which he remained in charge of the Polish part of the chapel only. He accompanied the king on his travels to Sweden in 1593–4 and 1598. He is last heard of in 1616. It must be supposed that he himself composed the occasional pieces that he sang to the lute, but only one such work, to a text by Stanisław Grochowski, survives with music: Pieśni Kalliopy Slowieńskiey: na teraźnieysze pod Byczyną zwycięstwo [Songs of the Slavonic Calliope: On the Recent Victory at Byczyna] (Kraków, 1588; ed. Z.M. Szweykowski, Muzyka w dawnym Krakowie, Kraków, 1964). It is a cycle of six songs, four of which are in dance rhythms and have simple homophonic textures, and the other two are metrical pieces. A few other celebratory songs sung by Klabon, to words by Jan Kochanowski, a leading poet of the time, were printed without music (In nuptias ... Joanni de Zamoscio, 1583; Ephinicion ... ad Stephanum Bathoreum, 1583). Klabon also composed sacred music: one work, the five-part Kyrie Paschale (ed. in AMP, xv, 1968, and MAP, ii, 1993), survives complete. It is based on the corresponding plainchant, treated both as cantus firmus and as a source of points of imitation. The coda, stated twice at the end of the composition, is notably ingenious and effective. Of another work, the Officium Sancta Maria, only the soprano part survives (in PL-Kk).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PSB (Z.M. Szweykowski); SMP [incl. full bibliography]

Z. Jachimecki: Wpływy włoskie w muzyce polskiej [Italian influences in Polish music] (Kraków, 1911), 188ff

Z.M. Szweykowski: 'Rozkwit wielogłosowości w XVI wieku' [The flowering of polyphony in the 16th century], Z dziejów polskiej kultury muzycznej, i: Kultura staropolska [From the history of Polish musical culture, i: Early Polish culture] (Kraków, 1958)

A. Szweykowska: 'Przeobrażenia w kapeli królewskiej na przełomie XVI i XVII wieku' [Changes in the royal chapel in the late 16th and 17th centuries], Muzyka, xiii/2 (1968), 3–21 [with Eng. summary]

ZYGMUNT M. SZWEYKOWSKI

Kladas [Lampadarios], Joannes (*fl c*1400). Composer of Byzantine chant. Together with his predecessors JOANNES GLYKYS, JOANNES KOUKOUZELES (*fl c*1300–50) and XENOS KORONES, Kladas was one of the most important and prolific composers of Byzantine liturgical music active during the 14th and 15th centuries. The little that is known of his life derives from rubrics in musical manuscripts, many of which call him solely by the name 'Lampadarios' (i.e. leader of the left-hand choir); one 15th-century manuscript, GR-An 2406, identifies him as 'Lampadarios tou evagous basilikou klērou', that is, lampadarios of the imperial clergy of Hagia Sophia in Constantinople. In the same manuscript there is a rubric indicating that his daughter may have composed a kalophonic koinōnikon that is otherwise ascribed to Kladas himself.

Chant melodies composed by Kladas appear in the AKOLOUTHIAI manuscripts copied at the end of the 14th century and in sources from the first half of the 15th century. He is also mentioned in a treatise written by MANUEL CHRYSAPHES in the mid-15th century as the last of five major Byzantine composers of kalophonic oikoi for the Akathistos Hymn. It is certain, therefore, that Kladas was active during the first half of the 15th century, and that he was an older contemporary of Chrysaphes himself.

The akolouthiai manuscripts of the first half of the 15th century contain chants by Kladas for almost all the musical repertories of the Byzantine rite. Akolouthiai were constantly brought up to date by scribes who, at the time of recopying, would replace older chants with newly composed melodies. An examination of the prooimiakos repertory (verses of Psalm ciii – the Prooimiac Psalm – sung at Saturday HESPERINOS) in successive versions of the akolouthiai shows that the melodies of Kladas's 14th-century predecessors, such as Koukouzeles and Korones, were often transferred from one verse to another, whereas the ten settings by Kladas remain attached to the original lines of psalm text. The simple doxology Doxa soi O Theos ('Glory to Thee, O God'), sung as a refrain after each line of the prooimiakos, was troped for the first time and to a moderate degree by Koukouzeles, but in the settings of Kladas this refrain was lengthened considerably and given even greater structural importance in the chant as a whole by the addition of the trope 'Glory to thee, unbegotten Father; Glory to thee, begotten Son; Glory to thee, Holy Spirit, which proceeds from the Father and reposes in the Son; Glory to thee, Holy Trinity; Glory to thee, O God'. Kladas also composed a set of 'kalophonic repetitions' (perissai) for troparia and a number of kalophonic stichēra; the latter are not found in the akolouthiai manuscripts.

Melodies by Kladas show a marked preference for greater proportions and wider vocal ranges than chants by Koukouzeles and other 14th-century composers. His kalophonic melodies (see KALOPHONIC CHANT) are typical of the later period of that style, with chants extended by chains of melodic formulae and the repetition of melodic patterns, either at the same pitch or sequentially, for example, the descending line b–a b–a, a–g a–g, g–f g–f, f–e f–e etc. As a result, Kladas's compositions appear more sequential in their melodic construction, less focussed vocally and more effusive than those of his predecessors.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Levy: 'A Hymn for Thursday in Holy Week', JAMS, xvi (1963), 127–75, esp. 155–7

M. Velimirović: 'Byzantine Composers in MS. Athens 2406', Essays Presented to Egon Wellesz, ed. J. Westrup (Oxford, 1966), 7–18

E.V. Williams: John Koukouzeles' Reform of Byzantine Chanting for Great Vespers in the Fourteenth Century (diss., Yale U., 1968)

E. Trapp: Prosopograpisches Lexikon der Palaiologenzeit, v (Vienna, 1981), 184–5

D.E. Conomos, ed.: The Treatise of Manuel Chrysaphes, the Lampadarios, MMB, Corpus scriptorum, ii (1985), 45, 61, 67

A. Jakovljević: Diglōssē palaiographia kai melōdoi-hymnographoi tou kōdika tōn Athēnōn 928 [Old bilingual writings and hymn melodies in Athens codex 928] (Leukosia, 1988), 70–72

EDWARD V. WILLIAMS/CHRISTIAN TROELSGÅRD

Klafsky, Katharina [Katalin] (b Mosonszentjános, 19 Sept 1855; d Hamburg, 22 Sept 1896). Hungarian soprano. After singing in the chorus of the Komische Oper, Vienna, she studied briefly with Mathilde Marchesi, and in 1875 sang small parts at Salzburg. In 1876 she was engaged at Leipzig, where she studied further with Josef Sucher. She sang Waltraute (Die Walküre) and the Third Norn (Götterdämmerung) in the Leipzig première of the Ring (1878), Venus in Tannhäuser (1879) and Brangaene in the first Leipzig Tristan und Isolde (1882). She sang Wellgunde and Waltraute (Die Walküre) at Her Majesty's Theatre in the first complete London Ring (1882) and Sieglinde and Brünnhilde with Angelo Neumann's touring Wagner company (1882–3). After appearances in Bremen (1884) and Vienna (1885) she was engaged at Hamburg (1886), where, in addition to her Wagner roles, she sang Santuzza (Cavalleria rusticana), Valentine (Les Huguenots), Norma, Agathe (Der Freischütz), Eglantine (Euryanthe), Donna Anna (Don Giovanni) and the Countess (Le nozze di Figaro). Her dramatic temperament, allied to a magnificent, full-toned voice and a secure technique acquired from Marchesi, enabled her to sing German, French and Italian roles with equal success. In 1895 she broke her contract to tour the USA with the Damrosch Opera Company, but returned to Hamburg in September 1896. She died suddenly while still in her vocal prime.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Ordemann: Aus dem Leben und Wirken von Katharina Klafsky (Hameln, 1903)
A. Neumann: Erinnerungen an Richard Wagner (Leipzig, 1907; Eng. trans., 1908/R)
H. Chevalley: Hundert Jahre Hamburger Stadt-Theater (Hamburg, 1927)

ELIZABETH FORBES

Klage (Ger.). See PLANCTUS.

Klagend (Ger.: 'plaintive', 'complaining', 'lamenting'). An expression mark used most famously by Beethoven in the finale of his op.110 Piano Sonata.

Klais. German family of organ builders. Johannes Klais (i) (b Lüftelberg, 12 Dec 1852; d Bonn, 11 April 1925), a farmer's son, was trained by Heinrich Koulen in Strasbourg, and then worked in Southern Germany, Switzerland and France. In 1882 he founded the family firm in Bonn. His pupils included Anton Feith, Wilhelm Furtwängler (see HAMMER-ORGELBAU), Hans Steinmeyer, and Theodor Frobenius. He was succeeded by his son Johannes Klais (ii) ('Hans'; b 3 Aug 1890; d 9 Oct 1965), who trained with the firms of Rinckenbach in Ammerschwihr and Steinmeyer in Oettingen. The line of succession passed to Johannes (ii)'s son, Hans Gerd Klais (b 2 Dec 1930) and grandson Philipp Klais (b 13 March 1967), both of whom were trained by their respective fathers. Philipp also received training at the firm of Muhleisen in Strasbourg.

Initially, Johannes Klais built organs with slider-chests and tracker action. In 1895, the firm began to produce mechanical cone-chests, and two years later it introduced instruments with pneumatic action. From 1906 electro-pneumatic action was also used. In 1928 Hans Klais reintroduced the slider-chest with tracker action. Since 1948, tracker organs have been the usual type of organs built by the firm, which introduced a wider range of tracker-organ models in 1965. Klais organs are found throughout Europe and worldwide. Johannes (i) invented high-pressure stops with double lips; he designed the façades of his organs in neo-Gothic or neo-Romanic style himself. He built organs at St Marien, Kaiserslautern (1904), Erfurt Cathedral (1906) and St Elisabeth, Bonn (1910). Johannes (ii) designed organs with undecorated open façades, and with an aesthetically appealing arrangement of the pipes. His most important instruments were built for the Messehalle, Cologne (1924; five manuals, 130 stops; the firm's largest instrument); the cathedrals of Mainz (1929), Berlin (1932), Ghent (1936), Bruges (1936) and Würzburg (1937); and Münsterschwarzach Abbey (1937), Frankfurt Kaiserdom (1957) and Bonn Minster (1962).

Hans Gerd and Philipp Klais have preferred not to imitate historical styles; they have set out to build versatile, modern instruments that synthesize a variety of historical and modern elements. Organs by Hans Gerd were built for the cathedrals at Würzburg (1969), Trier (1974), Berlin (1976), Limburg (1978), Graz (1978), Münster (1987), and Aachen (1993); and also at the Liebfrauenmünster, Ingolstadt (1977), Altenberg Dom (1980), the Gasteig Kulturzentrum, Munich (1985), and the Concert Hall, Athens (1993). Philipp Klais has built organs for the Concert Hall, Kyoto (1995) and the Philharmonic Hall, Kraków (1996). The firm has carried out restorations on instruments at Lambrecht (1977); Amorbach (1982); Lutherkirche, Wiesbaden (1987); the chancel organ in St Georg, Ochsenhausen (1988), and in Rot an der Rot (1989).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (H. Klotz)
G. Hammer: 'Der Orgelbauer Johannes Klais', Musik und Kirche, xxxi (1961), 73–5
H.G. Klais, ed.: Beiträge zur Geschichte und Ästhetik der Orgel (Bonn, 1983)
P. Klais: 'Hans Klais: Werkgerechter Prospektentwurf zwischen Orgelbewegung und moderner Architektur', Aspekte der Orgelbewegung, ed. A. Reichling (Kassel, 1995), 219–62

ALFRED REICHLING

Klami, Uuno (Kalervo) (b Virolahti, nr Kotka, 20 Sept 1900; d Virolahti, 29 May 1961). Finnish composer. He was of a rural family which included well-known folk fiddlers. While at primary school he announced his intention to become a composer. In 1915 he enrolled at the Helsinki Music Institute, where he studied, with interruptions, until 1924. He was also active from 1915 into the 1920s as a café and cinema pianist. He studied composition with Melartin, music history with Madetoja and the piano with, among others, Hannikainen. His piano quartet (1922) attracted attention; two other works from his student period, a piano quintet and a suite for string quartet, now lost, were remarked upon by contemporary critics for their modernism and for their French influence. Klami was in Paris in 1924–5, where he apparently received instruction from Schmitt and may have made the acquaintance of Ravel, who became an object of lifelong admiration. He was also influenced by the works of Stravinsky, Prokofiev and Honegger and by contemporary Spanish music. In Vienna (1928–9), where he was probably guided by Hans Gál, he had no contact with the Second Viennese School, but was stimulated by Ravel's and Bartók's visits to the city. Klami taught the piano and music theory at the Helsinki Folk Conservatory (1929–32) and from 1930 was a music critic, specifically for Helsingin sanomat, the principal Finnish newspaper (1932–59). He received a state pension for composers in 1939. In 1949 he was a founder-member of the Finnish Society for Contemporary Music (from 1951 the Finnish branch of the ISCM), and in 1959 he succeeded Kilpinen as the musical representative in the Finnish Academy.

In Paris Klami had become fascinated by a variety of musical traditions, and the pursuit of these interests had the effect of distancing his work from the legacy of Sibelius. He exploited jazz in his First Piano Concerto ('Une nuit à Montmartre', 1925) and in Rag-Time & Blues (1931); he drew on Spanish inspiration in, among other works, the Habanera for orchestra (1926), and was captivated by the East in Kolme kiinalaista laulua ('Three Chinese Songs', 1928, now lost). But the models of Spanish composers and of Stravinsky's Russian-period works led him to turn to his Finnishness, exploring it from a contemporary viewpoint. One result was the work

Karjalainen rapsodia ('Karelian Rhapsody', 1927), in which the folklike themes may be of Klami's own devising; it attracted much notice in Finland and abroad. The Tsheremissiläinen fantasia ('Cheremis Fantasia', 1931) on folk themes from the Russian people now known as the Mari, themselves linguistically related to the Finns, can be seen as linking his preoccupations with exoticism to modern Finnish folkloristic tendencies. Klami also made many arrangements of Finnish folk music in an anti-Romantic spirit. Though his interest both in exoticism and in actual folk sources declined in the mid-1930s, Finnish subject-matter continued to inform his music.

After the success of the first concert of Klami's works (1928), the Finnish press spoke of the music's humour, irony and parody, a legacy of his Paris period. This early provocativeness developed into a more delicate and characteristic instrumental inventiveness, notably in his overture to Kivi's rustic comedy Nummisuutarit ('The Cobblers on the Heath', 1936); but its use within a religious work, the masterly Psalmus (1931–6), aroused scepticism among a number of the critics at its 1937 première. Klami's early compositions on occasion recall Ravel and Stravinsky, both of whom he admired for their orchestral virtuosity: both his use of the waltz in Opernredoute (1929) and the oriental flavour of some of the melodies in Merikuvia ('Sea Pictures', *c*1930–32) recall the spirit of Ravel. The splendid Kalevala-sarja ('Kalevala Suite', 1943), a choreographic work with reciter, was originally conceived as an oratorio in which guise it was first performed in 1933 under the title Koreografisia kuvia Kalevasta ('Choreographic Scenes from Kalevala'). In this form it reflected the 'primitivism' of The Rite of Spring, but in turning it into the suite Klami excised many of the static and atmospheric features reminiscent of Stravinsky's ballet.

By nature an orchestral composer, Klami tended to compose works derived from literary and other extra-musical sources. The Symphonie enfantine (1929), for example, employs methods of musical depiction characteristic of the Franco-Russian tradition. His distance from the more abstract Germanic symphonic tradition is equally evident in his two symphonies (1938, 1945), in which characterful instrumental ideas and virtuosity tend to overshadow thematic-motivic design. Klami is at his most Romantic in the Second Symphony, which reverberates with echoes of war. Despite an incidental reference to Sibelius's Fourth Symphony, the work diverged from Sibelian models, and its allusion to the military march 'Kauan on kärsitty vilua ja nälkää' ('Long we have suffered cold and hunger') was criticized at the work's première in 1946.

A recognizable classicist trait is present in Klami's output: pre-Romantic models are recalled above all in Hommage à Haendel (1931), while Psalmus, a setting of a 17th-century Finnish poem by Juhana Cajanus, leans towards a type of national neo-classicism. Also belonging to the classicist, anti-Romantic line are the Second Piano Concerto (1950) and a small masterpiece, the Tema con sette variazioni e coda for cello and orchestra (1954), which combines thoughtfulness with sparkling instrumental humour. The Violin Concerto (1943, revised 1954), which is stylistically indebted to Prokofiev, pays effective tribute to the genre and its traditions. His wartime experiences are revisited in the dramatic and visionary Laulu Kuujärvestä ('Song of Kuujärvi', 1956) for baritone and orchestra.

Klami has been considered the most skilful orchestrator among Finnish composers. His works are typically transparent and deftly scored. In parts of Merikuvia, Scènes de la vie campagnarde (1932) and Terhenniemi ('The Misty Headland'), added in 1943 to the Kalevala Suite, he paints predominantly static mood pictures. Franco-Russian orchestral techniques are encountered in Maan synty ('In the Beginning') from the Kalevala-sarja, and in Psalmus, both of which include grand orchestral tuttis saturated with percussion in the manner of Rimsky-Korsakov and Ravel. His brass writing, moreover, is striking in Lemminkäisen seikkailut saaressa ('Lemminkäinen's Adventures on the Island', 1934, originally intended as the third movement of the Kalevala Suite), Karjalainen tori ('A Karelian Market', 1947) and Revontulet ('Northern Lights', 1946–8). His imaginative use of timbre, delight in presenting virtuoso challenges and instinctive compositional approach inhibited the creation of truly graphic sound images. Among his principal works is the colourful, visionary ballet Pyörteitä ('Whirls', 1957–60), left unfinished at his death.

With his aesthetic allied to the French cultural sphere, Klami stood apart from other Finnish modernists in the 1920s. He created no school – he never undertook a significant amount of teaching – and by the end of his life he was considered a somewhat anachronistic figure by other Finnish composers. Even at its most dissonant, his music did not abandon the foundations of tonality; indeed, in the 1950s he was Finland's only active composer of note who had not adopted dodecaphony. In his lifetime, he came to be regarded by many as the most significant Finnish composer after Sibelius. In Finnish concert life his music enjoyed greater success than that of any of his generation, and it was performed abroad from the early 1930s, by Stokowski among others. Apart from a lull during the 1960s and 70s, his success, in Finland especially, has continued. Recordings of his music have been well received abroad, while the Uuno Klami Society, founded in 1987, has published his scores and writings and encouraged scholarship on his music.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Pf Conc. no.1 'Une nuit à Montmartre', 1925; Sérénades espagnoles, 1925–33, rev. 1944; Habanera, 1926 [from pf work]; Karjalainen rapsodia [Karelian Rhapsody], 1927; Symphonie enfantine, 1929; Opernredoute, 1929; Koreografisia kuvia Kalevasta [Choreographic Scenes from Kalevala], 1929–33, rev. 1943 as Kalevala-sarja [Kalevala Suite]; Merikuvia [Sea Pictures], *c*1930–32; Kohtauksia nukketeatterista [Scenes from a Puppet Theatre], 1931 [from pf work]; Hommage à Haendel, 1931; Tsheremissiläinen fantasia [Cheremis Fantasia], vc, orch, 1931; Scènes de la vie campagnarde (Fête populaire en plein air), 1932; Sérénades joyeuses, *c*1933; Lemminkäisen seikkailut saaressa [Lemminkäinen's Adventures on the Island], 1934; Helsinki-marssi [Helsinki March], 1934; Karjalaisia tansseja [Karelian Dances], 1935; Nummisuutarit [The Cobblers on the Heath] (ov. to comedy by A. Kivi), 1936; Sym. no.1, 1938; Suomenlinna, festival ov., 1940; Vn Conc., 1940–43, rev. 1954; Sym. no.2, 1945; Kuningas Lear, ov. after W. Shakespeare, 1946; Sarja pienelle orkesterille [Suite for Small Orch], 1946; Pyöräilijä [The Cyclist], 1946; Revontulet [Northern Lights], 1946–8; Karjalainen tori [A Karelian Market], 1947; Pf Conc. no.2, str, 1950; All'Overtura, 1951; Tema con 7 variazioni e coda, vc, orch, 1954; Pyörteitä [Whirls], ballet, 1957–60, inc., 2 suites from Act 2

Vocal: Kolme kiinalaista laulua [3 Chinese Songs], S, orch, 1928, lost; Psalmus (J. Cajanus), S, Bar, SATB, orch, 1931–6; Ps xi, SATB, org, str, 1937; Vipusessa käynti [In the Belly of Vipunen]

(Kalevala), Bar, TTBB, orch, 1938; Laulu Kuujärvestä [Song of Kuujärvi] (Y. Jylhä), Bar, orch, 1956

Chbr and solo inst: Sonata, va, pf, 1921, inc.; Pf Qt, 1922; Habanera, pf, 1924, orchd 1926; Kohtauksia nukketeatterista [Scenes from a Puppet Theatre], pf, 1925, orchd 1931, pf version lost; Rag-Time & Blues, 2 vn, cl, tpt, pf, 1931

Principal publishers: Fazer, Guild of Finnish Composers and Performers, Sulasol, Uuno Klami Society

BIBLIOGRAPHY

U. Klami: 'Kalevala-svitens utveckling och kompositionfaser' [The development and compositional phases of the Kalevala Suite], Modern nordisk musik, ed. I. Bengtsson (Stockholm, 1957), 67–75; Finnish repr. in Musiikki, iii/3–4 (1973), 44–54 [incl. Eng. summary]

O. Kauko: 'Piirteitä Uuno Klamin kuvaan' [Towards a portrait of Uuno Klami], Suomen musiikin vuosikirja 1960–61, 8–14

K. Maasalo: 'Uuno Klamin Psalmus', Juhlakirja Erik Tawaststjernalle [Festschrift for Erik Tawaststjerna], ed. E. Salmenhaara (Helsinki, 1976), 363–83

P.H. Nordgren: 'Arvoituksellinen Uuno Klami' [The enigmatic Uuno Klami], Musiikki, x/1 (1980), 1–23

T.-M. Lehtonen: Uuno Klami: Teokset/Works (Helsinki, 1986)

S. Lappalainen and E. Salmenhaara: 'Uutta tietoa Uuno Klamista' [New facts about Uuno Klami], Musiikki, xvii/1–2 (1987), 48–62

E. Salmenhaara, ed.: Pyörteitä vanavedessä: Uuno Klami 90 vuotta [Whirls in the wake: Uuno Klami at 90] (Helsinki, 1990)

E. Salmenhaara, ed.: Symposion Uuno Klami (Helsinki, 1993)

H. Tyrväinen: 'A l'ombre de Sibelius: Uuno Klami à Montmartre', Boréales, nos.54–7 (1993), 109–35

E. Salmenhaara: Uuden musiikin kynnyksellä [On the threshold of new music], Suomen musiikin historia, iii (Helsinki, 1996)

H. Tyrväinen: 'Espanjalaisia ravistuksia Pariisissa: Uuno Klami ja Manuel de Falla' [Spanish tremors in Paris: Uuno Klami and Manuel de Falla], Musiikki, xxvi (1996), 370–85

H. Tyrväinen: 'Kansallisten piirteiden ja Ranskan musiikin vaikutteiden kohtaamisia Toivo Kuulalla, Leevi Madetojalla ja Uuno Klamilla' [The confluence of national traits and influences from France in the work of Toivo Kuula, Leevi Madetoja and Uuno Klami], Musiikki, xxvii (1997), 245–301

H. Tyrväinen: 'The Solitary Way of Uuno Klami in the Finnish Music of the 20th Century: Folklorism, Nationalism, Neoclassicism?', Music and Nationalism in 20th-Century Britain and Finland, ed. T. Mäkelä (Hamburg, 1997), 199–216

H. Tyrväinen: 'Manuel de Falla et le compositeur finlandais Uuno Klami: influence technique ou influence idéologique?', Manuel de Falla: latinité et universalité, ed. L. Jambou (Paris, 1999), 437–63

H. Tyrväinen: 'The Success Story of the Man who Forged the Sampo: 100th Anniversary of Uuno Klami', Finnish Music Quarterly (2000), no.2, pp.2–11

HELENA TYRVÄINEN

Klang (i) (Ger.). A composite musical sound consisting of a fundamental pitch (Grundton) and its upper partials (Obertöne), as opposed to noise (Geräusch) and to the phenomenon of sound itself (usually Schall); it is sometimes used as a synonym for Klangfarbe ('timbre' or 'tone-colour').

KEVIN MOONEY

Klang (ii) (Ger.). In theoretical writings of the second half of the 19th century (such as those by Hauptmann, Helmholtz, Oettingen, Riemann and their contemporaries), Klang is used both with the general meaning of 'composite sound' and with the specific meaning 'chord'. This situation reflects the intermingling of music theory and acoustics typical of that period: theorists were committed to the scientific rationalization of tonality, and therefore used the same term to designate sound in its natural and artistic states. The resultant ambiguity has plagued translations and has clouded the interpretation in the English-speaking world of an extensive body of theoretical writing.

Moreover, subtle differences in usage reveal important discrepancies among the theorists themselves. Hauptmann, for instance, associated major Klänge with the property of 'having' (Haben) partial tones and minor Klänge with that of 'being' (Sein) partial tones; Haben represented a positive or active state, Sein a negative or passive one. Oettingen reversed this polarity so that major triads became negative-passive and minor triads positive-active. Riemann dismantled the opposition altogether by claiming that both species of triad 'have' partial tones: overtones in the case of major triads and undertones in the case of minor triads.

The relationships of Klang with the terms Akkord ('chord') and Zusammenklang have caused further confusion. 19th-century theorists normally prefaced Klang in some way when they wished to indicate specific chords (e.g. tonic or dominant) or chord types (major or minor). Riemann thus wrote Oberklänge for chords 'in the major sense' and Unterklänge for chords 'in the minor sense'; Hauptklänge were the primary chords of a key, and Nebenklänge the secondary chords. Through the use of such modifiers theorists were able to maintain the double meaning of Klang: prefaced, the term denoted a specific musical category; alone it was equivalent to what Oettingen called 'the total sensation of a periodic vibration'.

The term Zusammenklang occurred less frequently and never as a substitute for Klang or Akkord. It meant instead 'sounding together' as a by-product of concurrent melodic lines; 'simultaneity' or 'linear harmony' are possible translations. Riemann reserved the word for sonorities inexplicable as Klänge which had therefore to be conceived in horizontal rather than vertical terms. Helmholtz, however, used it to denote the sounding together of several Klänge (composite tones) by different instruments.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Grove6 ('Leittonwechselklang')

M. Hauptmann: Die Natur der Harmonik und der Metrik (Leipzig, 1853, 2/1873; Eng. trans., 1893/R)

H. von Helmholtz: Die Lehre von den Tonempfindungen als physiologische Grundlage für die Theorie der Musik (Brunswick, 1863, 6/1913, Eng. trans., 1875, 2/1885/R)

A. von Oettingen: Harmoniesystem in dualer Entwickelung (Dorpat, 1866)

H. Riemann: Über das musikalische Hören (diss., U. of Göttingen, 1873) [also pubd as Musikalische Logik: Hauptzüge der physiologischen und psychologischen Begründung unserer Musiksystems (Leipzig, 1874)]

KEVIN MOONEY

Klangfarbenmelodie (Ger.). A term coined by Schoenberg in his Harmonielehre (1911) to refer to the possibility of a succession of tone-colours related to one another in a way analogous to a relationship between the pitches in a melody. By this he implied that the timbral transformation of a single pitch could be perceived as equivalent to a melodic succession, that is, that one could invoke tone-colour as a structural element in composition. The third of his Five Orchestral Pieces op.16 (1909), originally entitled Farben, had already hinted at the idea of structured timbre transformation. Webern's attempts to make the timbral structure of a work clarify as well as enhance its pitch structure (e.g. in his orchestration of the six-part ricercare from Bach's Musical Offering) may also reflect the influence of Schoenberg's concept. The ideal of Klangfarbenmelodie inspired a number of postwar European composers including Stockhausen, who saw particularly in the electronic medium possibilities for the systematization of timbre along serial lines.

JULIAN RUSHTON

Klangschlüssel (Ger.: 'sound-clef'). A system of chordal notation invented by Hugo Riemann (Skizze einer neuen Methode der Harmonielehre, 1880). See NOTATION, §III, 4(viii).

Klangumwandler (Ger.). A device used in electronic music to change the frequency of a signal. See RING MODULATOR.

Klappenhorn [Klappenflügelhorn] (Ger.). See KEYED BUGLE.

Klappentrompete (Ger.). See KEYED TRUMPET.

Klatzow, Peter (James Leonard) (b Springs, 14 July 1945). South African composer. He started his music training in Johannesburg. After being awarded the South African Music Rights scholarship (1964), he continued his composition studies under Bernard Stevens at the RCM, London. In 1965 he won the Royal Philharmonic Prize for his Variations for Orchestra. A brief period of study in Florence (1965–6) was followed by lessons from Boulanger in Paris. On his return to southern Africa (late 1966) he took up a teaching appointment at the Rhodesian College of Music; he then worked for the South African Broadcasting Corporation as a music producer and became a lecturer (1973) then an associate professor (1989) at Cape Town University. In 1974 he founded the UCT Contemporary Music Society; under his guidance a large number of contemporary works have received their South African premières. During the late 1960s his somewhat eclectic compositions were strongly influenced by the European avant garde; in the 1970s the use of extremely quiet, sustained sounds was reminiscent of certain American trends of the time. During the 1980s Klatzow continued to explore a possible rapprochement with tonality, and the later concertos, and in particular the full-length ballet Hamlet, show a progressive reorientation, though without the complete abandonment of his previous atonal vocabulary. He edited Composers in South Africa Today (Cape Town, 1987), which contains an article on him by J. May (pp.131–65).

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Interactions I, pf, perc, chbr orch, 1971; Sym. 1972 'Phoenix', 1972; The Temptation of St Anthony, vc, orch, 1972; Time Structure II, orch, tape, 1974; Still Life, with Moonbeams, orch, 1975; Org Conc., 1981; Incantations, orch, 1984; Conc., mar, str orch, 1985; Conc., cl, chbr orch, 1989; Hamlet (ballet, 2), 1992

Chbr and solo inst: Pf Sonata, 1969; 4 Little Pieces, pf, 1970; The World of Paul Klee, fl, va, hp, 1972; Time Structure I, pf, 1973; Chronogram, org, 1977; Contours and Transformations, gui, 5 insts, 1977; Night Magic II, vn, hn, pf, 1977; Str Qt, 1977; From the Poets, pf, 1992; Conc., pf, 8 insts, 1995; Str Qt no.3, 1997

Vocal: In memoriam N.P. van Wyk Louw, S, str orch, 1970; The Garden of Memories and Discoveries, S, ens, tape, 1975; A Mass for Africa, Ct, Bar, double mixed chorus, solo fl, solo hn, orch, 1994; Prayers and Dances from Africa, SATB, brass qnt, 1996

JAMES MAY

Klausenburg (Ger.). See CLUJ-NAPOCA.

Klauwell, Otto (Adolf) (b Langensalza, 7 April 1851; d Cologne, 11 May 1917). German writer on music and composer. He was a pupil of Reinecke and Richter at the Leipzig Conservatory, and in 1875 was appointed to teach the piano, music history and theory at the Cologne Conservatory, of which he became deputy director in 1905. His works include two operas (Das Mädchen vom See, produced at Cologne, 1889, and Die heimlichen Richter, produced at Elberfeld, 1902), overtures, chamber music, piano pieces and lieder.

WRITINGS

Die historische Entwicklung des musikalischen Canons (diss., U. of Leipzig, 1875)
Musikalische Gesichtspunkte (Leipzig, 1882, 2/1892 as Musikalische Bekenntnisse)
Der Vortrag in der Musik (Berlin and Leipzig, 1883; Eng. trans., 1890)
Die Formen der Instrumentalmusik (Leipzig, 1894, rev. 2/1918 by W. Niemann)
Geschichte der Sonate (Cologne and Leipzig, 1899)
Das Konservatorium der Musik in Köln (Cologne, 1900)
Ludwig van Beethoven und die Variationenform (Langensalza, 1901)
Theodor Gouvy, sein Leben und seine Werke (Berlin, 1902)
Studien und Erinnerungen (Langensalza, 1906)
Theodor Kirchner (Langensalza, 1909)
Geschichte der Programm-Musik von ihren Anfängen bis zur Gegenwart (Leipzig, 1910/R)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Sietz: 'Klauwell, Otto', Rheinische Musiker, i, ed. K.G. Fellerer (Cologne, 1960)

MATTHIAS SCHMIDT

Klavarskribo (from Esperanto klavar: 'keyboard', skribo: 'writing'). A system of notation developed in the Netherlands, in about 1930, by Cornelis Pot (1885–1977). In 1931 a publishing house was set up in Slikkerveer (south of Rotterdam) for the publication of editions in the new notation system. It continues to publish and print music in Klavarskribo, and has also become a teaching institute. In 1990 the total number of its publications was 15,000, an output that includes a large proportion of the standard repertory for piano and organ, as well as a number of works for voice, for string and wind instruments, and theory publications. The notation system has attained a certain popularity in the Netherlands and is also used in other countries.

The system is based on a vertical staff in which groups of two thin and three thicker lines are shown in the same arrangement as the black keys on a keyboard (ex.1). Each octave has its own staff of five lines, providing space for seven white-note symbols in between the lines and five black-note symbols on the lines. Note stems are shown as horizontal lines, the direction of the stem indicating (for keyboard music) which hand plays a note or group of notes or (for other instrumentations) which notes belong to which voice or part. A C clef is used to indicate middle C (c′), the two lines next to this note usually being printed as dotted lines as a further means of orientation. The number of octaves per staff can be increased as necessary. Accidentals are not necessary because the white notes are printed as open, or void, notes and the black notes as filled notes; each note has its own place on the staff, and enharmonic differences of tonal function are not generally shown in the notation. The key of a composition is indicated at the beginning or during the course of the piece by means of the tonic, which is marked surrounded by a circle (major) or a rhomboid shape (minor).

The notation is represented as moving down the staff. All the bars of a piece are the same size and are divided into a number of equally-sized beats, depending on the time signature. The first beat of a bar is printed on a solid line and subsequent beats are represented by broken lines; notes on the half-beat are printed halfway between the beat-lines (and smaller note values are similarly spatially represented). The duration of the notes is generally indicated by the distance between notes with the same stem direction (i.e. not by the shape of the note heads).

Ex.1 E. Satie: Sarabande no.1 (1887): opening in traditional Western staff notation and in Klavarskribo

There are two exceptions to this: a rest is indicated by a stop sign printed where the note is to stop sounding; and a continuation dot indicates where a note is to continue beyond the onset of the next note. Performance indications are the same as in the traditional Western staff notation system.

Klavarskribo is primarily intended as a universal music (sound) notation for all instruments and voice. Because of its representation of the piano keyboard it functions as a kind of tablature for that instrument. There are special chord notations for specific instruments (such as the guitar and accordion). (For a further illustration see NOTATION, fig.79.)

WILKE JAN KAASJAGER

Klavecimbel (Dut). See HARPSICHORD.

Klaviatur (Ger.). See KEYBOARD.

Klavier (Ger., often spelled 'Clavier' before the 19th century). (1) A term for the keyboard of a piano, harpsichord, organ, etc.

(2) By extension, a generic term for a keyboard instrument which originally did not imply any particular instrument. J.S. Bach's Clavier-Übung contains music specifically for organ and for two-manual harpsichord, as well as works for which no instrument is specified and which can be played on a single-manual harpsichord or clavichord. During the second half of the 18th century, the term was more commonly applied to the clavichord. Since the 19th century it has denoted the pianoforte, usually in a general sense but occasionally to designate the upright piano or other small types as distinct from FLÜGEL ('grand piano').

JOHN KOSTER

Klavierauszug (Ger.). A piano arrangement of ensemble music for voices, or for voices and instruments; particularly an arrangement of an opera or oratorio with the vocal parts left intact and the orchestral accompaniment reduced for piano; see also SCORE.

Klavier-Harmonika (Ger.). See ACCORDION.

Klaviziterium (Ger.). See CLAVICYTHERIUM.

Klavizylinder (Ger.: 'clavicylinder'). A friction idiophone with a keyboard in the shape of a square piano, developed in 1799 by Ernst Chladni. The keys were attached to curved metal rods, which sounded by contact with a rotating wet glass cylinder, operated by means of a foot treadle. The principle was adopted by JOHANN CHRISTIAN DIETZ (i) in his mélodion (1805).

See also Sostenente piano, §3.

□

Klawiolin. A mechanical instrument invented by JAN JARMUSIEWICZ.

Klebanov, Dmytro Lvovych (b Khar'kiv, 12/25 July 1907; d 6 June 1987). Ukrainian composer and teacher. He studied the violin with Ilya Dobrzynets at the Khar'kiv Music College and in 1923 he entered Khar'kiv Institute of Music and Drama where he attended the composition class of Bogatïryov, graduating in 1926. He worked as a violinist with the State Opera and Ballet Theatre in Leningrad (1927–9); playing under conductors such as Klemperer and Walter in that theatre's productions of Berg's Wozzeck and Stravinsky's Pulcinella proved especially important for his creative development. He then returned to Khar'kiv to study conducting with Herman Adler and in 1934 he was invited to work at the conservatory there. This marked the beginning of his 50-year career there; in 1970 he became the head of the composition department. Klebanov is recognized as one of the founders of the so-called Khar'kiv school of composition, his students include Bibyk, Hubarenko, Karmins'ky and Zolotukhin. His first success as a composer came in 1937 with the performance of his ballet Aistienok ('Little Stork') – the first Soviet ballet for children – at the Bol'shoy Theatre in Moscow. This was followed in 1939 by performances of the ballet Svetlana and his first major instrumental piece, the First Violin Concerto. Klebanov's language never abandoned tonality; he was influenced by Shostakovich but refined his style into a kind of poetic realism. Most of his mature works are in symphonic genres: his First Symphony is 'dedicated to the memory of the martyrs of Babiy Yar' and is his response as a Jewish Ukrainian to the mass executions of Jews during the German occupation of Kiev (1941–3). In 1949 the symphony became a victim of the so-called 'struggle against cosmopolitanism' instigated by Stalin. A prominent Ukrainian music critic, Valeryan Dovzhenko, denounced Klebanov stating that he 'has written a symphony constructed on ancient Jewish religious songs and has filled it with the spirit of bourgeois nationalism and cosmopolitanism'. His first popular success came with the Third Symphony (1958). Although the orchestra is skilfully treated as a collection of smaller instrumental groups, the work – which the composer described as a 'lyrico-dramatic poem' – continues a Ukrainian symphonic tradition that goes back as far as Kalachevs'ky. In his Seventh Symphony (1981) Klebanov turned to a highly dramatic structure, in which the materials become vehicles for a series of timbral and intonational transformations, sudden and abrupt dynamic changes and incessant ostinato patterns.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Aistienok [Little Stork] (children's ballet), 1937; Svetlana (ballet), 1939; Komunist/Vasiliy Gubanov (op, 3, 12 scenes, R. Cherkashina), 1967; Krasnïye Kazaki [Red Cossacks] (op, prol, 3, 5 scenes, Yu. Klebanova), 1972; Mayevka (op, 2, A. Chepalova), 1981

9 Syms.: no.1, 1945; no.2, 1952; no.3, 1958; no.4, 1959; no.5, 1960; no.6, Mez, Bar, orch, 1973; no.7, 1981; no.8 'Poėma o khlebe' [Poem about Bread], 1982; no.9, 1986

Other orch: Aistienok [Little Stork], suite, 1940 [from ballet]; Vn Conc. no.1, 1948; Ukrainian Suite, 1952; Dombra Conc., 1956; Vn Conc. no.2, 1960; Paraphrase on a Theme of the Ukrainian Folk Song 'Dumy Moyi' [My Thoughts], str, 1966; Suite no.1, str, 1971; 4 Preludes and Fugues, 1974; Geroicheskaya Poėma [Heroic Poem], 1975; Suite no.2, str, 1975; Vc Conc., 1977

Vocal: Pisni na virshi Shevchanka [Songs on Poems by Shevchenko], 1v, pf, 1957; Vocal Cycle (H. Heine), B, pf, 1957; 2 Romances (M. Ryls'ky), Mez, pf, 1959; Vocal Cycle (I. Muratova), S, B, pf, 1959; Piesni zpadnikh slavyan [Songs of the Western Slavs] (A.S. Pushkin), low v, pf, 1968; Vocal Sym. (O. Malyshko), 1979; Burevestnik [The Stormy Petrel] (M. Gorky), Mez, S, T, B, chorus, orch, 1980; Yaponskiye siluety [Japanese Silhouettes], S, viola d'amore, chbr orch, 1986

Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt no.1, 1925; Str Qt no.2, 1926; Pf Trio no.1, 1927; Str Qt no.3, 1932; Str Qt no.4, 1946; Pf Qnt, 1954, rev. 1962; Variation on the Ukrainian Folk Song 'Chy ya v luzi ne kalyna bula', ww qt, 1957, Pf Trio no.2, 1959; Theme and Variation, hp qt, 1959; Concert-Scherzo, vn, pf, 1965; Str Qt no.5, 1965; Str Qt no. 6, 1970

Film and TV scores, incid music, choral works, 5 musical comedies

WRITINGS

Estetychni osnovy instrumentovky [The aesthetic principals of instrumentation] (Kiev, 1972)

Mysteztvo instrumentovky [The art of instrumentation] (Kiev, 1972)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M.R. Cherkashyna: 'Dmytro Klebanov', Ukraïns'ke muzykoznavstvo, iii (1968), 126–31

I.L. Zolotovytska: Dmytro Klebanov (Kiev, 1980)

VIRKO BALEY

Klebe, Giselher (b Mannheim, 28 June 1925). German composer. He attended the Berlin Conservatory (1940–43), where he studied the violin, the viola and composition (with Kurt von Wolfurt). In 1946, after military service and internment as a prisoner of war, he married Lore Schiller, who later wrote the librettos for some of his operas. He continued his composition studies with Rufer and Blacher in Berlin (1946–51) and worked for radio until 1947, when he devoted himself to composition full-time. He was appointed to a post at the Detmold Musikhochschule in 1957 (professor 1962). His many honours include membership in the West Berlin Akademie für Künste (from 1964).

During the 1950s Klebe was among the leading avant-garde composers of the Darmstadt and Donaueschingen schools. His 13 operas completed after 1951 established him as one of the leading operatic composers of the postwar period. Taking his inspiration less from contemporary musico-dramatic trends than from the ideals of 19th- and early 20th-century Italian opera, particularly Verdi, all of his librettos are based on literary texts. With his first opera, Die Räuber (1952–6), from Schiller's play of the same name, he began to relax the dogmatic grip that serialism had held on his earlier compositions. Employing two central note-rows, one with closed intervals, the other widely spaced, he represented the constructive and destructive elements of the plot. A large orchestra, which includes parts for harpsichord, amplified guitar and a vast array of percussion instruments, underpins the musical argument, often employing strict contrapuntal forms such as canon, ricercare and fugue. Despite this complexity of musical language, Die Räuber, like many of the later dramatic works, is in essence a traditional 'number' opera.

Over the decades, Klebe developed a musical language in which the interval structure and the timbral voicing of chords were linked. Chords with symmetrical interval structures became characteristic, often connected by chromatic part-writing and by specifics of instrumentation, a practice similarly able to accommodate tonal harmonies and melodies. He also experimented with types of formal organization growing out of Blacher's concept of 'variable metres'. His connection and extension of Schoenberg's and Blacher's compositional techniques, as well as his integration of tonal and serial compositional materials in such works as Jacobowsky und der Oberst (1964–5), constitute his primary contributions to post World War II composition.

Klebe's symphonic writing, comprising six symphonies and many shorter orchestral works, represents another important side of his compositional oeuvre. In his instrumental works he has avoided extremes and employed modern techniques only with great restraint and discretion. Notable among his orchestral compositions are Zwitschermaschine (1949–50), which first brought him to prominence, the Two Nocturnes (1950–51), the Adagio and Fugue (1961), Orpheus (1975–6), Lied (1985) and the Third (1966), Fifth (1976–7) and Sixth (1996) symphonies. Works for the piano became increasingly important in his output after 1990.

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE

Ops: Die Räuber (4, G. Klebe, after F. von Schiller), op.25, 1952–6, Düsseldorf, 1957, rev. 1962; Die tödlichen Wünsche (3, G. Klebe, after H. de Balzac: La peau de chagrin), op.27, 1956–7, Düsseldorf, 1959; Die Ermordung Cäsers (1, G. Klebe, after W. Shakespeare, trans. A.W. Schlegel), op.32, 1959, Essen, 1959; Alkmene (3, G. Klebe, after H. von Kleist), op.36, 1959–61, Berlin, 1961; Figaro lässt sich scheiden (2, G. Klebe and L. Klebe, after Ö. von Horvath), op.40, 1962–3, Hamburg, 1963; Jacobowsky und der Oberst (4, L. Klebe after F. Werfel), op.49, 1964–5, Hamburg, 1965; Das Märchen von der schönen Lilie (2, L. Klebe, after J.W. von Goethe), op.55, 1967–8, Schwetzingen, 1969; Ein wahrer Held (3, L. Klebe, after J.M. Synge: The Playboy of the Western World), op.69, 1972–4, Zürich, 1975; Das Mädchen aus Domrémy (2, G. Klebe and L. Klebe, after Schiller), op.72, 1974–6, Stuttgart, 1976; Das Rendezvous (L. Klebe, after M. Soschtschenko), op.78, 1977, Hanover, 1977; Der Jüngste Tag (3, L. Klebe, after Horvath), op.82, 1978–80, Mannheim, 1980; Die Fastnachtsbeichte (2, L. Klebe, after C. Zuckmayer), op.90, 1982–3, Darmstadt, 1983; Gervaise Macquart (L. Klebe) op.119, 1993–5, Düsseldorf, 1995

Ballets: Pas de trois, op.11, 1951; Signale (T. Gsovsky), op.21, 1955; Fleurenville (Gsovsky), op.24, 1956; Menagerie (Gsovsky, after F. Wedekind: Lulu), op.31, 1958; Das Testament (F. Villon, choreog. I. Keres), op.61, 1970–71

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Con moto, op.2, 1948; Divertissement joyeux, op.5, 1949; Die Zwitschermaschine, op.7, 1949–50; 2 Nocturnes, op.10, 1950–51; Sym., op.12, 42 str, 1951; Sym., op.16, 1952–3; Rhapsodie, op.17, 1953; Moments musicaux, op.19, 1954; Adagio and Fugue, op.37, 1961; Miserere nobis, mass, op.45, wind, 1964, arr. org, 1971; Sym. no.3, op.52, 1966; Scene und Arie, op.43, 1968; Conc., op.64, hpd + elecs, orch, 1971; Orpheus, op.73, 1975–6; Sym. no.5, op.75, 1976–7; La tomba di Igor Strawinsky, ob + ob

d'amore + eng hn, str, pf, 1978; Org Conc., op.85, 1979–80; Cl Conc., op.92, 1984; Umbria verde, op.93, wind, 1984; Lied, op.94, 1985; Notturno, op.97, 1987; Soirée, op.96, trbn, chbr orch, 1987; Hp Conc., op.98, 1987–8; Vc Conc., op.99, 1989–90; Nachtgesänge, op.102, bassett hn, str, 1990; Divertimento, op.105, 1991; Trauermusik, op.106, 1991; Play-Up, op.121, big band, 1996; Sym. no.6, op.120, 1996; Fantasie für Sonja, op.124, 1997

Chbr and solo inst: Sonata, op.8, vn, 1950; Str Qt no.1, op.9, 1950; Sonata, op.14, vn, pf, 1952; Pf Trio 'Elegia appassionata', op.22, 1955; Sonata no.2, op.20, vn, 1955; Studie, op.30, 11 perc, 1956; 9 duettini, op.39, fl, pf, 1962; Str Qt no.2, op.42, 1963; Concerto a cinque, op.50, hp, db, pf, hpd, perc, 1965; Al rovescio, op.67, fl, hp, pf, perc, 1972; Nenia, op.70, vc, 1974; Alborada, op.77, hp, 1977; Der dunkle Gedanke, op.84, cl/bassett hn, pf, 1979; Str Qt no.3, op.87, 1981; Quattrofonia, op.89, 2 pf, 2 perc, 1981–2; Sonata, op.95, hn, pf, 1985–6 [after Beethoven: Sonata, op.27/2]; Stufen, op.123, a fl, vc, pf, 1996; Capriccio, op.128, vn, 1998

Kbd (solo pf, unless otherwise stated): Sonata, op.4, 2 pf, 1948–9; Wiegenlieder für Christinchen, op.13, 1952; 4 Inventionen, op.26; 3 Romanzen, op.43, 1963; Introitus, aria ed alleluja, op.47, org, 1964; Passacaglia, op.56, org, 1968; Fantasie und Lobpreisung, op.58, org, 1970; Surge aquilo, et veni, auster, op.60, org, 1970; Variationen über ein Thema von Hector Berlioz, op.59, org, perc, 1970; 9 Klavierstücke für Sonja, op.76, 1973–7; 5 chants sans paroles, op.80, hpd, perc, 1978; Feuersturz, op.91, 1983; Glockentürme, op.103, pf 4 hands, 1990; Der Schrei, op.109, accdn, perc, 1992; Nachklang, op.111, 2 pf, 1993; Zornige Lieder ohne Worte, op.118, 1994

El-ac: o. O. Interferenzen, 1955

VOCAL

Choral: Enzensberger-Zyklus (H.M. Enzensberger), op.34, Bar, chorus, orch, 1960; Stabat mater, op.46, S, Mez, C, chorus, orch, 1964; Gebet einer armen Seele (mass), op.51, 4vv chorus, org, 1966; Choral und Te Deum, op.79, S, chorus, orch, 1977–8; Weihnachtsoratorium, op.101, Mez, Bar, spkr, chorus, orch, 1989; Warum hat die Sonne einen Aschenrand (orat), op.104, 4–16vv, 2 pf, perc, 1991

Other vocal: Römische Elegien (J.W. von Goethe), op.15, spkr, db, pf, hpd, 1952; Raskolnikows Traum (after F.M. Dostoyevsky), op.23, S, cl, orch, 1955–6; Beuge dich, du Menschenseele, op.71, medium v, org, 1957–77; 5 Lieder (J.F. von Eichendorff, F. Hebbel, A. Platen, N. Lenau and Novalis), op.38, medium v, pf/orch, 1961–2; 3 Lieder (F. Hölderlin), op.74, high v, pf, 1975–6; Song Cycle (P. Härtling), op.113, T, pf, 1993; Der Flörsheimer Wald (Härtling), op.125, T, org, 1997; Mir träumte, ich müsste Abschied nehmen (G. Grass), op.127, 1v, 7 insts, 1998

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO (E. Levi) [incl. further bibliography]

W.-E. von Lewinski: 'Giselher Klebe', Die Reihe, iv (1958), 89–97; Eng. trans. in Die Reihe, iv (1960), 89–97

W.-E. von Lewinski: ' 'Der Dramatiker Giselher Klebe', Melos, xxviii (1961), 4–7

H.H. Stuckenschmidt: 'Giselher Klebe', Die grossen Komponisten unseres Jahrhunderts: Deutschland, Mitteleuropa (Munich, 1971), 188–96

W. Salmen: 'Die Zwitschemaschine: zu gleichnamigen Werken von Paul Klee und Giselher Klebe', NZM, Jg.147, no.6 (1986), 14–18

M. Rentzsch: Giselher Klebe: Werkverzeichnis 1947–95 (Kassel, 1996)

MICHAEL HERBERT RENTZSCH (WITH ERIK LEVI)

Kleber, Leonhard (b Göppingen, *c*1495; d Pforzheim, 4 March 1556). German organist. He matriculated at Heidelberg University in 1512, and was vicar-choral and organist in Horb am Neckar from 1516 to 1517 and in Esslingen am Neckar from 1517 to 1521. From 1521 until his death he was organist at the collegiate and parish church in Pforzheim where he also had a living. In 1541 the Margrave of Baden procured for him a benefice in the hospital church in Baden-Baden. To judge from his large number of pupils, Kleber must have been a much sought-after organ teacher.

Kleber is known chiefly for the 332-page organ tablature which he compiled between 1521 and 1524 in Pforzheim (D-Bim Mus.40026, ed. in EDM, 1st ser., xci–xcii, 1987). Several scribes were involved in copying the 112 items, of which only a few can be identified as original compositions: in most cases they are adaptations of vocal models. Whereas the first section of the tablature contains pieces to be played on manuals, the second section contains arrangements which also use the pedals. The repertory is the normal one for tablatures of the period, and includes religious and secular song settings, arrangements of motets, some settings of dance tunes, free compositions and one didactic piece. Most pieces give no indication either of the composer or of the arranger, but vocal models for a number of the arrangements are by Brumel, Josquin, Heinrich Finck, Hayne van Ghizeghem, Hofhaimer, Isaac, Obrecht, La Rue and Senfl. In addition there are compositions by Conrad Brumann, Hans Buchner, Othmar Luscinius, Jörg Scharpff and Utz Steigleder. It is not certain whether Kleber was a composer as well as an arranger (Kotter may also have arranged some of the pieces). From a historical point of view the most interesting section of the manuscript is that containing the free compositions, for it shows an early stage in the development of independent instrumental music. Both the repertory and the method of adaptation in Kleber's organ tablature reflect the south-west German organ and keyboard style at the beginning of the Reformation.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ApelG

H. Loewenfeld: Leonhard Kleber und sein Orgeltabulaturbuch als Beitrag zur Geschichte der Orgelmusik im beginnenden XVI. Jahrhundert (Berlin, 1897/R)

H.J. Moser: Paul Hofhaimer (Stuttgart and Berlin, 1929, rev., enlarged 2/1966) [incl. edns of some pieces]

K. Kotterba: Die Orgeltabulatur des Leonhard Kleber (diss., U. of Freiburg, 1958)

MANFRED SCHULER

Klecki, Pawel. See KLETZKI, PAUL.

Kleczyński, Jan (b Janiewicze, Volhynia, 8 June 1837; d Warsaw, 15 Sept 1895). Polish writer on music, pianist, teacher and composer. He studied the piano with Ignacy Krzyżanowski, and from 1859 studied at the Paris Conservatoire with Bazin and Carafa (theory and composition) and with Marmontel (piano). In 1866 he returned to Warsaw, and gave concerts in the capital and in other Polish towns; he taught the piano, first privately and later (1887–9) at the Music Institute in Warsaw (now the Conservatory). He was also a co-founder of the Warsaw Music Society and later a member of its administrative body and music director. He composed three chamber works, some piano works and songs.

Kleczyński's writings played an essential role in popularizing music in Poland. He published more than 1700 reviews and articles on music in a large number of Polish journals, and from 1880 until his death was editor-in-chief of Echo muzyczne (later renamed Echo muzyczne, teatralne i artystyczne), the most respected Polish music journal of the time. As well as reviewing concerts and operas, he wrote profiles of composers, characterizing their creative work, essays on music history and studies of the Polish folk music of the Podhale (Tatra Mountains) region. A number of his writings were devoted to Chopin and his music, including discussions of interpretation and the earliest writing about his teaching methods. Kleczyński also edited a 12-volume edition of Chopin's works (Warsaw, 1882), collected and published folksongs from Podhale, which increased Polish composers' interest in the music of the region and translated books on music into Polish. Kleczyński's writings provide very important source material for the history of Polish musical culture of the period. He was one of the most important Polish writers on music of the second half of the 19th century.

WRITINGS

'Szopen jako nauczyciel fortepianu' [Chopin as piano teacher], Bluszcz, no.5, (1869), 35–6
'Fryderyk Szopen' [Frederic Chopin], Tygodnik ilustrowany (1870), no.106, 13–14; no.107, 32–3; no.108, 42–3
'Fortepian i jego znaczenie w historii muzyki' [The piano and its significance in music history], Bluszcz (1875), no.14, 109–10; no.15, 118–20; no.16, 126–7; no.17, 134–5
'Ryszard Wagner' [Richard Wagner], Ateneum (1876), ii, 517–36; iii, 222–49
O wykonywaniu dzieł Chopina [On the performance of Chopin's works] (Warsaw, 1879; Eng. trans., 1896, 6/1913, as How to Play Chopin; Fr. trans., 1880); ed. Z. Drzewiecki (Kraków, 1959)
'Maciej Kamieński', Echo muzyczne, iv (1880), 3–4, 9–10, 25–6, 33–5
'Kilka słów o celu i treści sztuki' [A few words on the aim and content of the arts], Echo muzyczne, iv (1880), 142–4, 149–50
'F. Liszt jako kompozytor' [Liszt as composer], Echo muzyczne, v (1881), 129–30, 137–9, 147–8, 155–7, 162–4, 178–80
'Ryszard Wagner' [Richard Wagner], Echo muzyczne, vi (1882), 129–30, 137–9, 145–8, 155–7, 161–3, 169–71, 185–9
'Józef Wieniawski', Echo muzyczne i teatralne, i (1883–4), 357–8, 370–72
'Zakopane i jego pieśni' [The Zakopane region and its songs], Echo muzyczne i teatralne, i (1883–4), 419–21, 429–30, 447–8, 468–70
'Wycieczka po melodie' [Excursion for melodies], Echo muzyczne i teatralne, i (1883–4), 567–9, 588–90, 610–11, 631–2, 653 only Chopin w celniejszych swoich utworach [Chopin in his more important works] (Warsaw, 1886; Eng. trans., 1896, as Chopin's Greater Works …: How they should be understood)
'Franciszek Liszt', Echo muzyczne, teatralne i artystyczne, iii (1886), 311–13, 321–4
'Melodie Zakopiańskie i Podhalskie' [The melodies of the Zakopane and Podhale regions], Pamiętnik towarzystwa tatrzańskiego, xii (1888), 39–102
'Muzyka w domu: kilka słów o technice fortepianowej' [Music in the home: a few words on piano technique], Echo muzyczne, teatralne i artystyczne, vi (1889), 502–4, 520–21, 617–18; vii (1890), 66–8, 200–01
'O estetyce libretta muzycznego' [On the aesthetics of the musical libretto], Echo muzyczne, teatralne i artystyczne, ix (1892), 562–5
Słownik wyrazów używanych w muzyce [Dictionary of expressions used in music] (Warsaw, 1893)
'Józef hrabia Wielhorski' [Józef Count Wielhorski], Echo muzyczne, teatralne i artystyczne, xi (1894), 381–3, 394 only, 406 only, 419–20

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Woźna: 'Jan Kleczyński: pisarz, pedagog, kompozytor' [writer, pedagogue and composer], Szkice o kulturze muzycznej XIX wieku, ed. Z. Chechlińska, iii (Warsaw, 1976), 130–323 [with Eng. summary, chronicle of life, detailed list of works and writings]
J.J. Eigeldinger: Introduction and commentary to F. Chopin: Esquisses pour une méthode de piano (Paris, 1993)

ZOFIA CHECHLIŃSKA

Kleczyński [Kletzinsky], Jan Baptysta (b Freistadt [now Karviná], 14 April 1756; d Vienna, 6 Aug 1828). Polish violinist, composer and conductor. He studied composition, probably in Poland, and was a violinist and director of the court orchestra of Marie Josefa Breuner in Venice between *c*1786 and *c*1792. During the next two years he worked at the court of the Hungarian aristocrat Anton Grassalkovics von Gÿarack in Bratislava and Vienna. From the beginning of 1795 he lived permanently in Vienna, and in 1796 was accepted into the Tonkünstler-Societät. From 1803 until his death he was a member of its committee, and in the years 1811–25 was also its principal violinist. In December 1801 he became a violinist in the Vienna Hofmusikkapelle, where he remained to the end of his life. He also worked in the orchestras of the Imperial theatres, the Hofburgtheater and the Kärtnertor-theater, conducting concerts and ballet performances.

Kleczyński was reputedly a gifted musician. His music for stringed instruments demands a high level of technical proficiency, in particular the sets of variations that were surely composed for himself and for his brother Franciszek, also a violinist (d Vienna, before 1828). He tended to imitate models of the Baroque – as in the Concertino – and of early Classicism, and had an instinct for chamber music. His works exhibit the atmosphere of Viennese music, and also the influence of Polish music.

WORKS

Orch: Concertino no.1, C, vn, ob, orch, 1839, A-M
Chbr: 3 duetti, A, D, G, op.1, 3 duetti, B♭, c, F, op.2, both 2 vn (Vienna, 1793); Duet, 2 vn, A, op.1 (Kraków, 1953); Duet, 2 vn, B♭, op.2 (Kraków, 1951); 22 variazioni, vn, va, G, op.3 (Vienna, 1793); 12 variations sur l'air O mein lieber Augustin, 2 vn (Vienna, 1798)
Concert-variations sur l'air Freut euch des Lebens (H.G. Nägeli), 2 vn, B♭, op.5 (Vienna, 1798); 3 duos, 2 vn, C, F, A, op.8 (Vienna, 1808); 3 trios, op.4, i: C, G, D, ii: E♭, B♭, A, both vn, va, vc (Vienna, 1797)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (H. Jancik)
Wiener Hof-Theater Almanach (Vienna, 1804–16)
L. Köchel: Die kaiserliche Hof-Musikkapelle in Wien von 1543 bis 1867 (Vienna, 1869)
P. Pohl: Denkschrift aus Anlass des hundertjährigen Bestehens der Tonkünstler-Societät (Vienna, 1871)
A. Nowak-Romanowicz: Klasycyzm, 1750–1830, Historia muzyki polskiej, iv (Warsaw, 1995)
B. Chmara-Żaczkiewicz: 'Some Viennese Sources to the Biography of Jan Bapthysha Kleczyński', Musicologist Facing Music Works: Essays in Honor of Dr. Elżbieta Dzięb owska (Kraków, 1999), 49–62

BARBARA CHMARA-ŻACZKIEWICZ

Klee, Bernhard (b Schleiz, 19 April 1936). German conductor. A chorister at the Thomaskirche in Leipzig, he later studied piano, composition and conducting at Cologne, where he joined the music staff of the Opera and made his conducting début with Die Zauberflöte (1960). He held conducting appointments at Berne, Salzburg, Oberhausen and Hanover, and was music director at Lübeck from 1966 to 1973, by which time he had a repertory of over 80 operas. His British début was with the Hamburg Staatsoper at the Edinburgh Festival in 1969 conducting Der fliegende Holländer, and his Covent Garden début was with Così fan tutte in 1972; he made his American concert début, with the New York PO, in 1974. Klee was chief conductor of the North German RO from 1976 to 1979 (a post he resumed in 1991), Generalmusikdirektor of the Düsseldorf SO, 1977–87, and chief guest conductor with the BBC PO, 1985–9; he has also conducted the Bavarian State Opera in Munich. Klee has given many first performances of modern music, including works by Hans Jürgen von Bose, Wolfgang Fortner, Volker David Kirchner and Henze; among his recordings are Lortzing's Der Wildschütz, Mozart's Zaïde and works by Zemlinsky. His performances are notable for their secure control and assiduous attention to musical character. He often appeared in recital as accompanist to his wife, the soprano Edith Mathis.

NOËL GOODWIN

Kleen, Johan Christoph (fl mid-18th century). Danish composer. He was active as an all-round freelance musician in Copenhagen: he played the violin for a couple of seasons in the orchestra of the Italian opera, taught singing and music to actresses, composed and accompanied arias which one of the dancers sang in the ballets, and arranged and copied music for the earliest Danish operas. An Italian opera company had been called to Copenhagen by King Frederik V in 1747 but by 1756 it was apparent that opera in a foreign language did not command sufficient public support. A musically interested Norwegian dramatist in Copenhagen, Niels Krog Bredal (1733–78), was convinced that it would be possible to use the Danish language for opera 'if only one took sufficient care, and especially avoided the use of foreign words'. In this venture he may have been inspired by Giuseppe Sarti, the most successful of the Italian composers who settled in Denmark; in any case Bredal's first Danish opera, Gram og Signe, performed by students late in 1756, used music borrowed from various of Sarti's compositions for the arias, while the music of the recitatives was composed by Jacob Soltau, of whom nothing else is known. Gram og Signe was repeated twice in February 1757 and met with such encouragement that for the king's birthday on 31 March 1757 a second Danish opera by Bredal, Eremiten ('a musical pastorale'), was ready for performance. The recitatives were by Kleen, who from this time on became Bredal's musical collaborator. He composed the recitatives for Bredal's subsequent intermezzos and for Den tvivlraadige hyrde ('The confused shepherd', 1758); he also wrote a couple of the arias. With En musikalsk prologus (1759) Kleen made his one and only attempt to compose the music for a dramatic work (by Bredal) entirely by himself. It was not a success and the experiment with opera in Danish was temporarily abandoned. In 1762 a tax record refers to Kleen as a 'teacher of music', after which no more is heard of him.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Thrane: Fra hofviolonernes tid (Copenhagen, 1908)

T. Krogh: 'De første forsøg paa at skabe en opera i det danske sprog', Aarbog for musik 1922, 123–58

T. Krogh: 'Aeldre dansk teatermusik', Musikhistorisk arkiv, i (1931), 1–100

JOHN BERGSAGEL

Klega, Miroslav (b Ostrava, 6 March 1926, d Ostrava, 25 June 1993). Czech composer. He studied composition at the Prague Conservatory (1942–4) with Křička and Hlobil and at the Bratislava Conservatory with Suchoň and Cikker (1946–50). After working as a music editor for Czech radio in Bratislava (1950–52) he returned to Ostrava as branch secretary of the Czech Composers' Union (1952–3) and dramaturg of the opera (1953–5). He was then professor of composition (1955–67) and director (1967–73) of the Ostrava Conservatory. In 1973 he was appointed music director of Czech radio in Ostrava. As a composer he was initially influenced by dodecaphony, by Ravel (in the piano cycle Zbojnické nápady) and by the concision and parody of Stravinsky's music; this last trait is particularly evident in the orchestral suite Pantomima, written for Stravinsky's 80th birthday. In 1966 Klega attended the Darmstadt summer courses and his later works reveal a familiarity with avant-garde techniques: the Concerto-partita (1965) left functional harmony behind for serialism. Following his retirement from Ostrava radio in 1986, Klega continued to compose, wrote a semi-autobiographical novel and, in the early 1990s, became a Member of Parliament.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Černá země [Black Earth], 1951; Noční slavnosti [Nocturnal Celebrations], 1956; Sym., 1959; Pantomima, 1963; Conc.-partita, vn, orch, 1965; Výpověď osamělého pěšáka [The Confession of a Lone Pedestrian] (Klega), spkr, orch, 1969; Příběhy a zázraky [Stories and Miracles], 1981

Vocal: Songs (J. Cocteau), A, 8 insts, 1996; 5 Madrigals (V. Dyk), male chorus, 1999

Chbr and solo inst: Zbojnické nápady [Brigands' Raids], pf, 1953; Nocturne, pf, 1958; Concertino, str qt, 1961

Music for the theatre, cinema, radio and television

Principal publishers: Panton, State Publishing House

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS

Č. Gregor: Miroslav Klega: tvorba 1953–1965 (Ostrava, 1966)

K. Steinmetz: 'Miroslav Klega: Výpověď osamělého pěšáka' [Miroslav Klega: The Confession of a Lone Pedestrian], HRo, xxx (1977), 174–6

Čeští skladatelé současnosti [Czech composers of today] (Prague, 1985)

K. Steinmetz: 'Nekonvenčnost konvenčního aneb kvalita zralosti' [The unconventionality of the conventional or the quality of the mature], OM, xviii (1986), 119–22

I. Stolářík: Miroslav Klega: fantasta, intelektuál, muzikant (Ostrava, 1998)

OLDŘICH PUKL/KAREL STEINMETZ

Kleiber, Carlos (b Berlin, 3 July 1930). Austrian conductor of German birth, son of ERICH KLEIBER. After moving with his parents to Buenos Aires in 1935, he spent much of his early life attending residential schools in Argentina and Chile. He composed and sang from an early age, learnt the piano and the timpani and studied chemistry at the Technische Hochschule, Zürich (1949–50). In 1950 he returned to Buenos Aires to complete his musical training, and the following year he volunteered as a répétiteur at the Gärtnerplatztheater in Munich, making his conducting début in 1954 in Potsdam under the pseudonym of Karl Keller. After briefly coaching at the Vienna Volksoper, he moved to the Deutsche Oper am Rhein in Düsseldorf as répétiteur in 1956, becoming conductor in 1958, the year he made his formal début. He worked at the Zürich Opera (1964–6) and then as first Kapellmeister at the Württembergisches Staatstheater in Stuttgart (1966–8). For the following ten years he had a guest contract at the Staatsoper in Munich, and continued to conduct occasionally in Stuttgart, but held no more permanent positions.

Kleiber made his British début with Wozzeck at the Edinburgh Festival (1966). He conducted Tristan und Isolde for his début with the Vienna Staatsoper (1973) and at Bayreuth (1974), choosing Der Rosenkavalier for his débuts at Covent Garden and La Scala (both in 1974). In 1977 he made his US début with Otello at the San Francisco Opera. Débuts with all of the major orchestras soon followed, including the Chicago SO (1979) and Berlin PO (1982). He made his début at the Metropolitan with La bohème (1988), and in 1989 he conducted the Vienna PO in its New Year concerts. He was the first choice of the Berlin PO to succeed Karajan. Characteristically, he declined the post.

Kleiber's elusiveness is legendary. Liable to cancel at short notice, he works rarely and only when an exacting set of circumstances is met. He took 34 rehearsals for his first Wozzeck, in Munich, and 17 for a Covent Garden La bohème, six of which were for orchestra alone. Unlike other opera conductors, he routinely attends all of the early rehearsals. His rehearsal techniques rely on humour, profound knowledge of the score, spontaneous inspiration, 'Kleibergrams' (little memos to players), closely marked parts, a precise baton technique and a remarkable gift for languages. He is fluent in English, French, German, Italian, Slovenian and Spanish, and players remark on his unique ability to transfer the sound he desires into an immediate and memorable image. While his rehearsals have been closed in recent years, there is a revealing film from 1970 with the Stuttgart RSO.

Carlos Kleiber, 1974

Despite an immense knowledge of a wide repertory, he has drastically limited his performances and recordings since the 1970s. A few symphonies by Beethoven, Brahms and Schubert (with the Vienna PO), La traviata, Rosenkavalier, Tristan und Isolde, Der Freischütz and a handful of other standard operas make up almost his entire discography. However, every item of this recorded legacy has received almost unanimous acclaim.

Kleiber's unique reputation is founded on his intellectual mastery and extraordinary emotional range, communicated with unparalleled intensity and control. In the words of Harvey Sachs (Atlantic, February 1988), 'He fights to realize every detail of a work and then fights still harder to obliterate all traces of constraint . . . the intensely emotional elements in his music-making usually function in perfect accord with his questioning intelligence and magnificent grasp of musical architecture'. He has drawn similar praise from fellow-conductors, among them Haitink, Bernstein and Karajan.

In 1980 Kleiber became an Austrian citizen. A recusant from musical politics, he travels with no retinue, has never hired a media agent nor given an interview, and conducts all his own negotiations for his concerts, films and recordings.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Matheopoulos: Maestro: Encounters with Conductors of Today (London, 1982), 441–66

J. von Rhein: 'The Unpredictable Carlos Kleiber', Ovation, iv/8 (1983–4), 10–13, 47

J. Tolansky: 'Carlos Kleiber, Inspirer of Performers: a Personal Memoir', Musical Life, i (1990), 16–17

JOSÉ BOWEN

Kleiber, Erich (b Vienna, 5 Aug 1890; d Zürich, 27 Jan 1956). Austrian conductor. He was educated in Vienna, where he studied the violin, and he was deeply impressed by performances at the Court Opera during the last years of Mahler's directorship. In 1908 he went to Prague to study philosophy and the history of the arts at the university, and music at the conservatory; his early attempts at composing were rewarded in 1911 with a prize for a symphonic poem. That year he was appointed chorus master at the German Theatre, Prague, but he moved to Darmstadt in 1912, where he conducted at the court theatre for seven years. Further appointments followed at Barmen-Elberfeld (now Wuppertal) in 1919, Düsseldorf in 1921 and Mannheim in 1922. An outstanding success on his Berlin début in 1923, with Frida Leider and Friedrich Schorr in Fidelio, led to his appointment, announced only three days later, as Generalmusikdirektor of the Berlin Staatsoper in succession to Leo Blech. Kleiber's Berlin appointment was exceptionally productive. In 1924 he conducted Janáček's Jenůfa in a production regarded as decisive for the composer's wider success. Krenek's Die Zwingburg was presented in the same year, followed in 1925 by the première of Berg's Wozzeck. Other new works he performed included Schreker's Der singende Teufel (1928) and Milhaud's Christophe Colombe (1930), and he also conducted Wagner's Das Liebesverbot and various operettas. Unwilling to compromise with the Nazi regime's cultural policy, however, he resigned from Berlin in 1934 (4 December) after the political embargo placed on such operas as Berg's Lulu, but he conducted the première of Berg's Lulu Suite at his last concert before his resignation. He did not return to Berlin until 1951.

During the 1920s and 1930s Kleiber toured widely as a guest conductor, visiting the USSR in 1927, making his American début with the New York PO in 1930 and his British début with the LSO in 1935. He was a frequent visitor to Amsterdam, Brussels and other European cities, and in 1938 appeared for the first time at Covent Garden conducting Der Rosenkavalier with Lotte Lehmann. Meanwhile he had begun to make a new home in Buenos Aires, where he had first appeared in 1926. He took charge of the German opera seasons at the Teatro Colón there between 1937 and 1949, and virtually made a second career as a pioneering conductor in countries like Chile, Uruguay, Mexico and Cuba. After the war he resumed his European activities, first with the LPO in 1948, and on a regular contract at Covent Garden from 1950 to 1953. There, among other operas, he conducted the first stage production in Britain of Wozzeck in 1952, and his presence was of crucial importance to the development of the postwar Covent Garden company. He also conducted a memorable production of Les vêpres siciliennes with Callas at the 1951 Maggio Musicale, Florence (his first opera in Italy), and at the same festival he gave the first-ever complete performance of Haydn's Orfeo ed Euridice (also with Callas). Plans for his appointment to the Vienna Staatsoper did not materialize, and his only operatic engagement in his native city was Der Rosenkavalier in 1951, when the company was housed at the Theater an der Wien. His reappointment was announced to the Berlin Staatsoper, now in the eastern zone of the city, but before taking up the post in 1955 he resigned (16 March) in protest against political intrusion.

Erich Kleiber

Kleiber rehearsed with an almost fanatical ardour and aimed at the utmost possible precision. He was outstanding as a conductor of Mozart, Beethoven and Richard Strauss, refusing to indulge in romantic interpretation as a means of self-projection, ignoring false performing traditions and studying the scores assiduously. He never lost his whole view of a work, and his approach was strictly non-sentimental. He won the lasting devotion of orchestral players as well as singers, and as Russell well said 'there was no such thing, to him, as an unimportant musician'. Kleiber's admired recordings of Der Rosenkavalier, Le nozze di Figaro and Beethoven's symphonies all demonstrate his extraordinary rhythmic control and dynamic flexibility.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Blaukopf: Grosse Dirigenten (Teufen, 1953, 2/1957; Eng. trans., 1955)

D. Webster: 'Erich Kleiber', Tempo, no.39 (1956), 5–6

J. Russell: Erich Kleiber, a Memoir (London, 1957/R)

W. Reich: 'Erich Kleiber und Alban Berg', SMz, xcviii (1958), 374–7

F.F. Clough and G.J. Cuming: 'Erich Kleiber: a Diskography', Gramophone Record Review, no.73–84 (1959–60), 117, 121

J.L. Holmes: Conductors: a Record Collector's Guide (London, 1988), 135–8

GERHARD BRUNNER/R

Klein, Bernhard (Joseph) (b Cologne, 6 March 1793; d Berlin, 9 Sept 1832). German composer. The son of a wine merchant who occasionally played the violin in theatre orchestras, he was essentially self-taught in music. In 1812 he was briefly in Paris, where Choron helped him but Cherubini offered him no encouragement; after six months he returned to Cologne to participate as a conductor and a composer in amateur concerts held in the cathedral. In 1816 he visited Heidelberg, where he profited from the acquaintance of Thibaut; Thibaut recognized Klein's talent but was unsuccessful in obtaining a position for him in the city. Klein was sent officially to Berlin in 1818 to observe C.F. Zelter's pedagogical methods and to apply them at Cologne Cathedral. He decided to remain in Berlin and became associated with the recently founded Musikalische Bildungsanstalt; he was also appointed singing teacher at the University of Berlin. After his marriage in 1824 he spent a year in Rome, where he met Santini, who helped him in his studies of earlier music. He returned to his official posts in Berlin but, numbed by the death of his wife in 1829, retired from all of them the following year.

Called 'the Palestrina of Berlin', Klein was recognized in Germany primarily as a choral composer. His works embody the musical ideals of his friend Thibaut, and his masses and oratorios draw on the style of Handel. In Berlin particularly he was known for his lieder, of which he wrote over 100; his favourite poet was Wilhelm Müller. Klein was concerned with clear prosody and set his song texts in a simple syllabic style for which he was later criticized by Schumann.

WORKS

(selective list)

SACRED VOCAL

Orats: Jephta, op.29, perf. Cologne, 1828; David, op.34, perf. Halle, 1830

Cants.: Hiob (Leipzig, 1822); Johanna Sebus (J.W. von Goethe), Worte des Glaubens (F. von Schiller), both mentioned in Koch

Mixed chorus: Geistliche Musik, 4vv, pf, op.12; Mag, 6vv, pf, op.13; 6 Responsorien, 4–6vv, op.17; Pater noster, 2 choruses, op.18; Mass, D, 4 solo vv, chorus, orch, op.28; Stabat mater, 4vv, org, op.30; Ky, 4vv, op.45; Miserere mei, 7vv (Elberfeld, 1836); Ave Maria, 4vv, pf ad lib (Leipzig, n.d.)
4 male vv: Ich danke dem Herrn, pf acc. op.4; Religiöse Gesänge, 8 bks, opp.22–7, 36–7; Salvum fac regem, op.43
Other: 4 geistliche Gesange, 1v, pf, op.2; Salve regina, S, 2 vn, va, b, op.3; Miserere mei, S, A, pf, op.21; Ps ix, A, org, op.39; 6 geistliche Lieder (F. von Novalis), 1v, pf, op.40; Mag, 1v, 2 vn, va, vc, b (Elberfeld, 1836); 5 geistliche Lieder, 1v, pf (Leipzig, n.d.)

SECULAR VOCAL

Ops: Ariadne (1), perf. Berlin, 1823; Dido (3, L. Rellstab), perf. Berlin, 1823
Choral: 5 Tafellieder, 4 male vv, op.14; Gesang der Geister über den Wassern (Goethe), 4 male vv, op.42
Other: Kinderlieder, 2vv, pf ad lib, op.35; 6 Terzette, 2 S, A, pf, op.44; *c*115 songs, 1v, pf: 9 as op.15 (Goethe), 3 as op.16 (J. von Eichendorff), 2 as op.28, 3 as op.31 (G. Schwab, A. von Platen), 4 as op.41 (Goethe), 5 as op.46, others in collections without op. nos.

INSTRUMENTAL

Pf: 3 sonatas, opp.1, 5, 7; Fantasia, op.8; Variations, op.9; 2 variation sets without op. nos.
Other: Variations, str qt, op.38; Sonata, pf 4 hands (Bonn, 1838)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Rellstab: Articles on Klein, NZM, iii (1835), 5–14; 57–84; 193–202
H. Truhn: 'Erinnerungen an Bernhard Klein', NZM, xi (1839), 61–3, 65–7, 69–70
W. Neumann: Zelter, Hummel, Klein, Die Componisten der neueren Zeit, xliv[a] (Kassel, 1857)
C. Koch: Bernhard Klein (Leipzig, 1902)
L. Parthey: Tagebücher aus der Biedermeierzeit, ed. B. Lepsius (Leipzig, 1928) [incl. diary entries of Klein's wife Lili Parthey]
E. Schenk: 'Klein und die Musik des Ostens', AMz, lxv (1938), 699–700
R. Sietz: 'Klein, Bernhard Joseph', Rheinische Musiker, i, ed. K.G. Fellerer (Cologne, 1960)
R. Polley: Anton Friedrich Justus Thibaut (AD 1772–1840) in seinen Selbstzeugnissen und Briefen (Frankfurt, 1982) [incl. letters to Klein]
D.L. Montgomery: 'From Biedermeier Berlin: the Parthey Diaries: Excerpts in Translation, with Commentary and Annotation', MQ, lxxiv (1990), 197–216
M. Zywietz: Adolf Bernhard Marx und das Oratorium in Berlin (Eisenach, 1996)
A. Jessulat: 'Bernhard Klein: Jephta', Oratorienführer, ed. S. Leopold and U. Scheideler (Stuttgart, 1999), 388–9

RICHARD D. GREEN

Klein, Fritz Heinrich (b Budapest, 2 Feb 1892; d Linz, 12 July 1977). Austrian composer and theorist. Klein enrolled in Schoenberg's seminar at the Schwarzwald School for one year before joining Berg in 1918 as his (to quote Berg) 'pupil, colleague, friend and advisor'. He prepared the piano-vocal score of Wozzeck and the piano reduction of Berg's Kammerkonzert as part of his tuition, and at this stage considered himself a writer on music as well as a composer. In 1932 Klein became an instructor of harmony, counterpoint and composition at the Bruckner-Konservatorium in Linz. His prodigious output began to decline in 1957, after he retired from this position.

Klein's only compositions of real interest, among his 200 essays in many instrumental and vocal genres, are several works from the 1920s that developed pre-compositional techniques remarkable for their time. Die Maschine: Eine extonale Selbstsatire op.1, the first and only composition he was able to publish, represents an early and particularly individual example of 12-note music. The title does not refer to the style mécanique, with which Klein had nothing in common aesthetically, but was an ironic allusion to his own self-conscious and severely determinist methods of composition. Although Krenek and Berg himself were also specifically concerned with interval constructions at roughly the same time, Klein's Die Maschine was the first piece of music to use an all-interval row – a series containing all 11 intervals as well as all 12 pitch classes. Klein discovered this series in verticalized form and dubbed it the Mutterakkord, deeming it 'the end of all possibilities in the area of chord-building in 12-semitone music'. Klein's interests soon came to encompass pitch-class sets as well as interval collections, decades before Georg Perle's and Allen Forte's writings. In his article 'Die Grenze der Halbtonwelt' (Die Musik, 1924–5), Klein systematically tabulated all 4095 possible pitch-class collections from the 12 sets consisting of only one pitch class to the one collection of all 12 pitch classes.

Schoenberg and his circle tended to ignore Klein, especially after his work began to alternate between atonal and explicitly tonal writing. It also seems that Klein's own theories were not influenced by the 12-note discoveries of Schoenberg and Hauer although he was acquainted with their work. He declared his independence from Schoenberg's methods in several bitter letters to Berg dating from 1922, wherein he describes Die Maschine as 'the first work in which a 12-note Grundgestalt appears, together with retrograde, inversion, mirror forms, transposition etc.'. Combining series of rhythms, intervals and pitch, Die Maschine anticipates 'total serial' techniques. The work departs from Schoenberg's 12-note practice in that Klein does not recognize the equivalence of pitch-class collections under transposition and inversion, and also gives little priority to the systematic circulation of the total chromatic.

Berg criticized his student for not developing his thematic material, and the sectionalization of Klein's structures is one reason why the music itself is pedantic and uninteresting. Klein's legacy rests not in his own compositions, but in his impact upon Berg's 12-note methods. Specifically, manuscript sources show that Berg was learning from his student's ideas concerning tonal allusions within a 12-note system, the systematic manipulation of order positions, and the systematic derivation of secondary rows.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Nostradamus (op), op.16, 1925; Das Gottesurteil (op), op.27, 1928; Die St. Jakobsfahrt (op), op.29, 1930–31; Der Joker (Faschingskomödie) (incid music), 1955
Orch: Die Maschine (Eine extonale Selbstsatire), op.1a, chbr orch, 1921; Zwölfklangphantasie, 1923 [destroyed]; Symphonische Variationen über ein Thema von Franz Schubert, op.25, 1928; Symphonischer Zyklus, op.53, 1936; Linz, op.54, 1936; Brucknerhaus, op.66, 1943–50; Heitere Ouvertüre, op.90, 1954; Wiener Dessert (Ein Gruss der scheidenden Generation), 1956; Walzervision, op.103, 1957; Ein musikalisches Fliessband, op.109, 1960
Choral and solo vocal: Neuer Frühling, op.34, 1v, vn, pf, 1930–31; Alte Reime, op.52, SATB, 1936; Männerchöre, op.58, TTBB, 1938; Liebesarie des Königs von Babylon, op.73, B, pf, 1951; Ein Lied für Werktätige, op.81, SATB, str, 1952; Seemannsballade, op.88, B, pf, 1954
Chbr and solo inst: Die Maschine: Eine extonale Selbstsatire, op.1, pf 4 hands, 1921 [version of op.1a]; 10 extonale Stücke, op.4, pf, 1921 [destroyed]; 5 Briefe (An Alban Berg), op.7, pf, 1922 [destroyed]; Variationen, op.14, 1924 [destroyed]; 3 Metamorphosen von Beethoven-Themen, op.19, pf, 1927; Sonatine, op.32, cl, 1930–31; Str Sextet, op.44, 1932; Scherzo, C, op.69, pf 4 hands, 1951; Pantonale Suite, op.71, pf, 1951; Es war einmal, romantisches Märchen, op.82, pf, str qt, 1952; Partita, op.86, cl, bn, vn, va, vc, pf, 1953; Variationen über den Mutterakkord (Ein letzter Versuch mit dem Zwölftonsystem), pf, ?1956 [inc.]; Diskussion des Tonalitätsprinzips mit der Zwölftönetheorie, op.111, pf, 1971; Musikalischer Bericht über die Begegnung des Zwölferprinzips mit romantischen Einfällen, op.113, pf, 1976 [inc.]

MSS in private collection, Klein-Nachlass, Linz

WRITINGS

'Alban Berg's "Wozzeck"', Musikblätter des Anbruch, v/Oct (1923), 216–19; Eng. trans. in D. Jarman: Wozzeck (Cambridge, 1989), 135–8

'Die Grenze der Halbtonwelt', Die Musik, xvii (1924–5), 281–6; Eng. trans. in Headlam

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Eimert: Grundlagen der musikalischen Reihentechnik (Vienna, 1964)

H. Oesch: 'Pioniere der Zwölftontechnik', Basler Studien zur Musikgeschichte, Forum Musicologica, i (Berne, 1975), 290–304

C. Baier: 'Fritz Heinrich Klein: der "Mutterakkord" im Werk Alban Bergs', ÖMz, xliv (1989), 585–600

D. Headlam: 'Fritz Heinrich Klein's "Die Grenze der Halbtonwelt" and Die Maschine', Theoria, vi (1992), 55–96

A. Ashby: 'Of Modell-Typen and Reihenformen: Berg, Schoenberg, F.H. Klein, and the Concept of Row Derivation', JAMS, xlviii (1995), 67–105

J.W. Bernard: 'Chord, Collection and Set in Twentieth-Century Theory', Music Theory in Concept and Practice, ed. J.M. Baker, D.W. Beach and J.W. Bernard (Rochester, NY, 1997), 11–51

ARVED ASHBY

Klein, Gideon (b Přerov, Moravia, 6 Dec 1919; d ?Fürstengrube, nr Katowice, Poland, end of Jan 1945). Moravian composer and pianist. His musical talent was promoted from an early age by the director of the Přerov municipal music school. When he was 12 he moved to Prague to study the piano with Ruzena Kurzova and in 1938 he became the star pupil of Vilém Kurz at the Prague, Conservatory. He enrolled at Karl University, Prague, to study musicology in 1939, also taking lessons in composition for a short time with Alois Hába at the Prague Conservatory. In 1940, however, because of his Jewish origins, he was expelled and denied permission to travel to London, where he had been granted a scholarship to the RAM. Until his deportation to Theresienstadt on 4 December 1941, he worked under the pseudonym Karel Vránek in small, avant-garde theatres in Prague.

During his first few months in Theresienstadt, Klein became an energetic agitator for artistic activities. After the foundation of the Freizeitgestaltung, a 'recreation organization' established for propaganda purposes, he arranged many concerts for which he composed, conducted and performed. He repeatedly encouraged his fellow prisoners, who included Pavel Haas, Hans Krása, Sigmund Schul and Viktor Ullmann, to continue composing. On 16 October 1944, in the company of many other members of the Freizeitgestaltung, he was transported to Auschwitz. As one of the youngest in the group he was sent to Fürstengrube near Katowice, where he was put to work in a coal mine. It is presumed that he was murdered there at the end of January 1945.

Klein's first compositions date from the period 1933–4. Most of the works written before his deportation were rediscovered in 1990; highly experimental in style, they include lieder and chamber music that makes use of both 12-note techniques and quarter-tone writing. In Theresienstadt he wrote primarily for specific performances. His expressionistic piano sonata, however, breaks through the confines of those surroundings. A number of his compositions remain missing.

WORKS

Inst: Malá suita [Little Suite], pf, 1933; 3 malé nápady [3 Little Inventions], fl, pf, 1934; 4 věty [4 Movts], str qt, 1936–8; Divertimento, 2 ob, 2 cl, 2 bn, 2 hn, 1939–40; Duo v systému 1/4-tónovém [Quarter-Tone Duo], vn, va, 1939–40; Str Qt, 1940–41; Duo, vn, vc, 1941; Fantasie a Fuga, str qt, 1942–3; Sonata, pf, 1943; Str Trio, 1944

Vocal: Cizinec [Stranger] (C.P. Baudelaire), 2vv, fl, vn, 1934; Skladba [Compositions] (O. Březina), 1v, vn, pf, 1934; Krev dětství [Blood of the Childhood] (F. Halas), medium v, pf, 1935; 4 věty [4 Movts] (Březina), op.5, 1v, str qt, 1935; Topol [The Poplar] (melodrama, anon.), 1v, pf, 1938; 3 písně [3 Songs] (J. Klaj, F. Hölderlin, J.W. von Goethe), high v, pf, 1940; Madrigal, 2 S, A, T, B, 1942; První hřích [First Fall] (trad.), male vv, 1942; Madrigal (Hölderlin), 2 S, A, T, B, 1943

Principal publishers: Bote & Bock, Ceský hudební fond

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Dostál: 'Gideon Klein', Rytmus, x/4 (1945–6), 6

'Gideon Klein', Ceskoslovensky hudební slovník osob a institucí, i (Prague, 1963)

H.-G. Klein, ed.: Gideon Klein: Materialien (Hamburg, 1995) [incl. writings and bibliography]

BEATE SCHRÖDER-NAUENBURG

Klein, Henrik (b Rudelsdorf, Moravia, ?13 June 1756; d Pozsony [now Bratislava], 26 Aug 1832). Moravian composer and teacher, active in Hungary. He had his first music lessons from the regens chori at Röptau, then studied with Anton Hartenschneider, the cathedral organist at Olmütz (Olomouc) from 1768 to 1773. His first appointment was as Kapellmeister to Count Hodier; later he moved to Pozsony to teach music at the Convent of Our Lady. Count Ferenc Balassa arranged for a performance of his birthday cantata for Archduke Joseph Franz Leopold at the town theatre in 1799. About that time Klein began to write for the newly founded Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung, contributing a description of his recently perfected glass harmonica (1799) and an important anonymous article on Hungarian national dances (28 May 1800).

In 1804 Ferenc Kozma, director of a school where Klein taught for a year (1795–6), submitted two of Klein's sacred choral works to the Swedish Royal Academy of Music; these were favourably received, and Klein was elected a member of the Academy (24 July 1805). In 1807 he wrote a birthday cantata for Emperor Francis, and in 1816 he received a papal breve for a Te Deum celebrating the release of Pius VII from French captivity. He organized musical matinées at his home in 1816 and 1817, attracting such composers as Marschner and János Fusz.

Klein was an erudite and cultivated musician. Although he did not have close links with Hungarian music he is recognized there as an important educator of the early 19th century (his most famous pupil was Ferenc Erkel). Most of his surviving works are sacred choral compositions; three masses, a Tantum ergo and a Veni Sancte Spiritus are in the library of the Bratislava College for Church Music and at Körmöcbánya parish church.

□

Klein, Jacob [de jonge] [Herman] (b Amsterdam, bap. 14 Oct 1688; bur. Amsterdam, 6 March 1748). Dutch composer and amateur cellist. His father was Jacob Klein de oude (b Amsterdam, 1665), dancing-master at the Amsterdam Stadsschouwburg from 1690 to about 1710, to whom Estienne Roger dedicated his reprint of Corelli's op.5 (1702). His aunt Lidwina Klein was the wife of the musician Philippus Hacquart, brother of the composer Carolus Hacquart. Klein's career was in commerce; his title-pages designate him as 'amatore di musica'. As most of his music is for the cello, he must have been an amateur cellist himself.

The surviving op.1 sonatas are of the da chiesa type, with four movements in the usual slow–fast–slow–fast sequence; the op.2 duets are of the da camera type, with various sequences of dance movements, always headed by a preludio. Klein's style resembles the easy, transparent late Baroque style of the post-Corelli generation and can be compared to, for example, that of J.B. Loeillet (ii) ['de Gant'] and Schickhardt. Klein's pieces do, however, contain such cellistic idioms as arpeggio figures, which are not present in the works of Loeillet and Schickhardt. In book 3 of op.1 the solo cello is tuned D–A–e–b, a whole tone above the standard tuning; op.2 no.6 requires the scordatura C–G–c–g. The op.4 sonatas, though of much later date, still adhere completely to the Baroque models of 1710. They are entirely da chiesa, moderately virtuosic and contain printed fingerings.

WORKS

op.
1	VI sonates, bk 1, ob, bc (Amsterdam, 1717), lost
1	VI sonates, bk 2, vn, bc (Amsterdam, 1717), lost
1	VI sonates, bk 3, vc, bc (Amsterdam, 1717)
2	VI duetti, 2 vc (Amsterdam, 1719), ed. G. Darmstadt (Mainz, 1998)
3	VI sonate, vc, bc (Amsterdam, *c*1740), lost
4	VI sonate, vc, bc (Amsterdam, 1746)

RUDOLF A. RASCH

Klein, Johann Joseph (b Arnstadt, 24 Aug 1740; d Kahla, nr Jena, 25 June 1823). German writer on music and organist. On the title-page of his first published treatise, Versuch eines Lehrbuchs der praktischen Musik (Gera, 1783), he is referred to as a registered attorney to the dukes of Saxony and church organist in Eisenberg, and in 1801 he had been promoted to Hofadvokat and still held the post of organist. His Versuch is a practical treatise on basic musicianship, which discusses musical signs, melody and harmony (both separately and together), tuning, temperament, enharmonicism and continuo. In the foreword he draws attention to the integral relationships of rhetoric and poetry to music, as well as the necessity for composers to know how to arouse and calm passions. Probably the most useful section of the work (pp.232–58) is that on continuo performance in ensemble genres current in the last decades of the 18th century. He prefers the harpsichord for this purpose as it can be more distinctly heard than the fortepiano. Finally, for a more comprehensive treatment of the matter, he refers the reader to the continuo performance section in the second part of C.P.E. Bach's Versuch. Klein's Versuch was widely read (and may have been translated into Danish; see GerberNL); at the time of Gerber's 'new' lexicon (1812) Klein was working on a revision that was never published. Schilling notes that this manual still deserves attention and can be productively used in music instruction.

His second treatise, Lehrbuch der theoretischen Musick (written by 1798, published in Leipzig and Gera, 1801), discusses theoretical problems such as sound production, resonance and the physiology of hearing, and includes illustrations of the scales and fingerings for most wind instruments then used. Klein also published an article on music theory (AMZ, i, 1798–9, cols.641–8), and another suggesting improvements in German singing schools (AMZ, i, 1798–9, cols.465–71). He edited a volume of 344 chorales (Neues vollständiges Choralbuch zum Gebrauch bey dem Gottesdienste, Rudolstadt, 1785, 2/1802), of which about 35 may have been of his own composition. Besides a popular setting of C.F. Gellert's Morgengesang (Offenbach, n.d.) no other secular compositions by him are known.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Choron-FayolleD; GerberNL; SchillingE; ZahnM

H. Mendel and A. Reissmann, eds.: Musikalisches Conversations-Lexikon (Berlin, 1870–80, 3/1890–91/R)

ELLWOOD DERR

Klein, Josef (b Cologne, 1802; d Cologne, 10 Feb 1862). German composer and teacher. After a brief stay in Paris he went to Berlin to study with his stepbrother, Bernhard Joseph Klein. There he made the acquaintance of Heine, who became his lifelong friend and who later wrote the libretto for his opera Die Batavier. Klein then became a piano and singing teacher in Memel but, owing to ill-health, soon returned to Berlin. He spent his last years in Cologne. His chief significance as a composer of vocal music lies in his being among the first to set texts of Heine.

WORKS

Die Batavier (op, H. Heine), lost, lib pubd

Choral: Hier liegt vor deiner Majestät, 4vv, orch; Die Schlacht auf Lora, 2vv, chorus, pf; Festgesang, 4 female vv, female chorus, pf; 6 Gesänge, 4 male vv

1v, pf: *c*75 lieder, ballads, romances, songs

Other: Die Jungfrau von Orléans, ov., orch; Grand Duo, vn, pf; Adagio und Rondeau, pf; Pf Sonata; 12 Variations, pf

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Obituary, Kölner Zeitung (21 Feb 1862)

R. Sietz: 'Klein, Joseph', Rheinische Musiker, i, ed. K.G. Fellerer (Cologne, 1960), 142–4 [with complete list of works]

ULRICH SCHNEIDELER

Klein, Judy [Judith] (b Chicago, 14 April 1943). American composer. She took the BA at the University of California at Berkeley (1967), a diploma at the conservatory in Basle (1977) and the MA at New York University (1987). Her principal teachers were Weidenaar, Kessler, Dodge, Lilli Friedemann and Ruth Anderson. She has been an instructor and director at the computer music studios of New York University and created the Electro-Acoustic Music Archive at the New York Public Library for the Performing Arts. She has been guest composer and artist-in-residence at Dartmouth College, at the Brooklyn College Center for Computer Music and at the Studio for Electronic Music in Basle. Her works are mostly for the electronic medium and include sound installations, music for theatre and collaborations with visual artists. In 1988 she received special honours at the Bourges international electro-acoustic music competition for From the Journals of Felix Bosonnet.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dead End, tape, 1979; Little Piece, tape, 1979; Dream/Song, tape, 1980; Journeys, tape, 1982 [for art installation, collab. B. Nathan]; God Bites, tape, 1983; The Mines of Falun, pt 1, tape, 1983; The Tell-Tale Heart (film score, dir. H. Marti), 1983; From the Journals of Felix Bosonnet, tape, 1987; Elements 1.1., tape, 1992; 88" for Nick, tape, 1992; Elements 1.2., sound installation, 1993 [collab. C. Furukawa and N. Yatsuyanagi]; The Wolves of Bays Mountain, tape, 1998

Incid music (elec), incl. Family Play, Unheile Dreifaltigkeit

Principal recording companies: Cuneiform, International Computer Music Association, SEAMUS

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Dodge and T.A. Jerse: Computer Music: Synthesis, Composition and Performance (New York, 1985, 2/1997)

ELIZABETH HINKLE-TURNER

Klein, Kenneth (b Los Angeles, 5 Sept 1939). American conductor. He studied the violin with Vera Barstow and Eudice Shapiro at the University of Southern California, conducting with Fritz Zweig and Richard Lert in Los Angeles and with Boulanger in Paris. After organizing and conducting the Westside SO in Los Angeles (1963–7), he was music director of the Guadalajara SO (1967–78); his tenure was distinguished by an expansion of repertory and a significant increase both in attendance and in the number of concerts each season. These years culminated in the recordings Music from Mexico (1979, 1993). He made his European début in 1970 as guest conductor of the Nuremberg SO and has subsequently appeared with many major European orchestras. Klein has had a long association with Puerto Rico, first conducting there at the invitation of Casals (1973). From 1981 to 1985 he served as music director of the Santa Cruz (California) SO, and in 1982 he became music director of the New York Virtuosi Chamber Symphony, which he founded. Klein has also appeared as a guest conductor with numerous American orchestras. A champion of the music of the Americas, he is equally well-versed in the Classical and Romantic repertory.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Rockwell: 'L. A. Conductor Gives Music in Mexico a Lift', Los Angeles Times (27 Jan 1970)

R. Brown: 'An Interview with Kenneth Klein', Fanfare, xvi/2 (1992–3), 157–62

JUDITH ROSEN

Klein, Rudolf (b Vienna, 6 March 1920). Austrian writer on music. He enrolled as a musicology student at Vienna University in 1938 and studied the organ privately under Louis Dité. In 1939 he emigrated to Belgium continuing his organ and theory studies at the Brussels Conservatory. He was deported to France in 1940, and after spending two and a half years in concentration camps escaped to Switzerland where he was able to resume his studies in Fribourg (1942) and to obtain his organ diploma (1946). He returned to Vienna that year and after studying briefly again at the university and the academy, he was appointed music critic and editor for the Wiener Kurier in 1947 and he was made editor-in-chief in 1953 of the Österreichische Musikzeitschrift, where he remained until 1983. He also wrote programme notes for the Wiener Konzerthausgesellschaft (1959–83) and the Vienna Staatsoper (1963–8) and wrote as a music critic for the Christian Science Monitor, the Salzburger Nachrichten (until 1995), the Basler Nationalzeitung and the Neue Zürichische Zeitung. He was awarded the title of professor by the Austrian government in 1967 and joined the faculties of the Vienna Musikhochschule (1974) and the University of Salzburg (1976), where he was professor of music journalism. He also organized a number of congresses during the 1970s and edited their reports (Beethoven Colloquium: Vienna 1977, Gustav Mahler: Vienna 1979 and Alban Berg: Vienna 1980).

As a historian, Klein has written on a wide range of topics, and his publications include monographs on Frank Martin (1960), Johann Nepomuk David (1964) and Ernst Vogel (1986) as well as articles on Gottfried von Einem and the music analysis of Rudolf Réti. Building on the legacy of Otto Erich Deutsch, Klein has specialized in the history of Vienna in connection with Viennese Classical composers and has edited two books (1973, 1982 with Gitta Deutsch) from the papers of the Deutsch estate.

WRITINGS

'Zur Definition der Bitonalität', ÖMz, vi (1951), 311–16

'Relative Tonalität', ÖMz, vii (1952), 334–41

Frank Martin (Vienna, 1960)

Johann Nepomuk David (Vienna, 1964)

Die Wiener Staatsoper (Vienna, 1967, 2/1969; Eng. trans., 1967)

'Neues von Johann Nepomuk David', ÖMz, xxiii (1968), 593–600

Beethovenstätten in Österreich (Vienna, 1970)

with H. Graf and K. von Fischer: Ernst Hess (Zürich, 1970)

Das Symphoniekonzert: ein Stilführer (Vienna, 1971)

'Die Doppelgerüsttechnik in der Passacaglia der IV. Symphonie von Brahms', ÖMz, xxvii (1972), 641–9

Schubertstätten (Vienna, 1972)

'Das Beethovenhaus am Heiligenstädter Pfarrplatz', ÖMz, xxviii (1973), 35–7

'Beethovens "gebundener Stil" in Opus 106', BeJb 1973–7, 185–99

ed.: O.E. Deutsch: Musikalische Kuckuckseier und andere Wiener Musikgeschichten (Vienna, 1973, 2/1993 as Wiener Musikgeschichten)

'Gerhard von Breuning über Beethovens Beziehung zu seinen Verwandten: ein unbekannter Entwurf zu einem Artikel', ÖMz, xxix (1974), 67–74

'Hommage für Anton Bruckner: drei österreichische Komponisten schufen Auftragswerke', ÖMz, xxix (1974), 732–6

'Zur Frage der Tonalität in Bergs Oper Wozzeck', 50 Jahre Wozzeck von Alban Berg: Berlin 1975, 32–45

'Die Struktur in Beethovens Missa solemnis', Erich Valentin zum 70. Geburtstag, ed. G. Weiss (Regensburg, 1976), 89–107

'Der Symphoniker Gottfried von Einem', ÖMz, xxxiii (1978), 33–9

'Gottfried von Einems Oper Jesu Hochzeit', ÖMz, xxxv (1980), 189–99

'Die einheitsbildenden Faktoren im musikalischen Kunstwerk', Studier och essaer tillägnade Hans Eppstein (Stockholm, 1981), 159–67

Joseph Haydn: mit einem Essay Von Rudolf Klein und 48 Farbtafeln von Erich Lessing (Freiburg, 1981)

'Rudolph Rêtis Erkenntnisse der thematischen Prozesse in der Musik', ÖMz, xxxvi (1981), 465–9

ed., with G. Deutsch: O.E. Deutsch: Admiral Nelson und Joseph Haydn: ein britisch-österreichisches Gipfeltreffen (Vienna, 1982)

'Wo kann die Analyse von Haydns Symphonik ansetzen?', ÖMz, xxxvii (1982), 234–41

'Zoltán Kodály und die Wiener Universal Edition, 1932–1937', Kodály Conference: Budapest 1982, 89–94

'Gottfried von Einem in seinen Streichquartetten', ÖMz, xxxviii (1983), 28–31

with E. Haselauer: Ernst Vogel (Vienna, 1986)

WALTER SZMOLYAN/R

Kleine Flöte (Ger.). A piccolo; see FLUTE II, §3(i).

Kleine Trommel (Ger.). A side drum. See DRUM, §II, 2.

Kleinknecht [Klinekenek]. German family of musicians. The name first appears in a collection of lute music in the Augsburg City Library and was later identified with a Protestant family in Ulm.

(1) Martin Kleinknecht (b Ulm, bap. 14 Oct 1665; d Giengen, 3 June 1730). Organist and kantor. The elder son of Hans Conrad Kleinknecht, Martin was organist in Leipheim (near Ulm) during the late 17th century and later became a Kantor at Württemberg.

(2) Johannes Kleinknecht (b Ulm, bap. 7 Dec 1676; d Ulm, bur. 4 June 1751). Violinist, organist and teacher. The youngest son of Hans Johann, he studied in Venice and from 1705 was principal violinist at Ulm Cathedral. He later also became assistant organist and devoted much of his attention to teaching and to the direction of an active collegium musicum.

(3) Johann Wolfgang Kleinknecht (b Ulm, 17 April 1715; d Ansbach, 20 Feb 1786). Violinist and composer, eldest son of (2) Johannes Kleinknecht. He first studied the violin with his father and apparently made an impressive début as a youthful performer. After studies at the Gymnasium in Ulm he toured several German cities with success and in 1733 became a member of the court chapel at Stuttgart. There he studied the violin with the Kapellmeister, G.A. Brescianello, and shortly thereafter embarked on another successful tour of many German courts. This led to an appointment as first violinist at the court of Eisenach, a position from which he soon obtained leave to serve as guest conductor at the court at Bayreuth. In 1738 he became the director at Bayreuth and in this capacity encountered many of the best performers from Berlin and Dresden, among them the violinist Franz Benda, whose style Kleinknecht thereafter adopted as a model. He returned to Eisenach briefly to fulfil his obligation to that court and to pursue his own musical studies, but after the death of his patron he again went to Bayreuth and remained until 1769, when the entire chapel moved to Ansbach.

Hiller described Johann Wolfgang as an outstanding violinist whose execution was noted for its rhythmic accuracy, energy, and beauty of tone, and claims these qualities enlivened the entire orchestra at Bayreuth. His biography first appeared in Meusel's Miscellaneen in 1782.

WORKS

composer identified only as Kleinknecht; many of the lost works may be by other members of the family

6 sonatas, vn, bc (Paris, *c*1760)
3 Sonatas or Duets, 2 vc/bn (London, 1774)
Lost works, listed in Brook: 9 concs.; 2 partitas, insts; 1 sinfonie, insts; 13 trios, 2 fl, bc; 12 trios, 2 vn, bc; 6 duets, 2 fl; 6 solos, vn, bc; sonata, kbd solo; trio, fl, kbd obbl; duet, 2 vc
40 addl lost works, listed in Delius

(4) Jakob Friedrich Kleinknecht (b Ulm, bap. 8 June 1722; d Ansbach, 11 Aug 1794). Composer and flautist, second son of (2) Johannes Kleinknecht. He studied first with his father and joined his brother in the chapel at Bayreuth as flautist in 1743. He shifted his attention to the violin in 1747, became the assistant Kapellmeister in 1748, court composer one year later and Kapellmeister in 1761. When the group moved to Ansbach in 1769, Jakob Friedrich continued as director, and it was there that most of his works were composed. His facility on both the violin and the flute is reflected in the distribution of his works between these two media. Jakob Friedrich's music, which is fluent and often original, warrants more attention and study than it has received.

WORKS

6 sonate da camera, fl, hpd/vc (Nuremberg, 1748/R)
3 Trios, 2 fl, bc (Nuremberg, 1749)
6 Trios, 2 fl/vn, bc (London, *c*1750)
6 Trios, 2 fl/vn, bc, op.3 (Paris, 1767)
Concerto, 2 fl, orch (Paris, 1776)
2 sonatas, hpd, in Oeuvres mêlées, i, ii (Nuremberg, 1755–6)
Sinfonia concertante, kbd obbl, 2 fl, 2 ob, str, D-Mbs; concerto, vn, orch, B-Bc; Trio, 2 fl, bc, Bc; Sonata, 2 fl, bc, D-KA; Sonata, fl, ob/vn, bc, KA; Sonata, fl, bc, Bsb, ed. G. Zahn (Vienna, *c*1990); Sonata, hpd obbl, fl/vn, Mbs; Sonata, hpd, Bsb
Lost works, listed in Brook: 6 concs., fl, orch; 6 trios, fl, vn, bc; 3 sonatas, 2 fl, bc; 1 trio, 2 fl, bc
Other works, listed in Delius: 2 solos, vn, bc, formerly in Deutsche Staatsbibliothek [now D-Bsb], lost; sonata, fl, bc, F-Pc; trio, 2 vn, bc, D-Bsb

(5) Johann Stephan Kleinknecht (b Ulm, 17 Sept 1731; d Ansbach, 1796). Flautist, youngest son of (2) Johannes Kleinknecht. Johann Stephan began his studies in philosophy and languages at the Gymnasium in Ulm, and at first had little interest in music. He later began to study the flute and in 1750 was sent to his two older brothers who by that time were members of the court chapel at Bayreuth. He soon became master of his instrument, spent some time in the service of the bishop of Breslau and returned to the Bayreuth court in 1754 as accompanist and musical companion to the prince. In this capacity he had the opportunity to travel and perform at courts outside Germany and soon established a reputation as one of the best flautists of the time. He moved to Ansbach with other members of the chapel in 1769. He may have contributed to some of the works for flute listed under the name of Jakob Friedrich; according to Delius three of his flute sonatas were once held in the Deutsche Staatsbibliothek in Berlin but are now lost. His autobiography appeared in Meusel (1782), reprinted a year later in Cramer.

(6) Christian Ludwig Kleinknecht (b Bayreuth, 12 Aug 1765; d Ansbach, 11 March 1794). Violinist and composer, son of (4) Jakob Friedrich Kleinknecht. He was trained as a violinist, studied at Leipzig until 1788 and in 1789 was listed as a violinist and chamber virtuoso in the chapel at Ansbach. He apparently composed a flute concerto and a violin sonata (see Delius).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrookB; SchillingE
J.A. Hiller, ed.: Wöchentliche Nachrichten und Anmerkungen die Musik betreffend, i (1766/R), 183–4
J.G. Meusel, ed.: Miscellaneen artistischen Inhalts (Erfurt, 1779–87), xii
C.F. Cramer: 'Nachrichten von einigen Virtuosen', Magazin der Musik, i (Hamburg, 1783/R), 773–84
J.G. Meusel: Teutsches Künstlerlexikon oder Verzeichnis der jetztlebenden teutschen Künstler (Lemgo, 1778, 2/1808–14/R)
J.A. Vocke: Geburts- und Todtenalmanach Ansbachischer Gelehrten, Schriftsteller, und Künstler (Augsburg, 1796)
R. Schaal, ed.: Johann Stephan und Johann Wolfgang Kleinknecht: Selbstbibliographie, Biographie und Anhang über die Ansbacher Musik (Kassel, 1948)
A. Krause-Pichler: Jakob Friedrich Kleinknecht 1722–1794: ein Komponist zwischen Barock und Klassik (Weissenhorn, 1991)
N. Delius: 'Jacob Friedrich Kleinknecht und seine Brüder: Versuch einer Werklist', FAM, xxxix (1992), 274–325

DOUGLAS A. LEE

Kleinmichel, Richard (b Posen [now Poznań], 31 Dec 1846; d Charlottenburg, 18 Aug 1901). German pianist and composer. He received his first instruction from his father, Friedrich H.H. Kleinmichel (1827–94), a military and operatic conductor. From 1863 to 1866 he studied at the Leipzig Conservatory and then settled at Hamburg, where he published many works, mostly for his own instrument. His second symphony was given at the Gewandhaus at Leipzig with success. In that town he held for some time the post of Kapellmeister at the Städtisches Theater, and subsequently had similar appointments at Danzig and Magdeburg. His first opera, Schloss de l'Orme, based on Prévost's Manon Lescaut, was successfully produced at Hamburg in 1883, as was his Pfeifer von Dusenbach in 1891. He is best known for his simplified piano arrangements for vocal scores of Wagner's operas, published mostly during the 1880s, but in the last decade of his life he also made vocal scores of works by Paisiello, Mozart, Grétry, Isouard, Méhul, Cherubini, Berlioz, Lortzing and Humperdinck.

J.A. FULLER MAITLAND/R

Kleinsinger, George (b San Bernardino, CA, 13 Feb 1914; d New York, 28 July 1982). American composer. He attended New York University (BA 1937), where he studied with Marion Bauer, Charles Haubiel and Philip James; as a scholarship student at the Juilliard School (1938–40) he was a pupil of Frederick Jacobi and Bernard Wagenaar. During World War II he served as music supervisor of the Second Service Command and worked mainly in army hospitals. His first success came with the cantata I Hear America Singing (1940), based on poems of Whitman. This was followed by a series of extremely popular melodramas including Tubby the Tuba (1942), in which narrator and orchestra tell the story of a hapless tuba who ultimately achieves his desire to play melodies instead of nothing but 'oompahs'; the work sold over half a million records and was made into a film by Paramount, earning Kleinsinger an Oscar nomination. His chamber opera Shinbone Alley (1954), based on Don Marquis's Archy and Mehitabel, also enjoyed a popular success. Kleinsinger's music is characterized by simple melody, direct rhythm and a colourful instrumental style.

WORKS

Melodramas, unless otherwise stated: Farewell to a Hero (W. Whitman), 1941; Tubby the Tuba (P. Tripp), 1942; Peewee the Piccolo (Tripp), 1945; Pan the Piper (P. Wing), 1946; The Story of Celeste (Tripp), 1947; Shinbone Alley (chbr op, J. Darion, after D. Marquis: Archy and Mehitabel), 1954; The Tree that Found Christmas (Darion, after C. Morley), 1955; 3 other melodramas

Orch: Sym., 1942; 3 concs., vc, 1946, harmonica, 1947, vn, 1953; other works

Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt, 1940; Cl Qnt, 1949; Trio, cl, vc, pf, 1955; Dance Portraits, pf, 1956; other works

Choral: I Hear America Singing (Whitman), cant., 1940; Brooklyn Baseball Cant. (M. Stratton), 1942

Songs, incl. Christmas is a Feeling in your Heart (Darion), 1953

Film scores, incl. Greece, the Golden Age, 1963; incid music for TV

Principal publishers: Chappell, E.B. Marks

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Baker8

C. Reis: Composers in America: Biographical Sketches (New York, 4/1947/R, enlarged edn of American Composers)

D. Ewen: American Composers Today (New York, 1949)

MICHAEL MECKNA

Kleist, (Bernd) Heinrich (Wilhelm) von (b Frankfurt an der Oder, 18 Oct 1777; d Wannsee, nr Potsdam, 21 Nov 1811). German writer. He was the great-nephew of the poet Ewald Christian von Kleist. Orphaned at an early age, he joined the army in 1792 but resigned in 1799. He travelled extensively, pausing at Dresden and Paris (1801), Berne, Königsberg (1805–6), Dresden (1807–9) and Berlin, near where he committed suicide with his incurably ill mistress.

Kleist played the flute and clarinet and, though untutored, attempted composition; yet music plays a rather small part in his literary works (one of his less successful stories is Die heilige Cäcilie, oder Die Gewalt der Musik). Many of his plays and stories have been used as the basis for musical compositions, with no diminishment of interest in the 20th century. Among these works are Draeseke's incidental music for Die Hermannsschlacht, Marschner's and Wolf's incidental music to Prinz Friedrich von Homburg, Wolf's symphonic poem Penthesilea, Pfitzner's suite Das Käthchen von Heilbronn and Gesang der Barden (from Die Hermannsschlacht), Schoeck's opera Penthesilea, Henze's opera Der Prinz von Homburg and Egk's opera Die Verlobung in San Domingo.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Schäfer: Historisches und systematisches Verzeichnis sämtlicher Tonwerke zu den Dramen ... Kleists (Leipzig, 1886)

K. Goedeke and others: Grundriss zur Geschichte der deutschen Dichtung, vi (1898), 96–104

E.L. Stahl: Heinrich von Kleist's Dramas (Oxford, 1948, 2/1961)

H. Sembdner, ed.: Heinrich von Kleists Lebensspuren: Dokumente und Berichte der Zeitgenossen (Bremen, 1957, 7/1996)

H. Kraft: Erhörtes und Unerhörtes: die Welt des Klanges bei Heinrich von Kleist (Munich, 1976)

K. Kanzog and H.-J. Kreutzer, eds.: Werke Kleists auf dem modernen Musiktheater (Berlin, 1977) [incl. complete list of settings]

H.-G. Klein: 'Ideologisierung von Werken Kleists in Opern aus dem 20. Jahrhunderts', Norddeutsche Beiträge, i (1978), 4–65

C. Dahlhaus: 'Kleists Wort über den Generalbass', Kleist Jb (1984), 13–24

D. Müller-Hennig: 'Vom Musikalischen der Kleistschen Dichtung', Literatur und Musik, ed. S.P. Scher (Berlin, 1984), 213–25

E. Linfield: 'Heinrich von Kleists "Marionettentheater" oder die Notwendigkeit der Verknüpfung von Kenntnis und Intuition in der barocken Aufführungspraxis', Alte Musik als ästhetische Gegenwart: Bach, Händel, Schütz: Stuttgart 1985, ii, 357–69

I.-M. Barth, ed.: Heinrich von Kleist: Sämtliche Werke und Briefe (Frankfurt, 1987–97)

PETER BRANSCOMBE

Klemczyński, Julian (b Stare Miasto, nr Kalisz, 1810; d Paris, ?1851). Polish pianist and composer. In 1831 he went to France, where he became a piano teacher at first in Meaux and later in Paris. He composed about 100 works, mainly piano solos and duets, but also pieces for violin and piano and flute and piano, the latter written in collaboration with Deneux de Varenne. His compositions were published in France, Germany, London and Milan. Piano pieces, marked by sound craftsmanship and melodic inventiveness, were typical salon pieces in brilliant style; they were popular in France; many were based on Polish folktunes. His works were favourably reviewed in the Gazette musicale de Paris (1834–7), but in 1842 H.L. Blanchard published in that journal a severe critique emphasizing Klemczyński's lack of originality; thereafter public interest in his music waned. (FétisB, PSB, M. Szurek-Wisti)

ZOFIA CHECHLIŃSKA

Klemm. German and American firm of instrument importers and dealers, also manufacturers and publishers. The family was known in Neukirchen (now Markneukirchen), Saxony, in 1710, when Johann Klemm, a wind instrument maker, joined the violin makers' guild. They were associated with other local firms, notably the Schusters and the Meinels, to whom they were related by marriage. Frederick Augustus Klemm (b Neukirchen, 20 Nov 1797; d Philadelphia, 6 July 1876) emigrated to the USA in 1816 and, with his brother John George (b Neukirchen, 18 June 1795; d after 1833) imported instruments from Germany, probably mainly from their relations Georg and August Klemm in Neukirchen, and sold them in Philadelphia. From 1860 the firm also included two sons of F.A. Klemm, John George (1838–93) and Edward Meinel (1839–1909). The firm supplied large numbers of bugles, military trumpets, fifes and drums to the Philadelphia arsenal, and brass instruments by the firm were used by both the Federal and Confederate troops during the Civil War. Most of their instruments were imported but there is evidence that some were of local origin. In 1825, when the firm had premises in the main piano-making district of Philadephia, it was associated with Alpheus Babcock of Boston, the inventor of cast-iron piano frames. For many years the firm was pre-eminent among suppliers of instruments in the USA; the instruments they supplied included boxwood flutes with four, six or eight keys, clarinets with five, and rotary-valve saxhorns and bugles with six or eight keys.

The firm was also involved in publishing, though chiefly in the reprinting of material from plates used by other publishers, notably Allyn Bacon. Among Klemm's own publications is the earliest instruction book for a valved brass instrument printed in America, F. Rasche's New and Complete Method for Cornet à Pistons (Philadelphia, 1844).

After the civil war, the Klemms' dominant position was challenged by the rise of American manufacturers. The firm does not seem to have functioned after 1879.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Waterhouse-LangwillI

R.J. Wolfe: Early American Music Engraving and Printing (Urbana, IL, 1980)

C.L. Venable: Philadelphia Biedermeier: Germanic-American Craftsmen and Design in Philadelphia, 1820 to 1850 (thesis, U. of Delaware, 1986)

LLOYD P. FARRAR

Klemm, Eberhardt (b Zwickau, 4 Sept 1929; d Leipzig, 7 June 1991). German musicologist. He studied physics, philosophy and musicology with Bloch, Serauky, Wolff and others at Leipzig University (1949–54), taking the doctorate there in 1966 with a dissertation on serialism. He was an assistant to Serauky and Besseler (1954–65), and subsequently lecturer (1957–66) at Leipzig until he was dismissed on political grounds. He was editor of the Jahrbuch Peters (1978–82) and in 1985 was made director of the Hanns-Eisler-Archiv in Berlin. He completed the Habilitation in 1991 with a work on the Second Viennese School and was appointed professor at Leipzig shortly before his death. His chief interest was 20th-century music. He published two books on Hanns Eisler, as well as numerous articles on contemporary musical theory, Mahler, Webern and Schoenberg. He also edited various historical works on music (by Burney, Schindler, Debussy and Shaw), and prepared editions of Mahler's Sixth Symphony (Leipzig, 1975), Eisler's orchestral suites (Leipzig, 1977), Debussy's piano works (Leipzig, 1968–73), Satie's Messe des pauvres and piano pieces by Gottschalk, Satie and Scott Joplin. He was honoured with an unpublished Festschrift on his 60th birthday and a collection of his articles was published in 1997.

WRITINGS

ed.: Festschrift Heinrich Besseler (Leipzig, 1961) [incl. 'Notizen zu Mahler', 447–55]

Studien zur Theorie der musikalischen Permutationen (diss., U. of Leipzig, 1966)

'Symmetrien im Chorsatz von Anton Webern', DJbM, xi (1966), 107–20

'Zur Theorie der Reihenstruktur und Reihendisposition in Schönbergs 4. Streichquartett', BMw, viii (1966), 27–49

'Zur Theorie einiger Reihen-Kombinationen', AMw, xxiii (1966), 170–212

'Der Briefwechsel zwischen Arnold Schönberg und dem Verlag C.F. Peters', DJbM, xv (1970), 5–66

'Chronologisches Verzeichnis der Kompositionen Hanns Eislers', BMw, xv (1973), 93–115

Hanns Eisler: für sie porträtiert (Leipzig, 1973)

Hanns Eisler 1898–1962 (Berlin, 1973)

'Zur Geschichte der fünften Sinfonie von Gustav Mahler', Jb Peters, ii (1979), 9–116; see also Jb Peters, iv (1981–2), 85–7

ed.: A. Honegger: Beruf und Handwerk des Komponisten: illusionslose Gespräche, Kritiken, Aufsätze (Leipzig, 1980)

ed.: H. Scherchen: Aus meinem Leben: Russland in jenen Jahren: Erinnerungen Hermann Scherchen (Berlin, 1984)

'Charles Ives', Komponisten, auf Werk und Leben befragt, ed. H. Goldschmidt, G. Knepler and K. Niemann (Leipzig, 1985), 266–77

'"Die gute, alte Musik – ich habe sie noch gekannt ...": Skizzen zur Emigration deutscher und österreichischer Komponisten', Musik und Gesellschaft, xxxiv (1986), 460–65

Spuren der Avantgarde: Schriften 1955–1991 (Cologne, 1997)

EDITIONS OF WORKS ON MUSIC

published in Leipzig unless otherwise stated

C. Burney: Tagebuch einer musikalischen Reise (1968, 2/1980) [BurneyFI and BurneyGN]; A. Schindler: Biographie von Ludwig van Beethoven (1970) [orig. pubd Münster, 1840]; C. Debussy: Einsame Gespräche mit Monsieur Croche (1971) [Fr. orig., Paris, 1921]; G.B. Shaw: Musikfeuilletons des Corno di Bassetto (1972) [Eng. orig., London, 1937]; T.W. Adorno and H. Eisler: Komposition für den Film (1977) [Eng. orig., London, 1947]; A. Schoenberg: Harmonielehre (1977) [orig. pubd Vienna, 1911]; H. Berlioz: Memoiren mit der Beschreibung seiner Reisen in Italien, Deutschland, Russland und England (Wilhelmshaven, 1979) [Fr. orig., Paris, 1870]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Klingberg: 'Die Kampagne gegen Eberhardt Klemm und das Institut für Musikwissenschaft der Universität Leipzig in den 60er Jahren', Berliner Beiträge zur Musikwissenschaft: Beihefte zur Neuen Berlinischen Musikzeitung, ix/3 (1994), 45–51; see also H. Grüss: 'Vorauseilender Weggefährte Eberhardt Klemm', ibid., 52–4

HORST SEEGER/WOLFGANG RUF

Klemm [Klemme, Klemmio, Klemmius], Johann (b Oederan, nr Zwickau, *c*1595; d ?Dresden, 1659 or later). German composer, organist and music publisher. In 1605 he was engaged as a boy soprano for the Tafelmusik at the electoral court at Dresden and in 1612 was appointed as an instrumentalist there. The following year he went to Augsburg to study at the elector's expense with the renowned organist Christian Erbach, with whom he remained until at least 1615. When he returned to Dresden, he started working at composition under Schütz; this led to a long-lasting association between the two men typical of the close ties that Schütz formed with many of his pupils. In 1625 he was appointed court organist; his duties included responsibility for the musical education of the choirboys, and in this capacity he taught the organ to Matthias Weckmann. He also became active as a music publisher, first in partnership with Daniel Weixer, later with Alexander Hering. His publications included some of his own music as well as collections by his teacher Schütz (the second set of Symphoniae sacrae, 1647, and the Geistliche Chormusik, 1648). Klemm continued serving the court under Johann Georg I, and upon the latter's death (1657), under his successor Johann Georg II. He disappears from the Dresden records in 1659, presumably because he retired or passed away.

In 1631 Klemm brought out at his own expense in Dresden the Partitura seu Tabulatura italica (RRMBE, xci, 1998), a collection of 36 fugues for two, three and four voices in the traditional 12 modes, suitable for organ or any other instruments. The fugues were printed in open score, a comparative novelty in Germany, where keyboard players were accustomed to reading from German organ tabulature. Klemm followed here the example of many Italian publications (hence the 'Italian Tabulature' of the alternative title), which, while perhaps more cumbersome for the performer, allowed clearer presentation of the contrapuntal structure (for ensemble performance he suggests in a postscript that individual parts can be copied out). The open-score layout, the strict modal part-writing 'abstaining from chromatic writing and diminutions' (to quote the postscript), indeed the entire nature of the work, all point to a deliberate attempt to provide a pedagogical model of instrumental prima pratica in line with the teachings of Schütz, stressing traditional strict counterpoint as the foundation of all compositional technique: in fact Klemm credited Schütz with instigating the work. A more progressive feature is the prevailing monothematicism, though in the handling of his subjects, as well as in other aspects of fugal writing, Klemm demonstrates a wide variety of approaches, making the collection a valuable source for the study of imitative forms current about 1630. It was apparently held in high esteem; 90 years later Mattheson still suggested that 'many a modern composer could surely learn a great many basic matters from it were he not to consider himself already too learned'.

Only one other piece by Klemm survives, the six-part Lobe den Herren meine Seele (D-Z 51, no.102, copied between 1664 and 1678). His Teutsche geistliche Madrigalien for four to six voices and continuo (Freiberg, 1629) and the ten-part Wohl dem der in Gottes Furcht steht (formerly in a manuscript at the Kantoreigesellschaft, Pirna) are lost.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ApelG; WaltherML
J. Mattheson: Critica musica (Hamburg, 1722–5/R)
R. Vollhardt: Bibliographie der Musik-Werke in der Ratsschulbibliothek zu Zwickau (Leipzig, 1893–6)
A. Werner: 'Nachrichten über Johann Samuel Schein', SIMG, ix (1907–8), 634–54
L. Schierning: Die Überlieferung der deutschen Orgel- und Klaviermusik aus der ersten Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts (Kassel, 1961), 15
W. Braun: 'Schütz als Kompositionslehrer: die Geistlichen Madrigale (1619) von Gabriel Mölich', Schütz-Jb 1985–6, 69–92, esp. 73
A. Kobuch: 'Neue Sagittariana im Staatsarchiv Dresden', Jb Peters, ed. W. Steude (Leipzig, 1988), 159–60
K. Küster: 'Weckmann und Mölich as Schütz-Schüler', Schütz-Jb 1995, 39–62, esp. 40–42

ALEXANDER SILBIGER

Klemm [Clem, Clemm], Johann Gottlob (b nr Dresden, 12 May 1690; d Bethlehem, PA, 5 May 1762). American organ builder of German birth. The son of an organist and instrument maker, Klemm first studied theology in Freiberg, but became disillusioned and about 1710 returned to Dresden, where he may have worked briefly for his father. He remained there until 1726, making stringed keyboard instruments and repairing (and possibly building) organs. At the invitation of Count Zinzendorf, leader of the Unitas Fratrum or Moravian Church, Klemm and his family briefly joined the Church's community in Herrnhut, Saxony, but emigrated to Philadelphia in 1733. There Klemm worked as a maker of keyboard instruments, becoming the first to pursue such a trade full-time in the American colonies. A spinet dated 1739 exists in the Metropolitan Museum, New York. In 1739–41 he built a 26-stop organ for Trinity Church, New York; this was probably the largest organ he ever built, but he is known to have built smaller organs for several other churches including 'Old Swede's' Church in Philadelphia (*c*1737) and the Moravian Church in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania (1746). In 1745 or 1746 he moved to New York for a short time, and in 1757 he moved to the Moravian settlement in Bethlehem. There, with the help of a young cabinet maker, David Tannenberg (who succeeded him), he built five small organs for Moravian churches, and possibly some spinets or clavichords as well.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R.J. Brunner: That Ingenious Business: Pennsylvania German Organ Builders (Birdsboro, PA, 1940)
W.H. Armstrong: Organs for America (Philadelphia, 1967)
O. Ochse: The History of the Organ in the United States (Bloomington, IN, 1975)
L. Libin: 'New Facts and Speculations on John Clemm', The Tracker, xxxi/2 (1986–7), 19–23
B. Owen: 'Brother Klemm, Organ Builder', Moravian Music Journal, xl/1 (1995), 3–13

BARBARA OWEN

Klemperer, Otto (b Breslau, 14 May 1885; d Zürich, 6 July 1973). German conductor and composer. After studying the piano with James Kwast and theory with Ivan Knorr at the conservatory in Frankfurt, Klemperer followed Kwast to the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory in Berlin, where he also studied composition and conducting with Pfitzner. In 1906 he replaced Oskar Fried at the last moment to conduct Max Reinhardt's production of Offenbach's Orphée aux enfers at the Neues Theater in Berlin. The previous year, on the occasion of a performance of Mahler's Symphony no.2, in which he directed the offstage orchestra, he had first encountered the composer who was to exercise a decisive influence on his career. It was on Mahler's recommendation that Klemperer was appointed chorus master and subsequently conductor at the Neues Deutsches Theater in Prague in 1907 (making his debut in Der Freischütz), and then at Hamburg from 1910 to 1912. Further appointments followed at Bremen (1913–14), Strasbourg (1914–17), where he was Pfitzner's deputy, and as musical director at Cologne (1917–24) and Wiesbaden (1924–7).

After 1918 Klemperer rapidly emerged as one of the leading German conductors of his generation (in 1923 he declined an appointment as musical director of the Berlin Staatsoper, where he felt he would have had insufficient artistic independence). He conducted an unusually wide range of contemporary music, as well as giving a less overtly emotional interpretation of the classics than had been common among older conductors. He was therefore a natural choice as director when, in 1927, the Prussian Ministry of Culture set up a branch of the Berlin Staatsoper, whose special task was to perform new and recent works and repertory works in a non-traditional manner. This, the Staatsoper am Platz der Republik, played in the Kroll Theatre, from which it drew the name by which it is usually known. Klemperer's period there was of crucial significance in his career and the development of opera in the first half of the 20th century.

The Kroll Oper was an attempt to establish an institution representative of the new Weimar Republic, as the court opera Unter den Linden had represented the monarchy. It was therefore inevitably drawn into the bitter controversies that rent the republic. Growing economic distress, coupled with pressure from the Right, obliged the government to shut the Kroll Oper in July 1931 after only four seasons, before it had had time to fulfil a role in opera similar to that played in 20th-century architecture by the Bauhaus (with which it had close ties). But the performance of operas such as Stravinsky's Oedipus rex and Mavra (both produced by Klemperer), Schoenberg's Erwartung and Die glückliche Hand, Hindemith's Cardillac and Neues vom Tage, Janáček's From the House of the Dead and Weill's Der Jasager, as well as the impressive list of new and recent orchestral works given at the Kroll concerts, is evidence of both bold experiment and lasting musical values. Although the vocal standards of the Kroll Oper were inevitably more modest than those of its parent house on Unter den Linden, the presence of conductors such as Klemperer (who also produced Fidelio and Don Giovanni), Alexander von Zemlinsky and Fritz Zweig ensured high musical standards; and designers such as Ewald Dülberg, Oskar Schlemmer and László Moholy-Nagy had a lasting influence on the development of operatic production after 1945. In particular, the Kroll Oper's drastically stylized production of Der fliegende Holländer (1929) was a decisive forerunner of Wieland Wagner's innovations at Bayreuth.

After the closure of the Kroll Oper, Klemperer remained with the Staatsoper, where on 13 February 1933 he conducted Tannhäuser on the 50th anniversary of Wagner's death. In April 1933 Kemperer, who was of Jewish birth, emigrated, eventually going to the USA (where he had made his début in 1927). He became conductor of the Los Angeles PO (1933–9), conducted the New York PO and the Philadelphia Orchestra, and between 1937 and 1938 played a part in the reorganization of the Pittsburgh Orchestra. In 1939 he underwent an operation for a brain tumour and his health and stability were so gravely undermined that he did little conducting for some years. His next regular engagement was at the Hungarian State Opera (1947–50), where he conducted an extensive repertory before leaving there because of the communist regime's restrictive musical policies. In the early 1950s Klemperer accepted guest engagements in spite of having suffered further accidents and illnesses. But his reputation in Europe had become largely a matter of hearsay.

In 1954 a contract to conduct and make recordings with the Philharmonia Orchestra of London led to his appointment in 1959 as its 'principal conductor for life'. However, in 1964 the orchestra's founder, Walter Legge, announced that he was going to disband it. The players decided to run it themselves as the New Philharmonia Orchestra. Klemperer took the players' side, became the reconstituted orchestra's president and conducted its first concert without fee. He continued to conduct and record with the New Philharmonia until the last concert of his career, which took place at the Royal Festival Hall, London, on 26 September 1971. During his time with the orchestra Klemperer won the affection of the players to a degree unprecedented in his career. The ready wit that lurked behind his forbidding exterior gave much pleasure. After a ragged entry during a rehearsal of Beethoven's Eighth Symphony, the principal cellist asked for 'a clear beat at this point and we will get it together for the first time in musical history'. 'In British musical history', retorted Klemperer.

In 1961 Klemperer made his Covent Garden début, conducting and producing Fidelio; Die Zauberflöte followed in 1962, and Lohengrin in 1963. On his death, his collection of annotated scores, letters and documents was given to the RAM, London. In 1973 a documentary film Otto Klemperer's Journey through his Times, with a soundtrack composed largely of Klemperer reminiscing in German, was made by the Dutch director Philo Bregstein.

Following Toscanini's retirement in April 1954 and Furtwängler's death seven months later, Klemperer came to be generally accepted as the most authoritative interpreter of the central Austro-German repertory. His performances were notable above all for their heroic dimensions and his architectural grasp. The detail revealed by his unfailingly lucid textures (prominent woodwind was a feature of his style) was always subject to his conception of a work as a whole. Yet this does justice only to the Apollonian aspect of an unusually complex musical temperament. Even in his final years, when his tempos became increasingly slow, his performances were distinguished by a power and intensity that always remained subject to his grasp of structure. His interpretation of Mozart was controversial – detractors found it too plain and lacking in nimbleness, admirers praised its strength and directness. In Bruckner he realized the symphonies' monumental grandeur to a degree few conductors have equalled, and in Beethoven, a composer central to his vision, he achieved an uncontested authority. Even the characteristically unburnished Klemperer sound seemed essentially Beethovenian, and he made famous recordings with the Philharmonia and New Philharmonia of the symphonies, Fidelio and the Missa solemnis. But perhaps his outstanding achievement was to reveal the full extent of Mahler's genius, by rescuing his music from the rather sentimental style of interpretation that had become widely accepted.

Otto Klemperer

Klemperer studied composition with Schoenberg in the mid-1930s in Los Angeles and was a prolific if spasmodic composer. His output includes several operas, a considerable number of songs (some settings of his own texts) and nine string quartets, as well as six symphonies, all in a post-Mahlerian style. Not all these works have been performed. Many were extensively revised and a number were destroyed.

WORKS
(selective list)

Das Ziel, opera, 1915, rev. 1970, unperf.

Missa sacra, C, solo vv, chorus, children's chorus, org, orch, 1919; Psalm xlii, Bar, orch, 1919; Merry Waltz, orch, 1959; 6 syms. incl. no.1, 1960, no.2, 1967–9; 9 str qts, no.1 destroyed, nos.2–9, 1968–70; 17 works, 1v, orch, 1967–70; *c*100 songs, 1v, pf

Principal publishers: Hinrichsen, Peters, Schott, Universal

WRITINGS

Erinnerungen an Gustav Mahler (Zürich,1960; Eng. trans., slightly enlarged, as Minor Recollections, London, 1964)

Klemperer on Music, ed. M. Andersen (London, 1986)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Heyworth, ed.: Conversations with Klemperer (London, 1973, 2/1985) [with discography by M. Walker]

W. Legge: 'Otto Klemperer: Pages from an Unwritten Autobiography', Gramophone, li (1973–4), 1169–77, 1351–4

H. Curjel: Experiment Krolloper, 1927–1931, ed. E. Kruttge (Munich, 1975)

P. Heyworth: Otto Klemperer: his Life and Times (Cambridge, 1983–96) [with discography by Michael H. Gray]

A. Boros: Klemperer Magyarországon [Klemperer in Hungary] (Budapest, 1984)

PETER HEYWORTH/JOHN LUCAS

Klenau, Paul (August) von (b Copenhagen, 11 Feb 1883; d Copenhagen, 31 Aug 1946). Danish composer and conductor. He began music studies in Copenhagen in 1900 with Otto Malling (composition) and F. Hilmer (violin). With his move in 1902 to the Berlin Hochschule für Musik, where he studied composition under Bruch and the violin under Halíř, he started to enter Germanic circles, and as he did so came to receive less recognition in Denmark. In 1904 he went to Munich as a pupil of Thuille, after whose death in 1907 he was employed at the Städtisches Theater, Freiburg. But he soon moved to Stuttgart, where he studied with von Schillings (1908) and took a post at the Hofoper (1909). A large number of letters from Klenau to Alban Berg, dated from 1920 until the latter's death in 1935, attest to a close friendship. Some letters to Schoenberg also show that, while probably not a pupil of his, Klenau was certainly intimate with the Schoenberg circle.

Klenau's First Symphony had been performed at the 1908 Munich Tonkünstlerfest, and within five years it was followed by three more. Klenau was in Frankfurt in 1912 as conductor of the Bach Society; however, he returned the following year to Freiburg as Kapellmeister. By now his compositional interests had turned to dramatic music: in 1913 he completed Sulamith, a sacred opera on the Song of Solomon; Kjartan und Gudrun, an opera on Icelandic themes, was conducted by Furtwängler at Mannheim in 1918. During World War I he divided his time between Bavaria and Copenhagen, where in 1920 he participated in the formation of the Danish Philharmonic Society. As conductor of that society (1920–26) he introduced much new music to Denmark, but his attempts to generate interest in Schoenberg's work at that time were unsuccessful. Feeling drawn back to German musical centres, he accepted a concurrent appointment as choir conductor (Konzertdirektor) of the Vienna Konzerthaus-gesellschaft (1922–30). Klenau returned in his later years to composing operas and symphonies in which his style moved away from the techniques of Bruckner and Strauss, who had influenced most of his output, towards Schoenbergian atonal procedures. Such a move, particularly during the Third Reich, aroused considerable controversy. Yet the composer skilfully managed to circumvent charges of decadence by proclaiming his loyalty to the Nazi regime, and by publishing a series of articles claiming that his use of 12-note technique derived from Wagner, avoiding any mention of Schoenberg. Thus his operas Michael Kohlhaas and Rembrandt van Rijn were deemed acceptable to the authorities since Klenau adopted a traditional approach to dramatic structure. The potentially controversial atonal passages were invariably juxtaposed with episodes in which a more folklike tonal idiom predominated.

Klenau remained in Vienna during the Anschluss, composing his final opera Elisabeth von England for the 1938–9 season at Kassel. The choice of subject matter was particularly unfortunate, given the impending declaration of war against Britain, and when the work was later performed at the Berlin Staatsoper in 1940, Klenau was forced not only to alter the opera's title to Die Königin but also to make politically judicious emendations to the libretto that made little dramatic sense.

After this débâcle Klenau left Vienna, returning to Copenhagen in 1940 when advancing deafness began to limit his activities.

WORKS
(selective list)

OPERAS

Sulamith (1, after Bible), Munich, 16 Nov 1913
Kjartan und Gudrun (3, Klenau), Mannheim, 4 April 1918, rev. as Gudrun auf Island, Hagen in Westfalen, 27 Nov 1924
Die Lästerschule (komische Oper, 3, R.S. Hoffmann, after R.B. Sheridan: The School for Scandal), Frankfurt, 25 Dec 1926
Michael Kolhaas (4, Klenau, after H. von Kleist), Stuttgart, 4 Nov 1933, rev. version, Berlin, Staatsoper, 7 March 1934
Rembrandt van Rijn (4, Klenau), Berlin, Staatsoper, 23 Jan 1937
Elisabeth von England (4, Klenau), Kassel, 29 March 1939, rev. as Die Königin, Berlin, Staatsoper, 28 May 1940, as Dronningen, Copenhagen, 8 March 1941
König Tannmor, unpubd

OTHER

Ballets: Klein Idas Blumen (after H.C. Andersen: Den lille Idas blomster), Stuttgart, 1916; Marion, Copenhagen, 1920
Orch: Sym. no.1, f, perf. 1908; Sym. no.2, c, perf. 1911; Sym. no.3 'Te Deum', f, solo vv, chorus, org, orch, perf. 1913; Sym. no.4 'Dante', perf. 1914; Jahrmarkt bei London (Bank Holiday – Souvenir of Hampstead Heath) (1920); Altdeutsche Liedersuite, small orch (1934); Sym. no.5 'Triptikon', 1939; Sym. no.6 'Nordische', 1940; Sym. no.7 'Sturm', 1941; Vn Conc.
Vocal-orch: Gespräche mit dem Tod (6 songs, R.G. Binding), A, orch (1915); Die Weise von Liebe und Tod des Cornets Christoph Rilke (Rilke), Bar, chorus, orch, 1915
Pf: Geschichten von der Vierjährigen, 9 pieces (1915); Klein Ida Walzer [from ballet] (1916); 4 Klavierstücke (1922); 12 Preludes and Fugues (1939); other pieces
Other works: Str Qt, chbr music, songs

MSS in DK-Kk

Principal publishers: Bote & Bock, Hansen, Schott, Universal

WRITINGS
see also Matthes

'Aestetiske problemer i moderne musik', Musik [Copenhagen], i (1917), 7–9
'Arnold Schönberg', Musik [Copenhagen], ii (1918), 129–31; 'Klassisisterne og kunsten' [The classicists and art], ibid., 17–19
'Tonal – a-tonal', Musikblätter des Anbruch, vi (1924), 309–10 [Schoenberg Fs issue, 50th birthday]
'Wie ich Kleists "Kohlhaas" dramatisierte', Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung (6 March 1934)
'Über die Musik meiner Oper "Michael Kohlhaas"', Die Musik, xxvii (1934–5), 260–62; 'Musik im Zeitalter der Stilwende' ibid., 561–6; 'Auf der Suche nach der musikalischen Form' ibid., 651–7; 'Wagners "Tristan" und die "Zwölftönemusik"', ibid., 727–33
'Handwerk und Inspiration', Die Musik, xxviii (1935–6), 645–52
'Das Wesen des Tragischen', ZfM, Jg.106 (1939), 243–6

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DBL (R. Hove, rev. S. Berg)
H.R. Fleischmann: 'Biographische Skizzen moderner Musiker, XVIII: Paul August von Klenau', Musikpädagogische Zeitschrift [Vienna] (1 Sep 1913)
G. Skjerne: 'Paul von Klenau', Illustreret Tidende, lviii/9 (1996), 103–4
W. Matthes: 'Paul von Klenau', ZfM, Jg.106 (1939), 237–43; 'Zur Uraufführung von Paul von Klenaus "Elisabeth von England" am Kasseler Staatstheater', ibid., 492–6
Kraks blå bog 1944–6, 694
P. Hamburger: 'Paul von Klenau', Aschehougs musikleksikon, ii (Copenhagen,1958), 36
E. Levi: 'Atonality, 12-Tone Music and the Third Reich', Tempo, no.178 (1991), 17–21
A.D. McCredie: 'The Comparative Case Histories of Karl Amadeus Hartmann, Clemens von Franckenstein and Paul von Klenau as Variant Examples of Innere Emigration', Glazba, ideje i društvo: svečani zbornik za Ivana Supičića/Music, Ideas, and Society: Essays in Honour of Ivan Supičić, ed. S. Tuksar (Zagreb, 1993), 215–35

THOMAS MICHELSEN/ERIK LEVI

Klencke, Helmina [Wilhelmina Christiane]. See CHÉZY, HELMINA VON.

Klengel, August (Stephan) Alexander (b Dresden, 29 June 1783; d Dresden, 22 Nov 1852). German pianist, organist and composer. He became a pupil of Clementi in 1803, travelling extensively with him; their tour to St Petersburg in 1805 was such a success that Klengel remained there until 1811. After further tours to London, Paris and Italy, Klengel, though a Protestant, was appointed first organist at the Dresden Hofkapelle in 1817. Thereafter he travelled periodically but was decreasingly active as a pianist. His admirers included Fétis and Moscheles; Chopin reported his love of conversing with Klengel, 'from whom there is always something to be learned'.

Musically conservative, Klengel eschewed the contemporary trends of brilliance and emotionalism, favouring the classical clarity of his teacher's generation. He was active in the Bach revival, editing Das wohltemperirte Clavier and performing Bach's fugues publicly as early as 1814. His chief work is a set of 48 canons and fugues, a fascinating example of neo-Baroque counterpoint (see R. Jäger: August Alexander Klengel und seine Kanons und Fugen, diss., U. of Leipzig, 1929). He also wrote piano concertos, chamber music, songs and other works for solo piano.

JOEL SACHS

Klengel, Julius (b Leipzig, 24 Sept 1859; d Leipzig, 27 Oct 1933). German cellist and composer. He was brought up in a musical family (his brother was Paul Klengel) which could provide a piano quintet. He studied the cello with Emil Hegar and composition with Jadassohn. At the age of 15 he joined the Gewandhaus Orchestra, and was its principal cellist from 1881 to 1924. In 1881 he was made Royal Professor at the Leipzig Conservatory, and his pupils included Suggia, Feuermann, Kurtz, Pleeth and Piatigorsky. An important aspect of his teaching was that he never encouraged his students to copy but allowed them to develop their own musical personality. He toured Europe as a soloist and as a member of the Gewandhaus Quartet. Klengel gave the first Russian performance of the Haydn D major Concerto in 1887 in St Petersburg, and in 1889 returned to give a series of concerts with the Brodsky Quartet. He was praised for his fine sense of style and his admirable technique, particularly in Beethoven's sonatas and Bach's solo suites. He composed a great deal of music, including four cello concertos, the beautiful Hymnus for 12 cellos, and chamber works, but they are now of interest only to cellists. His editions of classical cello sonatas and concertos and the Bach suites are still used. (CampbellGC)

WATSON FORBES/MARGARET CAMPBELL

Klenovsky, Nikolay Semyonovich (b Odessa, 1857; d Petrograd, 23 June/6 July 1915). Russian conductor and composer. He graduated from the Moscow Conservatory in 1879, having studied composition with Tchaikovsky and the violin with Ivan Hřimalý. In the same year he assisted Nikolay Rubinstein in preparing the première of Tchaikovsky's Yevgeny Onegin. Besides directing the Moscow University orchestra, Klenovsky was a conductor at the Bol'shoy Theatre in Moscow (1883–93). He also composed much incidental music for plays at the Maliy Theatre. In 1893 he moved to Tbilisi where, besides conducting the town's symphony concerts and taking charge of the local branch of the Russian Musical Society, he was able to develop further his interests in folk music. He had already been associated with Yuly Mel'gunov in harmonizing folksongs, and in 1895 he issued his own anthology, Etnograficheskiy kontsert: sbornik pesen russkikh i inorodcheskikh [An ethnographical concert: a collection of songs of the Russians and other peoples of the Empire] (reprinted in Moscow, 1926). From 1902 to 1906 he was deputy director of the imperial chapel in St Petersburg. As a composer, Klenovsky earned praise from Tchaikovsky, and it was in fact to Klenovsky that Vsevolozhsky (director of the imperial theatres) first offered The Queen of Spades as a subject for an opera; only when he failed to make any progress with the idea was the libretto passed to Tchaikovsky. Klenovsky's three ballets were successfully mounted, but any successes among his other works were only transitory, and most of his music remains unpublished.

WORKS

Prelesti gashisha [The Delights of Hashish] (ballet), 1885; Svetlana (ballet), 1886; Salanga (ballet), 1900; 4 cants.; Georgian liturgy (Moscow, n.d.); Mirazhi [Mirages], sym. picture; other orch pieces

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'Sovremenniye muzikal'niye deyateli: N.S. Klenovskiy' [Contemporary Musicians: N.S. Klenovskiy], RMG, vii (1900), 10–14

DAVID BROWN

Kleoneides. See CLEONIDES.

Klephoorn (Dut.). See KEYED BUGLE.

Klerk, Albert de (b Haarlem, 4 Oct 1917; d Haarlem, 2 Dec 1998). Dutch organist, composer and conductor, son of the Haarlem musician Joseph de Klerk. At the age of 16 he succeeded Hendrik Andriessen as organist of St Josephkerk in Haarlem. He then studied organ at the Amsterdam Conservatory with Anthon van der Horst and analysis with Andriessen. He graduated with honours in 1939 and was awarded the Prix d'Excellence in 1941. From 1956 to 1983 he was city organist of Haarlem, and from 1964 to 1983 principal organ teacher at the Amsterdam Conservatory.

Together with Herman Strategier and Jan Mul, also pupils of Andriessen, De Klerk pursued Andriessen's devotion to Roman Catholic church music, in particular that for laymen. He wrote outstandingly for the organ in a conventional style of rich harmony, as well as masses and other works for chorus.

WORKS
(selective list)

Org works incl.: Sonata, 1942; Conc., 1964; Conc., 1967; Suite concertante, org, str, 1976; 12 Images; Octo fantasiae; Ricercare

Choral: Missa 'Mater Sanctae laetitiae', female chorus, org, 1948; Missa 'Sancti Pape Pii Decimi', chorus, org, 1956, arr. org, 1977; La matinale, chorus, pf, 1962; TeD, Mez, chorus, orch, 1979

Chbr music, songs, works for carillon

Principal publisher: Donemus

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Visser: 'Albert de Klerk: Missa "Mater sanctae laetitiae", Ricercare for Organ', Sonorum speculum, no.23 (1965), 26–35

ROGIER STARREVELD/LEO SAMAMA

Kletzki, Paul [Klecki, Pawel] (b Łódź, 21 March 1900; d Liverpool, 5 March 1973). Swiss conductor and composer of Polish birth. He studied at the Warsaw Conservatory (composition, and the violin with Emil Młynarski) and later at the Berlin Academy. After playing in the Łódź PO, he became known as a composer and made his début at Berlin in 1923 conducting his own works. He settled there until 1933, when he went to Venice and then Milan, where he taught composition and orchestration at the Scuola di Musica. After a year (1937–8) as musical director of the Kharkiv PO (USSR), he settled in Switzerland, taking Swiss nationality in 1947.

From 1945 Kletzki travelled widely as a guest conductor, making his British début with the Philharmonia Orchestra in 1947 and spending a season (1954–5) as principal conductor of the Liverpool PO. After tours in Central and South America he made his North American début in 1959 with the Philadelphia Orchestra. He was musical director of the Dallas SO (1960–63), then, in Switzerland, of the Berne SO (1964–6) and, on Ansermet's retirement, of the Suisse Romande Orchestra (1967–70). A conductor of wide experience and accomplished technique, he made a number of recordings which show his characteristic lucidity and freshness of spirit. These reflect an eclectic repertory ranging from Beethoven through Mahler and Sibelius to Szymanowski and Lutosławski. Kletzki's compositions, housed in the Zentralbibliothek, in Zürich, include four symphonies, violin and piano concertos, four string quartets and other chamber music and songs, but most were destroyed during World War II.

NOËL GOODWIN

Kleven, Arvid (b Trondheim, 29 Nov 1899; d Oslo, 24 Nov 1929). Norwegian composer. He showed considerable musical gifts as a child and went on to study with Gustav Fredrik Lange in Oslo before continuing his education in Paris. He was employed as a flautist in the orchestra of the National Theatre in Oslo in 1918; when the Oslo PO was founded in 1919, Kleven joined the flute section as principal and remained with the orchestra until his early death (from rheumatic fever), also playing the flute and piano in other establishments.

Kleven's music, which was open to various influences from continental Europe, stood out against the general conservatism of Norwegian musical life at the beginning of the 20th century; his style progressed from a rather Debussian Impressionism, as in the symphonic poem Lotusland (1921), composed over several months in Paris, via another, and rather less episodic, symphonic poem, Skogens søvn ('The Sleeping Forest', 1923), to the more Expressionist Symphonic Fantasy of 1926 and the Sinfonia libera of 1927. The Symphonic Fantasy was received by the reactionary critics of Oslo as verging on the atonal, and the Sinfonia libera as 'a monstrous delirium of sounds' and 'an aimless heap of fantastically ugly disharmonies'. Kleven was revising the latter work at the time of his death, and it has been preserved only partially intact. Had he survived, he would almost certainly have been a major voice in Norwegian music in the middle decades of the 20th century.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Lotusland, op.5, 1921; Skogens søvn [The Sleeping Forest], op.9 (1923); Symphonic Fantasy, op.15 (1926); Sinfonia libera in due parti 1927, rev. 1928, partially lost
Chbr: Vn Sonata, op.10 (1925)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Grinde: Norsk musikkhistorie (Oslo, 1971, 3/1981; Eng. trans., 1991), 289–91
A.O. Vollsnes: 'Arvid Kleven – et kort liv', Norges musikkhistorie, iv (Oslo, forthcoming)

MARTIN ANDERSON

Klezmer (Yiddish). A performer of instrumental music in the Ashkenazi Jewish tradition. See JEWISH MUSIC, IV, 3(ii).

KLF [Kopyright Liberation Front]. British contemporary club dance music duo, comprising Bill Drummond (William Butterworth; b South Africa, 29 April 1953) and Jimmy Cauty (b 1954). Drummond was an influential part of the Liverpool music scene in the 1980s, managing Julian Cope and playing in Big in Japan; Cauty formed Brilliant in the early 1980s, an attempt to fuse rock and dance styles. They first worked together under a variety of pseudonyms including Disco 2000, the Justified Ancients of Mu Mu (JAMMS), the Timelords (with a novelty hit single Doctorin' The Tardis, 1988) and Space. Space released an eponymous classic early ambient house album (1991), a spin-off from Cauty's work at the time with the Orb.

The first JAMMS album, 1987 What the Fuck is Going On? (KLF Communications, 1987), mixed early big beat with ranting vocals but was withdrawn from release over illegal samples. Cauty and Drummond reportedly burnt all but three copies of Whitney Joins the Jamms, although some of its tracks were later released on the first KLF album, Shag Times (KLF Communications, 1987). They returned to ambient house for the pioneering Chill Out (KLF Communications, 1990). Such notoriety helped publicize the most successful KLF album, The White Room (KLF Communications, 1991), which included the world-wide hit singles '3AM Eternal' and 'Last Train to Trancentral'. Self-managed and -promoted with a unique visual and almost political flamboyance, they officially disbanded at the Brit Awards in 1992. They later worked as K2 Plant Hire and the K Foundation for various 'art terrorism' projects including a documentary film of them burning a million pounds in cash.

IAN PEEL

Klička, Václav (b Prague, 1 Aug 1882; d Prague, 22 May 1953). Czech harpist and composer. The son of the organist Josef Klička and brother of the harpist Helena Klìčková-Nebeská, from 1897 to 1903 he studied the harp with Hanuš Trneček and theory and composition with Karel Knittl and Karel Stecker at the Prague Conservatory. From 1903 to 1910 he was a member of the orchestra at the Plzeň theatre, then taking up a solo career. He gave concerts in London, Hamburg, Berlin, Vienna and other European cities, and became one of the leading harpists of the day.

During World War I Klička was active in the Netherlands not only as a performer, but also as a propagandist for Czech music and Czech independence. After the war he returned to Prague, and in 1922 he succeeded his sister as professor of harp at the conservatory, a position he held until the Nazi occupation. He continued his concert tours in Slovakia, Poland, Austria and elsewhere, and after 1945 again took a vigorous part in Czech musical life. Among his many distinguished pupils was Libuše Poupětová. His compositions, principally for the harp, consist of original works and arrangements, including fantasies on Czech and Slavonic folksongs and variations on themes of Krumpholtz and Mozart. He also wrote a book about the harp, Cesta královského nástroje (Nymburk, 1944).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS

V. Klička: Autobiographical memoir, Sborník na pamět 125 let konservatoře hudby v Praze [Commemorative volume for the 125th anniversary of the Prague Conservatory], ed. V. Blažek (Prague, 1936), 338–75

M. Zunová: 'Harfová škola na státaí konservatoři', ibid., 52–3

L. Poupětová: Obituary, HRo, vi (1953), 459

M. Zunová-Skalska: 'Příspěvek k dějinam našeho harfového umění' [A contribution to the history of our art of playing the harp], 150 let pražské konservatoře, ed. V. Holzknecht (Prague, 1961), 134

MIROSLAV K. ČERNÝ/R

Klien, Walter (b Graz, 27 Nov 1928; d Vienna, 10 Feb 1991). Austrian pianist. He studied the piano, composition and conducting in Frankfurt (1939–45), in Graz (1946–9), with Josef Dichler at the Vienna Music Academy (1950–53), and also with Michelangeli. He won prizes at the Bolzano Busoni Competition for pianists (1951 and 1952) and the Marguerite Long-Jacques Thibaud Competition in Paris (1954). He made his début in the USA in 1969. As well as recitals, he gave concerts with many leading orchestras and conductors. He was known equally for the clarity of his technique, the coolness and precision of his touch and his stylistic assurance. His many recordings include the first complete version of Brahms's works for piano solo, the complete works for piano solo of Mozart and the complete piano sonatas of Schubert, as well as chamber music and lieder and music by such 20th-century composers as Stravinsky, Janáček and Honegger.

RUDOLF KLEIN

Klimovitsky, Abram Iosifovich (b Leningrad, 7 Sept 1937). Russian musicologist. He graduated from the Leningrad Conservatory in 1961 after studying music theory with Yury Tyulin. From 1962 Klimovitsky taught music theory at the conservatory and in 1971 he joined the staff of the Russian Institute for the History of the Arts, Leningrad, where he obtained the Kandidat degree in 1972. He took the doctorate in 1982 at the All-Union Academic Research Institute for the Study of Art, Moscow, and was appointed professor at the Leningrad Conservatory in 1985. He became chief research fellow at the Institute for the History of the Arts, Leningrad, in 1995. He has participated in numerous international congresses and is a member of the Union of Composers of Russia (from 1979), the Gesellschaft für Musikforschung (from 1984) and the Russian-German Tchaikovsky Society (from 1997). A well-known lecturer and writer on music analysis, he is also recognized in Russia as a supervisor of innovative graduate and postgraduate studies.

Klimovitsky's scholarly interests range from autograph studies to the history of European culture. His work is dominated by three concerns: the creative process of composition in its historical context (including psychological, sociological and cultural factors), the mutual influence of Russian and West European musical cultures and the examination of the mechanisms by which music has been integrated into European cultural development.

One of the foremost music palaeographers in Russia, Klimovitsky has discovered and attributed many manuscripts, including those by Beethoven, Brahms, Tchaikovsky, Stravinsky and Schoenberg. After having studied the details of an autograph, he has arrived at new readings of the structure and semantics of a composition and has revised the chronology and significance of a work. His musical analysis integrates methods from different disciplines, drawing on structuralism, linguistic analysis (of the Moscow-Tartu school), traditional German hermeneutics, psychology and semiotic theory.

Following a study of the sonata form in the works of Domenico Scarlatti (1967), Klimovitsky concentrated on Beethoven. In his writings of the 1960s and 70s, Klimovitsky outlined how Beethoven's sketching process was used as a weapon against stylistic inertia (1977). He also explored (1979) how the sketches became a model of the creative process for later composers, who were trying to break free from the influence of their closest predecessors while reviving and continuing older traditions. This research produced a remarkable analysis of Beethoven's copy of Palestrina's motet Gloria Patri and the String Quartet op.132 (1977), as well as a study of Brahms's copy of a sonata in E minor by Domenico Scarlatti (1978).

During the 1980s and 90s Klimovitsky undertook a comparative study of Russian and German culture based on the works of Shostakovich and Schoenberg (1989, 1995). He has also written extensively on Tchaikovsky, focussing on audiences' perception of Tchaikovsky's music during the 'Silver Age', 1890–1917 (1993), the composer's perception of 18th-century Russian literary culture (1995) and Tchaikovsky's relationship to Wagner (1996). In these studies Klimovitsky explores new avenues of inquiry, such as the interaction of different national cultures within a European tradition and the interpretation of previous eras within an individual national culture. In addition to his work on composers of the past, he has written many articles on contemporary Russian music.

WRITINGS

'Zarozhdeniye i razvitiye sonatnoy formï v tvorchestve Domeniko Skarlatti' [The origin and development of sonata form in the work of Domenico Scarlatti], Voprosï muzïkal'noy formï, ed. V.V. Protopopou, i (1967), 13–61; enlarged and submitted separately as CSc diss., Russian Institute for the History of the Arts, 1972

'O kul'minatsii pervoy chasti Geroicheskoy simfonii Betkhovena ("Novaya tema", yeyo istoki, traditsii)' [The climax of the first movement of Beethoven's Eroica Symphony ('the new theme', its sources and traditions)], Lyudvig van Betkhoven: ėstetika, tvorcheskoye naslediye, ispolnitel'stvo, ed. Yu A. Kremlev (Leningrad, 1970), 134–53 with V. Selivanov: 'Betkhoven i filosovskaya revolyutsiya v Germanii' [Beethoven and the philosophical revolution in Germany], Voprosï teorii i ėstetiki muzïki, x (1971), 199–230 with V. Selivanov: 'Betkhoven i Gegel' [Beethoven and Hegel], Voprosï teorii i ėstetiki muzïki, xi (1972), 131–44

'O glavnoy teme i zhanrovoy strukture pervogo Allegro "Geroicheskoy"' [The principal subject and genres structure of the first Allegro of the 'Eroica'], Betkhoven: sbornik statey, ed. N. Fishman, ii (Moscow, 1972), 74–100 with V. Selivanov: 'O nekotorïkh muzïkal'nïkh privyazannostyakh Gegelya' [Some musical interests of Hegel], Voprosï teorii i ėstetiki muzïki, xii (1973), 102–15

'Gloria Patri von Palestrina als Modell des "Heiligen Dankgesangs" aus Beethovens Streichquartett op.132', Beethoven Congress: Berlin 1977, 513–17 [in Ger., Russ.]

'Tvorcheskiy protsess v rukopisyakh Betkhovena' [The creative process in Beethoven's manuscripts], SovM (1977), no.3, pp.93–101

'Ob odnoy neizvestnoy rukopisi Bramsa' [An unknown manuscript of Brahms], Pamyatniki kul'turï: noviye otkrïtiya 1978, 211–18

'Autograph und Schaffensprozess: zur Erkenntis der Kompositionenstechnik Beethovens', Zu Beethoven: Aufsätze und Annotationen, ed. H. Goldschmidt (Berlin, 1979), 149–66

'Iz istorii kollektsionirovaniya Betkhovenskikh rukopisey v Rossii' [The history of the Beethoven manuscript collections in Russia], Pamyatniki kul'turï: novoye otkrïtiya: 1979, 185–96

O tvorcheskom protsesse Betkhovena: issledovaniye [Beethoven's creative process: an investigation] (Leningrad, 1979)

'Novoye o Betkhovene' [New aspects of Beethoven], Pamyatniki kul'turï: novoye otkrïtiya 1980, 245–50

ed., with L. Kovnatskaya and M. Sabinina: Istoriya i sovremennost' [History and the present] (Leningrad, 1981) [incl. 'Zametki po Betkhoveniane' [Notes on Beethoveniana], 55–119
'O raneye neizvestnom avtografe Betkhovena' [A hitherto unknown Beethoven autograph], Pamyatniki kul'turï: novoye otkrïtiya 1981, 196–8
'Chernovaya notnaya tetrad' Betkhovena' [Beethoven's rough notebook], Pamyatniki kul'turï: novoye otkrïtiya 1983, 286–94
'K opredeleniyu printsipov nemetskoy traditsii muzïkal'nogo mïshleniya: novoye ob ėskiznoy rabote Betkhovena nad glavnoy temoy Devyatoy simfonii' [Towards a definition of the principles of the German tradition of musical thought: new aspects of Beethoven's sketches for the main subject of the Ninth Symphony], Muzïkal'naya klassika i sovremennost': voprosï istorii i ėstetiki, ed. A.L. Porfir'eva (Leningrad, 1983), 94–121
'Vtoraya simfoniya S. Slonimskogo v svete novïkh tendentsiy sovremennogo muzïkal'nogo tvorchestva' [The Second Symphony of Slonimsky in the light of new trends in contemporary music], Sovremennïye problemï sovetskoy muzïki, ed. V. Smirnov (Leningrad, 1983), 63–82
'Dve "Pesni o Blokhe" (Betkhovena i Musorgskogo) v instrumentovke Igorya Stravinskogo (k izucheniyu tvorcheskogo formirovaniya kompozitora)' ['Two "Songs about the Flea" (by Beethoven and Musorgsky) in Igor' Stravinsky's scoring (an investigation of a composer's creative process)], Pamyatniki kul'turï: novoye otkrïtiya 1984, 196–216
'Opernoye tvorchestvo Sergeya Slonimskogo' [The operas of Sergey Slonimsky], Sovremennaya sovetskaya opera, ed. A.L. Porfir'yeva (Leningrad, 1985), 24–60
'O romanse Glinki "Lyublyu tebya, milaya roza" (k probleme spetsifiki kompozitorskogo slukha)' [Glinka's romance 'I love you, sweet rose' (on the problem of the specifics of a composer's ear)], Ėvolyutsionnïye protsessï muzïkal'nogo mïshleniya, ed. A.L. Porfir'yeva (Leningrad, 1986), 69–82
'Eine unbekannte Skizze zur IX. Sinfonie von Beethoven', BMw, xxviii (1986), 139–42
'Lichnost' i tvorcheskiy protsess Betkhovena kak sotsiokul'turnïy fenomen' [Beethoven's personality and creative process as a socio-cultural phenomenon], Iskusstvo i sotsiokul'turnïy kontekst, ed. I. Ioskevich (Leningrad, 1986), 111–35
'Opera S. Slonimskogo "Master i Margarita"' [Slonimsky's opera 'The Master and Margarita'], Problemï teatral'nogo naslediya M.A. Bulgakova, ed. A.A. Al'tshuller and others (Leningrad, 1987), 105–18
'Die sowjetische Beethoven-Forschungen in den gegenwärtigen Etappe', BMw, xxix (1987), 323–7
'Zametki o Shestoy simfonii Chaykovskogo (k probleme: Chaykovsky na poroge XX veka)' [Notes on Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony (on the problem: Tchaikovsky on the threshold of the 20th century)], Problemï muzïkal'nogo romantizma, ed. A.L. Porfir'yeva (Leningrad, 1987), 109–29
'Muzïkal'nïy tekst, istoricheskiy kontekst i problemï analiza muzïki' [Musical text, historical context and problems of musical analysis], SovM (1989), no.4, pp. 70–81
'Opera Yuriya Falika "Plutni Skapena"' [Yury Falik's opera 'Plutni Skapena'], Sovetskaya muzïka 70–80-kh godov: Ėstetika – teoriya – praktika, ed. V.B. Val'kova (Leningrad, 1989), 153–81
'Shostakovich i Betkhoven (nekotorïye istorichesko-kul'turnïye paralleli)' [Shostakovich and Beethoven (some parallels in history and culture)], Traditsii muzïkal'noy nauki, ed. L.G. Kovnatskaya (Leningrad, 1989), 177–205
'Betkhoven i traditsiya (k voprosu o fenomene muzïkal'noy nasledstvennosti)' [Beethoven and tradition (on the phenomenon of musical inheritance)], Muzïka – yazïk – traditsiya [Music – language – tradition], ed. V.G. Karcovnik (Leningrad, 1990), 125–41 [incl. Eng. summaries]
'Neizvestnïye stranitsï ėpistolyarii Chaykovskogo' [Unknown pages of Tchaikovsky's correspondence], SovM (1990), no.6, pp.99–103
Lichnostta i tvorcheskiyat protses na Betkhoven [Personality and the creative process in Beethoven] (Sofia, 1991) [selected essays in Bulg.]
'Kul'tura pamyati i pamyat' kul'turï: k voprosu o mekhanizme muzïkal'noy traditsii (Domeniko Skarlatti – Iogannessa Bramsa)' [The culture of memory and the memory of culture: on the mechanism of musical tradition (Domenico Scarlatti – Johannes Brahms)], I. Brams: chertï stilya: sbornik nauchnïkh trudov (St Petersburg, 1992), 238–68
'Čajkovskij und das russische "Silberne Zeitalter"', Čajkovskij-Symposium: Tübingen 1993, 155–64
'"Pikovaya dama" Chaykovskogo: kul'turnaya pamyat' i kul'turnïye predchuvstviya' [Tchaikovsky's 'Queen of Spades': cultural memory and cultural premonitions], Rossiya, Yevropa: kontaktï muzïkal'nïkh kul'tur, ed. E. Khodorkovskaya (St Petersburg, 1994), 221–74
'"Lyudi dolzhnï znat', chto ya khochu skazat'" (Shyonberg v Peterburge)' ['People must know what I want to say' (Schoenberg in St Petersburg)], MAk (1995), nos.4–5, pp.166–74; (1996), no.1, pp.217–21
'Otzvuki russkogo sentimentalizma v pushkinskikh operakh Chaykovskogo' [Echoes of Russian sentimentalism in Tchaikovsky's Pushkin operas], MAk (1995), no.1, pp.167–78
'Yeshchyo raz o teme-monogramme D–Es–C–H' [More on the monagram subject D–E flat–C–B], D.D. Shostakovich: sbornik statey k 90-letiyu so dnya rozhdeniya, ed. L. Kovnatskaya (St Petersburg, 1996), 249–68
'"Vagnerianstvo" pozdnego Chaykovskogo: kul'turnoye-psikhologicheskiye aspektï' [Wagnerism in late Tchaikovsky: aspects of culture and psychology], Germaniya, Rossiya, Ukraina: muzïkal'nïye svyazi: istoriya i sovremennost' (St Petersburg, 1996), 106–22
'Das Wagnerbild Tschaikovskys', Staatsoper Unter den Linden Berlin (Berlin, 1996), 58–62
'Arnol'd Shyonberg v Peterburge', Zhurnal lyubiteley iskusstv (1997), nos.6–7, pp.55–77

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Jiránek: 'A.I. Klimovitskiy: tvorcheskom protsesse Bethovena' [A.I. Klimovitsky: the creative process in Beethoven], HV, xvii (1980), 179–80
S. Rïtsarev: 'Uroki Betkhovena' [The lessons of Beethoven], SovM (1980), no.8, pp.126–9

BORIS ARONOVICH KATZ

Klindworth, Karl (Ludwig) (b Hanover, 25 Sept 1830; d Stolpe, nr Oranienburg, 27 July 1916). German pianist, conductor and teacher. As a child he was trained as a violinist, but he later taught himself the piano. The chief passion of his youth was arranging and playing operatic scores for the keyboard. Unable to afford violin studies with Spohr, at the age of 17 he took a job as conductor of a travelling theatre company, an experience which taught him much about the art of arrangement. 'I had to be very alert in adapting the instrumentation to my limited resources', he said (MT, August 1898). Wagner later attributed Klindworth's 'self-possession and command over the orchestra' to this early practical background. In 1852 Klindworth met Liszt, an event which was crucial to his entire development. Liszt invited Klindworth to Weimar as his pupil, where with his fellow students Cornelius, Bülow, Raff and the American William Mason he formed a 'Society of Murls' (or anti-Philistine 'Moors'), with Liszt as their Padischah, or president (Liszt's letter to Klindworth on 2 July 1854). The Society's chief function was to pave the way for the 'Music of the Future', particularly that of Liszt and Wagner. Liszt paid the group a great compliment by marking the manuscript of his B minor Sonata 'For the Murls' Library'. During his stay in Weimar Klindworth also met Joachim, Reményi, Brahms and Berlioz. After two years in Weimar, Klindworth's attachment to the ideals of the New German School was complete.

In 1854 Klindworth moved to London where he remained for 14 years, appearing as a pianist and conductor. The Musical Times (January 1855) commented on the 'beautiful touch, the fine expression, and accurate reading of this young artist'. Nonetheless, Klindworth never had much success in London's musical life, which he found too conservative. He mounted a series of ambitious chamber and orchestral programmes (conducted by himself) which were conspicuously unsuccessful owing to his insistence on including new music along with the old. His most ambitious undertaking, a performance of Anton Rubinstein's massive 'Ocean' Symphony in 1861, was accorded only a lukewarm reception. In April 1855 Klindworth met Wagner, who had sought him out at the suggestion of Liszt. Wagner was struck by Klindworth's physical appearance: 'If the fellow had a tenor voice I should almost certainly kidnap him', he wrote to Otto Wesendonck, 'because ... he meets every requirement for my Siegfried, especially with regards to physique'. Wagner was deeply moved by Klindworth's performance of Liszt's B minor Sonata. This meeting was regarded by Klindworth as the second great turning-point in his career, for Wagner entrusted him with the task of preparing piano scores of the Ring, a work which occupied him for many years. While Wagner admired these arrangements (he called Klindworth 'the first among my Klavierauszügler' – or 'piano extractors'), he found them technically 'atrocious' and feared that they were beyond the capacity of most pianists; in fact, it was not until he heard Das Rheingold and Die Walküre played by Bülow in 1857 that he experienced them in all their fullness and beauty. In 1867 Klindworth became a founding member of the ironically titled 'Working Men's Society', a group of musicians which included Edward Dannreuther, Walter Bache (Liszt's best-known British pupil) and Alfred Hipkins. They used to play through and discuss the lesser-known works of Beethoven, Schumann, Liszt, Berlioz and Wagner; Klindworth played parts of Wagner's Ring to his colleagues in 1868.

When the Moscow Conservatory was founded, its director Nikolay Rubinstein invited Klindworth to join the piano faculty in 1868, a position he held for 14 years. He was an influential teacher though he was not popular, according to the Russian music critic Herman Laroche. His association with Wagner did not prevent him from forming a friendship with Tchaikovsky, whose music he helped to introduce to Liszt and other Western musicians. In Moscow he completed work on the Ring arrangement, but was famously obliged to make a second version of Act 2 of Götterdämmerung, because the Russian post-office sent the first one by mistake to Beirut, in the Middle East.

Following the death of Rubinstein in 1882, Klindworth returned to Germany and became the conductor of the Berlin PO (sharing this position with Joachim and Wüllner) and of the Wagner Society in Potsdam, where he introduced Bruckner's Seventh Symphony. In 1884 he founded a piano conservatory in Berlin, which in 1893 was merged with that of Xaver Scharwenka, until the two pianists quarrelled and went their separate ways. At the age of 76 Klindworth adopted a 10-year-old orphan, Winifred Williams. Having trained Winifred to become both a musician and a Wagnerian, Klindworth introduced her to Bayreuth in 1914; she married Siegfried Wagner the following year, and after his death in 1930 she assumed control of the Bayreuth Festival.

Klindworth made a number of effective keyboard arrangements, including Schubert's 'Great' C major Symphony for two pianos, Tchaikovsky's Francesca da Rimini for solo piano (1880), and Mozart's Requiem for four hands (1874). He also rescored various works, including Chopin's F minor Piano Concerto, a composition that he himself played frequently. His original compositions include 24 Studies in all the major and minor keys, and an Elementarische Klavier-Schule. Among his best-known editions are Bach's Das wohltemperirte Clavier (1894), Beethoven's 32 piano sonatas and the complete works of Chopin (1878).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

La Mara [M. Lipsius], ed.: Franz Liszt's Briefe, i (Leipzig, 1893), 158–61; Eng. trans. (New York, 1894)
'Karl Klindworth', MT, xxxix (1898), 513–19 [interview]
M. von Bülow, ed.: Hans von Bülow: Briefe und Schriften (Leipzig, 1899–1908)
Obituaries: W. Nagel, Neue Musik-Zeitung, xxxvii (1916), 380 only; NZM, Jg.83 (1916), 268–9; Signale für die musikalische Welt, lxxiv (1916), 531–2
R. du Moulin Eckart: Neue Briefe von Hans von Bülow (Munich, 1927; Eng. trans., 1931), 3–13
H. Leichtentritt: Das Konservatorium Klindworth Scharwenka (Berlin, 1931)
A. Walker: Franz Liszt, ii: The Weimar Years (New York, 1989), 183–7

JOHN WARRACK/ALAN WALKER

Kling, Henri (Adrien Louis) (b Paris, 14 Feb 1842; d Geneva, 2 May 1918). Swiss horn player, teacher, conductor, organist, composer and writer of Franco-German birth. He grew up in his father's native Karlsruhe from 1844 and learnt the violin, the horn and music theory, eventually studying under the horn virtuoso Jacob Dorn. After some orchestral playing experience he went to Geneva in 1861, where he became a well-known and widely influential musical figure. He took Swiss nationality in 1865. By 1862 he had become first horn at the Geneva opera and Concerts Classiques, where he played for 20 years, and in 1866 he was appointed horn professor at the Geneva Conservatoire. He also taught solfège there from 1884, remaining on the staff until his death. When the city orchestra was founded in 1876 he became joint conductor for two years. In 1879 Kling became singing teacher at the Ecole Secondaire et Supérieure des Jeunes Filles, and about that time undertook conducting posts with the Landwehr band (1881–7), three local choral societies and the Kursaal orchestra (1886), as well as the post of organist of the Reformed church, Cologny (1881–1918).

Kling produced an exceptionally large number of textbooks, articles, reviews for periodicals in Germany (Die Musik, NZM) and France (Le courrier musical), original compositions and arrangements (many for various wind ensembles); he was a well-known adjudicator at brass band and trompe de chasse contests in different countries. His publications reflect his practical concerns, and over half the music consists of arrangements; but his original output explored many genres, including opera, of which he had four performed in Geneva. He wrote an important horn tutor and smaller tutors for other wind instruments, percussion, the mandolin and the double bass. The Modern Orchestration and Instrumentation includes remarks on piano reductions (he edited the Mozart clarinet and horn concertos for solo and piano), dance music, modern sound-effects and national differences in military band constitution and style.

Kling's son Otto (Marius) Kling (b ?Geneva, 1866 or 1867; d ?London, 7 May 1924) went to London in 1890, and was from 1892 manager of the English branch of Breitkopf & Härtel, and from 1915 to his death proprietor of J. & W. Chester.

WRITINGS

Populäre Instrumentationslehre (Hanover, n.d., enlarged 2/1883, further enlarged 3/1888; Eng. trans. as Modern Orchestration and Instrumentation, 1902, enlarged 3/1905)

Praktische Anweisung zum Transponieren (Hanover, 1885; Eng. trans., 1910)
Der volkommene Musik-Dirigent (Hanover, 1890)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (W. Tappolet) [with selective list of works]; RefardtHBM
Obituary, Schweizerische musikpädagogische Blätter, vii (1918), 189
Obituary, MT, lxv (1924), 558 only

DAVID CHARLTON

Klingenstein, Bernhard (b probably at Peiting, nr Schongau, Upper Bavaria, between 2 March 1545 and 1 March 1546; d Augsburg, 1 March 1614). German composer. His gravestone in the cloister of Augsburg Cathedral gives his age at his death as 68. As a boy he was a pupil at the cathedral choir school, and later sang in the polyphonic choir as a sub-deacon. He evidently received no further musical instruction until the late 1570s, when he began to study composition with Johannes de Cleve. By this time, however, he had already been named – on 1 July 1574 – as cathedral Kapellmeister (for a portrait possibly of him in that position see AUGSBURG), having been preferred to the cathedral organist Jacobus de Kerle. (In June 1575 the latter was succeeded by Klingenstein's brother Christoph, who held the post until his death on 10 February 1581.) Klingenstein's duties as Kapellmeister included composing (he presented motets to the cathedral chapter in 1581, 1586 and 1601 and received remuneration), passing judgment on compositions offered by other musicians, and housing and training the choirboys under his care. He held several benefices from the cathedral and also served as Kapellmeister of the Augsburg Jesuit church, St Salvator. He seems to have been generally respected by his colleagues: for example, Gregor Aichinger, in his Liber sacrarum cantionum (1597), praised the cathedral chapter for entrusting its music to his 'skilful and diligent' direction.

The largest extant source of Klingenstein's music is his Liber primus s[acrarum] symphoniarum (1607; a second book is not known to have been printed). It contains 34 Latin motets, most of which are scored for the customary ensembles of four, five and eight voices. Those for seven and eight voices are in Venetian cori spezzati style, possibly as a result of the influence of Aichinger and Hans Leo Hassler. One such work is the eight-part Echo quae gelidas colens latebras, in which the second choir is reserved almost exclusively for echo effects in the form of occasional chords punctuating the longer phrases of the first choir. The works in this collection are arranged by size of ensemble, from largest to smallest, an unconventional practice that gives the place of honour to the last composition, a setting of Cantate Domino for solo bass voice and continuo. It is the first solo vocal concerto known to have been published in Germany and is similar in style to Viadana's solo concertos for low voice in that the continuo part mostly doubles the vocal line (sometimes in a simplified version) but is occasionally independent. Klingenstein's concerto, the only piece in which he is known to have used the continuo, further indicates a close relationship with Aichinger, whose first collection of vocal concertos was published in the same year, 1607.

Rosetum Marianum (1607) comprises 33 five-part settings of German verses praising the Blessed Virgin, all of them based textually and musically on the traditional devotional song Maria zart. Some of the leading composers of the time in southern Germany and Austria are represented in this collection, including Rudolph and Ferdinand de Lassus, Luython, Jacob Regnart, Aichinger, Stadlmayr, Erbach, and Jakob and Hans Leo Hassler. Klingenstein's foreword describes how he distributed the verses of the poem, each composer selecting one verse. He himself chose no.12, Maria süss, hilf dass ich büss. The Triodia sacra (of which only one partbook survives) consists of 41 Latin tricinia designed, according to the title-page, 'for the use of novices as well as the more experienced'. Nine are by Klingenstein himself; the rest include many selected from existing sources, while others were newly composed. More than half are settings of texts from the Mass ('Crucifixus' and Benedictus) or of even-numbered Magnificat verses.

WORKS

Liber primus [34] s[acrarum] symphoniarum, 1–8vv (Munich, 1607)
Motet, 4vv, intabulated lute, 1586[23]; 3 motets, 5, 8vv, 1590[5] (2 repr. in 1607); litany, 8vv, 1596[2]; motet, 5vv, 1604[7]; 9 tricinia, 1605[1]; secular song, 4vv, 1609[28]; 4 bicinia in S. Calvisius: Biciniorum libri duo (Leipzig, 1612); 2 motets, 4vv, 1623[2], 1627[2] (both repr. from 1607, with added bc)

2 motets, 5, 6vv, D-As
2 motets, 4vv, Mbs
1 motet, 10vv, Nst

EDITIONS

Rosetum Marianum: unser lieben Frawen Rosengertlein ... durch 33 beriembte Musicos ... componirt, 5vv (Dillingen, 1604[7]), incl. 1 by Klingenstein; ed. in RRMR, xxiv–xxv (1977)
Triodia sacra ... liber I, 3vv (Dillingen, 1605[1]), incl. 9 by Klingenstein

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (R. Schaal) [incl. further bibliography]
A. Sandberger: 'Bemerkungen zur Biographie Hans Leo Hasslers und seiner Brüder, sowie zur Musikgeschichte der Städte Nürnberg und Augsburg im 16. und zu Anfang des 17. Jahrhunderts', Werke Hans Leo Hasslers, viii, Jg. DTB, v/1 (1904/R), pp.xi–cxii
T. Kroyer: 'Gregor Aichingers Leben und Werke, mit neuen Beiträgen zur Musikgeschichte Ingolstadts und Augsburgs': introduction to DTB, xviii, Jg.x/1 (1909/R), pp.ix–cxxix
A. Singer: Leben und Werke des Augsburger Domkapellmeisters Bernhardus Klingenstein (1545–1614) (diss., U. of Munich, 1921)
A. Layer: Musik und Musiker der Fuggerzeit: Begleitheft zur Ausstellung der Stadt Augsburg (Augsburg, 1959)

WILLIAM E. HETTRICK

Klingsor. German or Hungarian poet, possibly mythical. The name and some features of the tradition seem to go back to a literary figure created by Wolfram von Eschenbach, following Chretien de Troyes' 'clers sages d'astronomie' in the Conte du Graal. In Wolfram's Parzival (*c*1200) Klingsor appears as a descendant of the magician Virgil, a rich duke of Caps (Capua). In the poem of the Wartburgkrieg his background is given as 'ûz Ungerlant' (i.e. from Hungary). The wider tradition mentions that he had received an annual salary from the Hungarian king, and in the Elisabeth-Viten the prophecy of St Elisabeth's birth is attributed to him.

It is uncertain whether there was a poet with the same name as the literary figure of Klingsor the magician. The possibility is supported by the attribution, in the Manessische Liederhandschrift, of the whole Wartburgkrieg complex to 'Klingesor von vngerlant'. From the 15th century onwards the so-called Rätselspiel-Ton (now called the Schwarzer Ton) from the Wartburgkrieg was thought of as a work of Klingsor; in the poem itself Klingsor is mentioned together with other poets who are known to have existed. On the other hand, the Jenaer Liederhandschrift (D-Ju El.f.101) names 'her wolueram' as the author of the Rätselspiel-Ton. In early modern literature Klingsor is named as one of the 12 alte Meister in numerous Meistersinger manuscripts. Finally, in the 17th century, Klingsor is credited with writing one further Ton, the 'Nachtweise'.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Wachinger: 'Klingsor'; 'Der Wartburgkrieg', Die deutsche Literatur des Mittelalters: Verfasserlexikon, ed. K. Ruh and others (Berlin, 2/1977–)

H. Bayer: 'Meister Klingsor und Heinrich von Ofterdingen: die Zeitkritik der Wartburgkrieg-Dichtung und ihre literarischen bzw. geistesgeschichtlichen Quellen', Mittellateinisches Jb, xvii (1982), 157–92

L. Miklautsch: 'Arnive und Klingsor in Albrechts "Jüngerem Titurel"', Germanisch-Romanische Monatsschrift, new ser., xli (1991), 214–23

F. Schanze, B. Wachinger and others, eds.: Repertorium der Sangsprüche und Meisterlieder, v (Tübingen, 1991), 492–538 [Wartburgkrieg-Töne]

T. McFarland: 'Clinschor: Wolfram's Adaptation of the Conte du Graal: the Schastel Marveile Episode', Chrétien de Troyes and the German Middle Ages: London 1988, ed. M.H. Jones and R. Wisbey (Cambridge, 1993), 277–94

S. Tuchel: 'Macht ohne Minne: zu Konstruktion und Genealogie des Zauberers Clinschor im Parzifal Wolframs von Eschenbach', Archiv für das Studium der neueren Sprachen und Literaturen, ccxxxi (1994), 241–57

K. Klein and H. Lomnitzer: 'Ein wiederaufgefundenes Blatt aus dem "Wartburgkrieg"-Teil der Jenaer Liederhandschrift', Beiträge zur Geschichte der deutschen Sprache und Literatur, cxvii (1995), 381–403

LORENZ WELKER

Klinkova, Zhivka (b Samokov, 30 July 1924). Bulgarian composer, pianist and conductor. In 1951 she graduated from the Sofia Academy of Music, where her teachers were Hadjiev (composition) and Nenov (piano). After working as a conductor and composer with the state-sponsored Kutev folksong and dance ensemble (1951–60), she furthered her composition studies with Wagner-Régeny (1960–66) and then Blacher in Berlin (1966–8). She has become a prolific freelance composer with an output that includes 11 ballets, four operas and a musical, most of which have been performed professionally in state theatres in Germany and the former Czechoslovakia. While Klinkova's emotional, quasi-Romantic idiom, which exhibits considerable melodic invention, draws on the characteristics of Bulgarian folk music, her themes are generally contemporary. In her ballet Than saen ('Vietnamese Poem'), for instance, she connects the magical world of fairies to that of the heroic, war-scarred Vietnamese, while the children's ballet Quenny, the Little Negro examines the issue of racial oppression. The historical themes of both Vassil Levski and Cyril and Methodius contribute to the tradition of Bulgarian grand opera. The opera-ballet Olimpijski ustrem, Sanjat na Kuberten ('Olympic Endeavour, Coubertin's Dream', written to celebrate the 1996 Atlanta Olympic Games, combines a big-band style with symphony orchestra; within its classical operatic structure there are melodies that can be sung by young people and rhythms derived from rock music.

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE

Petko Samohvalko [Boastful Petko] (children's op, N. Trendafilova), 1956, Berlin, 20 April 1960

Kaliakra (ballet, S. Aladjov), 1966, Usti nad Labem, 30 March 1978

Than saen [Vietnamese Poem] (ballet, L.N. Kanh), 1972, Brno, 17 Dec 1976

Quenny, the Little Negro (children's ballet, Klinkova), 1973, Kiel, 30 Nov 1975

Isle of Dreams (musical, P. Panchev), Teplice, 11 Nov 1978

The Most Improbable (fairy-tale op, Klinkova), 1980

Cyril and Methodius (op, V. Markovski and J. Gyermek), 1981, Bydgoszcz, 7 Feb 1986 [concert perf.]

Vassil Levski (op, Klinkova), 1992

Olimpijski ustrem, Sanjat na Kuberten [Olympic Endeavour, Coubertin's Dream] (rock op-ballet, Klinkova), 1995

Sofia (op, Klinkova), 1996, unperf.

OTHER

Orch: Sinfonietta no.1, 1960; Bulgarian Sym. Suite no.1, 1963; Vn Conc., 1964; Ballad, 1972; Conc., 2 vn, timp, str, 1973; Sym. no.2, 1974; Cant., chorus, orch, 1982; Pf Conc., str, 1992

Chbr and solo inst: Pf Sonata, 1950; Trio, bagpipes, 1955; Sonata, vn, pf, 1963; Sonata, fl, va, 1969; Duo, 2 kavals, 1972; Trio, fl, ob, bn, 1974; 7 Frescoes, 2 fl, 1975; 8 Preludes, 2 fl, 1975; 10 Pieces, folk ens, 1978

Principal publisher: Muzika

MAGDALENA MANOLOVA

Klio [Clio]. The Muse of history, represented with the kithara. See MUSES.

Klobásková, Libuše. See DOMANÍNSKA, LIBUŠE.

Klobučar, Berislav (b Zagreb, 28 Aug 1924). Croatian conductor. He studied in Salzburg with Lovro von Matačić and Clemens Krauss, and was on the conducting staff at the Zagreb Opera, 1943–51. His Vienna Staatsoper début was in 1953, and during the late 1950s he was invited by Carl Ebert to work at the Städtische Oper, Berlin. He was general director at Graz, 1960–71; during this time he began to tour more widely, and also appeared several times at Bayreuth. He made his début at the Metropolitan in 1968, where he was admired in the Wagner repertory. He was music director at the Stockholm Royal Opera, 1972–81, and at Nice, 1983–8, taking the Nice Opéra production of the Ring to Paris (Théâtre des Champs-Elysées) in 1988. In 1989 he conducted Montemezzi's now rarely-heard L'amore dei tre re at Palermo, and in 1995 an acclaimed Parsifal in Stockholm. He favours broad, steady tempos and close integration of voices and orchestra, in performances regarded as competent and secure rather than inspirational.

NOËL GOODWIN

Klöcker, Dieter (b Wuppertal, 1936). German clarinettist. He began to play at the age of seven on an E♭ clarinet, and subsequently studied with Karl Kroll and Jost Michaels. Klöcker was principal clarinettist in several German orchestras before deciding in 1969 to concentrate on solo and chamber music. He has undertaken research into forgotten works for the clarinet and made more than 400 recordings, many with the Consortium Classicum, which he founded. In 1975 Klöcker was appointed professor of clarinet and chamber music at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik in Freiburg.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Haase: 'Dieter Klöcker', The Clarinet, xii/3 (1985), 38–42

L. Magistrelli: 'An Interview with Dieter Klöcker', The Clarinet, xxiii/2 (1996), 40–42

PAMELA WESTON

Klöffler, Johann Friedrich (b Kassel, 20 April 1725; d Burgsteinfurt, 21 Feb 1790). German conductor and composer. From 1750 he was a musician and administrator at the court of the Counts of Bentheim and Steinfurt. In 1752 he founded the court orchestra, in 1753 became Konzertmeister and from 1754 was music director there; in 1757 he also took a judicial post at the court. After a concert hall was built on the grounds of the Steinfurt castle in 1770, Klöffler directed regular public concerts there. For these he composed numerous symphonies, concertos and chamber pieces (mostly for the flute) in the Mannheim style. About half of these works were published, and many were distributed in print and manuscript throughout Germany, the Netherlands, Denmark, Sweden, Finland and England. In 1773 Klöffler became a member of the Utile Dulci society of Stockholm. In 1777 he wrote one of his best-known works, a battle symphony in which two orchestras represent the opposing forces; the work was given in London (26 May 1783) at Almack's Room, sponsored by Salomon and Cramer. From 1781 to 1787 Klöffler made extended concert tours in Germany and to Copenhagen, Vienna, London, St Petersburg, Moscow and elsewhere. He retired from the Steinfurt court in 1789. For bibliography and a thematic catalogue see U. Götze: Johann Friedrich Klöffler (1725–1790) (diss., U. of Münster, 1965).

WORKS

only those extant; printed works published in Amsterdam unless otherwise stated

ORCHESTRAL

Sinfonies périodiques: nos.iii in E♭, xv in B♭, xxiii in D (1769); no.i in D (1774); no.xxv in E♭ (1774); no.iii in F (Berlin, 1775 or 1776); no.i in C (n.d.)

Unpubd syms.: Bataille, 2 orchs, 1777, D-BFb, SWl, arr. 1 orch, *c*1781, BFb; 9 in BFb, RH, Rtt, SWl

Concs.: 3 for fl, 3 for 2 fl, op.1 (1765 or 1766); 3 for fl, op.2 (1767); 3 for 2 fl, op.3 (1766 or 1777); 1 for pf/hpd (1784); 1 for hpd, *c*1781, BFb; 8 for fl (incl. 2 for 2 fl), BFb, RH, Rtt, SWl, DK-Kk

CHAMBER

6 duettes, 2 fl, op.4 (1771); 6 sonatas, fl, bc, op.5 (1774); 6 sonates, pf, op.6 (1774); 6 duettes, 2 fl, op.7 (Berlin, 1780); 2 nonetto, fl, str, 1773, D-BFb, SWl; qnt, fl, str, 1773, RH, DK-Kk, S-Skma; qt, fl, str, DK-Kk; 6 qts for fl, D-BFb, DK-Kk, 3 ed. J. Kremer (Frankfurt, 1991–4); 4 duets for fl, D-BFb, DK-Kk

URSULA GÖTZE

Klokkenspel (Dut.). See CARILLON.

Klook. See CLARKE, KENNY.

Klopstock, Friedrich Gottlieb (b Quedlinburg, 2 July 1724; d Hamburg, 14 March 1803). German poet. When still a schoolboy at Schulpforta he conceived the plan to write Der Messias which, inspired by Homer, Virgil, the Bible and Milton, occupied much of his time between the 1740s and 1773, the year in which the 20th and last canto was published. He studied theology and philosophy at Jena and Leipzig from 1745 to 1748, in which year the first three cantos of Der Messias appeared in the Bremer Beiträge. Its immense success led to invitations to Zürich (from Bodmer) and then to Copenhagen, where King Frederik V granted him an annual income and leisure to complete his great epic. In 1770, after the king's death and a change in political conditions, Klopstock moved to Hamburg, where he spent the rest of his life, with the exception of a journey to Karlsruhe during which he met Goethe and various admiring young contemporaries. Although he continued to be revered by many until the end of his life, he lost sympathy with contemporary developments in German literature.

Klopstock's interest in music was awakened by Gerstenberg in Copenhagen in 1764 and he became sufficiently keen to write poems to existing melodies, and to try to persuade eminent contemporary composers to set his odes. Among those who did are Telemann, C.P.E. Bach and Gluck (whom he met in 1775), Reichardt and Naumann. Later composers who set Klopstock include Beethoven, Meyerbeer, Schubert, Spohr, Schumann, Richard Strauss and Mahler (Symphony no.2). Although his poetry in many ways looks back to the Baroque era, he anticipated later developments in the intensely personal and emotional tone of much of his verse. His biblical dramas are stiff and monotonous, but the lyrical outpourings of the early cantos of Der Messias and the finest of the odes enable one to sense the liberating and indeed life-giving impact he had on German literature in the middle of the 18th century.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bock and A.R.C. Spindler, eds.: Klopstocks sämmtliche Werke (Leipzig, 1823–30)

O. Koller: Klopstockstudien (Kremsier, 1889)

K. Goedeke and others: Grundiss zur Geschichte der deutschen Dichtung, iv/1 (Dresden, 1891), 82–110

K. Viëtor: Geschichte der deutschen Ode (Munich, 1923)

G. Müller: Geschichte des deutschen Liedes vom Zeitalter des Barocks bis zur Gegenwart (Munich, 1925/R)

E.A. Blackall: The Emergence of German as a Literary Language, 1700–1775 (Cambridge, 1959, 2/1978)

G. Kaiser: Klopstock (Gütersloh, 1963)

L.L. Albertsen: Die freien Rhythmen: Rationale Bemerkungen im allgemeinen und zu Klopstock (Århus, 1971)

C. and W. Michel: 'Friedrich Gottlieb Klopstock, Cidli (1752); Franz Schubert, Das Rosenband (1815): Ein Gedicht und seine Vertonung', Jb des freien deutschen Hochstifts (1975), 102–23

M. Marx-Weber: 'Parodie als Beispiel dichterischer Anpassung an Musik: Klopstocks deutscher Text zu Pergolesis Stabat Mater', Studien zum deutschen weltlichen Kunstlied des 17. und 18. Jahrhunderts (Wolfenbüttel, 1990), 269–86

A. Oberc: 'Das Rosenband Klopstocka w pieśnach Schuberta i Strausa' [Klopstock's Das Rosenband in songs by Schubert and Strauss], Wiersz i jego pieśniowe interpretacje: zagadnienie tekstów wielokrotnie umuzycznianych, ed. M. Tomaszewski (Kraków, 1991), 49–55

PETER BRANSCOMBE

Klose, Friedrich (b Karlsruhe, 29 Nov 1862; d Ruvigliana, Lugano, 24 Dec 1942). German-Swiss composer. He spent his school years in Thun and Karlsruhe, where he received instruction from Lachner and was definitively influenced by Mottl. His studies continued in Geneva with Ruthardt (Klose became a Swiss citizen in 1886) and, most importantly, with Bruckner in Vienna (1886–9). He returned to Geneva to teach at the Academy of Music and from 1891 he worked as a freelance in Vienna, Karlsruhe and Thun. After a year at the Basle Conservatory, he succeeded Thuille at the Munich Akademie der Tonkunst in 1907, and in 1910 he was appointed professor. Increasing attention to his work was reflected in the Friedrich Klose Week celebrated in Munich in June 1918, but in that same year he stopped composing, and in 1919 he resigned his appointment, living in Thun until 1923, and then Tessin.

His music was always written in response to pictorial or poetic ideas, and the symphonic poems contain much of his best work. The influence of Debussy is discernible in his later music, but Klose remained rooted in the Romantic tradition, particularly in the fairy tale opera Ilsebill. He had himself written the texts for several earlier, uncompleted operatic projects. His published memoirs provide valuable insights into Bruckner's personality and into the Viennese musical life of the period, and they also contain aesthetic reflections on, for example, the conception of the 'Gesamtkunstwerk', which Klose thought might be renewed along the lines of Carmen.

WORKS

(selective list)

Ops: Ilsebill: das Märchen von der Fischer und seiner Frau (dramatische Symphonie, H. Hoffmann, after J.L. and W.C. Grimm), Karlsruhe, 7 June 1903; 9 inc. operas

Choral: Mass, d, solo vv, chorus, orch, org (1889); Die Wallfahrt nach Kevlaar (H. Heine), spkr, 3 choruses, orch, org (1910); Der Sonne-Geist (A. Mombert), solo vv, chorus, orch, org (1918)
Inst: Elfenreigen, sym. poem, 1892; Das Leben ein Traum, sym. poem, 1896; Prelude and Double Fugue, org, wind orch (1907); Str Qt, E♭ (1911); Festzug, sym. poem, 1913
Songs incl.: Verbunden (F. Rückert) (1892); 5 Gesänge (G. Bruno) (1918)

MSS in CH-Bu

Principal publishers: Drei Masken, Kahnt, Leuckart, Luckhardt, Peters, Universal

WRITINGS

'Über musikalische Erziehung', Die Musik, vii/2 (1907–8), 44–50
'Mein künstlerischer Werdegang', Neue Musik-Zeitung, xxxix/17 (1918), 235–8
Meine Lehrjahre bei Bruckner (Regensburg, 1927)
Bayreuth: Eindrücke und Erlebnisse (Regensburg, 1929)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Louis: 'Friedrich Klose', Die Musik, vii/2 (1907–8), 28–43
H. Reinhart: Der Sonne-Geist von Friedrich Klose (Leipzig, 1919)
H. Knappe: Friedrich Klose zum 80. Geburtstag (Lugano, 1942)
E. Refardt: 'Der kompositorische Nachlass Friedrich Kloses', SMz, xciii (1953), 215–18
O. Biba: 'Friedrich Kloses Präludium und Doppelfuge in C-moll', Mitteilungsblatt [Internationale Bruckner-Gesellschaft], no.12 (1977), 5–8
A. Laubenthal: 'Zum Thema "Form" in der nachwagnerianischen Oper: Friedrich Kloses Dramatische Symphonie Ilsebill', Thurnauer Schriften zum Musiktheater, ed. I. Wundram, U. Kienzle and F. Hartmann (Laaber, 1991), 217–25

PETER ROSS

Klosé, Hyacinthe Eléonore (b Corfu, 11 Oct 1808; d Paris, 29 Aug 1880). French clarinettist. He was notable for his collaboration with the instrument maker Louis-Auguste Buffet in the production of a clarinet incorporating the ring-key mechanism applied to the flute by Theobald Boehm. The clarinet was exhibited in 1839 and patented in 1844 as a 'clarinet with moving rings'. In the 1860s it was given the name of Boehm clarinet. It became increasingly popular and is the system most generally in use today. Klosé came to Paris at an early age and enlisted in the band of a regiment of the Royal Guard. In 1831 he entered the Conservatoire as a pupil of Frédéric Berr, who formed such a high opinion of him that he dedicated his tutor of 1836 to him. Klosé became a bandmaster and taught at the Ecole Militaire de Musique. He played in the orchestra at the Théâtre Italien and appeared occasionally as soloist. When Berr died in 1838, Klosé succeeded him as professor at the Conservatoire and remained there for 30 years. He was a successful and much-loved teacher and had many notable pupils. Klosé wrote an admirable tutor for the Boehm clarinet which is still used extensively. He also wrote many clarinet solos and studies and three tutors adapted to different pitches of the newly invented saxophone. In 1864 he was made a Chevalier of the Légion d'Honneur.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F.G. Rendall: The Clarinet (London, 1954, rev. 3/1971 by P. Bate)
O. Kroll: Die Klarinette (Kassel, 1965; Eng. trans., enlarged, 1968)
P. Weston: Clarinet Virtuosi of the Past (London, 1971)

PAMELA WESTON

Klose, Margarete (b Berlin, 6 Aug 1902; d Berlin, 14 Dec 1968). German mezzo-soprano. After study in Berlin with Marschalk and Bültemann she made her début at Ulm in 1927. From 1928 until 1931 she was a member of the Mannheim Opera, first coming to the notice of a wider public during the Paris Wagner season of 1930. From 1931 she was a member of the Berlin Staatsoper. In 1935 she sang Ortrud under Beecham at Covent Garden and in 1936 she began to appear at Bayreuth. She was heard in London again in 1937 (Fricka, Waltraute and Brangäne), and in 1939 she appeared in Rome for the first time. After the war she sang in North and South America, at the Salzburg Festival and in Italy, Spain, London and Vienna. In 1949 she moved from the Berlin Staatsoper to the Städtische Oper, returning to her old company in 1958. She retired in 1961. Klose's clear, rich voice and dignified stage bearing fitted her admirably for the Wagnerian mezzo roles in which she was best known (as can be heard in many recordings); she was a distinguished Clytemnestra in Elektra and Iphigénie en Aulide, and she also appeared with success as Gluck's Orpheus, Carmen, the Kostelnička (Jenůfa), Delilah and Albert's mother (Albert Herring), and in many of the Verdi mezzo roles. (GV; R. Celletti, R. Vegeto)

PETER BRANSCOMBE

Klosterneuburg. Town in Austria, near Vienna. It is notable for its Augustinian abbey. Founded in 1108 by the Babenberg margraves, it was originally a collegiate chapter, close to the residence of St Leopold, Margrave of Austria. Although the residence was subsequently moved to Vienna, Klosterneuburg's commanding position on the Danube near the capital enabled the monks to participate fully in the cultural life of Vienna, especially during the Middle Ages. In 1133 the Augustinian canons were installed and from the first cultivated Gregorian chant, especially psalmody. The cantor was responsible for the quality of the singing at Vespers (the musical ability of novices could apparently determine their acceptance into the convent) and during the Middle Ages he took charge of the monastery in the prelate's absence, an indication of the importance of his position. The Babenberg dukes, who had a lively interest in the abbey, secured vast estates and a valuable library for it. The large number of important manuscripts in neumatic notation includes the oldest psalter in the library (A-KN 987, probably 11th century) which contains two delicately neumed Gregorian settings of the Requiem and a famous miniature (David and four angels making music); it probably came from Hildesheim. The many neume manuscripts of the 12th and subsequent centuries were almost certainly written in Klosterneuburg; one of them (KN 574) contains a notable Latin Easter play from the early 13th century (the first performance was possibly in 1204), long thought to be the oldest in the German-speaking area. It ends with the first verse of the hymn 'Christ ist erstanden'.

The names of the abbey cantors (regens chori or director musices) can be traced only from the 15th century onwards; until then organists, calcants (responsible for pumping the bellows of the organ) and lay choral singers were not recorded. Wars and religious struggles during the 16th century caused a decline in cultural development. Gregorian chant was neglected in favour of polyphony and two manuscript collections of 15th- and 16th-century polyphonic music at Klosterneuburg contain works of Benedictus Ducis, Thomas Stoltzer, Finck, Stephan Mahu, Isaac, Arnold von Bruck and others. The library also contains music prints from Antwerp, including works by Philippe de Monte, George de La Hèle and Alard Du Gaucquier, and a copy of Glarean's Dodecachordon. Early 17th-century accounts record the acquisition of musical instruments and employment of a teacher who taught the lay brothers the trombone; apparently there were also cornett players, singers and organists. The great organ of the abbey church was built by J.G. Freundt of Passau between 1636 and 1642 despite the Thirty Years War. He installed some of the pipes from a Gothic organ and used pre-Baroque specifications for some of the registers; it is considered the most valuable organ in Austria.

During the Baroque period Tafelmusik, popular in all Austrian monasteries, was presumably fostered at Klosterneuburg, but the archives contain little secular or sacred 17th-century music; most of the church music is from the 18th and 19th centuries. The Gothic buildings were partly demolished during the first half of the 18th century and a new monastery, designed in the magnificent high Baroque style of Austrian contemporary architecture, was planned. Emperor Charles VI showed great interest in the plans, for he wanted a second El Escorial created near Vienna. The monks slowed down the construction of such a castle and, as the edifice was not suitable for monastic purposes and they would have been unable to afford its maintenance, they decided, on the death of the emperor, to alter the plans. The 'Austrian Escorial' remained a torso.

Emperor Charles VI, himself a trained musician and composer, influenced the music performed in Klosterneuburg. The music library contains church compositions by various court musicians including the 'Klosterneuburg Mass' attributed to Fux (the authenticity remains questionable) and works by Georg von Reutter and Caldara. M.G. Monn was a pupil and choirboy of the abbey. The library also possesses works (mainly religious) by Jommelli, Holzbauer, Joseph and Michael Haydn, Mozart, Gassmann, Gyrowetz, Dittersdorf, Salieri, Albrechtsberger, Cherubini, Weber, Schubert and others.

During the last third of the 19th century Bruckner often visited the abbey and improvised on the Freundt organ. From 1910 to 1924 Klosterneuburg accommodated the church music department of the Vienna Akademie für Musik und Darstellende Kunst, whose director, Vinzenz Goller, became known as a composer of church music in Catholic countries. The regens chori, Andreas Weissenbäck, achieved some distinction as a musicologist and composer. From 1906 onwards the use of Gregorian chant has been re-established and based on Vatican usage. A popular Roman Catholic 'liturgy in the vernacular' movement started in Klosterneuburg in the 1930s and had some influence on the development of Austrian church music during the following decades.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Koczirz: 'Klosterneuburger Lautenbücher', Musica divina, i (1913), 176–7
H. Pfeiffer: 'Das Klosterneuburger Osterspiel', Musica divina, i (1913), 158–76
A. Weissenbäck: 'Aus dem älteren Musikleben im Stifte Klosterneuburg', Musica divina, i (1913), 153–8
H. Pfeiffer and B. Cernik: Catalogus codicum manuscriptorum, qui in Bibliotheca Canonicorum Regularium S. Augustini Claustroneoburgi asservantur (Vienna, 1922–31)
V.O. Ludwig: Klosterneuburg, Stadt und Stift (Klosterneuburg, 1927)
L. Schabek: Alte liturgische Gebräuche in Klosterneuburg (Klosterneuburg, 1930)
V.O. Ludwig: Klosterneuburg: Kulturgeschichte eines österreichischen Stiftes (Vienna, 1951)
E. Badura-Skoda: 'Zur musikalischen Vergangenheit Klosterneuburgs', Festschrift Klosterneuburger Kulturtage 1959, 41–7
W. Lipphardt: 'Studien zur Musikpflege in den mittelalterlichen Augustiner-Chorherrenstiften des deutschen Sprachgebietes', Jb des Stiftes Klosterneuburg, new ser., vii (1971), 7–102
F. Jakob: Die Fest-Orgel in der Stiftskirche Klosterneuburg: Geschichte und Restaurierung der Freund-Orgel von 1642 (Vienna, 1990)

EVA BADURA-SKODA

Klotz [Kloz]. German family of violin makers. They were active in Mittenwald, Bavaria. Although members of the family have continued intermittently in the trade, the most famous Klotz instruments date from the 18th century.

Mathias Klotz (b Mittenwald, 11 June 1653; d Mittenwald, 16 Aug 1743) was the originator of violin making in Mittenwald, and is commemorated by a statue in the centre of the town. So little is known of his life and work that much has had to be invented: visitors to Mittenwald are sometimes told that he studied violin making in Cremona, first with Amati, then with Guarneri, and finally with Stradivari himself. However, it is known that for six years he was a journeyman ('garzone') with Giovanni Railich, a Paduan maker of lutes and kindred instruments, but almost certainly not of violins, and that he left the Railich workshop in 1678. He returned to Mittenwald and married, but his violins (now extremely rare) date from much later, and it seems that for 20 years or so he used only what he had learnt with Railich. A violin dated 1714 shows very good workmanship, more in the Italian style than after Stainer. Another from 1727 appears much more Germanic, though recognizably by the same hand. The varnish on both is excellent by Tyrolean standards.

Georg Klotz (b 31 March 1687; d 31 Aug 1737), Sebastian Klotz (b 18 Jan 1696; d 20 Jan 1775) and Johann Carl Klotz (d 29 Jan 1709; d 25 May 1769) were sons of Mathias Klotz; all were born and died in Mittenwald. Sebastian was undoubtedly the best maker of these, as well as the most prolific. His instruments are made with delicacy and good taste, the best of them covered with a soft, glowing varnish, and have a quality of sound to match.

Aegidius Klotz (b Mittenwald, 1 Sept 1733; d Mittenwald, 8 Aug 1805) and Joseph Klotz (b Mittenwald, 8 March 1743; d after 1809, not in Mittenwald) were sons of Sebastian Klotz. Each had a pleasing, individual style. By the last quarter of the 18th century violin making had become an industry in Mittenwald, employing many craftsmen whose names are for the most part little known. The term 'Klotz School' is often used to describe their instruments.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

LütgendorffGL; VannesE
H.W. Klinner: '300 Jahre Geigenbau: 1683–1983', in Dreihundert Jahre Mittenwalder Geigenbau, ed. H. Fleckenstein (Mittenwald, 1983)
W. Hamma, ed.: Geigenbauer der Deutschen Schule des 17. bis 19. Jahrhunderts/Violin Makers of the German School from the 17th to the 19th Centuries, i (Tutzing, 1986)

CHARLES BEARE/KARL ROY

Klotz, Hans (b Offenbach, 25 Oct 1900; d Cologne, 11 May 1987). German organist and scholar. He studied the piano at the Hoch Conservatory in Frankfurt (1919–22), and the organ with Straube, the piano with Teichmüller and theory with Grabner at the Leipzig Conservatory (1927–9). He also studied musicology at Frankfurt under Moritz Bauer (1919–22, 1926–7) and took the doctorate in 1927 with a dissertation on the acoustical aspects of notation. In 1933 he was an organ pupil of Widor in Paris. He held posts as organist, director of church music and president of the Bach Society in Aachen (1928–42), director of church music at the Nikolaikirche, Flensburg (1946–52), instructor in organ at the Schleswig-Holstein Academy, Lübeck (1950–53), and professor of organ at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik in Cologne (1954–66). He also taught at the summer school for organists in Haarlem (1962, 1969–71). Apart from his concerts in Europe and the USA, and his work as adviser on the construction of numerous large organs (Aachen Cathedral, Bonn University and the Beethovenhalle, the church of St Jacques, Liège, etc.), Klotz wrote valuable works on both historical and modern organ construction and playing. He also composed several organ works.

WRITINGS

Über die Prägnanz akustischer Gestalten als Grundlage für die Theorie des Tonsystems (diss., U. of Frankfurt, 1927; Borna and Leipzig, 1927 as Neue Harmoniewissenschaft)
Über die Orgelkunst der Gotik, der Renaissance und des Barock: die alten Registrierungs- und Dispositionsgrundsätze (Kassel, 1934, 3/1986)
Das Buch von der Orgel: über Wesen und Aufbau des Orgelwerkes, Orgelpflege und Orgelspiel (Kassel, 1938, 10/1988; Eng. trans., 1969 as The Organ Handbook)
'Bachs Orgeln und seine Orgelmusik', Mf, iii (1950), 189–203
'Vom rheinischen Orgelbau im 18. Jh.', Beiträge zur Musik im Rhein-Maas-Raum, ed. C.M. Brand and K.G. Fellerer (Cologne, 1957), 29–52
'Die kirchliche Orgelkunst', Leiturgia, iv: Die Musik des evangelischen Gottesdienstes, ed. W. Blankenburg and K.F. Müller (Kassel, 1961), 759–804
'Bauliche Beschreibung der heute anzutreffenden Orgeltypen: eine Bestandsaufnahme', Orgel und Orgelmusik heute: St Märgen 1968, 105–11
'Les critères d'interprétation de la musique française sont-ils applicables à la musique d'orgue de J.-S. Bach?', L'interprétation de la musique française aux XVIIème et XVIIIème siècles: Paris 1969, 155–70
'Aus der Geschichte der Orgeln zu Malmédy: SS Petri et Pauli', Musicae scientiae collectanea: Festschrift Karl Gustav Fellerer, ed. H. Hüschen (Cologne, 1973), 263–9
'Romantische Registrierkunst: César Franck an der Cavaillé-Coll-Orgel', Musik und Kirche, xlv (1975), 217–24
Pro organo pleno: Norm und Vielfalt der Registriervorschrift J.S. Bachs (Wiesbaden, 1977)
Die Ornamentik der Klavier- und Orgelwerke von J.S. Bach (Kassel, 1984)

EDITIONS

Max Reger: Werke für Orgel, Sämtliche Werke, xv–xviii (Wiesbaden, 1956–9)
Johann Sebastian Bach: Neue Ausgabe sämtlicher Werke, IV/ii: Die Orgelchoräle aus Leipziger Originalhandschrift (Kassel, 1958); IV/iii: Die einzeln überlieferten Orgelchoräle (Kassel, 1958)
Orgelmeister der Gotik, Liber organi, viii (Mainz, 1958)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Reindell: 'Hans Klotz en zijn artistiek werk', De praestant, vii (1958), 93–7
H. Klotz: 'Klotz, Hans', Rheinische Musiker, v, ed. K.G. Fellerer (Cologne, 1967) [incl. list of writings and bibliography]
W. Stockmeier: 'Hans Klotz (1900–1987)', Mf, xl (1987), 202–3

HANS HEINRICH EGGEBRECHT

Klucevsek, Guy (b New York, 26 Feb 1947). American composer and accordion player. He grew up on the outskirts of Pittsburgh, where playing the accordion was a part of the local Polish culture. He attended Indiana University of Pennsylvania (BA 1969), the University of Pittsburgh (MA 1971) and the California Institute of the Arts, studying with Robert Bernat, Morton Subotnick, Gerald Shapiro, James Tenney (acoustics) and Harold Budd (jazz). From 1972 to 1976 he taught at Glassboro State College, Philadelphia; though he later moved to Manhattan, he became known for his performances with Philadelphia's Relache Ensemble (1980–90).

Inspired by Steve Reich and Terry Riley, Klucevsek's early music exhibits strict minimalist tendencies and a concern for psychoacoustic phenomena. Contact with Zorn (from 1985) and other New York musicians who were freely mixing jazz and vernacular influences in their work, however, led Klucevsek back to his Polish background, a style clearly in evidence in the accordion polka The Grass, It Is Blue (1986). Starting with Scenes from a Mirage (1987) he began to incorporate different styles within single works; theme and variations became the formal basis of many subsequent compositions. As a virtuoso performer he commissioned a series of polkas from avant-garde composers in 1987. Called Polka from the Fringe, the set includes works by William Duckworth, Lois V Vierk, Anthony Coleman and Mary Ellen Childs.

Despite Klucevsek's involvement in the Downtown Manhattan improvisation scene, his own music remained lyrical and sometimes charmingly simple. Works such as Flying Vegetables of the Apocalypse (1988) and Transylvanian Software (1991) refer to Eastern European traditions and jazz; Viavy Rose Variations (1989) is a set of poignant variations on melodies from Madagascar. In Stolen Memories and Tesknota (both 1993) he returned to quasi-minimalist processes. His extended works such as Chinoiserie (1995) for the performance artist Ping Chong, are mostly theatre and dance scores.

WORKS

Dramatic: The Palatine Light (Y. Mintzer), S, vn + va, pf, accdn, 1985; Fallen Shadows (Mintzer and B. Rosentein), S, vn, pf, accdn, 1993; Chinoiserie, 4vv, 3 insts, 1995 [for Ping Chong]; Cover Up (dance film, dir. V. Marks and M. Whiting), 1995
Accdn: Mounted on the Fairground's Magic Horses, 1982; The Grass, It Is Blue (Ain't Nothin' but a Polka), 1986; Samba d'hiccup, 1986; And Then There Were None, 1987; Awakening, 1987; Dining in the Rough in the Buff, 1987; Loosening Up the Queen, 1987; Old Woman Who Dances with the Sea, 1987; Scenes from a Mirage, 1987; An Air of Gathering Pipers, 1988; Perusal, 1988; Viavy Rose Variations, 1989; 3 Microids, 1991; Transylvanian Software, 1991; Bandoneons, Basil and Bay Leaves, 1992; Altered Landscapes, 1994; Accdn Misdemeanors, 1996
Accdn ens: The Flying Pipe Org, 1985; The Gunks, 1995; Wave Hill, 1995
Accdn, vn, vc, db: Urban Rite, 1986; Flying Vegetables of the Apocalypse, 1988; Waltzing Above Ground, 1988; Citrus, My Love, 1990; Passage North, 1990; Patience and Thyme, 1991; Stolen Memories, 1993; The Gunks, 1995; Regunkitation, 1995; Rumbling, 1995; Skating on Thin Air, 1995; Wave Hill, 1995; Donut Ask, Donut Tell, with vv, 1996
Other chbr and solo inst: Oscillation no.2, pf, 1980; Blue Window, a sax, accdn, 1985; The Flying Pipe Org of Xian, 5–12 insts, 1985; The Grass, It Is Blue, accdn, elec gui, db, drums, 1986; Some of that 'Old Time Soul', polka, accdn, elec gui, db, drums, 1986; Fez Up, cl, s, sax, accdn, elec gui, db, drums, 1988; Reprieve, 2 vn, vc, acc., 1988; Union Hall, accdn, cl + sax, db, 1989; The Singing Sands, vn, hp, accdn, 1991; Tesknota, 4–8 melody insts, 1993; Wave Hill, 2 pf, 1995; Cameos, 2 pf, 1996; Sweet Chinoiserie, toy pf, 1996

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Polak: 'Guy Klucevsek: he doesn't do Weddings', Philadelphia Inquirer (26 Feb 1989)
K. Gann: 'Music Notes: Guy Klucevsek Plays Polkas for Weird People', Chicago Reader (24 March 1989)
L. Kelp: 'Putting the Squeeze on the Avant-Garde', Piano & Keyboard, no.162 (1993), 38–41

KYLE GANN

Klughardt, August (Friedrich Martin) (b Cöthen, 30 Nov 1847; d Rosslau, nr Dresden, 3 Aug 1902). German conductor and composer. He studied in Cöthen and Dessau, later in Dresden (1866–7). After working as a theatre conductor in Posen (1867–8), Neustrelitz (1868–9) and Lübeck (summer 1869), he became court music director at Weimar (1869), where he formed a friendship with Liszt. His compositions of these years include incidental music for theatre productions. At the première of Liszt's Christus in 1873 he met Wagner, to whom he dedicated his symphonic poem Lenore; his Symphony in F minor was composed under the impact of hearing the Ring at the first Bayreuth Festival in 1876. Having returned to Neustrelitz in 1873 as music director, he moved on to succeed his teacher Thiele as court conductor at Dessau in 1882; he brought the ensemble to a high standard, giving the Ring in 1892 and 1893. His own works include the operas Mirjam (Weimar, 1871), Iwein (Neustrelitz, 1879), Gudrun (Neustrelitz, 1882) and Die Hochzeit des Mönchs (Dessau, 1886), orchestral, choral and chamber music and songs. In his operas he attempted to absorb a Wagnerian influence into number opera; his concert works also show his enthusiasm for the New German School at the same time as his loyalty to classical practice. He had some success with his concertos for cello (1894) and violin (1895), and some of his chamber music was in the repertory of the Joachim Quartet; his oratorios, especially Die Zerstörung Jerusalems, were once widely known.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (W. Pfannkuch) [with selective list of works]
L. Gerlach: August Klughardt (Leipzig, 1902)
G. Eisenhardt: Beiträge zur Musikgeschichte der Stadt Dessau (diss., U. of Halle-Wittenberg, 1979)

JOHN WARRACK

Klukowski, Franciszek (b Zduny, Poznań, 1770; d Warsaw, 6 Feb 1830). Polish bookseller and publisher. From about 1816 he managed a music bookshop in Warsaw which sold Polish and foreign music and also engravings of composers and virtuosos. Later he established a publishing house, at first adopting the old engraving techniques but turning gradually towards lithographic processes. His firm was, beside Antoni Brzezina's, the most important music publisher in Warsaw up to 1830. He published works by many Polish composers, including Elsner, Kurpiński, Józef Stefani and Damse, and piano miniatures, arias and opera excerpts from abroad; he also produced several educational books. After his death the firm was taken over by his nephew Ignacy Klukowski (1803–65), who directed it until 1857.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PSB (M. Prokopowicz)
T. Frączyk: Warszawa młodości Chopina [Warsaw in Chopin's youth] (Kraków, 1961), 235–74
M. Prokopowicz: 'Wydawnictwo muzyczne Klukowskich 1816–1858' [The music publishing house of Klukowski, 1816–58], Rocznik Warszawski, xiii (1975), 135–59
W. Tomaszewski: Bibliografia warszawskich druków muzycznych 1801–1850 [Bibliography of Warsaw music prints, 1801–50] (Warsaw, 1992)
W. Tomaszewski: Warszawskie edytorstwo muzyczne w latach 1772–1865 [Music publishing in Warsaw, 1772–1865] (Warsaw, 1992)

KORNEL MICHAŁOWSKI

Klumaw, Alyaksey Kanstantsinavich (b Moscow, 8/21 Aug 1907; d Moscow, 5 Sept 1944). Belarusian composer and pianist. He graduated from the Moscow Conservatory where he studied the piano with Heinrich Neuhaus and composition with Gnesin. He then lived in Minsk for a while (1937–41) teaching the piano at the National Conservatory and making many successful concert appearances, performing Romantic and contemporary music. He worked with particular interest in the sphere of Belarusian dance folklore and composed piano music and songs. During the evacuation when he lived in Tashkent and Moscow between 1941 and 1944, his creative interest broadened to include theatrical, choral and symphonic genres. During his short and productive career Klumaw contributed new means of interpreting Belarusian folklore and added to the understanding of virtuoso pianism in the Romantic tradition. The decorative and brilliant style of his Belorusskaya tantseval'naya syuita (Belarusian Dance Suite) and the Piano Concerto – both written in 1940 – bring together emotional impulsiveness, rhythmic contrast, chromatic dissonance and development of folk song material with precise classical forms. The energy and freshness of his scoring and his resourcefulness in resolving problems of texture bring his instrumental music close to the contemporary idioms of Bartók and Prokofiev when dealing with folk sources. Klumaw's work on the symphonic poem Belarus' was cut short by his sudden death.

WORKS

Stage: Mech Uzbekistana [The Sword of Uzbekistan] (op, after S. Abdula, N. Pogodin and Kh. Alimdzhan), Tashkent, 1942; Priklyucheniya Fritsa [The Adventures of Fritz] (musical comedy, F. Nefyod and A. Ostreyka), 1944; incid music (W. Shakespeare: Makbet)
Choral: Mï idyom, Belarus! [We are on the Move, Belarus!] (P. Brovka); Partizanskaya-kavaleriyskaya [The Song of the Partisans on Horseback] (Ya. Kupala); Pro Suvorova [About Suvorov] (A. Lugin); V shirokoy dolinye [In the Broad Valley] (M. Klimkovich)
Orch: Belorusskaya syuita [Belarusian Suite], 1940; Pf Conc., 1940
Pf: 2 sonatas: 1940, 1943; Belorusskaya tantseval'naya syuita [Belarusian Dance Suite], 1944; Kolïbel'naya [Lullaby], pf 4 hands, 1962; Variatsii na belorusskuyu temu [Variations on a Belarusian Theme], 1985, rev. 1995
Romances for 1v, pf, after Ya. Kolos, Lugin, Ostreyka, E. Ognetsvet, A.S. Pushkin, A. Radyuk, V. Tikhonov

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Nisnevich: 'Iz chisla pervïkh: k 60-letiyu so dnya rozhdeniya A. Klumova' [From among the first: for the 60th anniversary of Klumov's birth], Litaratura i mastatstva (25 Aug 1967)
I. Tsvetayeva: 'Pianistï-pedagogi: Valentina Semashko, Georgiy Petrov, Aleksey Klumov' [Pianist-teachers: Semashko, Petrov, Klumov], Voprosï fortepiannogo tvorchestva, ispolnitel'stva i pedagogiki, ed. S.M. Khentova (Leningrad, 1973), 30–42
I. Nazina: Belorusskiy fortepiannïy kontsert [The Belarusian piano concerto] (Minsk, 1977), 11–16

TAISIYA SCHERBAKOVA

Klusák, Jan (b Prague, 18 April 1934). Czech composer. From a Czech-Jewish family, he studied at the Prague Academy of Musical Arts (1953–8) where his principal composition teachers were Jaroslav Řídký and Pavel Bořkovec. For the whole of his creative life Klusák has dedicated himself exclusively to composition. His first works are influenced by both foreign and Czech musical modernists of the inter-war years (Stravinsky, Honegger, Martinů, Bořkovec and others). However, by the end of the 1950s Klusák's longing for a rational system led him to accept the principles of the Second Viennese School, which he has developed in his own way (and which he likes to apply in diverse combinations of variation principles, in polyphonic voice-leading, dodecaphony, serialism and aleatory music). Klusák first came to the attention of the musical public at the end of the 1950s in the context of the ensemble Komorní harmonie, which was founded and directed by Libor Pešek. The ensemble gave concerts in the avant-garde Theatre Na Zábradlí (Theatre on the Balustrade). Klusák became its resident composer and wrote several works for the ensemble including Přísloví (1959), Obrazy (1960), Čtyři malá hlasová cvičení (1960), Invence I (1961) and the Sonata for Violin and Wind Instruments (1964–5). However, the programming of the ensemble and Klusák's music simultaneously became the target of attacks from music critics, at the time heavily tainted by the principles of 'socialist realism'. The composer's reputation as an 'angry young man' stayed with him even during the period of the Prague Spring (1968–9). In the period of increasing political oppression after the Soviet occupation of Czechoslovakia, Klusák participated only marginally in official musical activities. After November 1989 he was active in a series of important musical functions, for example, as Chairman of the music section of the society Umělecká beseda, Vice-President of the Czech Music Council, a member of the Council of the National Theatre, and others.

Klusák's compositional output is extensive. It numbers roughly 150 works and is also varied as to musical types, extending from compositions that are possible to designate as 'experimental' such as the ten Invence ('Inventions'), through the opera Dvanáctá noc ('Twelfth Night') and the ballet Hero a Leandros ('Hero and Leander'), to incidental music: Klusák wrote much music to theatre plays and to film, including Žebrácká opera ('The Beggar's Opera', based on a stage play by Václav Havel, as well as music to the reconstructed silent films Hrabě Monte Cristo ('The Count of Monte Cristo') and Erotikon. His works for orchestra include major symphonies and several compositions that apply variation principles, for example Fantaisie lyrique 'Hommage à Grieg', Le forgeron harmonieux, and especially the Variace na téma Gustava Mahlera ('Variations on a Theme by Gustav Mahler'). Klusák is also active as a writer and critic.

WORKS

Stage: Úspěch českého inženýra v Indii [The Success of a Czech Engineer in India] (op pasticcio, Svěrák and Smoljak), 1972–3, Prague 1973; Dvanáctá noc [Twelfth Night] (op, W. Shakespeare), 1982–5, Olomouc 1989; Zlý jelen [The Evil Stag] (V.K. Klicpera), 1989, Prague 1989; Ein Bericht für eine Akademie (op, F. Kafka), 1994; Dybuk (S. Rappaport), 1995, Prague 1996

Orch: Bn Conc., 1954–5; Sym. no.1, C, 1956; Conc. grosso, wind qnt, str, 1957; Sym. no.2, 1959; Sym. no.3, 1959–60; Variace na téma Gustava Mahlera, 1960–62; Invence I, chbr orch, 1961; Invence II, chbr orch, 1962; Invence III, str, 1962; Invence IV, 1964; Fantaisie lyrique 'Hommage à Grieg', 1965; Le forgeron harmonieux (Variazioni sul aria di Händel), 1967; Pasticcio olandese, 1970; Smuteční monodie za Igora Stravinského [Funeral Monody for Stravinsky], 1972; Invence VII, 1972–3; Invence VIII, chbr orch, 1973; Kleine Farbenlehre (Hommage à Goethe), 1974–5; 6 malých preludií [6 Little Preludes] 'Vor deinen Thron tret ich hiermit', 1984; Invence IX, 1992, unfinished; Invence X (Tetragrammaton sive Nomina Eius), 1992; Zemský ráj to na pohled [It is a Paradise to Look at], sym. poem, 1999

Chbr and solo inst: Hudba k vodotrysku [Music for a Fountain], wind qnt, 1954; Concertino, fl, str trio, 1955; Str Qt no.1, 1956; 3 etudy, pf, 1957; Obrazy [Pictures], 12 wind insts, 1960; Str Qt no.2, 1962; Sonata, vn, wind insts, 1964–5; Invence V, wind qnt, 1965; Rondo, pf, 1967; Invence VI, nonet, 1969; Sonata, perc, 1974; Str Qt no.3, 1975; Variations, 2 hp, 1982; Str Qt no.4, 1990; Umění dobré souhry [The Art of Good Ensemble], 12 wind insts, db, 1992; Str Qt no.5, 1994

Vocal: Přísloví [Proverbs] (Bible), low v, wind insts, 1959; Černé madrigaly [Black Madrigals] (F. Halas), 1961; 4 malá hlasová cvičení [4 Minor Vocal Exerises] (F. Kafka), 1v, wind insts, 1960; Luna v zenitu [The Moon at its Zenith] (A. Akhmatova), 1981; Dämmerklarheit (F. Rückert), 1989; other songs

Film scores: Žebrácká opera [The Beggar's Opera] (J. Menzel), 1991; Hrabě Monte Cristo [The Count of Monte Cristo], 1993 [new music to 1928 film dir. by R. Fescourt]; Erotikon, 1994, orchd 1995 [new music to 1929 film dir. by G. Machaty]

Principal publishers: Supraphon, Panton, Dilia, Český Hudební Fond

WRITINGS

'Výrazové možnosti nového slohu' [The expressive possibilities of the new style], HRo, xv (1962), 760–61

'Přednáška o Variacích na Mahlerovo téma' [A discourse about the Variations on a Theme by Mahler], Konfrontace, i/1 (1969), 14–24

'Invence neboli Cesta k formě' [The invention or the path to form], OM, iii (1971), 297–9

'Jak jsme v šedesátých letech dělali hudbu: pokus o malou osobní kroniku's [How we made music in the 1960s: an attempt at a small personal chronicle], Konzerva/Na hudbu, i/1–4 (1990)

'Ach ti géniové …' [Oh these geniuses …!], Literární noviny (25 Jan 1996)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS

V. Lébl: 'Tvorba Jana Klusáka z let 1959–1962' [The works of Klusák from the years 1959–62], HV, xxiii/2 (1986), 112–43

M. Navrátil: 'Pohled na Klusáka' [A look at Klusák], HRO, xliii (1990), 380–83

I. Poledňák: 'Skladatel Jan Klusák a literatura' [The composer Klusák and literature], OM, xxvi (1994), 241–5

I. Poledňák: 'Invence Jana Klusáka', HV, xxxii (1995), 257–78; Eng. trans. as 'The Inventions of Jan Klusák', Acta Universitatis Palackianae Olomucensis philosophica-aesthetica, xiv (1995), 85–109

I. Poledňák: 'Klusáks Theater- und Filmwelt', Acta Universitatis Palackianae Olomucensis philosophica-aesthetica, xiv (1997), 125–37

IVAN POLEDŇÁK

Klusen, Ernst (b Düsseldorf, 20 Feb 1909; d Neuss, 31 July 1988). German folksong scholar, ethnomusicologist and music educationist. He studied musicology and music education at the University of Cologne and at the Cologne Musikhochschule as well as in Prague and Vienna during the 1930s, and took the doctorate at the University of Bonn in 1938. With his university studies he established the main subjects of research that would occupy him throughout his career: folksong and folk music; singing, especially as a product of its social contexts; the Rhineland as a musical region; folksong as a process of exchange across interpersonal and international boundaries; and village and urban ethnomusicology.

As a high school teacher in Viersen, he established the Lower Rhine Folksong Archive in 1939, implementing on a regional level the tradition of archive-based scholarship introduced by John Meier with the German Folk Song Archive in Freiburg im Breisgau. After serving as a soldier in World War II, Klusen returned to the Rhineland, where he remained throughout a life devoted to research, teaching and academic administration. The Lower Rhine Folk Song Archive, established in Bonn in 1953, provided the cornerstone for the study of folksong at the Pädagogische Hochschule in Neuss, to which Klusen was appointed in 1962. At Neuss he established an Institute for Musical Folklore (1964), taught music education and served as dean, 1970–76. He was an active member in German and international societies for musical and folksong scholarship.

Klusen contributed significantly to the shaping of German-language ethnomusicology during the second half of the 20th century, especially in the crucial decades of rebuilding after World War II. He grounded his theoretical approaches in music sociological studies of the ways in which music, especially singing, was a product of human collectives. His most influential theoretical concept, 'group songs', argued that folksongs were not objects, but rather part of the exchange within and among different groups of people. In his most important theoretical work, Volkslied: Fund und Erfindung (1969), he provocatively suggested that folksong was formed in a social dialectic between a substratum of traditional culture and pure invention or composition. Throughout his career he also published anthologies of folksongs, both from his own field studies in the Lower Rhine and from collections of the historically most significant German folksongs.

By example and through teaching, Klusen effected a significant shift in the relations among the disciplines of German-language music scholarship. In his studies of urban music history, such as that of Krefeld (1938), he addressed the complexities of 'musical life', thereby connecting the historical to the sociological. His work on song consistently cut across genres, and his intensive field studies examined all forms of empirical evidence, from oral, written and mediated traditions. As electronic and computer-assisted research from systematic musicology developed during the 1970s and 80s, he was one of the first folksong scholars to recognize its importance for all areas of song research. Never afraid to take risks, Klusen introduced a critical voice to German ethnomusicology and folksong research in the post-World War II era, challenging German scholars to broaden their horizons and perspectives and to rethink the resilient phenomena of human music-making in the modern world.

WRITINGS

Das Krefelder Musikleben von seinen Anfängen bis 1870 (Krefeld, 1938)
Das Volkslied im niederrheinischen Dorf: Studien zum Volksliedschatz der Gemeinde Hinsbeck (diss., U. of Bonn, 1938; Potsdam, 1941)
Der Stammescharakter in den Weisen neuerer deutscher Volkslieder (Bad Godesberg, 1953)
'Das aktuelle Lied', Deutsche Zeitschrift für Volkskunde, liii (1956–7), 184–95
'Gustav Mahler und das böhmisch-mährische Volkslied', GfMKB: Kassel 1962, 246–51; see also JIFMC, xv (1963), 29–37
'Über gregorianisches Melodiengut im rheinischen Volkslied', Studien zur Musikgeschichte des Rheinlandes, ii: Karl Gustav Fellerer zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. H. Drux, K.W. Niemöller and W. Thoene (Cologne, 1962), 103–18
'Das apokryphe Volkslied', Jb für Volksliedforschung, x (1965), 85–102
'Musik zur Arbeit Heute', Arbeit und Volksleben: Marburg 1965 (Göttingen, 1967), 306–17
'Gregorianischer Choral und reformatorisches Kirchenlied', KJb, l (1966), 75–92
'Das Gruppenlied als Gegenstand', Jb für Volksliedforschung, xii (1967), 21–41 with K. Weiler: Rheinische Volkslieder in mehrstimmigen Sätzen: eine Zusammenstellung von Volksliedbearbeitungen (Cologne, 1969)
Volkslied: Fund und Erfindung (Cologne, 1969)
'Ingenium und Konsum: Beiträge zum Problem Komponist und Umwelt, dargestellt an der "Missa solemnis" von L. van Beethoven', Mf, xxiii (1970), 268–77
Das Volkslied im niederrheinischen Dorf: Studien zum Lebensbereich des Volksliedes der Gemeinde Hinsbeck im Wandel einer Generation (Bad Godesberg, 1970)
Bevorzugte Liedtypen Zehn- bis Vierzehnjähriger (Cologne, 1971)
Gefahr und Elend einer neuen Musikdidaktik (Cologne, 1973)
'Das sozialkritische Lied', Handbuch des Volksliedes, ed. R.W. Brednich, L. Röhrich and W. Suppan, i (Munich, 1973), 737–60
Zur Situation des Singens in der Bundesrepublik Deutschland, i: Der Umgang mit dem Lied; ii: Die Lieder (Cologne, 1974–5)
'Erscheinungsformen und Lebensbereiche des Volksliedes – heute', Handbuch des Volksliedes, ed. R.W. Brednich, L. Röhrich and W. Suppan, ii (Munich, 1975), 89–111
Musikverständnis ohne Notenkenntnis (Berlin, 1975)
'Zwischen Symphonie und Hit: Folklore?', Musikpädagogik heute: Perspektiven – Probleme – Positionen: zum Gedenken Michael Alt, ed. H.W. Antholtz and W. Gundlach (Düsseldorf, 1975), 79–91
E. Klusen, H. Stoffels and T. Zart: Das Musikleben der Stadt Krefeld 1780–1945 (Cologne, 1979–80)
Singen: Materialien zu einer Theorie (Regensburg, 1989)

FOLKSONG EDITIONS

with H. Heeren: Die Windmühle: niederrheinische Volkslieder (Bad Godesberg, 1955)
ed. H. Zurmühlen: Des Dülkener Fiedlers Liederbuch, Viersen 1875 (Krefeld, 1963)
Das Bonner Gesangbuch von 1550 (Kamp-Lintfort, 1965)
Volkslieder aus dem Kreis Kempen (Kempen, 1966) with W. Hofmann: Rheinisches Liederbuch (Wolfenbüttel, 1967) Deutsche Lieder (Frankfurt, 1980)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Klusen: 'Klusen, Ernst', Rheinische Musiker, iv, ed. K.G. Fellerer (Cologne, 1966) [incl. list of writings to 1967 and bibliography]
R. Götz: Ich wollte Volkslieder schreiben: Gespräche mit Ernst Klusen (Cologne, 1975) [incl. list of pubns and discography, 116–26]
G. Noll and M. Bröcker, eds.: Musikalische Volkskunde – Aktuell: Festschrift für Ernst Klusen (Bonn, 1984) [incl. G. Noll: 'Musikalische Volkskunde zwischen Forschung und "Pflege": Anstelle einer laudatio für Ernst Klusen, 11–30 and list of pubns, 513–32]
W. Schepping: 'Nachruf: Ernst Klusen (1909–1988)', Jb für Volksliedforschung, xxxiv (1989), 120–23

PHILIP V. BOHLMAN

Klussmann, Ernst Gernot (b Hamburg, 25 April 1901; d 21 Jan 1975). German composer and teacher. He studied in Hamburg and later (1923–5) in Munich with Haas (composition) and Hausegger (conducting). In 1925 he was a vocal coach at the Bayreuth Festival and in the same year joined the staff of the Rheinische Musikschule and the Staatliche Musikhochschule in Cologne as a theory teacher. He returned to Hamburg in 1942 as director of the Schule für Musik und Theater and from 1950 to 1966 was professor of composition at the Hamburg Staatliche Musikhochschule. Mahler and Strauss provided the models for Klussmann's powerfully Romantic early music, and their influence persisted even after he adopted a more linear, freely dissonant style that eventually led to his adoption of 12-note technique: his later works, despite their advanced tonal idiom, sometimes recall the earlier composers with respect to instrumental texture and melodic structure. Klussmann prepared the vocal scores of several operas by Strauss and Pfitzner.

WORKS
(selective list)

8 syms.: 1934 (rev. 1956), 1938 (rev. 1957), 1939, 1941, 1946, 1964, 1967, 1970
Other orch: Epilog zu einer antiken Tragedie, 1931; Vc Conc., 1932; Org Conc., 1933; Vc Conc., 1968
Chbr: Str Qt, 1927; Pf Qnt, 1925; Str Qt, 1940; Zenien, pf, 1945
Vocal: Hölderlin-Hymne, chorus, orch, 1932; Ultima Thule, S, male chorus, orch, 1950; Hymne an Zeus (after Aeschylus), chorus, 1954; 6 Canons, female chorus, 1955; Hamburger Lieder, 1959; Rhodope, op, 1963; Helena, op, 1966; lieder, choruses

Principal publisher: Tischer & Jagenberg

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (F. Feldmann)
E. Laaff: 'E.G. Klussmann', ZfM, Jg.103 (1936), 529–32

GEORGE W. LOOMIS

Klyuzner, Boris Lazaryevich (b Astrakhan, 19 May/1 June 1909; d Komarovo, Leningrad Region, 22 May 1975). Russian composer. He was born into the family of an opera singer. He studied at the Leningrad Conservatory (1936–41) with Gnesin, also directing amateur choirs during this period. After his military service in the army, he returned to his choral conducting (1945–8). From 1955 to 1961 he was a board member of the Union of Soviet Composers (Leningrad branch). In 1961 he moved to Moscow.

Klyuzner's first works mark him out as a lyrical composer, but he veered towards the expression of psychologically-heightened, emotional contrasts. Accordingly, his interests were centred on vocal, chamber and concertante music with a pathos, declamatory style and a spontaneity of development that shows traces of a Mahlerian influence. In time this influence was also felt in the shift towards large-scale dramatically sophisticated works for voice and orchestra; such works preoccupied him right up to the composition of his Fourth Symphony (1972), which displays features of oratorio style. This tendency, moving away from a chamber style towards orchestral writing, is apparent in his adaptation of the Cello Sonata (1936) into the Double Violin Concerto (1969); also from two song cycles – the Bagritsky poems (1935–6) and the English songs (1952–3) – which re-emerged as the four-part poem Vremena goda ('The Seasons', 1968).

The most important of Klyuzner's works, beginning with the Violin Concerto (1950), have a prevailing gravity of tone that is achieved through the expressive use of a variety of means. He has a predilection for clear polyphony, though there is no direct imitation of established forms or earlier music; his polyphonic style is often melodically fluid and economical, as well as restrained and profound in expression. These features are particularly characteristic of his works for solo instruments, such as the Violin Concerto and the Violin Sonata (1962), while polyphony predominates in the more concentrated, meditative episodes of other pieces. Rapid and assertive movements are often linked with a stark, discordant Hindemithian counterpoint, as in the Piano Sonata No.2 (1966). In the climactic passages of his orchestral works the polyphony at times gives rise to strong ideas accentuated by evolving percussion parts; in the Third Symphony (1966) this was achieved by an additional group of electronic instruments. Alongside this, in works where vocal music plays an important role, there are broad melodies with a distinctive Russian character and a clear and expressive poetic metre. Although Klyuzner's music is tonal in the main, he has used 12-tone ideas, generally as thematic material, and also layers of free structure. The kind of emotional tension found in his music is also characteristic of Klyuzner in his public dealings. An opponent of falsehood, routine and stagnation, he fought for the noble virtues of his profession. Possessing wit and profound understanding, he was a tactful and intelligent director of the seminar for young composers held by the USSR Union of Composers at Ivanovo near Moscow.

WORKS
(selective list)

Inst: Pf, Sonata no.1, 1935; Preludes, pf, 1936; Sonata, vc, pf, 1936; Pf Conc., 1939; Pf Trio, 1947; Vn Conc., 1950; 3 Ovs., 1951, 1952, 1953; Sym. no.1, orch, 1954; Sym. no.2, orch, 1961; Vn Sonata, 1962; Pf Sonata no.2, 1966; Double Vn Conc., 1969

Vocal: Vremena goda [The Seasons] (E. Bagritsky, P.B. Shelley), S, Bar, orch, 1935–68; Poėma o Lenine (S. Davïdov), Bar, chorus, orch, 1960; Sym. no.3 (G. Yosuyosi, trans. V. Sikorsky), female chorus, children's chorus, orch, elec insts, 1966; Sym. no.4 (Bagritsky, N. Zabolotsky, V. Mayakovsky), B, chorus, orch, 1972; 14 songs (various poets incl. Bagritsky, J. Keats, A.S. Pushkin and W. Wordsworth)

Many film scores

Principal publisher: Sovetskiy Kompozitor

WRITINGS

'Vïstupleniye na II-om vserossiyskom s″yezde sovetskikh kompozitorov' [Speech at the 2nd All-Russian Congress of Soviet Composers], Sovetskaya kul'tura (3 April 1957)

'O Gnesine' [On Gnesin], SovM (1968), no.6, pp.91–4

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Bunin and N. Peyko: 'O simfonii Klyuznera', SovM (1957), no.7, pp.30–34

V. Solov'yov-Sedoy: 'Molodïye golosa', Izvestiya (22 Feb 1958)

O. Tompakova: 'Poėma o Lenine', SovM (1958), no.4, pp.39–40

G. Orlov: B. Klyuzner: Kontsert dlya skripki s orkestrom [Klyuzner's violin concerto] (Leningrad, 1959)

L. Rappoport: B. Klyuzner: simfoniya (Leningrad, 1960)

G. Orlov: Russkiy sovetskiy simfonizm (Moscow and Leningrad, 1966)

G. Shantïr': 'Vtoraya simfoniya Borisa Klyuznera' [The second symphony of Klyuzner], Muzïkal'naya zhizn' (1967), no.16, p.4 only

Obituary, SovM (1975), no.9, p.160 only

GENRIKH ORLOV

Kmentt, Waldemar (b Vienna, 2 Feb 1929). Austrian tenor. He studied singing at the Vienna Music Academy under Adolf Vogel, Elisabeth Rado and Hans Duhan. While a student he toured the Netherlands and Belgium with an ensemble from the academy that included Walter Berry and Fritz Uhl, singing in Die Fledermaus and Le nozze di Figaro. In 1950 he sang the tenor part in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony under Böhm in Vienna, and the following year sang the Prince in Prokofiev's The Love for Three Oranges at the Vienna Volksoper. He was soon singing Mozart roles at the Theater an der Wien (the home of the Staatsoper until 1955) and sang Jaquino in Fidelio at the opening performance of the rebuilt Staatsoper. Kmentt sang regularly at the Salzburg Festival, where his roles included Idamantes, Ferrando, Gabriel in Martin's Le mystère de la Nativité, and Tamino. In 1968 he sang Idomeneus at La Scala. He sang Walther von Stolzing at Bayreuth (1968–70) and was an engaging Eisenstein (Die Fledermaus), as his recording with Karajan confirms. He continued to sing comprimario roles at the Vienna Staatsoper until well into his 60s. Kmentt also appeared regularly in concerts and as a recitalist, and recorded Beethoven's Missa solemnis with Klemperer. His sappy, flexible tenor was seconded by a typically Viennese charm of manner.

HAROLD ROSENTHAL/ALAN BLYTH

Kmoch, František (b Zásmuky, 1 Aug 1848; d Kolín, 30 April 1912). Czech composer and bandmaster. He had five brothers and his father was a clarinettist. He studied the violin in Zásmuky and Kolín and later in Prague. In 1869 he returned to Zásmuky to teach and also began playing in and composing for local bands. It was his preoccupation with the patriotic Sokol movement, recently organized, that resulted in his dismissal from his school position in 1873. Soon thereafter he became the bandmaster in Kolín, and over time gathered together a core group of musicians able to perform works for various ensembles, such as wind band and dance orchestra. Kmoch's reputation preceded him and he took the band on tour in Bohemia, Moravia and Silesia, Kraków (1884), Budapest (1886), Nizhny Novgorod (1896) and Vienna (1899); there were even invitations from America, but these were declined. Kmoch's over 300 works include vocal marches, waltzes and other dances. He is the father of the Czech band tradition, and there is an international band festival in Kolín every June. To byl český muzikant [He was a Czech musician] (1940) was a film about him, and Jaroslav Jankovec wrote an operetta on the same subject, Tak žil a hrál nám Kmoch [Kmoch lived and played for us like this].

Kmoch wrote using traditional forms and genres. Most of his marches begin with a fanfare and are in a minuet and trio form. The harmony of the first section almost invariably moves from the tonic to the dominant, while the trios usually feature the subdominant, are of a more lyrical character and give prominence to a particular group of instruments, often the woodwind. His waltzes, galops and other dances follow similar patterns. Many of his works, marches and dances alike, feature a solo singer. Despite its roots in established musical forms and genres, his music always exhibits strong folk elements, indicative of his strong nationalist bent: often his pieces are arrangements of Czech folksongs, or sometimes they exhibit a folklike or pastoral character without overt quotation. His music played a prominent role in the Czech national revival in the late 19th century.

WORKS

published for orchestra or band unless otherwise stated

*c*110 marches, incl. Na poslední pouti [On the Last Pilgrimage], funeral march (1879); Sláva císaři a králi [Glory to the Emperor] (1879); Lví silou [With Lion Strength] (1885); Jubilejní slavnostní pochod Sokola kolínského [The Jubilee Celebration March of the Kolín Sokol] (1887); Leopold hrabě Podstatský [Leopold Count Podstatky], wedding march (1888); My jsme hoši z Kolína [We're the Boys from Kolín] (1888); Jeřábeček [Little Crane] (before 1893); Andulko šafářova [Andulka, the Steward's Daughter] (before 1903)

Zelenýhájové [Green Groves] (before 1903); Česká muzika [Czech Music] (1899/1900); Kolíne, Kolíne! [Kolín! Kolín!] (before 1906); Hejtman z Kopníku [The Captain from Kopník] (1906/7); Hoj, Mařenko [Ho, Mařenka] (before 1907); Na letenské pláni [On the Letná Plain] (1907); Na dovolenou [On Holiday] (1908); Lov sokolí [The Sokol Hunt] (1910); Jubilejní pochod Sokola kolínského [The Jubilee March of the Kolín Sokol] (1911); V řadách sokolských [In the Sokol Ranks] (1911/2); Konvalinky [Lilies of the Valley], pf (1912)

*c*20 polkas, incl. Jízda po saních [Sleigh-Ride], polka-třasák (1881)

*c*10 waltzes, incl. Děvám českým [To Czech Girls] (1907); Od břehů Visly [From the Banks of the Vistula] (1884)

*c*13 mazurkas, incl. Spanilá [The Graceful Girl], pf (1909)

*c*13 třasáky, incl. Jarní kvítko [A Spring Flower] (1910); Koruna česká [The Czech Crown] (1871–2)

Other dance works, incl. Marie Mikulášká, gavotte (1884); Kydž jsem šel za milou [When I went for my sweetheart], sousedská; Kydž si náš dědeček babičku bral [When Granddad married Grandma], sousedská

Other works, incl. Krakowiak (1884)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Kapusta: 'Pochod v Čechách a František Kmoch' [The march in Bohemia and František Kmoch], HV, vi (1969), 172–91 [Ger. summary 249–50]

K.K. Chavalovský: František Kmoch: život ceského muzikanta a vlastence [František Kmoch: the life of a Czech musician and patriot] (Prague, 1971)

K.K. Chavalovský: Sto let městské hudby Františka Kmocha v Kolíně [100 years of town music by František Kmoch in Kolín] (Prague, 1974)

J. Kapusta: Dechové kapely, pochod a František Kmoch [The brass band, march and František Kmoch] (Prague, 1974)

PAUL CHRISTIANSEN

Knab, Armin (b Neuschleichach, Lower Franconia, 19 Feb 1881; d Bad Wörishofen, 23 June 1951). German composer and writer on music. In accordance with his father's wishes, he studied law, took the doctorate in 1904 and passed the state legal examination in 1907. At the same time he studied music theory with Max Meyer-Olbersleben, and his first compositions, some songs, were written between 1903 and 1907. From 1911 he worked as a lawyer, becoming judge in the provincial court at Würzburg in 1927. After 1920 he began to make a reputation as a composer and writer, principally in connection with the German youth music movement. He decided to devote himself to music in 1934, when he took an appointment to teach theory and composition at the Berlin Akademie für Kirchen- und Schulmusik, where he was made professor in 1935. He resisted all official pressures to join the Nazi party. In 1943 the bombing forced him to leave Berlin, and he spent the remaining years of his life in South Germany. He was awarded the Max Reger Prize in 1940. His most important work was produced for educational purposes; his pieces range from simple songs in folksong style, with lute or piano accompaniment, to large-scale choral works.

WORKS

(selective list)

Choral: Mariae Geburt, cant., 1921–3; Weihnachtskantate, 1931–2; Das heilige Ziel, hymns, 1935–6; Vom Bäumlein, das andere Blätter hat gewollt, cant., 1941; Das gesegnete Jahr, orat, 1935–43; Vanitas mundi, cant., 1946; Engelsgruss, cant., 1946; Till Eulenspiegel, cant., 1950; songs and canons

Solo songs (with pf/lute), music for theatre and radio, inst pieces, educational arrs. of Bach, Beethoven, Bruckner, folksongs, etc.

Principal publishers: Breitkopf & Härtel, Kallmeyer, Schott, Universal

WRITINGS

P.Y. Knab, ed.: Armin Knab: Denken und Tun (Berlin, 1959) [collection of essays, incl. list of works; appendixes ed. H. Wegener]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (H. Wegener)

H. Fromm: 'Choral Works by Armin Knab', American Choral Review, xiv/3 (1973), 14–22

F. Krautwurst: 'Armin Knab', Fränkische Lebensbilder, v (Würzburg, 1973), 282–93

O. Lang: Armin Knab: ein Meister deutscher Liedkunst (Würzburg, 1931, enlarged 2/1981 by P.Y. Knab)

F. Krautwurst and others: 'Armin Knab', Komponisten in Bayern, xxiii (Tutzing, 1991)

KLAUS L. NEUMANN

Knabe. American firm of piano makers. In 1837 William Knabe (b Kreuzburg, Berlin, 3 June 1803; d Baltimore, 21 May 1864) established the firm in Baltimore in partnership with Henry Gaehle after training as a piano maker in Germany and emigrating to Baltimore in 1833. The firm Knabe & Gaehle advertised 'pianos of quality for genteel people of means'. When Gaehle died in 1855, Knabe continued the business under the title Knabe and Co. Knabe controlled the piano market in the majority of the southern states by 1860, but the Civil War had a disastrous effect on the firm because its market was so dependent on the South.

Knabe's sons Ernest Knabe (1827–94) and William Knabe (1841–89) were brought up in the business, and when their father died they re-established the firm's position as one of the leading piano makers in the USA. Ernest toured to arrange new agencies for the sale of Knabe pianos in the northern and western states, and a direct agency was founded in New York in 1864. He also designed new string scales for their concert grands and upright pianos. The firm became one of the most important American piano makers, and by the turn of the century they were building about 2000 pianos annually. The Japanese government selected Knabe in 1879 to supply pianos for use in Japanese schools. The firm continued to prosper as a family concern until Ernest and William died, when it became a public company. Like other well-known American piano manufacturers (e.g. Chickering), Knabe was purchased by the American Piano Co. in 1908. (The two grandsons of the founder left the American Piano Co. in 1911 to establish their own firm Knabe Brothers Co., which lasted until 1914.) The firm continued to flourish, and in 1926 its pianos were officially chosen to be used at the Metropolitan Opera. In 1929 the firm moved to East Rochester, New York, and from 1932 it formed part of the Aeolian American Corporation there. In the early 1970s the firm continued to manufacture a range of grand pianos for domestic and concert use, in addition to 'console pianos', upright instruments about one metre high. Following the bankruptcy of the Aeolian Corporation in 1985, the Knabe name, patterns, equipment and unfinished pianos were sold to Sohmer & Co.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Spillane: History of the American Pianoforte, its Technical Development, and the Trade (New York, 1890/R)
A. Dolge: Pianos and their Makers (Covina, CA, 1911–13/R)

MARGARET CRANMER

Knäfelius, Johann. See KNÖFEL, JOHANN.

Knapik, Eugeniusz (b Ruda Śląska, 9 July 1951). Polish composer and pianist. He studied composition with Górecki (1970–75) and the piano with Czesław Stańczyk (1973–6) at the Katowice Academy, where he was later appointed head of the computer music studio (1992) and of the faculty of composition and theory (1996). As a pianist, he has performed and recorded mainly 20th-century repertory. Of his composition awards, the String Quartet took first prize at the 1984 UNESCO Composers' Rostrum. As a composer, Knapik established his reputation with La flûte de jade (1973), a work which reveals not only an interdependence with Górecki but also a heightened lyrical vein drawing on Debussy and Messiaen. In three chamber works of 1980 – the Hymn, String Quartet and Partita – he more candidly acknowledged his debt to Messiaen and created structurally more complex pieces which explore the relationship of cadential diatonicism with more chromatic writing. His move to opera in the late 1980s enabled him to develop his gift for ecstatic utterance on a large canvas. In an opulent idiom which combines French traditions, Wagner, Berg, Skryabin and Szymanowski, Knapik fashions a statuesque soundscape (dominated by female voices) to match the creative dreamworld of the trilogy's central character.

WORKS
(selective list)

DRAMATIC

Ops: The Minds of Helena Troubleyn (trilogy, J. Fabre): Das Glas im Kopf wird vom Glas (8 scenes), 1988–90, Antwerp, Vlaamse Opera, 7 March 1990; Silent Screams, Difficult Dreams (4 scenes), 1990–92, Kassel, Staatstheater, 18 Sept 1992; La liberta chiama la liberta (5 scenes), 1993–5, concert perf. of scenes 1, 3 and 5, Warsaw, Philharmonic Hall, 28 Sept 1996

Ballets: The Sound of One Hand Clapping, Frankfurt, 1991; Da un'altra faccia del tempo, Brussels, 1993; Quando la terra si rimette in movimento, Amsterdam, 1995

OTHER WORKS

3 Miniatury, pf, 1970; Sonata, fl, 1971; Sonata, vn, pf, 1971; Conc. grosso no.1, chbr orch, 1972–7; La flûte de jade (Shang Wu-Kien, Li Tai Po, and others), S, pf, orch, 1973; Psalms, S, A, Bar, chorus, orch, 1973–5; Le chant (P. Valéry), S, orch, 1976; Tak jak na brzegu morza . . . [As if by the Sea . . .] (Valéry), ens, tape, 1977; Corale, Interludio e Aria, fl, hpd, str, 1978

Hymn, cl, trbn, vc, pf, 1980; Partita, vn, pf, 1980; Str Qt, 1980; Versus I, org, 1982; Wyspy [Islands], str, 1984; Strofy [Strophes] (Li Tai Po), Bar, hn, org, 1985; Up into the Silence (e.e. cummings, E. Dickinson, J. Fabre, W. Whitman), S, Bar, str qt, orch, 1995–; Tha' munnot waste no time, after F.H. Burnett, cl, 3 pf, 1998

Principal publisher: PWM

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Augustyn: 'The New Generation of Polish Composers: III', Polish Music (1978), no.2, pp.12–16
K. Droba: 'Błękitna godzina Fabre'a i Knapika' [Fabre and Knapik's blue hour], RM, xxxvi/7 (1992), 1, 8 [on Silent Screams, Difficult Dreams]
S. Kosz: 'Eugeniusz Knapik: Wyspy', Muzyka polska 1945–1995, ed. K. Droba, T. Malecka and K. Szwajgier (Kraków, 1996), 289–96
S. Kosz: 'Inspiracji szukam w dźwięku' [I look for inspiration in sound], Opcje: kwartalnik kulturalny (1996), no.4, pp.7–12 [interview]

ADRIAN THOMAS

Knapp, Janet (b Cobleskill, NY, 1 Sept 1922). American musicologist. She graduated from Oberlin College with the AB in 1944 and received the MA there in 1951. At Yale University she studied with Leo Schrade and took the doctorate in 1961. She taught at Yale from 1958 to 1963, when she joined the faculty at Brown University. In 1971 she was appointed Mellon Professor of Music at Vassar College, where she remained until her retirement in 1986; she was also president of the AMS, 1975–6. Knapp specializes in medieval music, particularly the polyphonic conductus and the music of the Notre Dame School; her performing edition, Thirty-Five Conductus for Two and Three Voices (New Haven, CT, 1965) is a major contribution to the study of the subject.

WRITINGS

The Polyphonic Conductus in the Notre-Dame Epoch: a Study of the Sixth and Seventh Fascicles of the Manuscript Florence, Biblioteca Laurenziana, Pluteus 29.1 (diss., Yale U., 1961)
'Two Thirteenth Century Treatises on Modal Rhythm and the Discant', JMT, vi (1962), 200–15 [trans. of Jerome of Moravia: Discantus positio vulgaris and Anonymus 7: De musica libellus]
'Quid tu vides, Jeremia: Two Conductus in One', JAMS, xvi (1963), 212–20
'Musical Declamation and Poetic Rhythm in an Early Layer of Notre Dame Conductus', JAMS, xxxii (1979), 383–407
'Polyphony at Notre Dame of Paris', NOHM, ii (1990), 557–635
'Which Came First, the Chicken or the Egg? Some Reflections on the Relationship between Conductus and Trope', Essays in Musicology: a Tribute to Alvin Johnson, ed. L. Lockwood and E.H. Roesner (Philadelphia, 1990), 16–25

PAULA MORGAN

Knapp, J(ohn) Merrill (b New York, 9 May 1914; d Princeton, NJ, 7 March 1993). American musicologist. He received the BA from Yale University in 1936 and the MA from Columbia University in 1941. From 1948 he was on the staff of Princeton University, where he was appointed professor of music in 1960. He was also director of the Princeton Glee Club from 1947 to 1951 and held administrative posts in the university. Knapp's main areas of study were 16th-century instrumental music and the music of the 18th century, particularly opera and the works of Handel. He conducted the first American performances of Handel's Imeneo and Amadigi. He wrote a general introduction to opera, The Magic of Opera

(1972), and prepared editions of Handel's Amadigi and Flavio for the Hallische Händel-Ausgabe.

WRITINGS

'Samuel Webbe and the Glee', ML, xxxiii (1952), 346–51
Selected List of Music for Men's Voices (Princeton, NJ, 1952)
'Handel, the Royal Academy of Music, and its First Opera Season in London (1720)', MQ, xlv (1959), 145–67
'Handel's Giulio Cesare in Egitto', Studies in Music History: Essays for Oliver Strunk, ed. H. Powers (Princeton, NJ, 1968), 389–403
'Handel's Tamerlano: the Creation of an Opera', MQ, lvi (1970), 405–30
'The Autograph Manuscripts of Handel's Ottone', Festskrift Jens Peter Larsen, ed. N. Schiørring, H. Glahn and C.E. Hatting (Copenhagen, 1972), 167–80
The Magic of Opera (New York, 1972/R)
'The Autograph of Handel's Riccardo primo', Studies in Renaissance and Baroque Music in Honor of Arthur Mendel, ed. R.L. Marshall (Kassel and Hackensack, NJ, 1974), 331–58
'Editionstechnische Probleme bei Händels Opern, im besonderen bei "Teseo", "Poro", "Ezio" und "Deidamia"', Probleme der Händelschen Oper: Halle 1981, 22–32
'Handel's Il trionfo del tempo: 1707, 1737, and 1757', American Choral Review, xxiv/2–3 (1982), 27–47
'Mattheson and Handel: their Musical Relations in Hamburg', New Mattheson Studies, ed. G.J. Buelow and H.J. Marx (Cambridge, 1983), 307–26
'Beethoven's Mass in C major, op.86', Beethoven Essays: Studies in Honor of Elliot Forbes, ed. L. Lockwood and P. Benjamin (Cambridge, MA, 1984), 199–216
'Eighteenth-Century Opera in London before Handel, 1705–1710', British Theatre and the Other Arts, 1600–1800, ed. S.S. Kenny (Washington DC, 1984), 92–104
'Handel's Roman Church Music', Handel e gli Scarlatti a Roma: Rome 1985, 15–27
'English Reactions to Handel and Italian Opera in London during 1711 to 1720', Göttinger Händel-Beiträge, ii (1986), 155–69 with A. Mann: Georg Frideric Handel's Chamber Duets (Los Angeles, 1987) with W. Dean: Handel's Operas 1704–1726 (Oxford, 1987, 2/1995)
'The Hall Collection', Handel Collections and their History: London 1990, 17–83
'Aaron Hill and the London Theatre of his Time', HJb 1991, 177–85
'The Luke 2 Portions of Bach's Christmas Oratorio and Handel's Messiah', A Bach Tribute: Essays in Honor of William H. Scheide, ed. P. Brainard and R. Robinson (Kassel and Chapel Hill, NC, 1993), 155–61

PAULA MORGAN

Knapp, William (b Wareham, Dorset, 1698–9; d Poole, Dorset, bur. 26 Sept 1768). English psalmodist. He was a glover by trade, and bought several properties at Poole, thus becoming one of its 60-odd burgesses. He was parish clerk of St James's, Poole, for nearly 40 years, and trained the choirs in several Dorset churches. He was a difficult personality, to judge from lines written by Henry Price (a land-waiter in Poole Quay) and quoted in Grove's Dictionary (5th edn) and also by Frost and Daniel.

Knapp compiled two collections of parish church music, both of which became widely popular: A Sett of New Psalm-Tunes and Anthems (eight edns, 1738–70) and New Church Melody (five edns, *c*1752–64). They contain didactic introductions, psalm tunes, hymns and parochial anthems, in four parts with the tenor leading. As well as music taken from earlier collections, they contain a good deal of Knapp's own composition. One of his psalm tunes, 'Wareham', is a classic of its period and is still well known; another, 'Spetisbury', survived at least until the second supplement to Hymns Ancient and Modern (1915). Many of the tunes in New Church Melody are of the ornate 'fuging' variety. Knapp's tunes and anthems reappeared in countless printed and manuscript collections, not only in many parts of England but also in the American colonies. Smith recalls that his tune for While shepherds watched was still being sung in Leicestershire late in the 19th century and it was also reprinted many times in America. One of his anthems, from the 1738 collection, is reprinted in Daniel. Knapp had an undoubted flair for effective melody, but was a little out of his depth in four-part counterpoint.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.P. Smith: 'William Knapp, the Dorset Composer', Proceedings of the Dorset Natural History and Antiquities Field Club, xlvii (1926), 159–67
M. Frost, ed.: Historical Companion to Hymns Ancient and Modern (London, 1962), 679
R. Daniel: The Anthem in New England before 1800 (Evanston, IL, 1966/R)
P.M. Young: A History of British Music (London, 1967), 286–7
N. Temperley: The Music of the English Parish Church (Cambridge, 1979/R), i, 159, 180–81

NICHOLAS TEMPERLEY

Knappertsbusch, Hans (b Elberfeld, 12 March 1888; d Munich, 25 Oct 1965). German conductor. His parents' opposition to a musical career obliged him to study philosophy at Bonn University. Nevertheless from 1908 he also attended the Cologne Conservatory, where he was a conducting pupil of Steinbach. He conducted at the Mülheim/Ruhr theatre from 1910 to 1912; more significantly he spent the summers as assistant to Siegfried Wagner and Richter at Bayreuth. From 1913 to 1918 he was opera director at his home town of Elberfeld (and as such took part in the Wagner Festivals of 1913–14 in the Netherlands). In 1918 he went to Leipzig, in the following year to Dessau, where in 1920 he was made musical director. In this capacity he was called to Munich in 1922 as successor to Bruno Walter. He remained in Munich until 1936, when the Nazis revoked his life contract for refusing to join the party. The next nine years were spent in Vienna conducting at the Staatsoper and continuing a long association with the Vienna PO. After the war he returned to Munich, where he regained his former eminence, was a regular guest conductor of the Vienna PO (1947–64) and was a leading conductor at the Bayreuth Festival from 1951.

Knappertsbusch was a large man of impressive appearance and robustly independent character. He made guest appearances in various European countries (he conducted Salome in the Covent Garden winter season 1936–7) but was generally content to stay at home, a fact which increased his popularity in Munich even if it partly robbed him of the international fame won by more restless and ambitious colleagues. In life as in music he was a conservative in a broad sense, in his uncompromising attitude to political upstarts as in his easy-going preference for the revised editions of Bruckner symphonies over the original versions to which many conductors were returning. In the giant, unhurried stride of his conducting of Wagner, Strauss and Bruckner, he appeared more and more as one of the last representatives of the old school. Orchestral players understood that his notorious dislike of rehearsals was based not on slackness or indifference but on mutual confidence and secure knowledge. He was never particularly interested in contemporary music, but during his first term in Munich he gave the first performance of many operas, including Samuel Pepys by Albert Coates (1929) and Pfitzner's Das Herz (1931). Whatever his opinion of Wieland Wagner's innovations, his conducting was probably the highest musical achievement of the postwar regime at Bayreuth. Multiple versions of his Ring cycles and of his magisterial Parsifal survive on recordings made at Bayreuth between 1951 and 1964.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F.F. Clough and G.J. Cuming: 'Hans Knappertsbusch Discography', Gramophone Record Review, no.85 (1960), 18 only

H. Hotter: 'Hans Knappertsbusch 1888–1965: in Memoriam', Opera, xvii (1966), 21–3

H.C. Schonberg: The Great Conductors (New York, 1967/R), 324

RONALD CRICHTON/JOSÉ BOWEN

Knapton, Philip (b York, 20 Oct 1788; d York, 20 June 1833). English composer and music publisher. He was the son of Samuel Knapton, who succeeded Thomas Haxby as a music publisher and instrument maker in York about 1796. After receiving his musical education at Cambridge under Hague (though he never graduated from the university) he returned to York and joined his father's business about 1820. He was also active in local musical life and was one of the assistant conductors at the York festivals of 1823, 1825 and 1828. His published compositions consisted mostly of songs (including the popular There be none of beauty's daughter, 1818) and variations on popular airs, but according to Sainsbury he also wrote overtures, piano concertos and other works which remained in manuscript. He also compiled and arranged a Collection of Tunes for Psalms and Hymns, Selected as a Supplement to Those Now Used . . . in York (York, *c*1815). The publishing business of Samuel and Philip Knapton continued until 1829 when it passed into the hands of William Hardman, who in turn was taken over by Henry Banks; the firm is still in existence as Banks & Son, which specializes in choral music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Humphries-SmithMP; SainsburyD

J.D. Brown and S.S. Stratton: British Musical Biography (Birmingham, 1897/R)

PETER WARD JONES

Knarre (Ger.). See RATCHET.

Knauth, Robert. See FRANZ, ROBERT.

Knayfel′, Aleksandr Aronovich (b Tashkent, Uzbekistan, 28 Nov 1943). Russian composer. His parents, both of them musicians from Leningrad, were studying in Tashkent at the time of his birth, and had been evacuated there with the Leningrad Conservatory. His father Aron Knayfel′, whose family had all been musicians before him, was a member of various chamber ensembles and a professor of music; he taught a number of students who later became outstanding violinists at the conservatory, while Knayfel′'s mother – Musa Shapiro-Knayfel′ – taught music theory there for over 40 years.

The family returned to Leningrad in September 1944. Knayfel′'s training began in 1950 at the Rimsky-Korsakov College of Music, where he studied the cello with Emanuel Fischman. He then studied for two years with Rostropovich at the Moscow Conservatory (1961–3), but had to drop out of the course because of a hand injury. He returned to Leningrad and studied composition with Arapov, concluding these studies in 1967. At the same time as composing he was active as a music teacher and editor. In 1965 he married the singer Tat′yana Melent′yeva. Knayfel′ lives and works as a freelance composer in St Petersburg; his compositions have been performed worldwide.

In the 1960s Knayfel′ represented a kind of Sturm und Drang tendency with his expressive style, but after the mid-1970s he could be said to have stood for a kind of musical conceptualism, writing music that occupies an undefined area and which is hard to categorize stylistically. Knayfel′ emerged as an independent, quiet force amidst a Russian musical climate split between proponents of Russification and Europeanization; his music is apparently unruffled by the passions and loyalties that so inflame other composers. Perhaps the nearest comparisons one might make would invoke the names of Feldman or Scelsi; Knayfel′ seems to have reintroduced the primal simplicities of Pythagorean speculation into the vast and transcendental spaces his music inhabits. However, certain facets of his music belong unquestionably to the Russian artistic tradition; the esoteric symbolism and mysticism inherent in much of his work are trends also exemplified by the thinking of Dostoyevsky, Solov′yov and Skryabin.

The enormous length of many of Knayfel′'s major works – often a single movement may last two hours or more – allows him to make sonic structures that confront us with single notes, devoid of harmony or rhythm, which unite pitch and duration as naked material. The strength of this often conceptually abstract music lies in Knayfel′'s keen awareness in the physical and sensual potential of his raw material, even if the sounds themselves may, at first hearing, appear sparse in the extreme. A number of his works include texts which, although not heard, are nonetheless performed. In Agnus Dei (1985), words from the liturgy and fragments from the diary of a girl who died of starvation in the siege of Leningrad are placed in the performers' parts who are instructed to 'perform' them silently. In contrast to the solemnity of works such as this, the opera Kentervil′skoye privideniye ('The Canterville Ghost') displays an almost dadaist sense of humour; it is one of the few operas written in Soviet Russia to pick up on the wild excitement and disruption of Shostakovich's The Nose.

Number is of great importance in Knayfel′'s work; consciously and deliberately, he made number the principle behind his major work Zhanna ('Jeanne', 1970–78). This composition is for 13 instrumental groups, and he describes it as a passion depicting the life and death of a young woman. Whereas number is the principle behind Zhanna, the same part is played by language in the composition Nika (1972), in which Knayfel′ uses words not for the information they convey, but as a structural element from which the form of the work develops.

Knayfel′ is close to the Russian Orthodox Church; some of his works of the 1990s are religious in content, as their titles indicate – Lestnitsa Iakova ('Jacob's Ladder') and Canticum canticorum. His works have been performed by Rozhdestvensky (The Canterville Ghost, London, 1980, and the choreographic symphony Medeya, St Petersburg, 1984), Rostropovich, the pianists Aleksey Lyubimov and Oleg Malov, and the percussionist Mark Pekarsky.

WORKS
(selective list)

DRAMATIC

Stremleniye [Onrush] (ballet-sym., 2, Yu. Stankevich and Knayfel′), 1964–5; Kentervil′skoye prividenive [The Canterville Ghost] (op, prol, 3, T. Kramarova, after O. Wilde), 1965–6, Leningrad House of Composers, 26 Feb 1974; Razoruzheniye [Disarmament] (choreog. striptease, L. Yakobson, after H. Bidstrup), 1966; Kayushchayasya Magdalina [Magdalene Repentant] (choreog. scene, Yakobson, after Titian and Rodin), 1967; Medeya 'Kolkhidskaya volshebnitsa' [Kolkhida Enchantress] (ballet, 2, G. Aleksidze), 1968; Alice (Knayfel′, after L. Carroll), 1995–9

VOCAL

Choral: Shvïrni ego v moy sad [Chuck it into My Garden] (fugato, Ė. Bazen, trans. M. Kudinov), chorus, orch, 1962; 150 000 000 (dithyramb, V. Mayakovsky), chorus, 6 pic, 6 tpt, 6 trbn, 12 db, 3 kettledrum groups, 1966; Petrogradskiye vorob′i [Petrograd Sparrows] (phantasmagoric suite, B. Samoylov), boys' chorus, chbr orch, 1967; Lenin pis′mo chlenam TsK [Lenin's Letter to the Members of the Central Committee], unison B chorus, orch, 1969; Aynana (17 variations), chbr chorus, perc, tape, 1978; Ranniye zhuravli [Early Cranes], male chorus, orch, 1979; Sluchaynoye [Accidental] (T. Slivyak, trans. V. Levin), girl soloist, chorus, str orch, org, 1982; V dvazhdï dvukh zerkalakh [In Two Times Two Mirrors], male chorus, 2 inst ens, 1982; Yazïcheskiy rok [Pagan Rock], B chorus, perc, rock group, 1982; Protivostoyaniye [Opposition] (memorial suite), B chorus, orch, 1984; Krïl′ya kholopa [The Wings of a Lackey] (vocal-choreog. fresco, D. Samoylov), chorus, inst ens, 1986; Voznosheniye [The Holy Oblation], chorus, str, 1991; Maranafa (I. Zlatoust), solo vv, chorus, orch, 1993; Vos′maya glava 'Canticum canticorum' [Chapter 8], chorus, vc, 1993; Blazhenstva [Bliss], 1v, chorus, orch, 1996; many unacc. choral works

Other: Pesnya [Song] (R. Burns, trans. S. Marshak), Bar, pf, 1963; Pamyati S.L. Marshaka [In Memory of Marshak] (6 Lyrical Epigrams, Marshak), Bar/high B, pf, 1964; Kentervil′skoye prívideniye 'Romanticheskiye stsenï' [The Canterville Ghost 'Romantic Scenes'] (Kramarova, after Wilde), S, B, chbr orch, 1965 [from op]; Turnirnaya muzïka [Tournament Music], S, pic cl, bn, tpt, hp, pf, 1967; Monodiya (ps.xxii), female v, 1968; Strofa posvyashcheniy [Dedicatory Strophe], S, hp, org, 1980; Glupaya loshchad′ [The Stupid Horse] (15 stories, Levin), 1v, pf, 1981; Skvoz′ radugu isvol′nïkh slyoz [Through the Rainbow of Unwilling Tears] (trio, A. Akhmatova, F. Tyutchev), 1v, vc, 1988; Svete tikhiy/Voznosheniye [Soft Light/O Gladsome Radiance], song, 1991; Babochka [Butterfly] (I. Brodsky), 1v, 1993; Oblachennaya v solntse (Amicta sole), solo vv, 1995; Blazhenstvo [Bliss] (A.S. Pushkin), S, 1997; Lux aeterna, 2vv, 1997

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Burlesque, trbn, str, 1963; Mechta [Dream], fantasy, chbr orch, 1963; 131, va, db, wind, perc, 1964; Gryadushchego grada vzïskuyushchiye [Seekers of the Future City], str, perc, org, 1965; Zhanna [Jeanne], passion, 13 inst groups, 1970–78; Klik Burevestnika [Cry of the Stormy Petrel], tpt, pf, orch, 1980; Vera [Faith], str, 1980; Bezumiye [Madness], chbr orch, 1987 [after K. Chukovsky and others]; Litania, 1988

Chbr and solo inst: Nebol′shaya sonata [Small Sonata], pf, 1961; 2 p′yesï [2 Pieces], fl, va, perc, pf, 1962; Ispoved′ [Confession], spkr, perc ens, 1963; Klassicheskaya syuita, pf, 1963; Musique militaire, pf, 1964; Ostinati, vn, vc, 1964; Passacaglia, org, 1965; Lamento, vc, 1967; Tertium non datur, hpd, 1967; Constanta, fr hn, 6 perc groups, 1969–71; A prima vista, 4 perc, 1972; Nika, 17 pfmrs, 1972; Da [Yes], ens, 1980; Rafferti, suite, jazz ens, 1980; Solaris, 35 Javanese gongs, 1980; Agnus Dei, 4 pfmrs, 1985; Lestnitsa Iakova [Jacob's Ladder], ens, 1992; Yeshchyo raz k gipoteze [Once Again on the Hypothesis], ens, 1992; Aria, carillon, 1993; Cantus, 2 pfmrs, 1993; V ėfire chistom i nezrimom [In the Clear and Invisible Air], pf, str qt, 1994 [after Tyutchev]; Snezhinka na pautinke/Vremya vot teper′ [A Snowflake on a Spider's Web/A Time as Now], vc, 1998

Film scores, TV scores, incid music, music for children

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Voronina and B. Kats: 'Ėskizï k portretu' [Sketches for a portrait], SovM (1975), no.4, pp.49–54

L.N. Raaben: 'A. Knayfel′', O dukhovnom renessanse v russkoy muzïke: 1960–80kh godov (St Petersburg, 1998)

TAT'YANA REXROTH, GERARD McBURNEY

Knecht, Justin Heinrich (b Biberach an der Riss, 30 Sept 1752; d Biberach an der Riss, 1 Dec 1817). German writer on music and composer. He had his first musical training (in organ, keyboard, violin and singing) in his native town. From 1768 to 1771 he attended the Lutheran collegiate institution in Esslingen am Neckar (where he was deeply impressed by a visit from C.F.D. Schubart), and in 1771 he became Lutheran preceptor and music director in Biberach. He received early encouragement from C.M. Wieland, who was town clerk of Biberach until 1769. In 1792 Knecht gave up his teaching post to become organist at the church of St Martin, simultaneously used by the Lutherans and Catholics. Biberach, a free imperial city until 1803, had a rich cultural life, and it was chiefly due to Knecht that the musical life of the middle classes in church and concert hall reached such a high standard. Besides pursuing his activities in church music, Knecht organized subscription concerts, wrote many works for the theatre, and offered courses in music theory, acoustics, aesthetics and composition as well as normal instrumental teaching in the Gymnasium (which was affiliated to the Musikschule in 1806). In December 1806 Knecht went to Stuttgart, hoping to obtain an appointment as court composer or vice-Kapellmeister. Eventually, in April 1807, the King of Württemberg did appoint him Direktor beim Orchester, but Knecht resigned the post at the end of 1808 and returned to his former position in Biberach, which he held until his death.

As a composer, Knecht left an extensive body of instrumental works, stage works and church music; as a music theorist, he espoused the ideas of G.J. Vogler. His pastoral symphony, Le portrait musical de la nature (1784–5), was much admired, and was issued by one of the young Beethoven's publishers; it anticipates the programme of Beethoven's own Sixth Symphony. As well as the pastoral symphony Knecht's great sacred vocal works are of some importance and show the composer at his best. Knecht succeeded with his Magnificat and Dixit Dominus in compositional competitions in 1791 and 1800, where he won the second and first prizes. Both here and in his Te Deum with double choir he composed with a higher pretension, finding a good balance between extensive choir figures in strict counterpoint and arias in the modern classical style.

Knecht was particularly well known for his teaching manuals, in particular his Orgelschule (1795–8), which was innovative and influential in its time (Beethoven himself owned a copy of the work); it gives a clear insight into contemporary views on organ playing, sonorities and organ building Knecht's reputation as an excellent theorist and master of the strict style is obvious from the fact that in 1803 he completed J.S. Bach's Art of Fugue to the entire satisfaction of the Zürich publisher H.G. Nägeli, who had commissioned the work. Such works as the Musikalischer Katechismus (1803) were widely distributed and contributed greatly to general musical education. Knecht also wrote for the Musikalische Real-Zeitung and Musikalische Korrespondenz der Teutschen Filarmonischen Gesellschaft (1788–92) and for the Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung. He must be considered one of the major figures of musical life in south Germany in his period.

WORKS

principal sources: Wieland-Archiv, Biberach, Germany, Kick collection in D-Tu; thematic catalogue in Ladenburger (1984)

VOCAL

Sacred: Ps xxiii (Leipzig, 1783); Ps xxix, 1786–90, lost; Ps vi (Speyer, 1788); Mag, 1790–91; Ps i (Speyer, 1792); Miserere, 1792, lost; Herr Gott, dich loben wir, before 1799 (Stuttgart, 1816); Vollständige Sammlung ... vierstimmiger Choralmelodien für das neue wirtembergische Landesgesangbuch, ed. Knecht and J.F. Christmann (Stuttgart, 1799), suppl. 1 (Stuttgart, 1806); Dixit Dominus, 1800; 10 cants., *c*1800; TeD (Offenbach, 1801); other works, incl. chorale books

Other vocal: Wechselgesang der Mirjam und Debora (F.G. Klopstock: Der Messias), 2 solo vv, str (Leipzig, 1781); songs from Oberon (C.M. Wieland) (Speyer, 1784–91), some lost; Trauermusik auf den Tod Kaiser Josephs II. (C.F.D. Schubart), vv, insts, 1790–91, lost; other occasional works; other songs, pubd Speyer and Breslau; 3 Lieder (Mainz, 1817)

STAGE

first performed in Biberach unless otherwise stated

Das durch die göttliche Vorsicht zu Schanden gemachte Vertrauen auf die Sterndeutkunst (incid music), 1763, lost
Josua (dramatisches Spl), 1763, perf. 1764, lost
Kain und Abel (Spl), 1763, perf. 1765, lost
Die treuen Köhler (Operette, 2, G.E. Heermann), 2 Feb 1786
Jupiter und Ganymed (prol and epilogue), 14 Aug 1783
Die Entführung aus dem Serail (komische Oper, 3, C.F. Bretzner), 2 Feb 1787
Der Erntekranz (komische Oper, 3, C.F. Weisse), 28 Jan 1788, lost
Der lahme Husar (komische Oper, 2, F. Koch), 28 Oct 1788
Der Schulz im Dorfe, oder der verliebte Herr Doctor (komische Oper, 3, C.L. Dieter), 26 Jan 1789; Act 4, 26 Oct 1800
Der Kohlenbrenner (Lustspiel mit Gesang, L. Ysenburg von Buri), 28 Dec 1789
Der Musenchor (prol, Knecht), 22 Aug 1791
Die Glocke (melodrama, F. Schiller), Stuttgart, 24 Feb 1807
Die Aeolsharfe, oder Der Triumph der Musik und Liebe (romantische Oper, 4, N. Remmele), 1807–8, unperf.
Feodore (Spl, 1, A. von Kotzebue), 11 Oct 1812
Ubaldo (incid music, 5, Kotzebue), 22 Nov 1818
Other operas and incid music, lost

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Le portrait musical de la nature, ou Grande sinfonie (Pastoralsymphonie) (Speyer, 1784–5), ed. in The Symphony 1720–1840, ser. C, xiii (New York, 1984); Sym., 'auf den Tod des Prinzen Leopold von Braunschweig', 1785, lost; Sym. 'Don Quixote', before 1790, lost; Sinfonie auf den Tod Kaiser Leopolds II., 1792, lost; other syms., lost
Chbr: Sonata, hpd, vn and vc ad lib (Speyer, 1790); 3 Duos, 2 fl (Speyer, 1791); Diverses danses, pf/(fl, gui) (Mainz, 1817); other works, lost
Org: Neue vollständige Sammlung ... für ... Klavier- und Orgelspieler (Speyer 1791–5; Munich, 1799, 2/1811–17); Die durch ein Donnerwetter unterbrochne Hirtenwonne (Darmstadt, 1794), ed. H.W. Höhnen (Wiesbaden, 1982); 90 kurze und leichte neue Orgelstücke (Augsburg, 1794); Vollständige Orgelschule (Leipzig, 1795–8/R1989, with addns by N. Ladenburger); Postludium to [=completion of] J.S. Bach: The Art of Fugue, 1803, lost; Sammlung progressiver Orgelstücke (Biberach, 1805); Königlich württembergisches ... Choralbuch, suppl.2 (Stuttgart, 1816) [incl. biography of Knecht]; Caecilia (Freiburg, 1817–19); pieces in collections; other pieces
Pf: 12 variationen (Leipzig, 1785); Kleine praktische Klavierschule (Munich, 1799–1802); Kleine theoretische Klavierschule (Munich, 1800–01); Bewährtes Methodenbuch beim ersten Klavierunterricht (Freiburg, 1820); other pieces, most for beginners and amateurs

THEORETICAL WORKS

Erklärung einiger ... missverstandenen Grundsätze aus der Voglerschen Theorie (Ulm, 1785)
Gemeinnützliches Elementarwerk der Harmonie und des Generalbasses, pt 1 (Speyer, 1792), pts 2–4 (Stuttgart, 1793–7)
Kleines alphabetisches Wörterbuch der vornehmsten und interessantesten Artikel aus der musikalischen Theorie (Ulm, 1795)
Knechts allgemeiner musikalischer Katechismus (Biberach, 1803)
Anleitung zur Tonausweichungs- und Fantasirkunst, 1816, lost
Luthers Verdienste um Musik und Poesie (Ulm, 1817)
Theoretisch-praktische Generalbassschule (Freiburg, c1817)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; GerberL; GerberNL
'Lebensbeschreibung Herrn Justin Heinrich Knecht, evangelischen Schullehrers und Musikdirektors der freien Reichstadt Biberach', Musikalische Real-Zeitung (10 Feb 1790, 17 Feb 1790, 24 Feb 1790); 'Berichtigung ...', Musikalische Korrespondenz der Teutschen Filarmonischen Gesellschaft (7 July 1790)
F. Schlegel: Justinus Heinrich Knecht (Biberach, 1980)
M. Ladenburger: Justin Heinrich Knecht: Leben und Werk: thematisch-bibliographisches Verzeichnis seiner Kompositionen (diss., U. of Vienna, 1984)
J. Eppelsheim: 'Justin Heinrich Knechts "Orgelschule" als Zeugnis süddeutscher Vorstellungen von Orgelklang und Orgelspiel um 1800', Beiträge zu Orgelbau und Orgelmusik in Oberschwaben im 18. Jahrhundert: Ochsenhausen 1988, 381–479
M. Ladenburger: 'Mitteilungen zu Orgelbau und Orgelmusik in Oberschwaben am Ende des 18. und am Beginn des 19. Jahrhunderts', ibid., 283–339
H. Musch: 'Zu den Cantabile-Stücken in der Orgelschule von Justin Heinrich Knecht', ibid., 481–510
H.-M. Miller: Die Orgelwerke von Justin Heinrich Knecht (Munich, 1990)
C. Bockmaier: Entfesselte Natur in der Musik des achtzehnten Jahrhunderts (Tutzing, 1992)
H. Jung: 'Zwischen Malerey und Empfindung: zu den historischen und Ausdruck der ästhetischen Voraussetzungen von Justin Heinrich Knechts Le portrait musical de la nature (1785)', Studien zur Musikgeschichte: eine Festschrift für Ludwig Finscher, ed. A. Laubenthal and K. Kusan-Windweh (Kassel, 1995), 417–30

MICHAEL LADENBURGER

Knechtel, Johann George (b ?Prague, *c*1715; d ?Dresden, after 1766). Horn player, probably from Bohemia. Dlabacž mentions two 'very good' horn- and trumpet-playing brothers from Prague named Knechtel, one of whom may have been Johann George. Knechtel played first horn in the renowned Dresden court orchestra from 1733 or 1734 until about 1756. According to Dahlqvist, it is likely that he 'retired' as horn player in order to become a court cellist at Dresden during the years 1756–67. Knechtel wrote one concerto for horn in D (Katalog Wenster Litteratur I/10, S-L; also found in a version for viola in E♭ in D-Dl) and has another concerto attributed to him in the same collection (in E♭, I/11). These works, as well as many of J.F. Fasch's ensemble concertos written during Knechtel's employment with the Dresden orchestra, show him to have been a master of the high (so-called clarino) register. Thus Knechtel developed the tradition of virtuoso first horn players in Dresden in the first half of the 18th century (others there during the period included Johann Adalbert Fischer and J.A. Schindler) whilst expanding upon this tradition through his skill in the performance of quick chordal figures and large leaps in a quasi-violinistic idiom. While Knechtel was perfecting the extreme high range, his partner at second horn, A.J. Hampel, was developing the lower compass of the horn. Knechtel is also thought to have composed a set of 12 'Menuets et Polonaises' for keyboard dated 1755 (in D-LEm).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G.J. Dlabacž: Allgemeines historisches Künstler-Lexicon, ii (Prague, 1815/R)
R. Dahlqvist: 'Corno and Corno da caccia: Horn Terminology, Horn Pitches and High Horn Parts', Basler Jb für historische Musikpraxis, xv (1991), 35–80
T. Hiebert: 'Virtuosity, Experimentation, and Innovation in Horn Writing from Early 18th-Century Dresden', HBSJ, iv (1992), 112–59 [incl. musical exx.]
R. Pfeiffer: Johann Friedrich Fasch, 1688–1758: Leben und Werk (Wilhelmshaven, 1994), 82–7

THOMAS HIEBERT

Knee-lever (Fr. genouillère; Ger. Kniehebel). Any of a variety of devices moving either horizontally or vertically, operated by the knee, and used for the production of expressive or timbre-altering effects on a number of different types of keyboard instruments. A knee-lever was occasionally provided on reed organs to permit control of loudness, since the feet were already occupied with the pedal-operated bellows. Knee-levers preceded pedals for operating damper-lifting and other mechanisms on German and Austrian pianos, and they were also used to activate the elaborate register-changing devices found on late 18th-century French harpsichords.

See also PEDAL.

EDWIN M. RIPIN

Knees [Kness], Jurij. See KNEZ, JURIJ.

Knefel, Johann. See KNÖFEL, JOHANN.

Kneif, Tibor (b Bratislava, 9 Oct 1932). German musicologist. He studied law at Budapest (1951–5, doctorate 1955) and Göttingen, where from 1959 he studied musicology under Rudolf Stephan, philosophy under Josef König and Gunther Patzig and Romance languages. He took the doctorate there in 1963 with a dissertation on the origins of medieval music studies. After working as a research assistant at the Institut für Sozialforschung in Frankfurt under Adorno (1965–7), he was research assistant at the musicology institute of the Free University in Berlin, where he completed the Habilitation in 1971 and was appointed professor in 1973. Influenced by Ernst Bloch and Georg Lukács, Kneif is interested in music as a manifestation of social history and his writings have focussed on music aesthetics and semiotics in music. As a music sociologist, he is critical of Adorno and has championed the study of the history and theory of popular music, on which he has written standard reference books.

WRITINGS

Zur Entstehung der musikalischen Mediävistik (diss., U. of Göttingen, 1963; extracts in AcM, xxxvi (1964), 123–36)

'Forkel und die Geschichtsphilosophie des ausgehenden 18. Jahrhunderts', Mf, xvi (1963), 224–37

'Die geschichtlichen und sozialen Voraussetzungen des musikalischen Kitsches', DVLG, xxxvii (1963), 22–44

'Ernst Bloch und der musikalische Expressionismus', Ernst Bloch zu ehren: Beiträge zu seinem Werk, ed. S. Unseld (Frankfurt, 1965), 277–326

'Gegenwartsfragen der Musiksoziologie: ein Forschungsbericht', AcM, xxxviii (1966), 72–118

'Das triviale Bewusstsein in der Musik', Studien zur Trivialmusik des 19. Jahrhunderts, ed. C. Dahlhaus (Regensburg, 1967), 29–52

'Historismus und Gegenwartsbewusstsein', Die Ausbreitung des Historismus über die Musik, ed. W. Wiora (Regensburg, 1969), 281–97

'Über die funktionale und ästhetische Musikkultur', JbSIM 1969, 108–22

'Ideen zu einer dualistischen Musikästhetik', IRMAS, i (1970), 15–34

'Bedeutung, Struktur, Gegenfigur: zur Theorie des musikalischen "Meinens"', IRASM, ii (1971), 213–29

'Die Idee der Natur in der Musikgeschichte', AMw, xxvii (1971), 302–14

Musiksoziologie (Cologne, 1971)

'Adorno und Stockhausen', Zeitschrift für Musiktheorie, iv/1 (1973), 34–8

'Zur Entstehung und Kompositionstechnik von Bartóks Konzert für Orchester', Mf, xxvi (1973), 36–51

Die Bühnenwerke von Leoš Janáček (Vienna, 1974)

'Some Non-Communicative Aspects of Music', IRASM, v (1974), 51–9

'Camille Durutte (1803–1881)', AMw, xxxii (1975), 266–71

ed.: R. Wagner: Die Kunst und die Revolution; das Judentum in der Musik (Munich, 1975) [incl. commentary]

'Musikalische Hermeneutik, musikalische Semiotik', Beiträge zur musikalischen Hermeneutik, ed. C. Dahlhaus (Regensburg, 1975), 63–71

'Rockmusik und Wissenschaft: Aspekte einer zeitgenössischen Trivialkunst', Melos/NZM, i (1975), 19–25

ed.: Texte zur Musiksoziologie (Cologne, 1975, 2/1983)

Politische Musik? (Vienna, 1977)

'Rockmusik und Subkultur', 'Rockmusik und Bildungsmusik', Rockmusik: Aspekte zur Geschichte, Ästhetik, Produktion, ed. W. Sandner (Mainz, 1977), 37–51, 131–44

Sachlexikon Rockmusik: Instrumente, Stile, Techniken, Industrie und Geschichte (Reinbek, 1978)

Einführung in die Rockmusik: Entwürfe und Unterlagen für Studium und Unterricht (Wilhelmshaven, 1979)

ed.: Rockmusik: ein Handbuch zum kritischen Verständnis (Reinbek, 1982)

'Über Musiker-Autobiographien', Glazba, ideje i društvo: svečani zbornik za Ivana Supičića/Music, Ideas and Society: Essays in Honour of Ivan Supičić, ed. S. Tuksar (Zagreb, 1993), 153–60

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Davydov: 'Musikalisches Werk und "Work in Progress": Metamorphosen der Vorstellung vom Kunstwerk', BMw, xvi (1974), 3–23

C. Raab: '"Wie hältst Du's mit dem Rock?" Zu Tibor Kneif: Rockmusik und Wissenschaft-Aspekte einer zeitgenössischen Trivialkunst', Melos/NZM, i (1975), 196–7

H.-W. Heister and others, eds.: Semantische Inseln, musikalisches Festland: für Tibor Kneif zum 65. Geburtstag (Hamburg, 1997) [incl. list of writings, 281–93]

HANS HEINRICH EGGEBRECHT/R

Kneisel, Franz (b Bucharest, 26 Jan 1865; d New York, 26 March 1926). American violinist and teacher of Romanian birth. The son of a bandmaster, he learned to play the flute, clarinet and trumpet, as well as the violin. After graduating from the Bucharest Conservatory in 1879, he went to Vienna, where he continued his studies with Jakob Grün and Joseph Hellmesberger until 1882; he made his solo début in Vienna at the end of that year. The next season he became concertmaster at the Hoftheater and in 1884 went to Berlin to fill the same position in the Bilsesche Kapelle. In October 1885, though barely 20 years old, he was engaged by Wilhelm Gericke as concertmaster of the Boston SO. For the next 20 years he was concertmaster and assistant conductor; he appeared as soloist in many violin concertos and gave the first American performances of the concertos by Brahms and Karl Goldmark, as well as the première of the First Violin Concerto of Gustav Strube. As assistant conductor, he led the Boston SO performances at the Columbian Exposition in Chicago in 1893. Shortly after his arrival in Boston, Kneisel formed the KNEISEL QUARTET from among the members of the orchestra.

Kneisel was for many years associated with the Worcester Festival in Massachusetts, first as concertmaster and assistant conductor (1885–96) and then as conductor (1897–1909). In 1905 he moved to New York to become the first head of the violin department of the newly established Institute of Musical Art, where he remained until his death. He also established a summer school of violin and chamber-music playing at his home in Blue Hill, Maine. He was a demanding teacher, requiring much in both technical ability and expressive insight. At the time of his death, his renown as a teacher was such that he was ranked with Leopold Auer.

Kneisel played a leading role in American music as a soloist and as ensemble performer, both for the range and variety of his programmes and for his dedication to the highest performance standards. Many Boston composers wrote works for him personally or for his quartet, and these formed a substantial part of his repertory. He composed a Grand Concert Etude for violin and also published a number of technical studies. There are collections of Kneisel memorabilia at Blue Hill and at the Chapin Library of Williams College, Williamstown.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M.A.De W. Howe: The Boston Symphony Orchestra: an Historical Sketch (Boston, 1914, enlarged 2/1931/R with J.N. Burk as The Boston Symphony Orchestra 1881–1931)

M.D.H. Norton: 'Franz Kneisel', The Violinist, xxxviii (1926), 154

R. Aldrich: 'Franz Kneisel', Musical Discourse (New York, 1928), 226
B. Schwarz: Great Masters of the Violin (New York, 1983)

STEVEN LEDBETTER

Kneisel Quartet. American string quartet. It was formed in 1885 by Franz Kneisel, concertmaster of the Boston SO, at the instigation of the orchestra's founder, Henry Lee Higginson. The other members were Emanuel Fiedler (second violin; later replaced by Otto Roth (1887–99), Karl Ondříček (1899–1902), Julius Theodorowicz (1902–7), Julius Roentgen (1907–12) and Hans Letz (1912–17)); Louis Svečenski (viola, who, like Kneisel, remained a member throughout the quartet's existence); and Fritz Giese (cello; later replaced by Anton Hekking (1889–91), Alwin Schroeder (1891–1907) and Willem Willeke (1907–17)). The quartet gave its first concert on 28 December 1885. The members were all at that time principal players in the Boston SO, but in 1903 they resigned from the orchestra to perform only as a string quartet. In 1905 they moved to New York and became affiliated with the newly founded Institute of Musical Art.

The Kneisel Quartet built an audience for chamber music throughout America. It gave annual concert series in Boston and New York, and performed in nearly 170 other places, setting new standards of performance in the USA; it was particularly noted for its precise ensemble playing and evenness of tone. The musicians set out to educate their audiences by performing complete quartets of Haydn, Mozart or Beethoven (including his then little-known late quartets), and they introduced many new European compositions, among them works by Brahms, Debussy, Franck, Dvořák, Bruckner, Wolf, Smetana, Enescu, Ravel, Glazunov, Kodály and Schoenberg (Verklärte Nacht). They also played many works by American composers, several of which were written for and dedicated to the quartet.

Though it prospered in Boston from its inception, the Kneisel Quartet was not immediately successful on tour, and had at times to restrict its programmes to the lighter quartet literature. Eventually, however, it did achieve a genuine popularity, and by the time it was disbanded in 1917, chamber music concerts were well established. Programmes, scrapbooks, photographs and obituaries are at Kneisel Hall, Blue Hill, Maine, and in the Willem Willeke Collection in the Chapin Library, Williams College, Williamstown.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveA (S. Ledbetter)
M.A.De W. Howe: The Boston Symphony Orchestra: an Historical Sketch (Boston, 1914, enlarged 2/1931/R with J.N. Burk as The Boston Symphony Orchestra 1881–1931)
A. Foote: An Autobiography (Norwood, MA, 1946/R)
V.B. Danek: A Historical Study of the Kneisel Quartet (DMEd diss., Indiana U., 1962)

STEVEN LEDBETTER

Kneller [Kniller, Knöller, Knüller], Andreas (b Lübeck, 23 April 1649; d Hamburg, 24 Aug 1724). German composer and organist. Younger brother of the famous portrait painter Sir Godfrey Kneller, he became organist of the Jacobi- und Georgikirche, Hanover, in 1667. In 1685 he became organist of the Petrikirche, Hamburg, where he got to know Reincken and married his only daughter, Margaretha. He was often asked to test new organs and organists, and was among those who examined candidates for the position of organist at the Jacobikirche, Hamburg, in 1720, a post in which J.S. Bach had initially shown an interest. From 1723 he received a pension. As a composer he is known by a handful of organ pieces (ed. K. Beckmann, Wiesbaden, 1987). There are three preludes and fugues in a tablature at the church at Mylau, Saxony (one ed. M. Seiffert in Organum, iv/7, Leipzig, 1925, another in Shannon, ii), showing features typical of toccatas at the time. Two further works, a prelude and fugue and a praeludium (D-Bsb, both incomplete), signed 'A. Kn.' and 'A. K.' respectively, are probably by him. The same source contains a set of eight variations by him on Nun komm der Heiden Heiland, the fourth and fifth of which appear twice in another manuscript (also in D-Bsb; they are in K. Straube: Choralvorspiele alter Meister, Leipzig, 1907, where Kneller's first name is erroneously given as 'Anton'); the chorale melody is subjected to pleasantly varied treatment. An organ Te Deum in another source (D-Lr) has sometimes been ascribed to Kneller, but the manuscript was compiled between 1657 and 1663 and is thus almost certainly too early to be by him. It is attributed to 'A. Kniller', and Apel believed it to be the only known work by one Anton Kniller.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ApelG; EitnerQ; FrotscherG; WaltherML
M. Seiffert: 'Das Mylauer Tabulaturbuch von 1750', AMw, i (1918–19), 607–32
L. Krüger: Die hamburgische Musikorganisation im 17. Jahrhundert (Strasbourg, 1930), 170–71
F.W. Riedel: Quellenkundliche Beiträge zur Geschichte der Musik für Tasteninstrumente in der zweiten Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts (Kassel, 1960, 2/1990)
J.R. Shannon: The Mylauer Tabulaturbuch: a Study of the Preludial and Fugal Forms in the Hands of Bach's Middle-German Precursors (diss., U. of North Carolina, 1961)
A. Edler: Der nordelbische Organist (Kassel, 1982)
K. Beckmann: 'Echtheitsprobleme im Repertoire des hanseatischen Orgelbarocks', Ars Organi, xxxvii/3 (1989), 15–62

HORACE FISHBACK/ULF GRAPENTHIN

Knepler, Georg (b Vienna, 21 Dec 1906). Austrian musicologist. Son of Paul Knepler (1879–1967), librettist of Lehár's Paganini and Giuditta, he studied musicology with Adler, Fischer, Wellesz and Lach at the University of Vienna, where he took the doctorate in 1930 with a dissertation on form in Brahms's instrumental works; he also studied the piano with Eduard Steuermann and composition and conducting with Hans Gál. He began his career as répétiteur with Karl Rankl in Wiesbaden and accompanist for Karl Kraus's celebrated Offenbach recitals. In 1934 he was imprisoned for several weeks as a result of his dissemination of communist newspapers and that same year moved to London, where he worked as a vocal coach and piano teacher. He was also musical director of Das Laterndl (a theatre run by German exiles), conducted several performances of the BBC Opera Group and, together with Eric Crozier, composed music for experimental television programmes, 1937–9.

He returned to Vienna as Cultural Secretary to the Austrian Communist party in 1946 and three years later was invited by the government of the German Democratic Republic to found a Hochschule für Musik in Berlin, of which he was Rektor until 1960. He was then appointed professor and director of musicology at the Humboldt University, posts he held until his retirement in 1970; he was also editor-in-chief of Beiträge zur Musikwissenschaft, 1959–90.

Knepler's writings are characterized by their profound knowledge of Western European music and their breadth of reference, from anthropology and economic theory to linguistics and semiotics. His Marxist convictions inform his searching two-volume study of 19th-century music (1961) and his ground-breaking Geschichte als Weg zum Musikverständnis (1977). His book on Mozart, which appeared amid the avalanche of Mozartiana in 1991, is a brilliant, elegantly written amalgam of historical research and penetrating musical analysis, achieved through his lifelong musical and scholarly activity and acute observation of historical events.

WRITINGS

Die Form in den Instrumentalwerken Johannes Brahms (diss., U. of Vienna, 1930)
'Das sowietische System der Musikerziehung', 'Glinka und die deutsche Musikgeschichtsschreibung', MG, iv (1954), 136–9, 213–57 with E.H. Meyer and H. Goldschmidt: Musikgeschichte im Überblick (Berlin, 1956, 3/1981/R by F. Brenn)
Musikgeschichte des XIX. Jahrhunderts (Berlin, 1961)
Festrede zu Richard Wagners 150. Geburtstag (Leipzig, 1963)
1000 Jahre Musikgeschichte in klingenden Beispielen, Jahrtausendwende bis 19. Jahrhundert (Berlin, 1966–70) [disc notes]
'Epochenstil?', BMw, xi (1969), 213–33
'Das Beethoven-Bild in Geschichte und Gegenwart', Beethoven Congress: Berlin 1970, 23–40
'Zu Beethovens Wahl von Werkgattungen', BMw, xii (1970), 308–21
ed.: Festschrift für Ernst Hermann Meyer (Leipzig, 1973) [incl. 'Festrede … für Ernst Hermann Meyer', 9–13]
Geschichte als Weg zum Musikverständnis: Beiträge zur Theorie, Methode und Geschichte der Musikgeschichtsschreibung (Leipzig, 1977)
Gedanken über Musik: Reden – Versuche – Aufsätze – Kritiken (Berlin, 1980) ed., with H. Goldschmidt and K. Niemann: Komponisten, auf Werk und Leben befragt: Weimar 1981
ed., with H. Goldschmidt: Musikästhetik in der Diskussion (Leipzig, 1981) [incl. 'Versuch einer historischen Grundlegegung der Musikästhetik', 62–76]
Karl Kraus liest Offenbach: Erinnerungen – Kommentare – Dokumentationen (Berlin, 1984)
'Mozart und die Ästhetik der Aufklärung', Mozart und die Ästhetik der Aufklärung, ed. H. Stiller (Berlin, 1988), 7–19
'Musikalischer Realismus: neue Überlegungen zu einem alten Problem', BMw, xxx (1988), 231–53
Wolfgang Amadé Mozart: Annäherungen (Berlin, 1991; Eng. trans., 1994)
'Hanns Eisler the Thinker', Hanns Eisler: a Miscellany, ed. D. Blake (New York, 1995), 441–51
Macht ohne Heerschaft (forthcoming)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.-W. Heister, K. Heister-Grech and G. Scheit, eds.: Zwischen Aufklärung & Kulturindustrie: Festschrift für Georg Knepler zum 85. Geburtstag (Hamburg, 1993)
H.-W. Heister, ed.: Musik/Revolution: Festschrift für George Knepler zum 90. Geburtstag (Hamburg, 1997)

DAVID BLAKE

Knessl, Lothar (b Brno, 15 April 1927). Austrian writer on music and administrator. After being forced to emigrate from Czechoslovakia, he studied music and theatre at the University of Vienna (1950–56) and composition privately with Krenek. He attended the Darmstadt summer courses (1957–60) and was then arts editor of various Austrian daily newspapers and a freelance journalist, contributing to publications such as Melos, Opernwelt, Theater heute and Neues Forum, among others (1960–67). In 1967 he became artistic director of the Vienna Staatsoper, and in 1971 he became head of the press office for the Österreichische Bundestheater and chief editor of the Staatsoper programme books; in 1986 he began teaching courses on contemporary music at Vienna University. He retired in 1991. His other activities have included programme coordinator of the ÖRF broadcast series 'Studio neuer Musik' (from 1968), consultant for the festival 'Wien Modern' (from 1988), coordinator of the Vienna International Competition for Composers (from 1991), music curator for the Ministry of Culture (with Christian Scheib, 1993–6) and president of the Music Information Centre Austria (from 1994). His writings include a monograph on Krenek (Vienna, 1967), and he has composed chamber and vocal works which have been performed and broadcast.

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Knez [Khnes, Khness, Khuess, Khüess, Khnies, Kness, Khues, Knees], Jurij [Georg] (b Vrhnika, nr Ljubljana, mid-16th century; d after 1620). Singer and composer of Slovenian descent. He is first mentioned as being a bass singer at the convent of Hall in the Tyrol (1582–9); he afterwards sang with the Salzburg court chapel (1589–92), dedicating his 'neu componierte Vespergesänge neben ainem musicalischen Magnificat' (now lost) to the chapter of Salzburg Cathedral. He spent periods at the courts of Munich (1588, 1590, 1592) and Stuttgart (1589, 1590); he was Kantor of St Nikolaus, Hall (1593), a member of the Vienna royal chapel (1594–1612 and 1614–19); and was finally appointed Provisionist (a salaried position) in Salzburg (1620–21).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SennMT
D. Cvetko: Histoire de la musique slovène (Maribor, 1967), 36
D. Cvetkô: Slovenska glasba v evropskem prostoru [Slovenian music in its European context] (Ljubljana, 1991), 67, 464

For further bibliography see Grove6

ANDREJ RIJAVEC

Kniehebel (Ger.). See KNEE-LEVER.

Knight, Gladys. See GLADYS KNIGHT AND THE PIPS.

Kniller, Andreas. See KNELLER, ANDREAS.

Kniller, Anton. A 17th-century composer, almost certainly not identifiable with ANDREAS KNELLER.

Kniplová [née Pokorná], Naděžda (b Ostrava, 18 April 1932). Czech soprano. Raised in a musical family, she studied singing at the Prague Conservatory with Jarmila Vavrdová (1947–53) and at the Academy of Musical Arts with Ungrová and Otava (1954–8). After engagements at Ústí nad Labem (1957–9) and the Janáček Opera, Brno (1959–64), she became a principal of the Prague National Theatre, having won prizes at the Geneva (1958), Vienna and Toulouse (1959) competitions. From her Brno days she was noted for the dramatic force of her performances; the sonorous, metallic, dark timbre of her voice was particularly well suited to the dramatic soprano roles of Czech opera – notably Smetana's Libuše, Milada (Dalibor) and Anežka (Two Widows), and Janáček's Kostelnička, Kabanicha and Emilia Marty. She also sang Tosca, Aida, Senta, Ortrud, Brünnhilde and Isolde. In Brno she created splendid characterizations of Prokofiev's Renata (The Fiery Angel), Katerina in Martinů's The Greek Passion, Shostakovich's Katerina Izmaylova and Bartók's Judith (Bluebeard's Castle). Her many international appearances, notably those at Vienna, Munich, Hamburg, San Francisco and New York, were praised for their dramatic intensity, though some critics commented on a certain lack of vocal purity or steadiness.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Skála, ed.: Čeští koncertní umělci: pěvci [Czech concert artists: singers] (Prague, 1984)

V. Procházka, ed.: Národní divadlo a jeho předchůdci [The National Theatre and its predecessors] (Prague, 1988) [incl. list of repertory and discography]

ALENA NĚMCOVA

Knipper, Lev Konstantinovich (b Tbilisi, 21 Nov/3 Dec 1898; d Moscow, 30 June 1974). Russian composer. The son of a communications engineer, he studied at a higher technical college before volunteering for the front in December 1916. After being evacuated to Turkey he joined a Moscow Art Theatre group on a foreign tour, returning in May 1922 to Moscow where he entered the conservatory, studying with Glière and Zhilyayev. Later that year he was sent to Germany for medical treatment; there he studied with Jarnach and struck up a friendship with Hindemith. Hába's quarter-tone experiments and Schoenberg's 12-tone theories made a strong impact on Knipper who, shortly after his return to Moscow in December 1923, became technical secretary to the ASM (the Association of Contemporary Music), serving in that post from 1924 to 1930. His close connection with this organization – discredited and disbanded in 1932 – did not prevent him from becoming vice-chairman of the Composers' Union through the 1930s and 40s and being appointed chief of its various sections and committees. In addition to organizing amateur musical activity within the Red Army, he undertook ethnographic expeditions to the far east of the Soviet Union and to Central Asia; he was also a keen sportsman and competed as a climber professionally.

Knipper's music falls mostly into the categories of stage work and symphony, but folksong arrangements – composed mostly in the 1930s and 40s as a result of his expeditions – also play a significant role. Mass song was another favourite genre; his best-known work of this kind, Polyushko-pole ('Field, Beloved Field'), was originally the main theme of the Fourth Symphony. In his early works, written in the 1920s, Knipper experimented with genres and timbres in a search for new expressive means. He also took great interest in the musical theatre and in 1929 was appointed musical consultant to the Nemirovich-Danchenko theatre. From the 1930s to 50s his main interest lay in large-scale symphonic genres and, in particular, programme works on social and political themes. The Third Symphony (1932–3) marks the beginning of his development of the 'song symphony' in which songs for massed choirs are incorporated into symphonically developed forms. In general, his symphonies interweave his response to Western modernism with a vivid realization of the Russian symphonic tradition and the works of Myaskovsky in particular. In his later works, written in the 1960s and 70s, he became increasingly attracted to non-traditional chamber forces and wrote a series of works notable for their lyrical and philosophical character. His finest work of this period is the skazka ('tale') entitled Malen'kiy prints ('The Little Prince').

WORKS
(selective list)

OPERAS

Kandid (op-ballet, 4, Knipper and V. Dmitriyev, after Voltaire), op.15, 1926–7

Severnïy veter [The North Wind] (9 scenes, Knipper, after V.M. Kirshon: Gorod vetrov [City of Winds]), op.25, 1929–30, Moscow, Nemirovich-Danchenko Music Theatre, 31 March 1930

Goroda i godï [Cities and Years] (K. Fedin), op.22, 1931 [frags.]

Mariya (5, P. Pavlenko and A. Kovalenkov after Pavlenko: Na vostoke [In the East]), 1937

Aktrisa [The Actress] (4, Knipper), 1942 [frags.]

Na Baykale [On Lake Baikal] (3, G. Tsïdïnzhapov and Yu. Stremin), 1947–8, Ulan-Udė, Music Drama Theatre, 26 June 1948, rev. 1958

Koren' zhizni [The Source of Life] (4, V. Aleksandrov and A.I. Mashistov), 1948–9, rev. as Serdtse taygi [Heart of the Tayga], 1957, concert perf., Moscow, 27 March 1958; staged, Kuybïshev Theatre of Opera and Ballet, 20 Dec 1960

Murat (4, 5 scenes, Z. Arungaziyeva, N.I. Imshetsky and Mashistov), 1956–7, Frunze, 1 March 1959

Malen'kiy prints [The Little Prince] (theatrical-sym. tale, 3 pts, Knipper, after A. de Saint-Exupéry), 1962–71, Moscow, 29 Dec 1978

Andrey Sokolov (op-narrative, Knipper, after M. Sholokhov: Sud'ba cheloveka [A Man's Life]), 1966

BALLETS

Satanella (theatrical-sym. pantomime, 1), op.4, 1924; Negrityonok Sėbi [Little Negro Sebi] (1), op.24, 1931, Moscow, 1931; Doroga k schast'yu/Istochnik schast'ya [The Path to Happiness/The Source of Happiness] (4), 1949–51, Stalinabad, Tajik Theatre of Opera and Ballet, 1951; Krasavitsa Angara [Angara the Beauty] (ballet-poem, 3), collab. B.B. Yampilov, Ulan-Udė, Buryat Opera and Ballet Theatre, Jan 1959, rev. version, Ulan-Udė, Buryat Opera and Ballet Theatre, 1974

OTHER WORKS

21 syms.: no.1, op.13, 1926; no.2 'Liricheskaya', op.30, 1932, lost; no.3 'Dal'nevostochnaya' [East Asian] (V. Gusev), op.32, solo vv, male chorus, 2 bayan, military band, orch, 1932–3; no.4 'Poėma o boytse-komsomol'tse' [Poem on a Komsomol Girl Soldier] (Gusev), op.41, chorus, orch, 1933–4, rev. solo vv, chorus, orch, 1964; no.5 'Liricheskaya poėma', op.42, 1933–4, lost; no.6 (M. Golodnoy), op.47, Bar, male chorus, orch, 1935–6; no.7 'Voyennaya' [Military], 1939; no.8, 1941–2; no.9, 1944–5; no.10, 1946; no.11, 1949–50; no.12, 1950; no.13, 1950–52; no.14, 1954; no.15, str orch, 1961–2; no.16 'Dramaticheskaya', 1968; no.17 (V. Mayakovsky, M. Kryukova), solo vv, vc, 1970; no.18 (M. Singayevsky), solo vv, 1970; no.19, 1971 [sketch]; no.20, vn, vc, orch, 1972; no.21 'Simfonicheskiye tantsï' [Sym. Dances], 1974

Concs.: Vn Conc. no.1, 1943; Double Conc., vn, vc, orch, 1944; Vc Conc., 1951–3; Conc.-Monologue for vc, 7 brass, timp, 1962; Malen'kiy kontsert [Little Conc.], vn, str, 1964; Vn Conc. no.2, 1965; Sym.-Conc., str qt, orch, 1965–6; Conc., cl, chbr orch, 1967; Double Conc., vn, vc, 7 ww, 1967; Conc.-Suite, ob, perc, str qnt, 1968; Double Conc., bn, tpt, str, 1968; Vn Conc. no.3, vn, chbr orch, 1968; Conc., bn, str, 1970; Conc.-Poem, vc, perc, str, 1970

Other orch: Skazki gipsovogo bozhka [Tales of a Plaster Idol], op.1, 1924; Kandid, op.15a, 1927 [suite from op-ballet]; Syuita, op.14, 1927; Malen'kaya liricheskaya syuita [Little Lyric Suite], op.18, small orch, 1928; Syuita, op.19, 1929–30; Syuita, op.20, 1929–30; Syuita, op.21, 1929–30; Simfonietta 'Ėtyudï k romanu Sh. de Kostera "Til' Ulenshpigel'"' [Studies of de Koster's novel 'Till Eulenspiegel'], op.33, 1932; Vospominaniya [Memories], suite, op.31, vn, small orch, 1932; Vakhio-Bolo, ov., op.39, 1933 [on Tajik themes]; Vanch, op.29, 1933 [album no.3 of Tajik recordings]; Na perekopskom valu [On the Dug Rampart], sym. poem, 1940; Obrazï Turkmenii [Images of Turkmenistan], suite, 1940; Pesnya o konnike [Song of a Cavalryman], sym. poem, 1940; Maku, Iranian suite, 1942; Simfonieytta, str, 1942; 25 let RKKA [25 Years of the RKKA], ov., 1944; Radif, song, 1944 [Iranian style]; Tantseval'naya syuita [Dance Suite], 1945; Gornaya serenada [Mountain Serenade], str, 1945–6; Baykal, ov., 1946; Kurumkan, Buryat suite, 1947; Molodost' [Youth], ov., 1947; Soldatskiye pesni [Soldiers' Songs], suite, small orch, 1947; Sonatina, vn, str, 1948; Kolkhoznïye pesni [Kolkhoz Songs], suite, 1950; Pamir, suite, 1951; Simfonieytta, str, 1953; Dni v Stalingrade [Days in Stalingrad], sym. poem, 1954; Frontovomu drugu [To a Friend from the Front], sym. poem-suite, 1955; Pis'ma druz'yam [Letters to Friends], sym.-suite, 1960; Simfonicheskiye rasskazï o tseline [Sym. Tales of the Virgin Soil], suite, 1960; Privet kosmonavtam [Greeting to the Cosmonauts], ov., 1963; 4 improvizatsii i koda, hn, str, 1971; Simfonieytta, str, 1971

Vocal: Pro lyubov' [On Love] (song cycle, A. Pushkin), Bar, ww qt, str, 1935; Vesna [Spring] (suite-cant., D. Sedïkh), solo vv, chorus, orch, 1947; Druzhba nerushima [Friendship is Indestructible]

(cant., G. Fere), solo vv, chorus, orch, 1954; Pobednaya uvertyura [Victory Ov.] (Ts. Solodar'), chorus, orch, 1954; Podvig/Ivan Golubets [Exploit] (poem-monologue, A. Krasovsky, Mashistov), B, male chorus, orch, 1956; Skaz [Tale], sym., chorus, vc, orch, 1961–3

Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt no.1, 1942; 12 Preludes, ob/cl, pf, 1946; Sonatina, hp, 1946; Variatsii v forme simfonii [Variations in the Form of a Sym.], 12 wind, 1963; Str Qt no.2, 1965; Pf Trio no.1, 1971; Str Qt no.3, 1973; Pf Trio no.2, 1974

Film scores, incid music, songs for massed chorus and romances

WRITINGS

'Pamyatnïye vstrechi' [Memorable meetings], SovM (1957), no.11, pp.39–43

'O zhizni, o lyudyakh, o sebe' [On life, people and myself], Muzïkal'naya zhizn' (1983), no.22, pp.16–17

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'L.K. Knipper', Sovremennaya muzïka, ii (1925), 49–50

V. Belyayev: 'L.K. Knipper', Sovremennaya muzïka, iii–iv (1925–7), 130–36

G. Abraham: Eight Soviet Composers (London, 1943), 52ff

A.G. Bernandt and A. Dolzhansky: Sovetskiye kompozitorï: kratkiy biograficheskiy spravochnik [Soviet composers: concise biographical handbook] (Moscow, 1957)

B. Schwarz: Music and Musical Life in Soviet Russia 1917–1970 (London, 1972)

'Lew Knipper 75', MG, xxiii (1973), 761 only

T.A. Gaidamovich, ed.: Lev Knipper: vospominaniya, dnevniki, zametki [Reminiscences, diaries and notes] (Moscow, 1980)

I. Martïnov: 'O L've Knippere', O muzïke i yeyo tvortsakh: sbornik stat'ey [On music and its composers: a collection of articles] (Moscow, 1980), 69–81

R. Ledenyov: 'Sil'nïy dokument ėpokhi' [A strong document of the epoch], MAk (1998), nos.3–4, pp.53–4 [100th anniversary]

ELENA DVOSKINA

Knittel, Krzysztof (Jakub) (b Warsaw, 1 May 1947). Polish composer and performer. He studied sound engineering and subsequently composition with Baird, Dobrowolski and Kotoński at the Warsaw Academy of Music (1966–77). In 1973 he began collaborating with the Experimental Studio of Polish Radio, and in 1978 he worked at the Buffalo Center of the Creative and Performing Arts. He has co-founded several live-electronic and improvisation led groups, among them KEW (1973–6, with Sikora and Michniewski), the multimedia Box Train (1986) and CH&K Studio (1989, with Chołoniewski). From 1995 to 1998 he was director of the Warsaw Autumn Festival, and in 1999 was elected president of the Union of Polish Composers. Awards he has received include the Solidarity Prize (1985) for the Second String Quartet.

Knittel's multifactorial activities make him a unique figure in Polish music; adhering to the experimental spirit of the 1960s and 70s, he has created music outside the confines of the concert tradition. Inspired by a broad range of literary, visual and musical influences, including jazz, rock music and minimalism, his music centres on the symbiosis of contrasting materials. Representative of his characteristically gentle outlook are Punkty/Linie ('Points/Lines'), Robak zdobywca ('The Conqueror Worm'), the two string quartets and Instant Reactions.

WORKS

(selective list)

Stage: Gluckspavillon dla Kasi (music theatre), 1978, Wrocław, 22 Feb 1978; Głos kobiecy [Women's Voice] (ballet, after R. Wojaczek), 1980, Łódź, 6 Dec 1980; Szatan w Goraju [Satan in Goray] (ballet, after I.B. Singer), 1993, Philadelphia, 3 Feb 1994; Der Erwählte (ballet, after T. Mann), 1995, Polish TV, April 1996

Installations: Nogi [Legs], Warsaw, 1993; Przejście [The Passage], 1994; Rzeźba radiowa [Radio Sculpture], 1994

Orch: Lipps, tpt/sax, db, drumkit, orch, 1974–8; 29 pięciolinii [29 Staves], chbr orch, 1981; Nibiru, hpd, str, 1987

Chbr: A la santé, cl, trbn, vc, pf, 1974; Str Qt no.1 'Ursus', 1976; 5 utworów [5 Pieces], vc, pf, 1982; 4 preludii, pf, 1983; To co jest [It's Time Now], 5 insts, pf, 1983; Walka Brata Jana [Brother John's Struggle], fl, trbn, gui, vn, perc, 1987; Jingle-Jangle, vv, kbds, 1989; Homage to Charles Ives, wind qt, va, db, pf, perc, 1992

El-ac: 440, vn, pf, tape, 1973; Forma A, forme E, wind qnt, lights, 1973; Punkty/Linie [Points/Lines], cl, tape, slide projection, 1973; Robak zdobywca [The Conqueror Worm], tape piece after E.A. Poe, 1976; Dorikos (Z. Herbert), str qt, tape, 1977; Resztki [Odds and Ends], tape, 1978; Niskie dźwięki [Low Sounds], 5 versions: no.2, tam-tam, tape, 1979, no.1, tape, 1980, no.3, 2 spkrs, tam-tam, tape, 1980, no.4, synth, tape, 1990, no.5, elec gui, synth, tape, 1991; Poligamia, tape, 1979, collab. A. Bieżan; 3 studia, tape, 1979; Norcet 1 & 2, tape, 1980; Człowiek-orkiestra I [Man-Orchestra I], insts, tape, 1982; Czarna woda, biała woda, stary strumień [Black Water, White Water, Old Stream], insts, tape, 1983; Lapis, tape, 1985; Str Qt no.2, str qt, tape, perc, 1985; Pilot automatyczny, tape, 1986, collab. M. Chołoniewski; Poko, tape, 1986; 14 Variations by Piotr Bikont and Krzysztof Knittel on 14 Variations by Edwin Morgan on 14 Words by John Cage, vv, cptrs, 1986–92; 3 pieśni bez słów [3 Songs without Words], S, tape, 1987; Człowiek-orkiestra II, cptrs, objects, 1988; Histoire I, tape, 1988; Histoire II, cl, pf, synth, tape, 1988; Granice niczego [Borders of Nothing], cptrs, 1990; Histoire III, hpd, tape, 1990; Człowiek-natura [Man-Nature], 16 cptr graphic compositions, 1991; Instant Reactions, ens, cptr, 1992; Sonata da camera no.1, tpt, cptr, 1994; Sonata da camera no.2, synth, cptr, 1995; Sonata da camera no.3, hpd, cptr, 1995

Incid music; film scores incl. Amator (dir. K. Kieślowski), 1979

Principal publishers: PWM, Agencja Autorska, Brevis

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Szwarcman: '"Muzykę można kojarzyć ze wszytkim"' [Music may be linked with everything], RM, xxii/5 (1978), 4–6

K. Knittel: 'Autorefleksja', Przemiany techniki dźwiękowej stylu i estetyki w polskiej muzyce lat 70, ed. L. Polony (Kraków, 1986), 279–84

E. Gajkowskiej: 'Przewodnik po twórczości Krzysztofa Knittla' [Guide to the compositions of Knittel], RM, xxxviii/8 (1994), 1, 3

ADRIAN THOMAS

Knittl, Karel (b Polná, nr Jihlava, 4 Oct 1853; d Prague, 17 March 1907). Czech teacher, writer, composer and conductor. Son of an organist, he studied at the Prague Organ School (1872–5) and taught at private music institutes in Prague, notably the Maydl (1872–6) and the Pivoda (1873–83); he joined the staff of the Prague Organ School in 1882. In 1889 he was appointed to the Prague Conservatory, where he taught harmony and instrumentation and, as administrative director (1901–7), reformed the teaching methods and instituted regular student concerts. He succeeded Smetana and Bendl as choirmaster of the Prague Hlahol choral society (1877–90, 1897–1901), adding a permanent women's choir and enlarging the repertory with works such as Berlioz's Requiem, Liszt's Christus and Dvořák's Stabat mater as well as a cappella pieces. An active critic writing for Hudební listy and Dalibor, he sided with Pivoda in his celebrated dispute with Smetana. His compositions, rarely heard today, include songs, choruses, piano and orchestral works.

WRITINGS

'O nutných reformách učební osnovy zpěvu na školách středních' [Some necessary reforms in the singing teaching syllabus at secondary schools], Paedagogium, viii (1886), 337

F.Z. Skuherský (Prague, 1894)

Nauka o skladbě homofonní [A manual of homophonic composition] (Prague, 1898)

Příklady pro všeobecnou nauku hudební [Examples for the general teaching of music] (Prague, 1910)

Několik pokynů o studování sborů [Some hints on the studying of choruses] (Prague, 2/1944)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS [incl. further bibliography]
Z. Nejedlý: 'Dějiny pražského Hlaholu, iii: doba Knittlova (1877–1890)' [History of the Prague Hlahol, iii: Knittl's era (1877–90)], Památník zpěváckého spolku Hlahol 1861 až 1911 (Prague, 1911), 98–130
J. Fiala: 'Karel Knittl', HRo, vi (1953), 767 only
J. Ludvová: Česká hudební teorie novější doby 1850–1900 [Czech musical theory of the modern era 1850–1900] (Prague, 1989)

JOHN TYRRELL

Kníže, František Max (b Drahelčice, nr Prague, 7 Sept 1784; d Prague, 23 July 1840). Czech composer. A musician of many talents, he studied in Prague with Tomášek and became an accomplished singer, guitarist and violist. He began his musical career (as a bassoonist) with the Prague Estates Theatre and held a number of posts as choirmaster in Prague churches during the 1830s; during this time he wrote several sacred works, including six masses. He attempted unsuccessfully to gain the post of music director at Prague Cathedral after the death of Vitásek (1839).

Kníže's most important works are for the guitar and for the voice. In addition to didactic publications for the guitar he wrote a number of solo works and was well versed in virtuoso guitar writing. His numerous guitar arrangements include numbers from popular operas and fashionable dances. In vocal music he contributed greatly to the growth of a national tradition of Czech art song, many of his songs being written to texts by Václav Hanka. Among his song collections, the Patero českých písní op.21 (Prague, *c*1820) contains the patriotic ballad Břetislav, his most popular song; his songs also appeared in various anthologies of the time.

WORKS
(selective list)

published in Prague, n.d., unless otherwise stated

MSS in CZ-Pnm

Songs: Gesänge (T. Körner), gui acc., op.12; Lieder, op.17; Patero písní [5 Songs], 1v, gui/fortepiano, op.18 (1819); Patero českých písní [5 Czech Songs], 1v, gui/fortepiano, op.21; Wanderlieder, op.22; Šestero písní [6 Songs], 1v

Guitar: 12 Ländler, op.6; Divertimenti ... dedicati a Madamigella Catarina Falge, op.8; sets of variations

Pedagogical works: Vollständige Gitarre Schule; Fundamente für die Gitarre nebst praktischen Beispielen; Charakteristische Singübungen; 14 bks of gui studies

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'Kníže, František Max', Österreichisches biographisches Lexikon 1815–1950, ed. E. Obermayer-Marnach (Graz, 1957–)

ADRIENNE SIMPSON/ALENA JAKUBCOVÁ

Knoep, Lüder. See KNOP, LÜDER.

Knöfel [Knäfelius, Knefel, Knöbel, Knöpflin], Johann (b Lauban, Silesia [Lubiń, Poland], 1525–30; d ?Prague, after 21 April 1617). German composer and organist. Biographical details of the organist Kaspar Krumbhorn (b 1542) reveal that Knöfel was Kantor at the Valentin Trotzendorff Lateinschule, a Lutheran institution, at Goldberg (now Złotoryja), Silesia, when he was about 30 years old and Krumbhorn was his pupil. By the time of his marriage, on 21 June 1569, he had become Kapellmeister to Duke Heinrich V of Liegnitz, Brieg and Goldberg. In the preface to his Dulcissimae cantiones (1571), which he dedicated to the duke, he affirmed his allegiance to the Lutheran doctrine that had been adopted by the churches of Breslau (now Wrocław) in the earliest years of the Reformation, and in 1575 he dedicated his Cantus choralis (1575) – a complete setting of the Proper chants for the festivals of the church year – to the Breslau town council. The dedication of his mass on Lassus's In me transierunt (1562) shows that by 1579 he was Kapellmeister to the Elector Palatine Ludwig VI at Heidelberg; he stated in the dedication to his Cantiones piae (1580) that he had been appointed a short while before. In 1583, after the death of Ludwig VI, the Elector Johann Casimir restored Calvinism to the Palatinate, and the Lutheran Knöfel was deprived of his post and returned to Silesia. Not long afterwards he moved to Prague: in 1592 he wrote in the preface to his Novae melodiae that he had already been living there for some time. In that year he was organist and Kantor at St Heinrich, the school of which was renowned for its choir. Nothing further is heard of him until 1617 when a note in the civic records at Klagenfurt confirms that he was still alive: on 21 April that year the authorities in Carinthia approved a payment of '30 florins to Johann Knäfelius for his dedication', which does not preclude the possibility that he continued to live in Prague.

Knöfel's musical style is modelled on that of Lassus. Except for the Newe teutsche Liedlein (1581) and a few hymns, which are also in German, he set only Latin texts. Apart from the one to the 1581 collection, all his prefaces too are in Latin, an indication of his humanist upbringing (at the school at Goldberg, moreover, Latin was the language of everyday conversation). It is therefore easy to understand why he was such a staunch advocate of Latin music in Protestant worship. In the preface to the Cantus choralis (1575) he expressed surprise at the way in which the singing of Gregorian chant was at that time 'in many places either seldom practised or else completely discontinued' and the liturgical text replaced more and more often with free hymns. He sought to counteract this development by using Gregorian melodies as the basis of the pieces in this volume. The short, choral psalm verses, which are set homophonically, are rounded off by a restatement of the material by the organ; such alternation with congregational or choral singing was a common practice in Breslau churches. The full title of the Newe teutsche Liedlein shows that Knöfel did not resign himself entirely to the lighthearted elegance of the secular musical world to which his duties as court Kapellmeister obliged him to pay some tribute: 'New German songs, most of which describe and unmask the way of the world, the treachery of mankind, promising much and rendering little, fine words and false hearts. With, too, some cheerful songs appropriate to collations and celebrations'. The texts are mostly of a reflective and even moral character, as were the mottoes adopted by the various branches of the palatine household. The collection also includes settings of texts that were widely known at the time, and two folktales: one is about the 'Handschuhsheimer Esel', an amusing incident from the life of the palatinate huntsmen and peasants; the other – 'Ein Gedicht, wie man der Welt kann recht tun nicht', concerning the inability of Man to do justice to the world – is in the manner of Hans Sachs and in style is close to the homophonic canzonetta. Wunder bin ich is in the chromatic style, then the latest fashion in madrigal composition. Though he sometimes adopted modern techniques such as cori spezzati writing, chromaticism and the canzonetta style, Knöfel nevertheless remained firmly entrenched in the conservative tradition of Protestant sacred music.

WORKS

Dulcissimae quaedam cantiones, numero xxxii, 5–7vv ... tum musicis instrumentis aptae esse possint (Nuremberg, 1571); 1 (with Ger. text) ed. in Michael Praetorius: Gesamtausgabe, v (Wolfenbüttel and Berlin, 1937)
Cantus choralis ... 5vv ... quo per totum anni curriculum praecipuis diebus festis in ecclesia cantari solet (Nuremberg, 1575)
Missa, 5vv, ad imitationem cantionis Orlandi 'In me transierunt' (Nuremberg, 1579)
Cantiones piae, 5, 6vv ... quam instrumentis musicis accommodae (Nuremberg, 1580); 1 ed. F. Commer, Musica sacra, xix (Regensburg, 1878)
Newe teutsche Liedlein, 5vv, welche den mehrern Theil den Brauch dieser Welt beschreiben (Nuremberg, 1581); ed. in EDM, Sonderreihe, xvi (in preparation)
Novae melodiae, 5–8vv ... instrumentali pariter musicae accommodatae (Prague, 1592)
Christ ist erstanden, motet, 6vv, D-Mbs

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; GerberNL
H.A. Sander: Geschichte des lutherischen Gottesdienstes und der Kirchenmusik in Breslau (Breslau, 1937)
W. Scholz: 'Zu Johannes Knöffel', AMf, vii (1942), 228–9
H. Federhofer: 'Beiträge zur älteren Musikgeschichte Kärntens', Carinthia, i: Mitteilungen des Geschichtsvereins für Kärnten, cxlv (1955), 372–409
H.J. Moser: Die Musikleistung der deutschen Stämme (Vienna and Stuttgart, 1957)
F. Feldmann: 'Der Laubaner Johannes Knöfel, insbesondere sein "Cantus choralis"', Die schlesische Kirchenmusik im Wandel der Zeiten (Lübeck, 1975), 40–52

LINI HÜBSCH-PFLEGER

Knöller, Andreas. See KNELLER, ANDREAS.

Knop [Knoep, Knopff], Lüder (b Bremen; d Bremen, 5 March 1665). German composer and organist. He was the last musical member of an East Friesian family who moved to Bremen from Emden in 1584 and were active there as civic and church musicians. After briefly being assistant organist at the Ratskirche Unserer lieben Frauen in 1641 he succeeded his father as organist of St Stephani and held the post until his death. He published Erster Theil neuer Paduanen, Galliarden, Balletten, Mascaraden, Arien, Allemanden, Couranten und Sarabanden (Bremen, 1651, inc.) for three string instruments and continuo. A second part (Bremen, 1660) is extant, for two and three instruments and continuo, and was listed as early as 1657 in catalogues of the Frankfurt and Leipzig fairs. In its preface Knop emphasized that he had set the six balli 'after the French manner, for a bass and descant' and added some remarks concerning their performance. Part three of the publication, which is either lost or never appeared, was announced in 1667 as Luderi Knopii Schwanengesang and included pieces in up to seven parts, as well as several one- and two-part pieces by the editor, Johannes Jani, Knop's successor at St Stephani. Knop's setting for five voices and instruments of Psalm cxxviii for the wedding of the mayor of Bremen, H.H. Meyer, on 14 December 1658 (Bremen, 1658), is also extant (D-BMs).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ
A. Arnheim: 'Aus dem Bremer Musikleben im 17. Jahrhundert', SIMG, xii (1913), 369–416
F. Piersig: 'Die Organisten der bremischen Stadtkirchen im 17. und 18. Jahrhundert', Bremisches Jb, xxxv (1935), 379–425
F. Piersig: 'Ostfriesische Musikerfamilien im Bremer Musikleben des 17. Jahrhunderts', Jb der Gesellschaft für bildende Kunst und vaterländische Altertümer zu Emden, xxx (1950), 61–76

FRITZ PIERSIG/DOROTHEA SCHRÖDER

Knöpflin, Johann. See KNÖFEL, JOHANN.

Knorr, Ernst-Lothar von (b Eitorf, 2 Jan 1896; d Heidelberg, 30 Oct 1973). German composer and teacher. He studied the violin, harmony and conducting at the Cologne Conservatory and in 1909 produced his first compositions; he was awarded the Joseph Joachim Prize in 1911. After World War I he directed the violin class at the Heidelberg Academy of Music and was at the same time the founder of the Heidelberg Chamber Orchestra, a teacher of the violin at the Mannheim Hochschule für Musik and leader of the Pfalz Orchestra in that city. In 1924 came his first contact with the German youth music movement, a turning-point in his professional life. He pursued a career in musical education, acting as principal of Musikhochschulen and academies in Berlin, Frankfurt, Trossingen, Hanover and Heidelberg; he was also music adviser to Lower Saxony.

His works reflect his academic background. In 1936 one of his concerti grossi was attacked as being 'degenerate'; nevertheless, some of his songs and cantatas continued to be used at official state occasions.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: 2 conc. grossi; Little Pieces, str, 1929; Sym. Piece; Weihnachtspastorale; Conc., pf, chorus, orch; Introduction and Sym. Allegro, vc, orch; Serenadenmusik
Chbr: 2 str qts, 1929, 1930; Theme and 7 Variations, trautonium, hellertion, theremin-vox-inst, neo-Bechstein, vib, 1932; Wind Qnt, 1958; Duo, va, vc, 1961; Fantasie, cl, pf, 1970; Str Qt, 1970; Sonata, vc, pf, 1972
Kbd: Suite, C, pf; 3 sonatas, C, b, G, pf; Diaphonia, 2 pf, 1971; hpd sonata; org works
Cants.: Die heiligen drei Könige (R.M. Rilke); Würde der Frauen (J.C.F. von Schiller); Lobe den Herrn; Werden und Vergehen (trad.); Marienleben; Von den Männern, die ihre Pflicht getan; Nun ruhen alle Wälder; Elsässisches Liederspiel; Abendmusik (A. Silesius); Unser die Sonne (Thieme); Schicksal (M. Barthel); Heilige Flamme (H. Lersch); Heraklit; Brüder, wir halten Totenwacht; Kantate zum Schulschluss (J.W. von Goethe); Lob des Fleisses; Strafe der Faulheit; 2 Weihnachtskantaten, 1962; Weihnachtsbedenken über die Geburt Christi (A. Gryphius)
Other choral works: Hymnus des Friedens; Russische Liebeslieder; Chöre (W. von der Vogelweide, C. Morgenstern); Weinheberzyklus; Gesang im Grünen; Heiter-besinnliche Männerchöre (Busch), 1968
*c*30 songs, other vocal pieces, educational music

Principal publishers: Hohner, Möseler, Müller, Schott

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Pohl: 'Musiker und Erzieher: Ernst-Lothar von Knorr', Musica, vi (1952), 182–7 [incl. list of works]
O. Riemer, ed.: Ernst-Lothar von Knorr zum 75. Geburtstag (Cologne, 1971)
O. Riemer: 'Mentor und Komponist: Ernst-Lothar von Knorr 75 Jahre', Musica, xxv (1971), 58 only
G. Frommel: Tradition und Originalität: Schriften und Vorträge zur Musik (Frankfurt, 1988)

KLAUS L. NEUMANN

Knorr, Iwan (Otto Armand) (b Mewe, West Prussia, 3 Jan 1853; d Frankfurt, 22 Jan 1916). German composer, teacher and writer. At the age of four he was taken to southern Russia, where he learnt the piano from his mother and grew up surrounded by Russian folk music. The Knorr family settled in Leipzig in 1868, and Iwan studied the piano with Moscheles, theory with Richter and composition with Reinecke at the conservatory. In 1874 he became a professor of music at the Imperial Institute for Noble Ladies in Khar′kov; four years later he was appointed director of the theoretical studies programme of the Khar′kov division of the Russian Imperial Musical Society. In 1877 Knorr, who was still unknown as a composer, submitted his Variations on a Ukrainian Folksong op.7 to Brahms, who much liked the work. He recommended Knorr for a teaching post at the Hoch Conservatory in Frankfurt in 1883. Initially Knorr taught the piano, theory and music history there; from 1886 he also taught composition, and two years later he gave up teaching the piano in order to concentrate solely on theory and composition. He had a number of distinguished pupils, including Cyril Scott, Hans Pfitzner and Ernst Toch. In 1895 he was named royal professor, and in 1908 he succeeded Bernhard Scholz as director of the conservatory. He was made an honorary member of the American Philharmonic Academy in New York (1911).

Knorr was an able and enthusiastic teacher, according to Moritz Bauer, a colleague at the conservatory. As a composer he was gifted but not prolific: Bauer attributed this to his strong self-criticism and his interest in teaching. His music shows the influence of Ukrainian folk music and an interest in variation technique and suite forms, and much of it is extremely contrapuntal: he is often ranked with Reger as one of the greatest masters of counterpoint and fugue of his time. Some of his pedagogical works (which include tutors in fugue and harmony, and analyses of works by Bach, Brahms and Tchaikovsky) were published under the pseudonym I.O. Armand.

WORKS

OPERAS

Dunja (2, Knorr), op.18, Koblenz, 23 March 1904
Die Hochzeit (Knorr), Prague, 1907, not mentioned in Bauer
Durchs Fenster (1, Knorr), Karlsruhe, 1908

OTHER WORKS

Vocal: Marienlegende, solo vv, chorus, orch; Maria, scena, S, orch; Ukrainische Liebeslieder, 4vv, pf; *c*10 songs, 1v, pf; choruses, male and mixed vv
Orch: Sym., G; Sym. Fantasia; Variations on a Ukrainian Folksong, op.7; Serenade, G; 2 suites; intermezzos, fugues, other works
Chbr and pf: Pf Qt, E♭, arr. of pf qnt; 2 str qts; Variations on a Theme of Schumann, pf trio; works for vc, pf; numerous pf solos, duets and arrangements

WRITINGS

Peter Iljitsch Tschaikowsky (Berlin, 1900)
Aufgaben für den Unterricht in der Harmonielehre (Leipzig, 1903, 8/1931)
Lehrbuch der Fugenkomposition (Leipzig, 1911)
Die Fugen des 'Wohltemperierten Klaviers' von Joh. Seb. Bach in bildlicher Darstellung (Leipzig, 1912, 2/1926)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Bauer: Iwan Knorr: ein Gedenkblatt (Frankfurt, 1916) [with list of works]
U. Unger: Die Klavierfuge im zwanzigsten Jahrhundert (Regensburg, 1956)
P. Cahn: Das Hoch'sche Konservatorium in Frankfurt am Main (1878–1978) (diss., U. of Frankfurt, 1980)
D.O. Tall: 'Grainger, Knorr and Klimsch: Failure and Folksong', SM, xv (1981), 116–19
P. Cahn: 'Eine Schach-Fuge von Iwan Knorr', Mitteilungen der Hans-Pfitzner-Gesellschaft, no.44 (1982), 41–5

R.J. PASCALL

Knot. See ROSE.

Knote, Heinrich (b Munich, 26 Nov 1870; d Garmisch, 12 Jan 1953). German tenor. His long career was almost entirely centred on Munich, where he remained for nearly 40 years, concentrating on the heroic Wagner repertory, until his farewell in Siegfried on 15 December 1931. Between 1901 and 1913 he made many successful appearances at Covent Garden, and was even more appreciated at the Metropolitan (1904–8), where his performance fees were, at one time, twice those earned by Van Rooy. Knote was a superior, if typical, Wagnerian Heldentenor, who made many pre-1914 recordings and a further Wagner series as late as 1930, demonstrating the amazing endurance of his vocal powers.

DESMOND SHAWE-TAYLOR

Knuckles, Frankie [Nicholls, Francis] (b New York City, 18 Jan 1955). American DJ and club dance musician. He was a DJ at a number of clubs in New York City in the mid-1970s, under the tutelage of Larry Levan, then the resident DJ at the Paradise Garage. He moved to Chicago and became the DJ at the Warehouse in 1977, the club where the foundations of HOUSE music were laid. The music Knuckles played there was varied and innovative, but is most notable for the addition of his own primitive remixes of old disco records on reel-to-reel tape recorders. He took original SalSoul and Philadephia International recordings and broke down the arrangements to their rhythmic basics, frequently mixing in other rhythm tracks and simple, repetitive synthesizer motifs from European electronic records and even, on occasion, insistent drum machine patterns programmed by himself. So unique was Knuckles's style that clubgoers in Chicago called his sound 'house music' after the Warehouse club name. In 1982 he set up his own venue, the Power Plant, where he continued to develop house music to its best-known form. Latterly he became a producer and musician with an international reputation for playing simple, unaffected house music.

WILL FULFORD-JONES

Knüller, Andreas. See KNELLER, ANDREAS.

Knüpfer, Paul (b Halle, 21 June 1866; d Berlin, 4 Nov 1920). German bass. He studied at Sondershausen, where he made his début in 1885. He sang in Leipzig (1887–98), then from 1898 he was engaged at the Berlin Hofoper (later Staatsoper) until his retirement in 1920. He took part in the disastrous première of Leoncavallo's Roland von Berlin (1904) and sang Ochs in the Berlin première of Der Rosenkavalier (1911). He made his Bayreuth début in 1901, alternating as Gurnemanz and Titurel, then sang there regularly till 1906 as the Landgrave, Hunding and King Mark, and returned in 1912 as Pogner. At Covent Garden (1904–8 and 1913–14) he made his début as King Mark, then sang his other Wagner roles, including King Henry and Hagen, as well as Nicolai's Falstaff, Abul Hassan in the first Covent Garden Barbier von Bagdad (1906), Ochs in the British première of Der Rosenkavalier (1913) and Gurnemanz in the British stage première of Parsifal (1914). He was equally gifted in serious or comic roles. His voice was mellow and flexible, though it deteriorated in later years. His many recordings give some idea of his expressive range. He was married to the soprano Marie Egli.

ALAN BLYTH

Knüpfer, Sebastian (b Asch, Bavaria [now Aš, Czech Republic], 6 September 1633; d Leipzig, 10 Oct 1676). German composer. He was a distinguished Kantor of the Thomaskirche, Leipzig, and director of the city's music.

1. LIFE. Most of the biographical data about Knüpfer come from a published obituary (see Richter). He was first taught music by his father, a Kantor and organist at Asch. He also studied regularly with an unidentified tutor living near Asch, from whom he gained a solid grounding in, and lasting love for, a number of scholastic disciplines. At the age of 13 he entered the Gymnasium Poeticum at Regensburg and remained there for eight years. During this unusually long period he became well versed in the city's musical traditions (such as the works of Andreas Raselius), studied the organ, perhaps with Augustin Gradenthaler, and mastered a number of humanistic subjects, especially the poetic arts and philology. His gifts as a student were supported by scholarships from the city of Regensburg, and he was commended by influential members of the staff of the Gymnasium and the city council, some of the latter providing him with favourable testimonials when he moved to Leipzig in 1654. It is not known why he went there, but in view of his lifelong desire to improve his mind, it was possibly because he planned to enter the university. He did not, however, do so. During his first few years at Leipzig he gave music lessons and sang as a bass in church choirs, displaying enough talent to take solo parts. He applied for the post of Thomaskantor when Tobias Michael died on 26 June 1657, and he was appointed on 17 July; the four other candidates to whom he was preferred included Adam Krieger.

In Knüpfer the Thomaskirche found a Kantor and the city of Leipzig a director of music who approached the musical and intellectual calibre of Calvisius and Schein, Michael's two predecessors. During his 19-year tenure Leipzig once again became the leading musical city in central Germany following the sharp decline resulting from the Thirty Years War, the long Swedish occupation of the city and Michael's protracted illness. Knüpfer thus initiated a final period of musical excellence in Leipzig that culminated in the careers of his three successors, Schelle, Kuhnau and Bach. Although never a student at the university, he continued the study of philosophy and philology with members of the faculty and was thought of as a member of the academic community. He was praised for his command of classical sources concerning music, which he mastered from Meibom's editions published in 1652; he studied the treatises of, among others, Guido of Arezzo, Boethius, Berno of Reichenau and Kircher. In addition to his productive career as Kantor he is known to have travelled to Halle to direct his own music for the dedication of new organs, for the Marktkirche on 15 February 1664 and the Ulrichskirche on 16 November 1675; also he directed a programme of music for the centenary of the Halle Gymnasium on 17 August 1665. His circle of musical colleagues included many men important in 17th-century German music, such as Pezel, Rosenmüller and J.C. Horn, and he may well have known Schütz. That he was regarded as one of Leipzig's leading intellectual figures is indicated by the unusual honour of his being accorded an academic funeral at the university even though he had never been officially connected with it.

2. WORKS. Knüpfer's output consisted almost entirely of sacred works to Latin or German texts. Many are lost, and of those that survive few have been published in modern editions. Most are in the traditional style and form of the 17th-century vocal concerto, incorporating many of the characteristics of similar works by Schütz – though with no traces of the latter's uniquely personal style. Large choral forms are enhanced by an orchestra of substantial size (most commonly two violins, three violas, bassoon with continuo, clarinos, trombone and timpani), which supports the choral parts as well as interjecting all manner of colourful concerted effects. The choral writing may be massively chordal or intricately polyphonic, and there are a number of much simpler concerted passages for soloists supported only by the continuo. Knüpfer frequently based his German works on the text and melody of a chorale, and he was a master at deriving contrapuntal ideas from motivic fragmentation of the chorale. In many of these works the chorale verses are treated much as they are in slightly later German cantatas. Each verse is set separately. An opening choral movement, usually of large proportions and often repeated at the end of the work, is succeeded by movements designed for soloists. These are often ariosos or include fugal writing in which the chorale melody is passed back and forth between the voices in a duet or trio texture – a technique akin to that found in Bach's organ chorale preludes. Other movements display dramatic use of expressive recitative: there is a good example in Wer ist, der so von Edom kömmt (excerpt in Schering, 1926, p.162).

Knüpfer's music is primarily serious and profoundly devout, though he did publish a collection of the secular madrigals and canzonettas that he wrote for the university student with whom he worked in the collegium musicum at Leipzig. His contrapuntal mastery, the powerful drama of his thematic ideas, his brilliant instrumentation and the variety of his vocal scoring all contribute to the impression of him as a worthy predecessor of Bach, many of whose Leipzig church cantatas belong to a tradition first developed by Knüpfer.

WORKS

all MSS in D-Dl formerly in GMl

LATIN SACRED VOCAL

with instruments and continuo; all edited in Krause (1974)

Dies est laetitiae, 6vv, 2 vn, 3 va, 2 bn, 2 clarinos, 3 tpt, timp, 4 bombardi/3 piffari, D-Dl; Ecce quam bonum et quam iucundum (Ps cxxxiii), 5vv, ripieno 5vv, 2 vn, 3 va, bn, bc, Dl; Kyrie cum Gloria, 6vv, insts (? 2 vn, 5 va), Bsb; O benignissime Jesu, 3vv, 2 vn/cornettinos, va da gamba/bombard, Dl; Quare fremuerunt gentes (Ps ii), 6vv, ripieno 4vv, 2 vn, 3 va, 2 cornetts, 4 trbn, Dl; Super flumina Babylonis (Ps cxxxvii), 4vv, ripieno 4vv, 2 vn, 3 va, bn, 2 cornettinos, 3 trbn, Dl; Surgite populi: De resurrectione et ascensione Domini, 8vv (2 choirs), 2 vn, 3 va, bn, 2 cornettinos, cornett, 5 tpt, 3 trbn, timp, Dl; Veni Sancte Spiritus, 5vv, 2 vn, 2 va, bn, 4 clarinos, 2 cornettinos, 3 trbn, timp, org, Dl with continuo only

Justus ut palma florebit, 4vv, Bsb

Quemadmodum desiderat, B solo, 5vv, org, Dl, S-Uu

GERMAN SACRED VOCAL

Ach Herr, lass deine lieben Engelein, 5vv, 2 vn, 2 violettas, bn, 2 clarinos, tamburi, 2 fl, org, D-Bsb; Ach Herr, strafe mich nicht (Ps vi), 5vv, 2 vn, 2 violettas, bn, 2 clarinos, 2 fl, tamburi, org, Bsb, Dl, ed. in DDT, lviii–lix (1918/R); Ach mein herzliebes Jesulein, 5vv, ripieno 5vv, 2 vn, 2 va, 2 cornetts, 3 trbn, vle, bc, Dl; Ach, wenn kommet doch die Stunde, aria, A/T, 3 va, vle, bc, Dl; Alleluja, man singet mit Freuden, 5vv, 8 insts, Dl; Asche, die des Schöpfers Händ, 5vv, lost, extant in parody version by Z. Haenisch (Halle, 1665); Der Gerechte wird grünen wie ein Palmbaum, 5vv, 2 vn, violetta, 2 va, 2 cornetts, 3 trbn, vle, bc, Bsb, ?lost; Der Herr ist König, 8vv, vn, 5 va, 7 trbn, bc, Bsb; Der Herr ist mein Hirt, B, vn, 3 va, org, RUl; Der Herr schaffet deinen Gränzen Friede, 3vv, 2 vn, trbn, bc, Bsb, ?lost; Der Seegen des Herren machet reich, 5vv, 2 vn, 3 va, bc, Bsb, ?lost

Dies ist der Tag, den der Herr macht, 5vv, ripieno 5vv, 2 vn, 2 va, bn, 2 clarinos, 2 trbn, Bsb; Dies ist der Tag des Herrn, a 16, Dl; Die

Turteltaube lässt sich hören, 5vv, 2 vn, 2 va, bn, 4 clarinos, timp, bc, Dl; Erforsche mich Gott, funeral motet, 14 May 1673, 8vv (2 choirs), Bsb (Leipzig, 1674); Erheb dich, meine Seele, funeral motet, 1676, 4vv (Leipzig, 1676), pubd version WERhb; Erhöre, Jesulein, mein sehnlichs, S, 4 str, Dl; Erstanden ist der heilge Christ, 5vv, 2 vn, 4 va, bn, bombard, 2 clarinos, 2 tpt, tamburi, bc, Bsb, Dl (incl. ripieno 4vv, 3 trbn); Es haben mir die Hoffärtigen, 4vv, 2 vn, 3 va, bc, Bsb; Es ist eine Stimme eines Predigers in der Wüsten, 4vv, 2 vn, 3 va, bn, bc, Bsb; Es spricht der Unweisen Mund wohl, 8vv, 2 vn, 3 va, bn, 2 cornetts, 3 trbn, org, Bsb; ed. in DDT, lviii–lix (1918/R)

Gelobet sey Gott, 5vv, 4 str, Dl, ?lost; Gen Himmel zu dem Vater mein, 6vv, 2 vn, 2 clarinos, timp, 2 trbn, bn, bc, Dl; Gott sei mir gnädig nach deiner Güte (Ps li), 5vv, ripieno 5vv, 4 va, bn, vle, bc, Dl; Herr Christ, der einig Gottes Sohn, 5vv, 2 vn, 3 va, bn, 2 cornetts, 3 trbn, org, Bsb; Herr, hilf uns, wir verderben, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 va, bn, bc, Bsb; Herr, ich habe lieb die Stätte deines Hauses, 3vv, 2 vn, va, bc, Bsb; Herr Jesu Christ, wahr'r Mensch, 5vv, ripieno 4vv, 2 vn, bn, bc, S-Uu; Herr, lehre mich thun nach deinem, 5vv, ripieno 5vv, 2 vn, 3 va, bn, bc, D-Dl; Herr, lehre uns bedenken, 6vv, 2 vn, 3 va, bn, bc, Bsb; Herr, strafe mich nicht (Ps xxxix), 4vv, 3 va, vle/bn, bc, Dl; Herr, wer wird wohnen in deinen Hütten, 3vv, 2 cornetts, 3 va, bc, Bsb

Ich freue mich in dir, 5vv, 2 vn, 2 va, 3 trbn, 2 fl, vle, bc, Bsb; Ich habe dich zum Licht der Heiden gemacht, 5vv, ripieno 5vv, 2 vn, 3 va, bn, 2 cornettinos, 3 trbn, bc, Dl; Ich will singen von der Gnade (Ps lxxxix), 4vv, ripieno 4vv, 2 vn, 3 va, bn, bc, Dl; Jauchzet dem Herrn alle Welt (Ps c), 8vv (2 choirs), 2 vn, 3 va, bn, 2 clarinos, 2 cornettinos, tpt, 2 trbn, bc, Dl; Jesu, meine Freud und Wonne, 5vv, 5 insts, RUl; Jesus Christus, unser Heiland, 5vv, ripieno 5vv, 2 vn, 3 va, bn, bc, Dl; Komm du schöne Freudenkrone, 5vv, 2 vn, 3 violettas, violetta/bn, 2 clarinos, tamburi, 3 trbn, org, Dl; Komm heilger Geist, zeuch, 4vv, ripieno 4vv, 4 va, 4 trbn, bc, Bsb, ?lost; Lass dir gefallen, 2vv, 4 insts, RUl

Machet die Thore weit, 5vv, ripieno 5vv, 2 vn, 4 va, 2 cornetts/bombards, 3 trbn, bc, Dl, ed. in DDT, lviii–lix (1918/R); Mein Gott, betrübt ist meine Seele, funeral motet, 20 Oct 1667, a 6, org (?1667), pubd version GOl, Z; Mein Herz hält dir für dein Wort, aria, 3vv, 2 vn, bn, org, Bsb; Nun dancket alle Gott, 6vv, 2 vn, 3 va, bc, Bsb; Nun freut euch, lieben Christen gemein, 5vv, 2 vn, 2 va, bn, bc, Bsb; Sende dein Licht (Ps xliii), 4vv, ripieno 4vv, 2 vn, 2 va, bn, bc, Dl; Victoria, die Fürsten sind geschlagen, 5vv, 2 vn, 2 va, bn, 3 trbn, org, S-Uu (org tablature); Vom Himmel hoch, 3 choirs, 3 bombards, 2 clarinos, timp, harp, str, bc, D-Dl, ed. C. Theis (Kassel, 1992)

Was mein Gott will, 6vv, 2 vn, 3 va, bn, 2 cornetts, 3 trbn, Bsb; ed. in DDT, lviii–lix (1918/R); Was sind wir Menschen doch [Das verstimmte Orgel-Werck], funeral ode, 4vv, 22 May 1672 (Leipzig, ?1672), pubd version Z; Was werden wir essen, dialogue, 4vv, 4 insts, va, bc, Bsb, ?lost; Weichet von mir, ihr Boshaftigen, funeral motet, 16 June 1661, 6vv, org (Leipzig, ?1661), pubd version FBo, GOl, WERhb; Welt Vater du! O Adam deine Kinder, aria, 2 S, 3 va, vle, bc, Dl; Wenn mein Stündlein vorhanden ist, 4vv, ripieno 4vv, 2 vn, 2 va, vle, bc, Dl; Wer ist, der so von Edom kömmt, 5vv, 2 vn, 2 va, bn, 4 trbn, tamburi, bc, Bsb, Dl (incl. 2 clarinos, 2 tpt); Wer ist, der so von Edom kömmt, 3vv, 4 va, Bsb; Wir gehen nun, B, 3 insts, RUl; Wohl dem, der in der Gottesfurcht steht, 5vv, 2 vn, 3 va, bn, 2 cornetts, 3 trbn, bombard, bc, Bsb

O Traurigkeit, o Hertzeleid, Grab-Lied über die Begräbnis ... Jesu Christi (J. Rist), 4vv, in G. Vopelius, Gesangbuch (Leipzig, 1682)

SECULAR

Lustige Madrigalien, 2–4vv, und Canzonetten, 1–3vv, insts (Leipzig, 1663), CH-Zz; 4 ed. in Moser, ii, 17ff, extracts and list of titles in Moser, i, 19ff

LOST WORKS

Cited in inventories and in lists of works bought by Leipzig council, 1677, 1686; for titles see DDT, lviii–lix (1918/R)

Latin sacred: 6 masses, a 4–24; 6 Mag, a 6–24; Historia de missione Spiritus S[anctus]; 16 motets, a 3–28

German sacred: 41 motets, a 5–20; 7 motets, a 6–23, listed in Spezifikation derer 276 musicalischen Kirchen-Stücken, so ... Hr. Adamus Meissner... Organista bey der Kirchen zu St Ulrich [Halle] in seinem Testamente gedachter Kirchen ... vermachet 1718 (see Serauky); 2 motets written for dedication of Halle organ, 1665 (see Serauky); music written for dedication of Knauthain organ, 1674

Secular: Gluck zu! Dieweil der milde Sachse Euch wiederum eröffnet Wald und Bahn, madrigal, 4vv, 5 insts (Leipzig, 1657) [for Johann Georg II]; Leipziger Kehr-Michels, i–ii; 3 madrigals; Sonata sup. Guten Abend Garten Man

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MatthesonGEP; WaltherML

E. Hildemann: Geschichte der evangelischen Kirchengemeinde Asch (Asch, 1899)

B.F. Richter: 'Zwei Funeralprogramme auf die Thomaskantoren Sebastian Knüpfer und Joh. Schelle', MMg, xxxiii (1901), 205–13

A. Schering: 'Über die Kirchenkantaten vorbachischer Thomaskantoren', BJb 1912, 86–123

A. Schering: Introduction to Ausgewählte kirchen Kantaten, DDT, lviii–lix (1918/R)

A. Schering: Musikgeschichte Leipzigs, ii: Von 1650 bis 1723 (Leipzig, 1926/R)

H.J. Moser: Corydon, das ist Geschichte des mehrstimmigen Generalbassliedes und des Quodlibets im deutschen Barock (Brunswick, 1933/R)

W. Serauky: Musikgeschichte der Stadt Halle, ii/1 (Halle and Berlin, 1939/R)

O. Landmann: Das Werk Sebastian Knüpfers im Überblick (diss., U. of Leipzig, 1960)

W. Braun: 'Die alten Musikbibliotheken der Stadt Freyburg (Unstrut)', Mf, xv (1962), 123–45

F. Krummacher: 'Zur Sammlung Jacobi der ehemaligen Fürstenschule Grimma', Mf, xvi (1963), 324–47

D.W. Krause: The Latin Choral Music of Sebastian Knüpfer with a Practical Edition of the Extant Works (diss., U. of Iowa, 1974)

C. Theis: 'Von Himmel hoch, da komm ich her: ein Weihnachtskonzert von Sebastian Knüpfer', Musik und Kirche, lxii (1992), 264–9

D.R. Melamed: J.S. Bach and the German Motet (Cambridge, 1995), 189–97

GEORGE J. BUELOW

Knushevitsky, Svyatoslav Nikolayevich (b Petrovsk, 6 Jan 1908; d Moscow, 19 Feb 1963). Russian cellist. He studied at the Moscow Conservatory with Kozolupov and was soloist and principal of the Bol'shoy Theatre Orchestra from 1929 to 1943. After winning first prize in the first All-Union Musicians' Competition at Moscow in 1933, he began a successful career as a soloist and chamber player. With David Oistrakh and Lev Oborin in 1940 he formed a trio which later became internationally famous; Knushevitsky made his British début with them in 1958. They made distinguished records of trios by Schubert and Beethoven, and the latter's Triple Concerto. When the original manuscript of Tchaikovsky's Variations on a Rococo Theme was published in 1956, following the discovery that Fitzenhagen had inked over the score for the 1878 edition, it was Knushevitsky who made the first recording of the authentic version. This discovery was made by X-ray experiments carried out by the cellist Victor Kubatsky. Knushevitsky was a master of songlike phrasing as well as an outstanding virtuoso. His several tours abroad included Austria, Germany and the Casals Festival at Puerto Rico, and he was the dedicatee of various works, including concertos by Glière, Khachaturian, Myaskovsky and Vasilenko. A teacher at the Moscow Conservatory from 1942 until his death, he was head of the cello and double bass department there from 1954 to 1959. He received a USSR State Prize in 1950 and was made Honoured Art Worker of the RSFSR in 1955.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CampbellGC

T. Gaydamovich: 'Svyatoslav Knushevitskiy', SovM (1964), no.7, p.42

L. Yevgrafov: 'Pevets violoncheli' [Poet of the cello], SovM (1968), no.6, pp.72–4

MARGARET CAMPBELL/I.M. YAMPOL'SKY

Knussen, (Stuart) Oliver (b Glasgow, 12 June 1952). English composer and conductor. Born into a musical family (his father was principal double bass with the LSO) he started composing at the age of six. He studied composition with Lambert between 1963 and 1969, and then with Schuller at Tanglewood and in Boston.

Knussen first came to prominence when he conducted the première of his First Symphony at the age of 15. In both this work and the equally precocious Concerto for Orchestra (1968–70) he quickly and fluently absorbed the influences of Britten, Berg and mid-century (especially American) symphonists, displaying an unusual flair for both pacing and orchestration. His personal voice emerged fully with the Second Symphony (1970–71), a four-movement orchestral song cycle for voice and chamber orchestra setting Trakl and Plath. The haunted Expressionism of the poems is matched by a characteristically rich harmonic idiom which absorbs everything from complex chromaticism to consonant triadic formations within a serially derived scheme. The orchestral palette is clear and luminous within even the most densely layered polyrhythmic textures, a feature which has remained typical of Knussen's music. The Third Symphony (1973–9), the most elaborate score of this period, replaces conventional symphonic structures with a stark bipartite form in which elements from the volatile, discontinuous first movement return transfigured in the second movement's 13-chord passacaglia. The orchestration is once again extremely detailed and carefully balanced, playing off numerous contrasted ensembles against each other.

The technical bases of Knussen's style were worked out gradually through the 1970s both in the larger works and in a sequence of chamber pieces, each focussing upon a particular technical approach. The Concerto for Orchestra had already displayed a secure handling of conventional 12-note technique, which Knussen expanded in the Second Symphony, controlling the overall rate of intervallic unfolding so that subgroups of pitches within the row are more influential on each event than the row itself. In the Third Symphony, by contrast, much of the melodic and harmonic material is derived from two three-note cells which serve to unify the most contrasted musics. Since then, Knussen has continued occasionally to employ 12-note structures as source material, each time to different ends. Trumpets (1975), which develops the skirling clarinet fanfares from the Third Symphony's first movement, bases its swiftly evolving polyphony on a row divided into four three-note groups, each individually rotated. Coursing (1979) also uses a row structure to generate its constantly unfolding single melodic line, but here the row is heard evolving through a transposition scheme derived from the row itself. In another offshoot from the Third Symphony, Ophelia Dances (1975), two of the 'sphinxes' from Schumann's Carnaval are subjected to procedures of transposed inversion and rotation (in the manner of late Stravinsky) to form contrasting modal and harmonic areas. In all of these works a leaning towards octatonic pitch formations can be discerned, a tendency which culminated in the two fantasy operas Where the Wild Things Are (1979–83) and Higglety Pigglety Pop! (1984–5, rev. 1999). Here the predominant use of all-interval tetrachords linked into octatonic chains gives rise to a harmonic palette which allows Knussen to incorporate brief allusions to similarly construed passages from Musorgsky or Debussy without any sense of stylistic incongruity.

In all Knussen's mature work, intervallic subtleties and their harmonic implications have remained fundamental. He has never employed the durational extensions of serial schemata common in the 1950s and 60s, but his fluid rhythmic style owes much to the example of the polyrhythmic and metrical innovations of Carter's work of the same period. Thus many of the polyphonies between competing ensembles of the Symphony no.3 are influenced by simple polyrhythmic ratios which may also be found in the detailed rhythmical working, tempo relationships, and even to some degree the proportions between the larger parts of the work, though such processes are often modified according to the dramatic needs of the moment. Contrasting sections are almost always reached in Knussen's music by the device of tempo modulation – relating speeds by precise metrical cross-relationships – also found in Carter's work. This is surely a practical as much as a theoretical consideration, since such cross-relationships ensure that the tempo changes are precisely geared and clearly evident to the performers.

Oliver Knussen, 1987

Knussen's output in the 1980s was dominated by the two fantasy operas Where the Wild Things Are and Higglety Pigglety Pop!. Despite their origins in books for children by the American author Maurice Sendak, with whom Knussen collaborated on the librettos, these operas are in no sense 'music for children': they are as elaborate and complex as anything Knussen has written. Knussen chose to draw upon the music he himself most loved as a child – Musorgsky, Debussy, Ravel, early Stravinsky, Mahler, Berg, Britten and early Henze – as a guide in transferring Sendak's vividly coloured illustrations to the stage. However, these pieces are not collages: overt allusions are few and are carefully integrated; and the tightly controlled harmonic schemes centred around related tetrachords ensure a clearly audible stylistic consistency. Both are also broadly number operas, with discrete and musically self-sufficient segments often unfolding without transitions. Consequently sections of each have been extracted to create independent concert works: Songs and a Sea Interlude and The Wild Rumpus from Wild Things, and The Way to Castle Yonder, a 'potpourri' of interludes from Higglety. A particular facet of the orchestration in both operas is the sonorous depth and variety of colour Knussen obtains from an orchestra of barely 50 players, which excludes trumpets altogether.

A large number of works composed since these operas have displayed a compression of utterance which belies their technical virtuosity and intensity of expression. Knussen's compositional technique has been honed in such later works to concentrate largely upon pitch fields derived from transposed inversion and rotation procedures. Both are techniques which he had employed sporadically since the mid-1970s, but the concentration upon them has resulted in a considerable refinement of harmonic language. The source sets are usually cells of far fewer than 12 notes, giving each piece its own intervallic and modal identity and allowing for the strategic manipulation of focal pitches within each movement (while not producing results that are in any sense conventionally tonal).

A case in point is the orchestral Flourish with Fireworks (1989, rev. 1993), in which a single five-note cell is subjected to instant variation at many speeds and on many levels simultaneously. Each of the five pitches in the source set is used as a local 'tonic' for at least one section of the music, and the entire structure is superimposed upon fleeting allusions to Stravinsky's early work Fireworks, on which the temporal structure of Knussen's piece is modelled. Similar procedures are used with larger cellular groups in the Variations for piano (1989), the Whitman Settings (1991) and Songs without Voices (1991–2), but in each case the pitch content of the cell is still carefully restricted. For example, the generative collection of the Whitman Settings is a sequence of eight notes, but comprising only six different pitches: A, B, C, C♯, D♯, E. This collection also has many diatonic subsets, which provide supple, easily recognizable melodic contours well suited to the vocal writing as well as rich harmonic implications which are thoroughly exploited by the songs.

Another striking trait of Knussen's recent music has been its dexterity in handling very different types of material – often overtly diatonic – with similar technical virtuosity and equally personal results. The orchestral accompaniment to his Horn Concerto (1994) is freely composed around a highly original interpretation of the key of D minor, with strong octatonic colouring leaning persistently towards E♭ rather than a conventional dominant; meanwhile the horn spins through melodies derived from a generative six-note cell in purely linear fashion. The first of the Two Organa (1994), while strictly composed using a Perotinus-style cantus firmus technique, uses only the white notes of the keyboard throughout (having been composed originally for a musical box); the second movement employs exactly the same techniques of augmentation, decoration and pedal-point but now applied to highly chromatic pitch material. Nevertheless, the two are instantly recognizable as the product of the same fastidious attention to details and the same aural imagination. Indeed, despite the emphasis placed here on compositional technique, Knussen's music has always been noted for its immediate and vivid impact in performance, usually giving the impression of great spontaneity, ebullience and wit: the technique, however elaborate, is never an end in itself.

In parallel with his compositional development, Knussen has emerged as one of the leading conductors of his generation. After his début appearances between 1968 and 1970, he conducted relatively little until 1981 when he gave his first performances with the London Sinfonietta, with whom he has since enjoyed a close association and whose music director he became in 1998. In the 1990s he was appointed chief guest conductor of the Residentie-Orkest, The Hague, and conducted many of the leading American orchestras.

Knussen was an artistic director of the Aldeburgh Festival from 1983 to 1998, and in charge of contemporary music activities at the Tanglewood Music Center from 1986 to 1993. His performances of contemporary music are remarkably lucid, even in the most complex repertory. He has had an especially fruitful association with the music of Carter, producing definitive recordings of such orchestral works as the Concerto for Orchestra and the large-scale Symphonia, the last part of which is dedicated to him. He has also made fine recordings of Stravinsky (notably such neglected later works as The Flood and Variations), Goehr, Henze and Takemitsu. In 1995 he accepted an exclusive recording contract with Deutsche Grammophon, and his recordings, a number of which he has produced himself, have won prizes internationally. In 1994 he was elected to honorary membership of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, and was made a CBE.

WORKS

Ops: Where the Wild Things Are (fantasy op, 1, M. Sendak and Knussen), op.20, 1979–83, inc. staging, Brussels, Monnaie, 28 Nov 1980, complete, London, National, 9 Jan 1984; Higglety Pigglety Pop! (fantasy op, 1, Sendak and Knussen), op.21, 1984–5, inc. staging, Glyndebourne, 13 Oct 1984, complete, Glyndebourne, 5 Aug 1985, rev. 1999

Orch: Sym. no.1, op.1, 1966–7, withdrawn; Conc. for Orch, op.5, 1968–70, withdrawn; Tributum, 1969, withdrawn; Music for a Puppet Court, op.11, puzzle pieces, 2 chbr orch, 1972–83 [after J.

Lloyd]; Choral, op.8, wind orch, 1970–72; Sym. no.3, op.18, 1973–9; Scriabin Settings, chbr orch, 1978; Coursing, op.17, chbr orch, 1979; Fanfares for Tanglewood, 13 brass, 3 perc, 1986; The Wild Rumpus, op.20b, 1983 [from op Where the Wild Things Are]; Flourish with Fireworks, op.22, 1988, rev. 1993; The Way to Castle Yonder, op.21a, 1988–90 [from op Higglety Pigglety Pop!]; Hn Conc., op.28, 1994; 2 Organa, op.27, chbr orch, 1994 [no.1 orig. for music box as Notre Dame des jouets]

Vocal: Sym. no.2 (G. Trakl, S. Plath), op.7, S, chbr orch, 1970–71; Hums and Songs of Winnie-the-Pooh (after A.A. Milne), op.6, S, chbr ens, 1970–83; Rosary Songs (Trakl), op.9, S, cl, va, pf, 1972; Océan de terre (G. Apollinaire), op.10, S, fl, cl, vn, vc, db, perc, cel, pf, 1972–3, rev. 1976; Trumpets (Trakl), op.12, S, 3 cl, 1975; Frammenti da 'Chiara', op.19a, 24 female vv, 1975–86; Songs and a Sea Interlude (Sendak), op.20a, S, orch, 1979–81 [from op Where the Wild Things Are]; 4 Late Poems and an Epigram of Rainer Maria Rilke, op.23, S, 1988; Whitman Settings, op.25, S, pf, 1991, arr. S, orch, op.25a, 1992

Chbr: Processionals, op.2, wind qnt, str qt, 1968–78; Masks, op.3, fl, glass chimes ad lib, 1969; Fire-Capriccio, op.4, fl, str trio, 1969, withdrawn; 3 Little Fantasies, op.6a, wind qnt, 1970, rev. 1976; Turba, db, 1971; Ophelia Dances, bk 1, op.13, fl, eng hn, cl, hn, cel, str trio, pf, 1975; Autumnal (Triptych, pt 1), op.14, vn, pf, 1976–7; Cantata (Triptych, pt 3), op.15, ob, str trio, 1977; Sonya's Lullaby (Triptych, pt 2), op.16, pf, 1977–8; Variations, op.24, pf, 1989; Elegiac Arabesques, op.26a, eng hn, cl, 1991; Songs without Voices, op.26, fl, eng hn, cl, hn, vn, va, vc, pf, 1991–2; ... upon one note, cl, vn, vc, pf, 1995; Prayer Bell Sketch, op.29, pf, 1997

Principal publisher: Faber

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Northcott: 'Oliver Knussen', MT, cxx (1979), 729–32
P. Griffiths: 'Oliver Knussen', New Sounds, New Personalities (London, 1985), 54–64
J. Fisk: 'Oliver Knussen', Composers on Music (Boston, 1987), 474–9
J. Anderson: 'The Later Music of Oliver Knussen', MT, cxxxiii (1992), 393–4
J. Anderson: 'A la mode', MT, cxxxvi (1995), 291–3 [on Horn Concerto and Two Organa]

JULIAN ANDERSON

Knyff [Knyf] (*fl c*1425–50). Composer, presumably English. A Credo for three voices that appears in an 'English' fascicle of I-AO (second layer, no.96) is attributed to him. De Van did not include his name in his catalogue of I-AO: it has been partly cut away by the binder, but is clear enough in the index. Nothing is known of his life, unless (an extremely remote possibility) he is to be identified with the theorist RICHARD CUTELL, who was connected with St Paul's Cathedral, London, in 1394–5: in medieval Latin, cutellus means 'knife'.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

HarrisonMMB
M.F. Bukofzer: Geschichte des englischen Diskants und des Fauxbourdons nach den theoretischen Quellen (Strasbourg, 1936/R), 141ff
B.L. Trowell: Music under the Later Plantagenets (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1960), i, 47, 50ff; ii, 184

BRIAN TROWELL

Knyght, Thomas (*fl c*1525–50). English church musician and composer. Throughout his known career he was a lay vicar of Salisbury Cathedral, where he became instructor of the choristers some time between 1526 and 1529, and also organist in, or a little before, 1538 (his deed of appointment to both offices is dated 30 April 1538). He undertook 'to kepe laudablie the orgeyns accordinge to good Musycke and armony', and to teach the choristers 'playnsonge pryckesonge Faburdon and descante'. He must be distinguished from the Thomas Knyght who was a prebendary of Salisbury. Owing to the imperfect state of the cathedral's archives, the musician cannot be traced there later than 1543. No successor is known until October 1550; compositions by Knyght were still being received at nearby Winchester College up to 1545.

Compositions attributable to him survive for both the Latin and English rites. A five-part mass Libera nos survives (inc., GB-Cu Peterhouse 471–4); three four-part settings (of the Alleluia, Obtine sacris, the antiphon Christus resurgens ex mortuis and the Marian antiphon Sancta Maria virgo intercede) in GB-Lbl Add.17802–5 ascribed to 'Mr Knyght' are probably also by him. The best of his Latin church music shows Knyght to have been a competent and inventive composer. A vernacular Magnificat and Nunc dimittis attributed to 'Knyght' were included in John Day's Mornyng and Evening Prayer of 1565. These too may be his, for they also appear, anonymously, in the Wanley Partbooks (GB-Ob Mus.Sch.E.420–22), which date from *c*1550, close to the period of Knyght's known activity.

Thomas Knyght must also be distinguished from Robert Knyght, four parts of whose five-part motet Propterea maestum factum est cor nobis are in GB-Cp 485, 487–9. Its composer was a chorister of St Paul's Cathedral, London, in 1574; the motet may be dated about 1590. A second motet of his, mentioned in earlier editions of Grove, does not exist, but was the result of confusing Robert Knyght with Robert White.

ROGER BOWERS

Knyvett, Charles (b ?London, 22 Feb 1752; d London, 19 Jan 1822). English singer. He was a chorister at Westminster Abbey and attended Westminster School. During the 1770s he became well known as an alto singer. He was a member of the Society of Musicians from 4 January 1778 and a Gentleman of the Chapel Royal from 6 November 1786. He was also organist of the Chapel Royal from 1796 until his death, and composer from 1802 to 1808. He was for many years secretary of the Noblemen's and Gentlemen's Catch Club, and was a frequent visitor to the Madrigal Society. He was one of the chief singers at the Handel Commemoration of 1784 and gave concerts until shortly before his death. He was regarded as one of the finest singers of his day, particularly in the glee and the catch. Parke called him 'perhaps the best catch singer in England, evincing in them all the genuine comedy of an Edwin'. He was also a successful composer of glees.

Knyvett embarked on various financial speculations. In 1789, with Samuel Harrison, he directed a series of oratorio performances at Covent Garden in Lent, undercutting the established Drury Lane Oratorios. In 1791 they opened the Vocal Concerts, which continued sporadically until Knyvett's death. At first they consisted entirely of vocal music, but on revival in 1801 they reverted to the more usual 'Grand Miscellaneous Selection'. Their programmes were conservative, consisting largely of excerpts from Handel's operas and oratorios, but always including some glees, in which Knyvett was a star performer. In 1800 he compiled A Collection of Favorite Glees, Catches and Rounds. In 1815 he published Six Airs Harmonized for 3 and 4 Voices. He purchased an estate at Sonning, Berkshire, which was inherited by his son Charles (1773–1852), an organist and composer.

For bibliography see KNYVETT, WILLIAM.

NICHOLAS TEMPERLEY

Knyvett, William (b London, 21 April 1779; d Ryde, Isle of Wight, 17 Nov 1856). English singer and composer, son of CHARLES KNYVETT. He was taught by his father and Samuel Webbe. He began singing in the Concert of Ancient Music in 1788 as a treble, and in 1795 as an alto, in which range he sang for the rest of his life. He became a Gentleman of the Chapel Royal in 1797, and soon afterwards a lay clerk at Westminster Abbey. He succeeded his father as composer to the Chapel Royal in 1808. For more than 40 years he sang at the principal concerts in London and the provinces, often as a member of a fashionable vocal trio with Harrison and Bartleman. Like his father he specialized in glee singing. He directed the Concert of Ancient Music from 1832 to 1840, the Birmingham Festival from 1834 to 1843, and the Yorkshire Grand Musical Festival of 1835. It was maintained that 'with the exception of Sir George Smart, he was the last of the musical leaders who inherited the Handel traditions as to the method of conducting an oratorio'. His second wife, Deborah Travis (*c*1795–1876), was a well-known singer.

He assisted his father in managing the Vocal Concerts, but eventually 'impoverished himself by unsuccessful speculations'. He is said to have written 46 glees, many of which were published; one, When the fair rose, was awarded the Prince of Wales's Prize in 1800. He also composed songs with piano accompaniment, and some anthems, including one commissioned for the coronation of George IV in 1820 (The King shall rejoice) and another for Queen Victoria's coronation in 1837. Knyvett's compositions are smooth and competent, but show no spark of originality.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Grove1–5 ('Vocal Concerts', C. Mackeson)
W.T. Parke: Musical Memoirs (London, 1830), i, 120; ii, 77, 236
D. Baptie: Sketches of the English Glee Composers (London, 1896)
B. Matthews: The Royal Society of Musicians (London, 1985)
W. Shaw: The Succession of Organists of the Chapel Royal and the Cathedrals of England and Wales from c.1538 (Oxford, 1991)
M. Argent, ed.: Recollections of R.J.S. Stevens (London, 1992)

NICHOLAS TEMPERLEY

Kobayashi, Yoshitake (b Muroran, 10 June 1942). Japanese musicologist. After graduating from the University of Tokyo (1966), he studied in Vienna with Heinrich Husmann and in Göttingen with Alfred Dürr. He took the doctorate from the University of Göttingen in 1973 with a dissertation on Franz Hauser's Bach manuscript collection. A specialist on J.S. Bach, he was a research worker at the Bach Institute (1974–91) and participated in the editing of the Neue Bach-Ausgabe. Returning to Japan in 1991, he became a professor at Dōshisha Women's University, Kyoto, and, in 1999, at Seijō University, Tokyo. He was visiting professor at Dortmund University in 1998.

WRITINGS

Franz Hauser und seine Bach-Handschriftensammlung (diss., U. of Göttingen, 1973; Göttingen, 1973)
'Neuerkenntnisse zu einigen Bach-Quellen an Handschriftkundlicher Untersuchungen', BJb 1978, 43–60
'Der Gehrener Kantor Johann Christoph Bach (1673–1727) und seine Sammelbände mit Musik für Tasteninstrumente', Bachiana et alia musicologica: Festschrift Alfred Dürr, ed. W. Rehm (Kassel, 1983), 168–77
Bahha fukkatsu [The Bach revival] (Tokyo, 1985, 2/1997)
'Die Universitalität in Bachs h-moll-Messe: ein Beitrag zum Bach-Bild der letzten Lebensjahre', Musik und Kirche, lxiii/1 (1987), 9–24
'Diplomatische Mittel der Echtheitskritik', Opera incerta: Echtheitsfragen als Problem musikwissenschaftlicher Gesamtausgaben: Mainz 1988, 30–38
'Zur Chronologie der Spätwerke Johann Sebastian Bachs: Kompositions- und Aufführungstätigkeit von 1736 bis 1750', BJb 1988, 7–72
Die Notenhandschrift Johann Sebastian Bachs: Dokumentation ihrer Entwicklung (Kassel, 1989)
'Diplomatische Überlegungen zur Chronologie der Weimarer Vokalwerke J.S. Bachs', Das Frühwerk Johann Sebastian Bachs: Rostock 1990, 290–310
'Some Methodological Reflections on the Dating of Johann Sebastian Bach's Early Works', Tradition and its Future in Music: Osaka 1990, 109–16
'Frühe Bach-Quellen in altösterreichischen Raum', Johann Sebastian Bach: Beiträge zur Wirkungsgeschichte, ed. I. Fuchs and S. Antonicek (Vienna, 1992), 35–46
Bahha: densho no nazo wo ou [Bach: pursuing riddles of his legend] (Tokyo, 1995)
'Breitkopf Attributions and Research on the Bach Family', 'On the Identification of Breitkopf's Manuscripts', Bach Perspectives, ii (1996), 53–63, 107–21
'Bahha ni okeru chōsei no bigaku' [The aesthetics of tonality in Bach's works], Ongaku no uchū (Tokyo, 1998), 159–65

MASAKATA KANAZAWA

Kobbé, Gustav (b New York, 4 March 1857; d Babylon, NY, 27 July 1918). American writer on music. After studies in Wiesbaden and New York he attended Columbia University, graduating from the School of Arts in 1877 and the School of Law in 1879. From 1879 to 1880 he was editor of the Musical Review. Beginning in 1880 he was music critic for a series of New York papers, The Sun, The World, the Mail and Express, and The Herald; he was music and art critic for The Herald at the time of his death. In 1883 Kobbé was sent to Bayreuth by The World to report on the first performance of Parsifal.

A prolific writer, he is chiefly known for his Complete Opera Book (1919), a collection of opera plots and analyses, which has become a standard work of reference; he also published books on Wagner and other composers, opera singers, and works on the pianola and the Aeolian pipe organ.

WRITINGS

Wagner's Life and Works (New York, 1890, 2/1896)
Opera Singers (New York, 1901, 6/1913)
ed.: Wagner and his Isolde (New York, 1905)
Famous American Songs (New York, 1906)
How to Appreciate Music (New York, 1906, 3/1912)
Kobbé's Complete Opera Book (New York, 1919; ed. and rev. 9/1976 by the Earl of Harewood as The New Kobbé's Complete Opera Book, 11/1997 as The New Kobbé's Opera Book)
Kobbé's Illustrated Opera Book, ed. Earl of Harewood (London, 1989, enlarged 2/1991)

PAULA MORGAN

Kōbe. City in Japan, to the west of OSAKA.

Kobekin, Vladimir Aleksandrovich (b Beryozniki, Perm′ province, 22 July 1947). Russian composer. He graduated from Leningrad Conservatory (where he attended the class of Sergey Slonimsky) in 1971 after which he taught composition at the Conservatory of the Urals (1971–80). He has served as chairman of the Ural branch of the Composers' Union of Russia (1992–5) and since 1995 he has been a senior lecturer in the composition department at the Conservatory of the Urals. In 1987 he received the Honoured Representative of the Arts award, and in the same year he was made a laureate of the USSR State Prize. Although Kobekin has written in many genres, music for the theatre is his particular interest and it is in this sphere that his most innovative artistic ideas have been realized. His operas are varied in content, genre and in the dramatic principles that they follow; he has also produced two of his operas, realizing to the fullest extent his ideas of total theatre and continuing his search for another reality.

The triptych Prorok ('The Prophet', 1983) brings together Pushkin's Pir vo vremya chumï ('Feast During the Time of Plague') and Kamennïy gost' ('The Stone Guest') as well as incorporating material from Kobekin's oratorio Gibel' poėta ('The Death of a Poet'); musically speaking, Catholic chant (and especially echoes of the Dies irae) is synthesized with folk elements such as gigues as well as Spanish dance and guitar music. On this polystylistic basis he creates a complex image of poet, prophet and mankind. Pushkin's works also served as the starting points for the cantata K druz'yam ('To My Friends') and the symphonic poem Sed'moye sentyabrya: besï ('The Seventh of September: Demons'). Kobekin seeks to interact with the audience by means of allusion, both philosophical and magical, and while a logical sequence of events is not always present, his works manage to communicate and rise above the commonplace by means of stage metaphor, the use of masked characters and the opposition of traditionalism and radicalism. All this accounts for his desire to fuse the disparate traditions of ancient ritual, Greek tragedy, carnival festivity, the liturgy, the Florentine camerata, Shakespearean drama and postmodern pluralistic theatre. He has developed a manner of unfolding melody – known as melopeya or melodic epic – which determines overall form; he runs a course at the Conservatory of the Urals devoted to this technique and the theories of 'super-polyphony' he associates with it. Kobekin has worked with many theatres and with many of the most eminent figures in Russian opera; he has participated in festivals across Russia and in those in Kassel, Loccum and Ludwigsberg.

WORKS
(selective list)

OPERAS

Dnevnik sumasshedshego [The Diary of a Madman] (mono-op, 1, Kobekin, after Lu Hsün), 1978, Moscow, Chamber Music Theatre, 3 May 1980
Lebedinaya pesnya [Swan Song] (chbr op, 1, Kobekin, after A.P. Chekhov), 1978, Moscow, Chamber Music Theatre, 12 April 1980
Sapozhki [Little Boots] (chbr op, 1, Kobekin, after V. Shukshin), 1981, Sverdlovsk TV, 1982
Pugachyov (musical tragedy, 2, Kobekin, after S. Yesenin), 1982, Leningrad, Maliy, Dec 1983
Prorok [The Prophet] (triptych, Kobekin, after A.S. Pushkin), 1983, Sverdlovsk, Lunacharsky Theatre, 1984
Igra pro Maksa-Yemel'yana, Alyonu i Ivana [A Game about Maximilian, Eleanor and Ivan] (roundelay op, 2, Kobekin, after S. Kirsanov), 1984, Moscow, Chamber Music Theatre, 19 Dec 1989
Schastliviy prints [The Happy Prince] (chbr op, 1, A. Parin, after O. Wilde), Sverdlovsk, Lunacharsky Theatre, *c*1991
Shut i korol' [The Jester and the King] (opera-farce, 1, Kobekin, after M. de Ghelderode: Escurial), Sverdlovsk, Lunacharsky Theatre, 1991
Koldovskaya skazka [A Tale of Witchcraft] (2, Kobekin), Sverdlovsk, Lunacharsky Theatre, 1992
N.F.B. (Parin, after F.M. Dostoyevsky: Idiot), Loccum, 1995
Molodoy David [The Young David] (2, Parin), concert perf., Loccum, 1997, staged, Novosibirsk Theatre of Opera and Ballet, 1997
Moisey [Moses] (mono-op, 1, Parin), Gelikon Theatre, Moscow, 1999

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Simfoniya s tremya solistami [Sym. with Three Soloists], 1976; Blagovest [Church Bells], fantasy, 2 pf, orch, 1985; Variatsii na temu F. Garsia Lorki [Variations on a Theme of García Lorca], pf, orch, 1985; Ob Conc., 1986; Golgofa [Golgotha], sym., str, 2 pf, timp, 1991; Conc., vc, str orch, 1997; Fantaziya, pf, orch, 1999; Sed'moye sentyabrya: besï [The Seventh of September: Demons], sym. poem after Pushkin, 1999
Chbr: Dvoynïye variatsii [Double Variations], vn, suspended cymbal, 1974; Velle! Velle! ili yazïk bogov i ptits [Velle! Velle! or the language of the Gods and the Birds], spkr, pf 4 hands (V. Khlebnikov), 1993; Prazdnik dlya dvoikh [A Festival for Two], bayan, perc, 1994, arr. pf 4 hands, 1994; Yekaterinburgskiye ėlegii [Yekaterinburg Elegies], bk no.1, fl, pf, 1994; Damaskin' [Damascus], sonata, vc, pf, 1995; Osenniye akvareli [Autumn Watercolours], fantasy, bn, pf, 1998
Solo inst: 15 kazakhskikh pesen [15 Cossack Songs], pf, 1976; Derevenskaya tetrad' [A Village Exercise Book], 5 pieces, pf, 1980; Variatsii na temu Dargomïzhskogo [Variations on a theme of Dargomïzhsky], pf, 1982; 12 p'yes dlya detey [12 Pieces for Children], pf, 1983; Iz pervïkh letopisey [From the First Chronicles], 9 pieces, pf, 1989; Sonata, vn, pf, 1989; Prazdnik [Festival], sonata, pf, 1990; Feofan Grek [Theofanes the Greek], sonata, pf, 1991; 3 sonatï Novogo zaveta [3 Sonatas of the New Testament], 1993; Fortepiannïy al'bom dlya detey [Album of Piano Pieces for Children], 1995; V magicheskom kruge [In a Magic Circle], vc, 1995; V krasnom i sinem [In Red and Blue], capriccio, pf, 1996; Pri svete plameni [By the Light of the Flame], concert fantasy, pf, 1998; Strizhi [Martins], concert fantasy, pf, 1998

VOCAL

Yekaterinburgskiye ėlegii [Yekaterinburg Elegies] (A. Fet), bk no.2, 2 vv, fl, bn, pf, 1995; Pesn' pesney [The Song of Songs], 2 S, Ct, inst ens, 1996; Yekaterinburg (cant. A. Zastïrets), solo vv, spkr, chorus, boys' chorus, orch, 1998; Yekaterinburgskiye ėlegii [Yekaterinburg Elegies] (Zastïrets), bk no.3, chorus, 1998; K druz'yam [To My Friends] (cant.), T, Bar, chorus, orch, 1999; Pantarey: sem'izrecheniy Geraklita Éfesskogo [Pantarey: the Seven Dictums of Heracles of Ephesus], chorus

WRITINGS

'Koye-chto ob opere' [Something about opera], SovM (1990), no.7, pp.28–31
'Melodizm – razvitiye – suggestiya: besedï s kompozitorom' [Melodism – development – allusion: conversations with the composer], MAk (1993), no.1, pp.22–5
'N.F.B. – Idiot', OW, xxxvi/10 (1995), 42 only
'Zagadka Orfeya' [The mystery of Orpheus], MAk (1995), no.3, pp.11–13

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Vil'ner: 'Mnogoobeshchayushcheye nachalo' [A highly promising start], SovM (1977), no.3, pp.39–40
M. Galushko: 'Ot partiturï k postanovke' [From the score to the staging], SovM (1984), no.12, pp.62–8
S. Korobkov: 'Poėt pered litsom sud'bï' [The poet facing fate], Teatr (1986), no.10, pp.75–80
A. Bayeva: 'Opernïy triptikh: "Prorok" V. Kobekina' [An operatic triptych: Kobekin's 'The Prophet'], Muzïka Rossii, viii (1989), 111–35
A. Vlasov: 'Skazaniye pro . . .' [A tale about . . .], SovM (1990), no.5, pp.70–73

ALLA VLADIMIROVNA GRIGOR'YEVA

Kobelius, Johann Augustin (b Waehlitz, nr Merseburg, 22 Feb 1674; d Weissenfels, 17 Aug 1731). German composer. His career was centred on his native Saxony, where he was born the son of a pastor. His mother was the daughter of Nicolaus Brause, a Weissenfels organist who became his first music teacher. Later Kobelius studied the organ with Christian Schieferdecker, Kantor and organist in Weissenfels, and, according to Gerber, composition with Johann Philipp Krieger, court Kapellmeister at Weissenfels. Gerber also stated that Kobelius travelled extensively as a student, and visited Venice. In 1702 the reigning Duke of Saxe-Weissenfels secured Kobelius's appointment as organist at St Jacobi in Sangerhausen, overruling the town's choice of J.S. Bach. In 1703 Kobelius was appointed director of the town's chori musici and also began to expand his various musical duties at the Weissenfels court. In 1713 he became the administer and director of the kapelle for the newly constructed Holy Trinity chapel in Sangershausen. In 1725 he was named Landrentmeister (land steward) for the court of Saxe-Weissenfels.

Kobelius was the last important composer to write operas during the brief but brilliant period of music at the Weissenfels court. Among his distinguished predecessors had been Keiser, Heinichen and, especially, Krieger. Kobelius was active as a composer in Weissenfels as early as 1712, but from 1715 to 1729 he served as the only regular composer of operas for performances in the royal palace, writing one score or more each year. Regrettably, all this music seems to be lost and few of the librettists have been identified.

WORKS

OPERAS

first performed in Weissenfels unless otherwise stated

Der unschuldig verdammte Heinrich, Fürst von Wallis, 1715
Der Irrgarten der Liebe, oder Livia und Cleander, 23 Feb 1716
Die auch im Unglück glückliche Liebe der Isabelle und Rodrigo, 1717
Die gerettete Unschuld, oder Ali und Sefira, 1717
Der durchlauchtiger Bauer und Zigeunerin, Wolfenbüttel, 20 Jan 1718; as Die erhabene Tugend, oder Bozena, Weissenfels, 1725
Die bewährte und wohlbelohnte Treue, oder Cloelia und Pythias, 1718
Don Carlos und Sidonie, 1719
Das doppelte Glück getreuer Liebe zwischen Fernando und Bellamira, 1719
Die zwar gedrückte, doch wieder erquickte Liebe, oder Amine und Sefi, 1719
Die vom Himmel geschützte Unschuld und Tugend, oder Bellerophon, Neumeister, 1720
Das durch beständige Liebe mit Persien glücklich verknüpfte Numidien, oder Achmed und Almeide, 1721
Die triumphierende Liebe, 1723
Der Triumph der Treue, oder Bellinde, 24 June 1724
Das triumphierende Glück, oder Augustas und Livia, 1727
Selimone und Cloriden, 1727
Ismene und Menoikeus [Menalces, Menarcas], 23 Jan 1728
Marcus Antonius und Cleopatra, 26 Feb 1728,
Die getreue Schäferin Doris, 1728
Meleager und Atalanta, 1729
Paris und Oenone, 1729
Theseus und Helene, 1729

Doubtful: Der glückliche Betrug, oder Clythia und Orestes, 1717; Damoetus und Euphrasia, Sangerhausen, 1720

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GerberL; WaltherML
A. Werner: Städtische und fürstliche Musikpflege in Weissenfels bis zum Ende des 18. Jahrhunderts (Leipzig, 1911/R)
R. Brockpähler: Handbuch zur Geschichte der Barockoper in Deutschland (Emsdetten, 1964)
J. Trojan: 'Jeno jasnost sedlák a cikánka jakoz i povysená cnost nebo zelezny stul' [The illustrious peasant and the gypsy woman, or Virtue extolled, or The iron table], OM, x (1983), 235–8
T. Fuchs: 'Johann Augustin Kobelius: ein Konkurrent des jungen Johann Sebastian Bach im Umfeld Georg Friedrich Händels', HJb 1993, 245–57

GEORGE J. BUELOW

København (Dan.). See COPENHAGEN.

Kobierkowicz [Kobierkiewicz], Józef [Franciszek; Antoni; ?Ignacy] (*fl c*1730–51). Polish composer and organist. He was active as a lay musician during the years 1731–5, and possibly also 1751, in the musical establishment of the monastery of the Pauline fathers in Jasna Góra in Częstochowa. It has been suggested, because his works are mentioned in a Kraków inventory in 1737, that Kobierkowicz was connected with the Jesuit chapel there, but that is conjectural. He wrote a number of pastorellas, short works connected with Christmas, on sacred texts relating the story of the shepherds, and using melodic phrases based on carols or other folktunes (including the oberek dance). His music is simple in style, using echo and dialogue effects and favouring parallel 3rds rather than contrapuntal imitation; it has a certain individual charm and may be regarded as representative of provincial Polish musical centres, particularly monastic ones, in the late Baroque period.

WORKS

Pastorellas, all ed. in ZHMP, xii (1968): Musae piae, S, A, T, B, 2 vn, 2 tpt, org; In pace princeps, A, T, 2 vn, 2 tpt, org; Caelum gaude, S, B, 2 vn, db, org; Dormi mei redemptio, S, 2 vn, db, org; Apparuit benignitas, S, 2 vn, db, org; Salve puelle, A, T, 2 vn, db, org; Caelo rores, S, B, 2 vn, vle, org; Caeli rores, S, B, 2 vn, vle, org; Adiuro te, 2 S, 2 vn, db, org; Patris stupenda bonitas, S, A, T, B, 2 vn, 2 tpt, bn, org
Ego mater pulchrae dictionis, motet, SATB, 2 vn, db, org, ed. in WDMP, lv (1964); ed. in MAP, i (1969)
Justus ut palma florebit, motet, SATB, 2 vn, 2 tpt, db, org, PL-SA 272/A VII, 32

LOST WORKS

2 pastorellas, S, 2 vn, bn, org, PL-CZ (cover only)
Confitebor, Dixit Dominus, Magnificat, Regina coeli, Salve regina, Sit tibi salus: all cited in 1737 inventory of the Jesuit society in Kraków

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SMP
P. Podejko: 'Na marginesie dotychczasowych wzmianek o życiu muzycznym na Jasnej Górze w Częstochowie' [Marginalia about the details of musical life in Jasna Góra Monastery in Częstochowa], Muzyka, xii/1 (1967), 37–43
K. Mrowiec: Pasje wielogłosowe w muzyce polskiej XVIII wieku [18th-century Polish Passion music] (Kraków, 1972)
P. Podejko: Kapela wokalno-instrumentalna zakonu Paulinów na Jasnej Górze [The vocal and instrumental establishment of the Pauline monastery of Jasna Góra] (Kraków, 1977)

MIROSŁAW PERZ

Koblenz [Coblenz]. City in Germany at the confluence of the Rhine and Mosel rivers. It was founded in the 1st century as a Roman fort, provided with walls and fortifications towards the end of the 3rd century, and enlarged in Franconian times to make a royal residence.

Two of the three important old churches in the town, the Kastorkirche (dating from 836; from 1992 called the Basilica Minor), the Florinskirche (900) and the Liebfrauenkirche (1180), have at various times had choral foundations with distinctive choral traditions. The Kastorkirche owns two richly illuminated graduals from the 15th and 16th centuries with staffed neumes; other manuscripts of choral music are in the library of the Görresgymnasium (formerly the Jesuits' library).

Koblenz's theatrical tradition began in 1581 at the Jesuit School; troupes of English strolling players are recorded from 1605. In 1787 an opera house, which still exists, was inaugurated with a performance of Mozart's Die Entführung aus dem Serail by J.H. Böhm's company, which remained in Koblenz until 1804. In 1867 the theatre was taken over by the city as the private owners were no longer able to maintain the building.

Koblenz was handed over by the Emperor Heinrich II to the archbishopric of Trier in 1018. The archbishops, who were also electors from the 13th century until the French Revolution, helped the town to prosper, and the removal of the elector's residence to Ehrenbreitstein near Koblenz at the beginning of the 17th century further stimulated the town's cultural life. The Elector Carl Caspar von der Leyen (1652–76) introduced musicians to the court in 1654, and during his reign there were 20 musicians and a dancing-master. The number of musicians was continually increased; by 1782 there were 41 instrumentalists, second only to Mannheim with 54. The lists of musicians include internationally famous names: Johann Zach, F.G. Anschuez (1711–95), Johann Peter and Philipp Dornaus, P.P. Sales, Jean Danzi, Jakob von Lindpaintner (father of the conductor P.J. von Lindpaintner) and Vincenzo Righini. The repertory was based chiefly on church music with a prevalence of works in the concertato style. The last musicians at the court included in their repertory works by Haydn, Mozart, Gluck, J.C. Bach, Pergolesi, Dittersdorf, J.A. Hasse, Salieri, Carl Stamitz and Cimarosa. In 1763 Mozart spent ten days at Koblenz, playing at the Residenz and in public concerts.

Music was fostered by the townspeople from 1760; this tradition has been continued by the Musikinstitut, founded in 1808 by J.A. Anschuez (1772–1855). Between 1865 and 1867 Max Bruch was its director and in 1866 his First Violin Concerto had its première under its auspices. Chamber music has been fostered by the Verein der Musikfreunde since 1872. Visiting virtuosos included Chopin, Ferdinand Hiller, Mendelssohn, Liszt, Paganini, Brahms and Reger. The singer Henriette Sontag was born in Koblenz.

Orchestral music was provided by the bands of the military forces stationed in Koblenz until 1900, when the Stadttheater started its own orchestra; this was taken over by the town in 1913 and called the Städtisches Orchester Koblenz. In autumn 1945 the Rheinische Philharmonie was founded in Koblenz with over 80 players. Under Walter May, Carl August Vogt, Claro Mizerit, Walter Crabeels, Pierre Stoll, James Lockhart and Christian Kluttig it has become well known in Germany and abroad and in 1973 it was adopted as a state orchestra with state support. The main concert hall is the Rhein-Mosel-Halle, built in 1962; its large concert organ, made by Kemper of Lübeck, has 72 stops. Between 1949 and 1970 the Koblenzer Sommerspiele attracted up to 120,000 visitors in June and July every year, with operettas on a floating stage on the Rhine and open-air serenade concerts in the Freilichtbühne Blumenhof of the Deutschherrenhaus (since 1955). The Koblenz Bach Choir, founded in 1956 as the Koblenz Madrigal Choir, is widely known and regularly participates in international festivals.

After the Musikinstitut gave up its associated school for singers and performers in 1880, a private conservatory was set up which existed until 1945 and for a time after 1906 had some 300 students under the violinist Franz Sagebiel; the staff included Bruch and Pfitzner (in 1892–3). In 1969 a college of education was established in Koblenz. It became a university in 1990 and, among other things, trains music teachers for primary and secondary schools and municipal music schools. It offers the MA and PhD in music. In 1884 the music department and the Jacques Offenbach Society together founded the International Jacques Offenbach Institute in Bad Ems.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W.J. Becker: Forschungen zum Theaterleben von Koblenz im Rahmen der deutschen, namentlich der rheinischen Theater-Geschichte, über die Zeit bis zum Jahre 1815 (diss., U. of Bonn, 1915)
W.J. Becker: Gesammelte Beiträge zur Literatur- und Theatergeschichte von Coblenz (Koblenz, 1920)
H.G. Fellmann: Die Böhm'sche Theatertruppe und ihre Zeit (Leipzig, 1928)
G. Reitz: St. Kastor zu Koblenz: Kirche–Stift–Pfarrei in ihrer Geschichte (Koblenz, 1936)
P. Schuh: Joseph Andreas Anschuez, 1772–1855, der Gründer des Koblenzer Musikinstituts (Cologne, 1958)
F. Bösken: Die Orgelbauerfamilie Stumm aus Rhaunen-Sulzbach und ihr Werk (Mainz, 1960)
G. Bereths: Die Musikpflege am kurtrierischen Hofe zu Koblenz-Ehrenbreitstein (Mainz, 1964)
U. Baur: 'Koblenz: Kulturzentrum am Mittelrhein', Rheinische Philharmonie, 1945–1970: Beiträge zum Musikgeschehen (Koblenz, 1970), 15–25
H. Bellinghausen: 2000 Jahre Koblenz (Boppard, 1971, 2/1973)
H. Schmidt: Musik-Institut Koblenz (Koblenz, 1983)
F. Bockius: 200 Jahre Theater Koblenz (Koblenz, 1987)
G. Gutensohn: Mozart in Koblenz (Koblenz, 1991)
I. Bátori, ed.: Geschichte der Stadt Koblenz (Stuttgart, 1991–3)

HEINZ ANTON HÖHNEN

Koch. German family of organists and organ builders. Paul Koch the elder (d Zwickau, 1546), from St Joachimsthal (now Jáchymov), Bohemia, went to Zwickau in 1543 and there renovated the organs in St Marien and St Katharinen. Paul Koch the younger (bur. Zwickau, 28 Sept 1580) worked as organist in Zwickau, from 1544 at St Katharinen, and from 1552 at St Marien. He renovated the organ in Weiden. Hans Koch was organist from 1563 to 1568 at the Petrikirche in Freiberg, Saxony. Stephan Koch (d Zwickau, 29 Dec 1590) was organist at St Dorotheen in Vienna in 1564, and later in Annaberg (Erzgebirge), where he married in 1570. From 21 July 1575 he lived as a wealthy citizen and organist and highly esteemed instrument maker in Zwickau. He completed an organ begun by Jakob Weinrebe in Bischofswerda (Christuskirche, 1571) and built instruments in Olomouc (St Mauritius, 1585), Kulmbach (1587) and Jihlava (1590). Three positive organs are ascribed to him by M. Fürstenau in the Dresden instrument inventory.

Georg Koch the elder was no doubt closely related to the Zwickau branch of the family. He built an organ in Glauchau (St Georg, 1580) and from 1582 until 1585 was in Glauchau, where he owned a house and garden (though he later suffered a period of financial hardship). In 1585 he was living in Zwickau, where he remained until at least 1590. He renovated organs in Zeitz (cathedral) and Leipzig (Nikolaikirche) and built organs at Taus (large organ, 1572–3), Schmölln (Stadtpfarrkirche, 1583) and Brno (St Jakub, 1590). He was assisted by his son Georg in building an organ at Waldenburg, Saxony (St Bartholomäus, 1598–9); in 1602 Georg Koch the younger made some improvements to the instrument, which had in the meantime been damaged by stormy weather. A son born to Georg Koch (the younger) and his wife Martha was baptized in Altwaldenburg on 27 October 1616.

The capable organ builders of this well-known family combined carefully planned register combinations with solid workmanship, and they are of considerable importance in the art of 16th-century organ building. Their instruments are found chiefly in Saxony, Bohemia, Moravia, Silesia and Bavaria.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Herzog: Chronik der Kreisstadt Zwickau, ii (Zwickau, 1845)
E. Eckardt: Chronik von Glauchau (Glauchau, 1882)
R. Vollhardt: Geschichte der Cantoren und Organisten von den Städten im Königreich Sachsen (Berlin, 1899)
P. Smets, ed.: Orgeldispositionen (Kassel, 1931)
E. Müller: Musikgeschichte von Freiberg (Freiberg, 1939)
W. Haacke: 'Orgelbauten im Zeitzer und Naumburger Dom', AMf, vii (1942), 209–17
R. Quoika: Der Orgelbau in Böhmen und Mähren (Mainz, 1966)

W. Huttel: Musikgeschichte von Glauchau und Umgebung (Glauchau, 1995), 96, 105, 110, 221

WALTER HÜTTEL

Koch, (Sigurd Christian) Erland von (b Stockholm, 26 April 1910). Swedish composer, teacher and conductor. Son of the composer Sigurd von Koch (1879–1919), he studied at the Stockholm Conservatory (1931–5) and then in France and Germany (1936–8) with Höffer (composition), Kraus and Gmeindl (conducting) and Arrau (piano). On his return to Sweden he concentrated on conducting, while also working as a teacher at Wohlfart's Music School, Stockholm (1939–53), and as a sound technician with Swedish radio (1943–5). In 1953 he was appointed to teach harmony at the Stockholm Musikhögskolan, where he was made professor in 1968. He was chairman of Fylkingen (1946–8) and an executive member of the Swedish Composers Association (1947–63). He became a member of the Swedish Royal Academy of Music in 1957, and has received the Royal Vasa Order (1967) and Litteris et Artibus (1979).

After an early neo-classical phase, which was typified by the popular orchestral Dans no.2, Koch's style matured through his studies of Grieg, Sibelius, Hindemith and Bartók, and, above all, as a result of his deep understanding of Dalecarlian folk music. His fresh, effectively scored pieces, often using folk melody, have made him one of the most popular Swedish composers abroad. Over the years his treatment of tonality broadened, and he developed a skilful ability in the rhythmic and contrapuntal variation of peasant music, as seen in the orchestral Oxberg-trilogin, the 12 Skandinaviska danser and the Polska svedese. In the Impulsi-trilogin the orchestration is heavier, with almost 12-note melodies.

WORKS
(selective list)

ORCHESTRAL

Liten svit, op.1, chbr orch, 1933; Pf Conc. no.1, op.11, 1936; Vn Conc., op.14, 1937; Dans no.2, 1938, arr. str, 1966; Sym. no.1, op.18, 1938; Sinfonia dalecarlica (Sym. no.2), op.30, 1945; Va Conc., op.33, 1946, rev. 1966; Concertino pastorale, op.35, fl, str, 1947, rev. 1965; Serenata giocosa, op.39, 1948; Sym. no.3, op.38, 1948; Triptychon, op.43, vn, orch, 1949; Arkipelag, op.47, 1950; Vc Conc., op.49, 1951, rev. 1966; Musica malinconica, str, op.50, 1952; Sinfonia seria (Sym. no.4), op.51, 1952–3, rev. 1961; Conc., small orch, 1955

Konsertmusik, 1955; Oxberg-trilogin: Oxbergvariationer, 1956, Lapplandmetamorfoser, 1957, Dansrapsodi, 1957; Sax Conc., 1958; [12] Skandinaviska danser, 1958–60; Conc. piccolo, s sax, a sax, str, 1962; Pf Conc. no.2, 1962; Fantasia concertante, vn, orch, 1964; Impulsi-trilogin: Impulsi, 1964, Echi, 1965, Ritmi, 1966; Arioso e furioso, str, 1967; Polska svedese, 1968; Musica concertante, 8 wind, orch, 1969; Double Conc., fl, cl, str, 1970; Pf Conc. no.3, pf, wind, 1970, arr. pf, orch, 1972; Canto nordico e rondo, ob, str orch, 1973; En svensk i New York, 1973; Minityrsvit, str, 1973; Conc., vn, pf, orch, 1974; Festmarsch, 1974, arr. wind orch, 1977; Fantasy on a Swedish Folk Tune, hn/eng hn, str, 1975, rev. 1993; Saxophonia, conc., 4 sax, wind orch, 1976

Flautalba, fl, str, 1976; Lapponica (Sym. no.5), 1976–7; Ob Conc., str, 1978; Tuba Conc., str, 1978; Vn Conc. no.2, 1980, rev. 1990; Moderato & Allegro, sax ens, 1981; 4 symfoniska myter [4 Symphonic Myths], 1981–2; Gui Conc., 1982; Trombonia, trbn, str orch, 1983; Rauna, Variations on a Lappish Melody, 1984, rev. 1993; Midvinterblot, Sommarsolstå [Midwinter Sacrificial Feast, Summer Solstice], 2 Nordic portraits, 1985–6; Fantasia melodica, gui, str, 1986; Sym. no.6 (Salvare la terra), 1991–2; Dalecarlian Rondo, chbr orch, 1993; Lamento över Estonia-katastrofen [Lament over the Estonia Catastrophe], 1994–6

OTHER WORKS

Stage: Askungen (ballet), op.24, 1942; Lasse Lucidor (op), op.27, 1943; Pelle Svanslös (children's op), op.42, 1948; Simson och Dalila (ballet), 1965; Chung K'uei and the Demons (A. Henrikson) (miniature op), 1978

Choral: Midsommardalen (H. Martinson), S, Bar, chorus, orch, 1960–61; 5 psalmer, chorus, org, solo inst ad lib, 1974–5; Cantilena (vocalise), female and boy chorus, 1977, rev. 1981; Omnilog, vocalizing SATB, 1978; 3 lovsånger (B. Setterling), 1979; Ps, SATB, cl, 1985; De blomster som i marken bor (hymn paraphrase), S, SATB, 1988; [7] Vinden viskar (E. Byström, N. Ferlin, G. Ekelöf, H. Löwenhielm), 1991–2; Laudate Dominum, 1994; TeD (O. Hartman), SATB, wind orch/org, 1994; Vågornas sång [Song of the Waves] (A. Strindberg), 1996; Gloria, 1997; folksongs arrs.

Str Qts: no.1, op.2, 1934; no.2, op.28, 1944; Musica intima (Str Qt no.3), op.48, 1950, arr. str orch, 1965; Conc. lirico (Str Qt no.4), 1956, arr. str orch, 1961; Str Qt no.5 'In moto', 1961, rev. 1991; Musica espressiva (Str Qt no.6), db ad lib, 1963, also for str orch; no.7 'Årstidspastoraler', 1997

Other chbr/solo inst: Rytmiska bagateller, vn, pf, 1957–75; 3 intermezzi concertanti, pf, 1963; Varianti virtuosi I, pf, 1965, II, vn, pf, 1969; Fantasi i vallåt och caprice, fl, 1973; [3] Kontraster, org, 1973; Nattlig etyd, pf, 1973; Pizzicato-flageolet, vn, pf, 1973; Fantasia on 'Ack Värmeland du sköna', vn, pf, 1974; Psalm från Älvdalen, org, 1974; Variationen über eine schwedische Volksweise, vn, 1974; Canto e danza, fl/vn, gui/pf, 1975; Dialogue, s sax, a sax, 1975; Variations II on a Swedish Folksong, va, 1975; Monolog 2–18, various solo insts, 1975–7; Cantilena, org/gui/str orch/vocalizing chorus, 1978, rev. 1991; A Summer Tune, 2 wind qnt, 1978

Bagattella virtuosa, sax qt, 1978, arr. vn, 1980; [8] Characters, vn, pf, 1980; Melo-Ritmo, brass qnt, 1980; Silver Tunes, fl, 1980; Auda, brass qnt, 1981; Rondo, a sax, eng hn, str orch, 1983; Trombonia, trbn, org, 1983; Tubania, tuba, pf, 1983; 4 årstidspastoraler [4 Season Pastorales], org/pf/(vn, pf)/chbr orch, 1983–7; Melos 1–4, opt. solo inst/1v/vv, opt. acc., 1983–8; Rauna, org/gui, 1984, rev. 1993; Variations on Necken, gui, 1984; Little Bird Suite, fl, 1985–6; Fantasia melodica, gui, wind qnt, 1986, rev. 1989; Adagietto, org/str, 1988; [5] Marina preludier [Marine Preludes], pf, 1990; Toccata festivo, org, 1990; Melodietta, solo inst ad lib, pf, 1992; Suoni per tre, pf trio, 1993

Songs: Jungfrun i Tidlösa, 1945; Drömmen om människan [The Dream of Man] (Martinson), 1967–8, rev, 1978; Canto nordico (vocalise), ob/S, pf/str orch, 1970; [4] I naturen (P. Lagerkvist, A. Strindberg, W. Aspenström, E. Diktonius), Mez, pf, 1977; [4] Från skärgården (B. Bergman, E. Malm, G. Björling, E. Lindqvist), 1v, pf, 1979–80; 3 Strinberg-sånger, lv, pf, 1993–6

Principal publishers: Associated, Breitkopf & Härtel, Gehrman, Nordiska, Peer, Simrock, Southern

WRITINGS

'Erland von Koch svarar på frågor om sig själv' [Koch answers questions about himself], Musikvärlden, i/4 (1945), 9–12

E. von Koch: 'Några intryck från en studieresa hösten 1970' [Some impressions from a study trip autumn 1970], Kungliga musikaliska akademiens årsskrift 1970, 77–84

Musik och minnen [Music and memories] (Stockholm, 1989)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Å. Brandel: 'Eine reife Generation: Larsson – Wirén – de Frumerie – von Koch', Musikrevy International (1959), 47–56 [Eng. trans. in Musikrevy International (1960), 61–9]

H. Connor: Samtal med tonsättare [Conversation with composers] (Stockholm, 1971)

C. Atterling-Wedar: 'Erland von Koch: den mångfaldige förnyaren', Musikrevy, xxxv (1980), 99–102

L. Hedwall: 'Erland von Koch och hans Fyra symfoniska myter', Musikrevy, xlii (1987), 177–81

I. Selander: 'De blomster som i marken bor', I musernas sällskap (Höganäs, 1992), 470–93

ROLF HAGLUND

Koch, Franjo Ksaver. See KUHAČ, FRANCO KSAVER.

Koch, Friedrich E(rnst) (b Berlin, 3 July 1862; d Berlin, 30 Jan 1927). German teacher and composer. At the age of 16 he entered the Berlin Hochschule für Musik, where he studied the cello with Hausmann and composition with Bargiel (1880–81, 1883–4) and then Robert Radecke. He was playing the cello with the royal orchestra in Berlin by 1882, and in 1891 he went to Baden-Baden as city Kapellmeister. After a year, he decided on a career in teaching, becoming a singing instructor at the municipal Lessing Gymnasium in Berlin, where he remained until 1918. The security of this appointment enabled him to give more attention to composition and his classicist pieces, with their simple, often folklike ideas, quickly found recognition. Nominated professor in 1900, he was active as a teacher at various conservatories; from 1911 he participated in several official examination commissions. A thoroughly able and gifted teacher, in 1917 he was appointed theory teacher at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik, where he succeeded Humperdinck as director of the theory and composition class in 1920. His writings include Der Aufbau der Kadenz und anderes: ein Beitrag zur Harmonielehre (Leipzig, 1920). Among his pupils were Blacher, Jacobi, Kletzki and Weill. Though the pedagogic achievements of this typical Berlin academic are unquestioned, his music was quickly forgotten.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ops: Die Halliger (2, Koch), Cologne, 1896; Die Hügelmühle (2, after G. Gjellerup), op.41, Berlin, 1918; Die Himmelsschuhe, op.46; Lea (2, Koch), unpubd

Choral: Das Sonnenlied, op.26 (M. Bamberger: Solarliodh), solo vv, chorus, orch, org (1898); Von den Tageszeiten, op.29 (orat, Koch), solo vv, chorus, orch, org (1905); Die deutsche Tanne, op.30 (Koch), B, chorus, orch (1905); Die Sündflut, op.32 (Bible, Koch), solo vv, chorus, orch, org (1910); other acc. and unacc. works

Orch: Sym. no.1 'Von der Nordsee', d, op.4 (1891); Sinfonische Fuge, c, op.8 (1891); Sym. no.2, G, op.10 (1892); Deutsche Rhapsodie, D, op.31, vn, orch (1907); Romantische Suite, op.37 (1920)

Chbr works, pf pieces, songs

Principal publishers: Bote & Bock, Breitkopf & Härtel, Kahnt, Rahter

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Schering GO
A. Schering: Von den Tageszeiten: Erläuterung (Leipzig, 1905)
H. Kretzschmar: Führer durch den Konzertsaal, i/2 (Leipzig, 4/1913); ii/1 (Leipzig, 4/1916); ii/2 (Leipzig, 3/1915)
W. Niemann: Die Musik der Gegenwart (Berlin, 1921)
Archives in D-Bhm, Bda

THOMAS-M. LANGNER/R

Koch, Heinrich Christoph (b Rudolstadt, 10 Oct 1749; d Rudolstadt, 19 March 1816). German theorist and violinist. He served in his youth as a violinist in the Hofkapelle at Rudolstadt and in 1772 became a court musician. He studied the violin and composition with the Kapellmeister Christian Scheinpflug and briefly continued his studies in Weimar, Dresden, Berlin and Hamburg before returning to Rudolstadt, where he remained for the rest of his life. In 1792 he was appointed Kapellmeister, but he returned voluntarily to the orchestra as a first violinist after one year. Composition and writing then occupied him until his death. He was posthumously elected to the Swedish Royal Academy of Music in 1818.

The majority of Koch's compositions were for the court: cantatas, a drama Die Stimme der Freude in Hygeens Haine (1790), instrumental works and sacred music. Except for excerpts illustrating his theoretical writings, these are now lost. Seven symphonies ascribed to 'Koch' and formerly held by the Hofkapelle (now in D-RUl) do not appear in contemporary lists of Koch's compositions and may not be his. Koch also wrote numerous reviews and a few articles – some anonymously – for the Musikalische Real-Zeitung of Speyer (1788–91), the Jenaische allgemeine Literatur-Zeitung (1804–11) and the Allegmeine musikalische Zeitung (1807–11). He started a periodical entitled Journal der Tonkunst in 1795, but only two issues appeared.

The Versuch einer Anleitung zur Composition, published in three volumes (1782, 1787, 1793), is Koch's most original and important work. A comprehensive study of both the theory and the aesthetics of music, it is grounded in the repertory of the day. Koch resolves the 18th-century dispute over the relative importance of harmony and melody by examining the origins of tones and the process by which the notes of the scale arise. He asserts that neither harmony nor melody takes precedence; key, or mode, is the primary matter (Urstoff) of music. If notes occur simultaneously, harmony results; if successively, melody results. Koch is indebted to Marpurg for the theoretical views expressed in volume i, but does not accept his theory of the undertones, derives the 7th differently, and does not believe that harmony is the primary element of music. He uses five counterpoint exercises of increasing harmonic complexity to illustrate how the notes of a cantus firmus contain the basis for differing harmonies related to the prevailing key. This demonstration is important preparation for the creation of a melody rich in harmonic variety. The Handbuch of 1811 is a revision of this volume, introducing recent scientific discoveries and a different method of chord classification.

Koch began volume ii of the Versuch with an extended essay on aesthetic considerations and guidelines for creation in music. Here he was indebted to the work of Charles Batteux, which he knew in K.W. Ramler's translation, and especially to Sulzer's Allgemeine Theorie der schönen Künste. He believed that the ultimate purpose and moral justification of the fine arts, in particular music, are to awaken feelings in the audience that will inspire noble resolutions. Although aesthetic theory did not yet validate instrumental music, Koch implies that, by following certain guidelines of the fine arts, the composer of instrumental music may realize the same aim. He outlines three stages of creation, the plan (Anlage), the realization (Ausführung) and the elaboration (Ausarbeitung), and relates them specifically to music, describing the stages in which an aria from C.H. Graun's Der Tod Jesu was supposedly composed. Although it is unlikely that this method of creation was actually practised, the analysis was a useful pedagogical exercise.

Most of volume ii and all of volume iii are entitled 'Von den mechanischen Regeln der Melodie' [The Mechanical Rules of Melody]. Koch examines modulation, metre, melodic sections and their connection, and the genres of the day, stressing throughout the importance of the harmonic dimension. The composer's goal should be 'to conceive of melody harmonically' (die Melodie harmonisch zu denken), and this mutual dependence of melody and harmony should inform decisions at all levels. Koch acknowledges Joseph Riepel's Anfangsgründe zur musicalischen Setzkunst as the first work to discuss the smallest units of music and the ways in which they must be joined, and builds systematically upon these ideas. The distinguishing characteristics of a musical unit are its ending and its length. The ending, or melodic punctuation, is a resting-point articulated by melodic and harmonic means.

The length of a phrase has a rhythmical character (rhythmische Beschaffenheit); because successive phrases create a rhythm, or periodicity, most pleasing if their lengths are equivalent. Koch prefers the four-bar phrase (Vierer), but also describes basic phrases of other lengths and extended and compound phrases. He discusses ways in which these building-blocks may be joined together in brief works, offering various harmonic patterns, and shows how an eight-bar dance can be expanded to 32 bars by such means as sequence, repetition, parenthesis and multiplication of phrase endings and cadences. In his descriptions of the larger forms, Koch concentrates on the principal period (Hauptperiode), a group of phrases which ends with a formal cadence. These periods create the various forms of music by their statement, their repetition, and the position of their harmonic centres within the hierarchy of the prevailing key. For the first movement of a symphony, Koch outlines a binary structure consisting of three principal periods; although he refers to a 'singing phrase' after the modulation, he never refers to it as a second theme. Koch's teachings on form were not prescriptive; he generally presented several options observed in the current repertory with the aim of showing what was most usual, das Gewöhnliche.

The Versuch includes many musical examples by Koch and excerpts from symphonies by Haydn and Antonio Rosetti, Singspiele by J.A. Hiller and Georg Benda, keyboard sonatas and concertos by C.P.E. Bach and works by other composers. Although the majority date from the 1760s and 70s, Koch also praised Mozart's 'Haydn' Quartets (published in 1785) and noted changes in recent practice.

The monumental Musikalisches Lexikon of 1802 was the work by which Koch was best known until the mid-20th century. It provides information on the formal and technical aspects of the music of the late 18th century in concise entries with scientific explanations, mathematical illustrations and numerous musical examples. Koch later revised and condensed it for a more popular version (1807).

Extracts from the Lexikon were translated into Danish in 1826, and Arrey von Dommer revised and enlarged the entire work in 1865. Both the Lexikon and the Versuch influenced such theorists as Choron, Weber, Marx, Lobe, Lussy and Riemann.

WRITINGS

Versuch einer Anleitung zur Composition (Rudolstadt and Leipzig, 1782–93/R; partial Eng. trans. by N.K. Baker as Introductory Essay on Composition: the Mechanical Rules of Melody, Sections 3 and 4, 1983)

ed.: Journal der Tonkunst (Erfurt, 1795)

Musikalisches Lexikon, welches die theoretische und praktische Tonkunst, encyclopädisch bearbeitet, alle alten und neuen Kunstwörter erklärt, und die alten und neuen Instrumente beschrieben, enthält (Frankfurt, 1802/R, 2/1817); abridged as Kurzgefasstes Handwörterbuch der Musik für praktische Tonkünstler und für Dilettanten (Leipzig, 1807/R)

'Über den technischen Ausdruck: Tempo rubato', AMZ, x (1808), cols. 513–19

Handbuch bey dem Studium der Harmonie (Leipzig, 1811)

Versuch, aus der harten und weichen Tonart jeder Tonstufe der diatonisch-chromatischen Leiter vermittels des enharmonischen Tonwechsels in die Dur- und Molltonart der übrigen Stufen auszuweichen (Rudolstadt, 1812)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Grove6 (L.G. Ratner) [incl. further bibliography]

H. Riemann: 'H. Chr. Koch als Erläuterer unregelmässigen Themenaufbaues', Präludien und Studien, ii (Leipzig, 1900/R), 56–70

N.K. Baker: From 'Teil' to 'Tonstück': the Significance of the 'Versuch einer Anleitung zur Composition' by Heinrich Christoph Koch (diss., Yale U., 1975); extracts in JMT, xx (1976), 1–48, IRASM, viii (1977), 183–209, Studi musicali, ix (1980), 303–16

C. Dahlhaus: 'Der rhetorische Formbegriff H.Chr. Kochs und die Theorie der Sonatenform', AMw, xxxv (1978), 155–77

E. Sisman: 'Small and Expanded Forms: Koch's Model and Haydn's Music', MQ, lxviii (1982), 444–75

W. Budday: Grundlagen musikalischer Formen der Wiener Klassik: an Hand der zeitgenössischen Theorie von Joseph Riepel und Heinrich Christoph Koch dargestellt an Menuetten und Sonatensätzen (1750–1790) (Basle, 1983)

S. Davis: 'H.C. Koch, the Classic Concerto, and the Sonata-Form Retransition', JM, ii (1983), 45–61

I. Bent: 'The "Compositional Process" in Music Theory 1713–1850', MAn, iii (1984), 29–55

N.K. Baker: 'Der Urstoff der Musik: Implications for Harmony and Melody in the Theory of Heinrich Koch', MAn, vii (1988), 3–30

C. Dahlhaus: 'Logik, Grammatik und Syntax der Musik bei Heinrich Christoph Koch', Die Sprache der Musik: Festschrift Klaus Wolfgang Niemöller, ed. J. Fricke and others (Regensburg, 1989), 99–109

I. Waldbauer: 'Riemann's Periodization Revisited and Revised', JMT, xxxiii (1989), 333–91

J. Lester: Compositional Theory in the Eighteenth Century (Cambridge, MA, 1992)

W. Dürr: 'Music as an Analogue of Speech: Musical Syntax in the Writings of Heinrich Christoph Koch and in the Works of Schubert', Eighteenth-Century Music in Theory and Practice: Essays in Honor of Alfred Mann, ed. M. Parker (Stuyvesant, NY, 1994), 227–40

N.K. Baker and T. Christensen, trans. and eds.: Aesthetics and the Art of Musical Composition in the German Enlightenment: Selected Writings of Johann G. Sulzer and Heinrich C. Koch (London, 1995)

NANCY KOVALEFF BAKER

Koch, Jodocus. See JONAS, JUSTUS.

Koch, Lothar (b Velbert, 1 July 1935). German oboist and teacher. After studying with J.B. Schlee in Essen, Koch was appointed solo oboist in the Freiburg PO in 1953, taking up the same post in the Berlin PO in 1957. Koch's oboe playing was a distinctive feature of the Karajan Berlin sound of the 1960s and 1970s. In 1959 he won first prize in the Prague Spring Festival; two years later he took up a post at the Berlin Conservatory, and in 1972 began to teach at the Herbert von Karajan Akademie, Berlin. Since his retirement from the Berlin PO in 1991 he has taught at the Mozarteum in Salzburg. Koch has been an active chamber musician, working mostly with his colleagues from the Berlin PO. Additional honours include the Kunstpreis de Stadt Berlin-West in 1964. Koch's solo recordings include oboe concertos and sonatas of the Baroque, and Classical chamber music including Mozart's Oboe Quartet and a highly acclaimed version of the concerto by Richard Strauss.

GEOFFREY BURGESS

Koch, (Richert) Sigurd (Valdemar) von (b Ågnö, nr Stockholm, 28 June 1879; d Stockholm, 16 March 1919). Swedish composer. He studied the piano at the Richard Andersson School and composition with Lindegren, then in Berlin (1905, 1912) and Dresden (1905). Later he worked as an accompanist and as a music critic. Painter and poet as well as composer, he ranks among the Nordic late Romantics, with a loosely rhapsodic style owing something to the French Impressionists. His works include many song collections from his late years as well as violin and cello sonatas (both 1913), a piano quintet (1916), works for violin and orchestra (1914) and piano and orchestra (Ballade, 1919), incidental music and symphonic poems (including I Pans marker, 1917).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SBL (M. Tegen) [with list of works]
F.H. Törnblom: 'Sigurd von Koch', Ord och bild, xlv (1936), 554–8
W. Seymer: 'Fyra nyromantiker', STMf, xxiii (1941), 61–4
G. Nordberger: 'Minnen av Sigurd von Koch', Hågkomster och livsintryck (Uppsala, 1943), 272–88

KATHLEEN DALE

Koch, Stephan (b Veszprém, Hungary, 12 April 1772; d Vienna, 16 Dec 1828). Austrian woodwind instrument maker. He was active in Vienna from 1809, and in 1815 he acquired citizenship and the status of a master craftsman of that city. Although he made all kinds of woodwind instruments, including the csakan, he was most famed for his improvements to the design of flutes and oboes. In collaboration with the flautist Georg Bayr, Koch developed the 'Panaulon', a type of flute with a lower register extending to b and in some cases even to g. Bayr described the instrument in his Practische Flöten-Schule (*c*1823); it had seven keys beneath the D♯ key, and a recurved footjoint to accommodate the necessary extra length of tubing. Koch also worked with the oboist Joseph Sellner (1787–1845) to produce perhaps the most progressive oboe of the period; as well as the nine keys usual until that time it had extra levers for B, F and D♯. Its compass extended down to b and it had a tuning slide to improve intonation. This design was modified in detail during the following decades but remained unchanged in principle, becoming the basis for the 'Viennese oboe' always preferred in Austria.

Of Koch's five children, three sons continued in the trade. Franz (b 8 Dec 1800; d 28 Feb 1859) took over the workshop after his father's death. Stephan junior (b 2 June 1809; d after 1877) seems to have worked at the same address and continued the family business after the death of Franz. The youngest brother, Friedrich (b 19 Aug 1818; d 5 Oct 1873) was also a maker of woodwind instruments. Instruments from the Koch workshops bear a double eagle device and the wording S: KOCH/WIEN.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Waterhouse-LangwillI; YoungHI
A. Carse: Musical Wind Instruments (London, 1936/R)
P. Bate: The Oboe: an Outline of its History, Development and Construction (London, 1956, 3/1975)
H. Haupt: 'Wiener Instrumentenbauer von 1791 bis 1815', SMw, xxiv (1960), 120–84
H. Ottner: Der Wiener Instrumentenbau: 1815–1833 (Tutzing, 1977)
N. Toff: The Development of the Modern Flute (New York, 1979)
R. Hopfner: Wiener Musikinstrumentenmacher, 1766–1900 (Tutzing, 1999)

RUDOLF HOPFNER

Kochańska, Prakseda Marcelina. See SEMBRICH, MARCELLA.

Kochański, Paweł (b Odessa, 14 Sept 1887; d New York, 12 Jan 1934). Polish violinist. He began lessons with Emil Młynarski when he was seven, and at 14 played first violin with the Warsaw PO. In 1903 he joined César Thomson's violin class at the Brussels Conservatory and received a premier prix after four months. After touring widely in Europe he returned to Poland in 1907 and taught the virtuoso class at the Warsaw Conservatory, then in 1913 succeeded Auer as professor at the Imperial Conservatory in St Petersburg. His friendship with Szymanowski brought about the composition of several violin works, notably Mity ('Myths', 1915) and the Concerto no.1 (1916), on both of which Kochański collaborated with the composer. He taught for two years in Kiev (1917–19); after the Revolution he left the USSR for Poland and then emigrated to the USA, where he made his début with the New York SO in 1921. He became a teacher at the Juilliard School in 1924 while continuing his concert career. Kochański wrote cadenzas to Szymanowski's concertos and made many transcriptions for violin and piano of works by Szymanowski and others, including Szymanowski's Kurpie Song no.9, Dance from Harnasie and Roxana's Song from King Roger, and Falla's Seven Spanish Popular Songs which he published as Spanish Popular Suite. Stravinsky transcribed for him three extracts from The Firebird. He was awarded the Polish Officer Cross and made a member of the Légion d'Honneur.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I.M. Yampol'sky: 'Paweł Kochanski w Rosji', Polsko-rosyjskie miscellanea muzyczne, ed. Z. Lissa (Kraków, 1967)
J. Creighton: Discopaedia of the Violin (Toronto, 1974, 2/1994)

MIECZYSŁAWA HANUSZEWSKA

Köchel, Ludwig (Alois Ferdinand), Ritter von (b Stein, nr Krems, 14 Jan 1800; d Vienna, 3 June 1877). Austrian music historian. After graduating in law from the University of Vienna in 1827, Köchel and his friend Franz Freiherr Scharschmid von Adlertreu took responsibility for the education of the four sons of Archduke Karl; at the completion of his services in 1842, Köchel was recognized by the award of the Knight's Cross of the Order of Leopold. In 1850 Köchel was appointed k.k. Schulrat in Salzburg and Gymasialinspektor for Upper Austria, but he gave up this post after only two years. He returned to Vienna in 1863 and remained there until his death in 1877. Mozart's Requiem was performed at his funeral.

As an independent scholar of private means, Köchel published numerous articles on botany and mineralogy, as well as translations of Virgil, Ovid and Horace. His chief claim to fame, however, is his work on Mozart. He maintained close contact with the music establishment in Salzburg, even after 1852. In 1854 he was elected a member of the Dommusikverein und Mozarteum, and in 1856 he published privately some Canzonen celebrating the Mozart birth centenary. Earlier, in 1851, Köchel's friend Franz Lorenz published an anonymous pamphlet, Im Sachen Mozarts, drawing attention to the very unsatisfactory state of knowledge about Mozart's music and its sources.

Köchel was prompted by Lorenz's pamphlet to compile a chronological catalogue of Mozart's works, first published in 1862 as Chronologisch-thematisches Verzeichnis sämtlicher Tonwerke Wolfgang Amadé Mozarts. It gave the first few bars of each work, including all movements or vocal numbers, and identified it by a number; it also listed the autograph and other manuscript sources, if extant, the first edition, and references to the recent biography by Otto Jahn, to whom it was dedicated. In compiling his catalogue, Köchel was helped by material from the collections of Josef Hauer, a doctor in Öd (Lower Austria), Aloys Fuchs and Leopold von Sonnleithner, in addition to his own large collection of first and early editions. Like Jahn, he also made, or had made, manuscript copies of many of Mozart's works, some of which served as printers' copy for Breitkopf & Härtel's complete works. Köchel's Mozart autographs are in the Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, Vienna, and other items from his collection in the library of the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde in Vienna.

After the completion of his catalogue, Köchel turned to other matters: in 1869 he published the still useful Die kaiserliche Hof-Musikkapelle in Wien von 1543 bis 1867 and in 1872 a thematic catalogue of the works of Fux; 83 of Beethoven's letters to Archduke Rudolph appeared in 1865 and Die Pflege der Musik am österreichischen Hofe vom Schlusse des XV. bis zur Mitte des XVII. Jahrhunderts in 1866. But Köchel's interest in Mozart remained, and he was instrumental in bringing about the first complete edition of the composer's works, published by Breitkopf & Härtel beginning in 1877; to this end he left the publishers a significant subvention.

The compilation of the Mozart catalogue posed unprecedented problems of authenticity (for which Köchel found an elegant solution in his Appendix) and in particular chronology. Less than a third of Mozart's works were composed after February 1784, when the composer began his own, dated thematic catalogue; approximately 450 earlier works could not always be dated accurately, because either the autograph was lost or, if extant, bore no date. Nevertheless, Köchel's splendid achievement was the first of its scale and standard for any composer.

Subsequent editions (Leipzig, 2/1905, by Paul Graf von Waldersee; 3/1937, by Alfred Einstein; 6/1964 by Franz Giegling, Alexander Weinmann and Gerd Sievers) added enormously to the amount of information in the catalogue, often radically altering the presumed datings and, as a result, the numbering of many pre-1784 works. These revisions, however, have become unworkable; not only do they compound speculation upon speculation, but more recent work by Wolfgang Plath and Alan Tyson has rendered many of these datings, both traditional and revised, obsolete. A new edition of Köchel (Der neue Köchel, by Neal Zaslaw, Ulrich Konrad and Cliff Eisen) was in preparation during 2000.

WRITINGS

Chronologisch-thematisches Verzeichnis sämtlicher Tonwerke Wolfgang Amade Mozarts (Leipzig, 1862; rev. 2/1905 by P. Graf von Waldersee; rev. 3/1937 by A. Einstein, repr. with suppl. 1947; 6/1964/R by F. Giegling, A. Weinmann and G. Sievers [see also MJb 1971–2, 342–401])

'Über den Umfang der musikalischen Produktivität W.A. Mozarts', Mitteilungen des Gesellschaft für Salzburgs Landeskunde, ii (1861–2); pubd separately (Salzburg, 1862)

'Nachträge und Berichtigungen zu v. Köchel's Verzeichniss der Werke Mozart's', AMZ, new ser., ii (1864), 493–9

'Mozarts Requiem: Nachlese zu den Forschungen über dessen Entstehen', Rezensionen über Theater und Musik, x (1864), 753–6

Drei und achtzig neu aufgefundene Original-Briefe Ludwig van Beethovens an den Erzherzog Rudolf (Vienna, 1865)

Die Pflege der Musik am österreichischen Hofe vom Schlusse des XV. bis zur Mitte des XVIII. Jahrhunderts (privately printed, 1866)

Die kaiserliche Hof-Musikkapelle in Wien von 1543 bis 1867 (Vienna, 1869/R)

'Zur Biographie W.A. Mozarts', Jb für Landeskunde von Niederösterreich, i (1867), 356–8

Johann Josef Fux Hofkompositor und Hofkapellmeister der Kaiser Leopold I, Joseph I, und Karl VI, von 1698 bis 1740 (Vienna, 1872/R)

Nachtrag zum chronologisch-thematischen Verzeichnis sämtlicher Tonwerke W.A. Mozarts (Leipzig, 1889)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ADB (C.F. Pohl)

A.H. King: 'Köchel, Breitkopf, and the Complete Edition [of Mozart]: Studies in Criticism and Bibliography', Mozart in Retrospect (London, 1955, 3/1970/R), 55–65

O.E. Deutsch: 'Aus Köchels Jugendtagen', Festschrift Hans Engel zum siebzigsten Geburtstag, ed. H. Heussner (Kassel, 1964), 70–75

O. Biba: 'Ludwig Ritter von Köchel (1800–1877): zur Erinnerung an seinen vor 100 Jahren erfolgten Tod', ÖMz, xxxii (1977), 310–17

O. Winkler: '626 mal KV: zum 100. Todestag L. v. Köchels am 3. Juni 1977', Acta mozartiana, xxiv (1977), 52–7

O. Biba: 'Ludwig Ritter von Köchels Verdienste um die Mozart-Gesamtausgabe', Bürgerliche Musikkultur im 19. Jahrhundert Salzburg: Salzburg 1980, 93–104

W. Rehm: 'Nochmals: Ritter von Köchels Verdienste um die "Alte Mozart-Ausgabe"', Neue Musik und Tradition: Festschrift Rudolf Stephan zum 65. Geburtstag, ed. J. Kuckertz and others (Laaber, 1990), 171–8

D.N. Leeson: 'Ritter von Köchel's Katalog', MadAminA!, xii/1 (1991), 19–21

T.E. Konrad: Ludwig Ritter von Köchel (Vienna, 1998)

CLIFF EISEN

Kochenthal [Küchenthäler], Johannes. See KEUCHENTHAL, JOHANNES.

Kocherga, Anatoly (b Vinnitsa district, 1946). Ukrainian bass. Studies at the Kiev Conservatory and prizes in the Glinka (1971) and Tchaikovsky (1974) competitions led to a period with the Kiev Opera. His international career was launched in 1989, when he sang Shaklovity in the Vienna Staatsoper's Khovanshchina under Claudio Abbado. Engagements at Bregenz, Amsterdam (both as Kochubey in Mazepa), the Opéra Bastille and La Scala (respectively as Boris and the Sergeant in Lady Macbeth of the Mtsensk District) followed, and he has repeated these roles with success elsewhere and recorded them. Since his Boris Godunov at the 1994 Salzburg Easter and Summer festivals he has been particularly associated with the part, singing it in Venice, Turin, Montpellier and with the Vienna Staatsoper in Japan; he has also sung Dosifey (Khovanshchina) in Brussels. He has sung Gremin in Amsterdam (1997) and Field Marshal Kutuzov (War and Peace) in Paris (2000). Non-Russian roles earlier in his career included the Commendatore, but subsequently have been mainly in Verdi, including Sparafucile (1997, San Francisco), Pistol, Banquo and the Grand Inquisitor. Non-operatic assignments such as Musorgsky's Songs and Dances of Death, Shostakovich's 13th Symphony and Janáček's 'Glagolitic Mass' are equally well suited to his imposing voice and presence.

JOHN ALLISON

Kocian, Jaroslav (b Ústí nad Orlicí, 22 Feb 1883; d Prague, 8 March 1950). Czech violinist, teacher and composer. The son of a violin teacher, he was given lessons from early childhood, later studying with Otakar Ševčík at the Prague Conservatory (1896–1901), and composition with Dvořák. He gained immediate success as a concert soloist at home and abroad from 1901, visiting Vienna, London and the USA, where he first toured in 1902. With Jan Kubelík he was regarded as an outstanding exponent of the Ševčík method and the Czech violin school, and was widely acclaimed for his warmth of tone, expressive ardour and stylistic purity. He spent two years in Russia from 1907 as professor at the Odessa Conservatory, leader of the Odessa Czech Quartet and of the Duke of Mecklenburg's private quartet at St Petersburg. In 1921 he became Ševčík's assistant at the Prague Conservatory, and in 1928 gave up concert appearances to devote himself to teaching. He was professor at the Masters' School of the Prague Conservatory from 1924 to 1943, with two years (1939–40) as rector there. His leading pupils included Alexandr Plocek, Josef Suk (ii) and Emil Zathureczky. He composed small works for violin and piano in neo-Romantic style, with some songs and choruses, and published a revision of his father's violin primer, Počátky hry na housle ('The beginnings of violin playing', Prague, 3/1945).

WRITINGS

'Kus svéživotopisu' [A piece of autobiography], i, Lyra, xix (1902)
'Preludii e intermezzi', Sborník na paměť 125 let konservatoře hudby v Praze [Commemorative volume for the 125th anniversary of the Prague Conservatory], ed. V. Blažek (Prague, 1936), 380

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS
B. Urban: Mistr Jaroslav Kocian (Kolín, 1926)
C. Sychra, ed.: Jaroslav Kocian: Sborník statí a vzpomínek [Collection of articles and recollections] (Prague, 1953)
A. Šlajs: Jaroslav Kocian (Pardubice, 1958)

ALENA NĚMCOVÁ

Kocian Quartet. Czech string quartet. It was founded at the Prague Academy of Musical Arts in 1972 as the New String Quartet by Pravoslav Kohout, Jan Odstrčil (b 1944), Jiří Najnar and Václav Bernášek (b 1944), under the guidance of Antonín Kohout of the Smetana Quartet. In 1975 Pavel Hůla (b 1952) replaced Pravoslav Kohout as leader and the group took the name of the Czech violin virtuoso Jaroslav Kocian. Its Prague début was made at the 1976 Spring Festival and its British début at the Wigmore Hall, London, in 1992. From 1987 to 1991 it was an official ensemble of the Czech PO. In 1993 Najnar was replaced on the viola by Zbynek Pad'ourek (b 1966). The quartet has a wide repertory and has won particular praise for its performances and recordings of the music of Mozart, Fibich, Schulhoff and Hindemith. The Czech composers Fried, Kašlík, Kubička, Kvěch, Loudová, Riedelbauch and Tichý have dedicated works to it.

TULLY POTTER

Kocsár, Miklós (b Debrecen, 21 Dec 1933). Hungarian composer. After attending the Debrecen Music School he became a pupil of Farkas at the Liszt Academy of Music (1954–9). From 1963 he was director of music and conductor at the Madách Theatre. He joined the staff of the Budapest Conservatory in 1972, and served as head of composition there from 1974 to 1984; in 1984–5 he was head of the music section of Hungarian Radio. He has received the Erkel Prize twice (1973, 1980), the title Artist of Merit (1987) and the Bartók-Pásztory Prize (1992).

Kocsár has concentrated on writing vocal and chamber music, particularly works for woodwind. From the roots of the Bartókian tradition, he developed an individual style which, while essentially vocal in inspiration, proved successful in instrumental as well as vocal genres, and in its harmonic as well as melodic aspects. The quest for clarity of structure and the reinterpretation of traditional forms is common to many of his works. His oratorio Az éjszaka képei ('Visions of the Night') was written for the opening concert of the 1988 Europa Cantat 10 festival in Hungary.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Kürtverseny [Hn Conc.], 1957; Serenata, str, 1957–71; Capriccio, 1961; Változatok zenekarra [Variations for Orch], 1977; Metmorphoses, 1978; Sequenze, str, 1980; Conc. in memoriam Z.H., hn, chbr orch, 1983; Elégia, bn/vc, chbr orch, 1985; Formazioni, 1986; Vc Conc., 1993–4; Ballata sinfonica, 1994; Conc. da camera, vn, chbr orch, 1995; Sinfonietta, str, 1996

Choral: Hegyi legények [Mountain Lads] (cant.), male chorus, brass, perc, 1957; Suhanj, szerelem [Glide Away, Love] (J. Joyce), chorus, pf, 1961; Évszakok zenéje [Music of the Seasons] (L. Áprily), female chorus, 1967; Tűz, te gyönyörű [Fire, you Miracle] (L. Nagy), 1970; Liliomdal [Lily Song] (Nagy), 1971; Három női kar [3 Female Choruses] (Nagy), 1971–2; Tűzciterák [Fire Zithers] (Nagy), female vv, 1973; Csili-csali nóták [7 Children's Choruses] (S. Weöres), 1977; Cat and Dog (J. Kirkup, E. Farjeon), children's chorus, 1978; 6 Choruses (C. Sandburg), female chorus, 1979; Csodafiú-szarvas [Wonderboy Stag] (Nagy), 1981; Mégis mondom Damion [I will Invoke you Demon] (ancient folk prayer), 1985; Az éjszaka képei [Visions of the Night] (orat, F.Juhász), Mez, Bar, chorus, orch, 1987; Missa, A, unison vv, 1991–2; Hegyet hágék, lőtöt lépék [I go up Mountains, I go down Slopes] (ancient folk prayer), 1992; Szent Antal tüze [The Fire of St Anthony] (ancient folk prayer), 1992; Keresztvetés, oh hajnal, hajnal, hálog hasadj meg [Crossing Oneself, Oh Dawn, Dawn, Fall, Cataract] (ancient folk prayers), 1993; Téli alkony [Winter Nightfall] (S. Kányádi), unison vv, 1993; Salve regina, unison vv, 1995; Valaki jár a fák hegyén [Someone is Walking on the Treetops] (Kányádi), female chorus, 1995; Magnificat chorus, str, perc, opt. org, 1996; Missa seconda, children's chorus, org, 1997

Chbr and solo inst: Dialoghi, bn, pf, 1964–5; Ungaresca, (ob, cl)/(fl, cl)/(2 cl), 1968; Variazioni, wind qnt, 1968; Repliche, fl, zimbalo ungherese/hpd, 1971; Improvvisazioni, pf, 1972; Sextet, brass, 1972; Repliche no.2, hn, cimb, 1976; Capricorn Conc., fl, ens, 1978; Repliche no.3, cimb, 1981; Episodi, ob, str, 1982; 7 változat [7 Variations], va, 1983; Echos no.1, hn, 1984; Wind Qnt no.3, 1984; Quintetto d'ottoni, 2 tpt, hn, trbn, tuba, 1986; Suite, gui, 1986; Echos no.2, 2 hn, 1989; Rhapsody, trbn, pf, perc, 1989; Variations, vc, 1989; Trio, str, 1990; Music, 4 trbn, 4 perc, 1991; Hang-szín-játékok [Sounds-Colours-Games], 2 fl, 1993; Notturno, pf, 1996; Varázsdoboz [Magic Box], 2 fl, 1996

Solo vocal: Lamenti (F. García Lorca), S, pf, 1966–7; Magányos ének [Solitary Song] (cycle, A. József), S, ens, 1969; Három Petőfi-dal [3 Petőfi Songs], Bar, pf, 1973; Kassák-dalok [Kassák Songs], Mez, fl, cimb, 1976; A félelem felhői [Clouds of Fear] (Kassák), Mez, cimb, 1992; Kányádi-dalok [Kányádi Songs], Mez, pf, 1994

Principal publisher: Editio Musica, Hungaroton, Kodály Institut

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Földes: Harmincasok: Beszélgetések magyar zeneszerzőkkel [Those in their thirties: conversations with Hungarian composers] (Budapest, 1969)
Contemporary Hungarian Composers (Budapest, 1970, 5/1989)
G. Kroó: A magyar zeneszerzés 30 éve [30 years of Hungarian composition] (Budapest, 1975)
M. Feuer: 50 muzsikus műhelyében [In the workshop of 50 musicians] (Budapest, 1976)
B.A. Varga: 3 kérdés, 82 zeneszerző [3 questions, 82 composers] (Budapest, 1986)
R. Gerencsér: disc notes, Miklós Kocsár: Concerto in memoriam ZH – Sequenze – Episodi – Elegia – Five Moments, HCD 31188 (1994)

MELINDA BERLÁSZ

Kocsis, Zoltán (b Budapest, 30 May 1952). Hungarian pianist and composer. He studied with Pál Kadosa, Ferenc Rados and György Kurtág at the Liszt Academy of Music in Budapest, obtaining his diploma in 1973. As a student he caused a sensation when in 1970 he won the Hungarian Radio Beethoven Competition. The following year he made his first tour of the USA, and in 1972 appeared in London and at the Salzburg and Holland festivals. He was soon recognized as an outstanding pianist, and quickly developed an international career. He has an impressive technique, and his forthright, strongly rhythmic playing is nevertheless deeply felt and never mechanical. Kocsis has a natural affinity for Bach, but is also a fine exponent of contemporary music and has given the first performances of works by Kurtág. He has also worked as composer with the avant-garde group the New Studio. Among his recordings are all Bach's concertos, some noted Debussy discs and Bartók's Concertos nos.1 and 2, Sonata for two pianos and Contrasts. He was appointed to teach at the Liszt Academy in 1976, and in 1983 was a co-founder of the Budapest Festival Orchestra. He was awarded the Liszt Prize in 1973 and the Kossuth Prize in 1978.

PÉTER P. VÁRNAI/R

Koczalski, Raoul [Raul] (Armand Georg) (b Warsaw, 3 Jan 1884; d Poznań, 24 Nov 1948). Polish pianist and composer. A child prodigy of sensational attainments, he had given nearly 1000 performances by the age of 12. His only significant teacher was Chopin's pupil Karol Mikuli, with whom Koczalski underwent intensive instruction for four summers from 1892 in Lwów. He was thus initiated into a seemingly authentic tradition of Chopin interpretation that marks his 1930s recordings of much of the Polish composer's oeuvre as a source of considerable documentary importance. Koczalski lived in France, Germany and Sweden, before returning to Poland after World War II, where he settled in Poznań, remaining active as a recitalist to the time of his death. Although remembered primarily as a Chopin player of great refinement, supple technique and authority of idiom, he also performed the complete cycle of Beethoven piano sonatas, as well as other repertory. Koczalski composed more than 70 virtuoso works for piano, many of which are founded on Polish national melodies, as well as two operas, Rymond (Elberfeld, 1902) and Die Sühne (Mühlhausen, 1909).

WRITINGS

Frédéric Chopin: Betrachtungen, Skizzen, Analysen (Cologne, 1936)
Über die Aufführung Chopinscher Werke (nach Hinweisungen Mikulis) (n.p., n.d.)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Vogel: Raul Koczalski (Leipzig and Warsaw, 1896)
M. Paruszewska: Biographische Skizze und künstlerische Laufbahn Raul Koczalskis (Poznań, 1936)

JAMES METHUEN-CAMPBELL

Koczirz, Adolph (b Wscherowan [now Všeruby, nr Plzeň], Bohemia, 2 April 1870; d Vienna, 22 Feb 1941). Austrian musicologist. After studying law he obtained a post at the Ministry of Finance (1891), where he worked until 1935. In his spare time he studied musicology with Adler and took the doctorate in 1903 at Vienna University with a dissertation on the lutenist Hans Judenkünig. For the next 20 years he lectured on lute and guitar music, particularly on tablatures, at the Musikwissenschaftliches Institut of Vienna University. Through his research Koczirz fostered appreciation of the lute and guitar and the performance of their repertories, and was considered the leading authority and pioneer in this field. The principles of the transcription of lute tablature, which he drew up in 1909 in collaboration with Dent, Ecorcheville and Wolf, are still valuable. He edited two volumes of Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich. Koczirz was also interested in the history of other music in Vienna in the 16th century.

WRITINGS

Der Lautenist Hans Judenkünig (diss., U. of Vienna, 1903); see also SIMG, vi (1904–5), 237–49
'Zur Geschichte der Gitarre in Wien', Musikbuch aus Österreich, iv (1907), 11–18
'Österreichische Lautenmusik zwischen 1650 und 1720', SMw, v (1918), 49–96 [repr. in DTÖ, l, Jg.xxv/2 (1918)]
'Die Fantasien des Melchior de Barberis für die siebensaitige Gitarre (1549)', ZMw, iv (1921–2), 11–17
'Über die Fingernageltechnik bei Saiteninstrumenten', Studien zur Musikgeschichte: Festschrift für Guido Adler (Vienna, 1930/R), 164–7
'Die Auflösung der Hofmusikkapelle nach dem Tode Kaiser Maximilians I.', ZMw, xiii (1930–31), 531–5

EDITIONS

Österreichische Lautenmusik im XVI. Jahrhundert, DTÖ, xxxvii, Jg.xviii/2 (1911)
Österreichische Lautenmusik zwischen 1650 und 1720, DTÖ, l, Jg.xxv/2 (1918) with L. Nowak and A. Pfalz: Das deutsche Gesellschaftslied in Österreich von 1480–1550, DTÖ, lxxii, Jg.xxxvii/2 (1930)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (O. Wessely)
E.K. Blümml: 'Dr. Adolf Koczirz', Zeitschrift für die Gitarre, iv (1925), no.5, p.11 [incl. list of writings]; no.6, p.17; no.7, p.14; no.8, p.14; no.9, p.10
R. Haas and J. Zuth, eds.: Festschrift Adolph Koczirz zum 60. Geburtstag (Vienna, 1930)

RUDOLF KLEIN

Koczwara, František [Franz; Kotzwara, Francis] (b ?Prague, *c*1750; d London, 2 Sept 1791). Bohemian instrumentalist and composer. He seems to have been something of a vagabond, although his mature career centred on England. His music was published in London from about 1775: a catalogue issued by the publisher John Welcker in that year lists collections of trio sonatas and string quartets; a second set of trios was added to the plate about 1776. The title pages for the quartets op.3 and the trios for various combinations list the author at Bath; the first edition of op.5 gives a London address; and in the late 1780s he was in Ireland. Back in London he took part in the Concert of Ancient Music and in the Handel Commemoration of May 1791. At the time of his death he played the double bass at the King's Theatre (Parke). According to Pohl, he had been called there from Ireland by the patentee Gallini in 1790; however, the theatre was in the process of being rebuilt that year and was not reopened until 26 March 1791 (in autumn 1790 Gallini and Giardini were producing opera at the Little Haymarket theatre). Fétis claimed to have met and performed for Koczwara while a child in his father's house in Mons, though his dating of the event (1792) is mistaken. According to Fétis, Koczwara played not only the viola and double bass, but also the piano, violin, cello, oboe, flute, bassoon and cittern.

Though it commemorated a much earlier event (1757), Koczwara's The Battle of Prague was first published while he was in Dublin about 1788. It had phenomenal success and was widely reprinted in London, the USA and on the Continent (nearly 40 issues have survived). First published with accompaniments, it also became a standard parlour piece for solo piano and in Boston it was 'indespensable to climax every concert'. Appearing shortly before widespread political upheaval in Europe, it served as the model for a host of imitations describing Napoleonic engagements. The Siege of Quebec, also attributed to Koczwara, is instead an arrangement by W.B. de Krifft appropriating some material from Koczwara.

According to Parke, Koczwara was adept at imitating the styles of other composers and sold to certain publishers forged works of popular continental composers such as Haydn and Pleyel. Most of his own works are light, pleasant and melodious, concocted for the pleasure of musical amateurs. There are unaccountable lacunae in the numeration of his works.

Koczwara gained special notoriety by the manner of his death, with which most early accounts of him are primarily concerned. He was reputed to have had unusual vices, and was accidentally hanged while conducting an experiment in a house of ill repute. Susan Hill, his accomplice in the experiment, was tried for murder at the Old Bailey on 16 September 1791 and was acquitted.

WORKS

published in London unless otherwise stated

op.
1	3 serenades, vn, va, vc, 2 hn (Amsterdam, *c*1775)
—	6 Sonatas, 2 vn, bc (*c*1775)
3	6 Quartets, 2 vn, va, vc (*c*1775)
—	6 Sonatas (1775); 3 for vn, fl, vc; 2 for 2 vn, vc; 1 for 2 va, vc, 2 hn
5	6 Trios, 2 vn, 2 hn, bc (*c*1776)
8	6 Easy Duetts, vn, fl (*c*1780)
—	The Lover's Petition, 1v, hpd/pf (*c*1780)
9	6 Trios, 2 vn, vc (*c*1783)
10	A Periodical Overture in 8 pts, no.1(–4), 2 ob/fl, 2 hn, str (*c*1785), Bland's catalogue also lists nos.15–18; no.1 arr. pf, vn (*c*1795)
13	The Battle of Prague, programmatic sonata, pf/hpd, vn, vc, drum ad lib (Dublin, *c*1788); also pubd under other op. nos.; arr. for pf and for 2 pf
33	The Agreeable Surprise, potpourri, pf (Dublin, *c*1791)
34	3 Sonatas, hpd/pf, vn acc. (*c*1790)
35	3 Sonatas, hpd/pf, vn acc. (*c*1790)
36	3 sonatines, pf (Mannheim, *c*1790)
37	6 Easy Duetts, 2 vn (*c*1790)
—	6 Songs, 1v, pf/harp (*c*1790); some repr. individually
38	3 Sonatas, hpd/pf, vn acc. (*c*1791)
—	3 Solos or Sonatas, va, bc (*c*1795)

1 duet, pf/hpd 4 hands, as no.3 in [6] Duetts (1790), pubd serially; 3 duets, vn, va, in 6 Favorite Duetts, vn, va (*c*1800); other pieces in 18th-century anthologies

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; FétisB; GerberL; GerberNL; NewmanSCE

Modern Propensities, or An Essay on the Art of Strangling . . . Illustrated with Several Anecdotes . . . with Memoirs of Susanna Hill, and a Summary of her Trial at the Old Bailey on Friday, Sept. 16, 1791, on the Charge of Hanging Francis Kotzwara at her Lodgings in Vine Street (London, *c*1792)

W.T. Parke: Musical Memoirs (London, 1830/R), i, 181

C.F. Pohl: Mozart und Haydn in London, ii (Vienna, 1867/R), 136

H.E. Johnson: Musical Interludes in Boston, 1795–1830 (New York, 1943/R), 70

A. Loesser: Men, Women and Pianos (New York, 1954/R), 243, 449

L.P. Pruett: 'Napoleonic Battles in Keyboard Music of the Nineteenth Century', Early Keyboard Journal, vi–vii (1988–9), 73–89

T. Röder: 'Beethovens Sieg über die Schlachtenmusik: opus 91 und die Tradition der Battaglia', Beethoven: zwischen Revolution und Restauration, ed. H. Lühning and S. Brandenburg (Bonn, 1989), 229–58

RONALD R. KIDD

KODA [Selskabet til Forvaltning af Internationale Komponistrettigheder i Danmark]. See COPYRIGHT, §VI (under Denmark).

Kodallı, Nevit (b Mersin, 12 Dec 1924). Turkish composer and conductor. He studied from 1939 to 1947 at the Ankara State Conservatory with Akses, and from 1948 in Paris with Honegger and Nadia Boulanger. He returned to Turkey in 1953 and, after teaching at the Ankara Conservatory for two years, was appointed conductor at the Ankara State Opera, where his two operas have been produced regularly. Since 1962 he has been a composer at the State Theatre. Kodallı's works retain classical forms, but make use of Turkish folk music material. They include an oratorio (1950), two operas (1955, 1963) and a cello concerto (1983). Most of his music is published by Mills and in the editions of the Ankara State Conservatory, State Opera and Philharmonic Society.

FARUK YENER

Kodály, Zoltán (b Kecskemét, 16 Dec 1882; d Budapest, 6 March 1967). Hungarian composer, ethnomusicologist and educationist. With Bartók, he was one of the creators of a new Hungarian art music based on folk sources, and he laid the foundation for the development of a broad-based and musically literate culture.

1. Life. 2. Music. 3. Research and education.

1. LIFE. His father, Frigyes (or Frederic, 1853–1926), worked for the Hungarian state railways as station master at Szob (1883–4), Galánta (now Galanta, Slovakia, 1885–92) and Nagyszombat (now Trnava, Slovakia, 1892–1910). Thus Kodály spent his first 18 years in the Hungarian countryside. At home he became acquainted with various musical instruments and with some Classical masterpieces – his father played the violin and his mother sang and played the piano – and while at the elementary school in Galánta he came into contact with the unspoilt folktunes sung by his classmates. He attended the Archiepiscopal Grammar School in Nagyszombat, a historic town of rich cultural traditions, where he passed all his examinations with distinction, showing a particular proficiency in literature and languages. Concurrently he learnt to play the piano, violin, viola and cello with very little tuition and to such a standard that he was able to take part in chamber music at home and in the performances of the school orchestra. He also sang in the church choir, and he began to compose. Some of his early pieces were performed: the Overture in D minor for full orchestra in February 1898; the Trio in E♭ major for two violins and viola in February 1899.

Kodály took the school-leaving examination in June 1900 and left Nagyszombat to read Hungarian and German at Budapest University. There, and at Eötvös College, an institution noted for its rigorous instruction, he received a broad education, and at the same time he began studies at the Academy of Music. Taking composition with Koessler, he received diplomas in composition (1904) and teaching (1905), and in April 1906 he was awarded the PhD for his thesis A Magyar népdal strófaszerkezete ('The stanzaic structure of Hungarian folksong'). He had found material for this in the existing collections and in Vikár's recordings, but also in the fruits of his own collecting tours, which began in August 1905 and continued for many decades; the thesis reflects his interest and scholarship in the interdisciplinary aspects of music and language. It was in this field that there first developed a close contact between Kodály and Bartók. Their cooperation was by no means restricted to coordinating methods for collecting folksongs: it became a lasting friendship. Bartók was to write of Kodály in his autobiographical notes (1918): 'by his clear insight and sound critical sense he has been able to give, in every department of music, both invaluable advice and helpful warnings'. And in his radio talk 'Bartók emlékezete' ('Bartók remembered') (3 November 1955), Kodály recalled the basis and beginning of their collaboration: 'The vision of an educated Hungary, reborn from the people, rose before us. We decided to devote our lives to its realization'. Their first joint project was the publication of Magyar népdalok ('Hungarian folksongs') (1906), whose preface, formulated by Kodály alone, set out their programme.

In the same year, on 22 October, Kodály's Nyári este ('Summer Evening') was performed at the Academy of Music diploma concert and, as a result, he received a modest scholarship for foreign study. He left in December for Berlin, moving from there to Paris the next April. The most memorable experience of his six months away – one that was to remain with him throughout his life – was the encounter with the music of Debussy. After his return to Hungary and another folksong collecting tour, Kodály was appointed professor at the Academy of Music. He lectured first on music theory and then, in 1908, took over the first-year composition students from Koessler. Other teaching responsibilities included harmony, counterpoint, form, orchestration and score-reading; however, vocal polyphony and musical literacy emerged as the composer's primary focus. Many of his students became internationally recognized, among them Dorati, Lang, Ormandy, Seiber, Lajos Bárdos and Jenő Ádám.

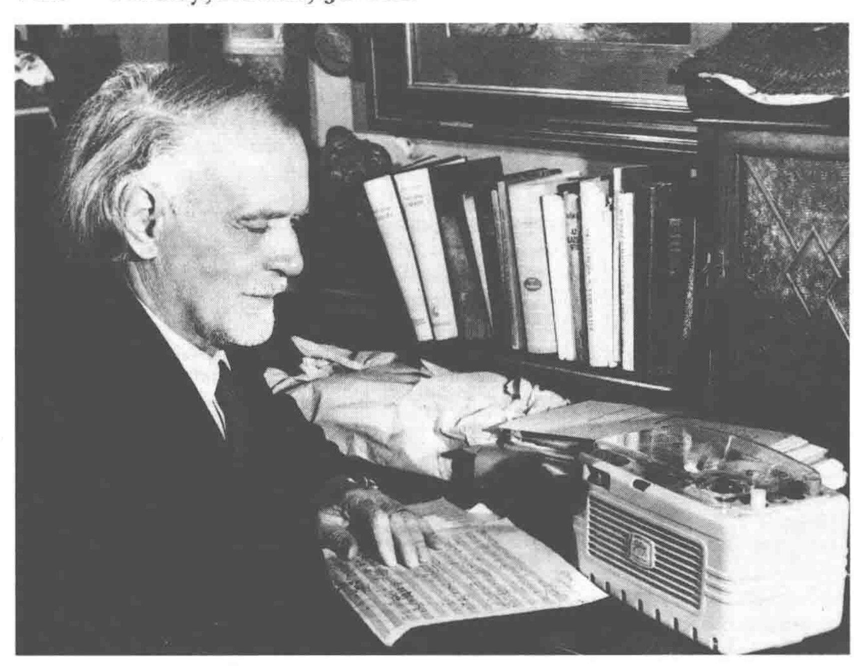
In spring 1910 Kodály received his first public performances. A concert was devoted to his music in Budapest on 17 March, when Bartók and the Waldbauer-Kerpely Quartet played his opp.2, 3 and 4. Some of his piano pieces were played in Paris to an enthusiastic audience, and in Zürich the Willem de Boer Quartet gave the First Quartet on 29 May. On 3 August of the same year Kodály married Emma Sándor (or Schlesinger), herself a talented composer, pianist, poet and translator.

The next year Kodály, Bartók and others formed the New Hungarian Music Society to ensure the careful performance of contemporary works. But within a few years the organization had ceased activities, faced with public indifference and official resistance. The publication of a collection of Hungarian folksongs foundered for the same reasons. In 1913 Kodály set out 'Az új egyetemes népdalgyűjtemény tervezete' ('A project for a new universal collection of folksongs'), which he and Bartók submitted to the Kisfaludy Society. The plan was turned down, but the two continued work until World War I put an end to collecting tours. Kodály then carried on his work in composition and in the scientific classification of folk material, and between November 1917 and April 1919 he worked as a music critic, publishing nearly 50 reviews in the literary magazine Nyugat and later in the liberal daily paper Pesti napló. Of particular interest are his writings on the importance of folk music and his analyses of Bartók's music; the latter became the basis of aesthetics in Bartók's music.



In 1919, after the bourgeois revolution, the Academy of Music was raised to university status, with Dohnányi as director and Kodály as his deputy. Kodály kept that post for the 133 days of the Hungarian Republic of Councils and even participated, with Bartók and Dohnányi, in the work of the music directory under Reinitz. After the fall of the republic Kodály was faced with disciplinary action which was whipped up into a campaign against him and his work, with the result that he was relieved of his post as deputy director and could not resume teaching until two years later. In addition, the war had put a stop to a promising international career. His isolation abroad and at home was broken by a contract with Universal Edition, which began to publish his scores in 1921, and by the resounding success of his Psalmus hungaricus. This was a setting of the translation of Psalm lv by the 16th-century preacher-poet Mihály Kecskeméti Vég, composed as a large-scale oratorio for tenor, chorus and orchestra within the space of two months. The première was conducted by Dohnányi on 19 November 1923 to mark the 50th anniversary of the union of Pest, Buda and Óbuda into Budapest, and the first performance outside Hungary took place under Andreae in Zürich on 18 June 1926. It marked a turning-point in the international recognition of Kodály's art.

With the success of the Psalmus hungaricus Kodály had made a fresh start, and his career gained further momentum with the premières of the Singspiel Háry János (Budapest, 16 October 1926) and of the six-movement suite drawn from it (Barcelona, 24 March 1927). These works consolidated Kodály's stature the world over: Toscanini and Mengelberg, Ansermet and Furtwängler were among the first to include them in their programmes. The composer himself also appeared as the conductor of his own music after his début at Amsterdam in April 1927. Later that year he conducted the Psalmus in Cambridge (30 November) and London (4 December). However, Kodály's distinctive revision of Hungarian art music was not well received by all; his artistic vision and the compositional integrity of his students were denounced, for example, in the German periodical Neues Pester Journal (28 May 1925) by Béla Diósy. Denied publication by the Neues Pester Journal, Kodály's response, 'Tizenhárom fiatal zeneszerző' (Thirteen young Hungarian composers), appeared in the Budapesti Hirlap (14 June 1925); in the article he challenged musical conservatism and defended his characteristic juxtaposition of the traditional with the experimental. Three years later, in 'The Folk Songs of Hungary' (Zenei szemle, xii/3–4, pp.55–8, 1928), Bartók honoured Kodály's artistic vision:

> If I were to name the composer whose works are the most perfect embodiment of the Hungarian spirit, I would answer, Kodály. His work proves his faith in the Hungarian spirit. The obvious explanation is that all Kodály's composing activity is rooted only in Hungarian soil, but the deep inner reason is his unshakable faith and trust in the constructive power and future of his people.

Increasingly frequent appearances abroad did not divert Kodály's attention from work to be done in Hungary. He extended his educational activities, giving particular attention after 1925 to the musical training of young people. For this purpose he produced singing and reading exercises and composed choruses, such as Villő ('The Straw Guy') and Túrót eszik a cigány ('See the Gypsies Munching Cheese'), which resuscitated the Hungarian choral movement. He gave lectures, wrote articles, conducted concerts all over the country and waged a veritable battle against musical illiteracy and semi-education. His ex-pupils were involved in the struggle, helping him as conductors, teachers or publishers. As early as the beginning of the 1930s he was able, without any official support and in the teeth of renewed press attacks, to start the Singing Youth movement on a national scale. And within ten years the time had come for a radical change in elementary-school music education.

Meanwhile, Kodály's work as a composer and scholar was developing. In 1927 he had supplemented Háry János with a few new numbers, of which the Szinházi nyitány ('Theatre Overture'), supplied with a concert ending, makes an independent piece. Székely fonó ('The Transylvanian Spinning-Room') was completed by the expansion of a scene written in 1924. This folk ballad of operatic dimensions was introduced in Budapest on 24 April 1932 and scored a considerable success at La Scala on 14 January 1933. Between 1924 and 1932 Kodály published arrangements for voice and piano of 57 folksongs and ballads in 11 books under the title Magyar népzene ('Hungarian folk music'); and in 1929 he orchestrated the Marosszéki táncok ('Dances of Marosszék'), composed for piano, during 1923–7, and, encouraged by Toscanini, reworked the early Summer Evening. Several large-scale compositions were written to commission: the Galántai táncok ('Dances of Galanta') for the 80th anniversary of the Budapest Philharmonic Society (1933), the Budavári Te Deum for the 250th anniversary of the recapture of Buda from the Turks (1936), the orchestral variations on Felszállott a páva ('The Peacock') for the 50th anniversary of the Concertgebouw (1939) and the Concerto for Orchestra for that of the Chicago SO (1940). The last two were published by Boosey & Hawkes, since Kodály did not wish to retain his contacts with Austria after the Anschluss. Indeed, he was opposed to the shift to the right within Hungary and, with Bartók, he was among the first to protest against the draft bill of 1938 instituting racial discrimination.

1. Zoltán Kodály

In 1927 Kodály launched the series of publications Magyar zenei dolgozatok ('Hungarian Musical Essays') to provide a forum for the emergent Hungarian musicology. He lectured for a few years from 1930 on folk music at the University of Budapest and later at the Free University. His comprehensive summary A magyar népzene ('Hungarian Folk Music') was published in 1937, having been preceded by numerous preparatory studies, and from 1934 he was engaged in the task of editing the collection of folk music, work which he had to continue alone after Bartók's emigration. At Kodály's request the ministry delegated him to work under the auspices of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences, beginning in autumn 1940. From then on he retained only a course in Hungarian folk music at the Academy of Music, continuing to teach this even after his retirement in 1942. That year, Kodály's 60th, was declared 'Kodály Year' by the Society of Hungarian Choruses; the Hungarian Ethnological Society published an album in his honour, and music journals made special issues. These expressions of respect and appreciation forced the authorities to give some tokens of recognition: the government awarded him the cross of the Hungarian Order of Merit, and the Academy of Sciences elected him to corresponding membership in 1943.

Kodály continued to compose during the war, notably to patriotic-revolutionary verses of Petőfi in Csatadal ('Battle Song'), Rabhazának fia ('The Son of an Enslaved Country') and Isten csodája ('God's Mercy'). He helped save people from persecution until he and his wife had to seek refuge in the cellar of a Budapest convent, where he completed the Missa brevis, a version for solo voices, chorus and orchestra of an earlier organ mass. He saw out the Battle of Budapest in the shelter of the opera house; the Missa brevis received its first performance in a cloakroom there. Then, with the establishment of peace, a series of institutions invited him to take part in their work: he was elected a deputy in the national assembly and chairman of the board of directors of the Academy of Music; he was made president of the Hungarian Art Council and of the Free Organization of Musicians; and he was elected to full membership and then honorary membership of the Academy of Sciences, of which he served as president from 1946 to 1949.

After a lapse of nearly a decade Kodály made a concert tour (September 1946 to June 1947) which took him to the UK, the USA and the USSR, everywhere conducting his own works, and he again conducted in western Europe in 1948 and 1949. On 15 March 1948 the Budapest State Opera House introduced Czinka Panna, to a text by Balázs, and in 1951 the National Folk Ensemble gave the first performance of the Kállai kettős ('Kálló Double Dance') for chorus and orchestra. Kodály received high government decorations (1947, 1952, 1962) and three Kossuth Prizes (1948, 1952, 1957), and the Academy of Sciences issued commemorative volumes for his 70th, 75th and 80th birthdays. He was accorded honorary doctorates by the universities of Budapest (1957), Oxford (1960), East Berlin (1964) and Toronto (1966), and honorary membership of the Belgian Academy of Sciences (1957), the Moscow Conservatory (1963) and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences (1963). In addition, he was made president of the International Folk Music Council (1961) and honorary president of the International Society of Music Education (1964). The Herder Prize was awarded to him in 1965 in recognition of his work in furthering East–West cultural relations.

Kodály's wife died on 22 November 1958 but he remarried on 18 December 1959 and right up to his death continued to engage in a wide variety of activities. Each year between 1960 and 1966 he travelled on long trips abroad, lecturing in English, French, German and Italian, and taking the chair at various conferences. In the Philip Maunce Deneke Lecture given at Oxford on 3 May 1960, for example, he discussed the distinctive structures of melody and rhythm common to Hungarian folksongs along with a broader notion of how art music evolved from folk music. As in other lectures, he also championed ethnomusicological investigation as the source of artistic inspiration. In Hungary, thanks to the support of the cultural authorities, he lived to see the realization of his ambitious plans for ethnomusicology and education. The first five volumes of A magyar népzene tára/Corpus musicae popularis hungaricae appeared between 1950 and 1967, and daily music education according to his principles was introduced in 120 elementary schools during the same period. His last major compositions – which include Zrinyi szózata ('Hymn of Zrinyi') for baritone and chorus (1954), the Symphony (1961), Mohács for chorus (1965) and the Laudes organi for chorus and organ (1966) – show his creative powers undiminished.

2. MUSIC. Kodály's compositional career spans seven decades, from his first surviving manuscripts (1897) to his last finished work (1966), and even beyond these limits: by his own account, he began to improvise songs at the age of four; and fragments in his estate indicate that he kept on composing until his last days. This exceptionally long period of creativity is entirely devoid of spectacular turns: his individual style was already formed by 1905–7. Earlier pieces were youthful attempts conceived in the spirit of Viennese Classicism (up to 1900) or of the German Romantics, particularly Brahms (1900–04). They include some surprisingly mature compositions, such as Este ('Evening') for chorus (1904) and the Adagio for violin and piano (1905).

Kodály's subsequent development was profoundly influenced by his folksong experiences and by his acquaintance with the works of Debussy. His music emphasized both a Classical and folk heritage with melody serving as the foundation of his style. In addition, he employed a broad spectrum of rhythms ranging from the animated beat of Hungarian verbunkos to the expressive senza misura of the Baroque. The influence of Mozart and Haydn is revealed in the character of a number of melodies. Beyond this, his artistic personality was enriched by the absorption of Gregorian chant, Palestrina and Bach keyboard works. But he possessed sufficient creative powers to bring about a synthesis of these various influences, and the prominent part played by Hungarian folk intonation throughout his career also guarded him against any heterogeneity of style. It says much that Kodály has been by turns described both as a traditionalist, despite his awareness of early 20th-century trends, and as a modernist, though his music has its roots in peasant culture. The man who knew his music best, Bartók, was to write (1921):

> Kodály's compositions are characterized in the main by rich melodic invention, a perfect sense of form, a certain predilection for melancholy and uncertainty. He does not seek Dionysian intoxication – he strives for inner contemplation ... His music is not of the kind described nowadays as modern. It has nothing to do with the new atonal, bitonal and polytonal music – everything in it is based on the principle of tonal balance. His idiom is nevertheless new; he says things that have never been uttered before and demonstrates thereby that the tonal principle has not lost its raison d'être as yet.

Later (1927) Bartók added: 'Kodály ... is a great master of form and possesses a striking individuality; he works in a concentrated fashion and despises any sensation, false brilliance, any extraneous effect'.

The creative activity that lasted throughout Kodály's long life was only once interrupted: in 1921–2 he did not write anything. The reasons were both external and internal. Previously he had composed almost exclusively in the genres of song and chamber music; thereafter he contributed least in these spheres. His mature output may be divided into two major periods, with the first dominated by lyrical elements and the second dramatic ones, while his epic leanings were manifested time and again in both. By contrast with Bartók, Kodály was a vocally orientated composer for whom melody was always of primary importance. This he admitted in symbolic manner at the beginning and end of his career: he marked the song cycle Énekszó: dalok népi versekre ('16 Songs on Hungarian Popular Words') as his op.1, and in one of his last writings (1966) he declared: 'Our age of mechanization leads along a road ending with man himself as a machine; only the spirit of singing can save us from this fate'. Music and text are of a piece in Kodály's work: they breathe together. His choruses and songs – the 11 books of folksong arrangements as well as the original compositions – are difficult to translate because of their Hungarian versification. Besides this, he chose texts from those poets, such as Dániel Berzsenyi and Zsigmond Móricz, most Hungarian in character; the seven songs of the Megkésett melódiák ('Belated melodies') op.6, the Két ének ('Two Songs') op.5 and the Három ének ('Three Songs') op.14 sing the music of the Hungarian language, to poems both old and new. Molnár, Kodály's first biographer, justly described him as the creator of 'the genuine Hungarian art song'.

However, choruses make up the bulk of Kodály's output. Few 20th-century composers, including Britten, show a greater knowledge of the genre or a greater devotion to it. The energy contained in his choral works is generated from the text, the folk idiom and the composer's vivid melodic invention. These unaccompanied works, often folksong arrangements, are marked by natural and logical construction that develops through variation technique and a free contrapuntal style. Kodály's choral settings for male, female and mixed choruses include the outstanding Öregek ('The Aged') (1933), Akik mindig elkésnek ('Too Late') (1934) and Norvég leányok ('Norwegian Girls') (1940). The central position, though, is taken by his more than 50 pieces for trebles, unique in the repertory of the 20th century: Villő ('The Straw Guy') (1925), Lengyel László ('King Ladislaus's Men or Magyars and Germans') (1927) and Pünkösdölő ('Whitsuntide') (1929) are among the finest. The culmination of Kodály's a cappella art is the large-scale motet Jézus és a kufárok ('Jesus and the Traders') (1934), in which the biblical text is transformed into a poignant dramatic scene. The use of Baroque-like word symbolism, the alternation of homophonic and polyphonic sections, and the union of linear and vertical writing are all indicative of Kodály's rich technique, placed at the service of the expressive message (fig.2).

Kodály's instrumental style was first developed in solo and chamber compositions, with string chamber works comprising the bulk of his non-vocal compositions until 1920. The two string quartets, opp.2 and 10, represent his early style; in both, melodic material and instrumental treatment reveal folk inspiration. At the same time, the construction of op.10 is highly accomplished, its complex form pointing forward to the quite individual structure of the Budavári Te Deum. The cello sonatas opp.4 (with piano accompaniment) and 8 (solo), the Duo op.7 for violin and cello, and the Serenade op.12 for two violins and viola all bear witness to Kodály's rich melodic invention and excellent sense of balance and proportion, as well as to his ability to achieve strikingly new virtuosity through simple means.

Most of Kodály's orchestral compositions were written after 1920; the first version of Summer Evening was a forerunner of this period and the Symphony a harmonious postscript. The most popular has been the Dances of Galánta, a symphonic poem distinguished by brilliant orchestration and cast in rondo form, taking its material from 18th-century verbunkos music. The Dances of Marosszék, also in rondo form, contains three interludes and a coda which make use of melodies drawn from Kodály's collection of Transylvanian folksongs, while the Concerto for Orchestra exhibits a stylistic association with the Baroque. But the Variations on a Hungarian Folksong 'Felszállott a páva' ('The Peacock') are the most revealing of the composer. The theme is drawn from the most ancient body of Hungarian folk music, that of oriental origin, and the large-scale tripartite composition is a true apotheosis of folksong.

The same can be said of the stage works Háry János and The Transylvanian Spinning-Room. It was Kodály's aim to secure a place in the opera house for Hungarian folk music in its original form, but neither work is an opera as such: Háry János is a Singspiel whose main protagonist is a fictional Transdanubian character who takes part in the Napoleonic wars; The Transylvanian Spinning-Room, a scene from village life, is an operatic ballad, marred by textual incontinuity as well as by excessive surrealism. Both are built primarily on the vocal passages, though the popularity of Háry János was created by the orchestral suite assembled from it. The three odd-numbered movements of the suite are exalted in tone and of folk inspiration; the three even-numbered sections have a mocking, parodistic quality. These last are also a rare expression of Kodály's full-blooded humour.

2. Autograph manuscript of the opening of Kodály's motet 'Jézus és a kufárok', 1934 (private collection)

Kodály's output reached its two culminating points in the oratorios: the Psalmus hungaricus and the Budavári Te Deum. They contain no folk quotations but both, particularly the latter, incorporate a wealth of stylistic elements: Gregorian melodic inflections, Renaissance-like plagal harmony, choral writing in the spirit of Palestrina, Baroque polyphony, the use of the whole-tone mode, and that of the Lydian mode with a raised 5th, which might be described as a median between whole-tone and pentatonic scales (it has been termed 'heptatonia secunda' by Bárdos, who discovered this feature in Kodály's work). With regard to form, the Psalmus hungaricus is a classical rondo and the Te Deum a complex palindrome. And yet both works, from first note to last, exude the spirit of Hungarian folk music. Indeed, everything Kodály composed after Bartók's statements of the 1920s fully confirms them: he was no revolutionary innovator, but a summarizer. Nevertheless, the style he created from the folk monody of ancient, oriental extraction and from the new rich harmony of Western art music is homogeneous, individual and new.

3. Research and education. 'Theories become antiquated but faultlessly published material never does', wrote Kodály in the preface to the second volume of the Corpus musicae popularis hungaricae (1953). That principle guided his entire work. During the late 19th and early 20th centuries, numerous composers turned to their respective native folk musics as an inspiration for composition. For Kodály the music of rural Hungary was always this, but also an object of study in itself. He began with simple folksong publications, 'Mátyusföldi gyüjtes' ('Collection from Mátyusföldi') (1905) and 'Balladák' ('Ballads') (1907), in the magazine Ethnographia. As a result of systematic annual collecting tours he amassed thousands of folksongs, whose analysis and classification led him to write in 1917 his first preparatory study, Ötfokú hangsor a magyar népzenében ('The Pentatonic Scale in Hungarian Folk Music'), a work of fundamental significance. Continued research produced two further studies, Kelemen Kőmies balladája ('The Ballad of Kelemen the Mason') (1918) and Árgirus nótája ('The song of Argirus') (1920). Kodály explains his method of collecting and provides a detailed transcription of the former 35 stanzas of the ballad, thereby throwing light on how variants of folksongs originate through peasant oral tradition. In the second, Kodály examines the connections between the histories of melody and verse.

His next two publications were dedicated to saving old relics from extinction: Erdélyi magyarság: népdalok ('The Hungarians of Transylvania: Folksongs') (1923), published jointly with Bartók, records the valuable melodic style of Székely, detailing 150 songs; and Nagyszalontai gyüjtés ('Nagyszalonta Collection') (1924) reports on the rubato performance tradition of that region. Another study of basic importance followed in Sajátságos dallamszerkezet a cseremisz népzenében ('The Distinctive Melodic Structure of Cheremiss Folk Music') (1934), which presents the similarities between Hungarian and Cheremiss folk music and, through the examination of melodies built on shifting 5ths, sets out the 'dual system' principle (i.e. the unchanged reiteration of the melody in another key a 5th lower).

The achievements of 32 years of research are summarized in A magyar népzene (1937); the 1982 English edition includes new musical examples and numerous addenda selected and drafted by Kodály. Beginning with a general explanation of oral and written folk traditions, the study addresses the significance and classification of folksongs and examines the origins and performance of both traditional and 19th-century Hungarian folksong. Kodály then distinguishes old and new styles, the old associated with isolated peasant communities, the new with cross-cultural communication and distinctive tonal and modal systems. The elements of art music originating in church (Gregorian chant, hymns) and folk settings are discussed, followed by chapters on children's songs and laments, folk instruments and performance practice, and the relations between folk and art music in terms of poetic texts employed. After a number of publications on the history of folklore, the culmination of Kodály's scientific work came with the first issue of the A magyar nepzene tara/Corpus musicae popularis hungaricae in 1951: the ten-volume project had first been drafted by Kodály and Bartók in 1913. A testament to Kodály's scholarly achievement, the work is unprecedented in its attempt to cover an entire musical tradition. The individual volumes contain substantial bibliographies, lists of collectors, notators, localities, syllabic numbers, cadences and rhythmic patterns as well as illustrations and maps. The classification and editing of a body of folksongs that, by the 1950s, had reached a total of 100,000 was guided until his death by Kodály as head of the folk music research group at the Academy of Sciences.

Folk music research constituted the bulk of Kodály's scholarly activity – indeed, of his whole work. However, he also did important work in ethnology, music history, music aesthetics, music criticism, the history of literature, linguistics and language education. In size, his critical and language-educational writings stand out, but all are virtually equal in significance. Besides writing for Hungarian periodicals he published reviews between 1917 and 1925 in the Musikblätter des Anbruch, Revue musicale, the Musical Courier and Il pianoforte. One of his central topics was the music of Bartók, though he also wrote with unerring judgment on composers and performers past and present. From 1937 he made good use of the linguistic studies he had undertaken at university: he initiated pronunciation competitions at Budapest University (1939) in his fight against deteriorating habits of speech, and he was active in the committee for language education (from 1943) under the auspices of the Academy of Sciences.

Of pioneering value also are such works as Néprajz és zenetörténet ('Ethnology and Music History') (1933), Mi a magyar a zenében ('The Hungarian Character in Music') (1939), Népzene és műzene ('Folk Music and Art Music') (1941) and Arany János népdalgyüjteménye ('The Folksong Collection of János Arany') (1952), with Ágost Gyulai. Kodály was convinced that folksong was important not just as a monument of the past but also as a foundation for the future. This view fired him in organizing and popularizing activities aimed at gaining a general recognition for folk music and at creating a homogeneous musical culture. Popularization, he said, could not be 'left for amateurs and self-styled scholars to do. The best are just sufficiently good for the job'. As a scholar Kodály established up-to-date musicology in Hungary and raised it to a level comparable with that achieved in other countries; at the same time he gave a new impetus to ethnomusicology internationally.

In the field of education his work was hardly less important. He lectured on composition at the Academy of Music from 1907 to 1940, undertaking tuition in all the various subjects connected with composing – harmony, counterpoint, form, orchestration and scorereading – to ensure that his pupils developed a unified outlook. He gave particular attention in his teaching to vocal polyphony, and in every field he required an extensive knowledge of the literature. His pupils were taught to be responsible, respectful of their craft and of their public; many of his students have become internationally known composers, conductors, teachers and musicologists.

Kodály first took an interest in the education of the young in 1925, recognizing its importance for the presentation of his nation's artistic traditions in the face of urbanization and technological advancement. He began by writing choruses, lectures and essays, with singing, especially of folksongs – for their simplicity and beauty, their embodiment of heritage and their perfect relationship of music and language – at the heart of his work. His essay 'Gyermekkarok' ('Children's Choruses') (Zenei szemle, xiii/2, pp.1–9, 1929, Eng. trans. in F. Bonis, ed.: The Selected Writings of Zoltán Kodaly, 1974) addressed the importance of early training in music:

> If the child is not filled at least once by the life giving stream of good music during the most susceptible period – between his sixth and 16th years – it will hardly be of any use to him later on. Often a single experience will open the young soul to music for a whole lifetime. This experience cannot be left to chance; it is the duty of the school to provide it.

Starting with the Bicinia hungarica (1937–42), Kodály extended his work to include the publication of singing and reading exercises. His example inspired many others to the re-evaluation of folksongs in detailed terms of melodic interval, rhythm, metre and form to create a sound method of musical instruction. Differing from previous approaches, Kodály believed that the acquisition of musical skills should proceed logically and sequentially from the known to the unknown. He understood that students learn best through direct experience of song and movement presented in familiar frameworks, utilizing the natural faculties of voice and body. The voice is the most intimate and universal of instruments, and the ear is more easily developed through this personal medium. As Kodály's ideas and philosophy of music education developed, Hungarian teachers began to use techniques now associated with his educational concept, including relative solmization, hand signs, rhythmic syllables, and a form of musical shorthand known as stick notation. Although some of these techniques were adopted and adapted from other successful methods, it is their use in combination with a carefully ordered presentation of folksong and art music examples that makes the 'Kodály concept of music education' (also known as the 'Kodály method' or 'Hungarian Method of Music Education') uniquely valuable in the teaching of music at all levels. Usually associated solely with elementary levels of music instruction, his approach has been adapted more recently for the training of professional musicians. Kodály devoted considerable attention to the composition of a series of two- and three-part singing and reading exercises, incorporating stylistic elements of folk music and art music, collectively published by Boosey & Hawkes as The Kodály Choral Method (1937–66). In 1943–4, he also edited, together with György Kerényi, the Iskolai énekgyüjtemény ('Collected Songs for Schools'), a collection of 630 Hungarian and European folksongs and canons arranged in pedagogical sequence; a selection of materials from this volume was published in 1945 and edited with Jenő Ádám, and together they also edited Énekeskönyv az általános iskolák számára ('Songbook for Primary Schools') (1947–8), a comprehensive series written to develop musical literacy.

In order to ensure that music should become an organic part of the school curriculum and that adults should not be lost to great music, Kodály gave more and more attention, from the 1930s onwards, to the choral movement. He travelled up and down the country, giving encouragement, convinced that group singing, and not instrumental skill, was the only basis for a broad musical culture. Educational work assumed even greater importance for him after 1945, when effective state help made it possible for his efforts to bear fruit during his lifetime. In 'Folksong in Pedagogy', Music Educators Journal (1966–7), Kodály stated, 'The final purpose of all this must be to instill in the pupils the understanding and love of the great classics ... These are much nearer to the folksong than is generally recognized, for direct expression and clear form are common in [all] folksongs'.

Kodály is one of the few artists in the 20th century to have achieved work of lasting value in a variety of fields. As a composer and ethnomusicologist he produced a legacy of international worth. In the field of music education his philosophy and innovations led to vast improvements in musical instruction throughout the world, while at home he transformed the cultural awareness of his nation during his lifetime. Since his death the values for which he strove have continued to prosper: training programmes for the Kodály concept have been established in numerous universities and conservatories; Kodály institutes have been established in Tokyo, Boston, Ottawa, Sydney, Jyväskylä (Finland) and Kecskemét; international Kodály symposia have been held bienially from 1973, each one in a different country; and an International Kodály Society, based in Budapest, was founded in 1975. His former flat has been converted into the 'Zoltán Kodály Memorial Museum and Archives', serving as a centre for Kodály research.

WORKS

STAGE

Notre Dame de Paris (incid music), 1902, Budapest, Feb 1902

A nagybácsi [The Uncle] (incid music), 1902, Budapest, Eötvös College, Feb 1904

Le Cid (incid music for parody), 1903, Budapest, Feb 1903

Pacsirtaszó [Lark Song] (incid music, Z. Móricz), 1917, unpubd, Budapest, 14 Sept 1917

Székely fonó [The Transylvanian Spinning-Room] (lyrical play, 1, trad.), 1924–32, vs 1932, cond. S. Failoni, Budapest, Royal Hungarian Opera, 24 April 1932

Háry János (Singspiel, prol, 4 adventures, epilogue, B. Paulini and Z. Harsányi), op.15, 1926, rev. 1937–8, rev. 1948–52, vs 1929; cond. N. Rékai, Budapest, Royal Hungarian Opera, 16 Oct 1926 [orig. 5 adventures]

Czinka Panna (Singspiel, 4, B. Balázs), 1946–8, Budapest, Hungarian State Opera, 15 March 1948

ORCHESTRAL

Overture, d, 1897, Nagyszombat, Feb 1898
Nyári este [Summer Evening], 1906, Budapest, Royal Hungarian Opera, 22 Oct 1906; rev. 1929–30, New York PO, cond. A. Toscanini, New York, 3 April 1930
Régi magyar katonadalok [Old Hungarian Soldiers' Songs], chbr orch, 1917, Deutschmeister Orchestra, cond. W. Wacek, Vienna, 12 Jan 1918; arr. vc, pf as Magyar rondó [Hungarian Rondo], 1917
Ballet Music, 1925, Philharmonic Society Orchestra, cond. E. von Dohnányi, Budapest, Saxon Hall, 22 Aug 1927 [Dance of the Dragoons from omitted adventure of Singspiel Háry János]
Háry János Suite, 1926–7, Orquesta Pablo Casals, cond. A. Fleischer, Barcelona, Gran Teatro del Liceo; brass band version, 24 March 1927, orch version, New York PO, cond. W. Mengelberg, New York, 15 Dec 1927 [from Singspiel]
Szinházi nyitány [Theatre Overture], 1927, rev. 1929–32, cond. R. Heger, Vienna, 1928
Marosszéki táncok [Dances of Marosszék], 1929, cond. F. Busch, Dresden Opera, 28 Nov 1930 [arr. of pf work, 1923–7, arr. for ballet]
Galántai táncok [Dances of Galánta], 1933, Philharmonic Society Orchestra, cond. E. von Dohnányi, Budapest, 23 Oct 1933
Symphony C, 1930s–61, Swiss Festival Orchestra, cond. F. Fricsay, Lucerne, 16 Aug 1961
Variations on a Hungarian Folksong 'Felszállott a páva [The Peacock], 1937–9, Concertgebouw Orchestra, cond. Mengelberg, Amsterdam, 23 Nov 1939
Concerto for Orchestra, 1939–40, Chicago SO, cond. F. Stock, Chicago, 6 Feb 1941
Honvéd Parad March, brass band, 1948 [from Háry János]
Minuetto serio, 1948–53 [version of movt. from Singspiel Czinka Panna]
Arr.: J. Haydn: Violin Sonata no.5: Rondo, str orch, *c*1960

ACCOMPANIED CHORAL

texts are trad. unless otherwise stated

with orch

Offertorium (Assumpta est Maria), Bar, chorus, orch, 1901
Psalmus hungaricus (orat, M. Kecskeméti Vég, after Ps lv), op.13, T, chorus, opt. children's chorus, orch, org, 1923, Palestrina Choir, Budapest Philharmonic Society Orchestra, cond. E. von Dohnányi, Budapest, 19 Nov 1923
Budavári Te Deum, S, opt. A, T, opt. B, chorus, orch, opt. org, 1936, cond. V. Sugár, Budapest, Buda Castle, Matthias Church, 2 Sept 1936
Vértanúk sírjánál [At the Graves of the Martyrs], chorus, orch, 1945
Missa brevis, S, Mez, A, T, B, chorus, orch, 1948, London PO, cond. Kodály, Worcester Cathedral, Three Choirs Festival, 9 Sept 1948 [version of work for chorus, org]
Kállai kettős [Kálló Double Dance], SATB, 2 cl, cimb, str, 1950 [arr. of song, 1937]
The Music Makers, an Ode (A.W.E. O'Shaughnessy), chorus, orch, 1964, Oxford, Merton College, 31 May 1964 with insts

Mass, chorus, org, before 1897, inc., lost; Ave Maria, high vv, org, 1898; 5 Tantum ergo, children's chorus, org, 1928; Pange lingua, vv/children's chorus, org, 1929; Katonadal [Soldier's Song], TTB, tpt, side drum, 1934; Karácsonyi pásztortánc [Shepherds' Christmas Dance], children's chorus, pic, 1935; Ének Szent István királyhoz [Hymn to St Stephen], unison treble chorus, org, 1938, version for male chorus, treble chorus, boy's chorus, small chorus, large chorus; Organ Mass, 1942; Missa brevis, S, Mez, A, T, B, SATB, org, 1942–4
Vejnemöjnen muzsikál [Wainamoinen Makes Music] (B. Vikár), SSAA, hp/pf, 1944; Jézus és a gyermekek [Jesus and the Children] (D. Szedő), children's chorus, org, 1947; A 114. genfi zsoltár [Geneva Ps cxiv], chorus, org, 1952; Intermezzo, SATB, pf, 1956 [from Háry János]; Laudes organi, SATB, org, 1966; Magyar mise [Hungarian Mass], unison vv, org, 1966; Organoedia ad missam lectam (Csendes mise), 1966

UNACCOMPANIED CHORAL

texts are trad. unless otherwise stated

mixed vv

Miserere (Ps li), double chorus, 1903; Este [Evening] (P. Gyulai), S, SSATBB, 1904; Mátrai képek [Mátra Pictures], 1931; Öregek [The Aged] (S. Weöres), 1933; Akik mindig elkésnek [Too Late] (E. Ady), 1934; Jézus és a kufárok [Jesus and the Traders] (Bible), 1934; Liszt Ferenchez (Ode to Liszt) (M. Vörösmarty), 1936; A magyarokhoz [Song of Faith] (D. Berzsenyi), 4-pt canon, 1936; Molnár Anna, 1936
Ének Szent István királyhoz, chorus/small chorus, 1938; Norvég leányok [Norwegian Girls] (Weöres), 1940; Gömöri dal [Gömör Song], 1940 or 1941; Balassi Bálint elfelejtett éneke [The Forgotten Song of Balassi] (E. Gazdag), 1942; Első áldozás [Communion Anthem] (D. Szedő), 1942; Adventi ének (Veni, veni Emmanuel) [Advent Song] (18th-century Fr. missal, trans. Szedő), 1943; A székelyekhez [To the Transylvanians] (S. Petőfi), 1943; A 121. genfi zsoltár [Geneva Ps cxxi], 1943; Csatadal [Battle Song] (Petőfi), double chorus, 1943; Szép könyörgés [Beseeching] (B. Balassi), 1943
A magyar nemzet [The Hungarian Nation] (Petőfi), 1947; Sirató ének [Dirge] (P. Bodrogh), 1947; Az 50. genfi zsoltár [Geneva Ps l], 1948; Jelige [Epigraph] (Jankovich), chorus/small chorus, 1948 [versions for female chorus, male chorus]; Naphimnusz [Adoration] (Szedő, after F. d'Assisi: Concerto del sol), 1948; A szabadság himnusza [La marseillaise] (trans. F. Jankovich), 2-/3-pt chorus, 1948 [versions for treble chorus, male chorus]; Békesség óhajtás: 1801 esztendő [Wish for Peace: 1801] (B. Virág), 1953; Zrinyi szózata [Hymn of Zrinyi] (M. Zrinyi), Bar, SATBarB, 1954
Magyarország címere [The Arms of Hungary] (Vörösmarty), 1956; Arany szabadság [Golden Liberty], 1957 [also version for high vv]; I Will Go Look for Death (J. Masefield), 1959; Media vita in morte sumus, 1960, Sik Sándor Te Deuma, 1961; Jövel, Szentlélek Uristen [Come, Holy Ghost] (A. Batizi), *c*1961; An Ode for Music (K. Vargha, after W. Collins: The Passions, misattrib. W. Shakespeare), 1963; Mohács (K. Kisfaludy), 1965
Folksong arrs.: Nagyszalontai köszöntő [A Birthday Greeting], 1931 [also version for treble chorus]; Székely keserves [Transylvanian Lament], 1934; Felszállott a páva [The Peacock] (Ady), 1937; Esti dal [Evening Song], 1938 [versions for treble chorus, male chorus]; Túrót eszik a cigány [See the Gypsies Munching Cheese], 1950 [version for female chorus]
Other arrs: A. Pálóczi Horváth: Horatii Carmen II.10 (Rectus vives), 1934 [new Hung. title A szép énekszó múzsájához 'To the Muse of Beautiful Singing'] high vv

2 zoborvidéki népdal [2 Folksongs from Zobor], 3 S, 3 A, vv, 1908; Hegyi éjszakák I [Mountain Nights I] (textless), 1923; Gergelyjárás [St Gregory's Day], 1926; Lengyel László [King László's Men or Magyars and Germans], 1927; A juhász [The Shepherd], 1928; A süket sógor [The Deaf Boatman], 1928; Isten kovácsa [God's Blacksmith], 1928; Gólya-nóta [The Swallow's Wooing], 1929; Pünkösdölő [Whitsuntide], 1929
Uj esztendőt köszöntő [A Christmas Carol], 1929; 4 madrigali (4 olasz madrigál) [4 Italian Madrigals] (M. di Dino Frescobaldi, M.M. Boiardo, Gherardello da Firenze, anon. 14th-century), 1932–3; Vizkereszt [Epiphany] (S. Sik), 1933; Ave Maria, 1935; Harmatozzatok [Dewdrops], 1935; A 150. genfi zsoltár [Geneva Ps cl] (T. de Béze), 1936; Hét könnyü gyermekkar és hat tréfás kánon [7 Easy Children's Choruses and 6 Humorous Canons], 1936; Hajnövesztő [Grow, Tresses], 1937
Egyetem, begyetem [Hippity, Hoppity], 1938; Ének Szent István királyhoz, female vv, 1938; Csalfa sugár [False Spring] (J. Arany), 1938; Cú föl, lovam [Arise, my Horse], 1938; Semmit ne bánkodjál [Cease your Bitter Weeping] (A. Szkhárosi Horvát), 1939; Szent Ágnes ünnepére [The Feast of St Agnes] (Sik), 1945; Jelige (Jankovich), 1948; A szabadság himnusza [La marseillaise] (trans. Jankovich), 1948; Békedal [Song of Peace] (Weöres), 1952; Ürgeöntés [The Gopher] (E. Gazdag, after children's song), 1954; Hegyi éjszakák II–IV [Mountain Nights II–IV] (textless), 1955–6
Arany szabadság [Golden Liberty] (Jankovich), 1957; Házasodik a vakond [The Mole's Wedding] (Gazdag), 1958; Méz, méz, méz [Honey, Honey, Honey], 1958; Bordal (M. Kistétényi), 1959 [from educational work Tricinia]; Dal [Fancy] (W. Shakespeare: Merchant of Venice, act III), 1959; Epigramma (Kistétényi), 1959 [from educational work Tricinia]; Harasztosi legénynek [For the Lad of Harasztos] (S. Almási), 1961; Az éneklő ifjúsághoz [To the Singing Youth] (K. Vargha), 1962; Hegyi éjszakák V [Mountain Nights V] (textless), 1962
Folksong arrs.: 2 zoborvidéki népdal [2 Folksongs from Zobor] (3 S, 3 A)/female chorus, 1908: Meghalok, meghalok [Woe is Me], Piros alma mosolyog [Blooming on the Hilltop]; Túrót eszik a cigány, 1925, arr. chorus, 1950; Villő [The Straw Guy], 1925; Jelenti magát Jézus [The Voice of Jesus], 1927 [also version for male chorus]; Cigánysirató [Gypsy Lament], 1928; Táncnóta [Dancing Song], 1929; Nagyszalontai köszöntő [A Birthday Greeting], 1931; Nyulacska [The Leveret], 1934; A csikó [The Filly], SSA/TBarB, 1937; Három gömöri népdal [3 Folksongs from Gömör], 1937; Katalinka [Ladybird], 1937; Esti dal, 1938; Árva vagyok [Orphan am I], 1953; Meghalok, meghalok, S, 3/4 A, SSAA, 1957 [based on 1908 arr.]

male vv

Stabat mater, 1898; 2 férfikar [2 Drinking Songs] (F. Kölcsey, anon. 17th-century), 1913–17; Canticum nuptiale (trad., 17th-century), 1928; Justum et tenacem (Rendületlenül) [Resolutely] (Horace), 1935; Huszt [The Ruins] (Kölcsey), 1936; Ének Szent István királyhoz, 1938; Semmit ne bánkodjál [Cease your Bitter Weeping] (A. Szkhárosi Horvát), 1939; Isten csodája [God's Mercy] (Petőfi), 1944; Rabhazának fia [The Son of an Enslaved Country] (S. Petőfi), 1944; Élet vagy halál [Life or Death] (Petőfi), 1947

Hejh Büngözsdi Bandi [Hey, Bandi Büngözsdi/The Highwayman] (Petőfi), Bar, TBarB, 1947; Jelige [Epigraph] (Jankovich), 1948; A szabadság himnusza [La marseillaise] (trans. Jankovich), 2-/3-pt chorus, 1948; Nemzeti dal [National Song] (Petőfi), 1955; Emléksorok Fáy Andrásnak [In András Fáy's Album] (Vörösmarty), 1956; A nándori toronyőr [The Tower Watchman of Nándor] (Vörösmarty), 1956; A franciaországi változásokra [To the Changes in France] (J. Batsányi), 1963

Folksong arrs.: Karádi nóták [Songs from Karád], 1934; Kit kéne elvenni [The Bachelor], 1934; Felszállott a páva (Ady), 1937; Jelenti magát Jézus [The Voice of Jesus], 1944

children's vv

Angyalok és pásztorok [The Angels and the Shepherds], SA, SSA, 1935; Angyalkert [Garden of Angels], 5 play songs, 1937; Harangszó [Bells], SA, SSA, 1937; Ének Szent István királyhoz, boys' chorus, 1938; János köszöntő [Greeting to St John], boys' chorus, 1939; Cohors generosa (Régi Magyar diákköszöntő) [Hungarian Students' Greeting] (Vargha), boys chorus, 1943

SOLO VOCAL

texts are trad. unless otherwise stated

Ave Maria, E♭, 1v, str, *c*1897; Ave Maria, F, 1v, org, *c*1897; Ave Maria, A, 1v, org, *c*1898; Vadonerdő a világ [A World is a Wildwood] (Petőfi), 1v, pf, vn, before 1900; Szeretném itthagyni a fényes világot [I Should Like to Leave this Bright World] (Petőfi), 1v, pf, vn, 1905; Magyar népdalok [(20) Hungarian Folksongs], nos.11–20, 1v, pf, 1906 [nos.1–10 by Bartók]; Négy dal [4 Songs] (J. Arany, A. Bálint, Z. Móricz), 1v, pf: nos. 1–3, 1907, no.4, 1917; Énekszó: dalok népi versekre [(16) songs on Hung. Popular Words], op.1, 1v, pf, 1907–9

Megkésett melódiák [Belated Melodies] (D. Berzsenyi, F. Kölcsey, M. Csokonai Vitéz), 7 songs, op.6, 1v, pf, 1912–16; 2 ének [2 Songs] (Berzsenyi, Ady), op.5, Bar, pf/orch, 1913–16; 5 dal [5 Songs] (Ady, Balázs), op.9, 1915–18; Fáj a szivem [My Heart is Breaking] (Móricz), 1v, small orch, 1917 [incl. as no.4 in 4 dal]; Kádár István [Stephen Kádár], 1v, pf, 1917 [incl. as no.37 in Magyar népzene]; 3 ének [3 Songs] (Balassa, anon. 17th-century), op.14, 1v, pf/orch, 1924–9; Magyar népzene i–xi [Hungarian Folk Music], 57 folksongs, 1924–32: i–iv, low v, pf, vi–vii, x, high v, pf, viii–ix, xi, low v, pf; A bereknek gyars kaszási (Himfy dal) [The Quick Reapers of the Grove (Himfy Song)], 1v, pf, 1925

Kállai kettős [Double Dance of Kálló], lv, pf, 1937; Molnár Anna [Annie Miller], low v, chbr orch, 1942, rev. 1959; Kádár kata [Mother, Listen], low v, chbr orch, 1943; 8 kis duett [8 Little Duets], S, T, pf, 1953; 5 hegyi-mari népdal [5 Songs of the Mountain Cheremiss], lv, pf, 1960; Epitaphium Joannis Hunyadi (Janus Panmonius, 15th-century), 1v, pf, 1965

Arr.: B. Bartók: 5 dal, op.15, 1v, orch, 1962

CHAMBER AND SOLO INSTRUMENTAL

Str: Menuetto, str qt; 1897; Romance lyrique, vc, pf, 1898; Str Qt, 1899; Trio, E♭, 2 vn, va, 1899; Adagio, vn, pf, 1905, transcr. vn/vc, *c*1910; Intermezzo, str trio, 1905; Str Qt no.1, op.2, 1908–9; Sonatina, vc, pf, 1909; Sonata, op.4, vc, pf, 1909–10; Duo, op.7, vn, vc, 1914; Capriccio, vc, 1915; Sonata, op.8, vc, 1915; Str Qt no.2, op.10, 1916–18; Magyar rondo, vc, pf, 1917; Serenade, op.12, 2 vn, va, 1919–20; Exercise, vn, 1942; Gavotte, 3 vn, vc, 1952; Kállai kettős, vn, pf, arr. Feighin, authorized by Kodály, 1958

Wind: Hivogató tábortűzhöz [Calling to Camp Fire], cl, 1930; Qt, *c*1960

Pf: pieces before 1900; Valsette, 1905; Meditation sur un motif de Claude Debussy, 1907; Zongoramuzsika [Music for Piano], 9 pieces, op.3, 1909 [orig. titled 10 Pieces, incl. Valsette]; 7 Pieces, op.11, 1910–18; Marosszéki táncok [Dances of Marosszék], 1923–7, orchd 1929; Gyermektáncok [(12) Children's Dances], 1945

Org: Prelude, 1931 [orig. for choral work Pange lingua]; Csendes mise [Low Mass], 1940–42, rev. as Organoedia ad missam lectam, 1966

Bach arrs.: Chorale PreludesBWV743, 762, 747, vc, pf, 1924; Fantasia cromatica, va, 1950; Prelude and Fugue, E♭, from Das wohltemperirte Clavier, bk 1, vc, pf, 1951; Lute Prelude, c,BWV999, vn, pf, 1959; Prelude and Fugue, b, str qt

EDUCATIONAL

Bicinia hungarica, i–iv, 180 progressive 2-pt songs, 1937–42; Énekeljünk tisztán [Let us Sing Correctly], 107 intonation exercises, 1941; 15 kétszólamú énekgyakorlat [15 2-Pt Exercises], 1941; Ötfoku zene, i–iv [Pentatonic Music], 1942–7; 333 olvasógyakorlat [333 Elementary Exercises in Sight-Singing], 1943; Szó-mi, i–viii, 1943, ed. with J. Ádám; Iskolai énekgyüjtemény, i–ii [Collected Songs for Schools], 1943–4, ed. with G. Kerényi; 24 kis kánon a fekete billentyűkön [24 Little Canons on the Black Keys], 1945

Énekeskönyv az általános iskolák számára [Songbook for Primary Schools], 1947–8, ed. with Ádám; Epigrammák, 9 vocalises, 1v, pf, 1954, rev. (M. Kistétnényi), SSA, 1959, versions for 2vv/2 insts, pf, version for SATB, org; 33 kétszólamú énekgyakorlat [33 2-Pt Exercises], 1954; 44 kétszólamú énekgyakorlat, 1954; 55 kétszólamú énekgyakorlat, 1954; Tricinia: 28 háromszólamú énekgyakorlat [Tricinia: 28 Progressive 3-Pt Songs], 1954; Kis emberek dalai [50 Nursery Rhymes], 1961; 66 kétszólamú énekgyakorlat, 1962; 22 kétszólamú énekgyakorlat, 1964; 77 kétszólamú énekgyakorlat, 1966

Principal publishers: Boosey & Hawkes, Magyar Kórus, Universal

WRITINGS

correspondence

4 letters to Bartók in Documenta bartókiana, iv, ed. D. Dille (Budapest, 1970)

ed. J. Demény: Béla Bartók Letters (New York, 1971)

I. Gál: 'Bartók és Kodály ismeretlen levelei: zeneelméleti irásaik angol kiadásáról' [Unknown letters of Bartók and Kodály: concerning the English publication of their writings on music theory], Tiszatáj, xix/10 (1975), 61–71

J. Demény: 'Kodály Zoltán kilenc levele' [Nine letters of Zoltán Kodály], Magyar zenetörténeti tanulmányok Kodály Zoltán emlékére, ed. F. Bónis (Budapest, 1977), 210–16

R. Klein: 'Kodály és az Universal Edition' [Kodály and Universal Edition], Magyar zenetörténeti tanulmányok Kodály Zoltán emlékére, ed. F. Bónis (Budapest, 1977) 136–50 [incl. Eng. summary]

ed. D. Legány: Kodály Zoltán levelei [Zoltán Kodály letters] (Budapest, 1982; ii forthcoming)

J.P. Amann: Zoltán Kodály: suivi de huit lettres à Ernest Ansermet et de la Méthode Kodály (Lausanne, 1983)

ed. L. Eősze: 'Bartók és Kodály levelezése' [The Bartók-Kodály correspondence], Újhold-évkönyv (Budapest, 1990), 375–409

ed. L. Eősze: 'Thirteen Unpublished Letters by Zoltán Kodály to Béla Bartók', Bulletin of the International Kodály Society (1991), no.1, pp.3–12 books and articles

ed., with B. Bartók: Erdélyi magyarság népdalok [The Hungarians of Transylvania: folksongs] (Budapest, 1923, R/1987; Fr. trans., 1925) [preface in Eng. and Fr.]

A magyar népzene [Hungarian folk music] (Budapest, 1937, enlarged 2/1943, enlarged with exx. by L. Vargyas, 3/1952, 6/1973; Eng. trans. by R. Tempest and C. Jolly, 1960, enlarged 3/1982/R) ed. with B. Bartók: A magyar népzene tára /Corpus musicae popularis hungaricae (Budapest, 1951–) with A. Gyulai: Arany János népdalgyüjteménye [The folksong collection of János Arany] (Budapest, 1952) [see also B. Holl: 'Arany János népdalának ismeretlen kézirata' [An unknown folk song manuscript of János Arany], Irodalomtörténeti Közlemények, lxxi/2 (1967), 194–6]

ed. A. Szőllősy: A zene mindenkié [Music belongs to everybody] (Budapest, 1954, 2/1975)

'The Tasks of Musicology in Hungary', SMH, i (1961), 5–8
'Folk Music and Art Music in Hungary', Tempo, no.63 (1962–3), 28–36
ed. F. Bónis: Visszatekintés [In Retrospect] (Budapest, 1964, enlarged 2/1982; partial Eng. trans., 1974, as The Selected Writings of Zoltán Kodály)
'Folk Song in Pedagogy', Music Educators Journal, liii/7 (1966–7), 59–61
'Hungarian Instrumental Teaching', Bulletin of the International Kodály Society (1977), nos.1–2, pp.74–81 annotations to B. Bartók: The Hungarian Folk Song, ed. B. Suchoff (Albany, NY, 1981) [expanded version of B. Bartók: A magyar népdal (Budapest, 1924)]
ed. F. Bónis: Wege zur Musik: Ausgewählte Schriften und Reden (Budapest, 1983)
ed. M. Szekeres-Farkas: Voyage en Hongrie [Voyage through Hungary] (Budapest, 1983) [facs. of Kodály's notes during collecting trips, 1906–11]
'The Role of Authentic Folk Song in Music Education', Bulletin of the International Kodály Society (1985), no.1, pp.15–19
ed. R. Johnston: Zoltán Kodály in North America, Kodály and Education, iii (Willowdale, ON, 1986), 67–74. [incl. 'The Responsibilities and Opportunities of the Musician-Educator']
ed. F. Bónis: Visszatekintés: összegyüjtött irások, beszédek (Budapest, 1989)
ed. L. Vargyas: Közélet, vallomások, zeneélet [Public life, confessions, musical life] (Budapest, 1989)
ed. L. Vargyas: Magyar zene, magyar nyelv, magyar vers [Hungarian music, language, poetry] (Budapest, 1993)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SOURCE MATERIALS

L. Eősze: Kodály Zoltán élete képekben [Kodály's life in pictures] (Budapest, 1957)
L. Eősze: Kodály Zoltán élete képekben és dokumentumokban [Kodály's life in pictures and documents] (Budapest, 1971, 3/1982; Eng. trans., 1971, enlarged 2/1982)
J. Breuer, ed.: Kodály-Dokumentumok, i: Németország 1910–1944 [Kodály's Documents, i: Germany, 1910–1944] (Budapest, 1976)
L. Eősze: Kodály Zoltán életének krónikája [The chronicle of the life of Kodály] (Budapest, 1977)
M. Houlahan and P. Tacka: Zoltán Kodály: a Guide to Research (New York and London, 1998)

LIFE AND WORK

B. Bartók: 'Della musica moderna in Ungheria', Il pianoforte, ii/7 (1921), 193–7
B. Bartók: 'Kodály Zoltán', Nyugat, xiv (1921), 235–6
B. Szabolcsi: 'Kodály Zoltán', Nyugat, xix/1 (1926), 670–72
B. Szabolcsi and D. Bartha, eds.: Emlékkönyv: Kodály Zoltán 70.ik születésnapjára [Kodály: honouring his 70th birthday], ZT, i (1953), 7–71
L. Eősze: Kodály, Zoltán élete, és művészete [Kodály: his life and work] (Budapest, 1956; Eng. trans., 1962)
B. Szabolcsi and D.Bartha, eds.: Emlékkönyv: Kodály Zoltán 75. születésnapjára [Kodály: honouring his 75th birthday], ZT, vi (1957)
B. Szabolcsi, ed.: Zoltáno Kodály Octogenario Sacrum [Kodály: honouring his 80th birthday], SMH, iii (1962) [incl. articles by F. Bónis, L. Eősze and J. Ujfalussy]
P.M. Young: Zoltán Kodály: a Hungarian Musician (London, 1964)
L. Eősze: Kodály Zoltán: a múlt magyar tudósai [Kodály: Hungarian scholars of the past], ed. G. Ortutay (Budapest, 1971)
R. Vig: 'Cigány népdalok Bartók Béla és Kodály Zoltán gyűjtéséből' [Gypsy folksongs collected by Bartók and Kodály], Népzene és zenetörténet, ii, ed. L. Vargyas (Budapest, 1974), 149–200 [incl. facs. of MSS of 33 folksongs coll. by Bartók and Kodály]
F. Bónis, ed.: Magyar zenetörténeti tanulmányok Kodály Zoltán emlékére [Essays in the history of Hungarian music in memory of Kodály] (Budapest, 1977) [incl. F. Bónis: 'Neoklasszikus vonások Kodály zenéjében' [Neo-classical features in Kodály's music], 217–35; J. Breuer: 'Kodály műveinek visszhangja az 1920-as évek nemzetközi sajtójában' [Reactions of the international press in the 1920s to Kodály's works], 190–209; L. Eősze: 'Kodály formaművészetének néhány sajátossága' [Some formal characteristics of Kodály's art], 123–35; I. Kecskeméti: 'Kodály zeneszerzői műhelymunkája a Sírfelirat kimunkálásában' [Kodály's compositional sketching for Epitaph], 43–50; E. Lendvai: 'Modalitás, atonalitás, funkció: utóhang egy Bartók-Kodály könyvhöz' [Modality, atonality, function: epilogue to a book on Bartók and Kodály], 57–122; L. Vargyas: 'A népzenekutatás eredményeinek hatása Kodály alkotásaiban' [The influence of results in folk music research on Kodály's works], 236–60] (summaries in Eng., Ger.)
J. Breuer, ed.: Bartók és Kodály (Budapest, 1978)
F. Bónis: Így láttuk Kodályt: harmincöt emlékezés [This is how we saw Kodály: 35 remembrances] (Budapest, 1979, enlarged 3/1994)
L. Eősze: 'Zoltán Kodály: die Universalität eines nationalen Meisters', Zwischen den Grenzen (Mainz, 1979), 37–45
J. Breuer: 'Kodály in England 1913–45: a Documentary Study', Tempo, no.143 (1982), 2–9; no.144 (1983), 15–20
J. Breuer: Kodály-kalauz [A guide to Kodály] (Budapest, 1982; Eng. trans., 1990)
J. Breuer, ed.: Kodály-mérleg, 1982 [A Kodály balance, 1982] (Budapest, 1982)
P. Erdei, ed.: Kodály szemináriumok [Kodály seminars] (Budapest, 1982)
N. Heltai: 'Szívébe fogadott Kecskemét': Kodály és szülővárosa [Kodály and his native Kecskemét] (Kecskemét, 1982)
M. Ittzés, ed.: A Kodály Intézet Évkönyve [Yearbook of the Kodály Institute] (Kecskemét, 1982)
T. Nádor: Kodály Zoltán és Pécs-Baranya [Zoltán Kodály and Pécs town and county] (Pécs, 1982)
L. Péter: Kodály Szegeden [Kodály at Szeged] (Szeged, 1982)
L. Vikár, ed.: Reflections on Kodály (Budapest, 1985)
L. Eősze: 'A szazadforduló eszmei áramlatainak hatása Kodály zeneszerzői egyéniségének kibontakozására' [The influence of turn of the century trends on the development of Kodály's personality as a composer], Magyar zene, xxx (1989), 188–212, 275–91
F. Bónis: Hódolat Bartóknak és Kodálynak [Homage to Bartók and Kodály] (Budapest, 1992)
F. Bónis: Kodály Zoltán és Szabolcsi Bence emlékezete [In memory of Zoltán Kodály and Bence Szabolcsi] (Kecskemét, 1992)
J. Breuer: 'Kodály and the Powers That Be', Hungarian Quarterly, xxxiv/129 (1993), 156–61
L. Eősze: 'Zoltán Kodály's Timeliness', Bulletin of the International Kodály Society (1995), no.2, pp.40–47
A. Sormunen, ed.: Zoltán Kodály, Composer, Musicologist and Educationist: a Festschrift for Matti Vainio, Yearbook of the Finnish Kodály Center (Jyväskylä, 1996)
M. Vainio and R.Kinnunen, eds.: The Heritage of Zoltán Kodály in Hungary and Finland, Yearbook of the Finnish Kodály Center (Jyväskylä, 1997)
L. Eősze: Örökségünk Kodály [Kodály: our legacy] (Budapest, 1999)

ANALYTICAL STUDIES

B. Rajeczky: 'Kodály vallásos és egyházi müvei' [Kodály's sacred music], A zene, xix (1937–8), 222–4
A. Szőllősy: 'Kodály kórusainak zenei szimbolikája' [The musical symbolism of Kodály's choruses], Magyar zenei szemle, iii (1943), 35–44
A. Szőllősy: Kodály művészete [The art of Kodály] (Budapest, 1943)
A. Tóth: 'Kodály Zoltán költői világa énekkari szerzeményeinek tükrében' [The poetic world of Kodály as shown in his choral compositions], ZT, i (1953), 13–48
J. Kovács: 'Zoltán Kodály szimfónikus művei' [Survey of the symphonic music of Kodály], ZT, vi (Budapest, 1957), 43–104
H. Stevens: 'The Choral Music of Zoltán Kodály', MQ, liv (1968), 147–67
I. Kecskeméti: 'Kodály Zoltán egy ismeretlen alkalmi kompoziciójának kézirata' [Manuscript of an unknown occasional composition of Kodály], Magyar Könyvszemle, nos.3–4 (1972), 251–64
M. Ittzés: 'Music Pedagogical Works of Kodály and their Relation with European Art Music', Bulletin of the International Kodály Society (1977), nos.1–2, pp.5–12
B. Sárosi: 'Volksmusikalische Quellen und Parallelen zu Bartóks and Kodálys Musik', Musikethnologische Sammelbände, ed. W. Suppan (Graz, 1977)
M. Ittzés: 'The Musical World of Kodály's Instrumental Pieces for Children', Bulletin of the International Kodály Society (1980), no.2, pp.13–23
E. Lendvai: Bartók and Kodály (Budapest, 1980)
Kodály Conference: Budapest 1982 [incl. J. Breuer: 'Kodálys Korrektionen in seinen veröffentlichten Kompositionen', 24–32; I. Kecskeméti: 'Wiederkehrende Erscheinungen und äussere Parallelen der Musik Zoltán Kodálys' [Reappearing phenomena and other parallels in Kodály's work], 57–88; G. Kroó: 'Sketches to the Closing Section of Kodály's Song The Approaching Winter', 105–112]

J. Breuer and M. Ittzés: A Short Guide to Kodály Works (Kecskemét, 1982)
H. Szabó: 'Kodály Zoltán széljegyzetei' [Kodály's marginal notes], Magyar zene, xxiii (1982), 372–413
I. Kecskeméti: 'Kodály Zoltán: Marosszéki táncok, keletkezéstörténet, források, műhelymunka' [Kodály: Marosszék dances, a history of its genesis, sources, and compositional process], Magyar zene, xxiv (1983), 335–75
E. Lendvai: The Workshop of Bartók and Kodály (Budapest, 1983)
O. Szalay and others: 'Kodály és a népzene: a zeneszerzői források feltárásának tükrében' [Kodály and folk music: in the mirroring of the composer's sources], Ethnographia, xliv (1983), 548–72 [on Kodály's choral compositions]
A. Wilheim: 'New Kodály Scores', New Hungarian Quarterly, no.91 (1983), 213–15
L. Bárdos: 'Heptatonia Secunda', 'Kodály's Children's Choruses', 'Kodály: the 333 Reading Exercises', 'The Modus Loricus in the Works of Zoltan Kodály', Selected Writings on Music (Budapest, 1984), 88–215, 288–372, 216–29, 230–87 [Eng. trans. of articles orig. pubd 1962–76]
J. Bereczky and others: Kodály népdalfeldolgozásainak dallam- és szövegforrásai [Melody and text sources of Kodály's folk song transcriptions] (Budapest, 1984)
F. László, ed.: Útunk Kodályhoz [On our way to Kodály] (Bucharest, 1984)
I. Kecskeméti: Kodály, the Composer: Brief Studies on the First Half of Kodály's Oeuvre (Kecskemét, 1986)
F. Bónis: Kodály Zoltán Psalmus hungaricusa [Zoltán Kodály's Psalmus hungaricus] (Budapest, 1987)
S. Erdély: 'Folk-Music Research in Hungary Until 1950: the Legacy of Zoltán Kodály and Béla Bartók', CMc, no.43 (1987), 51–61
L. Dobszay: 'Folk Song Classification in Hungary: Some Methodological Conclusions', SMH, xxx (1988), 235–80
I. Kecskeméti: 'Images of Handwriting in Kodály's Early Music Autographs', Bulletin of the International Kodály Society (1988), no.1, pp.3–21
J. Kovács: 'Kodály's Autographed Manuscripts for Te Deum', Bulletin of the International Kodály Society (1990), no.2, pp.26–9
E. Lendvai: Symmetries of Music, ed. M. Szabó and M. Mohay (Kecskemét, 1993)
L. Eősze: 'Die Motette Jesus und die Krämer von Zoltán Kodály', Chormusik und Analyse, ii (Mainz, 1996), 203–13

MUSIC EDUCATION

books and monographs

J. Ádám: Módszeres énektanítás a relatív szolmizáció alapján [Systematic singing teaching based on tonic sol-fa] (Budapest, 1944; Eng. trans., 1971, as Growing in Music with Movable Do)
E. Szőnyi: A zenei írás olvasás modszertana [Musical reading and writing] (Budapest, 1953–65; Eng. trans., 1974–8)
F. Sándor, ed.: Musical Education in Hungary (Budapest, 1966, enlarged and rev. 3/1975 by F. Macnicol)
J. Ribiére-Raverlat: L'education musicale en Hongrie (Paris, 1968) [on Kodály method]
E. Szőnyi: Kodály's Principles in Practice: an Approach to Music Education Through the Kodály Method (Budapest, 1973, 5/1990)
L. Choksy: The Kodály Method (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1974, 3/1999)
K. Forrai: Ének az ovodában [Singing in the kindergarten] (Budapest, 1975; Eng. trans., 1988)
E. Hegyi: Solfege According to the Kodály Concept (Kecskemét, 1975)
J.P. Barron: A Selected Bibliography of the Kodály Concept of Music Education, Kodály and Education, ii (Willowdale, ON, 1979)
J.P. Barron: Zoltán Kodály, Kodály and Education, i (Willowdale, ON, 1979)
L. Choksy: The Kodály Context: Creating an Environment for Music Learning (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1981)
'Music Education Section', Kodály Conference: Budapest 1982, 150–225
L. Vikár, ed.: Reflections on Kodály (Budapest, 1985)
L. Dobszay: Kodály után [After Kodály] (Kecskemét, 1991; Eng. trans., 1992)
A. Frizza: Il metodo Kodály (Brescia, 1991)
M. Houlahan and P. Tacka: Sound Thinking: Music For Sight-Singing and Ear Training (New York, 1991)
M.A. Hein, ed.: The Legacy of Kodály: an Oral History Perspective (Budapest, 1992)
A.L. Ringer: 'Folk Song in Education: Problems and Promises', Bulletin of the International Kodály Society (1992), no.1, pp.3–11
D. Bacon: Hold Fast To Dreams: Writings Inspired by Zoltán Kodály (Wellesley, MA, 1993)
A. Szögi: Kodály's Music Educational Concept in the International Practice: a Selected Bibliography (Kecskemét, 1993)
P. Tacka and M. Houlahan: Sound Thinking: Developing Musical Literacy (New York, 1995) essays and articles

K. Kokas, S. Enyedi and O. Eiben: 'Psychological Testing in Hungarian Music Education', Journal of Research in Music Education, xvii/1 (1969), 125–34
H. Szabó: disc notes, The Kodály Concept of Education, SBHED001–3 (1969)
G. Russell-Smith: 'Zoltán Kodály: Composer, Musicologist and Educational Revolutionary', Some Great Music Educators: a Collection of Essays, ed. K. Simpson (Kent, 1976), 78–88
I. Herboly-Kocsár: 'The Kodály Concept and 20th Century Music', Bulletin of the International Kodály Society (1981), no.1, pp.17–27
E. Lendvai: 'Kodály Method, Kodály Conception', New Hungarian Quarterly, no.90 (1983), 164–98
J. Sinor: 'The Ideas of Kodály in America', Music Educators Journal, lxxii/Feb (1985–6), 32–7; repr., lxxxiii/5 (1997), 37–41
Z. Laczó: 'The First Measurement of the Effectiveness of the Kodály Concept in Hungary Using the Seashore Test', Council for Research in Music Education Bulletin, no.91 (1987), 87–96
J. Sinor: 'Music and Notation: Do We Have to Make a Choice', Bulletin of the International Kodály Society (1987), no.2, pp.36–41
I. Herboly-Kocsár: 'Do We Need a Method in Music Education?', Kodály Envoy, xiv/4 (1988), 5–9
M. Houlahan and P. Tacka: 'Sound Thinking: a Suggested Sequence for Teaching Musical Elements Based on the Philosophy of Zoltán Kodály for a College Music Theory Course', Journal of Music Theory Pedagogy, iv (1990), 85–110
M. Houlahan and P. Tacka: 'Sequential Order for the Preparation, Presentation, Practice and Evaluation of Rhythmic and Melodic Concepts', ibid., iv (1990), 243–68
S. Kodály: 'Kodály: a Twenty-Year Perspective', Kodály Envoy, xvii/3 (1991), 26–30
M. Houlahan and P. Tacka: 'The Kodály Concept: Expanding the Research Base', Bulletin of the International Kodály Society (1994), no.1, pp.34–43
K. Nemes: 'The Relative Sol-Fa as Tool of Developing Musical Thinking', Bulletin of the International Kodály Society (1995), no.2, pp.27–34

LÁSZLÓ EŐSZE/MÍCHEÁL HOULAHAN, PHILIP TACKA

Kōdōn (Gk., diminutive, kōdōnion). Term for bell, also sometimes applied to the SALPINX (cf Sophocles, Ajax, 17) because of the bell-shaped flare at the end of the instrument. Bells appear in iconographic representations and in literature from the 5th century BCE. In Aeschylus's Seven against Thebes (lines 386 and 399), when the scout describes the shield of the fierce Argive warrior Tydeus, within which bronze bells make a fearful clanging, Eteocles responds that the sounds of bells have no bite without the spear. Euripides (Rhesus, 308) employed a similar image of the fearful clanging of bells when referring to the headdress of Rhesus's chariot horses, and in Aristophanes' Frogs (963), the character of Euripides recalls this passage.

In addition to these uses in battle, bells were carried by sentries (Thucydides, iv.135) and served a religious (probably apotropaic) function. A wall painting in a Delos house shows a bell attached to the neck of a sacrificial pig, and small (6·2–8 cm) bells in the shape of an inverted cup or cone with a little eyelet at the top have been excavated at Delos and Argos.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Herzog-Hauser: 'Tintinnabulum', Paulys Real-Encyclopädie der classischen Altertumswissenschaft, 2nd ser., vi (Stuttgart, 1937), 1406–10

M. Wegner: Griechenland, Musikgeschichte in Bildern, ii/4 (Leipzig, 1964)

S. Michaelides: 'Kodon', The Music of Ancient Greece: an Encyclopaedia (London, 1978)

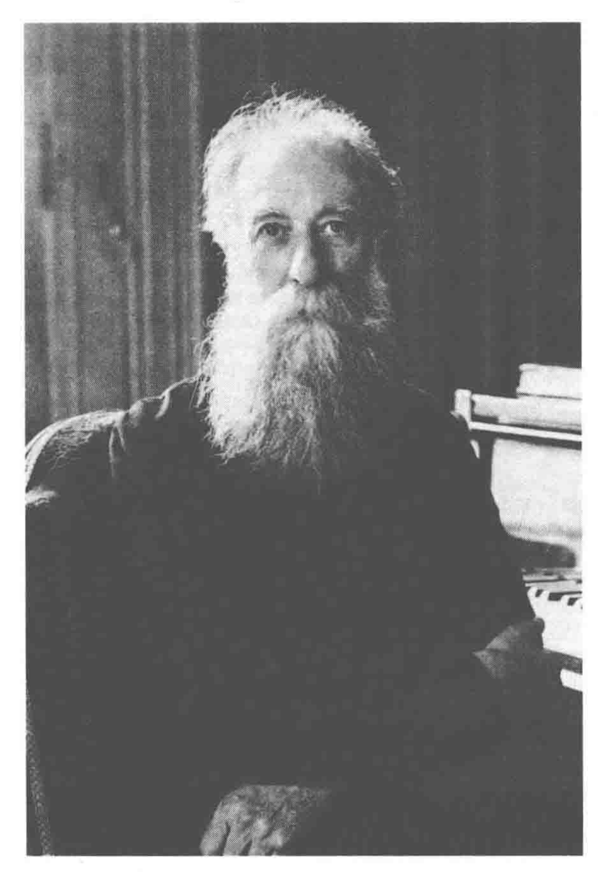
THOMAS J. MATHIESEN

Koechlin, Charles (Louis Eugène) (b Paris, 27 Nov 1867; d Le Canadel, Var, 31 Dec 1950). French composer, teacher and musicologist. He came from a rich industrial family; his grandfather, Jean Dollfus, well known for his philanthropic and social activities, had founded the cotton textile firm of Dollfus-Mieg & Cie in Mulhouse. From his ancestors Koechlin inherited what he called his Alsatian temperament: an energy, naivety, and an absolute and simple sincerity that lie at the heart of his music and character. His father, a textile designer, moved to Paris before Koechlin was born and intended his son to become an artillery officer; but Koechlin contracted tuberculosis while at the Ecole Polytechnique and this rendered him ineligible for a military career. During his extended convalescence in Algeria in 1889 he began to study music more seriously, and he entered the Paris Conservatoire in October 1890. Here he studied harmony with Taudou and composition with Massenet. His lifelong interest in the music of J.S. Bach was stimulated by the counterpoint classes of Gedalge, and he retained an interest in modal music and folksong from the history classes of Bourgault-Ducoudray. When Dubois replaced Thomas as director in 1896, Massenet resigned, and Koechlin entered the composition class of the man who was to influence him most, Fauré. Throughout his life Koechlin strove to recapture the classic simplicity and nobility of Fauré's style with its balance of liberty and discipline.

Koechlin's life was hard but uneventful. He lived a comfortable, rather dilettante existence until after his marriage to Suzanne Pierrard in 1903, but increasing financial problems, not assisted by the war, led to Koechlin's beginning his long career as a writer on theory in 1915, although he had started regular critical work with the Chronique des arts in 1909 and had increased his teaching activities at the same time.



Until the late 1920s, Koechlin was in the forefront of Parisian musical life. With fellow Conservatoire pupils Ravel and Schmitt and with the backing of Fauré, he founded the Société Musicale Indépendante in 1909 to promote new music in opposition to the Société Nationale controlled by d'Indy and the Schola Cantorum. At Debussy's request he orchestrated all but the Prelude of Khamma in 1912–13, and in 1918 Satie invited Koechlin to join a group called Les Nouveaux Jeunes together with Roussel, Milhaud and several others, although the project never materialized as originally intended and was superseded by Les Six in 1920. Between 1921 and 1924 a series of articles on Koechlin's music appeared in leading musical journals, and more of it began to be published and performed.

However, by 1932 Koechlin was already more famous as a theorist than as a composer, and organizing a festival of his major orchestral works in that year did little to change the situation, nor was his renown much increased by his winning the Prix Cressent with the Symphonie d'hymnes in 1936, or the Prix Halphan with the First Symphony in 1937. It was not until the 1940s when the director of Belgian radio, Paul Collaer, organized performances of his works (conducted by Franz André) in Brussels that Koechlin's music began to regain public attention. Further recognition came with Antal Dorati's centenary recording of Les bandar-log in 1967, and after that his powerful and original music gradually gained international recognition through publications, performances and CD recordings. Crucial contributions to this process were made by his children, Yves and Madeleine, and by devotees such as Otfrid Nies and Michel Fleury.

Koechlin made lecturing visits to America in 1918, 1928 and 1937, and became president of the Fédération Musicale Populaire on the death of Roussel. His growing communist sympathies in the 1930s are reflected in his 'music for the people' and his work for the musical committee of the Association France–URSS, although he was never an official party member. Always abreast of the latest developments in music, he became president of the French section of the ISCM, and actively supported the music of the young at all times, provided that it did not, in his view, exploit novelty for its own sake.

Musically a late developer, Koechlin began his long composing career with a period of songwriting (1890–1909). In about 1911 Koechlin sensed himself 'capable of entering the perilous domain of chamber music', and there began a new period which ended with the Trio op.92 of 1924. During this phase Koechlin wrote a series of instrumental sonatas, developing from the basis of the harmonic advances of the songs of 1905–9 (opp.28, 31 and 35) to the luminous polytonal style which characterizes his mature music. In orchestral composition, Koechlin went through an apprenticeship between 1897 and 1904. En mer, la nuit op.27, based on Heine's poem La mer du nord, was the first symphonic work in which he found his 'inspiration was sustained by an appropriate formal development'. A period of early maturity ended with the First Symphony op.57bis of 1911–15, and a second phase, which saw the composition of most of his major orchestral pieces, began with La course de printemps op.95, completed in 1925 and orchestrated in 1926–7.

The seven works (opp.18, 95, 159, 175 and 176) based on Kipling's Jungle Book stories form the core of Koechlin's orchestral output, and the composition and revision of this cycle, which lasts less than 75 minutes in performance, occupied him for over 40 years from 1899 onwards. The scores show Koechlin at his best in each period, and the music ranges from a state of demonic energy to a diaphonous luminosity which arises from chords using superposed perfect 4ths or 5ths. His complex ideas found their most natural expression in large-scale orchestral works, and Koechlin defended the viability of the symphonic poem and the vast post-Romantic orchestra long after their vogues had faded. He was stimulated by a wide range of extra-musical subjects both natural and literary. A particular attraction to the forest in his early works achieved a more universal, pantheistic significance in the jungle of his later creations. Other subjects which recurringly 'imposed themselves' upon him included classical mythology, dreams and fantasy (which reflected his desire to escape from everyday reality into an 'ivory tower' within which he could compose freely), and the night sky, the serenity and mystery of the universe. Koechlin however was an avid self-borrower, and music 'inspired' by one subject could easily recur in a different context.

Charles Koechlin

Koechlin's unusually wide range of musical sympathies is reflected in the eclecticism of his own works, the various styles used in each work being suggested by their subjects. His firm belief in his own imaginative powers resulted in an almost complete lack of self-criticism, and he rarely revised works with a view to making them more concise. Like Berlioz, he began his compositions with a complete melodic draft. He then proceeded by a series of progressively detailed elaborations towards his final version. This, as he saw it, enabled him to preserve the freshness of his original inspiration, and gave each work continuity and logic. It also allowed him to work on several pieces simultaneously. If the spirit of freedom which pervades both his life and works can make some of his larger pieces appear unduly sectional, and if the juxtaposition of passages of great rhythmic complexity with others almost devoid of rhythmic interest has led some critics to brand his symphonic poems as uneven, then all this pales into insiginificance beside the powerful, humanitarian vision of a work like Le buisson ardent, or the irresistible humour and vitality of the 'Charlie Chaplin' finale of The Seven Stars' Symphony. The main problem is rather that Koechlin's music needs several hearings to be fully appreciated, despite its brilliant orchestration, and this has only become possible through modern CD recordings.

Happily, Koechlin was equally successful as a miniaturist, particularly in the pieces he wrote while captivated by the 'insolent beauty' of the female stars of the early sound film in the mid-1930s. Lilian Harvey inspired over 100 beautiful cameos (opp.139, 140, 149 and 151) in which Koechlin's harmonic gift (undoubtedly his greatest) is shown to the full, although their virtues are qualified by their smaller aims. The same qualities, together with a childlike spontaneity, are revealed in his very individual piano pieces, notably the Sonatines op.59, which entirely lack Satie's more adult and ironic contortions of tonality.

Koechlin described his life as a 'series of happy chances under a cloud of general misfortune'. One aspect of the silver lining was the necessity to teach, which led him to a profound study of Bach's music that considerably strengthened his own, and an increasing interest in counterpoint, as well as in modality, is evident in the compositions of the 1930s. Koechlin's polytonal music is never cerebral in its conception, for all its skilled craftmanship; it shows balanced concern for vertical and horizontal effect that is often lacking in Milhaud. In the 1940s Koechlin's aim was a self-sufficient 'art monodique' and this led to an increasing simplicity of expression and a Classical refinement parallel to that of Debussy's final years. His unworldly and uncompromising nature undoubtedly contributed to his neglect as a composer during his lifetime, and he attached great importance to the high opinions of his music expressed by Milhaud, Roussel, Falla, Fauré and other composers whom he, in turn, admired. In retrospect these opinions have come to be vindicated, and Koechlin's originality, visionary breadth and profundity place him well above the rank of petit maître. Rather, as Wilfrid Mellers concluded as early as 1942, he 'is among the very select number of contemporary composers who really matter'.

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE
first performed in Paris unless otherwise stated

op.
36	Jacob chez Laban (pastorale biblique, 1, Koechlin), S, T, SATB, orch, 1896–1908, Bériza, 19 May 1925
45	La forêt païenne (Danses antiques) (ballet, Koechlin), 1908–16, orchd 1920, concert perf., Arts Décoratifs, 11 June 1925
67	La divine vesprée (ballet, Koechlin), 1915–17, orchd 1918, concert perf., Schola Cantorum, 21 March 1937
158	Le 14 juillet: Liberté (incid music for Act 2 finale, R. Rolland), 1936, Arènes de Lutèce, 14 July 1936, reorchd, Alhambra, 15 July 1936
169	Alceste (Euripides, trans. H. Marchand), unison chorus, 1938, French Radio, 23 March 1952
210	L'âme heureuse (ballet, J. Charrat), 1945–7 [mostly from opp.205, 209], OC, 20 Feb 1948
222	Voyages: film dansé (ballet, Koechlin), 1947, orch inc. [from opp.132, 209, 214], completed by O. Nies, 1986, Kassel, Staatstheater, 21 Dec 1986
—	Silvérie, ou Les fonds Hollandais (comédie musicale, 1, Koechlin, after A. Allais and T. Bernard), 1948, inc.

ORCHESTRAL

2	L'épopée de l'Ecole Polytechnique, nar, orch, 1894, vs (Paris, 1894)
10	Deux pièces, 1894–6: Chant funèbre [after op.2/7], Chant de fiançailles
—	Symphony, A, 1895–1900, inc.
20	Deux pièces symphoniques, 1896–1900: En rêve, Au loin; no.2 pubd (1989)
25	La forêt, pt 1: Le jour, poème sym., 1897–1904, orchd 1905–6
26	Deux études (essais) symphoniques, 1896–1901, orchd 1901–4
27	En mer, la nuit, poème sym. after H. Heine: La mer du nord, 1899–1904
29	La forêt, pt 2: La nuit, poème sym., 1896–1907
30	L'automne, suite sym., 1896–1906: Les vendanges, Après-midi d'Octobre, Fin d'automne

38 Nuit de Walpurgis classique (Ronde nocturne), poème sym. after Verlaine, 1901–8, rev. 1915–16, orchd 1916

42bis L'abbaye: Finale, org, orch, 1909–12 [version of choral movt op.42/10], orchd 1920

43 Deux poèmes symphoniques, 1898–1909, orchd 1911, 1916: Soleil et danses dans la forêt, Vers la lointaine, nocturne

44bis Suite javanaise, 1910 [transcr. of gamelan music]: Gamelang palag, Gamelang salandro, [untitled]; no.2 in BSIM, vi (1910), 548–63

46 [5] Etudes antiques (Suite païenne, Poèmes antiques), suite sym., 1908–10, orchd 1908–13: Les temples, Soir au bord du lac [after op.31/6], Le cortège d'Amphitrite [after op.31/2], Epitaphe d'une jeune femme [after op.39/5], La joie païenne

46bis First version of La joie païenne, 1908 [op.46 finale]

47 Deux poèmes symphoniques, 1908–10, orchd 1911, 1916: Le printemps, L'hiver

48 Deux poèmes symphoniques (L'été), 1908–11, orchd 1916: Nuit de juin, Midi en août

49 Trois chorales: L'espérance, org, orch, 1910–12, orchd 1920; La charité, org, 1909; La foi, org, orch, 1912–16, orchd 1921

50bis Ballade (Scènes de la forêt), 7 sections after Heine, pf, orch, 1911–15, orchd 1919 (1974)

54 Suite légendaire 'La nuit féerique', 1901–15, orchd 1920

57bis Symphony no.1, 1911–15, orchd 1926 [version of Str Qt no.2, op.57]

60bis 4 sonatines françaises, orchd 1930 [version of op.60 for pf duet]

62 Rapsodie sur des chansons françaises, 1915–16, orchd ?1919

65bis Les heures persanes, orchd 1921 [version of pf suite op.65]

70bis Poème, hn, orch, orchd 1927 [version of op.70 for hn, pf]

76/1 3 chorals, 1908–9 and 1919–20, orchd 1921 [no.1 for brass after choral movt op.42/5]

76/2 2 chorals, small orch, 1923

76/3 3 chorals, small orch, 1918–20

85bis [version of Cl Sonata no.1, op.85], orchd 1946 (1995)

86bis [version of Cl Sonata no.2, op.86], orchd 1946 (1994)

95 La course de printemps, poème sym. after R. Kipling: Second Jungle Book, 1908–25, orchd 1926–7 (1973)

106 The Bride of a God, poème sym., 1929, collab. C. Urner

110 Hymne au jour, ondes martenot, orch, 1929, orchd 1932

115bis 20 chansons bretonnes, vc, orch, orchd 1934 [version of op.115 for vc, pf]

117bis 5 chorals dans les modes du moyen-âge, 1931, orchd 1932 [from op.117]

121 Fugue symphonique 'Saint-Georges', 1932

127 Choral fugué (Hymne au soleil), C, 1933

128 Choral fugué de style modal, org, orch, 1933, orchd 1944

129 Vers la voûte étoilée, poème sym., orchd 1933 [from Nocturne, e♭, pf], rev. 1939 (1996)

130 Sur les flots lointains, poème sym., 1933 [from melody by Urner] (1996)

148 Hymne à la jeunesse, after A. Gide, 1934, orchd 1935

— Symphonie d'hymnes, 1936 [compiled from opp.127, 48/1, 110, 148, 69]

157ter Marche funèbre, orch/wind orch, orchd 1937 [from op.157bis/13 for fl, pf]

159 La méditation de Purun Bhagat, poème sym. after Kipling: Second Jungle Book, 1936 (1986)

160 Les eaux vives, suite, 1936, for Paris Exposition 1937

170 La cité nouvelle, rêve d'avenir, poème sym. after H.G. Wells: Men like Gods, 1938

170bis Final chorale from op.170, str, 1938

171 Le buisson ardent, pt 2, poème sym. after R. Rolland: Jean-Christophe, 1938 (1984) [see op.203]

175 La loi de la jungle, poème sym. after Kipling: The Jungle Book, 1939, orchd 1940 (1986)

176 Les bandar-log (Scherzo des singes), poème sym. after Kipling: The Jungle Book, 1939, orchd 1940 (1967)

177 Le jeu de la nativité, org, chbr orch, 1941 (1980)

187 Offrande musical sur le nom de BACH, 12 movts, pf, org, orch, 1942, orchd 1946

193 Silhouettes de comédie, 12 pieces, bn, orch, 1942–3, orchd 1943 (1991), arr. bn, pf (1990)

194 2 sonatines, ob d'amore/s sax, chbr orch, 1942–3, orchd 1943 (1989)

196 Symphony no.2, 5 movts, 1943–4 [based on opp.126, 185/4, 82, 90, 109, 111]

202 Le docteur Fabricius, poème sym. after C. Dollfus, 1941–4, orchd 1946

203 Le buisson ardent, pt 1, 1945 (1984) [see op.171]

205 Partita, 5 movts, chbr orch, 1945, orchd 1946 (1952)

214 Introduction et 4 interludes de style atonal-sériel, 1947, orch completed by Nies, 1986 (1987) [see ballet op.222]

CHORAL

1/1 Le renouveau (C. d'Orléans), SATB, pf ad lib, 1890–94 (1896)

3 La vérandah (L. de Lisle), S, SSAA, pf/orch, 1893 (1899)

4/1 Dans le ciel clair (de Lisle), S, Mez, A, female chorus, pf/orch, 1894–5 (1900)

4/2 Sous bois (P. Gille), S, SSAA, pf, 1897 (1898)

7/4 Aux temps des fées (E. Haraucourt), 1937 [version of song]

8/7 La paix (T. de Banville), 1898 [version of song]

11 La fin de l'homme (de Lisle), T, Bar, SATB, orch, 1895, rev. 1898, 1900 (1906)

12 La lampe du ciel (de Lisle), S, T, Bar/B, SA(TB ad lib), orch, 1896 (1906)

15/2 Midi (de Lisle), SATB, orch, ?1900 [version of song]

16 L'abbaye (Lat. liturgical texts), pt 1, 8 movts, S, T, chorus, org, orch, 1899–1902, orchd 1903 (1907)

18 3 poèmes du 'Livre de la Jungle' (Kipling, trans. L. Fabulet and R. d'Humières), Mez/S, A, T, B, SAT, pf/orch, 1899–1901, orchd 1903–4 (1905)

37 Chant funèbre à la mémoire des jeunes femmes défuntes (Vierges mortes), double chorus, org, orch, 1902–7, orchd ?1908

40 La chute des étoiles (de Lisle), female chorus, pf, 1905–9

42 L'abbaye (Lat. liturgical texts), pt 2, 10 movts, S, Mez, A, T, Bar, B, triple chorus, org, orch, 1905–10, orchd 1913, 1920

44/3 Choeur des voleurs (A. Bonnard), male chorus, pf, 1908

69 Choral (Koechlin), double chorus, org, orch, 1918, orchd 1919 [finale for suite Les saisons with opp.30, 47, 48]

118 Duos, trios et quatuors a cappella de caractère modal, 1932

138 Chant pour Thaelmann, chorus, pf/wind orch, 1934 (1934), orchd 1937

150 Quelques choeurs [10] réligieux a cappella, de style modal, 1935 (1951), no.3 orchd 1937

— Hymne à la liberté (de Lisle), chorus, wind band, 1936 (1936)

— Hymne à la raison (de Lisle), chorus, wind band, 1936 (1936)

161 Requiem des pauvres bougres, 6 movts, chorus, pf, org, ondes martenot, orch, 1936–7, movts 1–4 orchd P. Renaudin, 1981–2

225 15 motets de style archaïque, chorus, ww qt, 1949

SONGS

1/2–6 5 rondels (Banville): La nuit, Le thé, Le printemps, L'été, La chasse, 1890–94 (1896), orchd 1895

5 5 mélodies: Promenade galante (Banville), Moisson prochaine (L.-H. Bouilhet), Chanson d'amour (Bouilhet), Menuet (F. Gregh), Si tu le veux (de Marsan), 1893–7 (1898–1900, 1905), all but no.3 orchd 1893–7

7 4 poèmes d'E. Haraucourt: Clair de lune, Plein eau, Dame du ciel, Aux temps des fées, 1890–95 (1900), orchd 1894–7

8 7 rondels (Banville): La pêche, L'hiver, Les pierreries, La lune, L'air, Le matin, La paix, 1891–5 (1897), orchd 1896–7

9 Les clairs de lune (de Lisle): Mez/S, T, pf/orch, female chorus ad lib, 1893 (1905), orchd 1897, choral arr. 1916

13 Poèmes d'automne: Déclin d'amour (A. Sully-Prud'homme), Les rêves morts (de Lisle), Le nénuphar (Haraucourt), fl obbl ad lib, L'astre rouge (de Lisle), 1894–9 (1905), orchd ?1894–9

14 9 rondels (de Banville): Le jour, Le midi, L'eau, Le vin, Les métaux, La terre, L'automne, Les étoiles, La guerre, 1896–9, female chorus ad lib in nos.6–9 (n.d.), orchd 1901

15 3 mélodies (de Lisle): Juin, Midi, Nox, 1897–1900 (1902, 1905), orchd 1900
17 3 mélodies: Le colibri (de Lisle), La prière du mort (J.-M. de Heredia), Epiphanie (de Lisle), 1895–1900 (1902), nos.2 and 3 orchd 1897, 1900
21 2 villanelles (de Lisle): Dans l'air léger, Le temps, l'étendue et le nombre, 1900–01 (1905)
22 4 mélodies: La chanson des ingénues (Verlaine), Novembre (P. Bourget), Mon rêve familier (Verlaine), Il pleure dans mon coeur (Verlaine), 1900–01 (n.d.)
23 2 poèmes d'André Chénier: La jeune Tarentine, Néère, 1900–02 (1905), no.1 orchd 1930
24 4 poèmes de 'La bonne chanson' (Verlaine): Le soleil du matin, Un jour de juin, N'est-ce pas?, Va, chanson, str qt ad lib, 1901–2 (n.d.)
28 4 mélodies: Sur la grève (R. d'Humières), Automne (A. Samain), Accompagnement (Samain), Le vaisseau (Haraucourt), 1902–7 (n.d.)
31 6 mélodies (Samain: Aux flancs du vase): Le sommeil de Canope, Le cortège d'Amphitrite, L'île ancienne, La maison du matin, Le repas préparé, Amphise et Melitta, 1902–8 (n.d.), nos.1–3 orchd 1912–21
35 4 mélodies (Samain): J'ai rêvé cette nuit, Améthyste, Rhodante, Soir païen, 1905–9, 2–4 pubd (n.d.)
39 5 chansons de Bilitis (P. Louÿs): Hymne à Astarté, Pluie au matin, Chant funèbre, Hymne à la nuit, Epitaphe de Bilitis, 1898–1908 (1923)
44 3 mélodies: Le paysage dans le cadre des portières (Verlaine), Des roses sur la mer (R. Vivien), Choeur des voleurs (Bonnard: Les familiers), 1900–16 [no.3 for TB chorus, pf]
56 5 mélodies (T. Klingsor: Shéhérazade): Chanson d'Engaddi, Paysage, La rose du rameau sec, La neige, Le ventre merveilleux, 1914–16 (1990)
68 2 mélodies: Hymne à Venus (V. de l'Isle-Adam), Dissolution (P. Claudel: La connaissance de l'est), 1918
84 8 mélodies (Klingsor: Shéhérazade): Dédicace, Le voyage, Le potier, La chanson des beaux amants, Chanson de flûte, L'oiseau en cage, Offrande, La chanson d'Ishak de Mossoul, 1922–3 (1990)
104 2 mélodies: Infini, fais que je t'oublie (P.-J. Toulet), Je suis jaloux, Psyché (P. Corneille), 1927–8

CHAMBER AND SOLO INSTRUMENTAL

6 Suite, 2 pf, 1896 (1899)
6bis Allegretto, vn, pf, 1898 (1899)
6ter Andante, vn, pf, vc ad lib, 1898 (1899)
19 Suite, 5 movts, pf duet, 1898–1901 (1901)
20/2 Au loin, eng hn, pf, 1895–6 (1989) [first version of orch piece, orig. for solo pf]
32 4 petites pièces, hn, vn/va, pf, 1896–1906 (1974)
32bis 2 nocturnes, fl, hn, pf/hp, 1897–1907 (1989)
33 Nocturne, chromatic hp/pf, 1907
34 3 pièces, bn, pf, 1898–1907 (1990)
34bis 3 pièces, fl, bn, pf, 1899–1908, rev. 1944 (1993)
41 24 esquisses, pf, 1905–15 (1922)
50 Ballade, pf, 1911–15 [solo version of op.50bis for pf, orch]
51 String Quartet no.1, 1911–13 (1921)
52 Flute Sonata, finale after Virgil, 1911–13 (1922)
53 Viola Sonata, 1902–15 (1923) [finale after op.28/1]
55 Suite en quatuor, fl, vn, va, pf, 1911–15 (1978)
57 String Quartet no.2, 1911–15
58 Oboe Sonata, 1911–16 (1981)
59 5 sonatines, pf, 1915–16 (1918)
60 4 sonatines françaises, pf duet, 1919 (1925), arr. org 1926
61a 64 exercices faciles, pf, 1919–20 (1928)
61b L'école du jeu lié, pf, 1919–20 (1928)
61c 10 petites pièces faciles, pf, 1915–16, 1919–20 (1921)
61d 12 petites pièces, pf, 1915–16, 1919–20 (1921)
63 Paysages et marines, 12 pieces, pf, 1915–16 (1918)
63bis Paysages et marines, fl, cl, str qt, pf, arr. 1917
64 Violin Sonata, 1915–16 (1922)
65 Les heures persanes, 16 pieces after Loti, pf, 1913–19 (1986)
66 Cello Sonata, 1917 (1923)
70 Horn Sonata, 1918–25 (1970), movt 2 arr. a sax, pf, 1941
71 Bassoon Sonata, 1918–19 (1990), arr. hn, pf
72 String Quartet no.3, 1917–21 (1924)
75 Sonata, 2 fl, 1918–20 (1922)
75bis Pastorale, fl, cl, pf, 1917–21 (1990) [movt 1 of inc. Trio]
77 12 pastorales, pf, 1916–20 (1923)
80 Quintet no.1, pf qnt, 1908, 1911, 1917–21 (1985)
85 Clarinet Sonata no.1, 1923 (1993)
86 Clarinet Sonata no.2, 1923 (1991)
87 4 nouvelles sonatines, pf, 1923–4 (1926)
91 Divertissement, 2 fl, a fl/cl, 1923–4 (1939)
92 Trio, str/ww (fl/ob, cl, bn), 1924 (1928)
107 3 sonatines, org, 1928–9, no.1 pubd (1937)
115 20 chansons bretonnes sur d'anciennes chansons populaires [from Barzas Breis], vc, pf, 1931–2, 12 pubd (1934)
123 20 sonneries, hunting hns, 1932
124 L'ancienne maison de campagne, 12 pieces, pf, 1932–3 (1937)
— Nocturne, e♭, pf, 1923–32 [see op.129 for orch]
142 20 sonneries, hunting hns, 1935
147bis Tu crois à beau soleil, wind band, 1935 [arr. of Louis XIII song]
153a Quelques chorals [4] pour des fêtes populaires, band, 1935–6, nos.3–4 pubd (1937)
153bis 10 sonneries, hunting hns, 1935, 1944–5
155a Sonatine modale, fl, cl, 1935–6 (1970)
155bis Idylle, 2 cl/vn, va, 1936 (1936)
156 Quintet 'Primavera', fl, hp, vn, va, vc, 1936 (1985)
157 14 chants, unpubd, arr. fl, 1936, fl, pf as op.157bis, 1936 (1948)
162 La belle traversée, 3 pieces, pf, 1936–7
165 Wind Septet (Caprice sur le retour de mon fils [Yves]), fl, ob, eng hn, cl, a sax, bn, hn, 1937 (1947), arr. fl, eng hn, C-cl, A-cl, basset hn, b cl, bn, hn, 1945
165bis La vie s'ouvre devant toi — Va librement!, alternative fugal finale for op.165, 14 winds, 1937
173a 4 petites pièces, cl, hn, 1938–9 (1970)
173bis 2 pièces, cl, pf, 1939
174 Vers le soleil, 7 monodies, ondes martenot, 1939
174bis Course au soleil, alternative finale for op.174, ondes martenot, pf/orch, 1939
178 14 pièces, cl, pf, 1942 (1992)
179 14 pièces, ob/ob d'amore/eng hn, pf, 1942 (1991)
179bis Chant de la résurrection, 2 tpt, 3 trbn, pf/org/ hmn, 1942 [arr. of op.179/14]
180 15 pièces, hn, pf, some for 4 natural hn, 1942 (1984)
184 3 sonatines, fl, 1942–3 (1951)
185 Suite, 3 movts after G. Sand, eng hn, 1942 (1991)
188 15 études, a sax, pf, 1942–3 (1970)
192 100 [101] thèmes pour improvisation à l'orgue, 1943
195 15 duos (Souvenirs de Bretagne), 2 cl, 1943–4 (1978)
197 Les chants de Kervéléan [6], melody inst, pf, 1940, 1944
198 Les chants de nectaire, 32 pieces after A. France: La révolte des anges, fl, 1944 (1999)
199 Les chants de nectaire (Dans la forêt antique), 32 pieces after Virgil, fl, 1944 (1999)
200 Les chants de nectaire (Prières, cortèges et danses pour les dieux familiers), 32 pieces, fl, 1944 (1999)
201 Adagio, org, 1945 [for marriage of Soizic Guieysse]
206 Trio, ob, cl, bn, 1945 (1957)
208 12 petites pièces très faciles, pf, 1946
209 15 préludes, nos.1–13, pf, no.14, org, no.15, pf duet, 1946, nos.1–10, 12–13 (1954), no.14 (1961), all but no.14 orchd 1947–8 [see ballets opp.210, 222]
211 Adagio, org, 1947 (1968) [for marriage of Antoinette Guieysse]
216 11 monodies: 1–9, cl; 10, ob d'amore/cl/s sax; 11, eng hn, 1947–8 (1989)
217 In memoriam, 5 pieces, various ens, 1947
220 3 monodies, lame sonore [see Writings, 1950], pf, 1948
221 Sonate à 7, solo ob, fl, hpd/hp, str qt, 1949
223 Quintet no.2 'Primavera II', fl, hp, vn, va, vc, 1949
224 Stèle funéraire, fl + pic + a fl, 1950 (1969)
225bis 2 duos, fl, cl, 1949–50 [arr. op.225/9, 11]
226 Adagio, org, 1950 [for marriage of Colette Guieysse]

CINEMA

music written for, or suggested by, films

132 Seven Stars' Symphony, 7 movts: Douglas Fairbanks, Lilian Harvey, Greta Garbo, Clara Bow, Marlene

Dietrich, Emil Jannings, Charlie Chaplin, orch, 1933, rev. 1944 (1969)
134 L'Andalouse dans Barcelone (unused score for part of film Croisières avec l'escadre), orch, 1933 (1995)
139 Premier album de Lilian [Harvey], 9 pieces, S/T/cl, fl+pic, pf, 1934 (1985)
140 Le portrait de Daisy Hamilton, 89 pieces, pf, some for small ens, 1934–8, 12 for pf, 8 arr. 2 pf by R. Orledge (2000)
141 Les confidences d'un joueur de clarinette (score for unrealized film project, scenario by Koechlin, after Erckmann-Chatrian), small orch, 1934, completed by P. Renaudin (1981)
149 Second album de Lilian, 8 pieces, fl + pic, ondes martenot, hpd, pf, 1935 (1986)
151 7 chansons pour Gladys (Koechlin), after film Calais-Douvres (dir. A. Litvak) starring Lilian Harvey, S, pf, 1935 (1988)
163 5 danses pour Ginger [Rogers], nos.1–2, pf, nos.3–5 unspecified, 1937, rev.1939; no.2 in Clavier, xxiii/6 (1984), 18–21, nos.1–2, 3–5 arr.2 pf by O. Nies (2000)
164 Epitaphe de Jean Harlow (Romance), fl, a sax/va, pf/hp, 1937 (1970)
167 Victoire de la vie (film score, dir. H. Cartier-Bresson), chbr orch, 1938

MISCELLANEOUS

Many vocalises, canons, fugues [incl. 1 of op.114, 1930, and op.126, str qt/org, 1931, orchd as 4th and 1st movts of Sym. no.2], chorales [incl. 27, opp.78–9, 1921; 62, opp.81–3, 1922–3; 22, op.117, 1931], harmony and counterpoint exercises [incl. 19, op.109, 1929, and 20, op.111, 1929], pieces for sight-reading and solfège, folksong arrangements

ORCHESTRATIONS

G. Fauré: Pelléas et Mélisande op.80: Prélude, Andantino quasi allegretto (Fileuse), Sicilienne, Molto adagio (La mort de Mélisande), 1898; C. Saint-Saëns: Lola (oc, 1, S. Bordèse), 1901; C. Debussy: Khamma [except bars 1–78], 1912–13; A. de Castillon: 6 mélodies (Silvestre), op.8, 1920; C. Porter: Within the Quota, ballet, 1923; E. Chabrier: Bourrée fantasque, 1924; J.S. Bach: Chorale 'In dir ist Freude', 1933; F. Schubert: Fantasy 'Wanderer', C, D760, 1933; G. Fauré: Chanson de Mélisande, 1936 [op.159bis]; B. Godard: Suite, 1945; P. Tchaikovsky: 4 Pieces, incl. Swan Lake Waltz, 1945; C. Urner: Suite normande (Esquisses normandes), 1945

Principal publishers: Billaudot, Eschig, Salabert, Schott

MSS in F-Pn, US-BEm, Bibliothèque Gustav Mahler (writings, letters), with Paris publishers; copies available via O. Nies, Archiv Charles Koechlin, Sängerweg 3, D-34125 Kassel, Germany.

WRITINGS

'La pédagogie musicale: professeurs et écoles libres', Rapport sur la musique française contemporaine (Rome, 1913), 139–49
Etude sur les notes de passage (Paris, 1922)
'Evolution de l'harmonie: période contemporaine', EMDC, II/i (1925), 591–760
'La mélodie', Cinquante ans de musique française de 1874 à 1925, ed. L. Rohozinski, ii (Paris, 1925), 1–62
'Souvenirs de Charles Koechlin', Cinquante ans de musique française de 1874 à 1925, ed. L. Rohozinski, ii (Paris, 1925), 387–95
'Les tendances de la musique française contemporaine', EMDC, II/i (1925), 56–145
Précis des règles du contrepoint (Paris, 1926; Eng. trans., 1927)
Claude Debussy (Paris, 1927)
Gabriel Fauré (Paris, 1927, 2/1949; Eng. trans., 1946)
Traité de l'harmonie, i–iii (Paris, 1927–30)
Etude sur le choral d'école (Paris, 1929)
Etude sur l'écriture de la fugue d'école (Paris, 1934)
Théorie de la musique (Paris, 1934)
'Pierre Maurice, musicien', in M. Maurice: Pierre Maurice (Geneva, 1938)
Preface to J. Douel: Traité pratique de réalisation harmonique (Paris, 1940)
Les instruments à vent (Paris, 1948)
'Art et liberté: tour d'ivoire', Contrepoints, no.6 (1949), 102–21
'Quelques réflexions au sujet de la musique atonale', Music Today: Journal of the International Society for Contemporary Music, i (1949), 26–35
Preface to J. Keller: La lame sonore (Paris, 1950)
'Etude sur Chostakovitch', Musique russe, ed. P. Souvtchinsky, ii (Paris, 1953), 277–95
Traité de l'orchestration, i–iv (Paris, 1954–9)
'Etude sur Koechlin par lui-même', ReM, nos.340–41 (1981), 41–72; Eng. trans. in Orledge (1989), 297–324
Correspondance [1898–1951], ed. M. Li-Koechlin, ReM, nos.348–50 (1982)
'Souvenirs sur Debussy', Cahiers Debussy, no.7 (1983), 4–6
'Etude sur Albert Roussel', Revue internationale de musique française, no.14 (1984), 79–88
'Maurice Ravel', Cahiers Maurice Ravel, i (1985), 41–55
Numerous articles in Contrepoints (1946–9), Guide du concert, Humanité (1935–8), Ménestrel (1921–36), Monde musicale (1920–39), Pensée (1939–49), ReM (1921–53) and programme notes for the Concerts Colonne (1919–24); complete list in Orledge (1989), 423–8

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Grove5 (R. Myers); KdG (O. Nies) [incl. further bibliography]
M. Rousseau: 'Un entretien avec ... Charles Koechlin', Guide du concert, xv (1928–9), 215–17
J. Herscher-Clément: 'L'oeuvre de Charles Koechlin', ReM, nos.167–70 (1936), 315–22
W. Mellers: 'A Plea for Koechlin', MR, iii (1942), 190–202
G. Bender: 'Un entretien avec ... Charles Koechlin', Guide du concert, xxviii (1948), 227–9
D. Milhaud: Notes sans musique (Paris, 1949, 2/1963, enlarged 3/1973 as Ma vie heureuse; Eng. trans., 1952/R)
P. Collaer: La musique moderne (Brussels, 1955, 3/1963; Eng. trans., 1961)
R. Bernard: Histoire de la musique, ii (Paris, 1962), 842–6
J. Roy: Présences contemporaines: musique française (Paris, 1962), 57–78
R. Myers: 'Charles Koechlin: Some Recollections', ML, xlvi (1965), 217–24
R. Delage: 'Trois figures de musiciens contemporains', La musique en Alsace – hier et aujourd'hui (Strasbourg, 1970), 299–306
R. Orledge: 'Charles Koechlin and the Early Sound Film 1933–38', PRMA, xcviii (1971–2), 1–16
R. Orledge: A Study of the Composer Charles Koechlin (1867–1950) (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1973)
J.E. Woodward: The Theoretical Writings of Charles Koechlin (diss., U. of Rochester, 1974)
M. Li-Koechlin, ed.: Catalogue de l'oeuvre de Charles Koechlin (Paris, 1975)
T.H. McGuire: The Piano Works of Charles Koechlin (1867–1950) (diss., U. of North Carolina, 1975)
E.K. Kirk: The Chamber Music of Charles Koechlin (diss., Catholic U., Washington DC, 1977)
E.K. Kirk: 'A Parisian in America: the Lectures and Legacies of Charles Koechlin', CMc, no.25 (1978), 50–68
E.K. Kirk: 'Koechlin's Neglected Le livre de la Jungle', MQ, lxiv (1978), 229–37
P.-G. Langevin: 'Charles Koechlin, musicien de l'avenir', ReM, nos.324–6 (1979), 135–46
J. Guieysse, ed. P.-G. Langevin: 'Charles Koechlin: l'oeuvre d'orchestre', ReM, nos.324–6 (1979), 147–70
M. Fleury: 'Charles Koechlin (1867–1950)', La jaune et la rouge, no.385 (1983), 28–32
O. Nies: '"Ganz du selbst sein": der Komponist Charles Koechlin (1867–1950)', Neuland, no.5 (1984–5), 256–70
O. Nies: 'Schönheit künstlicher Paradiese: die Musik von Charles Koechlin', Fono-Forum (1985), no.3, pp.26–7, 30–31
O. Nies: 'Der Geist der Freiheit: Charles Koechlins "Livre de la Jungle" in Paris', NZM, Jg.147, no.4 (1986), 50 only
M. Fleury: 'Compositeurs et polytechniciens', La jaune et la rouge, no.429 (1987), 31–5
R. Orledge: 'Satie, Koechlin and the ballet Uspud', ML, lxviii (1987), 26–41
R. Orledge: Charles Koechlin (1867–1950): his Life and Works (London, 1989, 2/1995)
S. Terlikowski: Les mélodies de Charles Koechlin (diss., U. of Lyons, 1991)
B. Vogel: L'oeuvre mélodique de Charles Koechlin (diss., U. of Strasbourg, 1992)
O. Nies: 'Eine Filmmusik anderer Art: Koechlin und seine filminspirierten Kompositionen', Das Orchester, xlvii/2 (1999), 14–19

ROBERT ORLEDGE

Koeckert, Rudolf (Josef) (b Grosspriesen bei Aussig [now Ústí nad Labem, Czech Republic], 27 June 1913). German violinist. He studied with Jaroslav Kocian at the Prague Conservatory until 1938, becoming leader of the Prague Radio Orchestra and then the German PO in Prague, 1939–45. He led the Bamberg SO, 1945–9 and from 1949 was leader of the Bavarian Radio SO in Munich. In 1952 he was appointed professor of violin at the Augsburg Conservatory. He gained wider renown as the leader for 43 years of the Koeckert Quartet, which he first formed in 1939 as the Sudetendeutsche String Quartet (or Prague German String Quartet) and renamed the Koeckert Quartet in 1947. Its members at the time of its dissolution in 1992 were Koeckert's son Rudolf Joachim Koeckert, who succeeded Willi Buchner as second violin in 1965 and became leader in 1982; Antonio Spiller, who joined as second violin in 1982; Franz Schessl, who succeeded Oskar Riedl as viola player in 1975; and Hermar Stiehler, who succeeded Josef Merz as cellist in 1976. The quartet gave the premières of works written for it by Bialas, Ginastera, Hindemith, Krenek and Zillig, among others. Koeckert also edited and published Bruckner's String Quartet in C minor (Vienna, 1956), which he discovered at Bamberg in 1950.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Schmitt: '25 Jahre Koeckert-Quartett', Musica, xviii (1964), 86
J. Creighton: Discopaedia of the Violin, 1889–1971 (Toronto, 1974)

RUDOLF LÜCK/TULLY POTTER

Koehne, Graeme (John) (b Adelaide, 3 Aug 1956). Australian composer. After undergraduate and postgraduate study at the University of Adelaide with Richard Meale and an appointment as a tutor at the University of New England, he came to prominence with Rain Forest (1981), winner of the Australian Composers' Award in 1982. He subsequently formed a collaboration with the choreographer Graeme Murphy. While at Yale on a Harkness Fellowship in 1984, Koehne worked privately with Andriessen and Virgil Thomson. On his return to Australia in 1987 he became a composition lecturer at the University of Adelaide. Koehne's style draws on a postmodern attitude to stylistic allusion and appropriation, freely adopting aspects of art music and popular styles. After his early orchestral work riverrun … (1982), based on the first word of Joyce's Finnegans Wake, he went on to develop an anti-modernist aesthetic and has been outspoken in his criticism of what he sees as the orthodoxies and audience alienation of modernist styles. This can be seen in the Ravelian orchestral colours of Rain Forest, the Gothic Toccata (1983), the pastiche chorale prelude To His Servant Bach (1989) and the popular styles in the orchestral works Unchained Melody (1991), Powerhouse (1993) and Elevator Music (1997).

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: The Selfish Giant (ballet, G. Murphy, after O. Wilde), 1982; Nearly Beloved (ballet, Murphy), 1986; Gallery: Nocturnes (ballet, Murphy), 1987; The Summer of Our Memories (ballet), 1988; Voyage Within (ballet, G. Welch), 1988; Love Burns (chbr op, 2, L. Nowra), 1991–2; The Kid Stakes (score to silent film, T. Ordell), 1994; The Sentimental Bloke (score to silent film, R. Longford), 1995

Orch: The Iridian Plateau, 1977; First Blue Hours, 1979; Rain Forest, 1981; riverrun …, 1982; Capriccio, pf, str, 1987; Maxfield Parrish: Daybreak, 1987; Fanfare, brass, perc, 1988; Once Around the Sun, 1988; Rhythmic Birds of the Antipodes, 1988 [from ballet Voyage Within]; Unchained Melody, 1991; Powerhouse, 1993; Elevator Music, 1997

Chbr and solo inst: Gui Qt, gui, va, pf, perc, 1974; Pf Sonata, 1976; Harmonies in Silver and Blue, pf, 1977; Cantilene, fl, ob, str qt, pf, 1978; Twilight Rain, pf, 1979; Gothic Toccata, org, 1983; Ricercare and Burletta, str trio, 1983; Str Qt no.1 'Divertissement: 3 pièces bourgeoises', 1983; Miniature, fl, cl, str qt, 1985; To His Servant Bach, God Grants a Final Glimpse: the Morning Star, str qt/str orch/gui qt/org/hp, 1989; Str Qt no.2 'Shaker Dances', 1995

Vocal: Dreamer of Dreams (W. Morris), SATB, org, orch, 1986; 3 Poems of Byron, 1v, pf/str, 1991

PETER McCALLUM

Koehnken & Grimm. American firm of organ builders. It was founded in 1860 by John Henry [Johann Heinrich] Koehnken (b Altenbülstedt, nr Zeven, Lower Saxony, 15 May 1837; d Cincinnati, 23 Feb 1897), who succeeded his former employer, the pioneer Cincinnati organ builder Matthias Schwab (1808–63). Koehnken was trained as a carpenter, and emigrated to the USA in 1837, entering Schwab's employ in 1839 and eventually learning all aspects of the craft. Gallus Grimm (b Aixheim, nr Neufra, Württemberg, 16 Oct 1827; d Cincinnati, 1 Aug 1897) was apprenticed to the organ builder Martin Braun in Germany, and began working for Schwab in 1853. Grimm worked with Koehnken from the outset, as a full partner in Koehnken & Co. from 1864, and under the name of Koehnken & Grimm from 1876. For 40 years the firm had a virtual monopoly on organ building in a rapidly developing part of the country. Koehnken retired in 1896, but Grimm continued until 1900 with his son Edward under the name of G. Grimm & Son. Koehnken & Grimm organs were ruggedly built, with stop-lists and tonal qualities reflecting their classical central German orientation. Among the firm's noteworthy three-manual instruments were those built for Plum Street Temple, Cincinnati (1866), and the Mother of God Church, Covington, Kentucky (1875); probably their most unusual instrument was a one-manual organ of nine stops on very high wind pressure, built to accompany an enormous chorus in Theodore Thomas's first May Festival, held in 1873 (see CINCINNATI, §2).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.S. Humphreys: 'The Koehnken Orgelbau: a Casualty to Progress', Music: the AGO and RCCO Magazine, iv/9 (1970), 23–4
K.W. Hart: Cincinnati Organ Builders of the Nineteenth Century (thesis, U. of Cincinnati, 1972)

BARBARA OWEN

Koellreutter, Hans Joachim (b Freiburg, 2 Sept 1915). German composer, teacher and conductor, active also in Brazil, India and Japan. He attended the Berlin Academy of Music (1934–6), where his teachers were Gustav Thomas and Scherchen for composition and conducting, Scheck for the flute, Martienssen for the piano and Schünemann and Seiffert for musicology; his flute studies were continued with Moyse at the Geneva Conservatoire (1936–7). In 1937 he moved to Brazil, of which he became a naturalized citizen in 1948. He taught theory and composition at the Brazilian Conservatory in Rio de Janeiro (1937–52) and the São Paulo Institute of Music (1942–4). The group Música Viva, which he founded in as early as 1939, included some of the best-known Brazilian musicians; its manifesto promoting new music experimentation was published in 1946. He directed the São Paulo Free Academy of Music (1952–5) and the Bahia University music department (1952–62). In these various posts he was responsible for introducing many Brazilian composers to 12-note and serial methods. He was also chief conductor of the Bahia SO (1952–62) and served as general secretary and president of the Brazilian section of the ISCM. In 1963 he left Brazil to become head of the programme department at the Munich Goethe Institute. He was then regional representative of the Goethe Institute in New Delhi (1965–9) and principal of the Delhi School of Music (1966–9), moving in 1970 to Tokyo, where he took appointments as director of the Goethe Institute, professor at the Institute of Christian Music and conductor of the Heinrich Schütz Chorale. In 1975, after returning to Brazil, he taught privately in Rio and São Paulo, took visiting appointments in universities throughout the country, and participated in composition festivals.

The only early tonal works which Koellreutter recognizes are the two flute sonatas (1937–9). These were followed by a period of classical 12-note serial writing, based on the principles of Gestalt theory, and exemplified by Música 1941 for piano and the Noturnos de Oneyda Alvarenga for mezzo-soprano and string quartet (1945), before he developed a more individual serial technique in such works as the orchestral Mutações (1953). During the 1960s he favoured a total serial organization stressing linearity, a procedure he termed 'planimetric'. He then combined serialism with graphic notation and other aleatory methods in Tanka I for voice and koto (1971) and Tanka II for voice and piano (1973). In the 1980s he gave priority to his teachings and writings over composition. He reworked his earlier choral piece O café into an opera-drama, which was produced with great success in Santos to celebrate the city's 450th anniversary in 1996.

WORKS
(selective list)

Op: O café (Koellreutter, after M. de Andrade), 1996 [from choral work, 1956]

Orch: 4 Pieces, 1937; Variations, 1945; Música, 1947; Mutações, 1953; Concretion, orch/chbr orch, 1960; Constructio ad synesin, chbr orch, 1962; Advaita, sitār, orch/chbr orch, 1968; Sunyata, fl, chbr orch (Western and Indian insts), tape, 1968; Acronon, pf, orch, acrylic sphere, 1978–9

Vocal: Noturnos de Oneyda Alvarenga, Mez, str qt, 1945; O café (de Andrade), chorus, 1956, rev. 1975; 8 haikai de Pedro Xisto, Bar, fl, elec gui, pf, gongs, cymbals, woodblocks, tam-tam, 1963; Cantos de Kulka, S, orch, 1964; India Report (cant., L. Lutze), S, spkr, chbr chorus, speaking chorus, chbr orch (Western and Indian insts), 1967; Yū, S, Jap. insts, 1970; Tanka I, 1v, koto, 1971; Mu-dai (P. Picasso), 1v, 1972; Tanka II, 1v, pf, 1973; Tanka III, 1v, hp, 1975; 3 cantos (de Andrade), 1v, 1977–8; Cidadezinha qualquer (C. Drummond, de Andrade), chorus, 1980; Tanka VII, 1v, orch, tape recs, 1981–2; Retrato da cidade, Bar, str, 1983–4

Chbr and solo insts: 2 sonatas, fl, pf, 1937, 1939; Sonata, vn, pf, 1939; Inventions, ob, cl, bn, 1940; Música 1941, pf, 1941; Variations, fl, eng hn, cl, bn, 1941; Duo, vc, pf, 1943; Música 1947, str qt, 1947; Sinfonia da câmera, 12 insts, 1949; Diaton 8, fl, eng hn, bn, hp, xyl, 1955; Tanka V, pf, 1977; Tanka VI, fl, gui, 1979; Samadhi, ob, 1981; Audio-Game, various inst ens, 1992; Dharma, fl, ob, eng hn, bn, hn, tpt, trbn, elec gui, elec mouth harmonica, perc, vib, va, vc, 1992

Principal publishers: Editorial Cooperativa Interamericana de Compositores, Modern, Napoleão, Southern

WRITINGS

Three Lectures on Music (Mysore, 1968)
Jazz Harmonia (São Paulo, 1969)
Ten Lectures on Music (New Delhi, 1969)
History of Western Music (New Delhi, 1970)
Harmonia funcional: introdução à teoria das funções harmônicas (São Paulo, 1978, 2/1986)
Estética: em busca de um mundo sem vis-à-vis (São Paulo, 1983)
Terminologia de uma nova estética da música (Porto Alegre, 1990, 2/1998)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KdG (M. Fürst-Heidtmann)
G. Béhague: Music in Latin America: an Introduction (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1979)
V. Mariz: História da música no Brasil (Rio de Janeiro, 1981, 4/1994)
J.M. Neves: Música brasileira contemporânea (São Paulo, 1981)
C. Kater: H.J. Koellreutter e a Música Viva: movimentos em direção à modernidade (diss., U. Federal de Minas Gerais, 1991)

GERARD BÉHAGUE

Koenig (i). Alsatian family of organ builders. They are unrelated to Joseph and Paul-Marie Koenig (see KOENIG (ii)). Jean-Georges Koenig (b Strasbourg, 16 May 1920; d Strasbourg, 26 Nov 1992) served his apprenticeship with Roethinger in Strasbourg and set up his own shop in Sarre-Union in 1945. His faith in mechanical action did not win over organists' support until the 1960s; Michel Chapuis and André Isoir in particular helped make Koenig's work well known, mainly through the organ in Sarre-Union (1967, 2 manuals, 31 stops) which was based on the techniques shown in Dom Bedos's treatise. Jean-Georges's son Yves (b Sarre-Union, 16 May 1950) has carried on the shop's tradition of historically informed tracker-action styles. While the firm has restored or reconstituted several historic organs (Lorris, Mende, Rodez, Vabres l'Abbaye, Nemours), its strength lies in new instruments. Among the most notable are those for the Auteuil Reformed church, Paris (1970), the Vrije Universiteit, Amsterdam (1977), Boulogne-Billancourt Conservatory (1982), Valence Cathedral (1985), Saint Avold (1987), St Guillaume, Strasbourg (1988), La Roche-sur-Yon (1988), Izumi Hall, Osaka, Japan (1989), Sigmaringen, Germany (1995), and Charleville-Mézières (1997).

KURT LUEDERS

Koenig (ii). French family of organ builders. Joseph Koenig (b Luxeuil-les-Bains, 22 Feb 1846; d Caen, 30 July 1926) worked as a voicer with CAVAILLÉ-COLL and from 1871 trained the young CHARLES MUTIN, who later took over the Cavaillé-Coll company. Joseph married Mutin's sister in 1882. He and Mutin moved to Caen five years later and continued to collaborate, at times in conjunction with Henri Didier of Epinal. Joseph's son Paul-Marie Koenig (b Paris, 19 July 1887; d Draveil, 16 Oct 1977) worked mostly in Normandy, then moved to the Paris area in 1929. A major portion of the Koenigs' activity was maintenance and often modernization of 19th-century organs, among the better-known being the Cavaillé-Coll organs in Paris at the churches of Ste Geneviève and St Jean-St François, and at St Etienne, Caen. New organs were delivered to Beirut (Cathedral and St Joseph's), Gap Cathedral, the Basilica at Mézières, and several locations in the West of France. Between the wars Paul-Marie participated in organ building projects in Germany, at Beuron Abbey and Gerleve, near Coesfeld. The family is unrelated to the Alsatian organ builders of the same name (see KOENIG (i)).

KURT LUEDERS

Koenig, Gottfried Michael (b Magdeburg, 5 Oct 1926). German composer and theorist. He studied at the Brunswick Städtische Musikschule (1947–8) and the Nordwestdeutsche Musikakademie, Detmold, where his teachers included Günter Bialas (composition) and Erich Thienhaus (acoustics). During the 1951 Darmstadt summer courses, he attended lectures by Eimert and Meyer-Eppler that awakened his interest in electronic sound production. On the suggestion of Eimert, Koenig started to work in 1953 at the electronic studio of NWDR (now WDR), first as an assistant and later as a permanent employee and composer (until 1964). In 1953 he moved to Cologne, where he studied music technology at the Cologne Hochschule für Musik (1953–4) and attended courses on electronic data processing at the University of Cologne (1960); during this period he designed the basis of his composition program Projekt 1 (later followed by Projekt 2, 1966, and Projekt 3, 1986). He has taught at the Stichting Gaudeamus, Bilthoven (1961–5), the Cologne Musikhochschule (1962–4) and the University of Utrecht (from 1964), where he has directed the electronic music studio (now the Instituut voor Sonologie). He has served as the co-editor of Electronic Music Reports (from 1969) and Sonological Reports (from 1973).

Koenig's compositional style has moved through serialism and electronic music to programmed music. During his first Utrecht phase (until 1969), he wrote electronic works generated by largely automated methods of sound production (Funktion Grün, Funktion Gelb, Funktion Orange, Funktion Rot, Funktion Blau, Funktion Indigo, Funktion Violett and Funktion Grau). If the material of electronic music prompted him to develop a progressive rationalization and automation of sound, serial technique, eventually used to determine general 'parametrical concept[s]', facilitated his transition to programmed music (after 1969), a style in which musical raw material is generated through electronic means before being used in more traditional compositional processes.

WORKS

Orch: Conc., 2 fl, hpd, str, 1948–9; Horae (ballet, 3 scenes), 1950; Conc., fl, chbr orch, 1951; Fantasie, 1951–2; Conc., chbr orch, 1952; 2 Orchesterstücke, 1952; Komposition, 16 insts, 1953; Diagonalen, 1955; Orchesterstück 1, 1960–61; Orchesterstück 2, 1961–2; Orchesterstück 3, 1963; Beitrag, 1985–6

Chbr and solo inst: 2 Klavierstücke, pf, 1957; Wind Qnt, 1958–9; Str Qt 1959, 1959; Projekt 1, version 1, wind, str, 1965–6; Projekt 1, version 3, wind, str, 2 pf, perc, 1967; Übung, pf, 1967–70; 3 ASKO Stücke, wind, str, pf, mar, 1982; Segmente 1–7, pf, 1982; Segmente 99–105, vn, pf, 1982; Segmente 92–98, vn, vc, 1983; Segmente 85–91, fl + pic, b cl, vc, 1984; Intermezzo (Segmente 85–91), fl + pic + b fl, b cl + E♭ cl, pf, 1987; Str Qt 1987, 1987–8; 60 Blätter, str trio, 1992; Concerti e corali, wind, str, pf, vib, mar, 1992; Das A und das O, S, A, vc, hp, 1993; Per flauti, 2 fl, 1997

Tape: Klangfiguren I, 1955; Klangfiguren II, 1955–6; Essay, 1957–8; Materialien zu einem Ballett, 1961; Suite, 1961 [from Materialien zu einem Ballett]; Terminus 1, 1962; Terminus 2, 1966–7; Terminus X, 1967; Funktion Grün, 1967; Funktion Gelb, 1968; Funktion Orange, 1968; Funktion Rot, 1968; Funktion Blau, 1969; Funktion Indigo, 1969; Funktion Violett, 1969; Funktion Grau, 1969; Output, 1979

COMPUTER PROGRAMS

Projekt 1, composition program, 1963
Projekt 2, composition program, 1966
CSP 1, sound generation program, 1968
Projekt 3, 1987

Principal publishers: Peters, Semar, Tonos, Universal

WRITINGS

Summary Observations on Compositional Theory (Utrecht, 1971) [pubn of Instituut voor Sonologie]

Ästhetische Praxis. Texte zur Musik, i: 1954–61 (Saarbrücken, 1991); ii: 1962–67 (1992); iii: 1968–91 (1993); iv: Supplement I (1999); v: Supplement II (incl. letters) (forthcoming) [collected writings]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

U. Dibelius: 'Gottfried Michael Koenig', Moderne Musik 1945–65 (Munich, 1966), 164–74
K. Bochmer: 'Indetermination und neue Perspektiven der Formbildung über einige Verfahren der elektronischen Musik', Zur Theorie der offenen Form in der neuen Musik (Darmstadt, 1967), 187–200
J.D. Banks, P. Berg and D. Theriault: 'SSP: a Biparametric Approach to Sound Synthesis', Sonological Reports, v (Utrecht, 1979)
O. Laske: 'Composition Theory in Koenig's Project One and Project Two', Computer Music Journal, v/4 (1981), 54–61; repr. in The Music Machine, ed. C. Roads (Cambridge, MA, 1989), 119–130
M. Harenberg: Neue Musik durch neue Technik? Musikcomputer als qualitative Heraus forderung für ein neues Denken in der Musik (Kassel, 1989), 138–46
Gottfried Michael Koenig, Musik-Konzepte, no.66 (Munich, 1989)

WOLF FROBENIUS

Koenig, (Karl) Rudolf (b Königsberg, 26 Nov 1832; d Paris, 2 Oct 1901). German physicist. Although Helmholtz was his principal professor at the University of Königsberg, Koenig's research was not in acoustics. After receiving the PhD in physics, Koenig apprenticed himself to the Parisian violin maker Vuillaume. Koenig completed his apprenticeship in 1858 and set up shop at the Quai d'Anjou, where he remained for the rest of his life, making tuning-forks of great precision for his tonometer which covered the entire audible range of frequencies. He constructed remarkably precise clock tuning-forks, sirens, ingenious compound sirens, improved Helmholtz resonators and a wide variety of other apparatuses. The quality of his instruments became legendary, and they became the physics tools for university laboratories in Europe and the USA. He was commissioned by the French government to make the apparatus for establishing 'Diapason normal', a' = 435; and he improved Léon Scott's 'phonautograph' of 1857, the antecedent of Edison's reproducing phonograph.

Koenig's research, contained in various papers and summarized in his Quelques expériences d'acoustique (Paris, 1882), ranged widely, but he was interested mainly in beats among the overtones and combination tones and phase in the quality of a musical sound. For the former he criticized the use of reed harmoniums and sirens which had been Helmholtz's chief tools; Koenig believed that a proper study required the use of pure tones. Noting that the higher modes of a tuning-fork would not be harmonious, he stroked large forks with a cello bow. He studied phase relations between fundamental and overtones with special compound sirens that allowed him to introduce arbitrarily the desired phase differences. Many of Koenig's results conflicted with Helmholtz's and it is interesting to compare the work of these two men, the most important contributors to experimental musical acoustics in the 19th century.

See also PHYSICS OF MUSIC, §5, and figs.8–9.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S.P. Thompson: 'The Researches of Dr. R. Koenig on the Physical Basis of Musical Sounds', Nature, xliii (1890–91), 199–203, 224–7, 249–53
D.C. Miller: The Science of Musical Sounds (New York, 1916/R)
R.S. Shankland: 'Koenig, Karl Rudolf', Dictionary of Scientific Biography, ed. C.C. Gillispie (New York, 1970–80)

JAMES F. BELL/CLIVE GREATED

Koenig horn. See under MELLOPHONE.

Koenigsberg [Kenigsberg], Alla Konstantinovna (b Samarkand, 3 March 1931). Russian musicologist. She studied at the Leningrad Conservatory with Druskin, graduating in 1954 and completing her postgraduate studies in 1957. She began teaching there in 1957, and was scientific secretary at the Conservatory (1959–1967). In 1992 she became a professor in the department for the history of foreign music.

Koenigsberg's scholarly interests include music theatre and singing. Her dissertation for the Kandidat degree concerned Wagner's Ring des Nibelungen, and the subject of her doctorate was the history of Hungarian opera. Her many books and articles discuss the operatic works of Wagner, Weber, Rossini, Verdi, Puccini and American and Hungarian composers. She has devoted much time to the art of Russian and Latvian singers, and the music and theatre of Latvia as a whole. It was under her editorship that the handbook 111 oper (1998) was published. She is a member of a number of international societies and Russian associations, and has delivered papers throughout Russia and Europe.

WRITINGS

Kol'tso Nibelunga Vagnera [Wagner's Der Ring des Nibelungen] (Moscow, 1959)
'Nekotorïye osobennosti muzïkal'noy dramaturgii Puchchini i sovremennaya zarubezhnaya opera' [A few peculiarities of Puccini's dramatic art and contemporary opera abroad], Voprosï sovremennoy muzïki (Leningrad, 1959)
Rikhard Vagner [Wagner] (Leningrad, 1963–72)
Karl Mariya Veber [Weber] (Leningrad, 1965–81)
Operï Vagnera [Wagner's operas] (Moscow and Leningrad, 1967)
'Sovremennaya amerikanskaya opera: Menotti i Floyd' [Contemporary American opera: Menotti and Floyd], Muzïka i sovremennost', vi (1969)
Betkhoven [Beethoven] (Leningrad, 1970)
Shandor Sokolai [Sándor Szokolay] (1982)
'Parsifal' Vagnera i traditsii nemetskogo romantizma' [Wagner's Parsifal and the traditions of German romanticism], Problemï muzïkal'noy nauki, v, ed. O. Sokolov and others (Moscow, 1983)
'"Otello" Rossini i Verdi' [Rossini's and Verdi's settings of Otello], Dzh. Rossini: sovremennïye aspektï issledovaniya tvorcheskogo naslediya (Kiev, 1993)
'Weber in Russland', Weberiana, iv (1995)
'Weber-Briefe in St Petersburger Bibliotheken', Weberiana, v (1996)
ed.: Rimsky-Korsakov i Vagner (St Petersburg, 1996)
'Staroye i novoye v opernom tvorchestve Puchchini' [The old and the new in Puccini's operas], Traditsionnoye i novoye v muzïke XX veka (Kishinyov, 1997)
'Vagner i Shopengauer' [Wagner and Schopenhauer], Zhurnal lyubiteley muzïki (1997), nos.2–3
ed.: 111 oper [111 operas] (St Petersburg, 1998)
Istoriya vengerskoy operï [The history of Hungarian opera] (forthcoming)

ERA BARUTCHEVA

Koerppen, Alfred (b Wiesbaden, 16 Dec 1926). German composer. He attended the Musisches Gymnasium, Frankfurt (1939–45), and studied composition with Kurt Thomas. After a short period as an organist in Frankfurt he moved to Hanover, where he taught composition at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik und Theater (as professor from 1964) until his retirement in 1991. He received the Rompreis in 1961 and the Lower Saxony Prize for Culture in 1983.

Koerppen's substantial output includes work in every genre and music for amateur as well as professional performers. Modelling himself on modern classicist composers such as Hindemith, Stravinsky and (in choral music) his teacher Kurt Thomas, he developed early in his career a characteristic, personal stylistic idiom which colours all his work despite the considerable range of his compositional imagination. His expression reaches from deep, sometimes apocalyptic seriousness to playful, even bizarre humour, and from powerful spiritual affirmation to lighthearted, mediterranean worldliness. He has never abandoned tonality in the broadest sense, though he has often integrated avant-garde techniques within his musical language to original effect. Vivid gestures and an expressivity close to speech inform his instrumental works, while meticulous attention to the text is a mark of his vocal compositions, from the masses, motets and madrigals to the innovative choral narratives with speakers and often numerous solo parts.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Virgilius, der Magier von Rom (Zauberoper), 1951; Arachne (ballet), 1968; Ein Abenteuer auf dem Friedhof (Kammeroper, 4 scenes), 1980
Choral: Der Turmbau zu Babel (orat), 4 solo vv, male chorus, orch, 1951; 2 Motetten, mixed chorus, 1952, rev. 1994; Das Feuer des Prometheus (orat), 5 solo vv, mixed chorus, orch, 1956; Der Sonnenhymnus des Echnaton, 3 mixed choruses, 1965; Invocationen, schola, mixed chorus, fl, ob, vn, vc, kbd/org, 1968; Joseph und seine Brüder, female chorus, spkrs, 1967; Parabel vom Dornbusch, mixed chorus, fl + pic, ob, eng hn, bn, hn, tpt, trbn, cel, pf, org, perc, vn, va, vc, 1969; Das Stadtwappen (F. Kafka), solo vv, mixed chorus, orch, 1973; Gebete aus der Arche (C. Bernos de Gaszold), mixed chorus, 1974; Donum Kinguarum, 3 solo vv, mixed chorus, 1976; 4 italienische Madrigale (G. Ungaretti), 4 solo vv, mixed chorus, 1979; Zauberwald, female chorus, 1982; ECHO, solo vv, 3 mixed choruses, 1985; 3 exemplarische Geschichten (after J.C. and J.L.C. Grimm), solo vv, spkr, female chorus, 1989; Georgica, mixed chorus, 1991; Elia, mixed chorus, org, 1991; Stephanus, mixed chorus, org, 1993; Jona, mixed chorus, org, 1995
Solo vocal: Vagantenballade (F. Villon), B, fl, pf, perc, 1948; Wassermarken (cant., H. Piontek), S, T, str qnt, 1961; Dauer der Freude, S, vn, pf, 1965; Nachklang, S, pf, 1972; 3 Lieder (M.-L. Kaschnitz), Bar, pf, 1975; Brentano-Lieder, 1v, pf, 1985
Inst: Sym. 'Die Erscheinung der Reiter', wind ens, perc, 1948; 17 Choralfantasien und -Partiten, org, 1948–90; Transposition, fl, bn, vn, vc, pf, hpd, regal, 1972; Konzert im Dreieck, pf, hpd, hmn (total 2 players), 1974; Sym., 1985; Trio in zwei Sätzen, vn, vc, pf, 1986; 10 Charakterstücke, pf, 1989; Melusine, vn, 1990; Concerto à Quattro, 2 pf, perc, 1992; Abgesang, vn, orch, 1995; Conc., b tuba, orch, 1998

Principal publishers: ADU-Verlag, Breitkopf & Härtel, Möseler

PETER SCHNAUS

Koesoemadinata, Raden Machjar Angga (b Sumedang, 7 Dec 1902; d Bandung, 9 April 1979). Indonesian musicologist. He received his initial training in Western music at the Holland Inlandsche School, Sumedang and continued his studies in Western music theory and acoustics at the Kweekschool, Bandung (1916–22). His initial attempts to understand the nature of Sundanese tuning systems were made on the guitar (1916–20). He created the Sundanese solfège system ('da-mi-na-ti-la') in 1923, which he used in his theoretical writings as well as in songbooks for children. In collaboration with the Dutch musicologist Jaap Kunst during the late 1920s and 30s, he began measuring gamelan tunings scientifically by using a monochord and A.J. Ellis's cents system. The collaboration with Kunst resulted in many publications including a jointly published article (1929) as well as Kunst's monumental De toonkunst van Java (1934), where Koesoemadinata is cited more than 30 times. His theoretical writings on Sundanese tuning systems and scales are the most sophisticated of the 20th century. His work over several decades culminated in a 17-tone model – the octave is comprised of 17 equal intervals of 70 10/17 cents – from which the notes of individual Sundanese scales could be derived. Koesoemadinata was also a composer (his pieces include Lemah Cai ('Our native land'), Dewi Sartika, among others), playwright and director of music-dramas (Sarkam-Sarkim ('The brothers Sarkam and Sarkim') and Iblis Mindo Wahyu ('Satan's personification as divine revelation'), among others).

WRITINGS

with J. Kunst: 'Een en ander over pelog en slendro', Tijdschrift voor Indische taal-l, and- en volkenkunde, lxix (1929), 320–52
Diadjar mamaos rakitan pelog, djilid I [Learning to sing in Pelog, volume 1] (Weltevreden, 1929)
Diadjar mamaos rakitan salendro, djilid I [Learning to sing in Salendro, volume 1] (Weltevreden, 1930)
Sastraning Kanajagan, djilid I [The art of music, volume 1] (Weltevreden, 1934)
Ringkesan Pangawikan Rinenggaswara (Ringkesan Elmuning Kanajagan) [An outline of music theory] (Jakarta, 1940/R)
'Het muziekonderwijs voor de inheemsche kinderen', Gedenkboek H.I.K. Bandoeng 1866–1941 (Batavia, 1941), 60–72
1 32 4. Sa-Ri-A-Rum (Jakarta, 1950)
Ilmu seni raras: ilmu musik Indonesia asli [The science of music: knowledge of traditional Indonesian music] (Jakarta, 1969)

ANDREW N. WEINTRAUB

Koessler [Kössler], Hans [János] (b Waldeck, 1 Jan 1853; d Ansbach, 23 May 1926). German composer, organist and teacher, a cousin of Max Reger. He trained for the teaching profession and first taught at Leonberg. By 1871 he had been appointed organist at Neumarkt (Oberpfalz), where he remained until 1874. He continued his studies at the Königliche Musikschule in Munich with Joseph Rheinberger and Franz Wüllner. In 1877 he went with Wüllner to Dresden, where he taught theory and choral singing at the conservatory until 1881. From 1879 he also served as conductor of the Dresden Liedertafel, an ensemble that won first prize at the international song festival in Cologne (1880). As a result of this success he was invited to conduct at the theatre in the Glockengasse in Cologne. The atmosphere of the theatre did not suit him, however, and in 1882 he moved to the National Hungarian Royal Academy of Music to teach the organ and choral music. The following year he succeeded Robert Volkmann as composition teacher, directing the composition department until his retirement in 1908. He remained in Budapest for only a short while before embarking on extensive travels that finally brought him to Ansbach (1918). Between 1920 and 1925 he returned to Budapest where he was in charge of the master school in composition at the academy. In 1923 the school gave a concert of his works.

Koessler was not a composer who worked quickly; his compositions are valuable not so much for their originality of thought as for their highly accomplished technique. He was committed to the formal ideals of Classicism, particularly of Brahms's music. He had a rare feeling for the virtuoso treatment of the voice and his choral works are especially worthy of attention. His thorough technical knowledge and highly developed critical sense made him an outstanding teacher, and his contribution in this role to Hungarian music is indicated by the list of his pupils, which includes Bartók, Dohnányi, Kodály, Weiner and many other composers, choirmasters and writers on music.

WORKS
(selective list)

VOCAL

Op: Der Münzenfranz (3, A. Schaefer), Strasbourg, 1903
Choral-orch: Triumph der Liebe (orat); Sylvesterglocken (secular requiem, M. Kalbeck), solo vv, vv, orch, 1897; Dem Verklärten (Trauerode, Kalbeck), vv, orch, 1912; Hymne an die Schönheit (W.C. Gomoll), male vv, orch, 1912; Dem Vaterlande, Bar, vv, orch, 1915
Other choral works: Ps xlvi, 8 solo vv, double chorus, 1902; Ps li, 4vv, 1902; Lieder und Gesänge, 1912; Altdeutsche Minnelieder in Madrigal-Form, 4 male vv, 1913; Letzter Wille 'Wenn einstens ist vollendet', vv, pf; Mass, 3 female vv, org
Songs: Kammergesänge, S/T, ob, hn, str qt, 1912; 3 Lieder, Bar, pf; Lieder und Gesänge, 3 vols., 1v, pf; Kinderlieder (F.W. Güll), 1v, pf; 3 Lieder aus der Kriegszeit, S, pf; Der kleine Rosengarten (H. Löns), 4 vols., 1v, pf; 5 Lieder, Bar, orch; other songs with pf

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Sym. Variations, c♯, 1909; Vn Conc., a, 1914; 2 syms., F, b; Vc Conc., d
Chbr: Str Qt no.1, d; Str Qt no.2, g, 1902; Str Sextet, f, 1902; Allerseelen, vn/ob/(vc, org), 1913; Str Qnt, F, 1913; Suite, a, vn, org, 1919; Trio Suite, vn, va, pf, 1922; Sonata, e, vn, pf; Deutsche Tanzweisen, vn, pf; Ungarische Tanzweisen, vn, pf; Sonata, vc, pf
Pf: Walzersuite; 5 Pf Pieces, 1913

Principal publishers: Bote & Bock, Süddeutscher Verlag

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Obituaries, Crescendo, i/1 (1926), 1–3; Musica, viii (1926), 159 only; Nyugat, xix (1926), 1113–14; NZM, xciii (1926), 434–5; Die Oberpfalz, xx (1926), 170–71; A zene, viii/4 (1926), 69–72
A. Schaefer: ' Hans Kössler', Die Tonkunst, xxxii (1928), 295–6
P. Egert: 'Hans Kössler, ein vergessener Männer-Chor-Komponist', Deutsche Sängerbundeszeitung, xxiii (1932), 67–9
K.M. Pembaur: ' Hans Kössler als Dirigent der Dresdner Liedertafel', Deutsche Sängerbundeszeitung, xxiii (1932), 69–70
A. Siklós: 'Koessler János', Az Országos Magyar Királyi Liszt Ferenc Zeneakadémia Évkönyve 1936–37 (1936), 21–6

VERA LAMPERT

Koetsier, Jan (b Amsterdam, 14 Aug 1911). Dutch composer and conductor. He studied piano (1927–9) and conducting (with Julius Prüwer, 1932–4) at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik. He began his career as a co-répétiteur and conductor in Lübeck, Berlin and The Hague, where he conducted for the Nederlandsche Kameropera for a short time. In 1942 he was appointed second conductor of the Concertgebouw Orchestra in Amsterdam under Mengelberg. Not entirely free of controversy because of his conducting during the German occupation, he remained in this post until 1948. A year later he became second conductor of the Residentie-Orkest in The Hague and a teacher at the Conservatory there. In 1950, Koetsier settled in the Federal Republic of Germany, where he became conductor of the newly established Bavarian RSO. From 1966 until he retired in 1976 he was professor of conducting at the Munich Hochschule für Musik. Koetsier wrote more than 170 works for a variety of orchestral configurations, brass instruments being well represented. Initially influenced by Hindemith, for example in his Muziek op.23 (1943), Koetsier increasingly emulated the neo-classical works of Stravinsky, as in his Muziek op.37 (1948). Koetsier's later works combine melodic invention with strong rhythmic articulation, in which references to jazz are not uncommon. Examples of this are the Brass Symphony (1979) and the Concertino for trombone and strings (1982).

WORKS
(selective list)

Vocal: Gesang der Geister über den Wassern (J.W. von Goethe), chorus, 7 insts, 1939, rev. 1973; Der Mann Lot (orat), Bar, spkr, 1940, rev. 1962; Frans Hals (op), 1951; Aus den Schöpfungsliedern (H. Heine), SATB, pf, 1980; 3 Songs of Ellen (C. Scott), Mez, org, 1986; Galgenlieder (C. Morgenstern), 1v, inst, 1992; Missa in honorem Sanctii Antonii de Padua, 2 SATB
Orch: Suite, 1937; Muziek op.23, 2 str orch, 3 trbn, timp, 1943, rev. 1981; Sym. no.1, 1945; Muziek, op.37, small orch, 1948; Sym. no.2, 1946; Sym. no.3, 1954; Trauermusik, 1954; Conc., tpt, trbn, orch, 1965; Homage to Gershwin, 1969; Mühldorfer Serenade, 1971; Conc. capriccioso, pf, orch, 1975; Brass Sym., op.80, 1979; Concertino drammatico, vn, va, str, 1981; Concertino, op.91, trbn, str, 1982; Tanzsuite, 1985; Burg-serenade, 1987; Konzertantes rondo, pf, str, 1991
Chbr: Nonet, 1967; Bamberger Promenade, 2 tpt, 3 trbn, 1970; Qnt, hn, 2 tpt, trbn, tuba, 1974; Partita, trbn, org, 1976; Trio, fl, bn, pf,

1978; Duo giocoso, tpt/ob, va, 1979; Qt, 4 vc, 1980; Petite suite champêtre, fl, ob, vn, va, 1982; Kinderzirkus, hn, 2 tpt, trbn, tuba, 1986; Gran trio, tpt, trbn, pf, 1988; 13 études charactéristiques, hn, 1989

Ballets, songs, pieces for pf, org

Principal publisher: Donemus

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.P. Mathez: 'Jan Koetisier: Composer for the Glory of the Brasses', Brass Bulletin, iv (1990), 78–86

P. Micheels: Muziek in de schaduw van het Derde Rijk: de Nederlandse symfonie-orkesten 1933–1945 (Zutphen, 1993)

EMILE WENNEKES

Koffler, Józef (b Stryj [now Stryy, Ukraine], 28 Nov 1896; d nr Krosno, early 1944). Polish composer. From 1910 to 1914 he attended the gymnasium in Stryj, Galicia. From 1914 he studied law at the University of Vienna and simultaneously took lessons in harmony and composition with Grädener; in the following year he began studies in musicology with Guido Adler, Lach and Wellesz. After serving in the Austrian and Polish armies (1916–20), he continued his studies in Vienna with Foerster, Ludwig Kaiser (conducting) and Adler, with whom he took the doctorate with his thesis Über orchestrale Koloristik in den symphonischen Werken von Mendelssohn-Bartholdy (1923). On completion of his studies he accepted the position of répétiteur and conductor of the chorus at the Vienna Burgtheater; during this time he became acquainted with Alban Berg. In 1924 Koffler moved permanently to Lwów, where he taught composition and theoretical subjects at the conservatory of the Polish Music Society; there in 1928 he assumed the position of professor of harmony and composition. In 1929 he entered into correspondence with Schoenberg, though the two were never to meet. As Koffler's stature as a composer grew so his works came to be included at ISCM festivals: the String Trio op.10 was performed in Oxford in 1932, the 15 wariacji szeregu 12 tonów ('15 Variations on a 12-Note Series') op.9a was given in Amsterdam (1933) and the Third Symphony was performed in London (1938).

In addition to his work as composer, teacher and administrator, Koffler was active in Lwów in the 1920s and 30s as a critic, reviewer and music publicist. From 1926 until 1939 he was editor of the leading journal Orkiestra, and also of Echo (1936–7); in both periodicals he publicized the compositions of contemporary composers and popularized music history.

Following the annexation of western Ukraine into the USSR Koffler assumed the chair of composition and the position of deputy rector at the Lysenko Conservatory. In 1939 he became secretary of the Ukrainian Union of Composers. In 1940 official criticism of his creative activities denounced him as a 'formalist', so that Koffler had publicly to recant. After the German attack on Lwów in 1941 the composer and his family were deported to the ghetto at Wieliczka. The exact circumstances of Koffler's death are vague. In 1943 he went into hiding in the vicinity of Krosno, where, probably at the beginning of 1944, he and his family were murdered by the Nazis.

Besides Szymanowski, Koffler was the most outstanding Polish composer of the first half of the 20th century. From the point of view of his aesthetics regarding new music, the history of neo-classicism and of the reception of socialist realism, he occupies a pioneering and pivotal role in Polish 20th-century music history. From a more European perspective, he belongs to the group of composers (besides Rathaus, Eisler, Schulhoff and Vogl) who developed, variously, the musical ideas of Schoenberg. Koffler's first creative period (1917–27) involved the fashioning of his individual style, and encompassed a transition from adopting the aesthetics of the musical modernist to actual dodecaphonism. In one of this period's surviving compositions, 40 polskich pieśni ludowych (40 Polish Folksongs), a work that furthered the contemporary, popular trend in Poland towards native folklore, it is already possible to observe progressive compositional devices such as the use of modality and bitonality and a preoccupation with sonority per se. In his first neo-classical works – Musique de ballet (1926) and Musique. Quasi una sonata (1927) – the composer employed (in a consistent though academic fashion) strict 12-note technique, which in European terms placed him among the pioneers of dodecaphony.

The mature works of Koffler's second period of creativity (1928–40) show that though the composer until 1935 upheld the aesthetic ideology of new music and made consistent use of dodecaphony, stylistically his music of this period bore resemblance to examples of French neo-classicism. He produced a succession of works based upon various historical, stylistic-formal models: the Capriccio on virtuoso violin caprices from around 1800, the Sonatine modelled on the compositions of Clementi, the Second Symphony on symphonies of the Classical period and the Piano Concerto on the early Romantic virtuoso concerto. After 1935 Koffler aligned himself to a greater extent with Hindemith's 'Neue Sachlichkeit', in which the stylistic role of the specific model declined, its place taken by considerably intensified techniques of contrapuntal working, massive instrumentation and thematic developmental processes (e.g. the third and fourth symphonies). The character of the remaining period in Koffler's style was bound up with the aesthetics of socialist realism (1940–41). In the first half of 1940, after he abandoned 12-note technique, he continued to experiment with a view to developing his pre-war style, though he surrounded these experiments with the 'positive ideology' of programme music (e.g. Uwertura radosna ('Festive Overture'), written to celebrate the anniversary of the Red Army's invasion of Lwów). Only the quartet Ukraïnskiye èskizï ('Ukrainian Sketches'), in which the composer presents anachronistic verses from folklore cast in functional harmony, categorically exhibits the style of socialist realism.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Alles durch M.O.W. (ballet), op.15, 1932

Orch: 15 wariacji szeregu 12 tonów [15 Variations on a 12-Note Series], op.9a, str, 1931 [based on op.9, 1927]; Sym. no.1, op.11, chbr orch, 1930; Pf Conc., op.13, 1932; Sym. no.2, op.17, 1933; Sym. no.3, op.21, wind, hp, perc, *c*1935; Suita polska [Polish Suite], op.24, chbr orch, 1936, lost; Uwertura radosna [Festive Overture], op.25, 1940, lost; Sym. no.4, op.26, 1940; Händeliana '30 wariacji na temat passacaglii Händla', *c*1940, lost

Chbr: Str Trio, op.10, 1928; Divertimento, op.16, ob, cl, bn, 1931, lost; Capriccio, op.18, vn, pf, *c*1936; Str Qt, op.20, 1934, lost; Ukraïnskiye èskizï [Ukrainian Sketches], op.27, str qt, before 1941

Pf: Chanson slave, before 1918; 40 polskich pieśni ludowych [40 Polish Folksongs], op.6, 1925; Musique de ballet, op.7, 1926; Musique. Quasi una sonata, op.8, 1927; 15 wariacyj szeregu 12 tonów [15 Variations on a 12-Note Series], op.9, 1927; Sonatine, op.12, 1930; Sonata, op.19, 1935, lost; 20 variations sur une valse de Johann Strauss, op.23, 1935; 4 dytyachi p'yesy [4 Pieces for Children], before 1940

Vocal: 3 Lieder, op.1, S, pf, 1917; Die Liebe (cant., Bible: Corinthians), op.14, 1v, cl, va, vc, 1931; 4 poèmes (A. de Musset, P. Verlaine, A.V. Arnault), op.22, 1v, pf, 1935

Orchestrations: J.S. Bach: Little Suite, *c*1937, lost; J.S. Bach: Goldberg-Variationen, *c*1938

Principal publishers: Senart, Universal, PWM

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Freiheiter: 'Józef Koffler', Muzyka, viii (1936), 85–6

Z. Folga: 'Dodekafonia Józefa Kofflera' [Koffler's twelve-note technique], Muzyka, xvii/4 (1972), 65–83

L. Mazepa: ' Okres radziecki w życiu i twórczośici Jósefa Kofflera' [The Soviet period in the life and work of Koffler], Muzyka, xxviii/1 (1983), 67–100

M. Zduniak: ' Twórczość i działalność Józefa Kofflera w okresie 20-lecia międzywojennego' [The compositions and activities of Koffler between the world wars], Zeszyty naukowe Akademii Muzycznej we Wrocławiu, xxxiii (1983), 37–59

M. Gołąb: 'Zwölftontechnik bei Józef Koffler: ein polnischer Beitrag zur Geschichte der Dodekaphonie in der ersten Hälfte des 20. Jahrhunderts', Musik des Ostens, x (1986), 167–79

M. Gołąb: Józef Koffler (Kraków, 1995)

M. Gołąb: 'Das Schaffen Józef Kofflers: Probleme einer Stilgestaltung', Verfemte Musik: Komponisten in den Diktaturen unseres Jahrhunderts, ed. J. Braun, V. Karbusicky and H.T. Hoffmann (Frankfurt, 1995), 205–17

Muzyka, xli/2 (1996) [Koffler issue]

MACIEJ GOŁĄB

Kofroň, Petr (b Prague, 15 Aug 1955). Czech composer. He took lessons in Prague with Kopelent and attended the Janáček Academy, Brno (1974–9), where his teachers included Piňos. In 1983 he founded the Agon Orchestra, a contemporary music ensemble and the first of its kind in former Czechoslovakia; he has directed the ensemble since its inception. He was co-founder of the Czech Society for New Music, and in 1989 was appointed editor of the contemporary music journal Konzerva/Na Hudbu.

After the conceptual works of around 1970 which explored restrictive ambiences and the movement of sound in space, Kofroň returned in 1976 to a primitive diatonic harmony and musical expression. He holds special interest in the music of Isaak Dunayevsky. After 1983 Kofroň became influenced by the hermetic philosophy of Aleister Crowley and by composition based on ritual. Six years later his music underwent further change, this time towards an aggressive style embracing interplay and the energy of performers and of sounds rather than that of conventional musical parameters. He is alert to the possibilities of graphic notation and has performed such works by other composers, among them Ponc, Logothetis and Knížák.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Zlaté kapradí [The Golden Fern] (op, Kofroň), 1991

Orch: Valčík na rozloučenou [Farewell Waltz], 1977; Luk [The Bow], 1979–81; 3 kusy [3 Pieces], wind, perc, 1982; Liber LXXII, 2 orch, tape, 1987

Vocal: In memoriam I.O. Dunajevskij (Dunayevsky), spkr, brass qnt, 1975; Pro soprán a orchestr (G. Trakl), 1982

Chbr and solo inst: Růžový pokoj [The Pink Room], 2 pf, 1978; Str Qt, 1982; E.S.T., conc., pf, pic, ob, cls, vn, va, vc, b drum, 1988; Alfa a kentaur [Alpha and Centaur], vn, ens, 1989; Spira, cl, elec gui, pf, mar, b drum, 1990; Enhexe, ens, 1991; Second Infinity, pf, 1991; The Fire is Mine, ens, elecs, 1993; O.T.M., 4 block fl, 4 perc, 1993; Abram, 8 insts/inst groups, 1994; Tworl, str qt, 1994; Velký vůz [The Big Dipper], ens, 1996

MSS in Český hudební fond

Principal publisher: Panton, Společnost pro Novou Hudbu

WRITINGS

Třináct analýz [13 analyses] (Jinočany, 1993)

Grafické partitury a koncepty (Olomouc, 1996)

'Ästhetik des "Befremdlichen": die tschechische Musik der sechziger Jahre', MusikTexte, nos.69–70 (1997), 19–23

IVO MEDEK

Kogan, Leonid (Borisovich) (b Dnepropetrovsk, 14 Nov 1924; d Moscow, 17 Dec 1982). Russian violinist. He studied with Abram Yampol'sky (a disciple of Auer), first at the Central Music School in Moscow, then at the Moscow Conservatory (1943–8) and as a postgraduate (1948–51). He made his début in Moscow at the age of 17, and gave concerts throughout the USSR while still a student. In 1947 he was co-winner of the first prize at the World Festival of Democratic Youth in Prague, and in 1951 won the Queen Elisabeth Competition in Brussels. He made his débuts in London and Paris in 1955, in South America in 1956 and in the USA the following year. In 1952 he joined the teaching staff of the Moscow Conservatory. He was named People's Artist of the RSFSR in 1964 and received the Lenin Prize in 1965.

After David Oistrakh, Kogan was considered the foremost Soviet violinist, and one of the most accomplished instrumentalists of the day. Kogan's approach, however, was more objective, less emotional than Oistrakh's. His tone was leaner, his vibrato tighter, his temperament cooler and more controlled. His intonation was pure and his technical mastery absolute. He showed his versatility in concert series ranging from the complete Bach solo works to the Paganini Caprices.

Kogan married Elizaveta Gilels (sister of the pianist), also a concert violinist. They appeared in violin duets, and with their son Pavel gave the first performance of the Concerto for Three Violins by Franco Mannino (1965), dedicated to them. With Gilels and Rostropovich, Kogan gave many trio performances. Among works dedicated to him are concertos by Khrennikov, Karayev, Knipper and Bunin, the Concerto-Rhapsody by Khachaturian, and sonatas by Weinberg and Levitin. Kogan was intensely interested in the modern repertory and was the first Soviet violinist to play and record Berg's Violin Concerto. He played a Guarneri 'del Gesù' violin dated 1726.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SchwarzGM

W. Stewart: 'A Talk with Leonid Kogan', The Strad, lxix (1958–9), 442–4

L.N. Raaben: Zhizn' zamechatel'nïkh skripachey [The lives of remarkable violinists] (Leningrad, 1967)

A. Astel: 'Leonid Kogan: k pyatidesyatiletiyu so dnya vozhdeniya' [On his 50th birthday], Muzikal'naya zhizn', xxi (1974), 8–9

J. Creighton: Discopaedia of the Violin, 1889–1971 (Toronto, 1974)

M. Campbell: The Great Violinists (London, 1980)

T. Potter: 'Leonid Kogan: a Tribute to the Great Russian Virtuoso', The Strad, xciii (1982–3), 879–81

S. Schwarz: Great Masters of the Violin: from Corelli and Vivaldi to Stern, Zukerman and Perlman (New York, 1983)

T. Potter: 'Master Musician, Supreme Technician', The Strad, cv (1994), 1106–11

BORIS SCHWARZ/MARGARET CAMPBELL

Koglmann, Franz (b Mödling, 22 May 1947). Austrian composer and trumpet player. He studied the classical and jazz trumpet and jazz arranging at the Vienna Conservatory. In the 1970s, already active as a freelance performer, he began to work with leading European and North American improvisors, including Steve Lacy, Bill Dixon, Derek Bailey, Andrea Centazzo and Georg Gräwe. Koglmann's work as composer came to the fore with the founding of the Pipetet ensemble in 1983. The cycle The Use of Memory, composed for the Pipetet, was given its première at the Donaueschingen Festival in 1990. Koglmann has also directed other, smaller ensembles such as the Pipe Trio and the Monoblue Quartet.

As an improvisor, Koglmann belongs to the lineage of 'cool' jazz, placing an emphasis on structure and building on a tradition defined by artists such as Beiderbecke, Tristano and Konitz. He is self-taught as a composer, and his diverse influences include the Second Viennese School, innovative jazz composers like Bob Graettinger and George Russell, contemporary literature and the visual arts. Reaching across the confines of music and enclosing improvisatory expression within close-fitting structural frameworks, Koglmann's music embodies Schuller's idea of a 'third stream', drawing on both jazz and modern European classical music.

WORKS
(selective list)

all dates in parentheses are recording dates

Flaps (1973), collab. S. Lacy; Opium (For Franz) (1976), collab. B. Dixon, Lacy; Schlaf Schlemmer, Schlaf Margritte (1984) [for Pipetet]; Ich (1986) [for Pipetet]; A White Line (1989) [for Pipetet]; The Use of Memory, Donaueschingen, 1990 [for Pipetet]; L'heure bleue (1991) [for the Monoblue Quartet]; Cantos I–IV (1993) [for Pipetet]; Mélange de la promenade, septet, jazz qt, 1993; O Moon My Pin-Up (E. Pound), T, chorus, 8 insts, 1997

Principal recording companies: hat ART Records, Pipe Records

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P.N. Wilson: 'Genauigkeit in der Melancholie: der Wiener Flügelhornist und (Jazz-) Komponist Franz Koglmann', NZM, Jg.150, no.3 (1989), 30–34

J. Corbett: 'Meister of Melancholy: Franz Koglmann', Extended Play: Sounding Off from John Cage to Dr Funkenstein (Durham, NC, 1994), 135–8

B. Kraller and W. Famler: 'Die Moderne und das Modernde', Wespennest, no.105 (1996), 78–93 [interview]

PETER NIKLAS WILSON

Kogoj, Marij [Julij] (b Trieste, 20 Sept 1892; d Ljubljana, 25 Feb 1956). Slovenian composer and writer on music. As an orphan he was mistaken for his deceased brother Marij (1895–6) on account of a faulty copy of a baptism certificate issued by the authorities. During his schooling in Gorica (1907–14) he taught himself music, and by 1910 he had begun to compose. He studied with Franz Schreker at the Vienna Music Academy (1914–17) and with Schoenberg at the Schwarzwald school (1918). Before 1932 he lived mostly in Ljubljana, working as a répétiteur at the Opera of the Slovenian National Theatre (1924–32) and as a music critic. He was a leading member of the Slovenian avant garde between 1919 and 1922. His career ended prematurely when he fell ill with schizophrenia. Plans he nurtured for a new system of harmony, 'chord permutation', were left unfinished.

Kogoj was a distinguished composer of vocal and piano music. His style, which is characterized by bold expressivity and dense textures, formed a confluence of late Romanticism, polytonality and emancipated dissonance. The chorus Trenutek ('A Moment', 1914) foreshadowed Expressionism in Slovenian music while his opera Črne maske ('Black Masks', 1928) represents its summit. After 1928 Kogoj began to embrace neo-classicism, preferring linear textures and a more transparent, diatonic sound. Large-scale works of this period, among them the opera Kar hočete ('Twelfth Night') and the cantata Himna trpečega ljudstva ('A Hymn of the Suffering People'), are incomplete.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Kralj Ojdip [King Oedipus] (incid music, Sophocles), 1921; V kraljestvu palčkov [In the Kingdom of Dwarfs] (incid music, J. Ribičič), 1923; Črne maske [Black Masks] (op, 2, L.N. Andreev), 1928, Ljubljana, 7 May 1929; Kar hočete [Twelfth Night] (op, 5, Kogoj, after W. Shakespeare trans. O. Zupančič), 1929, unfinished

Inst: 3 Fugues, f, G, g, pf, before 1917; Piano, 1921; Andante, vn, pf, 1922; Stavek [Movement], 2 pf, before 1922; Chopiniana, pf, 1928; Če se pleše [When Dancing], suite, orch, before 1932; Malenkosti [Bagatelles], pf, before 1932; 7 skladb [7 Compositions], vn, pf, *c*1932

Choral: Trenutek [A Moment], 1914; Barčica [The Little Ship], 1922; Requiem, TB, 1922; Nageljni poljski [Carnations in the Field], 1923; 18 otroških pesmi [18 Children's Songs], 1–4vv, 1923; Trpeča srca [Suffering Hearts], 1923; Na dan vpoklica [On the Day of Enlistment], TB, 1924; Vrabci in strašilo [Sparrows and the Scarecrow], 1928; Himna trpečega ljudstva [A Hymn of the Suffering People] (cant.), S, T, 2 female choruses, 8 pt male chorus, insts, 1928–32, unfinished; Ave maris stella, TB, before 1931; Krvnik, pojoč na črno zagrnjenem odru [Hangman Singing on the Black-Curtained Podium], TB, before 1932

Other vocal (1v, pf): Stopil sem na tihe njive [I Walked to the Silent Fields], *c*1914; Istrski motiv [Istrian Motif], before 1915; Letski motiv [Lett Motif], 1916; Da sem jaz Jezus [If I were Jesus], 1919; Jaz se te bom spomnila [I Shall Remember You], 1919; Sprehod v zimi [A Walk in Winter], before 1919; Češka narodna [Czech Folksong], 1920; Gazela [Gazelle], 1920; Otožnost [Melancholy], 1920; Poslednji spevi [Last Songs], before 1932

Principal publishers: Društvo slovenskih skladateljev, Zveza kulturnih organizacij

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO (A. Rijavec)

B. Loparnik: 'Prvine melodične dikcije v Kogojevih otroških pesmih' [Elements of melodic diction in Kogoj's children's songs], MZ, v (1969), 54–82

I. Klemenčič: Kompozicijski stavek v klavirskih skladbah Marija Kogoja [Structure in Kogoj's piano works] (Ljubljana, 1976)

P. Merkù: 'Identiteta in otroštvo Marija Kogoja' [The identity and infancy of Kogoj], MZ, xii (1976), 50–66

B. Loparnik: 'Kogojevi ustvarjalni začetki' [Kogoj's creative beginnings], MZ, xx (1984), 19–45

P. Merkù, B. Loparnik and Edward Neill: Marij Kogoj 1892–1956 (Trieste, 1986)

B. Loparnik: 'Lajovic contra Kogoj: Die Frage des Nationalen und die Slowenische Moderne', Folklore and its Artistic Transposition, ed. D. Dević, V. Peričić and M. Veselinović (Belgrade, 1990), 143–57

B. Loparnik: 'Iz Kogojevih dunajskih let' [From Kogoj's Vienna years], Jadranski koledar 1992 (1991), 79–88

N. O'Loughlin: 'The European Context of Marij Kogoj's "Črne maske"', Opera kot socialni ali politični angažma, ed. P. Kuret (Ljubljana, 1992), 26–35

Marij Kogoj: Ljubljana 1992

BORUT LOPARNIK

Kohaut [Kohault, Kohout], (Wenzel) Josef (Thomas) (b Saaz [now Žatec], Bohemia, 4 May 1738; d Paris, ? before 16 July 1777). Bohemian composer and lutenist, active in France. The son of the organist and choral director Franz Andreas Kohaut, he first joined the Austrian army as a trumpeter, but on deserting fled to France, where he joined the private orchestra of the Prince of Conti and eventually became an ordinaire de la musique. The date of his death remains the subject of conjecture and has been located as late as 1793. However, a document dated 16 July 1777 (Archives de Paris, D.C. 20^6, f.167) refers to the estate of one Joseph Cohaut, though it provides little other detail.

Kohaut's modest output includes instrumental, chamber, vocal and stage works. A number of his motets were heard at the Concert Spirituel, where he also performed several of his compositions for lute (often arrangements of well-known airs), which did much to popularize this instrument. Collections of sonatas and trios survive, but his six symphonies are known only from publishers' records. In the field of opéra comique Kohaut was a contemporary of Duni, Monsigny and Philidor. His most successful stage work, Le serrurier (1764), was revived regularly during the five years after its première, and was translated into Swedish, Dutch and German. However, two further works, La bergère des Alpes (1766) and Sophie (1768), remained in the repertory for less than a month each; the latter, a drame bourgeois influenced by English literature, represented a new style of opéra comique emerging in the 1760s. Kohaut's operas included many agreeable, if somewhat sentimental, melodies, but a frequent criticism was that these works lacked imagination, originality and emotional depth. Grimm, at his most acerbic, wrote of Sophie that there was 'point de coloris, point de magie ni dans le chant ni dans les accompagnements'.

WORKS

STAGE

PCI – Paris, Comédie-Italienne (Hôtel de Bourgogne)

Le serrurier (oc, 1, A.-F. Quétant), PCI, 20 Dec 1764 (Paris, *c*1765)

Le tonnelier (oc, 1, N.-M. Audinot and Quétant, after La Fontaine: Le cuvier), PCI, 16 March 1765 (Paris, ?1767), collab. Alexandre, Ciapalanti, Gossec, Philidor, J. Schobert and J.-C. Trial

La bergère des Alpes (pastorale mêlée de chant, 3, J.F. Marmontel), PCI, 19 Feb 1766, excerpts (Paris, ?1766)

Sophie, ou Le mariage caché (comédie, 3, after D. Garrick and G. Colman: The Clandestine Marriage), PCI, 4 June 1768 (Paris, *c*1768)

La closière, ou Le vin nouveau (opéra comique mêlé d'ariettes, 1, A.F.J. Masson de Pezay), Fontainebleau, 10 Nov 1770, lost

OTHER VOCAL

Motets: Salve regina, chorus, vc obbl, Concert Spirituel, 31 March 1763, F-Pc; Dominus regnavit, Concert Spirituel, 30 June 1764, lost; Cantate Domino, Concert Spirituel, 2 Feb 1765, lost

Ariettes, 1v, orch (Paris, 1767) [nos. 1–2, 4, 7–8, 10]

INSTRUMENTAL

6 syms. (Paris, 1760–66), lost; 6 sonates, hpd, acc. vn, vc (Paris, *c*1763); 8 trios, hpd, hp/lute, acc. vn, vc (Paris 1767)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PierreH

M. Tourneux, ed.: Correspondance littéraire, philosophique et critique par Grimm, Diderot, Raynal, Meister, etc. (Paris, 1877–82)

G. Cucuel: Les créateurs de l'opéra-comique français (Paris, 1914)

J. Branberger: 'Aufgefundene Opern von Josef Kohout', Der Auftakt, ix (1929), 45–6

L. Vachuěka: 'Josef Kohoot', České umíni dramatické [Czech dramatic art], ed. J. Hutter and Z. Chalabala, ii: Zpěvohra [Opera] (Prague, 1941), 37 [on Le serrurier]

J.B. Kopp: The 'Drame Lyrique': a Study in the Esthetics of Opéra-Comique, 1762–1791 (diss., U. of Pennsylvania, 1982)

ELISABETH COOK (TEXT), MICHEL NOIRAY (WORKLIST)

Kohaut, Karl (Ignaz Augustin) (b Vienna, bap. 26 Aug 1726; d Vienna, 6 Aug 1784). Austrian lutenist and composer. His father, Jakob Karl Kohaut was a court musician to Prince Adam von Schwarzenberg. Like his contemporary Karl von Ordonez, Kohaut pursued a dual career as civil servant and musician. He entered the civil service in 1756 or 1757 as an official in the state chancellery and by 1778 had reached the position of court secretary. Highly regarded at the Viennese court, he accompanied Joseph II on several missions abroad; he was chosen to compose an elaborate two-part musical entertainment, Applausus Mellicensis, for the occasion of Joseph's two visits to Melk monastery during March and April 1764. He participated as a violinist in performances of quartets by Haydn and Mozart organized by Gottfried van Swieten. It was as a lutenist, though, that he was most widely admired. He appeared as soloist in a performance of one of his own lute concertos at an academy of the Tonkünstler-Societät on 17 March 1777, during which one of his symphonies was also performed.

The last in the line of lutenist composers, Kohaut wrote seven lute concertos, which are fine examples of this rare genre. In these and his other instrumental works he shows a preference for three-movement cycles and three-part string textures (without viola). Throughout, soundly constructed tonal schemes and assured part-writing are enlivened by varied phrase structures and rhythmic subtleties. Kohaut's eight masses were frequently performed at the monasteries of Melk and Göttweig, especially the Missa S Willibaldi, which was performed at Göttweig on 24 occasions, the last time as late as 1798.

WORKS

Vocal: Applausus Mellicensis (cant.), perf. 1764, A-M; 8 masses, A-GÖ, M, CZ-Bm, Pnm

Orch: 12 syms., A-M, CZ-Bu, Pnm; 7 lute concs., D-As, Bsb; Db Conc., A-Wgm, ed. D. Young (London, 1996)

Chbr: 3 divertimentos, lute, 2 vn, b, B-Br, D-As; 5 divertimentos, lute, B-Br; Sonata, lute, D-As; 7 trios, 1 for lute, vn, b, 6 for 2 vn, b, A-GÖ, M, Wgm, D-Bsb; 7 partitas, 2 vn, b, A-Wgm, Wn; Qt, 2 vn, va, b, Wn; Trio, fl, vn, b, D-Bsb; works listed in Breitkopf catalogues, 1762–3, 1766–7

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; GerberL; GerberNL; MGG1 (J. Klima)

J.A. Hiller, ed.: Wöchentliche Nachrichten und Anmerkungen die Musik betreffend, i (Leipzig, 1766)

R. Freeman: The Practice of Music at Melk Monastery in the Eighteenth Century (diss., U. of California, 1971)

J. Klima: 'Karl Kohaut, der letzte Wiener Lautenist', ÖMZ, xxvi (1971), 141–3 [with bibliography]

DAVID YOUNG

Köhler. English family of brass and woodwind instrument makers, of Hessian origin. John [Johannes, Hans] (b Volkenroda, nr Kassel, *c*1735; d London, *c*1805) set up a workshop at 87 St James Street, London, in 1780. His nephew John Köhler (b Germany, *c*1770; d London, ? *c*1840) succeeded to the business in 1801 and was appointed musical instrument maker to the Duke of York and the Prince of Wales. From 1811 to 1834 he was in partnership with Thomas Percival (fl 1811–48). He was also associated with Thomas Harper, and became the sole maker of 'Harper's Improved' slide trumpets in 1833, paying Harper a royalty of 30s. per trumpet. These were the most successful of what were then the standard orchestral trumpets in Britain, and the relationship between the Köhler firm and the Harpers continued until the end of the century.

In 1834 the firm moved to 35 Henrietta Street, and in 1838 the younger John Köhler's son and successor, John Augustus Köhler (b London, *c*1810; d London, 20 April 1878) acquired the rights to Shaw's swivelling disc valves (see VALVE (i)). Soon after he introduced an improved version of the device called the New Patent Lever, which he applied to cornets, trumpets, clavicors, french horns and trombones, and for which he was awarded medals at the 1851 and 1862 exhibitions. Despite inherent problems of fragility and a tendency to leak with wear, the New Patent Lever instruments proved popular with military musicians and were sold in large numbers until about 1890. John Augustus Köhler is also credited with the invention in the 1850s of the echo cornet which he called the 'Köhler Patent Harmonic Cornopean'. A fourth valve on this instrument could deflect the windway through a metal bulb to produce a muted effect, an idea which was widely copied by other makers (see illustration). In 1862 the firm began production of John Bayley's elegant 'Improved Acoustic Cornet'. This had Berlin valves and a fixed lead-pipe. Pitch changes were facilitated by tuning-slides of different lengths. A trumpet version, the 'Handelian', was also marketed.

Cornets by Köhler, London: (a) echo cornet ('Köhler Patent Harmonic Cornopean'), c1850; (b) 'Bayley's Improved Acoustic Cornet', 1862

John Augustus Köhler was joined by his son Augustus Charles Köhler in 1863. The firm continued manufacturing into the 20th century, but in 1907 was acquired by the saddlers Swaine & Adeney. At the end of the 20th century the latter company was still producing Percival-type hunting horns bearing the Köhler name. (Waterhouse-LangwillI)

For further illustrations see CORNET (i), fig.3, FLUTE, fig.5a, and POST HORN, fig.4b.

HORACE FITZPATRICK/JOHN WEBB

Köhler, (Christian) Louis (Heinrich) (b Brunswick, 5 Sept 1820; d Königsberg [now Kaliningrad], 16 Feb 1886). German pianist, composer, critic and teacher. He quickly developed as a pianist and was sent to Vienna, where he studied the piano with C.M. von Bocklet and theory with Sechter and Seyfried. After a further two years in Brunswick, he settled in 1845 in Königsberg, where he initially worked in the theatre and conducted the Singverein. From 1847 Köhler devoted himself exclusively to piano pedagogy and to writing about music. He was music critic for the Hartungsche Zeitung for almost 40 years (1849–86), and contributed to Signale from 1844 until his death. His correspondence articles from Königsberg for Brendel's Neue Zeitschrift für Musik brought him to the attention of Liszt and Wagner in 1852, but it was his first book, Die Melodie der Sprache (1853), that established him as one of the leading New German writers, a reputation substantiated by his many journal articles, newspaper reviews and books of the 1850s and 60s. He also proposed the idea behind the Allgemeiner Deutscher Musikverein, which he, Liszt and Brendel (among others) developed at the 1859 Tonkünstlerversammlung in Leipzig. Köhler remained influential throughout his career in the area of piano pedagogy: he published collections of graded instructional pieces and books of exercises, published new editions of the works of Classical and Romantic composers, wrote widely disseminated books (under Liszt's influence) about piano pedagogy (most notably the Systematische Lehrmethode of 1857–8), and taught a great number of pupils, some of whom became prominent musicians, including Adolf Jensen and Hermann Goetz. In 1880 Köhler received the title of Professor from the King of Prussia. Köhler published over 300 original compositions, pedagogical works and editions. The compositions included songs, choruses, piano pieces, a ballet and three operas, one of which (Maria Dolores) was performed (1844, Brunswick).

WRITINGS

(selective list)

Die Melodie der Sprache (Leipzig, 1853)
Systematische Lehrmethode für Klavierspiel und Musik (Leipzig, 1857–8, 3/1888)
Die Gebrüder Müller und das Streichquartett (Leipzig, 1858)
Führer durch den Clavierunterricht (Leipzig, 1859, 9/1894)
Der Clavierunterricht: Studien, Erfahrungen und Ratschläge (Leipzig, 1860, 6/1905)
Leicht fassliche Harmonie- und Generalbass-Lehre (Königsberg, 1861, 3/1880)
Gesangs-Führer (Leipzig, 1863)
Die neue Richtung in der Musik (Leipzig, 1864)
Einige Betrachtungen über Sonst und Jetzt (Leipzig, 1867)
Johannes Brahms und seine Stellung in der neueren Musikgeschichte (Hanover, 1880)
Allgemeine Musiklehre (Leipzig, 1883)
Kathechismus der Harmonielehre (Stuttgart, 1888, 2/1892)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ADB (C. Krebs)
R. Pohl: 'Erinnerungen an Louis Köhler', Kastner's Wiener musikalische Zeitung, i (1886), 373–4
K.F. Glasenapp: 'Louis Köhler (1820–1886)', Bayreuther Blätter, xviii (1895), 4–10
E. Kroll: Aus den Werdejahren der neudeutschen Musik: Louis Köhlers Erinnerungen und Schriften (Königsberg, 1933)
E. Kroll: 'Louis Köhler', ZMw, xvii (1935), 232–5
T. Grey: Wagner's Musical Prose: Texts and Contexts (Cambridge, 1995)

JAMES DEAVILLE

Köhler, Johannes-Ernst (b Merano, 24 June 1910; d Weimar, 12 Sept 1990). German organist. The son of a musical director, who taught him the piano and organ, he later studied at the Akademie für Kirchen- und Schulmusik in Berlin (1923–33), with Wolfgang Reimann (organ), Hans Beltz (piano) and Hans Chemin-Petit (theory and composition). He was organist with the Berlin PO in 1932 and 1933, playing under Pfitzner, Furtwängler and Bruno Kittel; he also recorded for Berlin radio. In 1934 he was appointed organist at the Herderkirche in Weimar and organ lecturer at the Musikhochschule there, becoming a professor and director of church music in 1950. In 1970 he became professor of organ improvisation at the Leipzig Hochschule für Musik and at the International Music Seminar in Weimar.

Köhler's many concert tours in eastern and western Europe established his reputation as one of the foremost German organists. His efforts to popularize organ music through improvisation and 'competitions' with, for example, the Leipzig organist Robert Köbler are particularly noteworthy. He recorded music by Bach and Handel (the latter with the Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra).

GERHARD WIENKE

Köhler, Karl-Heinz (b Blankenhain, nr Weimar, 24 Oct 1928). German musicologist and librarian. He studied the violin with Ehlers and musicology with Münnich at the Weimar Musikhochschule (1945–50), and musicology with Besseler at Jena University (1950–55), where he took the doctorate in 1956 with a dissertation on the trio sonatas of J.S. Bach's Dresden contemporaries. He worked at the Deutsche Staatsbibliothek in Berlin (1953–5) before becoming director of its music department (1955–79). He was appointed lecturer at the Humboldt University in 1965 and president of the East German section of the AML in 1971; from 1977 to 1980 he was vice-president of the whole association. He was made a member of the Zentralinstitut für Mozartforschung, Salzburg, in 1963, and a member of the Music Council of East Germany in 1965. From 1979 to 1991 he was supernumerary professor at the Weimar Musikhochschule. He became Doctor of Science in 1981.

Köhler's research and editorial work is concerned with performance, musicology and librarianship. Both his critical and performing editions draw extensively on hitherto unavailable sources in the Deutsche Staatsbibliothek; he has concentrated on Mozart, J.S. Bach and early works by Mendelssohn and is co-editor of Beethoven's writings. He has also treated these subjects analytically in monographs and articles and has contributed to the development of music librarianship and source material information systems.

WRITINGS

Die Triosonate bei den Dresdener Zeitgenossen Johann Sebastian Bachs (diss., U. of Jena, 1956)
'Grundzüge eines analytischen Systems der Sachkatalogisierung der "Musica Practica"', Zentralblatt für Bibliothekswesen, lxxi (1957), 267–80
'Zur Problematik der Violinsonaten (J.S. Bachs) mit obligatem Cembalo', BJb 1958, 114–22
'Carl Maria von Webers Beziehungen zu Berlin', Festschrift Heinrich Besseler, ed. E. Klemm (Leipzig, 1961), 425–35
'Die Musikabteilung', 'Die Editionstätigkeit der Musikabteilung in Geschichte und Gegenwart', Deutsche Staatsbibliothek 1661–1961, ed. H. Kunze, W. Dube and G. Fröschner (Leipzig, 1961), 241–74, 333–65
'Die Erwerbungen der Mozart-Autographe der Berliner Staatsbibliothek: ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des Nachlasses', MJb 1962–3, 55–68
'Das Jugendwerk Felix Mendelssohns: die vergessene Kindheitsentwicklung eines Genies', DJbM, vii (1962), 18–35; repr. in Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdy, ed. G. Schuhmacher (Darmstadt, 1982), 11–36
'Wilhelm Rintels "Zauberflöte", 2. Teil: ein klingendes Mozartdenkmal der Brahmszeit', MJb 1964, 62–70
Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdy (Leipzig, 1966, 2/1972)
'Mozarts Kompositionsweise: Beobachtungen am Figaro-Autograph', MJb 1967, 31–45
'Figaro-Miscellen: einige dramaturgische Mitteilungen zur Quellensituation', MJb 1968–70, 119–31
ed., with G. Heere: Ludwig van Beethovens Konversationshefte, i–ix (Leipzig, 1968–89)
'Beethovens Gespräche: biographische Aspekte zu einem modernen Beethovenbild', Beethoven Symposium: Vienna 1970, 159–74; Eng. trans. in Beethoven, Performers, and Critics: Detroit 1977, 147–61
'Die Konversationshefte Ludwig van Beethovens als retrospektive Quelle der Mozartforschung', MJb 1971–2, 120–39
'150 Jahre Musikabteilung der Deutschen Staatsbibliothek', Beiträge zur Musikdokumentation: Franz Grasberger zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. G. Brosche (Tutzing, 1975), 203–12
Die Aussagefähigkeit des Berliner Mozartnachlasses (DSc diss., U. of Halle, 1981)
'Zur Bewertung der Korrekturen und Provenienznachweise im Autograph zum Klavierkonzert KV 450: ein Beitrag zu Mozarts Kompositionsweise 1784', MJb 1984, 52–61
ed.: Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart: Leipzig 1991
'Mozarts Da Ponte-Vertonungen in den Inszenierungen Goethes auf der Weimarer Hofbühne im Jahrzehnt nach Mozarts Tod', Mozart Studien, vi (1996), 205–20
Das Zauberflötenwunder: eine Odyssee durch zwei Jahrhunderte (Weimar, 1996)

EDITIONS

Felix Mendelssohn: Leipziger Ausgabe der Werke Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdys, ii/4: Konzert für zwei Klaviere und Orchester E-dur (Leipzig, 1960, 2/1971); ii/5: Konzert für zwei Klaviere und Orchester As-dur (Leipzig, 1961, 2/1977); v/1: Die beiden Pädagogen: Singspiel in einem Aufzug (Leipzig, 1966)
W.A. Mozart: Messe, K427, Neue Ausgabe sämtlicher Werke, I:1/1/V (Kassel, 1983) [with M. Holl]; Klavierkonzert, K450 (London, 1995) [with G. Köhler-Scharlach]
L. van Beethoven: Klaviersonaten, op.7, op.10/1–3, op.13, op.14, op.49 (Vienna, 1986–92)

HORST SEEGER/JUTTA PUMPE

Köhler, Siegfried (b Meissen, 2 March 1927; d Berlin, 14 July 1984). German composer and musicologist. At the Dresden Hochschule für Musik (1946–50) he studied composition with Finke, conducting with Hintze and the piano with MacGregor; he continued his studies at Leipzig University (1950–55) with W. Serauky, H.C. Wolff and R. Eller (musicology) and Jahn (history of art). He was director of the International Music Library, Berlin (1957–63), and in 1959 he was elected president of the East German branch of the International Association of Music Libraries. He held the post of artistic director of VEB Deutsche Schallplatten (1963–8) and then of rector and professor of composition at the Dresden Hochschule für Musik until 1980. A member of the German Democratic Republic's Academy of Arts from 1978, in 1982 he became president of the East German Union of Composers and Musicologists. He was also director of the Dresden Staatsoper (1983–4). Both in his theoretical views and in his compositions he adhered to the aesthetic dogma of socialist realism. He rejected avant-garde experiments and strove for an accessible musical idiom which tended to become bombastic. Köhler began his artistic career with the composition of cantatas and youth songs. His song 'Heut ist ein wunderschöner Tag', written at the end of Nazi rule, became very popular in East Germany. He later also turned to chamber and orchestral music.

WORKS
(selective list)

Opera: Der Richter von Hohenburg (Köhler), 1963
Choral: Deutschland, du unsere Heimat (cant., Köhler), chorus, insts, 1951; Tausend Sterne sind ein Dom (cant., Köhler), chorus, insts, 1951; Reich des Menschen (J.R. Becher), chorus, orch, 1961–2; Dass unsre Liebe eine Heimat hat (G. Deicke), 1969; Wir – unsere Zeit (orat, Becher), S, Bar, chorus, children's chorus, orch, 1970–71; Von Bäumen, Knospen, Nachtigallen (G. Maurer), 1973; Canticum Catulli, 1974–5; Johannes-Bobrowski-Chorbuch, 1974–6; Unser das Land und die Zeit, 1976; Ode an die Solidarität, 1982
Other vocal: Aspekte (Köhler), S/T, 9 insts, 1968; Bericht über Lenin (cant.), 1v, spkr, vc, pf, 1970; Ode, T, hn, str, 1971; Anja und Peter, spkr, orch, 1973–4; Bayon (Köhler), Mez, chbr ens, 1979
Syms.: 'Sinfonie der Jugend' 1964, 1970–1, 1974–5, 'Epitaph für Antigone', 1977–80, 'Pro pace', vv, spkr, chorus, orch, 1983
Other orch: Fröhliche Suite, 1956; Heiteres Vorspiel, 1956; Festliche Musik, str, 1958; Prolog, 1959; Concertino, cl, str, 1968; Pf Conc., 1972; Konzertante Musik, 1973; Der gefesselte Orpheus, 1976; Hpd Conc., 1976; Kommentare zu drei venezianischen Madrigalen des Heinrich Schütz, str, 1977–8; Vn Conc., 1978, rev. 1981; Festliche Inventionen, 1980; Sinfonietta, 1981
Chbr: Sonatine in F, pf, 1958; Musik für Kathrin, 12 pieces, pf, 1961; Sonata 'Rotterdam 14. 5. 1940', hn, pf, 1966; Aspekte, 9 insts, 1968; 7 Mikroszenen, cl, vc, pf, 1974; Diagramm, pf, 1975; Str

Qt, 'Synthesen', 1977; Haltungen, cl, 1981; Str Qt, 1981–2; Varianten, org, 1982

Principal publishers: Deutscher Verlag für Musik, Peters (Leipzig)

WRITINGS

Die Instrumentation als Mittel musikalischer Ausdrucksgestaltung (diss., U. of Leipzig, 1955)
'Ästhetische Normen', MG, vii (1957), 66–8
Heinrich Schütz: 1585–1672 (Berlin, 1972)
Musikstadt Dresden (Leipzig, 1976)
Heinrich Schütz: Anmerkungen zu Leben und Werk (Leipzig, 1985)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (D. Härtwig)
W. Felix: 'Reich des Menschen', MG, xviii (1968), 5–10
H. Gerlach: 'Siegfried Köhler', Musiker in unserer Zeit: Mitglieder der Sektion Musik der Akademie der Künste der DDR (Leipzig, 1979), 312–20
G. Schönfelder: Siegfried Köhler für Sie porträtiert (Leipzig, 1984)
G. Schönfelder: 'Siegfried Köhler', Komponieren zur Zeit: Gespräche mit Komponisten der DDR, ed. M. Hansen (Leipzig, 1988), 142–58

ECKART SCHWINGER/LARS KLINGBERG

Kohn, Karl (George) (b Vienna, 1 Aug 1926). American composer, pianist and conductor of Austrian birth. He emigrated to the USA in 1939 and studied at the New York College of Music (1940–44). He became a naturalized American in 1945. Following service in the US Army during World War II, he attended Harvard University, studying composition with Piston, Ballantine, Irving Fine, and Randall Thompson (BA 1950, MA 1955). In 1950 he was appointed to Pomona College and Claremont Graduate School, where he became Thatcher Professor of Music. For three years he was on the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. He received a Fulbright scholarship (1955–6) and a Guggenheim Fellowship (1961–2). With his wife Margaret, Kohn has performed music for two pianos with a repertory emphasizing 20th-century music, giving concerts both in the USA and abroad.

Kohn's early works were grounded in the American neo-classical tradition of Piston and Fine. From the mid-1950s, until the early 1960s, his music was derived from serial procedures; this practice culminated in the Concerto mutabile (1962). Since then, his music has been remarkable for its chromatic and athematic character combined with chords, figurations and textures evocative of earlier styles.

Kohn's works have been performed by the Los Angeles PO, the Buffalo PO, the Oakland SO and in concerts and broadcasts throughout the US and abroad.

WORKS

Orch: Sinfonia concertante, pf, orch, 1951; Ov., str, 1953; Castles and Kings, suite for children, orch/pf 4 hands, 1958; Scenes, 1960; Concerto mutabile, pf, orch, 1962; Episodes, pf, orch, 1964, arr. 2 pf, 1966; Interludes, 1964; Interlude I, fl, str, 1969; Interlude II, pf, str, 1969; Centone, 1973; Hn Conc., hn, small orch/pf, 1974; Innocent Psaltery, wind band, perc, 1975; Serenade II, concert band, 1977; Waldmusik, conc., cl, orch/pf, 1979, arr. cl, pf, wind ens, 1983; Wind Chamber, concert band, 1981; Time Irretrievable, 1983; Return, brass, str, perc, 1990; Ode for Str Orch, 1993; Memory and Hope: Essay for Str Orch, 1996

Chbr: Str Trio, 1950; Concert Music, 12 wind, 1956; Song, vn/cl, pf, 1956; Vn Sonata, 1956, Capriccios, fl, cl, vc, hp, bn, 1962; Kaleidoscope, str qt, 1964; Encounters I–VI, various solo insts, pf, 1965–77; Introductions and Parodies, cl, hn, bn, str qt, pf, 1967; Rhapsodies, perc, 1968; Impromptus, 8 wind, 1969; Trio, vn, hn, pf, 1972; Paronyms, fl, pf, 1974; The Prophet Bird, chbr ens, 1976; Son of Prophet Bird, hp, 1977; Paronyms II, sax, pf, 1978; Prophet Bird II, pf, chbr ens, 1980; Recreations II, 2 gui, 1980; Capriccios II, chbr ens, 1983; An Amiable Piece, 2 pf, wind, perc, 1987; Reconnaissance, chbr ens, 1995; More Reflections, cl, pf, 1997; Capriccio, vn, s sax, a sax, pf, 1998; Toccata and Virelais, accdn, hp, 1998

Kbd: Rhapsodie no.1 , pf, 1960; Recreations, pf 4 hands, 1968; Prelude and Fantasia, org, 1968; Rhapsody no.2, pf, 1971; Rhapsody no.3, pf, 1977; Shadow Play, 2 pf, 1981; Dream Pieces, 2 pf, 1983; Neofantasy, org, 1990; Little Pieces, pf, 1993; Metasuite, pf, 1994; Adagio for Dancing, 2 pf, 1995; Allegro for Dancing, 2 pf, 1996; Number Play, 2 pf, 1999

Vocal: 3 Songs (T. Carew, J. Lyly, F. Beaumont), Tr vv, 1956; 3 Descants (Bible: Ecclesiastes), chorus, brass, 1957; Sensus spei (Bible: Lamentations), chorus, pf, 1961; Leisure (A. Lowell), Bar, chbr ens, 1965; Madrigal (R. Chester), chorus, pf, 1966; Esdras: Anthems and Interludes, chorus, fl, pf, orch, 1970, arr. chorus, pf, 1975; Only the Hopeful (Heb.), male v, chorus, 1971; What Heaven Confers (Chin.), chorus, vib/pf, 1981; Alleluia (Militant Praise), mixed vv, brass/pf, 1982; The Resplendent Air, 5 songs, high v, pf, 1985; Lions on a Banner (Sufi texts), S, chorus, orch, 1988

MSS in Central Library, Claremont, CA; Honrold Library, Claremont, CA

Principal publishers: C. Fischer, GunMar, Edition Contemp Art

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EwenD
L. Morton: 'Current Chronicle', MQ, xlix (1963), 229–35
P. Oliveros: 'Karl Kohn: Concerto mutabile', PNM, ii/2 (1963), 873–99
H. Pollack: Harvard Composers: Walter Piston and his Students, from Elliott Carter to Frederic Rzewski (Metuchen, NJ, 1992), 228ff

RICHARD SWIFT/STEVE METCALF

Kohout, Josef. See KOHAUT, JOSEF.

Kohoutek, Ctirad (b Zábřeh na Moravě, 18 March 1929). Czech composer and music theorist. He studied at the Brno Conservatory and Janáček Academy of Music with Petrželka and Kvapil (1948–53), then remained there as a teacher of theory and composition (1953–80). He also studied at Dartington with Lutosławski (1963) and at Darmstadt (1965) with Boulez and Ligeti. He completed the doctorate (1973) at Olomouc University and a science degree (CSc 1980) at Brno University. He was professor of composition at the Prague Academy of Musical Arts from 1980 to 1990. His knowledge of major 20th-century composers and of new developments in the West, summarized in his theoretical work of 1962, led him to accept modern means of expression. 12-note serialism, in particular, appealed to his systematic nature, and he used the technique in the chamber works of the late 1950s. He took Hindemith's linear counterpoint and free tonality as the basis for the symphony Velký přelom ('The great turning-point', 1960–62), was influenced by Schoenberg's A Survivor from Warsaw in the melodrama Pátý živel ('The Fifth Element', 1964) and used aleatory techniques in the Symfonieta (1963). His children's choral cycle Od jara do zimy ('From spring to winter', 1962) introduced 12-note serialism to a genre that has occupied a central position in his output.

In the mid-1960s Kohoutek formally established his technique of 'project musical composition'. For each large piece he first works out a detailed graphic plan showing the temporal, architectural and proportional scheme, the dynamic course, an outline of tone-colour and any further structural elements; only then does he proceed to realization. The first piece he composed in this way was Memento (1966) for wind and percussion, a work of inventive sonorities and suggestive expressive character for which he was awarded the Music Critique prize (Paris, 1967). In other compositions he has used stratified textures; Panychida for two violas, ensemble and tape (1968), for instance, is described as 'music in two sound layers'. The culmination of his technical principles came in three large orchestral pieces, Teatro del mondo (1969), Pantheon (1970) and the three-part Slavnosti světla ('Festivals of light', 1974–5), for which he received the Janáček Prize in 1975. Later compositions have tended towards a simplification of compositional means, facilitating more immediate musical communication without abandoning the method of 'project composition'.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Vn Conc., 1958; Velký přelom [The Great Turning-Point], sym., 1960–62; Symfonieta, 1963; Preludia, chbr orch, 1965; Concertino, vc, chbr orch, 1966; Memento, conc., wind, perc, 1966; Teatro del mondo, 1969; Pantheon, 1970; Slavnostní prolog [Festival Prologue], 1971; Slavnosti světla [Festivals of Light], 1975; Symfonické aktuality [Sym. news], 1978; Ommagio a vita, 1989; Jediná naděje [The Only Hope], 1996

Choral: Za život [For Life] (M. Kratochvílová, J. Urbánková), 2 female choruses, 1960–61; Skalické zvony [The Skalice Bells] (trad.), ballad, children's/female vv, insts, 1970; Janek a Kača (cant., trad.), children's/female vv, insts, 1974; Galánečce [To Sweetheart] (trad.), mixed vv, 1950, rev. 1990; Zemi milované [To the Beloved Land] (V. Hons, F. Branislav), 2 mixed choruses, 1973–6; Země jako zahrádka [Land like Little Garden] (V. Šefl), mixed vv, insts, 1981; O Kohoutkovi a Slepičce [About Cockerel and Little Hen] (children's op, Šefl), solo children's vv, children's chorus, insts, 1989; Broskvička [Little Peach-Tree] (J. Kainar), mixed vv, pf, perc, 1993; other pieces for children, female and male vv

Other vocal works: Ukolébavka černošské mámy [Lullaby of the Black Mother] (J. Navrátil), A, vv, orch, 1951; Balady z povstání [Ballads from the Uprising] (2 cants., J. Urbánková): Jano, spkr, S, T, mixed chorus, orch; Jablíčka malinová [Little Raspberry Apples], female spkr, S, Bar, small mixed chorus, nonet, pf, perc, 1960; Pátý živel [The Fifth Element] (O. Mikulášek), reciter, small orch, 1964; Zrozeni člověka [Birth of a Man] (Czech poets), monologues, female v, male v, orch/pf, 1981

Chbr and solo inst: Suita romantica, va, pf, 1957; Suite, wind qnt, 1958–9; Str Qt, 1959; Inventions, pf, 1965; Miniatures, 4 hn, 1965, arr. str orch 1966; Rapsodia eroica, org, 1965; Panychida, 2 va, 2 pf, perc, tape, 1968; Tkaniny doby [Webs of Time], b cl/vc, pf, perc, 1977; Minuty jara [Minutes of Spring], wind qnt, 1980; Motivy léta [Motives of Summer], pf trio, 1990; Žerty a úsměvy [Joking and Smiles], ob, cl, bn, 1991; Šťastne chvilky [Happy Moments], 2 vn, 1992; V zahradách chrámu Kyota [In gardens of Kyoto Temples], eng hn/b cl, perc, 1992; Zimní ticha [Winter Silences], brass, perc, 1993; Oživené zátiší [Still Life Revived], hn/bn, 1995; Podzimní zpěvy [Autumn Songs], str qt, 1995; Proměny vody [Metamorphoses of Water], 4 fl, 1996; Protipóly: Soumraky, Jitra [Opposite Poles: Dusks, Dawns], 2 tpts, 1999; educational pieces

WRITINGS

Novodobé skladebné teorie západoevropské hudby [Modern compositional theories of western European music] (Prague, 1962, rev., enlarged 2/1965/R as Novodobé skladebné směry v hudbě)
Projektová hudební kompozice [Project musical composition] (Prague, 1969)
Hudební styly z hlediska skladatele [Musical styles from the composer's standpoint] (Prague, 1976)
Hudební kompozice [Music composition] (Prague, 1989)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Vysloužil: 'Cesta slibně započatá' [A path begun with promise], HRo, xvii (1964), 230–31
M. Štědroň: 'K moravskej tvorbe posledných rokov' [Moravian composition of recent years], Slovenská hudba, xv (1971), 388–93
Čeští skladatelé současnosti [Czech contemporary composers] (Prague, 1985), 138–40
J. Vysloužil: Hudební slovník pro každéno [Music dictionary for everybody] (Vizovice, 1999), 261

ALENA NĚMCOVÁ

Kohs, Ellis (Bonoff) (b Chicago, 12 May 1916; d Los Angeles, 17 May 2000). American composer and teacher. He studied at the San Francisco Conservatory, at the University of Chicago with Bricken (1933–8, MA 1938), at the Juilliard School with Wagenaar (1938–9) and at Harvard University with Piston, Apel and Leichtentritt (1939–41). After war service as a bandmaster in the US Army Air Force he taught at the Kansas City Conservatory (1946, 1947), Wesleyan University, Connecticut (1946–8), the College of the Pacific (1948–50), Stanford University (1950) and the University of Southern California (from 1950), where he served as chairman of the theory department until 1973 and professor of music.

Kohs has also been active as an administrator. His textbook Music Theory (1961) has been widely used; it was followed by Musical Form (1976) and Musical Composition (1980). He has published many articles on music. His compositions show an imaginative use of variation technique. While he uses newer techniques in his later works, including 12-note serialism, he never departs from established forms, and employs melodic and rhythmic unifying techniques. Among the awards he has received are the Alice M. Ditson Award (1946) and the BMI Publication Award (1948); he has also received commissions from Monteux (for Symphony no.1) and the Fromm Foundation (Symphony no.2).

WORKS

Stage: Amerika (op, Kohs, after F. Kafka), 1966–9; Lohiau and Hiiaka, incid music, 1987

Orch: Conc. for Orch, 1941; Legend, ob, str, 1946; Vc Conc., 1947; Sym. no.1, 1950; Sym. no.2, chorus, orch, 1956; Vn Conc., 1980

Choral: Ps xxv, SATB, org/orch, 1947; Lord of the Ascendant (D. Allen, after Epic of Gilgamesh), 7 solo vv, chorus, orch, 8 dancers, 1955; Ps xxiii, 4 solo vv, chorus, 1957; 3 Songs from the Navajo, 1957; unacc. choruses

Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt no.1, 1940; Night Watch, fl, hn, timp, 1944; Sonatina, bn, pf, 1944; Passacaglia, org, str, 1946; Sonatine, vn, pf, 1948; Str Qt no.2 'A Short Concert', 1948; Chbr Conc., va, 9 str, 1949; Sonata, vc, pf, 1951; Studies in Variation: I, wind qnt, II, pf qt, III, pf (Pf Sonata no.2), IV, vn (Sonata), 1962; Sonata, snare drum, pf, 1966; Duo after Kafka's 'Amerika', vn, vc, 1970

Kbd: Pf Variations, 1946; Variations on "L'homme armé", pf, 1947; Capriccio, org, 1948; Toccata, hpd/pf, 1948; 3 Chorale Variations on Hebrew Hymns, org, 1952; Suite, 2 pf, 1980; Etude-Variations after a Theme by Johannes Brahms, pf RH, 1985; 2 pf sonatas, other shorter pieces

Songs, incl. Fatal Interview (E. St Vincent Millay), low v, pf, 1951; Epitaph (E. Santayana), T, pf, 1959; 4 Orch Songs (A. Lotterhos, Santayana), 1v, orch, 1959

Principal publishers: ACA, Associated, BMI, Merrymount, Presser

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EwenD; VintonD
E.B. Kohs: 'Thoughts from the Workbench', American Composers Alliance Bulletin, vi/1 (1956), 3–5
Compositores de América/Composers of the Americas, ed. Pan American Union, xv (Washington DC, 1969) [incl. list of works]
Unpubd essays in US-NYp

BARBARA A. RENTON

Koinōnikon. A chant of the Byzantine rite, equivalent to the Western communion. In the liturgy of the early Church, the communion chant probably consisted of the responsorial singing of an entire psalm. One of the earliest known responses is Geusasthe kai idete (Psalm xxxiii.9: 'Taste and see that the Lord is good'), a text that eventually became the koinōnikon of the Byzantine Liturgy of the Presanctified Gifts. The use of nonscriptural troparia as refrains and the occasional addition of a doxology show the influence on the koinōnikon of antiphonal psalmody. In the 7th-century rite of Constantinople the troparion Plērōthētō to stoma hēmōn aineseōs ('Let our mouths be filled with praise'), concluding with allēlouïa, was also added to the koinōnikon psalm.

Eventually, the psalm was reduced to a single verse, namely the original response with allēlouïa added as a kind of refrain, and the troparion Plērōthētō was separated from the psalm to function as an independent postcommunion chant.

A repertory of koinōnika for the major feasts of the fixed and movable Church year developed in about the 9th century, although variations and local traditions still seem to have existed. This repertory consists of 26 different texts, of which the majority are based on the psalms; three use other scriptural texts, and two are hymns – Tou deipnou sou tou mystikou ('At thy mysterious feast') for Holy Thursday and Sōma Christou ('Body of Christ') for Easter. Many koinōnika serve more than one feast, and three of the texts are also used as 'Ordinary' communion chants: Agalliasthe, dikaioi en kyriō (Psalm xxxii.1: 'Rejoice in the Lord, O righteous') for Saturdays; Aineite ton kyrion (Psalm cxlviii.1: 'Praise the Lord') for Sundays; and Geusasthe kai idete (see above) for the Liturgy of the Presanctified in Lent.

The earliest extant sources of koinōnikon melodies are the asmatika (choirbooks containing the chanted texts of the cathedral rite of Constantinople), dating from the 13th century and mostly of southern Italian origin. The Russian kondakaria transmit a communion repertory which, though imprecisely notated, clearly bears close modal, melodic and textual similarities to the koinōnika of the Byzantine amastikon. Certain aspects of the kondakaria indicate the liturgical influence of 10th-century Constantinople, suggesting that an older Byzantine asmatikon repertory existed. (For an example of a koinōnikon melody see BYZANTINE CHANT, ex.8.)

The asmatika often provide more than one melody for each koinōnikon, and the three Ordinary pieces are transmitted according to the oktōēchos system, with a melody for each mode. Koinōnikon melodies are moderately melismatic, although the music for the three Ordinary chants is simpler than for the rest of the repertory. Recurring melodic elements are used, each setting a short phrase of text, with the major cadences occurring at each hemistich. The allēlouïa refrain, however, is set in a more flowing, melismatic style akin to other genres of the asmatikon repertory. The long melismas are subdivided by the insertion of 'asmatic' syllables 'gg', 'ch' and 'ou' in the text. Minor differences in the elaboration of the allēlouïa melodies and a considerable amount of modal variance indicate that there were probably several local asmatikon traditions in use simultaneously.

The koinōnikon repertory contained in the AKOLOUTHIAI manuscripts, which first appeared in the early 14th century, is somewhat more heterogeneous than that of the asmatikon tradition; it includes a few melodies that display considerable similarity to original asmatikon chants (some of them are accompanied by the rubric 'asmatikon'), melismatic settings by contemporary composers and other predominantly syllabic settings, which, though new to these manuscripts, probably contain elements from an older, oral tradition. The syllabic type of koinōnikon melody includes patterns deriving from simple psalmody, but such settings are clearly more elaborate than, for example, the simple anonymous prokeimena that are also preserved in the akolouthiai. One anonymous setting of Geusasthe kai idete is given the rubric 'palaion' ('old'), and its melody (in mode 2 plagal with the final on E) possibly derives from an archaic, syllabic koinōnikon tradition.

The 14th- and 15th-century akolouthiai repertory includes koinōnikon melodies by Joannes Glykys, Joannes Koukouzeles, Nikephoros Ethikos, Xenos Korones, Joannes Kladas and Manuel Chrysaphes among others. Although these settings are in some respects reminiscient of the asmatikon tradition (especially in their choice of mode, the opening motifs and the use of asmatic syllables), they also draw upon contemporary kalophonic techniques (see KALOPHONIC CHANT), for example, stepwise, sequential motifs and the frequent use of the four-note tromikon motif, partial repetitions of words or whole phrases – usually indicated in the manuscripts by the chanted 'palin' ('again'). A few koinōnika in this 'mixed' style can also be found in other types of music manuscript dating from the same period, for example, in the heirmologion GR-P 480 and the kalophonic stichērarion ET-MSsc gr.1251.

As an exception to the otherwise completely monophonic Byzantine chant repertory, three two-part koinōnika, reminiscent of early Western organum, are found in 15th-century akolouthiai manuscripts.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Levy: 'A Hymn for Thursday in Holy Week', JAMS, xvi (1963), 127–75

K. Levy: 'The Byzantine Communion-Cycle and its Slavic Counterpart', Congrès d'études byzantines XII: Ohrid 1961, 571–4

S. Harris: 'The Communion Chants in Thirteenth-Century Byzantine Musical Manuscripts', Studies in Eastern Chant, ii, ed. M. Velimirović (London, 1971), 51–67

M. Adamis: 'An Example of Polyphony in Byzantine Music of the Late Middle Ages', IMSCR XI: Copenhagen 1972, 737–47

H. Breslich-Erikson: 'The Communion Hymn of the Byzantine Liturgy of the Presanctified Gifts', Studies in Eastern Chant, iii, ed. M. Velimirović (London, 1973), 51–73

D. Conomos: 'Communion Chants in Magna Graecia and Byzantium', JAMS, xxxiii (1980), 241–63

T. Schattauer: 'The Koinonicon of the Byzantine Liturgy', Orientalia christiana periodica, xlix (1983), 91–129

D. Conomos: The Late Byzantine and Slavonic Communion Cycle: Liturgy and Music (Washington DC, 1985)

A. Doneda: 'The "Hyperstases" in MS Kastoria 8 and the Kondakarian Notation', Palaeobyzantine Notations II: Hernen 1999, 23–36

CHRISTIAN TROELSGÅRD

Koizumi, Fumio (b Tokyo, 4 April 1927; d Tokyo, 20 Aug 1983). Japanese ethnomusicologist. He graduated in aesthetics at Tokyo University in 1951 and studied music with Eishi Kikkawa. From 1960 he was assistant professor and then full professor at Tokyo Geijutsu Daigaku (Tokyo National University of Fine Arts and Music). In 1967 and 1971 he visited the USA to teach at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Connecticut. In addition to his special field of Japanese folk music, he took a broad interest in all folk traditions and made frequent field studies during the period 1957–82 in India, Iran, the Near East, eastern Europe, South America, Indonesia and countries along the ancient Silk Road that linked China with the West; the result in 1981 was the monumental set of 50 LPs entitled Minzoku ongaku dai-shusei ('The Great Anthology of Traditional Music'). As an influential teacher and successful speaker on radio and television he further established the popularity of traditional music. His research materials are preserved in the Koizumi Fumio Memorial Room at Tokyo Geijutsu Daigaku and in 1989 the Koizumi Fumio Prize was introduced to promote the research and performance of traditional music. The Festschrift Shominzoku no oto ['Sounds of Various Nations'], ed. T. Sakurai and others (Tokyo, 1986) is a commemorative collection of Koizumi's papers and contains a detailed biography.

WRITINGS

Nihon dentō ongaku no kenkyū [Study of Japanese traditional music] (Tokyo, 1958–84)

'Annotated Bibliography of Japanese Music', Ongakugaku, ix (1963), 55–64

'Rhythm in Japanese Folk Music', The Japanese Music, ed. Japanese National Committee of the International Music Council (Tokyo, 1967), 14–34

Warabeuta no kenkyū [Game songs of Japanese children] (Tokyo, 1969)

'Nihon ongaku no onkai to senpō' [Scales and modes of Japanese music], Nihon ongaku to sono Shūhen: Kikkawa Eishi sensei kanreki kinen ronbun-shū (Tokyo, 1973), 179–208

Otamajakushi muyōron [Notation not in need] (Tokyo, 1973, 2/1980)

Sekai no Minzoku Ongaku Tanbō: Indo kara Yōroppa e [A search for world folk music: from India to Europe] (Tokyo, 1976)

Nihon no oto [Sounds in Japan] (Tokyo, 1977)

Ongaku no kongen ni arumono [The existence of the roots of music] (Tokyo, 1977)

Esukimō no uta [Eskimo songs] (Tokyo, 1978)

Minzoku ongaku kenkyū nōto [Research notes for traditional music] (Tokyo, 1978)

Kokyū suru minzoku ongaku [Live traditional music] (Tokyo, 1983)

Koizumi Fumio fīrudo wāku [Field works by Fumio Koizumi] (Tokyo, 1984)

Minzoku ongaku no sekai [World of traditional music] (Tokyo, 1985)

Kodomo no asobi to uta [Games and songs for children] (Tokyo, 1986)

Minzoku ongaku: Ajia no rinjin tachi no ongaku o chūshin toshite [Traditional music: mainly the music of Asian neighbours] (Tokyo, 1986)

MASAKATA KANAZAWA

Kojagululy, Birjan-sal (b Erbol [now in Kokchetav province], 1831; d 1894). Kazakh traditional composer and singer. He was born to the family of Turlybai and began composing songs at the age of ten. He belonged to a special category of artists in Kazakh society known as sal and seri, masters of the art of song who usually functioned as part of a group which included those skilled in wrestling and horse-racing, dömbra players, storytellers, jewellers and masters of wit. Birjan was a talented aqyn (poet-singer) and took part in numerous aitys (contests), the most famous of which was with Sara Tastanbekova. He travelled throughout Kazakhstan and became well known. Many of his songs became widely popular, notably Birjan-sal (an autobiographical song), Leyailam-shrak (a girl's name meaning 'my dear flame') and Zhonïp aldï (literally 'polished', 'shaved'). He also composed two songs based on verses by Abai Kunanbaev, in whose household he was on occasion a guest. Birjan's songs were characterized by a number of features including melodic originality, indissoluble unity of text and music, and the inclusion of his own name in the texts of his songs, many of which were autobiographical. Several legends concerning the creation of his songs also became well known. In 1947 the composer Mukhtan Tulebayev composed an opera about him entitled Birzhan i Sara, which became popular in Kazakhstan, and in 1983 Birjan's songs were published in a book entitled Birzhan-sal Kozhagululy: Lyailim-shrak. In 1987 a record was released which comprised performances of 14 of his songs by such distinguished traditional singers as Zhanibek Karlmenov and Kairat Baibosynov. Birjan was the founder of the Sary-Arki school and an important figure in the development of Kazakh traditional music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

A. Zhubanov: Zamana bïlbïldarï (Solov'i stoletii: ocherki o zhizni i tvorchestve kazakhskikh narodnïkh kompozitorov-pevtsov) [The nightingales of the centuries: essays on the life and work of Kazakh folk composer-singers] (Alma-Ata, 1967, 2/1975 in Kazakh), 29–63

B. Erzakovich, ed.: Birzhan-sal Kozhagululy: Lyailim-shrak (Alma-Ata, 1983)

Pesni Birzhana [Songs of Birjan], Melodiya LP 30 26759 006 (1987)

ALMA KUNANBAYEVA

Kókai, Rezső (b Budapest, 15 Jan 1906; d Budapest, 6 March 1962). Hungarian composer. He began his career at an early age: the Symphony in E♭ was written and performed when he was 11, and in his student years he gained recognition for his Wagnerian organ improvisations. From 1920 he was a composition pupil of Koessler and, to a certain extent influenced by Dohnányi, he composed in a Brahmsian manner. Kókai studied the piano and composition at the Liszt Academy of Music in Budapest from 1925 to 1926, when his Quartet in F♯ minor won a prize that enabled him to make a study tour of Italy and France. As a condition of this competition he spent a short time collecting folksongs in Gömör county, Hungary. He started teaching in 1927, and from 1929 until his death he was a professor at the Liszt Academy, giving instruction in a range of subjects. In 1933 he took the DMus at Freiburg University as a musicology pupil of Gurlitt. Kókai was director of music for Hungarian radio from 1945 to 1948. Sketches for a divertimento, dating from 1930, show signs of an awakening interest in Debussy and Stravinsky. In 1931–2 Kókai made some Hungarian folksong arrangements, but he was averse to the new directions of Bartók and Kodály, and later in the 1930s found his own Hungarian style, connected with Liszt and 19th-century verbunkos music. The stage oratorio István király ('St Stephen') shows the achievement of this aesthetic, which was developed after World War II, sometimes using folksongs as in the ballet A rossz feleség ('The Bad Wife'), or invented Hungarian-like melodies. Among Kókai's best works are the Violin Concerto and the orchestral Concerto all'ungherese.

WORKS
(selective list)

DRAMATIC

Zélis imádói [Adorers of Zelis] (ob, 1, after C. Marlowe), 1931; István király [St Stephen] (stage orat, 2, I. Németh), 1938–9; A rossz feleség [The Bad Wife] (ballet), 1942–5; A fülemile [The Nightingale] (radio play, T. Bárány, after J. Arany), 1950; Lészen ágyú [There will Be Guns] (radio play, J. Romhányi), 1951; Hét falu kovácsa [The Blacksmith of Seven Villages] (radio play, Z. Nadányi), 1954

Film scores: Kalandos vakáció [Adventurous Holiday], 1954; Különös ismertetőjel [Recognition Mark], 1955; A császár parancsára [By Command of the Emperor], 1956; Sóbálvány [Pillar of Salt], 1958; Szegény gazdagok [Poor Rich], 1959

OTHER

Orch: Sym., E♭, 1917; Romance, vn, str, 1918; Idyll, str, 1918–19; Intermezzo, str, hp, 1921–6; Suite, 1926 [3rd movt identical with Intermezzo]; Preludio and Scherzo, 1928–9; 2 Rondos, small orch, 1946–7; 2 Dances, 1932–49; Verbunkos szvit [Recruiting Suite], small orch, 1951; Dances from Szék, 1952, rev. as Szék Rhapsody, 1953; Kis verbunkoszene [Short Recruiting Music], str, 1952; Márciusi induló [March of March], military band, 1952; Rhapsody, cl, folk orch, 1952; Vn Conc., 1952, rev. 1953; Conc. all'ungherese, 1957

Chbr and solo inst: Sonata, vn, pf, 1923; Pf Qnt, 1925; Sextet, cl, hn, str, 1925; Sonata, vc, pf, 1926; Str Qt, a, 1926; Str Qt, f♯, 1926; Str Qt, c, 1927; Serenade, str trio, 1932–50; Quartettino, cl, str trio, 1952

Shorter duos, pf music, songs, choruses

Principal publishers: Editio Musica, Hungarian Arts Council, Rózsavölgyi

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Kókai: Franz Liszt in seinen frühen Klavierwerken (diss., U. of Freiburg, 1933; Kassel, 1968)

K. Hauburger: Kókai Rezső (Budapest, 1968) [incl. list of works and discography]

GYÖRGY KROÓ

Kokkonen, Joonas (b Iisalmi, 13 Nov 1921; d Järvenpää, 20 Oct 1996). Finnish composer. He studied at the University of Helsinki and the Sibelius Academy with Hannikainen (piano), Ranta (counterpoint) and Palmgren (harmony). He was a lecturer (1950–59) and then professor of composition (1959–63) at the Sibelius Academy, continuing after 1963 to act as a private mentor to a number of students (including Sallinen and Heininen). On being elected a member of the Academy of Finland in 1963 Kokkonen began an exceptional career in Finnish cultural life, working in many ways to improve the status of classical music and music education. He was chairman of numerous organizations (e.g. Board of the Concert Centre, 1964–79; Society of Finnish Composers, 1965–71; Association of Finnish Symphony Orchestras, 1965–74; Board of the Sibelius Academy, 1966–80; Finnish Composers' International Copyright Bureau, 1968–88). He was awarded the prize of the Wihuri International Awards Fund in 1961, the Music Prize of the Nordic Council (for his Third Symphony) in 1968 and the Wihuri Foundation's Sibelius Prize in 1973.

The dominant feature of Kokkonen's first chamber music period (1948–57) and especially its main work, the Piano Quintet, is neo-classicism: fast movements are dance-like, while the intervals used are predominantly 4ths, 5ths and 2nds. His approach is strictly contrapuntal, chords resulting from the part-writing. The Music for Strings (1956–7) points in a number of directions: while there are 12-note melodies already emerging from the minor 2nds of the first movement, the scherzo is still Bartók-like, and the Adagio religioso which culminates in pure triads, looks both back to Sibelius and forward to Kokkonen's own late period. Even in the Duo for violin and piano, Kokkonen was already seeking to implement his focal idea of building a whole work out of a limited number of embryo cells: the entire motivic material is presented in the very first bars with everything thereafter based upon it. Herein lies the cornerstone of his organic, symphonic thinking.

Even in the neo-classical period Kokkonen was already beginning to employ the chromatic total, for example by filling the 'vacuum' left by a leap in a melody with gradual movement (the horror vacui principle he discovered in Palestrina and Bartók). The transition to his second, 12-note, period from the First to the Second String Quartet (1959–66) was not therefore abrupt. In this second period Kokkonen became established as a symphonist and one of Finland's leading composers. His Symphony no.1 (1958–60) displays a characteristic formal dramaturgy and coherence, the material presented first in fragmentary form among the various sections of the orchestra; and subsequently coming together to form melodic lines which centre on the strings, all the notes of the row in the same instrumental voice. In this work and others which followed, the conventional four-movement scheme is replaced by more individual forms, often ending with a slow movement. The Second Symphony and the Sinfonia da camera – Kokkonen's first international success – are regarded as his most orthodox serial works, yet also his most radical. Kokkonen did not as a rule observe the serialist convention to forbid triads and octaves, but whereas the final cluster of the First Symphony opens out on to a chord of E major, the Second remains on a 12-note chord. The stimulus behind Opus sonorum (1964) was more conservative: a desire to write absolute music without any percussion.

Symphony no.3 (1967) heralded Kokkonen's neo-Romantic period: instead of the somewhat hollow sound of the previous symphonies he now used rich orchestral timbres, and the systematic use of 12-note technique fell away. The music gradually became simpler and more accessible with the Fourth Symphony greeted as a highly approachable work, a triumphant return to tonal clarity and melody. The motifs once used primarily as abstract combinations of intervals now became melodic germs. The Romantic impression is further enhanced by the fact that even the 12-note melodies in the symphony are accompanied by chorale-like progressions of major chords, often in mediant combinations (e.g. C–E–A♭). By contrast, the homophonic texture, the regular pulse dictated by barlines and the narrow range of melodic intervals tends to create a sense of classical restraint. One of the most popular compositions of this period is the Cello Concerto, Kokkonen's only foray into the genre, and an exceptionally idiomatic, extrovert work.

From the beginning, many of Kokkonen's pieces had an 'Adagio religioso' movement, at times restrained and devout, at others triumphant and hymn-like, with quite a few ending on an E major triad. This remained typical of his major late works, '. . . durch einen Spiegel . . .' (Metamorphoses) for 12 strings and harpsichord, and the Requiem for soloists, chorus and orchestra. Also religious in theme is Kokkonen's largest composition, the opera Viimeiset kiusaukset ('The Last Temptations'), on the subject of the Finnish Revivalist leader Paavo Ruotsalainen. In 1975 the opera initiated a stream of successes in Finnish opera. It has been staged in a number of European cities (Stockholm, London, Wiesbaden) and in New York.

WORKS

Stage: Viimeiset kiusaukset [The Last Temptations] (op, 2, L. Kokkonen), 1973–5, Helsinki, Finnish National Opera, 2 Sept 1975

Orch: Music for Str, 1956–7; Sym. no.1, 1958–60; Sym. no.2, 1961; Sinfonia da camera, 12 str, 1962; Opus sonorum, 1964; Sym. no.3, 1967; Sym. Sketches, 1968; Vc Conc., 1969; Inauguratio, 1971; Sym. no.4, 1971; '. . . durch einen Spiegel . . .', 12 str, hpd, 1976–7; Interludes, 1977 [from op Viimeiset kiusaukset]; Il paesaggio, chbr orch, 1986–7

Choral: Missa a cappella, 6-pt chorus, 1963; Sammakon virsi sateen aikana [Psalm of the Frog in the Rain] (P. Mustapää), male chorus, 1963; Laudatio Domini, S, chorus, 1966; Erekhteion (cant., A. Kivimaa), solo vv, chorus, orch, 1969–70; Requiem, S, Bar, chorus, orch, 1981; 'Sormin soitti Väinämöinen' [Väinämöinen Plucked the Strings] (Kalevala), male chorus, 1985

Solo vocal: Illat [The Evenings] (K. Vala), song cycle, S, pf, 1955; Lintujen tuonela [The Hades of the Birds] (song cycle, Mustapää), Mez, orch, 1958–9; Sub rosa (E. Manner), 1v, pf, 1973; 2 Monologues, B, orch, 1975 [from op Viimeiset kiusaukset]

Chbr and solo inst: Pf Trio, 1948; Pf Qnt, 1953; Pf Sonatina, 1953; Duo, vn, pf, 1955; Religioso, pf, 1956; Str Qt no.1, 1958–9; Str Qt no.2, 1964–6; Hääsoitto [Wedding March], org, 1968; 5 Bagatelles, pf, 1968–9; Surusoitto [Funeral March], org, 1969;

Wind Qnt, 1973; Lux aeterna, org, 1974; Sonata, vc, pf, 1976; Str Qt no.3, 1976; Iuxta crucem, org, 1979; Improvvisazione, vn, pf, 1982

MSS in Finnish Music Information Centre, Helsinki

Principal publishers: Fazer, Finnish Broadcasting Company, Muzika (Leningrad), Schirmer

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Nummi: Modern musik: Finlands musikhistoria från första världskriget fram till vår tid [Modern music: Finland's musical history from the first world war to our time] (Stockholm, 1967)
E. Salmenhaara: 'Joonas Kokkonen: romantisoituva klassikko' [Kokkonen: romanticizing classicist], Suomen musiikin vuosikirja 1967–68 (Helsinki, 1968) [Swed. trans. in Nomus nytt, v (1969), appx p.1]
B. Wallner: Vår tids musik i Norden [Nordic music of today] (Stockholm, 1968)
P. Heininen: 'Joonas Kokkonen', Musiikki, nos.3–4 (1972), 136–85
E. Salmenhaara, ed.: Miten sävellykseni ovat syntyneet [How my works came to be written] (Helsinki, 1976)
Joonas Kokkonen ja Timo Mäkinen keskustelevat musiikista ja elämästä [Kokkonen and Mäkinen talk about music and life] (Savonlinna, 1979)
J. Aromäki: Elämäni on musiikki [My life is music] (Porvoo, 1980)
E. Karjalainen: Joonas Kokkonen: näköaloja luovuuteen ja ihmisyyteen [Kokkonen: views on creativity and humanity] (Porvoo, 1981)
T. Mäkinen, L. Nummi and T. Teerisuo, eds.: Kuvastimessa . . . durch einen Spiegel . . . Joonas Kokkonen [In a mirror . . . durch einen Spiegel . . . Kokkonen] (Savonlinna, 1981)
M. Heiniö: 'From Neo-Classicism to Pluralism', Nordiska Musikfester/Nordic Music Days: 100 years, ed. S. Hanson (Stockholm, 1988), 29–35
M. Heiniö: 'Joonas Kokkonen's Opera The Last Temptations', Finnish Music Quarterly, xii/3 (1991), 10–13
P.H. Nordgren: 'Joonas Kokkonen – Symphonist', Finnish Music Quarterly, xii/3 (1991), 3–8
P. Kuokkala: Ooppera Viimeiset kiusaukset Joonas Kokkonen säveltäjäkuvan heijastumana [The opera The Last Temptations as a reflection of Kokkonen the composer] (Jyväskylä, 1992)
I. Pokkinen: Orgaaninen prosessi: Tutkimus Joonas Kokkonen motiivitekniikan ja muotoajattelun kehittymisestä [The organic process: a study of the development of Kokkonen's motif technique and formal thinking] (Helsinki, 1992)
M. Heiniö, P. Jalkanen, S. Lappalainen and E. Salmenhaara: Suomalaisia säveltäjiä [Finnish composers] (Helsinki, 1994)
M. Heiniö: Suomen musiikin historia IV: Aikamme musiikki [The history of Finnish music IV: contemporary music] (Helsinki, 1995)
K. Korhonen: Finnish Concertos (Jyväskylä, 1995; Eng. trans., 1995)
K. Korhonen: Finnish Orchestral Music (Jyväskylä, 1995; Eng. trans., 1995)
K. Aho, P. Jalkanen, E. Salmenhaara and K. Virtamo: Finnish Music (Helsinki, 1996)
A. Karttunen, ed.: 'The Music of Our Time', Finnish Music Quarterly (1996), no.4, pp.31–63

MIKKO HEINIÖ

Ko Ko, Ù [Gita Lulin Maung] (b Bogale, 11 Nov 1928). Myanmar composer and pianist. He studied pat-talà (bamboo xylophone) and voice at the School of Music and Art, Rangoon (Yangon), in 1939; by 1941 he was performing weekly classical broadcasts for the Burma Broadcasting Service with his teachers Myanmar Nyunt Ù Chit Maung and Daw Aung Kyi. During these programmes he became known as a singer and pat-talà (bamboo xylophone) player. In this same year he began recording Burmese traditional and 'modern-traditional' music for Columbia Records. In 1942 he began playing Burmese piano and formed a group that provided live music for silent films and later also for plays. His interpretations of the Burmese classical repertory and his light classical compositions are virtuoso and improvisatory and many of his modern compositions are influenced by American musical theatre from the 1930s and 40s. He has composed music for over 1000 films, earning awards from the Myanmar Motion Picture Academy for his scores for Me thida lo mein kha lay ('A Girl like Ma Thida') (1992) and Tike pwe khaw than ('Call to Battle') (1996). He is a leading figure in government sanctioned efforts to revitalize and preserve the traditional music of Myanmar, holding posts including chairperson of the committee for the standardization of Myanmar classical music (1997–9), head judge of the national music competition (1993–9) and consultant for the University of Culture (established in 1993).

RECORDINGS

Piano birman/Burmese piano, Société Radio-Canada UMM 203 (1995)

GAVIN D. DOUGLAS

Kokyū (from ko: 'foreign', 'barbarian'; kyū: 'bow'). Japanese spike fiddle. It is about 69 cm long, with a soundbox measuring 14 x 12 x 7·5 cm; the bow is about 95 to 120 cm long. This is Japan's only indigenously evolved fiddle (although several others were used in minshingaku music). It is smaller than the shamisen (see JAPAN, §II, 6), but otherwise nearly identical in shape and construction, differing mainly in its long spike, the shape and position of the bridge and the lack of any device to generate the buzzing sound called sawari. The kokyū is held vertically, its spike inserted between the knees of the kneeling performer or (especially for women) resting on the floor in front of the knees (see illustration). As with the Javanese rebab the instrument itself, not the bow, is rotated to select the appropriate string; the bow always follows the same path. There are usually three strings, but certain schools double the highest string (a practice introduced in the mid-18th century).

The kokyū had appeared at least by the early 17th century; in early depictions its body is smaller and rounder than that of the modern instrument. It may have developed from a marriage of the shamisen not with a jinghu-type Chinese fiddle but with the European rebec, a hypothesis suggested by organological evidence, by Japan's ties with Europe around the time that the kokyū appeared, and by the apparent occurrence of raheika (the Japanese word for rebec is rabeika) as an early alternative name for the instrument. The kokyū was quickly adopted both by low-caste itinerants and by the guild of blind shamisen and koto players. The blind musicians developed a small repertory of 'basic pieces' (honkyoku), a few of which survive. By the mid-17th century the kokyū alternated with the hitoyogiri as the third member of the sankyoku (chamber music) trio. In the bunraku puppet theatre it joined the shamisen in scenes of extreme pathos. It also came to be used in certain regional folk music. By the late 19th century the role of the kokyū in sankyoku had been usurped by the shakuhachi except in accompaniments to the stately jiuta-mai dances. Today it survives mainly as an instrument of worship in the Tenri-Kyō religion. The kokyū is usually tuned a 5th above the shamisen, in san-sagari tuning. It does not change tuning in mid-piece, unlike the shamisen and koto.

Kokyū (spike fiddle) player, Japan

The kokyū is similar to the Okinawan kūchō, although the relationship has not yet been clarified.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AND OTHER RESOURCES

S. Kishibe: The Traditional Music of Japan (Tokyo, 1966, 2/1981), pl.53

D. Waterhouse: 'An Early Illustration of the 4-stringed Kokyū', Oriental Art, xvi (1970), 162–8

F. Koizumi, Y. Tokumaru and O. Yamaguchi, eds.: Asian Musics in an Asian Perspective: Tokyo 1976, 187–9

O. Mensink: 'Strings, Bows and Bridges: Some Provisional Remarks on the kokyū in Woodblock Prints', Andon, xv (1984), 1–9

RECORDINGS

A Collection of Unique Musical Instruments, CD, King KICH-2030 [two Kokyū solos]

Japan: Music of the Koto, CD, JVC VICG-5358 [Kokyū with Koto]

DAVID W. HUGHES

Kolb, Barbara (b Hartford, CT, 10 Feb 1939). American composer. She studied the clarinet, and composition with Arnold Franchetti at Hartt College of Music (BM 1961, MM 1964); she also studied with Foss and Schuller at the Berkshire Music Center (1964, 1968). From 1960 to 1966 she was a clarinettist in the Hartford SO. She was the first American woman to receive the Prix de Rome (1969–71); among many other awards, enabling her to study in Vienna and Paris and at Mills College (electronic music), have been a Fulbright Scholarship, several MacDowell Colony fellowships, two Guggenheim fellowships and the Kennedy Center Friedheim Award (1987, for Millefoglie). Major commissions include Trobar Clus and a work for chamber orchestra for the Fromm Foundation, Soundings for the Koussevitzky Foundation, The Enchanted Loom for the Atlanta SO and All in Good Time for the New York PO. She was composer-in-residence at the Marlboro Music Festival (1973), the American Academy in Rome (1975) and IRCAM (1983–4), and briefly held teaching positions in theory and composition at Brooklyn College, CUNY, Temple University and the Eastman School of Music. From 1979 to 1982 she served as artistic director of the contemporary music series Music New to New York at the 3rd Street Music School Settlement, and between 1982 and 1986 she developed a music theory course, sponsored by the Library of Congress, for the blind and physically disabled.

Kolb's music is highly eclectic, assimilating diverse styles and exploring different media; contemporary idioms, ranging from serialism to jazz, are uniquely synthesized. Many of her works also respond to a variety of extra-musical sources, including the visual arts (Grisaille) and poetry (Appello and Spring River Flowers Moon Night). Appello uses serial techniques, with a note row borrowed from Boulez's Structures Ia, but despite this kinship the two works produce highly contrasting effects: unlike Boulez's work, Appello features rich sonorities and repeated melodic and harmonic patterns. Jazz elements are incorporated most notably in Chromatic Fantasy and Homage to Keith Jarrett and Gary Burton.

Besides fusing different styles, Kolb has combined electronic and acoustic media. In Millefoglie a computer-generated tape and a chamber orchestra blend diverse colours and interweave contrasting layers of sound. Many pieces in addition to Millefoglie, particularly the orchestral works Grisaille, Soundings and The Enchanted Loom, explore the superimposition of multiple harmonic and rhythmic layers. Soundings, her best-known work, is based on the technique of depth-measurement and cast in a tripartite, quasi-palindromic form. The first section 'descends' through successive layers to a climax and the last 'ascends' to the surface through different layers with rhythmic acceleration. In the central section the texture is dissipated, and motivic patterns from the opening are isolated and developed.

WORKS

Orch: Crosswinds, wind, perc, 1968; Trobar Clus, chbr orch, 1970; Soundings, chbr orch, tape, 1971–2, rev. 1975, 1978; Grisaille, 1978–9; Millefoglie, chbr orch, cptr-generated tape, 1984–5; Yet that Things go Round, chbr orch, 1986–7, rev. 1988; The Enchanted Loom, 1988–9, rev. 1992; Voyants, pf, chbr orch, 1991; All in Good Time, 1993

Chbr and solo inst: Rebuttal, 2 cl, 1965; Figments, fl, pf, 1967, rev. 1969; 3 Place Settings (I. Diamond, C., R. and B. Brown, R. Costa), nar, cl, perc, vn, db, 1968; Solitaire, pf, tape, 1971; Toccata, hpd, tape, 1971; Spring River Flowers Moon Night, 2 pf, perc, tape, 1974–5; Looking for Claudio, gui, tape, 1975; Appello, pf, 1976; Homage to Keith Jarrett and Gary Burton, fl, vib, 1976; Musique pour un vernissage, fl, gui, vn, va, 1977 [withdrawn]; Chromatic Fantasy (H. Stern), amp nar, amp a fl, ob, s sax, tpt, el gui, vib, 1979;

3 Lullabies, gui, 1980; Related Characters, tpt/cl/a sax/va, pf, 1980; Cantico, film score, tape, 1982; Cavatina, vn/va, 1983, rev. 1985; Time ... and Again, ob, str qt, tape, 1985; Umbrian Colors, vn, gui, 1986; Extremes, fl, vc, 1989; Cloudspin, org, tape, 1991; Introduction and Allegro, gui, 1992 [replaces Molto Allegro, 1988]; Monticello Trio, vn, vc, pf, 1992; In Memory of David Huntley, str qt, 1994; Turnabout, fl, pf, 1994; New York Moonglow, fl + t sax, cl + s sax, tpt, vib + perc, va, vc, 1995; Sidebars, bn, pf, 1995–6

Vocal: [7] Chansons bas (S. Mallarmé), S, hp, perc, 1966; [5] Songs before an Adieu (R. Pinsky, e.e. cummings, Stern, V. Popa, G. Apollinaire), S, fl, gui, 1976–9; Poem, chorus, 1980; The Point that Divides the Wind (Franciscan and Gregorian chant), 3 solo male vv, org, perc, 1982; The Sundays of my Life, jazz song, 1982

Principal publishers: Boosey & Hawkes, C. Fischer, Peters

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CC (B. Weir); GroveW (D. Metzer and L. Starr) [incl. further bibliography]

C. Gange and T. Caras: 'Barbara Kolb', Soundpieces: Interviews with American Composers (Metuchen, NJ, 1982), 269–79

D. Wright: 'Looking for Barbara Kolb', MT, cxxxiv (1993), 9–13

E. Perconti: 'Three Keyboard Pieces by Barbara Kolb', Women of Note Quarterly, iv/2 (1996), 20–26

DAVID METZER, LAWRENCE STARR

Kolb, Carlmann (b Kösslarn, Griesbach, Lower Bavaria, bap. 29 Jan 1703; d Munich, 15 Jan 1765). German priest, organist and composer. He received his education and musical training in Asbach and Landshut. Later he returned to the Benedictine Abbey of Asbach where he had been a choirboy, was ordained priest in 1729 and became the permanent organist of the community. He was under the patronage of the Count of Tattenbach-Reinstein in Munich and tutored his sons.

Kolb left only two works, a Sinfonia in F for harpsichord and strings cited in a Breitkopf catalogue, and the Certamen aonium (Augsburg, 1733; ed. R. Walter, Altötting, 1959; another modern edn, Heidelberg, 1960). He originally intended a secunda pars but it was never published. Nevertheless this small collection of pieces establishes him as one of the best composers for organ of his time in southern Germany. For each of the eight church modes Kolb wrote a prelude, three verses and a cadenza. They are not firmly grounded in these modes but show many features of the diatonic and chromatic harmony of his day. South German practice implied certain limitations in organ style, particularly in the use of pedals. Kolb's preludes, on the other hand, contain many examples of brilliant passage-work for the manuals, as well as effective rests which heighten tension. In style they sometimes resemble florid harpsichord music. The verses are short fughettas which occasionally share a thematic relationship. They adopt longer and more varied subjects than much German organ music of the south. The cadenzas favour sequential treatment in the Italian style.

Kolb's modal suites owe something to predecessors such as F.X.A. Murschhauser and Gottlieb Muffat. In the fluency of their organ writing, however, his examples are models for his own time.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrookB

E. von Werra: 'Beiträge zur Geschichte des katholischen Orgelspiels', KJb, xii (1897), 28–36, esp. 30

HUGH J. McLEAN

Kolb [Kolbanus, Kholbio], Simon (b c1556; d Hall [now Solbad Hall], nr Innsbruck, 1 Sept 1614). Austrian composer, possibly of German birth. He was a choirboy in the Hofkapelle of Archduke Ferdinand II, first at Prague (1564–6) and then at Innsbruck (1566–72); during this period he was taught singing by the Kapellmeister, Wilhelm Bruneau. In 1572 he was given a scholarship for three years' study as well as an allowance to enable him to visit his parents, who were living 'nearly 100 miles away' – a hint as to where he may have been born. By 1577 at the latest he was back at Innsbruck as a tenor in the Hofkapelle, and he held this position until 1591. From 1588 payments are recorded to him for various compositions, and by 1591 he was teaching his fellow singers counterpoint (he may have taught as early as 1577, when one of his former teachers identified him in his diary as a 'colleague'). From the beginning of 1592 until his death he was Kapellmeister of the royal convent at Hall. Under his leadership its Kapelle became famous for its singers, organists and cornett and trombone players. Archduke Maximilian conferred a coat-of-arms on the Kolb family on 19 July 1604. Only four works by Kolb appear to be extant: the Missa 'Su, su non più dormir' for six voices (PL-WRu) and three five-part motets (RISM 1604[7], D-As, LÜh). Another five-part motet, from his time at Innsbruck, is known to have existed, and a set of antiphons is referred to in an inventory at Hall (1611).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; SennMT

W. Senn: Aus dem Kulturleben einer süddeutschen Kleinstadt: Musik, Schule und Theater der Stadt Hall in Tirol (Innsbruck and Munich, 1938)

E.F. Schmid: Musik an den schwäbischen Zollernhöfen der Renaissance (Kassel, 1962)

E. FRED FLINDELL

Kolberg. German firm of percussion instrument manufacturers. It was founded near Stuttgart in 1968 by Bernard Kolberg (b Oberschliesen, Upper Silesia, 1942), a percussionist and engineer. The firm has been influential in extending the possibilities of existing instruments and in the development of new ones. It has produced extended-range tubular bells (three octaves), crotales (five octaves), bell plates (five octaves), anvils (four octaves), boobams (three octaves) and other instruments, and a mounted tambourine to facilitate the endless thumb trill; it has also developed a number of technical innovations for pedal timpani.

JAMES HOLLAND

Kolberg, Kåre (b Birkenes, 24 April 1936). Norwegian composer. He studied the organ and choral conducting at Oslo Conservatory, and has for many years served as an organist. He studied musicology at the University of Oslo (MA 1966). He then undertook a research fellowship at the university, working on the history of contemporary music. He has written several articles on music and society. President of the Norwegian section of ISCM (1970–73), he was also chairman of Artist Action (1974) and of the Norwegian Composers' Union (1979–85). In 1996 he was made an honorary member of the latter organization for his contribution towards improving Norway's musical life.

His first acknowledged work was his String Quartet no.1 (1964) which, together with his first large orchestral piece, Suoni per orchestra (1965), shows his modernist side. He later often used softer sounds and more Romantic tones (but in a modern framework), trying to achieve a more direct rapport with his audience. His music has successfully communicated wit, humour and irony, as is also evident in titles such as Plym-Plym (1967) and The Emperor's New Tie (1973). His choral work For the Time Being (1984) was named Norwegian Work of the Year. Kolberg has received commissions for incidental music, for both theatre and television, and his electronic music has earned a reputation for being innovative.

WORKS

Dramatic: Hakena'anit, church ballet, org, 2 perc, 1968; Tivoli (TV op, D. Thomas), 1974; Tartuffe (incid music, Molière), 1986

Orch: Suoni per orchestra, 1965; When the Moon is Smiling, amateur orch, 1971; Aria in aria per orchestra, 1984; Nå da? [Well?], 1991; Bozza per orchestra, 1994, rev. 1995

Chbr: Quartetto per archi, 1964; Ludus, org, 1964; t'aime – banalités pour piano, 1975; Pasticcio per flauti dolci, 4 rec, 1976; A Wind Qnt, 1976; Still There is Hope, fl, cl, vn, vc, perc, pf, 1978; Tonada, org, perc, wind insts, 1978, rev. 1980; Varia, fl, tpt, perc, synth/kbd, db, 1980; Ottoni – a Brass Qnt, 1981; Str Qt no.2, 1989, rev. 1992; A Sax Qt, 1991; Alluso for Chbr Ens, sinfonietta, 1993

Vocal: Plym-Plym – Hommage à Edvard Grieg, SATB, nar, 1967; For the Time Being, SATB, 1984

Elec: The Emperor's New Tie, 1973; Cercare, 1989; Sombre, 1990; Vitrage, 1992

Principal publishers: Norsk musikforlag, Norwegian Music Information Centre

ARVID O. VOLLSNES

Kolberg, (Henryk) Oskar (b Przysucha, Opoczno district, 22 Feb 1814; d Kraków, 3 June 1890). Polish folklorist and composer. He was educated at the Warsaw Lyceum (1823–30) and studied the piano with Franciszek Vetter. He then worked in a bank, continuing his musical studies with Józef Elsner and I.F. Dobrzyński and later in Berlin (1835–6) with Girschner and Karol Rungenhagen. After returning from Berlin he taught the piano in Warsaw, Mitau (now Jelgava, Latvia) and Homel (Belarus). He was also active as a composer, chiefly of songs and dances whose inspiration he drew from folk music; most of these were published. His cycles of kujawiak proved the most popular of his works. Kolberg also composed the music for three one-act stage entertainments on rural themes, J.K. Gregorowicz's Janek spod Ojcowa ('Johnny from Ojców'; Warsaw, 1853), Teofil Lenartowicz's Król pasterzy ('The Shepherd King'; Warsaw, 1859) and Seweryna Pruszakowa's Pielgrzymka do Częstochowy ('The pilgrimage to Częstochowa'), unfinished.

Kolberg was better known as an ethnographer. Beginning in 1838, he systematically collected folktunes, sometimes visiting villages in the Warsaw region in the company of writers, painters and other artist friends. From 1842 to 1849 he published collections of folksongs with piano accompaniment, intended for home music-making. The philosopher Karol Libelt was critical of the 'prettifying' of authentic tunes in the accompaniments, and Chopin was still more so in a letter to his family (19 April 1847), having known Kolberg in his youth. The next stage in Kolberg's output opened with Pieśni ludu polskiego ('Songs of the Polish people'; Warsaw, 1857); this contained 41 ballads with many regional variants, and 466 dance-songs in their original unaccompanied form. In 1862 he gave up his bank employment and, living very frugally, devoted all his energies to a series of ethnographic regional monographs under the general title of Lud, jego zwyczaje, sposób życia, mowa, podania, przysłowia, obrzędy, gusła, zabawy, pieśni, muzyka i tańce ('The people, its customs, life-style, speech, folktales, proverbs, rites, witchcraft, games, songs, music and dances'), continued as Obrazy etnograficzne ('Ethnographic pictures'). 33 volumes appeared between 1861 and 1890 in Warsaw and (from the fifth series onwards) in Kraków. In 1871 he moved to the estate of the Konopkas at Modlnica near Kraków, and eventually settled in Kraków in 1884. He contributed to many journals, wrote articles on the ethnography and history of Polish music, as well as entries for Samuel Orgelbrand's Encyklopedia powszechna ('Universal encyclopedia'). Kolberg's scholarly work won him widespread recognition, and he was nominated as a member of numerous Polish and foreign learned societies. Some of his manuscript materials were posthumously published in five volumes between 1891 and 1910, and in 1960 the State Council decreed that his collected works should be published under the aegis of the Polish Academy of Sciences, 90 volumes in all being envisaged; by the 1990s some 69 of these had appeared, containing more than 17 thousand melodies from Poland, Ukraine, Belarus and Lithuania.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (M. Sobieski)

I. Kopernicki: Oskar Kolberg (Kraków, 1889)

S. Lam: Oskar Kolberg: żywot i praca [Life and works] (Lemberg, 1914)

Lud, xlii (1956)

B. Linette and others: Dziela wszystkie Oskara Kolberga: informator wydawniczy [Complete works of Oskar Kolberg: publication reference] (Poznań, 1991)

LUDWIK BIELAWSKI

Koldofsky, Adolph (b London, 13 Sept 1905; d Los Angeles, 8 April 1951). Canadian violinist and conductor. In 1912 he moved to Toronto, where he studied the violin with Harry Adaskin, Luigi von Kunits and Geza de Kresz. He also studied with Ysaÿe in Brussels (1925–8) and with Ševčík in Czechoslovakia (1929–30). In Toronto he was important in musical life as chamber player, soloist and conductor, and from 1938 to 1942 he played in the Hart House Quartet. He became leader of the Vancouver SO in 1944, and in 1946 he moved to Los Angeles where his interest in contemporary music brought him into close association with Krenek and Schoenberg; the latter composed his Phantasy op.47 for him. As a scholar Koldofsky was notable for bringing to light several harpsichord concertos (now in US-BEm) by C.P.E. Bach, performances of which he conducted for the CBC with Landowska as soloist in 1943. He married the Canadian pianist Gwendolyn Williams, with whom he gave many concerts.

CARL MOREY

Kolęda [colenda]. Polish sacred song associated with Christmas, analogous to the carol, noël and Weihnachtslied. The term derives from the Latin calendae and has various meanings related to the custom of calling at houses at Christmas with greetings and requests for gifts (accompanied by singing and acting) by a group of boys (kolędnicy), or to visits from the clergy. The term acquired musical meaning by the transference of the usual name for a visit and greeting to the song that regularly accompanied it. This probably occurred in the Middle Ages, but written evidence of the name kolęda is first found in a reference to music in the tablature of Jan z Lublina (written 1537–48). There, 'colenda' is used to describe several songs with melodies appropriate for Christmas. As the name of a characteristic musical style, kolęda is associated primarily with a repertory of melodies and texts composed in Poland in the 17th and 18th centuries under the influence of folk styles, particularly the mazurka and polonaise. It is necessary to distinguish between true kolędy – strophic sacred songs sung in churches and homes – and the subgroup of pastorales with texts partly or wholly secular, based on pastoral motifs and performed exclusively outside the church, mainly by carollers and at Christmas folk plays.

Evidence of songs connected with Christmas is found in Poland as early as 1124. These songs developed particularly through the spread of the Franciscan order to Poland after 1237. At first both melodies and texts belonged to an international Latin repertory, which was later supplemented, from the second half of the 14th century, with works by local composers, as shown by the Latin texts of the songs of Bartłomiej z Jasła. In the 15th century the first translations into Polish of Latin kolędy appeared. (Often these translations were from Czech; ten texts of this type are extant and some of their melodies have been identified.) Some polyphonic arrangements are known, both local (in PL-Wn 8054) and imported (in Kj 18, Pr 1361, and Tm 2015). Many melodies with Polish texts survive from the 16th century, both in manuscript Catholic hymnbooks (primarily Benedictine, in Staniątki, near Kraków, from the end of the 16th century) and printed Protestant hymnbooks (notably those of Walenty z Brzozowa, 1554 and 1563, and Artomius, 1587 and 1596). Three versions of a single kolęda are contained in the tablature of Jan z Lublina, and a large corpus of kolędy was published in printed leaflet form around 1550 (including one by Wacław z Szamotuł). The melodies of these pieces were largely derived from an international repertory of medieval songs, and apart from their textual association with Christmas they do not constitute a group of any distinct musical character.

Kolędy in their proper form and pastorales, their secularized variants, proliferated in the 17th and 18th centuries. These kolędy, as yet not fully examined, are anonymous and were the result of spontaneous popular creation. A pastoral strain is predominant, combining local rural elements, lyricism and, occasionally, crude humour, often addressed to actual situations or people. Their melodies adopt the popular folk style of their region (e.g. Mazovia or Podhale), or are of particular types like the lyrical lullaby, or, more commonly, the mazurka and the polonaise (common to the whole of Poland). It is also possible to find in them motifs from west European dances, like the moresca, saraband and minuet. In the 17th century the melodies of kolędy permeated ambitious artistic works (e.g. Patrem na rotuły by Bartłomiej Pękiel) and became the basis of choral works and staged pastorales (by S.S. Szarzyński and Józef Kobierkowicz). In the 19th century the kolęda took on a stylized quality. The melody of one was quoted by Chopin in the Scherzo in Bminor ('Lulajże Jezuniu'). Later, attention was concentrated on choral arrangements of kolędy (by Stanisław Niewiadomski, J.A. Maklakiewicz, Feliks Nowowiejski). The great popularity of the kolęda and the richness of its repertory have led it to its retention as a special feature of Polish Christmas customs.

Ceremonies of various names etymologically related to kolęda (such as the Romanian kolenda) form an important part of non-Christian winter solstice celebrations throughout eastern Europe, from the Baltic and Russia to Greece. These ceremonies have common characteristics, including the performance of songs wishing luck to the hearers and of rituals by masked dancers to drive away evil spirits; singers and dancers are usually rewarded with food, drink or money by householders. It is possible that the Polish Christian custom originated in the assimilation of Christian symbols into such winter solstice celebrations.

See also BULGARIA, §II, 2(ii); CZECH REPUBLIC, §II, 1(i); ROMANIA, §II, (iii)(b); RUSSIAN FEDERATION, §III, 1(ii); UKRAINE, §II, 2(i); and YUGOSLAVIA, §III, 1(i)(a).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG2 (P. Poźniak)
S. Dobrzycki: Kolędy polskie i czeskie: ich wzajemny stosunek [Polish and Czech kolędy: their relationship to each other] (Poznań, 1930)
J. Prosnak: 'Melodie "Symfonii anielskich"' [The melodies of angelic symphonies], Muzyka, vii/4 (1962), 68–86
B. Andrzejczak: 'Rękopis z 1721 roku, źródło do historii polskiej kolędy' [A manuscript of 1721, source for the history of the Polish kolędy], Muzyka, xi/1 (1966), 37–72
J. Nowak-Dłużewski, ed.: Kolędy polskie [Polish kolędy] (Warsaw, 1966)
K. Hławiczka: 'Vom Quempas-Singen in Polen', JbLH, xii (1967), 149–54; xiii (1968), 151–2
B. Krzyżaniak: 'Informacje o ludowych instrumentach muzycznych w tekstach kolęd' [Information on popular musical instruments in kolędy texts], Muzyka, xvii/4 (1972), 116–21
T. Maciejewski: Zasób utworów z ksiąg Archikonfraterni literackiej w Warszawie 1668–1829 [The collection of works from the books of the Archikonfraterni Literacka in Warsaw, 1668–1829] (Warsaw, 1972)
K. Mrowiec: 'Kolędy w osiemnastowiecznych rękopisach Biblioteki klasztoru Św. Andrzeja w Krakowie' [Kolędy in 18th-century manuscripts in the library of St Andrzej's monastery, Kraków], Muzyka, xviii/3 (1973), 29–50
A. Filaber: 'Kolędy polskie w rękopisach XV i początku XVI wieku' [Polish kolędy in manuscripts of the 15th and early 16th centuries], Muzyka religijna w Polsce, i/1 (Warsaw, 1975), 15–57
B. Krzyżaniak: Kantyczki z rękopisów karmelitanskich [Canticles from Carmelite manuscripts] (Kraków, 1977)
W. Marchwica: 'Pastorelle ze zbiorów gidelskich' [Pastorales from the collection in Gidle], Muzyka, xxxv/2 (1990), 65–81

MIROSŁAW PERZ

Köler [Koler, Colerus], David (b Zwickau, *c*1532; d Zwickau, 13 or 25 July 1565). German composer. He came from a poor family. He attended the famous grammar school at Zwickau and matriculated at the University of Ingolstadt in 1551. From 1554 at the latest, he lived at Schönfeld, near Carlsbad, Bohemia, and probably worked as Kantor at the grammar school at nearby Schlaggenwald, since the Zehen Psalmen Davids that he published in June 1554 had doubtless been composed for school use. In 1556–7 he was Kantor at Joachimsthal, Bohemia, in succession to the ailing Nikolaus Herman. He then moved to Altenburg as civic Kantor. There he had to provide music for two town churches and on occasion for the Saxe-Ernestine court too. The projected establishment of a Hofkapelle at Weimar or Gotha, doubtless at his suggestion, came to nothing. In 1563 he became Kapellmeister at the court of Mecklenburg at Schwerin in the service of Duke Johann Albrecht, a post that he had declined on two earlier occasions; Nicolaus Rosthius was one of several singers who went with him from Altenburg. In 1565 he was tempted back to Zwickau as principal Kantor, but he died only four months after taking office. His main importance lies in his contribution to the early history of the Protestant motet to German words. His Zehen Psalmen Davids, in the manner of Thomas Stoltzer's German psalms, are the first peak of this kind of composition. Their chief stylistic features are the interplay between polyphony and homophony, and the close relationship between text and music, features that make them particularly significant for their time.

WORKS

Zehen Psalmen Davids, 5, 6vv (Leipzig, 1554); 1 ed. in Cw, lxxi (1959) and in Handbuch der deutschen evangelischen Kirchenmusik, ii/1 (Göttingen, 1935)
Rosa florum gloria, 1567[1]

Mass (on Josquin's Benedictus es coelorum regina), 7vv, inc., D-Z
Kyrie, Gloria, 4vv, inc., H-Bn
Non nobis, Domine, 5vv, inc., H-Bn; Te sanctum, responsory, 6vv, D-LEu; Veni Sancte Spiritus, 4, 5vv, inc., H-Bn
Ach Herr, straf mich nicht in deinem Zorn (Ps vi), 6vv, inc., D-Dl; Hülf, Herr, die Heiligen haben abgenommen (Ps xii), 6vv, Z (anon.), ed. in Cw, lxxi (1959); Richte mich Gott (Ps xliii), 6vv, inc., Dl; Eile, Gott, mich zu erretten (Ps lxx), 6vv, inc., Z, ed. in Cw, lxxi (1959); Wer unter dem Schirm des Höchsten sitzt (Ps xci), 6vv, inc., Dl; Siehe, wie fein und lieblich (Ps cxxxiii), 6vv, inc., Dl

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Eismann: David Köler: ein protestantischer Komponist des 16. Jahrhunderts (Berlin, 1956); review by K.W. Niemöller, Mf, xii (1959), 353–5
M. Ruhnke: Beiträge zu einer Geschichte der deutschen Hofmusikkollegien im 16. Jahrhundert (Berlin, 1963)
W. Dehnhard: Die deutsche Psalmmotette in der Reformationszeit (Wiesbaden, 1971)

WALTER BLANKENBURG

Köler [Coler], Martin (b Danzig, *c*1620; d Hamburg, 1703/4). German composer. By 1661 he belonged, under the name 'Musophilus', to the well-known poetic academy, the Elbschwanenorden. On 2 May 1663 he succeeded Johann Jakob Löwe von Eisenach as Kapellmeister at the court in Wolfenbüttel, but in April 1667 the chapel was dissolved. He may have been the Coler who was Kapellmeister in Bayreuth in May 1671 and who was succeeded by Johann Philipp Krieger a short time later. In 1675 he was temporary head of the court chapel at Gottorf, Schleswig, following the dismissal of Theile, and he remained in Schleswig until 1681. He possibly served also as Kapellmeister in Brunswick and Lüneburg.

Köler was one of the many minor composers in the Hamburg area who wrote songs to texts by Johann Rist and his disciples. He composed all the music for Rist's Neue hochheilige Passions-Andachten and contributed music to Georg Heinrich Weber's Abgewechselte Liebesflammen. He may well be the 'M.C.' who composed songs for Caspar von Stieler's Die geharnschte Venus; but Vetter thought it possible that two different composers with the initials 'M.C.', one of them Köler, contributed to this work, since while some pieces are subtle, expressive lieder blending text and music satisfactorily, others are simply mechanical declamations. The sacred concertos in Exercitia vocis (RISM 1667[7]) are his most important works.

WORKS

Hochzeitliche Ehrenfackel (Hamburg, 1661)
Songs in 1660[3]; 2 in Vetter
10 sacred songs in Brandanus Lange Janus (Hamburg, 1661)
Songs, 1v, bc, in Des Elbischen Schwanen-Schäffner Hyphantes poetische Musen, ed. G.H. Weber (Glückstadt, 1661)
Songs in Abgewechselte Liebesflammen, ed. G.H. Weber (Hamburg, 1662)
12 psalms in Sulamithische Seelen Harmoni (Hamburg, 1662)
46 songs, 1v, bc, in Neue hochheilige Passions-Andachten, ed. J. Rist (Hamburg, 1664); 18 in ZahnM
12 sacred concs., 1v, bc, 1667[7]
Ich steh an deiner Krippen hier (cant.), B, 4vv, 2 vn, bc; ed. W. Haake (Stuttgart, 1966)
Lobet, ihr Knechte des Herrn, psalm, 3vv, 2 vn, 2 viols, bc, D-Kl
15 vocal pieces with various insts, Bsb, S-Uu

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KretschmarG; MGG1 (M. Ruhnke); ZahnM
M. Seiffert: 'Die Chorbibliothek der St. Michaelisschule in Lüneburg', SIMG, ix (1907–8), 593–620
W. Vetter: Das frühdeutsche Lied (Münster, 1928)
J.L. Brauer: Intruments in Sacred Vocal Music at Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel: a Study of Changing Tastes in the Seventeenth Century (diss., CUNY, 1983)

JOHN H. BARON

Kolešovský, Zikmund (Michal) (b Prague, 2 May 1817; d Prague, 22 July 1868). Czech choirmaster, teacher, composer and critic. He was the son of the distinguished Prague choirmaster František Xaver Kolešovský (b Prague, 1781; d Prague, 12 June 1839), a pupil of J.A. Kozeluch. He studied the violin at the Prague Conservatory, theory, organ and singing at the Prague Organ School, and theory and composition with Tomášek and others. He was a member of the Estates Theatre Orchestra in Prague from 1835 until 1839, when he succeeded his father as choirmaster of St Štěpána; here, and later at St Ignác he continued his father's practice of presenting music by earlier Czech masters, especially F.X. Brixi. In the 1850s he was director of the Žofín Academy, an important Prague music institution with choir and school, but gave up the post to found his own school of singing and theory, where his pupils included Fibich. He also taught from 1852 until 1855 at the Prague Organ School, and from 1863 at the teachers' training institute. In 1865 he competed unsuccessfully with Smetana and Josef Krejčí for the directorship of the Prague Conservatory. He was a respected composer of songs and sacred music, and contributed to Dalibor and Slavoj, becoming a member of the latter's editorial board. In contrast to his stylistically conservative compositions, his articles on Brixi and on Czech national style, as well as the progressive outlook shown, for example, in his reviews of Wagner's concerts, made him one of the pioneers of modern Czech music criticism. He also took a progressive stand as a member of the first committee of the Artistic Society, in which Smetana was one of his colleagues.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS
A. Hnilička: 'Z. Kolešovský', HR, x (1917), 345–8
A. Hnilička: Profily české hudby z prvé polovice 19. století [Profiles of Czech music of the first half of the 19th century] (Prague, 1924), 86ff

MIROSLAV K. ČERNÝ

Kolessa, Filaret (Mykhaylovych) (b Tatar Stry region, 17 July 1871; d L'viv, 3 March 1947). Ukrainian ethnomusicologist. He studied in Lemberg (now L'viv) and Vienna (PhD 1918); after 1918 he studied Ukrainian folk music outside the USSR. His Western contacts included Hornbostel and Bartók. He was elected a full member of the Ukrainian Academy of Sciences in 1929. Besides several folk music collections he published basic studies outlining historical stages of Ukrainian folk music, its dialects and its relationships with traditional music of neighbouring Slavonic and non-Slavonic countries. He held that western Ukrainian traditional music was part of an all-Ukrainian corpus, that music of the Lemky on both sides of the Carpathians was one music. In 1908 he carried out a monumental expedition to record Ukrainian historical epic songs (dumy), published in meticulous musical transcriptions in 1910 and 1913, later laying the basis for asserting their folk origins by showing their relation to folk laments. His work is fundamental for comparative study of Slavonic and east European folk music.

WRITINGS

Muzykoznavchi pratsi [Musicological works] (Kiev, 1970) [MP]
Rytmika ukraïns'kykh narodnykh pisen' [Rhythm in Ukrainian folksongs] (Lemberg, 1906–7)
'Pro melodii hahilok' [On Easter ritual song-tunes], Melodii hahilok, skhopleni na fonograf Y. Rozdol's'kym, Materialy do ukraïn'skoy ëtnologii, xii (Lemberg, 1909)
'Über den melodischen und rhythmischen Aufbau der ukrainischen (kleinrussischen) rezitierenden Gesänge, der sogenannten Kosakenlieder', IMusSCR III: Vienna 1909, 276–96
'Pro muzychnu formu dum' [On the musical form of historical chants], Mel'odiyi ukrayins'kykh narodnykh dum (Lemberg, 1910–13, rev. 2/1969)
Varianty melodiy ukrains'kykh narodnykh dum, ikh kharakterystyka i grupovannya [Variations in melody of Ukrainian folk historical chants, their characteristics and classification] (Lemberg, 1913); also in Mel' 'odiyi ukrayins'kykh narodnykh dum (rev. 2/1969)
'Das ukrainische Volkslied, sein melodischer und rhythmischer Aufbau', Österreichische Monatsschrift für den Orient, xlii (1916), 218; enlarged Ukrainian version in MP (Kiev, 1970)
Pro genezu ukrayins'kykh narodnykh dum (ukrains'ki narodni dumy u vidnoshenni do pisen', virshiv i pokhoronnykh holosin') [On the origin of Ukrainian folk historical epic songs (dumy in relation to songs, religious songs and folk laments)] (Lwów, 1920–22)
'Rechytatyvni formy y ukrains'kiy narodniy poëzii' [Recitative form in Ukrainian folk poetry], Pervisne hromadyanstvo (Kiev, 1927), nos.1–2, pp.60–113; repr. in MP (Kiev, 1970)
'Ukrains'ka narodna pisnya v naynovishiy fazi svoho rozvytku' [Ukrainian folksong in its newest phase of development],

Yuvileynyy zbirnyk na poshanu akad. M. Hrushevs'koho (Kiev, 1928); repr. in Fol'klorystychni pratsi (Kiev, 1970)
'Hrupuvannya i kharakterystychni pryznaky lemkivs'kykh pisennykh melodii' [Systematization and characteristic features of Lemky song-tunes], Etnohrafichnyy zbirnyk, xxxix–xl (1929); Ger. summary, lxi–lxxxi
Narodni pisni z halyts'koyi Lemkivshchyny: teksty i melodiyi [Folksongs from west Galicia, Lemky country] (Lwów, 1929)
'Charakterystyka ukraińskiej muzyki ludowej' [Characteristics of Ukrainian folk music], Lud słowiański, iii/B (1932), B34
'Karpats'kyy tsykl narodnikh pisen' (spil'nykh ukraintsyam, slovakam, chekham i polyakam)' [The 'Carpathian cycle' (folksongs common to Ukrainians, Slovaks, Moravian Czechs and Poles)], Sborník prací, i: Sjezdu slovanských filologů v Praze 1929, ii (Prague, 1932), 93; Fr. summary, 884
'Formuly zakinchennya v ukrains'kykh narodnykh dumakh u zv'yazku z pitannyam pro naverstvuvannya dum' [Ending formulae of Ukrainian historical chants and the problems of their classification], Zapysky naukovoho tovarystva im: Shevchenka, cliv (Lwów, 1935), 29–67
Spogadi pro Mykolu Lysenka [Reminiscences of Lysenko] (L'viv, 1947)
'Virshova forma starovynnoy ukrains'koy narodnoy pisni pro voyevodu Stefana' [Verse form of an old Ukrainian folksong about Stefan Vojvoda], Narodia tvorchist' ta etnografiya (Kiev, 1963), no.1, p.116 [written 1939, on song collected by Blahoslav before 1571]

FOLKSONG COLLECTIONS

'Hutsul's'ki pisni' (instrumental'ni melodii ta pisni)' [Hutsul songs and instrumental tunes], in V. Shukhevich: Hutsul'shchina, pts.3–4 (Lemberg, 1902, 1904)
Melodii haivok, skhopleni na fonograf Y. Rozdol's'kym [Easter song melodies recorded by Rozdol's'ky], Materialy do ukrain'skoy etnologii, xii (Lemberg, 1909) [180 ritual tunes from east Galicia]
Mel'odiyi ukrayins'kykh narodnykh dum [Tunes of Ukrainian historical chants] (Lemberg, 1910–13, rev. 2/1969) [1st edn incl. Ger. introduction]
'Narodni pisni z pivdennoho Pidkarpattya' [Folksongs from southern Subcarpathia], Naukoviy zbirnyk tovarystva 'Prosvita' v Uzhhorodi (1923) [153 songs with tunes]
Narodni pisni z halyts'koyi Lemkivshchyny: teksty i melodiyi [Folksongs from west Galicia, Lemky country: texts and melodies] (Lwów, 1929) [624 songs with transcrs. from recordings]
'Narodni pisni z pidkarpats'koy Rusi, melodii i teksty' [Folksongs from Subcarpathian Ruthenia, melodies and texts], Naukovyy zbirnyk tovarystva 'Prosvita' v Uzhhorodi, xiii–xiv (1938), 49–149 [159 tunes, 178 texts]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Kvitka: 'Filaret Kolessa', Muzyka [Kiev] (1925), nos.11–12, pp.408ff
S. Hrytsa: Filaret Mykhaylovych Kolessa (Kiev, 1962)
V. Hoshov'sky: 'Akademik Filaret Kolessa', SovM (1971), no.9, pp.106–11
M. Mušinka: 'Filaret Kolessa a Československo: príspevok k československo-ukrajinským etnomuzikologickým stykom' [Kolessa and Czechoslovakia: on Czechoslovak–Ukrainian ethnomusicological contact], Slovenský národopis, xx (1972), 643

BARBARA KRADER

Kolessa, Mykola [Nikolay] Filaretovych (b Sambor, 6 Dec 1903). Ukrainian composer and conductor, son of Filaret Kolessa. Until 1924 he studied at the N.V. Lysenko Higher Musical Institute in L'viv, then from 1924 to 1931 in the philosophy faculty of Prague University, attending the musicology lectures of Ždenek Nejedlý. In 1925 he was accepted onto the second-year course in Vítězslav Novák's composition class. He taught theory and conducting at the Lysenko Institute in L'viv and conducted the L'vovsky Boyan, Bandurist and Studio choirs (1931). From 1939 he was conductor of the regional state SO and the Academic Theatre of Opera and Ballet, and was artistic director of the renowned Trembita chorus (which he directed 1946–8). In 1940 he was appointed senior lecturer at the Lysenko Institute and conductor of the L'viv Radio SO and of the State Philharmonic Society. From 1953 he was the director, from 1957 professor, and finally rector of the Lysenko State Conservatory. He has been a winner of the Shevchenko State Prize, and is an Honoured and a National Artist of the Ukraine. Kolessa's work is many-sided and combines the contrasting activities of composing and conducting, academic and teaching work. Although principally a composer of orchestral and chamber works, he has written a quantity of choral pieces and songs, and has made arrangements of Ukrainian folksongs which themselves have, in turn, influenced his instrumental music. Inclined towards neo-folklorism, he combines the harmonic and rhythmical peculiarities of Carpathian folklore (for example, the harmonic minor and major with augmented 4th, and Galician harmonies peculiar to the Kolomiya regions) with a modern harmonic language. As a conductor he has a broad repertory but has specialized in the works of Ukrainian composers.

As a teacher he is considered to have founded a L'viv school of conducting; among his students are Stefan Turchak, Ivan Gamkalo, Yevgeny Vakhnyak, Bogdan Antkiv, Yury Lutsiv and Ivan Yusyuk. He has written a textbook on conducting – Osnovï tekhniki dirizhirovaniya [Foundations of conducting technique] – which was published in L'viv in 1967.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Ukraïns'ka suita [Ukrainian Suite], 1928; 2 syms, 1950, 1966; V gorakh [In the Mountains], str, 1972
Chbr and solo inst: Dribnychky, pf, 1928; Pf Qt, 1930; Kartinki iz Gutsul'shchinï [Scenes from Galicia], suite, pf, 1937; Pf Sonatina, 1939; 3 kolomiyki [3 Kolomiya Songs], pf, 1953
Music for organ, acc. to poetry recitals, choral works, songs, folksong arrs., incid music

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Gudzenko: 'Khory M. Kolessy', Ukraïns'ka radyans'ka muzyka, ii (Kiev, 1962)
L. Bober: 'Pedagogichni printsipi M. Kolessy', Muzyka (1983), no.3
L. Mazepa: 'Na yubileynïkh vecherakh N. F. Kolessï' [At the anniversary evenings of N.F. Kolessa], SovM (1984), no.6, pp.121–2
Ya. Yakubyak: 'Original' nïy i tonkiy khudozhnik' [An original and subtle artist], SovM (1984), no.11, pp.30–32

LESYA LANTSUTA

Kolinski, Mieczyslaw (b Warsaw, 5 Sept 1901; d Toronto, 8 May 1981). Canadian composer, ethnomusicologist and theorist of Polish origin. He received his early education in Hamburg, and appeared publicly there as piano soloist and in his own compositions (songs, piano works). He later studied the piano and composition at the Hochschule für Musik, Berlin, and musicology, psychology and anthropology at Berlin University, where he took the doctorate in 1930 with a dissertation on Malaccan and Samoan music. After serving as assistant to Erich von Hornbostel at the Staatliches Phonogramm-Archiv in Berlin (1926–33), he moved to Prague, where he transcribed much non-Western music in association with the anthropologists Melville Herskovits and Franz Boas. Forced again to move by the advance of Nazism, in 1938 he went to Belgium where he remained for 13 years, in hiding during much of the German occupation. There he married Edith van den Berghe, daughter of the Belgian painter Frits van den Berghe. In 1951 he settled in New York, and later became an American citizen. He was general editor of the Hargail Music Press and also music therapist in a large hospital for war veterans near New York. He was co-founder (1955), and for a time president (1958–9), of the Society for Ethnomusicology. From 1966 until his retirement in 1976 he directed the course in ethnomusicology at the University of Toronto; he also participated in the research programme of the Canadian Centre for Folk Culture Studies, National Museum of Man, Ottawa. He became a Canadian citizen in 1974. After his retirement, Kolinski was awarded the title of scholar emeritus, and continued to lecture until his death.

In an essay from his Prague period, Konsonanz als Grundlage einer neuen Akkordlehre (1936), Kolinski dealt with questions of consonance and dissonance in modern music and proposed a systematic approach to chord classification; he also patented an ingenious cardboard wheel for use in teaching the rudiments of tonality. In the 1950s and early 60s he established widely applicable methods for analysing tonal and melodic structures, and fundamental problems of rhythm, tempo and tuning. He sometimes wryly quoted a colleague's description of his work as that of an 'armchair ethnomusicologist' (i.e. one who transcribes and analyses material gathered by others), but in fact he made well over 2000 transcriptions from areas as diverse as Samoa, New Guinea, Surinam, West Africa, Haiti and northern-coastal British Columbia (Kwakiutl).

The originality and extraordinarily broad scholarly scope of his work in ethnomusicology has tended to obscure his continuing work as a theorist and composer. He formulated an original method for teaching the reading of music to elementary piano students, and developed a comprehensive notation theory based on a staff of three lines. His ballet, Expresszug-Phantasie, first produced in Salzburg in 1935 by a Czechoslovak modern-dance group, had performances in Prague and several other cities in succeeding seasons. In Belgium he studied the carillon and wrote for it, and a concert of his works was given in Brussels in 1947. A number of his later chamber works and solo piano pieces were played, broadcast and recorded in the USA and Canada.

Cross-Cultural Perspectives on Music (1982) was to have been presented to Kolinski as a Festschrift for his 80th birthday, had it not been for his death four months earlier. The contributions to this volume offer testimony to the spirit of rigorous, systematic and comparative investigation of musical sound that characterized Kolinski's research, writings and teaching.

WORKS
(selective list)

Pf Sonata no.1, 1919; Sonata, vn, pf, 1924, rev. 1946; Sonata, vc, pf, 1926; Lyrisches Sextet, S, fl, str qt, 1929; 4 pf suites, 1929–46; Str Qt, 1931; Un jour passe, pf, 1938; 4 danses en forme d'études, pf, 1938; Pf Sonata no.2, 1947, rev. 1967; Concertino (textless), S, str qt, pf, 1951; Dahomey Suite, fl/ob, pf/str orch, 1951; Hatikva, str qt, 1960; Dance Fantasy, str orch, 1968; Encounterpoint, org, str qt, 1973, arr. fl, cl, vn, vc, pf, 1974, arr. 2 pf, 1979; Concertino (textless), S, cl, pf, 1974

3 ballets, music for rec ens, songs, folksong arrs.

Principal publishers: Hargail, Berandol

WRITINGS

Die Musik der Primitivstämme auf Malaka und ihre Beziehungen zur samoanischen Musik (diss., Humboldt U., Berlin, 1930; Anthropos, xxv (1930), 585–648)

Konsonanz als Grundlage einer neuen Akkordlehre (Brunn, 1936) with M.J. and F. Herskovits: Suriname Folk-Lore . . . with Transcriptions of Suriname Songs and Musicological Analysis (New York, 1936), 489–740

'La música del oeste africano: música europea y extraeuropea', Revista de estudios musicales, i (1949), 191–215

'The Structure of Melodic Movement: a New Method of Analysis', Miscelánea de estudios dedicados a Fernando Ortiz (Havana, 1956), iii, 881–918

'The Determinants of Tonal Construction in Tribal Music', MQ, xliii (1957), 50–56

'Ethnomusicology: its Problems and Methods', EthM Newsletter, no.1 (1957), 1–7

'A New Equidistant 12-Tone Temperament', JAMS, xii (1959), 210–14

'The Evaluation of Tempo', EthM, iii (1959), 45–57

ed.: Studies in Ethnomusicology (New York, 1961–5) [incl. 'The Origin of the Indian 22-Tone System', i, 3–18; 'Classification of Tonal Structures', i, 38–76; 'The Structure of Melodic Movement: a New Method of Analysis', ii, 95–120]

'Consonance and Dissonance', EthM, vi (1962), 66–74

'The General Direction of Melodic Movement', EthM, ix (1965), 240–64

'Recent Trends in Ethnomusicology', EthM, xi (1967), 1–24

'Barbara Allen: Tonal versus Melodic Structure', EthM, xii (1968), 208–18; xiii (1969), 1–73

'An Apache Rabbit Dance Song Cycle, as Sung by the Iroquois', EthM, xvi (1972), 415–64

'An Iroquois War Dance Song Cycle', Journal of the Canadian Association of University Schools of Music, ii (1972), 51–64

'A Cross-Cultural Approach to Metro-Rhythmic Patterns', EthM, xvii (1973), 494–506

'Co-Ordinated Denomination and Notation of Pitch', Journal of the Canadian Association of University Schools of Music, vi (1976), 11–28

'Herndon's Verdict on Analysis: Tabula rasa', EthM, xx (1976), 1–22

'Final Reply to Herndon', EthM, xxi (1977), 75–83

'The Structure of Music: Diversification versus Constraint', EthM, xxii (1978), 229–44

'"Malbrough s'en va-t-en guerre": Seven Canadian Versions of a French Folk Song', YIFMC, x (1978), 1–32

'Reiteration Quotients: a Cross-Cultural Comparison', EthM, xxvi (1982), 85–90

FOLKSONG EDITIONS

M. Schneider: Geschichte der Mehrstimmigkeit, i (Berlin, 1934, 2/1969) [incl. 33 transcrs. of folk music from New Guinea and Samoa by Kolinski]

H. Courlander: The Drum and the Hoe (Berkeley, 1960), 205–313 [incl. 186 transcrs. of Haitian songs and drum rhythms by Kolinski]

H. Courlander: Negro Folk Music U.S.A. (New York, 1963) [incl. 19 transcrs. of Negro folksongs by Kolinski]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Kennedy: 'A Bibliography of the Writings of Mieczyslaw Kolinski', CMc, no.3 (1966), 100–03

B. Cavanagh: Obituary, EthM, xxv (1981), 285–6

R. Falck and T. Rice, eds.: Cross-Cultural Perspectives on Music (Toronto, 1982) [memorial vol.; incl. J. Beckwith: 'Kolinski: an Appreciation and List of Works', xvii–xxiv]

JOHN BECKWITH/GAGE AVERILL

Kolín z Chotěřiny, Matouš. See COLLINUS, MATTHAEUS.

Kolisch, Rudolf (b Klamm am Semmering, 20 July 1896; d Watertown, MA, 1 Aug 1978). American violinist of Austrian birth. An injury to his left hand in childhood, after he had begun violin lessons, compelled him to hold the violin with his right hand and the bow with his left. He studied at the Vienna Music Academy and Vienna University (where he attended Guido Adler's musicology lectures), and after graduating in 1913 continued to study the violin with Ševčík and theory and composition with Schreker and Schoenberg (who married Kolisch's sister Gertrud in 1924).

Kolisch began his career as a conductor and violin virtuoso, and from 1919 to 1921 played a leading role in Schoenberg's Verein für Musikalische Privataufführungen. In 1922 he formed the Kolisch Quartet, which became internationally known. Its membership changed in the early years, but by 1927 consisted of Kolisch, Felix Khuner, Jenö (Eugene) Lehner and Benar Heifetz. This quartet toured in Europe, Africa, South America and the USA, where the members settled in 1935.

The Kolisch Quartet was the first to insist on playing the standard repertory from memory, and made a still stronger impression as the champion of new music, particularly of works by Schoenberg, Berg and Webern. Among its important premières were Schoenberg's String Quartets nos.3 and 4 and Quartet Concerto (after Handel), Berg's Lyric Suite in its original form, Webern's String Trio and String Quartet, and Bartók's Quartet no.6. Schoenberg dedicated his Fourth Quartet jointly to Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge (who commissioned it) and to 'its ideal interpreters, the Kolisch Quartet', and wrote to the former that they were 'the best string quartet I ever heard', praising 'their virtuosity, their sonority, their understanding, their style'. Tonal richness was helped by their instruments: Kolisch played a Stradivari violin, Lehner a viola by Gasparo da Salò, Heifetz an Amati cello. They disbanded in 1939 after a reorganization of membership proved ineffective. Kolisch was leader of the Pro Arte Quartet from 1942, and from 1953 again appeared in Germany, most often at the Darmstadt summer courses. He taught violin and chamber music at the University of Wisconsin, 1944–67, and was artist-in-residence and head of the chamber music department at the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Stein, ed.: Arnold Schoenberg: Ausgewählte Briefe (Mainz, 1958; Eng. trans., enlarged, 1964)

A. Mell: 'In memoriam: Rudolf Kolisch (1896–1978)', Journal of the Violin Society of America, iv/1 (1977–8), 142–5

M. Steinberg: 'Rudolf Kolisch (1896–1978): Encomium', Journal of the Arnold Schoenberg Institute, iv (1980), 7–11

Rudolf Kolisch zur Theorie der Aufführungen: ein Gespräch mit Berthold Türcke, Musik-Konzepte, nos.29–30 (1983)

BERNARD JACOBSON

Kollmann. German-English family of musicians.

(1) Augustus Frederic Christopher Kollmann (b Engelbostel, Hanover, 21 March 1756; d London, 19 April 1829). English music theorist of German birth. His father was the Engelbostel organist; an uncle, Carl Christoph Hachmeister senior, composed and was organist of the Heiligen-Geist church in Hamburg; his brother, Georg Christoph Kollmann (1758–1827), became organist of St Katharinen, Hamburg. A.F.C. Kollmann studied with the Hanover organist Böttner and in 1779 entered the Normal School there, learning 'that methodical, and systematical manner of teaching, which has been very advantageous to him, not only for school instruction, but also in teaching music, and particularly in writing his musical treatises'. On 10 December 1781 he was appointed organist and schoolmaster of the Benedictine convent at Lüne (near Lüneburg) but left and in September 1782 became organist and schoolmaster of the Royal German Chapel in St James's Palace, London, where he remained for the rest of his life (serving also, from February 1784, as chapel-keeper). He was a member, and from 1825 a trustee, of the New Musical Fund. On 26 October 1783 he married Christina Catherina Ruel (1745–1823) at St Luke's, Chelsea; their two children are mentioned below.

As a theorist, Kollmann sought 'to rescue the science of music from the mysterious darkness in which it was wrapped' by providing a simple, natural explanatory system that accounts for each note in a 'regular' musical composition by 'as positive a rule, as it denotes a positive sound'. He divided this system into a grammatical and a rhetorical part and strove to improve each throughout his career. His New Theory (1806) replaced the Essay on Musical Harmony (1796), and in turn was superseded by the New Theory (2/1823), as the statement of the grammatical part; the Essay on Practical Musical Composition (1799, 2/1812) presented the rhetorical part.

To make his system more accessible, Kollmann wrote thoroughbass tutors that epitomize the grammatical part and composed 'theoretico-practical works', i.e. 'compositions with theoretical explanations' which illustrate particular aspects of the system. Some of these illustrations are curious (e.g. no.12 of the Analyzed Fugues shows that the chromatic complexity of 'regular' music can exceed that of the common practice of 1810). But Kollmann considered that he 'applied himself ... principally to [music's] theoretical department', and it is here that his accomplishments are most noteworthy.

The structure of Kollmann's system may be summarized as follows. Equal temperament is adopted. A 'regular' composition is generable starting from a diatonic fundamental bass upon each note of which is placed, as in Kirnberger's theory, a fundamental concord (i.e. a triad whose root is the bass note) or a fundamental discord (i.e. a 7th chord whose root is the bass note). After a fundamental discord the fundamental bass must descend a 5th or ascend a 4th; between two fundamental concords the fundamental bass interval must not be a 2nd or a 7th. Next, inversions may be substituted for root position chords and notes may be omitted or doubled subject to certain counterpoint rules: the resulting chords are termed 'essential'. 'Accidental' chords now may be introduced by permitting diatonic 'forenotes' and 'afternotes' to be inserted in a portion of the time previously reserved for notes in essential chords; by permitting similar insertion of chromatic 'accidental' notes; and by permitting organ points. (Kollmann refuted Rameau's concept of chords constructed by supposition on the grounds that his explanation was simpler.) The chords thus far generated now may have their notes 'divided' into one or more musical parts, for example as an arpeggio; notes may be tied or repeated; octave doubling or octave transference may be introduced and modulation to the other mode (major or minor) or to different keys may be effected. Thus far the grammatical part. Larger-scale formal structures (as of sonata or fugue) belong to rhetoric, and Kollmann specified constraints upon total length, constituent sections, key relationships, instrumentation, text-setting, rhythm and style, that are implied by a composer's decision to write one or another type of composition.

Kollmann related German and English musical cultures. He corresponded with J.N. Forkel and gathered English contributions for Gerber's Neues Lexikon. He persistently advocated the music of J.S. Bach and printed in his treatises a number of Bach's compositions and in 1806 a separate edition of Bach's Chromatic Fantasy. In 1799 he proposed an edition of the '48', but after Forkel remarked on this, three European publishers proceeded to print it and Kollmann withdrew. He provided, however, a manuscript from which the Wesley–Horn edition of this work was prepared and lent other Bach material to Samuel Wesley when the latter's interest in Bach was roused. Kollmann translated excerpts from Forkel's life of Bach for his magazine the Quarterly Musical Register (1812) and may have assisted with the first complete English translation published in 1820.

WORKS

this listing is based on Kollmann's own categorization printed works published in London unless otherwise stated

PRACTICAL WORKS

op.
[1]	6 geistliche Lieder mit ... Choralmelodien, 4vv, bc (Leipzig, *c*1784)
2	4 Sonatas, hpd/pf, vn (1788)
–	A Characteristic March, pf/2 fl/band (1791)
–	Charming Sally, S/fl, pf (*c*1792)
4	6 Sonatinas, pf (*c*1792)
–	New March, pf/hp/band (1795)
6	The Shipwreck, pf, with vn, vc acc. (1796)
–	Divertimento, pf, 3/1 players (1799)
–	A Hymn, with Various Harmonies, 1/4vv, pf/org (1803)
8	Concerto, pf, orch (1804); only pf printed
–	The Praise of God, orat, Eng./Ger., 1817, GB-Lbl, Ob

Minor compositions (songs, waltzes, hymns, etc) in various collections

THEORETICO-PRACTICAL WORKS

op.
3	An Introduction to the Art of Preluding and Extemporizing in Six Lessons, hpd/hp (1792)
5	The First Beginning on the Piano-Forte ... Containing ... Progressive Lessons and Sonatinas (1796)
7	A Symphony, pf, vn, vc, with Analytical Explanations ['Analyzed Symphony'] (1798)
9	The Melody of the Hundredth Psalm, with Examples and Directions for an Hundred Different Harmonies, 4vv (1809)
10	A Series of [12] Analyzed Fugues ... for 2 players, pf/org (1809–10, 2/1822 as 12 Analyzed Fugues)
–	A Rondo on the Chord of the Diminished Seventh, pf (1810)
11	An Introduction to Extemporary Modulation, in Six General Lessons, pf/hp/vn/vc (1820)

THEORETICAL WORKS

An Essay on Musical Harmony (1796, 2/1817)
An Essay on Practical Musical Composition (1799/R, rev.2/1812)
A Practical Guide to Thorough-Bass (1801)
A New Theory of Musical Harmony (1806, rev.2/1823)
A Second Practical Guide to Thorough-Bass (1807; Ger. edn., 1808)

OTHER WRITINGS

Proposals for Publishing by Subscription: a New Theoretical Musical Work, Entitled An Essay on Practical Musical Composition (1798)
A.F.C. Kollmann's Vindication of a Passage in his Practical Guide to Thorough-Bass, against an Advertisement of Mr. M.P. King (1801)
'An Essay on Earl Stanhope's "Principles of the Science of Tuning Instruments with Fixed Tones"', Belle assemblée, ii (1807), 321–3; iii (1807), 99–101
The Quarterly Musical Register, written and collected by A.F.C. Kollmann, 2 issues (1812)
'Bemerkungen über Hrn. J.B. Logier's sogenanntes Neues System des Musikunterrichts', AMZ, xxiii (1821), 769, 785, 801; 'Nachtrag zu den Bemerkungen', AMZ, xxiv (1822), Intelligenz-Blatt, 9; Eng. trans. of both as Remarks on what Mr. J.B. Logier Calls his New System of Musical Education (1824, enlarged 2/1824)
Correspondence with J.W. Callcott, GB-Lbl; C.J. Smyth, Cu, F-Pn; C. Burney, US-NH, B-Br; proprietors of Biographical Dictionary of Musicians, US-Eu, pr. in edited form as 'Kollman', A Dictionary of Musicians, ed. J. Sainsbury (London, 2/1825/R)

(2) Jo(h)anna S(ophia) Kollmann (b London, 20 July 1786; d London, 14 May 1849). English musician, daughter of (1) Augustus Frederic Christopher Kollmann. She first appeared publicly as a singer in the New Musical Fund concert on 13 March 1806. She assisted her brother in his piano business and succeeded him as organist of the Royal German Chapel; on her death she was succeeded by Frederic Weber (1819–1909).

(3) George Augustus Kollmann (b London, 30 Jan 1789; d London, 19 March 1845). English pianist, composer and inventor, son of (1) Augustus Frederic Christopher Kollmann. He was taught by his father, of whose piano concerto he gave the first performance at his début in the New Musical Fund concert on 15 March 1804. In 1805 he accompanied Mrs Sarah Mountain on an Irish tour. In 1811 he was elected to the Royal Society of Musicians where from 1831 and 1836 he had increased responsibility as a member of the Court of Assistants and the House Committee. From 1816 he was an Associate of the Philharmonic Society. He succeeded his father in 1829 as organist, clerk and chapel-keeper of the Royal German Chapel in St James's Palace. His compositions include a set of three piano sonatas, one with violin (op.1; London, 1808), an air with variations (1808) and a set of waltzes (1812), both for piano.

In 1825 Kollmann was granted a patent for a design of pianos possessing down-striking action, an extended soundboard and a novel mechanism for tuning. He advertised grand, square and upright models in the Musical World in 1838 and gave a series of concerts in London in 1838–9 to demonstrate his invention. Despite favourable criticism of the instrument and admiration of Kollmann's pianistic skills, he became bankrupt in 1840. Kollmann also received two British patents relating to railways and locomotive carriages.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.G. Burckhardt: Kirchen-Geschichte der deutschen Gemeinden in London (Tübingen, 1798)
[J. N.] F[orke]l: 'Ueber den Zustand der Musik in England', AMZ, ii (1799–1800), 5–7
M.P. King: 'Advertisement', A General Treatise on Music, Particularly on Harmony or Thorough Bass and its Application in Composition (London, 1801), p.v
'On Thorough-bass', La belle assemblée, i (1806), 600; ii (1807), 149–51
'London', AMZ, xvii (1815), 518–23
'Ueber des Zustandes der Musik in England', AMZ, xxi (1819), 749–55, esp. 754
J.B. Logier: A Short Account of the Progress of J.B. Logier's System of Musical Education in Berlin (London, 1824)
'The Funeral of the Late A.F.C. Kollmann, Esq.', Morning Post (4 May 1829), p.3
H.G. Bohn: 'Kolmann', in W.T. Lowndes: The Bibliographer's Manual of English Literature (London, rev. 2/1857–64 by H.G. Bohn)
Catalogue of a Valuable Collection of Music, Including an Important Selection from the Library of the Eminent Theorist A.F.C. Kollman ... which will be Sold by Auction, by Messrs. Puttick and Simpson ... on Tuesday, January 30, 1877 (London, 1877)
'Notes on an Old Music Journal: The Quarterly Musical Register', MT, xlviii (1907), 645–8
J.T. Lightwood: Samuel Wesley, Musician (London, 1937/R)
S. Godman: 'The Early Reception of Bach's Music in England', MMR, lxxxii (1952), 255–9
E.R. Jacobi: 'Augustus Frederic Christopher Kollmann als Theoretiker', AMw, xiii (1956), 263–70; Eng. trans., 'Harmonic Theory in England after the Time of Rameau', JMT, i (1957), 126–46
M. Kassler: 'Transferring a Tonality Theory to a Computer', IMSCR XII: Berkeley 1977, 339–52 [discusses A.F.C. Kollmann's system]

MICHAEL KASSLER

Kollo, René (b Berlin, 20 Nov 1937). German tenor. The grandson of Walter Kollo and son of Willi Kollo, both operetta composers, he began his career in light music. After studying with Elsa Varena in Berlin, he made his operatic début at Brunswick in 1965, and was then engaged at Düsseldorf (1967–71). At first he sang lyrical roles: Froh, Lensky, Vladimir (Prince Igor), the Steersman for his Bayreuth début in 1969, Matteo (Arabella) at La Scala (1970) and Tamino at Salzburg (1974). Appearing in Munich, Vienna, Hamburg and Berlin, he took on heavier Wagnerian roles, notably Parsifal, Erik and Walther, a part he sang at Bayreuth (1973) and the Salzburg Easter Festival (1974). In 1976 he made débuts at the Metropolitan as Lohengrin and Covent Garden as Siegmund and sang the title role in Siegfried in the Bayreuth centenary Ring. His other roles included Florestan, Hermann (Queen of Spades), Max (Der Freischütz), Bacchus, Tristan, Tannhäuser, Siegfried (Götterdämmerung), Otello, Canio and Peter Grimes. Kollo's many recordings include Florestan, most of his Wagner and Strauss roles and Das Lied von der Erde. He was an intelligent singer, and though his voice inevitably lost the lyrical quality so notable in his 1975 recording of Paul in Korngold's Die tote Stadt, it always kept its firmness and characteristic brightness of timbre.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Kayser: 'René Kollo', Opera, xl (1989), 1415–21

ELIZABETH FORBES

Kollo [Kollodzieyski], (Elimar) Walter (b Neidenburg, [now Nidzica] East Prussia, 28 Jan 1878; d Berlin, 30 Sept 1940). German composer. He studied music at Sondershausen and took up a position as a theatre conductor in Königsberg. Already known as a composer of popular songs, he moved to Stettin and then to Berlin, where he wrote for cabarets and, from 1908 onwards, composed operettas and other light works, primarily for the Berliner Theater. He later founded his own publishing company and several theatres. His most successful theatrical work was Wie einst in Mai, written with Willy Bredschneider, which reached the USA in 1917 as Maytime; but it is chiefly as a composer of Solang noch Untern Lindern and other popular Berlin songs that Kollo has been remembered. He also composed music for revues and films. His son Willi Kollo, who several times served him as lyricist, was also a composer of light theatre music and film scores; the tenor René Kollo is his grandson. (GänzlEMT).

WORKS

(selective list)

Operetten and Possen, in order of first performance; first performed in Berlin unless otherwise stated; for fuller list see GänzlEMT, GroveO

Ali ben Mokka 1907; Ein aufgelegtes Geschäft, 1912; Der Liebesonkel, 1912, collab. W. Schütt; Filmzauber, 1912; So wird's gemacht, 1912; Wie einst in Mai, 1913, collab. W. Bredschneider; Der Juxbaron, 1913; Die tolle Komtesse, 1917; Drei alte Schachteln, 1917; Blitzblaues Blut, 1918; Sterne, die wieder leuchten, 1918; Fräulein Puck, 1919; Marietta, 1923

Die Frau ohne Kuss, 1924; Olly-Polly, 1925; Nur Du!, 1925; Der vertauschte Frau, 1925; Drei arme kleine Mädels, 1927; Kitty macht Karriere, 1928; Jettchen Gebert, 1929; Majestät lässt bitten, 1930; Derfflinger, 1933; Ein Kaiser ist verliebt, 1935; Heirat nicht ausgeschlossen, 1935; Mädel ahoi!, 1936; Das Schiff der schönen Frauen, 1940

Music for revues, films

Songs, incl. Solang noch Untern Lindern

ANDREW LAMB

Kollontay (Yermolayev), Mikhail Georgiyevich (b Moscow, 21 Aug 1952). Russian composer. In 1977, he graduated from the Moscow Conservatory as a pianist (with V.V. Gornostayeva), and in 1978 as a composer (with Leman). From 1977 to 1979 he took a postgraduate piano course. From 1979 to 1985 and again since 1997 he has taught in the specialist piano department at the conservatory, and between 1989 and 1991 he taught in the equivalent department at the Gnesin Institute. He was awarded the Shostakovich Prize (1981) by the Composers' Union for his Viola Concerto.

Kollontay's creative activity is developing in several directions. He performs as a concert pianist: his repertory includes composers ranging from Bach and Purcell to Chopin and Liszt, along with classical and contemporary Russian music, from Glinka and Dargomïzhsky to works by Butsko and Kollontay himself. He has recorded the complete works of Balakirev and Musorgsky, and made a critical edition of the piano works of Glinka in 1986, under the pseudonym of Ye. Nosenko.

For Kollontay, compositional work has the sense of a spiritually significant existential act. A very important role is played by text, which comes from Russian poetry, the Scriptures and the Orthodox liturgy. However, his are not always vocal compositions in the proper sense of the term. More characteristic of Kollontay is programme music with gaudy, sometimes paradoxical titles, with verbal fragments written in the score but not predestined for performance. Kollontay prefers linear-melodic writing, frequently working from the prototypes of Orthodox liturgy. The pitch basis of his music is the 12-note chromatic collection, although it is not organized according to strict serial principles.

WORKS

(selective list)

Orch: Simfoniyetta, op.23, 1974; Sym. no.1 '6 stikhotvoreniy' [6 Poems], op.2, 1974; Sym. no.2, op.16, 1978; Ispanskiye stsenï i passakaliya [Spanish Scenes and passacaglia], op.9a, 1979; Va Conc., op.8, 1980; Pf Conc., op.13, 1984; Malen'kaya tantseval'naya syuita [Small Dance Suite], op.19a, chbr orch, 1986; 2 p'yesï [2 Pieces], op.19d, cl, chbr orch, 1986; Katekhizis [Catechism], sym., op.25a, 1990

Vocal: 4 pesni [4 Songs] (medieval poems of Provence, trans. V. Dïnnik), op.6, T, pf, 1976; Iz poèzii drevnego Yegipta [From the Poetry of Ancient Egypt] (trans. A. Akhmatova and V. Potapova), 5 romances, op.18, S, hp/pf, 1979; Podorozhnik [The Plantain] (Rubtsov), op.10, B, pf, 1981; K vam, moya Donna [To You, My Donna] (Troubadour poems, trans. Dïnnik), 8 songs, op.6a, T, hpd, org, pf, 1988; S podorozhnoy po kazyonnoy nadobnosti [With an Order for Fresh Horses on Account of Fiscal Necessity] (M. Lermontov), op.20bis, T, org, 1989; many choral works incl. several for children's chorus

Chbr: 8 dukhovnïkh simfoniy [8 Sacred Syms.], op.3, 3 vn, 3 va, 3 vc, 1975; Str Qt no.1, op.5, 1975; 4 miniatyurï, op.17, str qt, 1983; Ansambli udarnïkh [Perc Ens], op.21e, 1987; Str Qt no.2 'Pokhvala Presvyatoy Bogoroditse' [Praise to the Most Holy Mother of God], op.22, 1988; 2 pesni i plyaska tsarya Davida [2 Songs and a Dance of King David], op.14c, 11 pfmrs, 1991; 6 bibleyskikh sonat [6 Biblical Sonatas], op.28, vn, org, 1992; Oda predatelya [The Traitor's Ode], op.33, fl, org, 1993; 10 slov Musorgskogo na smert' Viktora Hartmana [10 Words of Musorgsky on the Death of Viktor Gartmann], op.32, vn, vc, pf, 1993; Chuvstva zlodeya v Rozhdestvenskiy sochel'nik [The Feeling of the Evildoer on Christmas Eve], op.35, vc, pf, 1994; Plach na padeniye svyatïkh [A Lamentation of the Fall of the Saints], op.34b, eng hn, str qnt, 1994

Solo inst: 4 letniye derevenskiye kartinki [4 Pictures of Rural Summer], op.4, pf, 1975; Sonata, 8 psalms, op.7, va, 1977; Sonata, op.14a, vn, 1978 [from ps.xvii]; Pf Scherzo, op.11, 1982; Trio-simfoniya, op.20, org, 1986; 3 èkstsentricheskiye p'yesï [3 Eccentric Pieces], op.21c, pf, 1987; 2 klassicheskiye p'yesï [2 Classical Pieces], op.21b, pf, 1987; Schastlivïye grazhdane Tsarstva Nebesnogo . . . [Joyful Citizens of the Kingdom of Heaven ...], 9 preludes, op.29, pf, 1992; Partita-zaveshchaniye [Farewell Testament], op.30, vn, 1993; Truba smerti [The Tpt of Death], op.31, org, 1993; 7 bibleyskikh èpigrafov [7 Biblical

Epigraphs], op.40, pf, 1994; 10 kaprisov na razrusheniye khrama [10 Caprices on the Destruction of the Temple], op.34a, vn, 1994

Cadenzas and reworkings of pieces by L. van Beethoven and W.A. Mozart

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Likht: 'Zalog dvizheniya i rosta' [A pledge of movement and growth], SovM (1986), no.8, pp.41–4

I. Stepanova and M. Kollontay: 'Tvorchestvo: put' poznaniya ili yarmo?' [Is his work a path to cognition or a yoke?], MAk (1995), no.1, pp.20–26 [dialogue]

SVETLANA SAVENKO

Kolman, Peter (b Bratislava, 29 May 1937). Austrian composer of Slovak birth. Of Jewish descent, he was interned as a child in Terezín in 1944. After studying composition and conducting in Bratislava at the Conservatory (1951–6) and the Academy of Music and Drama, he worked at Czechoslovak Radio, first as programme editor then as director of the electronic music studio (from 1965). His outspoken criticism of the communist regime led to his expulsion from the Association of Slovak Composers after the Prague Spring (1968), leading to an embargo on the performance of his works. In 1977 he emigrated to Austria, taking citizenship there and becoming an editor at Universal Edition in 1979.

The departure point for Kolman's composition is his study of Berg, Webern and Schoenberg, clearly recognizable in his Vier Orchesterstücke (1963, revised 1996). However, also evident are clusters, sound masses and subtle use of polyrhythm, elements reminiscent of Ligeti and present also in the piano toccata, Nota bene (1978), and in his Concerto for Orchestra (1995). His writing for keyboard instruments is generally disjunct and harshly rhythmic, while his sense for orchestral colour has been sharpened through working in an electronic studio. Technical considerations and vehement orchestral outbursts are always balanced in his works by an intrinsic poetic voice.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Vn Conc., 1960; 4 Orchesterstücke, 1963, rev. 1996; Monumento per 6,000,000, 1964, rev. 1996; Movement, wind, perc, 1971; Conc. for Orch, 1995

Chbr and solo inst: 3 Klavierstücke zum Gedächtnis Arnold Schönbergs, pf, 1960; 2 Sätze, fl, cl, vn, pf, 1960; Partecipazioni, fl, ob, cl, hn, tpt, trbn, glock, vib, str trio, 1962; Sonata canonica, cl, b cl, 1963; Panegyrikos, 4 ob, 4 tpt, 4 perc, 4 vc, 1964, rev. 1998; Molisation, Mobile, fl, vib, 1965; Musik für 14 Streichinstrumente, 1978; Nota bene, pf, 1978; Wie ein Hauch von Glückseligkeit, vn, pf, 1978; 3 Orgelstücke, 1982–6; Ausgedehnter Dominantseptakkord zu Ehren Alfred Schlees, vn, va, vc, db, 1991

Elec: Omaggio a Gesualdo, 1970; Lentement mais pas trop, 1972; E 15, 1974; Poliritmica, 1974

Principal publisher: Universal

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Kolman: 'Der Weg zur Flächenkomposition', Melos, xxxvii (1970), 8–12

A. Haefeli: Die Internationale Gesellschaft für Neue Musik: ihre Geschichte von 1922 bis zur Gegenwart (Zürich, 1982)

H. Gramman: Die Ästhetisierung des Schrekens in der europäischen Musik des 20. Jahrhunderts (Bonn, 1984)

JOYCE SHINTANI

Kolmarer Liederhandschrift (D-Mbs Cgm 4997). See SOURCES, MS, §III, 5.

Köln (Ger.). See COLOGNE.

Kolneder, Walter (b Wels, 1 July 1910; d Karlsruhe, 30 Jan 1994). Austrian musicologist. He was a private pupil of J.N. David (1927–9) and then studied music at the Salzburg Mozarteum (1925–35), specializing in conducting with Paumgartner; he also completed a course in the viola with Max Strub. He taught at Graz Conservatory (1936–9), and, until 1945, at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musikerziehung in Graz-Eggenberg; he was later a conductor at Wels (1945–7). His musicological studies, begun at Vienna University (1934–5), were continued with Wilhelm Fischer at Innsbruck University (1947). He took the doctorate at Vienna in 1949 with a dissertation on vocal polyphony in the folk music of the Austrian Alps. From 1953 to 1959 he was the director of the Conservatoire de Musique de la Ville de Luxembourg and organized the conservatory concerts; from 1956 he was also an external lecturer at the University of Saarbrücken where, in the same year, he completed the Habilitation in musicology with a work on Vivaldi. He became director of the Städtische Akademie für Tonkunst, Darmstadt (1959–65), and of the Hochschule für Musik in Karlsruhe (1966–72). In 1966 he became supernumerary professor of musicology at Karlsruhe University and founded the institute of musicology, which he directed until he retired in 1974. He was also the editor of the series Schriften zur Musik.

In addition to his work on music teaching and on the history and repertory of violin playing, Kolneder concentrated on analytical and stylistic studies of Vivaldi and Webern. He was editor of the collected edition of Albinoni's instrumental music (1974–); he also made performing editions of folk music from the Alpine regions, partly based on his own transcriptions, and many performing editions of instrumental music, particularly cello and violin music of the 17th and 18th centuries.

WRITINGS

Die vokale Mehrstimmigkeit in der Volksmusik der österreichischen Alpenländer (diss., U. of Innsbruck, 1949; Winterthur, 1981)

Antonio Vivaldi: neue Studien zur Biographie und Stilistik seiner Werke (Habilitationsschrift, U. of Saarbrücken, 1956); extracts in Aufführungspraxis bei Vivaldi (Leipzig, 1955, 2/1973; Eng. trans., 1979) and in Die Solokonzertform bei Vivaldi (Strasbourg, 1961)

'Sind Schenkers Analysen Beiträge zur Bacherkenntnis?', DJbM, iii (1958), 59–73

Anton Webern: Einführung in Werk und Stil (Rodenkirchen, 1961; Eng. trans., 1968/R)

'Evolutionismus und Schaffenschronologie zu Beethovens Righini-Variationen', Studien zur Musikgeschichte des Rheinlandes, ii: Karl Gustav Fellerer zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. H. Drux, K.W. Niemöller and W. Thoene (Cologne, 1962), 119–32

Geschichte der Musik: ein Studien- und Prüfungshelfer (Heidelberg, 1962, 15/1996)

Musikinstrumentenkunde: ein Studien- und Prüfungshelfer (Heidelberg, 1963, 5/1979)

Singen, Hören, Schreiben: eine praktische Musik-Lehre in vier Lehr- und vier Übungsheften (Mainz, 1963–7)

Antonio Vivaldi: Leben und Werk (Wiesbaden, 1965; Eng. trans., 1970)

ed.: C. Czerny: Erinnerungen aus meinem Leben (Strasbourg, 1968)

Georg Muffat zur Aufführungspraxis (Strasbourg, 1970)

Das Buch der Violine: Bau, Geschichte, Spiel, Pädagogik, Komposition (Zürich, 1972, 3/1984; Eng. trans., 1998)

Anton Webern: Genesis und Metamorphosen eines Stils (Vienna, 1974)

Melodietypen bei Vivaldi (Berg am Irchel, 1973)

Die Kunst der Fuge: Mythen des 20. Jahrhunderts, i–iv (Wilhelmshaven, 1977)

'Der Generalbass in den Triosonaten von Purcell', Heinrich Schütz e il suo tempo: Urbino 1978, 283–99

Antonio Vivaldi: Dokumente seines Lebens und Schaffens (Wilhelmshaven, 1979)

'Zur Geschichte des Metronoms', HiFi-Stereophonie, xix (1980), 152–62

Lübbes Bach-Lexikon (Bergisch Gladbach, 1982)

'Motivische Arbeit bei Stradella', Alessandro Stradella e il suo tempo: Siena 1982 [Chigiana, new ser., xix (1982)], 425–36
Schule des Generalbassspiels, i–ii (Wilhelmshaven, 1983–4)
Harmonielehre für Geiger und Spieler anderer Melodieinstrumente (Wilhelmshaven, 1984) with K.H. Jürgens: J.S. Bach: Lebensbilder (Bergisch Gladbach, 1984)
Lübbes Vivaldi-Lexikon (Bergisch Gladbach, 1984) with K.H. Schmidt: Singen nach Noten: praktische Musiklehre für Chorsänger zum Erlernen des Vom-Blatt-Singens (Mainz, 1985)
'Vivaldi in der Polemik Schreyer-Spitta', Nuovi studi vivaldiani: Venice 1987, 33–44
Johann Sebastian Bach (1685–1750): Leben, Werk und Nachwirken in zeitgenössischen Dokumenten (Wilhelmshaven, 1991)

HANS HEINRICH EGGEBRECHT/SIEGFRIED SCHMALZRIEDT

Kol nidrei (Aramaic: 'All vows'). A prayer of the Ashkenazi liturgy sung on the eve of Yom kippur and performed to one of the Mid-Sinai melodies. See JEWISH MUSIC, §III, 3(ii).

Kolodin, Irving (b New York, 22 Feb 1908; d New York, 29 April 1988). American music critic. He studied harmony and theory, 1930–31, at the Institute of Musical Art in New York and was music critic of the New York Sun (1932–50) and the Saturday Review (1947–82). He wrote programme notes for the New York Philharmonic from 1953 to 1958 and taught at the Juilliard School of Music beginning in 1968. Kolodin was, particularly during the 1950s and 60s, one of the most widely read and influential music critics in the USA because of his exposure in a leading national magazine, his many books on music and his position as unofficial historian of the Metropolitan Opera. He was one of the first American critics to give extensive reviews of phonograph records (his first record guide appeared in 1941); jazz, Beethoven, opera and musical life were among his other special interests. His style combined a baroque expansiveness with pithy journalistic acuity, and was informed by a wide knowledge of music and the business of music.

WRITINGS

The Metropolitan Opera, 1883–1935 (New York, 1936, 4/1966 as The Metropolitan Opera, 1883–1966) with B. Goodman: The Kingdom of Swing (New York, 1939/R) ed.: The Critical Composer (New York, 1940/R)
A Guide to Recorded Music (Garden City, NY, 1941, 2/1947 as The New Guide to Recorded Music, 3/1950)
Mozart on Records (New York, 1942) with C.G. Burke and E.T. Canby: The Saturday Review Home Book of Recorded Music and Sound Reproduction (New York, 1952, 2/1956)
The Story of the Metropolitan Opera, 1883–1950: a Candid History (New York, 1953)
The Guide to Long-Playing Records, i: Orchestral Music (New York, 1955/R)
Orchestral Music (New York, 1955)
The Musical Life (New York, 1958)
ed.: The Composer as Listener: a Guide to Music (New York, 1958/R)
The Continuity of Music: a History of Influence (New York, 1969)
The Interior Beethoven: a Biography of the Music (New York, 1975)
The Opera Omnibus: Four Centuries of Critical Give and Take (New York, 1976)
In Quest of Music: a Journey in Time (New York, 1980)

PATRICK J. SMITH

Kolodub, Levko [Lev] Mykolayovych (b Kiev, 1 May 1930). Ukrainian composer. In 1954 he completed his conservatory training in Khar'kiv (composition with Tietz, clarinet with G. Rïkov, counterpoint and orchestration with Klebanov). In 1966 he became a lecturer at the Kiev Conservatory; he was appointed professor in 1985. In 1988 he was elected President of the Ukrainian Band Music Workers' Association and in 1994 he assumed the leadership of the Kiev Branch of the Composers' Union of Ukraine. He was made People's Artist of Ukraine in 1993. His creative output encompasses a variety of genres, from opera and ballet, to symphonies, operettas, songs and chamber miniatures, but pieces for wind instruments hold a special place. His symphonic music is, for the most part, very much wedded to Ukrainian folklore and usually carries some kind of a programme. Although he was never part of the avant-garde movement of the 1960s, he was a composer of interesting and colourful music and always a superb craftsman. He gradually assimilated many of the innovations used by his modernist colleagues and in 1980 composed his Third Symphony 'V stili ukraïns'kogo barokko' ('In the Style of the Ukrainian Baroque') which marked a turning-point in his development. This style is essentially neo-romantic, with a strong rhythmic sense and varied orchestration. The primary impulse of the work is timbral experimentation and obsessive rhythm, and to these are added various serial, aleatory and sonoristic elements. Various genres of the 17th century – the suite, concerto grosso and fugue – are used in a distinctly Ukrainian style and brought to life in a series of quasi-stenographic sketches of great theatricality. His subsequent compositions further developed these tendencies. The Fifth Symphony 'Pro memoria', is a work that uses as its sound base the various church bells of Ukraine and represents an attempt to build harmonic and melodic sequences structured on the overtone series that the different bells produce. Throughout his creative life, Kolodub has continued to write for wind ensemble and symphonic band and has also composed light music. In 1975 he edited three orchestral works by Verykivs'ky for Muzychna Ukraïna publishers.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Zhovtneva lehenda [The October Legend] (ballet), 1967; Veseli divchata/Gorod vlyublennïkh [The Town of the Enamoured] (musical, D. Kisin), 1968; Ya lyublyu tebya [I Love You] (musical, D. Shevtsov, after V. Rozov: V den' svad'bï [On the Wedding Day]), 1975, collab. Zh. Kolodub; Probuzhdyonnya [Awakening] (op, G. Bodykin), 1976; Nezradzhenna lyubov' [True Love] (op, 2, V. Hrypich, after A. Malyshko), 1985; Poèt, Taras Shevchenko [The Poet, Shevchenko] (op, A. Beletsky and Z. Sahalov), 1988
Concs.: Conc. no.1, fr hn, orch, 1972; Conc. no.2, fr hn, chbr orch, 1980; Suoni passati, tpt, orch, 1983; Conc., trbn, orch/brass orch, 1986; Double Vn Conc., 1989; Conc., vn, chbr orch, 1992; Conc., cl, chbr orch, 1995
Other orch: Sym. no.1, 1958; Ukraïns'ka karpats'ka rapsodiya no.1 [Ukrainian Carpathian Rhapsody no.1], 1960; Sym. no.2 'Shevchenko's Images', 1964; Festive Ov., 1967; Hutsul's'ki kartynky [Hutsul Pictures], suite, 1967; Ukraïns'ka karpats'ka rapsodiya no.2 [Ukrainian Carpathian Rhapsody no.2], 1973; Troïsti muzyky [Triple Music], 1979; Sym. no.3 'V stili ukraïns'kogo barokko' [In the Style of the Ukrainian Baroque], 1980; 7 Ukrainian Folksongs, chbr orch, 1982; Ukrainian Concertino, 2 fr hn, orch, 1985; Epic Concertino, tuba, orch, 1986; Festive Ov., wind, 1986; Sym. no.4, str, 1986; Sym. no.5 'Pro memoria', 1990; Postludium, wind, 1995; Fresky starodavnyoho Kyyeva [Frescoes of Ancient Kiev], suite, wind, 1996; Ukraïns'kiy tantsi [Ukrainian Dances], suite, 1996
Chbr and solo inst: Yumoristicheskaya kadril' [Humorous Quadrille], tuba, pf, 1971; Album for Children, 27 pieces, pf, 1981; Concertino, 4 sax, 1985; Little Partita in Swing Style, 2 tpt, 2 trbn, 1994
Many vocal works incl. a cycle of romances (T.H. Shevchenko), 1963
MSS in UA-Km; Ukraine Ministry of Culture; Russian Ministry of Culture; Vernadsky Central Library of the Ukrainian Academy of Sciences, Kiev

Principal publishers: Muzychna Ukraïna, Sovetskiy kompozitor

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Yu. Malïshev: 'Lev Kolodub', SovM (1961), no.5, pp.36–9
M. Zahaikevych: Levko Kolodub, Creative Portrait (Kiev, 1973)
M. Zahaikevych: 'Nezradzhenna lyubov'' [True Love], Muzyka [Kiev] (1985), no.5, pp.10–11
V. Baley and J. Sachs: 'The Young Ukrainians', Stagebill [Lincoln Center, New York], xiv/8 (1987)
V. Kuzyk: 'Symphony by Artist who Survived the Horror of 1933', Rada (8 June 1992)

VIRKO BALEY

Kolomiytsov [Kolomiytsev], Viktor Pavlovich (b St Petersburg, 25 Nov/7 Dec 1868; d Leningrad, 26 June 1936). Russian music critic, pianist and translator. He studied law at St Petersburg University, graduating in 1894, and worked as a foreign correspondent for the Ministry of Finance. In 1895 he took Ye. Raphof's courses in music and drama, and continued his musical education at the St Petersburg Conservatory until 1900, studying with Herman Laroche. From 1903 he wrote music criticism for a number of newspapers, including Novaya Rus', of which he was head of the music section from 1904 to 1910. He reflected the rich musical life of St Petersburg in his writings, and covered the repertory of the Mariinsky and Conservatory theatres, including Chaliapin's appearance in Gounod's Faust, the Ziloti Concerts, Koussevitzky's Tchaikovsky cycle, Nikisch's Beethoven cycle and the visits to the city of Busoni, Debussy and Landowska. His prolific career as a critic continued until 1926. In 1918 he was made a member of the council of the State Academic Theatre (formerly the Mariinsky) and head of Wagnerian repertory. In 1922 he organized the Society of Friends of Chamber Music and became president of the Arts Council, a post he held until 1933. He also worked for the Vsemirnaya Literatura (World Literature) publishing house. He appeared as a soloist pianist and accompanist, and made an important contribution to the training of singers.

From 1910 he worked on Russian translations of the librettos to Wagner's Parsifal, Das Rheingold and Die Walküre; he completed a Russian translation of the Ring cycle in 1923. He later made a full equirhythmic translation of Goethe's Faust and wrote the preface to a collection of his own translations of texts to Schubert's songs, Tekstï Frantsa Schuberta (Leningrad, 1933). He strove to maintain a poetic form in translation identical to that of the original, especially in texts set to music. In addition to operas by Wagner, Bizet, Gluck, Gounod and Boieldieu, he prepared translations of Bach's St John Passion and vocal works by Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Schumann, Brahms, Liszt, Debussy, Mahler, Richard Strauss, Hugo Wolf and others.

LARISA DAN'KO

Kolophonium (Ger.). See ROSIN.

Koloratur (Ger.). See COLORATURA.

Kolorieren (Ger., from Lat. colorare: 'to ornament'). To introduce COLORATION. A term used in German-speaking lands during the late Middle Ages and Renaissance to describe the use of commonplace melodic figures to generate musical textures. During the 15th century, standardized coloration formulae were the starting point for many compositions, especially those which elaborated upon a cantus firmus (see TACTUS, (2)); during the 16th century, the term 'kolorieren' was applied especially to the art of ornamenting intabulations at the organ. Practitioners ('Koloristen') included Bernhard Schmid the elder, E.N. Ammerbach and Jakob Paix.

During the first decades of the 20th century, German musicologists controversially applied the term Kolorierung to several late-medieval vocal repertories, including early 15th-century mass settings and the repertory of English Ordinary tropes, in the belief that such works had been composed from a storehouse of pre-existing melodic formulae.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Schering: 'Das kolorierte Orgelmadrigal des Trecento', SIMG, xiii (1911–12), 172–204
R. Ficker: 'Die Kolorierungstechnik der Trienter Messen', SMw, vii (1920), 5–47
J. Handschin: 'Zur Frage der melodischen Paraphrasierung im Mittelalter', ZMw, x (1927–8), 513–59
H. Besseler: 'Von Dufay bis Josquin', ZMw, xi (1928–9), 1–22
C.W. Young: 'Keyboard Music to 1600', MD, xvi (1962), 115–50; xvii (1963), 163–93

CLAUS BOCKMAIER

Kolozsvár (Hung.). See CLUJ-NAPOCA.

Koltai, Ralph (b Berlin, 31 July 1924). British stage designer of Hungarian descent. He was educated in Berlin and, after working with British Intelligence in World War II, studied at the London School of Arts and Crafts (where he was later head of the theatre department, 1965–73). Koltai has been a prolific designer, active in the spoken theatre as well as opera. The first opera he designed was Ibert's Angélique (1950, London, Fortune Theatre), but his long, fruitful association with Sadler's Wells began in 1957 with Samson et Dalila. His most important productions include Aufstieg und Fall der Stadt Mahagonny (1963), Volpone (1964), From the House of the Dead (1965), Bluebeard's Castle (1972) and Anna Karenina (1981). His Ring (1970–73) was admired for its 'moonscape', with attractive textures and a strictly controlled palette of colours. For Covent Garden he has had two notable successes: the designs for the premières of Peter Maxwell Davies's Taverner (1972) and Michael Tippett's The Ice Break (1977). In 1976 he designed memorable sets for the WNO production of Tippett's The Midsummer Marriage. Koltai has designed many productions for Scottish Opera, beginning with the first British staging of Dallapiccola's Volo di notte (1963) and including Boris Godunov (1965), The Rake's Progress (1967), Henze's Elegy for Young Lovers (1970), Tristan und Isolde (1973) and a controversial Macbeth (1976).

Internationally, Koltai has designed for opera houses in Buenos Aires (A Midsummer Night's Dream, 1962), Amsterdam (Wozzeck, 1973), Munich (Fidelio, 1974), Sydney (Tannhäuser, 1974), Hong Kong (Der fliegende Holländer, 1987) and Tokyo (Madama Butterfly, 1995).

Koltai is a most individual designer, combining powerful theatrical images with the practicalities of the stage. Always looking for a new direction, he frequently uses contemporary materials and technology in his spacious and often futuristic decor. He was made a CBE in 1983.

DAVID J. HOUGH

Kolyada, Mykola Terentiyevich (b Berezovka, Poltava province, 22 March/4 April 1907; d 30 July 1935). Ukranian composer. He graduated from S.S. Bogatïryov's class at the Kharkiv Institute of Music and Drama in 1931, then worked with workers' youth theatre and became a member of the Ukrainian Association of Proletarian Musicians. An enthusiastic sportsman, he was also a climbing instructor; he died tragically in a climbing expedition in the Caucasus and was buried in Kharkiv. A representative of the Komsomol youth organization of the 1920s, he was fired with the idea of creating a proletarian art. His once-popular mass songs recall poster art in their garishness; he included his song Partizanskaya ('The Partisan Song') in his most significant orchestral score Shturm traktornogo partizanami ('The Storming of the Tractor Factory by the Partisans') which, with its theme concerning the construction of a major Kharkiv factory, is typical of the industrially inspired urbanized art of the period. His treatment of the subject is distinctive and draws – as do his chamber works – on folksong sources; his arrangements of folksongs are among the most original of the era and are notable for the detail in the piano accompaniments and independence of spirit. Characteristic of his music as a whole is a subtle and highly original sensitivity to mode along with an impressionistic tendency to employ harmonies built from fourths and fifths. Despite his early death he exerted a profound influence on many Ukrainian musicians and almost single-handedly changed the course of the country's musical development.

WORKS

Ov., 2 pf, 1925; Syuita na ukrainskiye temï [Suite on Ukrainian Themes], orch, 1927; Shturm traktornogo partizanami [The Storming of the Tractor Factory by the Partisans], vocal-sym. poem, 1933; Pf Qnt; Sonata, vn, pf; incid. music, songs

NINA SERGEYEVNA SHUROVA

Kölz, Matthias. See KELZ, MATTHIAS (i) or (ii).

Komadina, Vojin (b Karlovac, 8 Nov 1933; d Belgrade, 9 Feb 1997). Bosnian-Hercegovinan composer. He studied composition with Logar in Belgrade before attending Božidar Trudić's class at the Sarajevo Music Academy. After graduating in 1960 he continued his training at Darmstadt, under Stockhausen and Ligeti, and in Cologne, under Kelemen. He began his working life in Tuzla before moving to Sarajevo, where from 1975 to 1986 he was professor of composition at the Academy. He then joined the staff of the Podgorica Academy (Montenegro) and from 1992 taught in the Serb Republic in Bosnia. He was elected to the Bosnian Academy of Arts and Sciences (1977) and received numerous awards, among them the City of Sarajevo 6 April Prize (1972) and the Bosnian 27 July Prize (1980). His 300 or more works encompass a variety of styles including neo-classicism, a vocabulary derived from folksong, and minimalism. Themes from the Serbian Orthodox tradition are common in his works.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ballets: Satana [Satan], 1972; Hasanaginica, 1975; Zita Pesah, 1978; Derviš i smrt [Death and the Dervish], 1991

Orch: Pf Conc. no.1, 1960; Sinfonietta, str, 1960; Simfonija most [The Bridge Sym.], 1970; Preludij za modru rijeku [Prelude for a Blue River], 1977; Pf Conc. no.2, 1978; Beli Anđeo [The White Angel], 1987

Vocal: Rukoveti, 7 songs, SATB, 1952–72; Mikrokantate, 1v, pf, 1967; Gorčin, 3 SATB, 1983

Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt no.2 'Epeisodies', 1967; Refren IV, pf, 1974; Sonata da chiesa, vn, pf, 1974; Pf Sonata no.4, 1981; Refren VI 'Lindjo', pf, 1981; Partita Bosniensis, vn, 1982; Folk sonoris, pf, 1985

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Čavlović: 'Vojin Komadina: u povodu trideset godina umjetničkog rada' [On the 20th anniversary of the commencement of his artistic activities], Zvuk, no.4 (1984), 76–90 [incl. Eng. summary]

M. Komadina: Vojin Komadina (Sarajevo, 1990)

IVAN ČAVLOVIĆ

Komariah, Euis (b Majalaya, Bandung, Indonesia, 9 Sept 1949). Sundanese singer. She began her career as a singer of kawih (song form; see INDONESIA, §V, 1(vii)(a)); in 1968, after winning several competitions and performing regularly with an all-female gamelan degung group, she began to focus on tembang Sunda (genre of accompanied sung poetry, see INDONESIA, §V, 1(ii)(c)) and studied with Mang Engkos, a noted master. Her tembang credentials became firmly established when she won first prize in the Galura Sunda competition the following year. She has made countless recordings, beginning in 1969; between 1971 and 1975 she recorded traditional music for Asmara Record, a pioneer in the Sundanese cassette industry. In 1975, she and her husband, composer-arranger-choreographer-producer Gugum Gumbira Tirasondjaja (b 1945), established their own recording studio and label, Jugala. Her Jugala recordings reshaped the sound of tembang Sunda in the 70s and 80s. Her vocal timbre, tessitura and senggol (ornamentation) are much imitated. Many of the runtuyan (suites of independent pieces) on her recordings have become standard, as have many of the new panambih (metred songs) that she introduced. One experimental cassette using a new tuning system called mandalungan has arguably established this as a fourth tuning system in tembang performing practice. She is also active in teaching; her latihan (coaching sessions) are always well-attended.

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

Sumanding Asih, Jugala (?1987)

The Sound of Sunda, perf. E. Komariah and Y. Wiradiredja, GlobeStyle CDORB 060 (1990)

S. Williams: The Urbanization of Tembang Sunda: an Aristocratic Musical Genre of West Java, Indonesia (diss., U. of Washington, 1990)

HENRY SPILLER

Komeda [Trzciński], Krzysztof [Christopher] (b Poznań, 27 April 1931; d Warsaw, 23 April 1969). Polish composer, jazz pianist and bandleader. He studied the piano at the Poznań Conservatory in the late 1930s and the 40s along with medicine at the Poznań Medical Academy. In 1954 he took part in the first unofficial jazz festival in Kraków and formed his first group. In 1956 he formed a sextet which achieved success at the Sopot Jazz Festival (1956 and 1957), and in 1958 Komeda appeared in the first series of Jazz at the Philharmonic concerts, Warsaw. He wrote the music for Polanski's short film Dwaj ludzie z szafą ('Two People with a Wardrobe', 1958), and subsequently wrote his first score for a feature film, Do widzenia, do jutra ('Goodbye, until Tomorrow', 1960). He took part in performances of jazz and poetry and, from 1960, frequently toured Europe. His recording Astigmatic (1965) was a great commercial success, and the following year he was commissioned to record Meine süsse Europäische Heimat (Elec., 1966), a cycle of works to the words of Polish poets. In 1967 he moved to Hollywood under a three-year contract to Paramount and wrote music for films that included The Riot and Rosemary's Baby (both 1967–8).

Komeda's varied output includes songs, musicals and music for theatre and ballet as well as 68 film scores, with jazz as his main inspiration. His major jazz works, such as Kattorna (1964) and Astigmatic, make use of forms related to rondo, sonata allegro and variation; smaller pieces such as Crazy Girl and Ballad for Bernt have become standards.

WORKS
(selective list)

Film scores: Dwaj ludzie z szafą [Two People with a Wardrobe] (R. Polanski), 1958; Do widzenia, do jutra [Goodbye, until Tomorrow] (J. Morgestern), 1960; Niewinni czarodzieje (A. Wajda), 1960; Nóż w wodzie [The Knife in the Water] (Polański), 1961 [incl. Ballad for Bernt, Cherry, Crazy Girl, Typisch Jazz]; Hvad med os (H. Carlsen), 1963; Zbrodniarz i panna (J. Nasfeter), 1963; Prawo i pięść [The Law and the Fist] (J. Hoffman and J. Skorzewski), 1964 [incl. Ballad]

Przerwany lot [Interrupted Flight] (L. Buczkowski), 1964; Bariera [Barrier] (J. Skolimowski), 1966; Cul-de-sac (Polański), 1966; Le départ (Skolimowski), 1966 [incl. title number]; Niekochana (Nasfeter), 1966; Sult (Carlsen), 1966; The Fearless Vampire Killers (Polański), 1967; Klatki (M. Kijowicz), 1967; Laterna magica [Magic Lantern] (Kijowicz), 1967; Wiklinowy kosz (Kijowicz), 1967; Menesker modes og sod musik opstar hjerted (Carlsen), 1967

People Meet … , 1967 [incl. Ballad, Bossa nova no.1, Bossa nova np.2]; Ręce do góry [Hands Up] (Skolimowski), 1967; The Riot (B. Kulik), 1967–8; Rosemary's Baby (Polański), 1967–8

Jazz works: Kattorna, 1964; Astigmatic, 1965; Nighttime, Daytime Requiem, 1967 [in memory of John Coltrane]

Jazz tunes: Blues in the Corner, 1956; Memory of Bach, 1956 [after J.S. Bach; collab J. Milian]; Blues for Sopot, 1957; Gillespie's Memory, 1957; Dwórjka rzymska, 1958; I greet you, 1959; Fourths, 1960; Moja ballada [My Ballad], 1960; Etiudy baletowe [Ballet Etudes], 1962; Alea, 1963

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Komeda: 'Wypowiedź krzysztofa komedy-trzińskiego', Kwartalnik filmowy [Film Quarterly], xi/2 (1961), 35–8; repr. in Jazz Forum, no.2 (1969)

J. Radlinski: 'Komeda', Jazz Forum, no.2 (1969), 55ff

J.E. Berendt: 'We'll Remember Komeda', Ein Fenster aus Jazz: Essays, Portraits, Reflections (Frankfurt, 1977), 117–23

ROMAN KOWAL

Komenský, Jan Amos [Comenius, Johann Amos] (b Nivnice, nr Uherský Brod, 28 March 1592; d Amsterdam, 15 Nov 1670). Czech educational reformer, theologian, and hymnologist. He was made a priest of the evangelical church of the Bohemian Brethren in 1616, and in 1632 became its last bishop. He studied at the school of the Bohemian Brethren in Přerov from 1607, at the academy in Herborn from 1611 and at Heidelberg University from 1613. In 1614 he became administrator of the school in Přerov, and in 1618–21 he was spiritual guide of the community of German Brethren in Fulnek, north Moravia. In 1628 he left for Leszno in Poland to escape from Catholic persecution, and he returned there several times after visits to England (1641–2), Prussia (1642–8) and Hungary (1650–54). From 1656 until his death he lived in Amsterdam.

Komenský's principal contribution to hymnology is his Kancionál, to jest kniha žalmů a písní duchovních (Amsterdam, 1659; partly ed. O. Settari, Prague, 1992), a new edition of the hymnal of the Bohemian Brethren, issued in 1618. Komenský provided his edition (containing 606 texts to 406 tunes) with a new and substantial introduction, revised the 150 psalms and 310 hymns of the earlier edition and added 146 new items, mostly his own texts (including 62 translations of older German and Polish evangelical songs). Komenský's texts (14 more were issued separately) represent a valuable contribution to Czech Baroque poetry, but the tunes were taken from other sources. Komenský also edited the German hymnal Kirchen-, Haus- und Hertzens-Musica (Amsterdam, 1661), the fourth issue of the German selection from the Czech hymnal of the Union of Bohemian Brethren, which had been published under the title Kirchengesänge, beginning in 1566. His Czech hymnal of 1659 reached a wide readership and was re-issued several times, even into the 19th century.

Although Komenský wrote no treatise dealing specifically with music, there are countless comments on music, singing, musical instruments and terminology scattered among his numerous writings. These comments are based partly on the medieval mathematical concept of music, and partly on a newer viewpoint, taking into account the links of music with grammar, rhetoric and poetics. In Komenský's system of education an important role is performed by singing and playing musical instruments at all stages.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Škarka, ed.: J.A. Komenský: Duchovní písně (Prague, 1952)

O. Settari: 'Über das Gesangbuch des Johann Amos Comenius', SPFFBU, H2 (1967), 89–96

Dílo Jana Amose Komenského/Johannis Amos Comenii opera omnia, iv (Prague, 1983)

O. Settari: 'Jan Amos Comenius, a Czech Hymnographist, Music Theorist and Educationist', SPFFBU, H19–20 (1984), 65–71

O. Settari: 'Jan Amos Komenský a hudba' [Komenský and music], Studia comeniana et historica, xxi/45 (1991), 47–59

D. Šlosar and M. Štědroň: 'Česká hudební terminologie v díle J.A. Komenského' [Czech musical terminology in the works of Komenský], SPFFBU, H27–8 (1992–3), 17–43

E. Szórádová: 'Hudba v pedagogickom diele J.A. Komenského' [Music in the pedagogical works of Komenský], SH, xxi (1995), 137–202

JAN KOUBA

Komitas Vardapet [Gomidas Vartabed; Soghomonian, Soghomon] (b Kütahya, Turkey, 8 Oct 1869; d Paris, 22 Oct 1935). Armenian composer, ethnomusicologist, choral conductor, singer and teacher. One of the first Armenians to have a classical Western musical education, as well as instruction in the music of his own people, he laid the foundations for a distinctive national style in his many songs and choruses, all of which are deeply influenced by the folk and church traditions of Armenia. His work on Armenian folksong is also of musicological importance.

1. LIFE. Both of his parents (his father Gevorg Soghomonian was a cobbler) had gifts for music and poetry; in 1881, however, the boy was orphaned and sent to Armenia to study at the Gevork'ian Theological Seminary in Vagharshapat (now Edjmiadzine), and was ordained as a celibate priest in 1894, being given the name Komitas (a 7th-century Catholicos who was also a hymn composer). There his beautiful voice and his musical talents attracted notice, and under Sahak Amatuni's guidance he mastered the theory and practice of Armenian liturgical singing. He also made decisive contact with folksong, to the collection and study of which he gave himself wholeheartedly. When he had only just learnt Armenian modern notation he set about recording the songs of the Ararat valley peasants and immigrant Armenians of other regions. Although he had no knowledge of European music theory, he harmonized these songs for performance with a student choir at the academy. His earliest surviving collection of folk melodies dates from 1891, in which year the journal Ararat published a choral ode by the self-taught composer. In 1893 he made arrangements of medieval tagh songs, graduated from the academy to become a music teacher and conductor of the cathedral choir; he published his research on Armenian church melodies in 1894. The following year he obtained the degree of vardapet (doctor of theology). His transcription of folk songs from Akn region were published in 1895.

The next year Komitas went to Berlin where, on Joachim's advice, he entered the private conservatory of Richard Schmidt and enrolled at the university. Apart from Schmidt his teachers included Fleischer, Bellermann and Friedlaender. He remained a student for three years, during which time he produced a setting of Psalm cxxxvii, several lieder and Armenian folksong arrangements, all far above the level of apprentice work. In Berlin he was also one of the first to join the International Musical Society, and he lectured on Armenian music; the first issue of the society's journal includes an article by him (under the name of 'Komitas Gevorgian) on the ekphonetic transcription of Armenian church music.

On his return to Vagharshapat, Komitas continued to collect songs, eventually accumulating several thousand. He also established the relationship between folk and church music, worked on deciphering the ancient khaz (neumatic) notation and made arrangements of folk and sacred songs. Some of these he recorded, and with the seminary choir he gave concerts in Vagharshapat, Yerevan and Tbilisi. Of his pupils at this time, Melik'ian was to become an outstanding Armenian musician of the next generation. Already Komitas's various activities were becoming extremely important to the development of music in Armenia.

In 1906–7 Komitas gave concerts in Paris and Switzerland with other Armenian singers and with a French choir he had trained, gaining enthusiastic recognition in musical circles and from the press. He returned to Vagharshapat in autumn 1907, but the emphatically worldly nature of his activities created animosity within the conservative clergy and he was obliged to leave. From 1910 he lived in Constantinople, then one of the largest centres of Armenian culture, where he founded a large choir, Gusan. He also organized choirs in Izmir, Alexandria and Cairo, and his concerts and lectures helped to encourage a feeling of national identity among the scattered Armenians of the Near East. In 1912 he completed his last version of the patarag, the Armenian liturgy, besides continuing to produce lectures and articles. One of his sayings, 'The people are a great creator, learn from the people!', became something of a catch phrase.

Komitas took part in the International Musical Society congress in Paris in May–June 1914. His papers on Armenian music and a concert in the Armenian church, given under the auspices of the congress, again created great interest in Armenian music. The next year his creative work was interrupted when, on the orders of the Ottoman government, the great majority of western Armenians were annihilated. He, along with other intellectuals, was deported into the interior of the country. The experience brought about a breakdown, and from 1919 until his death he lived in a mental hospital in the suburbs of Paris. In 1936 his body was transferred to Erevan and interred in the Pantheon of Armenian Artists. His manuscripts, however, remained scattered and several are lost. The complete musical works, including original compositions and song collections, have been published (edited by R. At'aian). The publication of his musicological works, of which six volumes have been produced by the Arts Institute of the Armenian Academy of Sciences, is being continued by other publishers.

2. Works. Komitas's folksong collections are remarkable for their precision and variety; all the poetic forms, many dialect types and all the modal and rhythmic species are represented. One of his most valuable discoveries was that, apart from ancient folk melodies such as the improvisatory agricultural tunes, the hayren songs of the early gusan (professional minstrels) tradition and variations on medieval tagh songs are to be found among Armenian folksongs. Therefore, his collection includes not only a survey of folk music but also reconstructions of Armenian music from the past. He also made the first transcriptions of Kurdish melodies.

His own vocal works can be divided into two categories: those based on folk or sacred melodies and those that are freely composed. The latter, a much smaller group, are not so characteristic of Komitas, but they do show compositional mastery and directness; they include such songs as the popular lyric Kak'avi erg ('Song of the partridge') and choruses such as the patriotic and dramatic Ur es gali, ay garun ('Where are you coming, spring?'), comic scenes in recitative and the opera fragments Anush. The folk-based pieces are more numerous because Komitas believed a national art with popular origins could assist in arousing the national conscience of the Armenian people. His songs of this type with piano fall into many genres: love-songs and dance-songs, lullabies and pieces on the hard lot of the peasant, monologues of the expatriates (antuni), ancient ballads and folk parables. Emotional and picturesque, they are at the same time economical in thought and laconic in vocal narration; the harmony is fresh, the textures novel and the piano parts are unusually expressive.

Komitas's choral pieces are similarly varied in subject, including work songs, scenes of religious rites, a lament, epic-heroic pieces, landscape pictures, dance suites, comic numbers and love-songs. Here the abundance of tuneful cantilena is matched by the power of choral recitative, and emotional clarity is combined with strict narration. Unaffected in manner, Komitas was able to express joy and triumph with nobility, or to plumb grief and sorrow with dignity. Speech intonations are often directly imitated, so that the music contains the grandeur typical of Armenian folksong and its echoes of heathen antiquity. Moreover, his choral technique shows great variety and originality.

Also important in Komitas's output are the sacred pieces, the arrangements of ancient sharakan, meghedi and tagh songs. Outstanding here are certain numbers of the chants for unaccompanied male voices which, with some of the secular choruses, are his greatest contributions. Other works include arrangements of urban songs, often on the theme of national liberation, and popular dance-tunes for piano. Taken as a whole, his oeuvre is a vast gallery of Armenian images and a musical epic of national life.

In technique Komitas followed folk style but added original features; above all, he brought polyphonic development to a music which is essentially monophonic. He did this by subordinating conventional rules of harmony and polyphony to methods originating in the folk material. In polyphony he used Armenian intonations in melodically independent voices, freely allowing the occurrence of polymodality and polytonality. He also took advantage of national forms and rhythms, and the Armenian genius for antiphonal singing. Harmonically the modes proved a rich source, and Komitas also used original chords (in 4ths, 5ths etc.) relating to the modes. In piano accompaniments he effectively used the pedal to shade the colour of his modal harmonies.

Komitas's work came as a culmination of the efforts of earlier Armenian composers and as a supreme expression of the yearnings of his contemporaries. Basing his work on Armenian material, he wrote music in line with contemporary developments and raised the standard of Western art music in Armenia to a level where it would create international interest.

WORKS

(selective list)

Editions: Hay k'nar/La lyre arménienne (Paris, 1907) [A]
Hay geghdjuk erger [Armenian village songs] (Leipzig, 1912) [B]
Hay zhoghovrdakan erazhshtut'yun/Musique populaire arménienne, new ser., i–viii (Paris, 1925–51) [C]
Pesni dlya golosa i fortepiano [Songs for voice and piano], ed. Kh. Tordzhan (Moscow and Leningrad, 1939) [D]
Armyanskiye narodnïye pesni dlya khora bez soprovozhdeniya [Armenian folksongs for unaccompanied choir] (Moscow, 1958) [E]
Erkerizhoghordsu [Collected works], ed. R. At'ayan (Yerevan, 1960–98) [Fi–viii]
Khmberger [Choral songs] (Yerevan, 1969) [G]
Pesni dlya golosa s fortepiano (Moscow, 1969) [H]

UNACCOMPANIED CHORAL

sacred

Ergetsoghut'iwn srboy pataragi [Chants of the Sacred Liturgy], male vv (Paris, 1933)
Taghk' ew aleluk' [Tagh and Alleluias], mixed vv (Paris, 1946)

secular

Aṙovôt lusaber [Morning star], 1890–?96, Fiv
Mayreni lezu [Mother Tongue], 1890–?96, Fiv
Ov ter astvads [Oh, Lord God], 1890–?96, Fiv
T'e t'ew unei (Ighdz hay pandkhti) [If I had Wings], 1890–96, Fiv
Mi geghetsik parz gisher ēr [It was a Beautiful, Clear Night], 1890–?97, Fiv
Mayr Arak'si ap'erov [On the Shores of the River Araks], 1890–?1906, Fiv
Azgayin ôrhnerg [National Hymn of Praise], 1891, Fiv
Hayrenyats sirov vaṙvads [Love of the Fatherland], 1891–?4, Fiv
Arewn idjav sari glkhun [The Sun Descended the Mountain], 1891–?6, Fiv
Hayrik, Hayrik, k'o hayrenik' [Father, Father, your Fatherland], 1891–?8, Fiv
Ôn t'ind i khind [March], 1894, Fiv
Azgayin ôrhnerg [National Hymn of Praise], 1895, Fiv
An den Wassern zu Babel / Aṙ gets Babelatsvots [On Babel's Waters], 1896, Fiv
Ay, heva, heva sirts [Tremble, O my Heart], 1899–1901, Fiii
El, el [Song of the Cart-Driver] (Sayli erg), 1899–1901, Fiii
First Suite of Wedding Songs, 1899–1901: 1 Erknits, getnits [The Blessing of the Tree]; 2 Merik djan halal [The Bride's Farewell]; 3 T'agvori mer, dus ari [Turning to the Bridegroom's Mother]; 4 T'agvor barov [The Bridegroom's Blessing]; 5 En dizan [Comical Song]; 6 Aṙnem e'tam im yar [Dance Song]; all Fiii
Gut'an hats em berum [I am Bringing Bread to the Field], 1899–1901, Fiii
Handen gas gegh mtnes [When You Return from the Field], 1899–1901, Fiii
Kaput k'uṙak hedsel em [I Straddled a Blue Stallion], 1899–1901, Fiii
Vay, le, le [Lamentation] (Oghberg), 1899–1901, Fiii
Ay nazani [Oh, Charming One] (1899–1903), Fv
Es Isetsi mi anush dzayn [I heard a Sweet Voice], 1899–1903 & 1911–1914, Fiv
Hay aprink', eghbayrk' [Let us Live as the Armenian, my Brothers], 1899–?1903, Fiv
Kot u kes korek unim [I Have a Measure a Half of Grain] (1899–1903), Fv
Sareri sindzn inch a [What is the grain of the mountain] (1899–1903), Fv
Minchdeṙ husov khayta bnut'yun [Until Nature is Enthralled by Hope], 1899–?1912, Fiv
Aghves gnats mtav djaghats [The Fox Sneaked into the Mill], 1902, Fv
Aghves paṙkets tjambi takin [The Fox Lay Next to the Road], 1902, Fv
Akh, maral djan [Oh dear Maral], 1902, Fv
Andzrewn ekav [Rain Has Come], 1902, Fv
De t'ol ara, gomesh djan [Ho! Pull Away, Dear Oxen! (Song of the Ploughman)], ?1902, Fv
Djan gaṙnuk [Dear lamb], 1902, Fv
Garun (Ur es gali, ay garun) [Where are you Coming, Spring?], 1902, Fii
Gnatsek' tesek' ov ē kerel aydsə [Go, See what has Eaten the Goat], 1902, Fv
Lepo-ho le, le [Dance Song], 1902, Fv
Na lus ēr, inch lus elav [She Was Radiant, What a Light Shone!], 1902, Fv
Alagyaz (sarn ampel a) [Alagyaz is Covered with Clouds], 1902–6, Civ, E, Fii; 2nd setting, 1907–10, Fii; 3rd setting, 1910–11, Fii, G
Dsirani dsaṙ [Apricot Tree], 1902–6, Civ, D, Fii
Kali erg [Song of the Threshing Floor], 1902–6, D, E, Fii
K'eler, tsoler [He Walked Radiant], 1902–6, Civ, E, Fii
Khnki dsaṙ [Incense Tree], 1902–6, Civ, E, Fii; 2nd setting, 1907–10, Fii; 3rd setting, 1910–11, Fii, G
Loṙu gut'anerg [Song of the Lori Ploughman], 1902–6, Cv, D, Fii
Sipana k'adjer [The Brave Men of Sipan], 1902–6, Ciii, D, Fii, G; 2nd setting, 1907–10, Fii, G
Oh inch k'aghtsr ban [Oh, such a Sweet Thing], 1902–?12, Fiv
T'ohg blbul cherge [Don't let the Nightingale Sing], ?1906 Fiv
Andzrewen ekav [Rain Fell], 1906–7, A, Fii, G
Eri, eri djan [Dance Song], 1906–7, A, Fii, G
Garun a (dzun a arel) [It is Spring, Though Snow has Fallen], 1906–7, A, E, Fii, G
Gut'anerg [Song of the Ploughman], 1906–7, A, Fii, G
Im chinari yar [My Beloved is like the Plane Tree], 1906–7, A, Fii, Fv
Lusnakn anush [Tender Moon], 1906–7, A, E, Fii, Fv, G
Sareri vrov (gnats) [He Roamed the Mountains], 1906–7, A, Fii, G
Shogher djan [Dear Shogher], 1906–7, A, E, Fii, G
Aṙavotun bari lus [Morning Welcome], 1907–10, B, E, Fii, G
Gna, gna [Go on, then!], 1907–10, B, E, Fii, G
Hov lini [Blow, Cool breeze], 1907–10, B, Fii
K'aghhan [Song of the Harvest], 1907–10, B, E, Fii, G
Khumar paṙke [Drowsy-Eyed, She Rested], 1907–10, B, E, Fii
Kuzhn aṙa [I Took a Jug], 1907–10, B, E, Fii, G
Lusnak sari takin [The Moon under the Mountain], 1907–10, Cvii, Fiii, G
Nanik-nanik [Lullaby], 1907–10, Fiii
Oror, Adino [Lullaby], 1907–10, B, E, Fii
Saren elav [He Went up the Mountain], 1907–10, B, Fii
Shorora, Anush [Step Lightly, Anush], 1907–10, B, E, Fii
Sona ear [Beloved Sona], 1907–10, B, Fii, Fv
Himi ēl Iṙenk' [Now Let us be Silent], 1908, Fiv
Hoy, Nazan im [Hey, My Dear Nazan], 1908, Cv, Fii, G
Kak'avi erg [Song of the partridge], 1908, Cv, Fii
Mez nor arew dsage [Let the Sun Rise and Refresh Us], 1908, Fiv
Akh, Maral djan [Ah, Dear Maral], 1909, Fii, G
Ekek' tesek' inchn ē keri zinch [What has Eaten What?], 1910–11, Fiii
Es gisher, lusnak gisher [This Night, Moonlit Night], 1910–11, Civ, Fiii
Kaynel es kanchum ēl chēs [You Stand but do not Call], 1910–11, Fiii
Hing eds unem [I have Five She-Goats], 1910–11, Fiii
Mer baghum nṙeni dsaṙ [There is a Pomegranate Tree in our Orchard], 1910–11, Fiii
Zar, zïng [Ritual Dance Song], 1910–11, Fiii
First Suite of Peasant Songs and Dance-songs, 1912: 1 Ampel a kamar-kamar [The Clouds have Formed Arches]; 2 Erewan bagh em arel [A Garden was Planted in Yerevan]; 3 Tun ari [Come home]; 4 Hoṙom-hoṙom [Comic Song]; 5 Arew kayne kesor [When Midday Comes]; all Fiii, 1, Fv, 2, 5, Civ
Kalerg ev saylerg [Threshing and other Songs], 1912, 2nd setting, Fii
Pandsa du Hay miut'yun [Be Proud of the Armenian Union], 1912–?14, Fiv

Second Suite of Wedding Songs, 1912: 1 Mer t'agvorin inch piti [Offering for the Groom]; 2 Gatsek berek'tagvoramer [Presentations to the Groom's Mother]; 3 Orhnyal barerar astvads [Consecration of the Wedding Tree]; 4 Mer t'agvorn er khach [Extolling of the Groom]; 5 En dizan [Comic Song]; 6 Dun halal merik [The Bride's Farewell]; 7 Vard, zk'e chem siri [From the Bride's Songs]; 8 Eghnik [The Fawn]; 9 T'agvori mer, dus ari [Addressing the Bridegroom's Mother]; all Fiii, 4, Fv, 1–5, 9, Cvii
Songs of Girls Fortune-telling, 1912: Erknk'i astgher (Skla, skla) [Stars in the Sky]; Hey, gyul em [I am a Flower]; Dsaghik unem narndji [I have an Orange Flower]; all in Fiii
Ov medsask'anch du lezu [Oh, you Marvellous Language], 1913, Fiv
Chinar es, keřanal mi [You are Tall like a plane tree, do not Bow Down], 1913–14, Fiii, G
Es ařun djur ē gali [Water Flows Down This Stream], 1913–14, Fiii, Fv
Hov arek', sarer jan [Send a Breeze, dear Mountains], 1913–14, Fiii, Fv
Inchu Bingyol mtar [Why did you Come to Bingyol?], 1913–14, Cvi, Fiii, Fv
P'ap'uri [Dance-Song], 1913–14, Cviii, Fiii, Fv
Sandi erg (Dzarvardseds) [Mortar Song], 1913–14, Fiii
Second Suite of Peasant Songs and Dance-songs, 1913–14: 1 Yaris anun Palasan [My Beloved's Name is Palasan]; 2 Aghchi, anund Shushan [The Girl Named Shushan]; 3 Kaleri tjambin ketsa [I Stopped on the Road]; 4 Baghi pat ddum a [Along the Wall Grows a Pumpkin]; 5 Putjur aghdjik sevavor [The Dark-Eyed Little Girl]; 6 Vard a yars [My Beloved is like a Rose]; 7 Hoy im nazani yar [O my Gracious Beloved]; all Fiii, 7, Fv
Third Suite of Peasant Songs and Dance-Songs, 1913–14: 1 Alagyaz acherd [Your Eyes are like Mount Alagyaz]; 2 Sew a chobani shun [The Shepherd has a Black Dog]; 3 Mi yar unem [I have a Sweetheart]; 4 Elek' tesekdus [Go Out and Look]; 5 Ay tgha mer geghedsi [Hey, the Fellow from our Village]; 6 Shakhkr-shukhkr; all Fiii, 6, Cviii
Fourth Suite of Peasant Songs and Dance-Songs, 1913–14: 1 Saren kuga djukht-m ghoch [Two Rams are Coming down from the Mountain]; 2 Ervum em [I'm Burning]; 3 Yar djan, ari [Come, my Beloved]; 4 Esôr urbat'ē [Today it's Friday]; 5 Djur kuga verin saren [From the Mountain Streams Water]; 6 Djaghats mani-mani [The Windmill Turns]; 7 Ařnem ertam ēn sar [I will go up to the Mountain with my Sweetheart]; all Fiii, 1–3, Cviii, 4, Fv, 4–5, 7, Cvi
Fifth Suite of Peasant Songs and Dance-Songs, 1913–14: 1 Kanach art ban eka [She Worked on the Green Cornfield]; 2 Nor em nor madsun merel [I have just Prepared Fresh Yoghurt]; 3 Haray, elli yar [Rise, my Sweetheart]; 4 Lusnak bak a břnel [A Full Moon Came Up]; all Fiii, 2, Fv
Sixth Suite of Peasant Songs and Dance-Songs, 1913–14: 1 Ekan Mokads harsner [Brides came from Moks]; 2 Mer bagh dsař a [There are Trees in the Orchard]; 3 Im chinar yarin [To my Beloved like a Plane Tree]; 4 Hovn anush (Araratyan gisher) [The Breeze is Sweet]; all Fiii, 1, 3–4, Cviii
Susan smbul [The Lily and the Daffodil], 1913–14, Cvi, Fiii

SONGS
for 1v, pf unless otherwise stated

Gishererg [Night Song], 1896–9, Fv
Dsedseřnak [The Swallow], 1898, D, Fi, H
Dards latsek, sari smbul [Weep for my Pain, Hyacinth of the Mountains], 1898–9, Fiv
Akh, Maral djan [Ah, Dear Maral], 1899, D, Fi
Lorik [The Quail], 1899, Fv
Zulo [Zulo], 1899, Fv
Aygepan, inch es anum [Gardener, whatever You Do], ?1899–1903, Fv
Vay ēn azgin [Alas, that Nation] (1899–1903), Fv
Bam, p'orotan [Boom goes the thunder], 1900–?07, Fiv
Hayastan [Armenia], 1900–?11, Fiv
Dzayn tur, ov dsovak [Speak Out, Little Sea], 1901, Fiv
Matnik'ə matovs chēr [The Ring was not my Size], 1901, Fv
K'un eghir palas [Sleep, my Child], 1901–2, Fv
Siro dsagumn urkits ē [From Whence comes Love's Blossom], 1901–5, Fv
Al dzin naln inch kane [What Good is a Horseshoe], 1905, Fv
Dsaghik asem [I Will Tell Flowers], 1905, Fv
Mani asem [I Will Tell Fortunes], 1905, Fv
Maron a kayne [There Stands Maro], 1905, Fv
Orôr [Lullaby], 1905, Cii, D, Fi
Antuni [Song of the Homeless], 1905–6, A, D, Fi, H
Chinar es, keřanal mi [You Are Tall like a Plane Tree, do not Bow Down], 1905–6, Cii, D, Fi, H
Dsirani dsař [Apricot Tree], 1905–6, Civ, D, Fi, H
Erkink'n ampel ē [The Sky is Cloudy], 1905–6, A, D, Fi, H
Garun a, dzun a arel [It is Spring, but Snow has Fallen], 1905–6, A, D, Fi, H
Habrban, S, T, pf, 1905–6, A, D, Fi, H
Hov arek', srer djan [Send a Breeze, dear Mountains], 1905–6, A, D, Fi, H
Garun [Spring], 1907, Cii, D, Fi
Chem křna khagha [I Cannot Dance], 1907–8, Civ, D, Fi, H
Kak'avi erg [Song of the Partridge], 1908, Cv, Fi, H
Alagyaz (bardzr sarin) [On High Mount Alagyaz], 1908–11, B, D, Fi
Alagyaz (sarn ampel a) [Alagyaz is Covered with Clouds], 1908–11, B, D, Fi, H
Es ařun djur a gali [Water Flows Down This Stream], 1908–11, B, D, Fi, H
Es saren kugayi [I Returned from the Mountain], 1908–11, B, D, Fi
Hoy, Nazan [Oh, Nazan], 1908–11, B, D, Fi, H
Kanche, křunk [Crane, Sing!], 1908–11, B, D, Fi
K'ele, k'ele [March, March], 1908–11, B, D, Fi, H
K'eler, tsoler [He Walked, Radiant], 1908–11, B, D, Fi, H
Khnki dsař [Incense Tree], 1908–11, B, D, Fi, H
Kuzhn ařa [I took a Jug], 1908–11, B, D, Fi, H
Sar, sar [Mountains, Mountains], 1908–11, B, D, Fi
Zinch u zinch [What, oh What], 1908–11, B, D, Fi
Al aylukhs [My Scarlet Kerchief], S, T, pf, 1908–11, B, D, Fi, H
Ampel a kamar-kamar [The Clouds Formed Arches], 1911, Cvii, Fi
Ervum em [I'm Burning], 1911, Civ, D, Fi
Es aghchik em [I am a Girl], 1911, Cvii, Fi
Es gisher, lusnak gisher [This Night, Moonlit Night], 1911, Fi
Gut'an hats em berum [I am Bringing Bread to the Field], 1911, Cvii, Fi
Křunk [The crane], 1911, Civ, D, Fi, H
Lusnak sari takin [The Moon Behind the Mountain], 1911, Cvii, Fi, H
Oghberg [Mournful Song], 1911, Cvii, Fi
Tun ari [Come Home], 1911, Cvii, Fi, H
Djur kuga verin saren [Water Streams Down the Mountain], 1912, Fi
Shogher djan [Dear Shogher], 1912, Fi, H
Mokads Mirza [The Prince of Mok], 1914, Cvii, Fi, H
Le, le yaman [Love Song], Fi
Shakhkr, shukhkr, Fi

PIANO

Dances: Erangi, Unabi, Marali, Shushiki, Et-arach, Shoror, Ci
Unpubd dances: Manushaki, Shoror

FOLKSONG COLLECTIONS

Shar Akna zhoghovrdakan ergeri [Series of Akn folksongs] (Vagharshapat, 1895) [Armenian notation] ed., with M. Abeghyan: Hazar u mi khagh [1001 khagher] (Vagharshapat, 1903–5, 2/1969) [texts only]
K'rdakan eghanakner [Kurdish melodies] (Moscow, 1904)
Zhoghovrdakan erger [Folksongs] (Yerevan, 1931)
ed., with M. Abeghyan: Zhoghovrdakan khaghikner [Little folksongs] (Yerevan, 1940) [texts only]
Hay zhoghovrdakan erger ev parerger [Armenian folksongs and dances] (Yerevan, 1950)

WRITINGS

Hodvadsner ev usumnasirut'yunner [Articles and studies] (Yerevan, 1941) [16 articles on Armenian secular and sacred music and on European composers]
Grakan Nshkhark' Komitas Vardapeti Beghoun Grch'en [Komitas Vardapet's literary heritage], ed. A. Oghlougian (Montreal, 1994) [Articles on Armenian secular and sacred music and on European composers. Also includes updated bibliography, newspaper and review articles of his time on his activities] trans. E. Gulbekian: Armenian Sacred and Folk Music (Richmond, 1998) [with introduction by V. Nersessian]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Azatian: Komitas (Constantinople, 1931) [in Armenian]
S. Berberian: Komitas vardapet (Bucharest, 1936; Eng. trans., 1969) [in Armenian]
G. Daian: Komitas vardapet (Venice, 1936) [in Armenian]

R. At′ aian: 'Printsip garmonizatsii narodnoy pesni u Komitasa' [Komitas's principle of folksong harmonization], Izvestiya Akademii Nauk Armenii, ix (1949)
A. Shahverdian: Komitas i armyanskaya muzïkal′naya kul′tura (Yerevan, 1956)
R. At′ aian: 'R.A. Komitas: sobiratel′ armyanskoy narodnoy pesni' [Komitas as collector of Armenian folksong], VII Mezhdunarodnïy kongress antropologicheskikh i ètnograficheskikh nauk: Moscow 1964, 334
H. Begian: Gomidas Vartabed: his Life and Importance to Armenian Music (diss., U. of Michigan, 1964)
R. At′ aian and others: Komitasakan (Yerevan, 1/1969, 2/1981) [in Armenian]
G. Geodakian: Komitas (Yerevan, 1969) [in Russ.]
S. Poladian: 'Komitas Vardapet and his Contribution to Ethnomusicology', EthM, xvi (1972), 82–97
V. Vagramian: Representative Secular Choral Works of Gomidas: an Analytical Study and Evaluation of his Musical Style (diss., U. of Miami, 1973)
R. T'erlemezian: Komitas (Yerevan, 1992) [in Armenian]
N. T'ahmizian: Komitase ew Hay zhoghovurdi erazheshtakan zharange [Komitas and the musical heritage of the Armenians] (Pasadena, 1994)

ROBERT AT′ AYAN/ARAM KEROVPIAN (text, bibliography), ARMINEH GRIGORIAN (work-list)

Komlós, Katalin (b Budapest, 1 Feb 1945). Hungarian musicologist and fortepianist. She took a diploma in music history at the Liszt Academy of Music in Budapest, and the doctorate at Cornell University in 1986, with a dissertation on the Viennese keyboard trio in the 1780s. She was also awarded a doctorate from the Hungarian Academy of Sciences in 1998. She joined the staff of the Liszt Academy of Music in 1973. As well as teaching, she has given fortepiano recitals and chamber concerts throughout Hungary, Europe and the USA. The history, literature and repertory of the fortepiano in the 18th century are central to her career, both as a scholar and as a performer.

WRITINGS

A klasszikus stílus (Budapest, 1977) [trans. of C. Rosen: The Classical Style (London and New York, 1971)]
'Haydn's Keyboard Trios Hob.XV:5–17: Interaction between Texture and Form', SMH, xxviii (1986), 351–400
The Viennese Keyboard Trio in the 1780s: Studies in Texture and Instrumentation (diss., Cornell U., 1986)
'The Viennese Keyboard Trio in the 1780s: Sociological Background and Contemporary Reception', ML, lxviii (1987), 222–34
'On the New Fortepiano in Contemporary German Musical Writings', Harpsichord and Fortepiano Magazine, iv (1985–9), 134–9
'Mozart and Clementi: a Piano Competition and its Interpretation', Historical Performance, ii (1989), 3–9
'The Function of the Cello in the Pre-Beethovenian Viennese Keyboard Trio', Studies in Music, xxiv (1990), 27–46
'"Veränderte Reprise": Aspects of an Idea', MR, li (1990), 262–7
'"Ich praeludirte und spielte Variazionen": Mozart the Fortepianist', Perspectives on Mozart Performance, ed. R.L. Todd and P. Williams (Cambridge, 1991), 27–54
'Fantasia and Sonata: K.475/457 in Contemporary Context', MJb 1991, 816–23
'Muzikale verwijzingen in Goethes "Werther"', Tijdschrift voor oude muziek, x (1995), 5–8
Fortepianos and their Music: Germany, Austria, and England, 1760–1800 (Oxford, 1995)

AGNES GÁDOR

Komma, Karl Michael (b Asch [now Aš], Bohemia, 24 Dec 1913). German musicologist and composer. From 1932 to 1934 he studied musicology with Becking at the German University in Prague and composition with Fidelio Finke at the German Academy of Music; he also studied the piano and conducting. At Heidelberg University (1934) he studied musicology with Besseler, and took the doctorate in 1936 with a dissertation on Johann Zach. Writing in the heady political climate prior to the German annexation of the Sudetenland, Komma tried to show in his dissertation the strong German musical presence in 18th-century Bohemia. He then became an assistant lecturer in the musicology department and from 1940 to 1945 he was head of the music school at Reichenberg (now Liberec), Bohemia, during which time it became the State Music School. After the war he settled at Wallerstein in Bavaria where he had a successful concert career as an accompanist. He became a lecturer at the Stuttgart Musikhochschule in 1954, and was professor of music history and composition there from 1960. He was the founder and co-editor of the Zeitschrift für Musiktheorie (1967). Komma specialized in the musical history of Bohemia, Baroque and pre-classical music, Hölderlin and settings of his poetry, and musical iconography. His later compositions include a requiem (1969), Drei Gesänge nach F. Hölderlin (1970), Pfingstdiptychon for organ (1972), Ballade for percussion (1972) and Tre pezzi tipici 1971/73 for piano.

WRITINGS

Johann Zach und die tschechischen Musiker in deutschen Umbruch des 18. Jahrhunderts (diss., U. of Heidelberg, 1936; Kassel, 1938)
'Hölderlin und die Musik', Hölderlin-Jb 1953, 106–18; see also ibid., 1955–6, 201–18 and 1969–70, 137–41
'Sprachmelodie und Musikalität der Heimatvertriebenen aus Böhmen und Mähren', Zeitschrift für Ostforschung, iv (1955), 66–83
Das böhmische Musikantentum (Kassel, 1960)
Musikgeschichte in Bildern (Stuttgart, 1961)
'Die Pentatonik in Antonín Dvořáks Werk', Musik des Ostens, i (1962), 63–75
'Das "Scherzo" der 2. Symphonie von J. Brahms: eine melodisch-rhythmische Analyse', Festschrift für Walter Wiora, ed. L. Finscher and C.H. Mahling (Kassel, 1967), 448–57
'Franz Schuberts Klaviersonate a-moll op.posth. 164', Zeitschrift für Musiktheorie, iii/2 (1972), 2–14
Klanggebilde – Bildanklage: Aufsätze und Reden (Frankfurt, 1991)
'"Gib mir deine Hand": zu Franz Schuberts Musik vom Tode', International Journal of Musicology, iii (1994), 133–49

EDITIONS

Gruppenkonzerte der Bachzeit, EDM, 1st ser., xi (1938/R)
Lieder und Gesänge nach Dichtungen von Friedrich Hölderlin (Tübingen, 1967)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Deppert and R. Gerlach, eds.: Musik als Schöpfung: Festschrift Karl Michael Komma zum 75. Geburtstag (Laaber, 1989) [incl. list of pubns to 1988]

HANS HEINRICH EGGEBRECHT/PAMELA M. POTTER

Komorous, Rudolf (b Prague, 8 Dec 1931). Canadian composer of Czech birth. He studied the bassoon at the Prague Conservatory (1946–52) and at the Prague Academy of Musical Arts, where he also studied composition with Pavel Bořkovec (1952–9). During the latter period he was the principal bassoonist of the Prague Opera orchestra while still a student. In 1957 he won the Concours internationale d'exécution musicale at Geneva. This award led to an appointment at the Beijing Conservatory (1959–61) where he taught the bassoon and chamber music. Upon his return to Prague he co-founded the contemporary music ensemble Musica Viva Pragensis. In 1969 he emigrated to Canada, although he taught in the USA for two years before being appointed professor of composition at the University of Victoria, British Columbia, where he also served as director. From 1989 until his retirement in 1996 he was director of the School for the Contemporary Arts at Simon Fraser University in Burnaby, British Columbia.

Komorous's involvement with the Czech avant garde in the 1950s and 60s led to a close association with some painters and sculptors. This circle, known as the Smidra group, was strongly influenced by Dada and surrealism; their artistic motto was the 'aesthetic of the wonderful', through which common materials could be transformed into things sublime, mysterious or magical. In response to these early influences, Komorous's music often displays a marked juxtaposition of ideas. Moments of seriousness or extreme tenderness, waltz tunes and boogie woogies are placed side by side. A careful and deliberate collage of seemingly disparate materials is characteristic of much of his music.

His later music (from the early 1980s onward) appears at first to be more conservative than his earlier style. This conservative quality is somewhat of a misconception, however; even though the basic materials may sound familiar, the context is totally unpredictable, so that even common chords often sound otherworldly. In other works he pays homage to the past more directly, through the use of quotation. The folk tune 'She's Like the Swallow' appears in his Sinfony no.2 ('Canadian') (1990) and Hoagy Carmichael's 'Stardust' in his Sinfony no.1 (1988).

An interest in Eastern philosophy and art has influenced several of Komorous's more recent works, among them Twenty-Three Poems about Horses (1978), based on the poetry of Li-Ho, the opera No no miya (1988) which uses elements of traditional noh theatre and the Li Ch'ing Chao Madrigals (1985). While the texts are translations or adaptations of Eastern poets, the music remains Western in its conception. The influence of the East however does suggest itself in the simple elegance of the melodic lines and the economy and purity of the harmony and texture.

WORKS

(selective list)

Stage: Lady Blancarosa, S, A, actor, unacc., 1966, Buffalo, NY, 28 Jan 1970; No no miya (chbr op, R. Komorous after Zeami Motokiyo), S, Bar, nar, dancer, small chorus, chbr ens, 1988, Vancouver, 30 Sept 1988

Orch: Bare and Dainty, chbr orch, 1970; Rossi, chbr orch, 1974, rev. 1975; Serenade, str, 1982; Sinfony no.1 'Stardust', 1988; Demure Charm, bn, fl, str orch, 1990; Sinfony no.2 'Canadian', 1990; Chbr Conc., bn, orch, 1995; Sinfony no.3 'Ex C', str orch, 1995; Sinfony no.4 'The Fortune Teller', 1997

Vocal: An Anna Blume Eve Blossom has Wheels (K. Schwitters), mixed chorus, 1971; Wang Wei Songs (Wang Wei, trans. G.W. Robinson), Bar, pf, 1974–84; 23 Poems about Horses (Li Ho, trans. J.D. Frodsham), nar, fl, ob, cl, bn, hn, vn, va, vc, db, 1978, rev. 1985; Vermilion Dust (Li Shang Yin, trans. J. Liu), Bar, mixed chorus, chbr orch, 1980, rev. 1984; Li Ch'ing Chao Madrigals (Li Ch'ing Chao, trans. C.H. Kwock and V. McHugh), mixed chbr chorus, 1985

Chbr and solo inst: Sladká královna [The Sweet Queen], melodica, b mouth-harmonica, pf, b drum, 1962; Le trille du diable, pf, 1964; Olympia, flexatone, melodica, b mouth-harmonica, nightingale, bells, ratchet, 1964; Chanson, va, gui, clock spiral, 1965; Mignon, 4 str insts, 1965; York, fl, ob/tpt, bn, triangle, pf, mand, db, 1967; Chmurný půvab [The Gloomy Grace], fl, ob, cl, bn, hn, tpt, trbn, pf, vn, va, vc, nightingale, cowbell, 1968; Untitled 1–6, various insts, 1973–6; Preludes, 13 early insts, 1974; Fumon Manga, fl, ob, cl, bn, hn, 1981, rev. 1984, 1985, 1992; The Necklace of Clear Understanding, baroque fl, 1986; Dame's Rocket, cl, cornet, vib, mar, pf, db, 1991; Hermione Dreaming, baroque chbr ens, 1992; The Seven Sides of Maxine's Silver Die, pf, fl, ob, cl, bn, hn, vn, va, vc, db, 1998

Elec: The Tomb of Malevich, 1965; Anatomy of Melancholy, 1974; The Grand Chopper, 1974; Listening to Rain, 1986

Principal publishers: Universal, E.C. Kerby

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Butterfield: 'Listening to Rain', The Idler [Toronto], xix (1988), 31–6

R. Chatelin: 'Rudolf Komorous' Melodic Journeys', Canadian Composer, no.240 (1989), 28–31, 44

R. Everett-Green: 'Disturbing the Piece', Globe and Mail [Toronto] (3 Nov 1990)

CAMILLO SCHOENBAUM/JOAN BACKUS

Komorowski, Ignacy Marceli (b Warsaw, 13 Jan 1824; d Warsaw, 14 Oct 1857). Polish composer. He studied the piano with W. Szanior, the violin with Stefan Bułakowski and J. Hornziel and the cello with Józef Szabliński and A. Herman. He was private music teacher to the Kretkowski family at Kamienna in the Kujawy district (1848–50), after which he returned to Warsaw, where he was cellist in the Wielki Theatre orchestra; at the same time he studied harmony and counterpoint with August Freyer and composition with Karol Kurpiníski. In November 1856 he went to Italy for health reasons and lived for some time in Florence. At the beginning of July 1857 he returned via Paris and Ems to Warsaw, where he died of tuberculosis. Komorowski was known above all as a composer of songs, a genre in which his lyrical talent was fully evident; the most popular was Kalina to words by T. Lenartowicz (1846). In many of his songs he introduced Polish folkdance rhythms, for example the polonaise, mazurka and krakowiak. He also composed patriotic songs, sacred music (e.g. Mass and Te Deum, chorus, orch, lost) and several piano miniatures.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SMP

J. Gabryś: Twó rczość liryczna I. Komorowskiego [Komorowski's lyrical output] (diss., U. of Kraków, 1955)

J. Prosnak: 'Ignacy Komorowski: w setną rocznicę śmierci' [Komorowski at the centenary of his death], Ruch muzyczny, i/12 (1957), 20–24

JERZY MORAWSKI

Komorzynski, Egon, Ritter von (b Vienna, 7 May 1878; d Vienna, 16 March 1963). Austrian musicologist. He studied musicology and German philology, graduating from the University of Vienna in 1900. From 1904 until 1934 he was professor of German language and literature at the Vienna Handelsakademie, and for 40 years music critic of the Österreichische Volkszeitung. The great majority of his published writings are concerned with Mozart, and especially with Die Zauberflöte. His studies of Emanuel Schikaneder, which contain the essence of his long life's work, demonstrated against current opinion Schikaneder's authorship, and the nature and worth of the Zauberflöte libretto. He also published many journal articles on Mozart, and on Weber and Wagner. Komorzynski's greatest virtue was his tireless search for new facts, though his writings are not free from errors.

WRITINGS

Emanuel Schikaneder: ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des deutschen Theaters (Berlin, 1901, 2/1951)

'Lortzings "Waffenschmied" und seine Tradition', Euphorion, viii (1901), 340–50

'Mozarts Messen', Die Musik, iv/1 (1904–5), 49–55

Mozarts Kunst der Instrumentation (Stuttgart, 1906)

Mozart: Sendung und Schicksal eines deutschen Künstlers (Berlin, 1941, 2/1955)

'Die Vorfahren der Meistersinger von Nürnberg', 'Vorläufer des "Freischütz"', Die Musik, xxxiv (1941–2), 101–4, 224–6

Der Vater der Zauberflöte: Emanuel Schikaneders Leben (Vienna, 1948)

'Sänger und Orchester des Freihaustheaters', MJb 1951, 138–50

'Das Urbild der Zauberflöte', MJb 1952, 101–9
'Mozart und Marie Therese Paradis', MJb 1952, 110–16
'Zauberflöte und Oberon', MJb 1953, 150–61
'Die Zauberflöte und Dschinnistan', MJb 1954, 177
'Johann Baptist Henneberg, Schikaneders Kapellmeister (1768–1822)', MJb 1955, 243–5
'Ein Wiener Musikkritiker des Vormärz, Dr. Alfred Julius Becher, 1803–1848', Jb der Grillparzer-Gesellschaft, 3rd ser., ii (1956), 123–59

PETER BRANSCOMBE

Kōmos [comus]. In Greek and Roman antiquity, a festive procession through the streets (e.g. in honour of a god or a victor, or to the house of a friend) accompanied by music, carousing and other merrymaking. Songs were sung, such as the ENCOMIUM, which was originally the song of praise to escort a victor home. Some official kōmoi took place in daylight; private kōmoi might occur at night, following a SYMPOSIUM. A famous depiction of a kōmos is that of the Brygos cup at Würzburg (see illustration). References to a kōmos appear in The Shield of Heracles (dating from the late 6th century BCE), and the kōmos may have developed from the increasingly important cult of Dionysus. Singers in the kōmos were called kōmōidoi, a term that later came to be applied to actors, singers and poets of comic lyrics, to the comic chorus as a whole, or to the performance itself. The kōmos continued until late antiquity; attacked by St Paul (Romans xiii.13, Galatians v.21), it declined under the influence of the Church.

In late antiquity the name 'Comus' was also given to the leader of a band of revellers, and in this guise is well known through A Maske presented at Ludlow Castle, 1634 (also known as Comus) by Milton, which has been set to music several times (Henry Lawes, 1634; Arne, 1737–8; Hugh Wood, Scenes from Comus, 1965).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Lamer: 'Komos', Paulys Real-Encyclopädie der classischen Altertumswissenschaft, xi/2 (Stuttgart, 1922), 1286–1304
A. Pickard-Cambridge: Dithyramb, Tragedy and Comedy (Oxford, 1927, rev. 2/1962 by T.B.L. Webster), 33
A. Pickard-Cambridge: The Dramatic Festivals of Athens (Oxford, 1953, rev. 2/1968 by J. Gould and D.M. Lewis), 279–305
M. Heath: 'Receiving the kōmos: the Context and Performance of Epinician', American Journal of Philology, cix (1988), 180–95
K.A. Morgan: 'Pindar the Professional and the Rhetoric of the kōmos', Classical Philology, lxxxviii (1993), 1–15

GEOFFREY CHEW/THOMAS J. MATHIESEN

Komponium. (Ger.) See COMPONIUM.

Kŏmun'go (from kŏmun: 'black'; go: 'zither'). Korean six-string, fretted, plucked long zither . In Chinese-character texts it is referred to as hyŏn'gŭm. The kŏmun'go is about 150 cm long (though somewhat smaller instruments exist for folk music) and its slightly tapering width is 20 cm at the widest point. The body is made of two main pieces, the slightly curved front of paulownia wood and the back of chestnut; the interior is hollow. Six strings of twisted silk run from a broad, curved bridge on the performer's right to moorings looped through holes at the far end; reserve string is kept in coils near the moorings. Glued perpendicular to the body are 16 thin wooden frets, nearly rectangular in shape and ranging in height from about 6 cm down to only 6 mm. The frets are only wide enough to lie under the second, third and fourth strings, the tallest fret acting as a bridge which suspends these three strings just above the remaining frets. The first, fifth and sixth strings are held up with small movable wooden bridges ('wild-goose feet'). The strings are plucked with a wooden plectrum (sultae), and the face of the instrument is protected in the plucking area by a leather cover.

The kŏmun'go has several tunings, a typical one for court music being E♭–A♭–D♭–B♭–B♭–B♭′. Its compass is quite wide, from the open B♭′ up to b♭′ on the 16th fret. The instrument is played propped slightly up on the edge and angled away from the performer so that the bottom lies against the left knee and the right end is supported on his right knee; as a result, only a single corner rests on the floor (see illustration). The performer plucks the string, both downwards and upwards, with a plectrum held in the right hand between forefinger and middle finger, being secured by thumb and forefinger. The left hand is positioned by keeping the ring finger pressed on the second string (normally on the fourth or seventh fret) and the middle finger on the third; the forefinger and thumb move about freely, the melody normally being played on the second and third strings. Shading and vibrato are obtained by pressing the strings laterally along the top of the frets.

Kōmos: detail from an Attic Red-figure cup by the Brygos Painter, c480 BCE (Martin von Wagner-Museum, University of Würzburg)

Kŏmun'go (six-string zither): (a) playing position; (b) detail from a tomb painting, c6th century CE, at Tonggou, Jilin Province, China

The sound of the kŏmun'go is rather weak, partly as a result of low string tension, and there are intrusive sounds from the performing techniques, such as the plectrum striking the leather guard or the rubbing of wound strings against the frets. But the kŏmun'go is considered a noble and masculine instrument, as distinct from the more feminine KAYAGŬM, and its player is normally the most influential member of an ensemble.

Fretted long zithers, apparently forerunners of the kŏmun'go, appear in a number of tomb paintings of the Koguryŏ period (37 BCE–668 CE; see illustration). The richness of the tomb iconography, which extends westward into China, has led to some controversy as to whether the drawings depict proto-kŏmun'go or ancient Chinese wo-konghou ('horizontal harps').

The kŏmun'go was one of the three main string instruments, together with the kayagŭm and pip'a, during the Three Kingdoms (57 BCE–668 CE). A legend in the Samguk sagi ('History of the Three Kingdoms', 1145) recounts how a man named Wang Sanak of Koguryŏ modified a Chinese qin and made a new instrument; when he played it black cranes flew in and danced, so he named the instrument hyŏnkakkŭm ('black crane zither'), the name later being shortened to hyŏn'gŭm ('black zither') or, in pure Korean, kŏmun'go.

The kŏmun'go has a long and continuous performing tradition. The Akhak kwebŏm (1493) devotes to it the longest single instrumental entry, with detailed modal and technical information, and the descriptions apply to the modern instrument in nearly every detail. At about the turn of the 16th century an efficient and precise tablature notation system (hapchabo) was devised, based in part on Chinese qin tablature, and numerous volumes in this notation survive from 1572 onwards.

The kŏmun'go is used in many court and folk ensembles, as well as in the solo virtuoso genre sanjo, in which it is particularly effective.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Sŏng Hyŏn, ed.: Akhak kwebŏm [Guide to the study of music] (Seoul, 1493/R), 7.13*b*–21*a*

Chang Sahun: Han'guk akki taegwan [Korean musical instruments] (Seoul, 1969), 64–75

Yi Hyegu: Han'guk ŭmak nonch'ong [Essays on Korean music] (Seoul, 1976), 147–63

Song Bang-song: The Sanjo Tradition of Korean Kŏmun'go Music (Seoul, 1986)

K. Howard: Korean Musical Instruments: a Practical Guide (Seoul, 1988), 191–213

ROBERT C. PROVINE

Komzák, Karel (i) (b Netěchovice, nr České Budějovice, 4 Nov 1823; d Netěchovice, 19 March 1893). Czech conductor, bandmaster and composer, father of KAREL KOMZÁK (ii). He spent his youth in Koloděje, Weittertschlag and Český Krumlov, then studied at the Prague Organ School (1839–40) before completing a teacher's course at the College of St Jindřich in Prague (1841–2), during which time he was supported by Tomášek. He became a teacher and organist in Koloděje (1842–7), and later a clerk and organist at an institute for the mentally insane in Prague and organist at the church of St Kateřina (1847–66). At the same time he directed a rifle corps band (1847–65). Komzák achieved his greatest fame through the orchestra which he founded and conducted in Prague (1854–65), and in which Dvořák played viola. After playing for the Prague Provisional Theatre from 1862, Komzák's orchestra finally became the official theatre orchestra (1865). He then became a military bandmaster, giving concerts throughout the Austrian Empire.

Komzák was fiercely nationalistic and displayed this in his use of Czech folk music and in his choice of song titles. Partly as a result of the government's forbidding him from playing Czech songs, he retired in 1882, only to return shortly thereafter to Austrian army service for another six years. He composed over 200 dances, marches, suites and fantasies on Czech folk songs including Zvuky česke (Czech Sounds) and Čech a němec (The Czech and the German).

WORKS
(selective list)

some works published in Prague (1857–71)

pfr – polka française
Ma – Marsch

Polkas: Rabin Ličějicer, op.8; Má otčina (Mein Heimatland; Herzblume), pfr, op.20; Nusler-Polka, pfr, op.22; To-To!, pfr, op.23; An die Heimat (Mein Heimat; Na Vlast); Arkadien, polka-mazurka; Auf Wiedersehen; Casino-Polka; Damen-Corso, pfr; Elektrisch, pfr; Faschingspost (Masopustní pošta), pfr; Freie Wahl, polka tremblante; Hamburger, pfr; Libuša; Mai, pfr; Polka, E; Rosetten-Polka; Veteránská, pfr; Wintergarten, pfr; Zum Tanz, pfr

Marches: 88er Regiments-Ma; Abschieds-Ma; An Prag Ma; Auf Wiedersehen (Na shledanou); Avantgarde Ma; Feldzeugmeister 'von Kuhn' (Warfare Masters); Gruss an die Heimat; Horrak Ma; Nach Prag; Schüzenfest-Ma; Soldaten-Abschied Ma; Urlauber-Ma

Quadrilles: Camalien-Quadrille, op.18; Quadrille à la cour sur des airs bohèmes (Čtverylka z českých národních písní [Quadrille on Czech folk songs]), op.21; Kovařská (Shmiede-Quadrille

[The Blacksmith Quadrille]); Sousedská Quadrilla na české národní písně [Sousedská Quadrille on a Czech folksong]
Galops: Narrenabend, op.24; Angélique; Laufschritt
Waltzes: Amalien-Walzer (1884); Moldauwellen (Vltaván)

Principal publishers: Buchholz & Diebel; Ad. Christoph & W. Kuhé; Julius Chmel; J. Hoffman; V. Kratochwill; Rebay & Robitschek; C.F.W. Siegel; Em. Starý; Wernthal

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS
Obituary, Dalibor, xv (1893), 171
F. Pilát: 'Vzpomínka na Karla Komzáka' [A memoir of Komzák], Hudební zpravodaj, iii/9 (1934), 12
A. Lamb: 'The Viennese Contemporaries: Karl Komzák', Česká muzika [Magazine of the František Kmoch Czech Bands Society], i (Ashby-de-la-Zouch, 1973–4), 41, 52
G. Foeller and W. Probst: Bands of the Austro-Hungarian Empire (Hudson, IL, 1987)
M. Schönherr: Karl Komzák: Vater, Sohn, Enkel: ein Beitrag zur Rezeptionsgeschichte der oesterreichischen Popularmusik (Vienna, 1989)
W. Rehrig: 'Komzák II, Karel', The Heritage Encyclopedia of Band Music: Composers and their Music, ed. P.E. Bierley (Westerville, OH, 1991)

PAUL CHRISTIANSEN

Komzák, Karel (ii) (b Prague, 8 Nov 1850; d Baden, nr Vienna, 23 April 1905). Czech composer and bandmaster, son of KAREL KOMZÁK (i). He was taught first by his father and then attended the Prague Conservatory (1861–7), studying violin with Mildner and Bennewitz. He played in his father's orchestra, became a theatre conductor in Linz in 1867, and two years later joined the Austrian 11th Infantry Regiment Band. In 1871 he became the bandmaster of the Seventh Infantry Regiment in Innsbruck as well as conductor of the local Liedertafel. He stayed the longest in Vienna (from 1884) and in 1893 went to Baden, where he conducted the spa orchestra. In 1904 he directed his Vienna Farben Orchestra at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in St Louis, USA. He probably composed the St Louis Marsch and March America especially for that occasion.

Like his father, he introduced Czech folksongs into his band arrangements, thereby incurring the hostility of the German press. Despite the use of folksongs in his music, however, Komzák did not share his father's strong nationalist inclinations. He was a prolific composer, and his compositions include dances (81 polkas, 66 marches, 21 waltzes), songs and suites, and the operetta, Edelweiss, first performed at the Stadttheater in Salzburg in 1891. Many of his dance compositions were written in collaboration with his father, and for each genre most are comparable in form and force to those of his contemporaries. He died in 1905, run over by a train.

Komzák's son, Karel Komzák (iii) (1878–1924) also became a composer and bandmaster, contrary to his father's wishes. His works, consisting of an estimated 360 compositions few of which were ever published, are now mostly unknown.

WORKS
(selective list)
Ma – Marsch

Stage: Edelweiss (operetta), Salzburg, Stadt, 28 Nov 1891
Marches: Nieke Ma, op.103; Thun-Hohenstein Ma, op.104; Ta-Ra-Ra-Boom-De-Ra Ma, op.109; Für Kaiser und Vaterland Ma, op.125; Vindobona Ma, op.127; Wassergigerl Ma, op.128; Erherzog-Albrect-Ma, op.136 (1887); Habts a Schneid Ma, op.143 (1887); König-Ma, op.147 (1887); Bavaria Ma, op.151; Wiener Leider-Ma, op.171 (1890); Echtex Wiener Blut Ma, op.189; Prager Jubiläums-Ma (1891); Schluter a Schluter Ma, op.194 (1892); Guldenzettels Abschied Ma, op.203; Lustiges ma potpourri, op.220; Bruder Martin Ma, op.221; Caraffa Ma mit Benutzug des Caraffa Fanfare von 1672, op.243 (1897); Erherzog-Rainer-Ma, op.261; Kaiser-Josef-Ma, op.265 (1905); March America (1905); St Louis Ma (1905); The Francis Ma (1905); Andreas Hofer Ma, op.279; 84er Regiments-Ma; Barataria-Ma; Major General Ma; Oberst-König-Ma; Oberst-von-Stingl-Ma; Toros Ma; Weana Chic n Weana Schan Ma; Windisch-Graetz Ma; Youp-La Ma
Waltzes: In Sturm und Drang, op.135a (1887); Fidles Wien, op.190 (1894); Neues Leben, op.210 (1893); An der schönen grünen Narenta, op.227 (1896); Mein Baden, op.228 (1896); Elisabeth-walzer im spanischen Style, op.239 (1897); Bad'ner Madl'n, op.257 (1898); In die weite Welt, op.289 (1903); Maienzauber, op.306 (1908); In the Highland Freedom Dwells; Love and Life in Vienna
Polkas: Adonis Liebestod, polka française, op.139; München-Wien, ein Sinn, polka française, op.154; D'Helenthaler, polka schnell, op.273
Galops: En Carrière Galop, op.141; Sturm Galop, op.156 (1885)

Principal publishers: Josef Blaha; Bosworth & Co; Julius Chmel; August Cranz; P. Fischer; Hawkes & Son; V. Kratochwill; Louis Oertel; Rebay & Robitschek; Em. Starý

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS
M. Schönherr: Karl Komzák: Vater, Sohn, Enkel: ein Beitrag zur Rezeptionsgeschichte der österreichischen Popularmusik (Vienna, 1989)
W. Rehrig: 'Komzák II, Karel', The Heritage Encyclopedia of Band Music, ed. P.E. Bierley (Westerville, OH, 1991)

PAUL CHRISTIANSEN

Kon, Yuzef(-Al'bert Geymanovich) (b Kraków, 17 March 1920; d Petrozavodsk, 12 Nov 1996). Russian musicologist of Polish birth. After first studying the piano, he began his musical education in the humanities faculty at Warsaw University (1938–9), continuing at the conservatories of L'viv (1940–41) and Leningrad (evacuated to Tashkent during World War II, 1944–8). His teachers included Yu. Khominsky, Sofiya Lissa, A. Khïbinsky and Yu.N. Tyulin. He taught and was head of the theory department at the Tashkent Conservatory (1947–63) and also at the conservatories of Novosibirsk (1963–70) and Petrozavodsk (1970–96). After gaining permission for entry into Leningrad, he taught at the Leningrad Conservatory (1967–9). He was made an Honoured Artist of Karelia in 1980 and was awarded the B.V. Asaf'yev Prize in 1990.

Kon has studied the musical language in terms of theory and technology, and semiotics, using as a basis for his work an analogy between musical and verbal language. His study of music is distinguished by his culturally logical approach and application of concepts and methodologies drawn from a wide variety of disciplines, including linguistics, philosophy, psychology and mathematics; it is at the intersection of musicology and other fields of research that his most original ideas have arisen. His doctoral dissertation (1987) explored the role of choice and combinaton principles as foundations of order and logic in 20th-century tonal music. He introduced the concepts of modal depth as a characteristic of the degree of complexity of its organization and vertical density as a regulator of dynamic processes in atonal music. Using probability statistics in his analysis of rhythm, he discovered the means of dynamic creation of form in irregular metric conditions. He has analysed the original ideas in modern musical theory and musical semiotics of Asaf'yev, Boulez, Hindemith and Xenakis, among others and, by considering music as a specific manifestation of human culture in general, has revealed some unexpected parallels and analogies in the work of major composers and practitioners of other arts and sciences (for example, Stravinsky and the poet Khlebnikov). Kon has studied the music of a variety of composers, including Bach, Beethoven and Liszt, but has devoted particular attention to music of the 20th century, especially Schoenberg and Stravinsky. He has also undertaken research on the Uzbek, Finnish and Karelian, Polish, and Czech and Slovak national musical cultures.

WRITINGS

'K voprosu o ponyatii "muzïkal'nïy yazïk"' [On the concept of 'musical language'], Ot Lyulli do nashikh dney, ed. V. Konen and I. Slepnev (Moscow, 1967), 93–104
'Ob odnom svoystve vertikali v atonal'noy muzïki' [One feature of the vertical in atonal music], Muzïka i sovremennost', vii (1971), 294–318
'Zametki o ritme v "Velikoy svyashchennoy plyaske" iz "Vesnï svyashchennoy" Stravinskogo' [Observations on rhythm in the great Sacrificial Dance from Stravinsky's Rite of Spring], Teoreticheskiye problemï muzïkal'nïkh form i zhanrov, ed. L.G. Rappoport (Moscow, 1971), 222–48
'O teoreticheskoy kontseptsii Yannisa Ksenakisa' [The theoretical conceptions of Xenakis], Krizis burzhuaznoy kul'turi i muzïki, ed. L.N. Raaben, iii (Moscow, 1976), 106–34
'Nablyudeniya nad garmoniyey v fortepiannoy sonate B. Bartoka' [Observations on harmony in Bartók's piano sonata], Bela Bartok, ed. Ye.I. Chigareva (Moscow, 1977), 99–122
Nekotorïye voprosï ladovogo stroyeniya uzbekskoy narodnoy pesni i yeyo garmonizatsii [Some questions of modal structure in Uzbek folk song and its harmonization] (Tashkent, 1979)
Voprosï analiza sovremennoy muzïki [Problems in the analysis of contemporary music] (Leningrad, 1982)
'Shyonberg', Muzïka XX veka, ed. B.A. Yarustovsky, iv (Moscow, 1984), 401–25
'Asaf'yev i problema vzaimootnosheniya muzïki i yazïka' [Asaf'yev and the problem of the mutual relationship of music and language], Problemï sovremennogo muzïkoznaniya v svete idey B.V. Asaf'yeva (Leningrad, 1987), 6–20
O nekotorïkh obshchikh osnovakh yazïka tonal'noy muzïki XX veka [Some general linguistic principles of 20th-century tonal music] (diss., Leningrad Conservatory, 1987); three chaps repr. in Izbrannïye stat'i o muzïkal'nom yazïke [Selected articles on musical language] (St Petersburg, 1994)
'A. Shyonberg i "kritika yazïka"', Problemï muzïkoznaniya: muzïka, yazïk, traditsiya, ed. V.G. Kartsovnik (Leningrad, 1990), 152–64; Eng. trans., Kulturologiya, i (1993), 50–63 with O.A. Bochkareva: '"Duėli" N. Sidel'nikova v aspekte ritmicheskoy organizatsii' [Sidel'nikov's 'Duels' from the point of view of rhythmic organization], Poėtika muzïkal'noy kompozitsii (Moscow, 1990), 16–31
'Karl Amadeus Hartmanns "Kleine Schriften" als Persönlichkeitsporträt und Zeitdokument', Musikkultur in der Bundesrepublik Deutschland: Leningrad 1990, 283–96
'Sibelius's Five Sketches as a Reflection of 20th-Century Musical-Language Evolution', Jean Sibelius Conference I: Helsinki 1990, 102–5
Izbrannïye stat'i o muzïkal'nom yazïke [Selected articles on musical language] (St Petersburg, 1994) [incl. chaps. from diss., and articles on Bach, Beethoven, Liszt and Stravinsky]
'Asaf'yev and Tynianov: on Some Analogies Between Musicology and the Study of Literature', Musical Signification: Essays in the Semiotic Theory and Analysis of Music, ed. E. Tarasti (Berlin and New York, 1995), 141–53
'Skryabin i Berg: sovpadeniye ili vliyaniye?' [Skryabin and Berg: coincidence or influence?], Nizhegorodskiy skryabinskiy sbornik, i (1995), 207–27
'Svyashennoye pesnopeniye' Stravinskogo i ritorika formï [Stravinsky's Canticum sacrum and the rhetoric of form] (Petrozavodsk, 1996)
'Ob otkrïtosti formï' [Openness in form], Muzïka: analiz i ėstetika, ed. K. Yuzhak (Petrozavodsk and St Petersburg, 1997), 119–26

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Klimovitsky, A. Milka, K. Yuzhak and B. Katz: 'Shtrikhi k portretu muzïkoveda' [Strokes towards a portrait of a musicologist], SovM (1980), no.6, pp.85–6
E. Tarasti: 'Muuan musiikkitieteilizäkohtalo', Musiikkitiede (1989), no.2, pp.218–21
Vïbor i sochetaniye: otkrïtaya forma: sbornik statey k 75-letiyu Yu.G. Kona [Choice and combination: open form: collected essays for the 75th birthday of Kon], ed. K. Yuzhak, I. Baranova and B. Katz (Petrozavodsk and St Petersburg, 1995)
Obituaries: B. Katz, Muzïkal'noye obozreniye (1997), no.2, p.12; G.Ya. Pantiyelev: 'Yuzef Kon: chelovek i uchyonïy', MAk (1998), nos.3–4, pp.269–85

KIRA YUZHAK

Konbit music. See HAITI, §II.

Kondakion. See KONTAKION.

Konde, Fundi (b Waa, nr Mombasa, 1924). Kenyan popular musician. Konde has travelled widely in eastern Africa for over 50 years. Born in colonial Kenya, he absorbed the local nomba dance rhythms from an early age. He attended St George's Catholic School where he learned clarinet, flute and trumpet, and Western notation. In 1940 he joined the colonial Department of Health but continued to play acoustic guitar, occasionally entertaining at weddings and parties. Konde's early groups featured guitars, accordions and drums, and played original compositions in Swahili that combined traditional Sengenya rhythms with African American blues and Cuban SON, styles that were accessible at the time and were now influential in the bustling port of Mombasa.

At 19 years old he enrolled in the King's African Rifles (Entertainment Unit), and began entertaining in Burma with musicians from Tanganyika and Uganda; he made his first recordings at that time in a Calcutta studio. After World War II, Konde's unit returned to Kenya under the guidance of the film producer and director of East African Records, Peter Coleman. He was encouraged to play an electric Gibson (the first in East Africa) and from then on became the featured guitarist in Peter Coleman's African Band. From there his career flourished, as he became one of the three most sought after entertainers in the region.

In 1954 he joined the African Broadcasting Service, and in 1956 he joined HMV Records as A&R manager. He retired in 1963 but returned twice both as a sound engineer, producer and performer. In 1994 Konde joined the Shikamoo Jazz Band in Dar Es Salaam, a band that was reviving the glory days of East African pop while raising the profile of older people in Tanzania. He is now retired in Nairobi, leaving a legacy of hundreds of well-loved melodies.

RONNIE GRAHAM

Kondo, Jo (b Tokyo, 28 Oct 1947). Japanese composer. He studied composition at the Tokyo National University of Fine Arts and Music with Yoshio Hasegawa and Hiroaki Minami (1968–72). After a year in New York on a Rockefeller Foundation grant (1977–8) he was invited to lecture at the University of Victoria, Canada (1979). He has been a lecturer at the University of Fine Arts and Music to teach composition since 1986, and in 1987 he was composer-in-residence at the Hartt School of Music, Connecticut, and taught at Dartington. In 1988 he became professor of composition at the the Elizabeth University of Music in Hiroshima.

The influence of American experimental music, evident in his early works, led to his devising a post-Cagean style of 'Sen no ongaku' (linear music) in the early 1970s, in which the whole structure is derived from a single melodic line, with each constituent sound recognizable as an individual entity. Standing and Sight Rhythmics typify this style, which at the end of the 1970s Kondo began to enrich by adding vertical elements. Among his many commissions are those from Music Today, Tokyo (1970, 1976), and the Maggio Musicale Fiorentino (1984). Between 1980 and 1990 he directed Musica Practica Ensemble, a chamber orchestra devoted to contemporary music. He became an associate editor of Contemporary Music Review in 1989.

WORKS
(selective list)

Op: Hagoromo (1, after Zeami), 1994, Florence, 13 June 1994
Orch: A Shape of Time, pf, orch, 1979; Pastoral, 1989; Sleeping Venice, mand orch, 1995; To the Headland, 1995
6 or more insts: Breeze, 2 fl, 2 cl, vc, db, 3 perc, 1969; Strands I, fl, eng hn, banjo, perc, va, db, 1978; Threadbare Unlimited, 8 str, 1979; Left bank, 14 insts, 1981; Still Life, 8 vn, 1981; Hunisuccle, 14 insts, 1984; Isthmus, 7 insts, 1985; Res sonorae, ob, va, 12 insts, 1986; Serenata secca con obbligato, fl, 13 insts, 1991; Dots and Lines, cl, bn, vn, va, vc, pf, 1993
1–5 insts: Str Qt, 1969; Orient Orientation, any 2 insts of the same kind, 1973; Standing, any 3 insts of different families, 1973; Sight Rhythmics, vn, tuba, banjo, elec pf, steel drum, 1975; Under the Umbrella, 5 perc, 1976; Ritard, vn, 1977; Diptych, vn, hn, trbn, pf, glock, 1983; Yokohama, 2 vn, b fl, pf, 1989; 3 Songs of the Elderberry, vn, opt. perc, 1995; Dithyramb, fl, gui, 1996
El-ac: Summer Days, cl, tape, 1970; Riverrun, tape, 1977
Vocal: New Buds on the Elderberry Tree (T. Kinoshita), S, 1982; Jō-ka, Buddhist chanting chorus, 20 Jap. gagaku insts, 1985

Principal publisher: Sonic Arts (Japan)

WRITINGS

Sen no ongaku [Linear music] (Tokyo, 1979)
Ongaku no shūji [The seed of music] (Tokyo, 1983)
Mimi no shikō [The thinking ear] (Tokyo, 1985)
'The Art of being Ambiguous: from Listening to Composing', CMR, ii/2 (1988), 7–29

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KdG (P.N. Wilson)
D. Charles: 'Jô Kondô, ou le passage de la ligne', Revue d'ésthetique, xviii (1990), 225–31
D. Charles: 'Jô Kondô e John Cage', RIM, xxvi (1991), 95–115
K.-M. Hinz: 'Musik als unendliche Veränderung: der japanische Komponist Jô Kondô', MusikTexte, no.59 (1995), 34–8
K. Hori, ed.: Nihon no sakkyoku nijusseiki [Japanese compositions in the Twentieth Century] (Tokyo, 1999), 157–9

SUSUMU SHONO

Kondracki, Michał (b Połtawa, Ukraine, 5 Oct 1902; d Glen Cove, NY, 27 Feb 1984). Polish composer. He studied composition with Statkowski and Szymanowski at the Warsaw Conservatory (1923–7) and then with Dukas and Boulanger at the Ecole Normale in Paris (until 1931). In Paris he was secretary to the Society of Young Polish Musicians. He returned to Warsaw and then moved to Rio de Janeiro (1940) and New York (1943), where he remained as a composer and teacher; he contributed articles on American musical life to Ruch muzyczny. His reputation as a composer was first established with the ballet Metropolis (1929) and the Mała symfonia góralska ('Little Highlander Symphony', 1930). Other early works (most of them unpublished) include a Partita for orchestra (1928), Żołnierze (Parade) ('Soldiers') and the Piano Concerto (1935) – dissonant and percussive compositions, often containing Polish folk themes; their rhapsodic expansiveness and rich romantic harmony were enriched by the influences of Roussel, Ravel and Prokofiev. During this period Kondracki was regarded as one of the most interesting younger Polish composers. In such later works as Hymn do Afrodyty for strings (1957) and the Nokturn for harp and strings (1951), however, he leaned towards a certain simplification of texture. After 1957 he almost gave up composing.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Metropolis (ballet), 1929, lost; Popieliny (op, after J. Kasprowicz: Marchott), 1934, lost; Legenda czyli baśń krakowska [The Legend, or fair tale of Kraków] (ballet), 1937
Orch: Partita, 1928, lost; Mała symfonia góralska [Little Highlander Sym.], 1930; Żołnierze (Parade) [Soldiers], 1932; Suita kurpiowska, 1933, lost; Nokturn, 1935; Pf Conc., 1935, lost; Conc. for Orch, 1936; Mecz [Match], 1937, lost; Toccata, 1939; Epitafia, small orch, 1940; Concertino, pf, small orch, 1944; Sym. 'Zwycięstwa' [Victory], 1944; Taniec brazylijski, 1944; Psalm, 1944; Nokturn, hp, str, 1951; Groteska, 1952; Pastorale, 1955; Kolęda [Christmas carol], fl, str, 1955; Hymn do Afrodyty, str, 1957
Choral: Cantata ecclesiastica, chorus, orch, 1937; Hymn olimpijski, chorus, orch, 1954

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EMuz (A. Mrygoń)
T. Chylińska: 'Ze Stanów Zjednoczonych do Polski' [From the USA to Poland], RM, xxxii/7 (1987), 3–6

BOGUSŁAW SCHÄFFER/R

Kondrashin, Kirill (Petrovich) (b Moscow, 6 March 1914; d Amsterdam, 8 March 1981). Russian conductor. Born into a family of orchestral musicians, he began piano lessons at the age of six, and later studied music theory under Nikolay Zhilyayev, who had a great influence on his artistic development. His conducting career began in 1931 at the Children's Theatre, Moscow. From 1934 he was assistant conductor at the Nemirovich-Danchenko Music Theatre, making his début with Planquette's Les cloches de Corneville (25 October 1934). He studied conducting at the Moscow Conservatory with Boris Khaykin (1932–6), and was then conductor at the Maliy Theatre, Leningrad (1936–43), where he gave promising performances of Pashchenko's Pompadour, Puccini's La fanciulla del West and Cheremukhin's Kalinki. At the First All-Union Competition of Conductors in 1938, he was awarded an honorary diploma for his high professional skill and virtuoso technique. A Soviet music critic of the time wrote 'I was particularly impressed by the young conductor's ability to work with the orchestra. Eschewing wordiness, Kondrashin achieves understanding by precise gesture rather than oratory'. In 1943 he moved to the Bol'shoy Theatre, where contacts with Samosud, Pazovsky and Golovanov helped to improve his opera performances and widen his practical experience; he also staged a number of new productions. During this time he also appeared frequently with the country's leading symphony orchestras with programmes which included Myaskovsky, Prokofiev, Shostakovich, Rachmaninoff, Tchaikovsky, Liszt and Wagner.

After leaving the Bol'shoy in 1956 Kondrashin won recognition as an outstanding concert conductor and as a frequent partner of such soloists as David Oistrakh, Richter, Rostropovich, Gilels and Kogan. At the 1958 Tchaikovsky Piano Competition in Moscow he performed with Van Cliburn, and in the same year made his American and British débuts. He was artistic director of the Moscow PO (1960–75), and this period can be regarded as his most important contribution as a performer. His experience as an opera conductor had defined his basic attitude, instilled in him a preference for programmatic interpretation of symphonic music, and given him a sound approach to musical performance; and during his years with the Moscow PO these qualities were consolidated. From 1960 he abandoned the baton, demanding that the orchestra appreciate the fluctuations of mood revealed only by the slightest movements of the hand or fingers, by mime, and mainly by the expression of the eyes. His finest work during the 1960s was his conducting of Mahler's symphonies, in which a notable restraint, characteristic of Kondrashin's interpretations, underlined the expressive tensions of the orchestra's performances. Kondrashin's repertory broadened steadily. He conducted the first performances of Shostakovich's symphonies nos.4 and 13, and the premières of other works by Shostakovich, Khachaturian, Sviridov, Shchedrin, Boris Chaykovsky, Weinberg and others; his repertory also included works of the Classical period and works by Bartók and Hindemith. Under Kondrashin's leadership the Moscow PO achieved a high standard of performance and toured many countries. Kondrashin was the first to conduct all of Shostakovich's 15 symphonies in two concert seasons. He received many honours from his native country and in 1972 was named People's Artist of the Soviet Union, the nation's highest artistic title.

In December 1978, after a series of concerts, he requested and was granted residency in the Netherlands on the grounds that the Soviets were stifling his artistic freedom. In 1979 he was appointed conductor of the Concertgebouw, Amsterdam. He unexpectedly died of a heart attack two years later Kondrashin saw himself in the same tradition as the great conductors of the past, who strove to produce their own unique sound and style with their orchestras. He was a brilliant interpreter of Russian music, always showing an immense panache and commitment to the music. He was equally at home in the music of Mahler, Beethoven, Brahms and Hindemith. His interpretations showed an extraordinary balance of texture of the orchestral sound, an acute dynamic control, and a warmth and kinship with the music not often found in interpretations of Western music by Russian conductors. Some of his articles on conducting were published as O dirizhyorskom iskusstve ('On the art of conducting', Leningrad and Moscow, 1972).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Glezer: 'Kirill Kondrashin', SovM (1963), no.5, pp.81–6

L. Grigor'yev and Ya. Platek: 'Besedï s masterami: Kirill Kondrashin' [Meetings with the masters: Kondrashin], Muzikal'naya zhizn' (1969), no.8, p.6

V. Razhnikov and V. Uritsky: 'Vïsokaya missiya dirizhyora: k 60-letiyu K.P. Kondrashina' [The lofty mission of a conductor: on Kondrashin's 60th birthday], SovM (1974), no.4, pp.58–63

V. Yuzefovich: 'Razmïshleniya o professii dirizhyora: beseda s K.P. Kondrashinïm' [Reflections on the conducting profession: a conversation with Kondrashin], SovM (1974), no.4, pp.50–58

V. Razhnikov: K. Kondrashin rasskazyvaet o muzyke i zhizni [Kondrashin speaks of music and his life] (Moscow, 1989)

I.M. YAMPOL'SKY/V. LEDIN

Konen, Valentina Dzhozefovna [Konin, Valentine Victoria] (b Baku, 29 July/11 Aug 1909; d Moscow, 9 Dec 1991). Russian musicologist. After receiving her schooling in New York, she graduated from the piano class of Bergolio at the Juilliard School of Music in 1929; she also attended evening classes in literature at New York University, 1927–9. In 1931 she moved to Russia and enrolled at the Moscow Conservatory, where she studied with Ivanov-Boretsky (music history), Yudina (piano), Mazel' and Zuckermann (analysis), 1933–8. Both during and after her studies she was Moscow correspondent for the New York Musical Courier (1933–7) and music critic for the English-language paper Moscow News (1932–4; 1943–5). In 1938 she joined the faculty of the Moscow Conservatory, where she took the Kandidat degree in 1940 with a dissertation on the antecedents of the Viennese classical symphony. She gave lectures on music history at the conservatory (1939–41, 1943–9), and in 1945 was appointed senior lecturer; she also taught at the Gnesin Institute for Musical Education (1944–9). She completed her doctoral degree in 1946 with a study on American music, on which her later monograph (1961) was based. After working as a professor at the Musorgsky State Conservatory of the Urals in Sverdlovsk (1949–51), she became a senior research fellow at the Institute for the History of the Arts in Moscow in 1960.

The legacy of Konen's writings dominates Russian studies in music history. Her work is characterized by an elegant synthesis of perspectives from different fields of musical scholarship, including music theory, history and aesthetics. She investigated a broad repertory of music ranging from the English Renaissance to the 20th century, and her combined publications constitute a general history of music in Europe and the USA. Her studies usually placed their subject in a cultural context and she tended to draw historical parallels between developments in music and other fields; this method sprang from her belief that stylistically similar phenomena are part of a single dialectical historical process. Author of nearly 150 works, her most important publications remain her history of European music and her monographs on individual composers.

WRITINGS

Ocherki po istorii amerikanskoy muzïki [Essays on the history of American music] (diss., Institut Istorii Iskusstv, Moscow, 1946)

Shubert (Moscow, 1953, 2/1959)

'Legenda i pravda o dzhaze' [The legend and the truth about jazz], SovM (1955), no.9, pp.22–31

Istoriya zarubezhnoy muzïki, iii: Germaniya, Avstriya, Italiya, Frantsiya, Pol'sha s 1789 goda do seredinï XIX veka [The history of foreign music, iii: Germany, Austria, Italy, France and Poland, from 1789 to the middle of the 19th century] (Moscow, 1958, enlarged 2/1965, 7/1989)

Ral'f Voan-Uil'yams [Ralph Vaughan Williams] (Moscow, 1958)

Puti amerikanskoy muzïki [Highways of American music] (Moscow, 1961, 3/1977)

'K voprosu o stile v muzïke Renessansa' [Towards the question of style in the music of the Renaissance], Ot ėpokhi Vozrozhdeniya k XX veku, ed. M.Ya. Libman, T.N. Livanova and V.N. Prokof'ev (Moscow, 1963), 80–89

'O muzïkal'nom ėkspressionizme' [On Expressionism in music], Ėkspressionizm: dramaturgiya, zhivopis', grafika, muzïka, kinoisksstvo, ed. B.I. Zingerman (Moscow, 1966), 13–26

'Problemï Vozrozhdeniya v muzïke' [Problems of the Renaissance in music], Renessans, barokko, klassitsizm: problema stiley v zapadno-Yevropeiyskom iskusstve XV–XVII, ed. B.R. Vipper and T.N. Livanovna (Moscow, 1966), 134–60

'V zashchitu istoricheskoy nauki' [In defence of the science of history], SovM (1967), no.6, pp.18–23

Ėtyudï o zarubezhnoy muzïke [Studies in foreign music] (Moscow, 1968, 2/1975)

Teatry i simfoniya: rol' operï v formirovanii klassicheskoy sinfonii [The theatre and the symphony: the role of opera in the formation of the classical symphony] (Moscow, 1968, 2/1975)

'Znacheniye vneyevropeyskikh kul'tur dlya professional'nïkh kompozitorskikh shkol XX veka' [The significance of non-European cultures for 20th-century music], SovM (1971), no.10, p.50–69

'K probleme "Betkhoven i yego posledovateli"' [Towards the problem of Beethoven and his successors], Betkhoven: sbornik statey, ed. N.L. Fishman, i (Moscow, 1971), 17–35

Klaudio Monteverdi (Moscow, 1971)

'Znacheniye vneyevropeyskikh kul'tur dlya yevropeyskoy muzïki XX veka' [The significance of non-European cultures for the European music of the 20th century], Muzïkal'nïy sovremennik, i (1973), 32–81

Persell i opera [Purcell and the opera] (Moscow, 1978)

Blyuzï i XX vek [The blues and the 20th century] (Moscow, 1980)

'Genrikh Shyutts' [Heinrich Schütz], Mastera klassicheskogo iskusstva Zapada, ed. V.N. Prokof'yev (Moscow, 1983), 103–32
Rozhdeniye dzhaza [The birth of jazz] (Moscow, 2/1990)
'Sto let muzïkal'nïkh vpechatleniy (memuarï)' [A hundred years of musical impressions (memoirs)], MAk (1995), no.3, pp.159–65; (1996), no.2, pp.178–92; (1998), no.1, pp.114–25
ed. V.P. Varunts: Ocherki po istorii zarubezhnoy muzïke [Sketches on foreign music] (Moscow, 1997)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Mazel': 'Istoriya i sovremennost'' [History and modernity], SovM (1969), no.8, pp.16–22
M. Saponov: 'Rozhdeniye metoda' [The birth of a method], SovM (1985), no.9, pp.86–90
L. Mazel': 'Pamyati V.D. Konen' [Recollections of Konen], MAk (1992), no.2, p.215 only
Yu. Keldïsh: 'Iz vospominaniy o V.D. Konen' [From my reminiscences of Konen], MAk (1995), no.3, pp.156–8

VIKTOR VARUNTS

Konetzni(-Wiedmann), Anny (b Vienna, 12 Feb 1902; d Vienna, 6 Sept 1968). Austrian soprano, sister of HILDE KONETZNI. She studied at the Vienna Conservatory with Erik Schmedes and made her stage début at the Volksoper in 1925 as a contralto. After provincial engagements and guest appearances in the Ring at Paris (1929) she joined the Berlin Staatsoper in 1931. In 1933 she appeared at Buenos Aires and soon after became a member of the Vienna Staatsoper. In 1935 she sang Brünnhilde under Beecham at Covent Garden, then returned to London in three of the next four seasons, and was invited back to sing in Die Walküre in the 1951 Ring. She also appeared at Salzburg, New York, Rome and at other leading houses. Her voice, in its prime a strong, pure dramatic soprano, was not supported by a particularly impressive stage presence. She retired in 1955 and illness obliged her to give up teaching at the Vienna Music Academy in 1957. Her singing is preserved in various compilations of recordings originally made between the 1930s and 50s; of these the most impressive are excerpts from Tristan and Parsifal.

PETER BRANSCOMBE

Konetzni, Hilde (b Vienna, 21 March 1905; d Vienna, 20 April 1980). Austrian soprano, sister of ANNY KONETZNI. She studied at the Vienna Conservatory and made her début at Chemnitz in 1929 (Sieglinde to her sister's Brünnhilde). In 1932 she joined the German Theatre in Prague, and after a successful guest appearance as Elisabeth in Tannhäuser in Vienna she joined the Staatsoper in 1936. That year she first sang at Salzburg (Donna Elvira). Her Covent Garden début was in 1938 (First Lady in Zauberflöte and Chrysothemis in Elektra); she is remembered especially for stepping into the Marschallin's clothes at a moment's notice to save a Rosenkavalier performance when Lehmann fell ill. She appeared in The Bartered Bride, Tannhäuser, the Ring and Don Giovanni the following season at Covent Garden, and was heard as Leonore (Fidelio) during the 1947 Vienna Staatsoper season. She also sang at Glyndebourne (Donna Elvira in 1938) and in the USA, and in 1955 returned to sing Sieglinde and Gutrune in the Covent Garden Ring. Although she and her sister both sang the Marschallin, Hilde Konetzni tended to prefer the more lyrical roles. Towards the end of her career she added to an extensive repertory a number of small character parts of the kind beloved of Viennese audiences. Her Leonore survives in an incandescent Vienna concert performance under Böhm from 1944. She recorded Strauss songs with the composer as accompanist, while her Sieglinde and Gutrune in Furtwängler's La Scala Ring (1950) and Sieglinde in the RAI relays of 1953 are worthy mementos of her Wagner.

PETER BRANSCOMBE

Kongsted, Ole (Dan) (b Copenhagen, 22 Sept 1943). Danish musicologist. After a period as a professional jazz musician playing tenor saxophone (1962–7), he studied musicology at the University of Copenhagen with Nils Schiørring, Henrik Glahn and John Bergsagel, and privately with Heinrich Schwab at the University of Kiel. From 1976 to 1980 he held a research grant, following which he was appointed assistant director at the Museum for the History of Music in Copenhagen. He had extended leave from this position between 1994 and 1999, from 1996 as a Senior Research Fellow of the Danish Royal Library, during which time, among other things, he made valuable investigations in once more accessible libraries of Eastern Europe. Kongsted's chief interest is in the music of the Renaissance period, especially in Denmark. He has made important contributions to this field of research and some of the music he has discovered has been performed and recorded with the ensemble Capella Hafniensis, which he formed in 1990. In 1983 he became musical director of a Catholic church in Copenhagen, following which he was awarded the Otto Købke Memorial Prize in 1992 in recognition of his services to both the cultivation of plainchant in Denmark and Danish musical history. From 1990 to 1992 he was president of the Danish Musicological Society.

WRITINGS

'Census as Source Material for the History of Music', Musik & forskning, ii (1976), 154–68
'Dokumente zur Berufung des J.A.P. Schulz nach Kopenhagen', Beiträge zur Musikgeschichte Nordeuropas: Kurt Gudewill zum 65. Geburtstag, ed. U. Haensel (Wolfenbüttel, 1978), 159–74
'J.A.P. Schulz's "Lieder im Volkston" Band IV? Bemerkungen zu der Sammlung KB: C II, 159', Festskrift Henrik Glahn, ed. M. Müller (Copenhagen, 1979), 87–141
'"Deutsche Mode" auf Fünen: Aspekte der Musikkultur des dänischen Adels im 18. Jahrhundert', Staatsdienst und Menschlichkeit: Studien zur Adelskultur des späten 18. Jahrhunderts in Schleswig-Holstein und Dänemark: Kiel 1977, ed. C. Degn and D. Lohmeier (Neumünster, 1980), 211–49
'Haydn og Danmark', Joseph Haydn 1982, Copenhagen Musikhistorisk Museum, 1982 (Copenhagen, 1982), 5–20 [exhibition catalogue]
ed., with A.Ø. Jensen: Heinrich Schütz und die Musik in Dänemark: Copenhagen 1985 [incl. 'Archivalische Quellen zum Wirken von Heinrich Schütz in Kopenhagen', 33–41]
'Den verdslige "rex splendens": musikken som repraesentativ kunstart ved Christian IVs hof', Christian IVs verden, ed. S. Ellehøj (Copenhagen, 1988), 433–64
Kronborg-Brunnen und Kronborg-Motetten: ein Notenfund des späten 16. Jahrhunderts aus Flensburg und seine Vorgeschichte (Copenhagen, 1991)
'Kronborg-motetternes komponist', DAM, xx (1992), 7–18
Kongelig dansk water-music anno 1582 (Copenhagen, 1993; Eng. trans., 1994)
'Christian IV. und seine europäische Musikerschaft', Europa in Scandinavia: Kiel 1992, ed. R. Bohn (Frankfurt, 1994), 115–26
'Die Musikalien im Archiv der Hansestadt Wismar', Wismarer Beiträge, xi (1995), 83–91
'Die Musikaliensammlung des 16. Jahrhunderts in der Universitätsbibliothek Rostock', Musikgeschichte zwischen Ost- und Westeuropa: Chemnitz 1995, 259–67
'Die Musikaliensammlung des Herzogs Johann Albrecht I.', Stadt und Hof: Schwerin als Residenzstadt im 16. Jahrhundert, Schwerin Historischen Museum, 11 Aug – 12 Nov 1995 (Schwerin, 1995), 120–31 [exhibition catalogue]
'Nyopdukkede vaerker af Gregorius Trehou i Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana', Musikkens tjenere: instrument-forsker-musiker, ed. M. Müller and L. Torp (Copenhagen, 1998), 189–209

EDITIONS

Musik i Danmark pa Christian IV's tid, v: Motetter af G. Trehou, J. Tollius og V. Bertholusius (Copenhagen, 1988)

Kronborg motetterne tilegnet Frederik II og Dronning Sophie 1582 (Copenhagen, 1990)

JOHN BERGSAGEL

König. German family of organ builders. They were active for three generations in the region of the Eifel, the electorate of Cologne, and in the northern Rhineland. Balthasar König (*b c*1685; *d c*1760), founder of the family firm, was resident in Münstereifel from 1711 and moved to Cologne in 1735. He established his own type of organ, and this was taken up and continued by his sons and grandsons without any significant modifications; this 'König type' remained a standard model in the German part of the Rhineland up to the second half of the 19th century. It gave prominence to the Hauptwerk, which was often the only manual. The second manual was a Positiv, and wherever possible a Rückpositiv. The third manual served as the 'Echo', and was equipped with flute stops. Free as well as coupled pedals frequently reached only as far as f, although larger instruments would extend to c' or d'. Balthasar König also showed a liking for mixture stops featuring the interval of a 3rd; the solo stops were generally distributed between the bass and the treble.

Christian Ludwig König (1717–89), son of Balthasar, studied with his father but subsequently also with Christian Müller (1690–1773) and was resident in Cologne from 1744. He frequently added to his organs characteristic stops in imitation of other instruments (e.g. Viola da gamba, Flûte traversière and Hautbois).

Johann Kaspar Joseph König (1726–63), another son of Balthasar, worked mostly with his father and is on record as an independent organ builder in only five places. Johann Nicolaus König (1729–75), also a son of Balthasar, is similarly seldom mentioned as an independent organ builder. He studied with his father, and as they shared the same house in Cologne it may be assumed that he eventually took over the business from him.

Balthasar Franz Joseph König (1744–66), a son of Johann Kaspar, was considered his father's successor; he died young, however. Carl Philipp Joseph König (1750–95), a son of Christian Ludwig, worked at first with his father and later independently. Adolph Daniel König (b 1768), a son of Johann Nicolaus, was the last organ builder of the König family, and is last known to have been active in 1803.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. van Heurn: De orgelmaker (Dordrecht, 1804–5)

H. Boeckeler: Die neue Orgel im Kurhaussaal zu Aachen (Aachen, 1876)

J.J. Merlo: Kölnische Künstler, ed. E. Firmenich-Richartz and H. Keussen (Düsseldorf, 1895/R)

FRIEDRICH JAKOB

König, Johann Balthasar (b Waltershausen, nr Gotha, bap. 28 Jan 1691; d Frankfurt, bur. 2 April 1758). German composer. As a boy he joined the Stadtkapelle in Frankfurt, singing first under the direction of G.C. Strattner. When Telemann succeeded the latter in 1712 König began to work for him as a copyist and also learnt to imitate his style; presumably he took lessons with him. In 1718 Telemann acted as godfather to König's son. When Telemann left for Hamburg in 1721, König took over from him the post of music director at the Katharinenkirche, then the second principal church in Frankfurt, while remaining a member of the Stadtkapelle, now directed by G.C. Bodinus. The fact that he also played the cello and sang with the choir at the Barfüsserkirche without payment suggests that he acted as 'Kapellmeister-Adjunkt' (assistant to be promoted) to Bodinus, whom he did in fact succeed in 1727. Working at the two principal churches and as civic music director, he had risen to the same position as Telemann and tried successfully to re-establish, after a decline under Bodinus, the former quality of musical performances. Among the works he directed were Telemann's oratorio Der königliche Prophete David (in 1733 and 1739) and one of Telemann's Passions (1739).

More deeply concerned than his paragon with the basic duties of a Protestant church musician, König took great care to improve congregational singing. He had already submitted his proposals to the city council as a memorandum, Unmassgeblicher Vorschlag wie dem übel-Singen in den Frankfurther Kirchen abzuhelfen sey (D-F, 1724) before he gained his influential position. His most important contribution was the publication of the Harmonischer Lieder-Schatz (1738), the most comprehensive hymnbook of the 18th century, containing nearly 2000 melodies with figured bass. He adapted many of the older tunes to the fashion of his time by smoothing irregular rhythms or imposing major–minor contours and harmonies on modal melodies. About 290 tunes which appear for the first time in this collection are probably by König himself. Three of them are still sung in Germany, and three are known in Anglican hymnbooks as 'Tempest', 'Evangelists' and 'Franconia'. König's church cantatas are still to be catalogued; their similarity to Telemann's works and König's activity as a copyist have given rise to misattributions concerning both composers. Further confusion has been caused by König's custom of copying single arias or choruses from Telemann's cantatas and re-using them, sometimes with different words, in a new context.

WORKS

Harmonischer Lieder-Schatz, oder Allgemeines evangelisches Choral-Buch, welches die Melodien derer … alten als neuen … Gesänge … in sich hält … dergestalt verfasset … dass … mit der Orgel oder Clavier accompagnirt werden können; ferner … die Melodien derer hundert und funffzig Psalmen Davids (1913 chorale melodies), 1v, bc (Frankfurt, 1738, enlarged 2/*c*1750, 3/1767) [incl. *c*290 probably by König]

Cants.: Ach, Jesus geht zu seiner Pein, 4vv, chorus 4vv, 2 fl, 2 ob, 2 vn, va, vle, org, ed. A. Adrio (Berlin, 1947) [attrib. Telemann in Süss]; Alle die gottselig leben wollen; Auf zur Lust, ihr frohen Thöne; Beglücktes Begegnen; Dancket dem Herren; Die Wahrheit ist ein himmlisch Licht; Ehen sind beglückt zu nennen; Gleichwie ein Hirsch; Gott ist unsre Zuversicht; Halleluja! er lebt; Halleluja, laudate servi Domini; Herr Jesu, der du wunderbar; Herr sende den Schöpfer der Tugend; Ich fürchte mich nicht; Ich hebe meine Augen auf; Ich schreye, Gott, zu dir; Ihr Lieben lasset uns untereinander; Kommt her zu mir; Kommet zum Mahle des Herren; Lasset uns doch den Herrn; Mein Glaubenslicht ist schwach; Meines Jesu Passion; O heilige Zeit; So schallt der neuen Orgel Thon; Vater unser im Himmelreich; Vergeblich suchet man die Ruh; Wer mich liebet: all D-F

Dies ist der Tag, motet, F; Gott wird mich erhalten, cant., Bsb; Ruhe sanfft in deiner Gruft, funeral aria, F; Vitae vivunt quam pastores, pastoral play, F

18 Kaiserliche Trauer- und Freudenkantaten (occasional cantatas), mostly 1740–47, music lost

March, 3 insts (? 2 ob, bn), 1728, F

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (W. Blankenburg)

C. Valentin: Geschichte der Musik in Frankfurt am Main vom Anfange des XIV. bis zum Anfange des XVIII. Jahrhunderts (Frankfurt, 1906/R)

C. Süss: 'Die Manuskripte protestantischer Kirchenmusik zu Frankfurt am Main', Festschrift … Rochus Freiherrn von Liliencron (Leipzig, 1910/R), 350–57
A. Adrio: Preface to J.B. König: Ach, Jesus geht zu seiner Pein (Berlin, 1947)
R. Emans: 'Telemann – Grünewald – König: Versuch einer Zuschreibung der "Einzelarien aus Opern und weltlichen Kantaten" TVWV 21:101–43', Georg Philipp Telemann: Werküberlieferung, Editions- und Interpretationsfragen: Magdeburg 1987, ii, 59–64
J. Schlichte: 'Georg Philipp Telemann – Johann Balthasar König – Anonym?: zur Echtheit Telemannscher Kantatenkompositionen', ibid., 39–57
J. Stalmann and J. Heinrich, eds.: Handbuch zum Evangelischen Kirchengesangbuch: Liederkunde, ii (Göttingen, 1990)

DOROTHEA SCHRÖDER

König, Johann Mattheus [Matthias] (fl 1778–90). German composer. He was active at least from 1778 as a Prussian chamber chancellor in Ellrich (near Nordhausen) and as an amateur musician. He published three lied collections to texts mainly by his friend, the poet L.F. Günther von Göckingk; König was also in contact with two literary circles (J.W.L. Gleim's Dichterkreis in Halberstadt and L.C.H. Hölty's Hainbund in Göttingen), although he set only a few of their poems. His lieder are written in the simple folklike style of the first Berlin lied school. He also wrote two Singspiele, other lieder and a few instrumental pieces.

WORKS

Singspiele: Lilla, oder Die Gärtnerin, vs (Berlin, 1783); Die Execution, 1790
Lieder: [60] Lieder mit Melodien (Berlin, 1778–80); 1 in Sammlung verschiedener Lieder von guten Dichtern und Tonkünstlern (Nuremberg, 1780–82); Lieder verschiedenen Inhalts (H.W. Lawätz) (Altona, 1790); 3 in D-Bsb
Inst: 6 Sonatines, hpd/pf (Berlin, 1784); 12 Suiten, hpd, Bsb; Sonata, fl, vn, b, Bsb, doubtful

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; GerberL; GerberNL
M. Friedlaender: Das deutsche Lied im 18. Jahrhundert (Stuttgart and Berlin, 1902/R)

RAYMOND A. BARR

König, Johann Ulrich von (b Esslingen, Swabia, 8 Oct 1688; d Dresden, 14 March 1744). German poet, dramatist and librettist. He attended the Stuttgart Gymnasium and subsequently studied theology at Tübingen and law at Heidelberg. After being secretary and private tutor to a young nobleman travelling to Brabant, he settled in Hamburg in 1710. Here he rapidly achieved a leading position in the direction of the opera and began a fruitful career as librettist to many prominent German composers, including Keiser, Melchior Hoffmann, Telemann and, at Brunswick, G.C. Schürmann and C.H. Graun. He became closely associated with Brockes and Richey, with whom he founded the Teutschübende Gesellschaft. In April 1716 he left Hamburg and went first to Leipzig and then to Weissenfels. In 1720 he accepted the position of court poet and private secretary at the Dresden court. He was elected a member of the Berlin Academy of Sciences in 1729, and in 1730 returned to Hamburg. In 1735, having re-established himself at the Dresden court, he was made director of court ceremonies and court librarian. He was ennobled by the Saxon King in 1740.

König occupies an important position in the history of German opera. He was highly respected by composers as a poet and dramatist and extolled by Mattheson, in his Critica musica (1722–3), as an 'incomparable poet'. Although several 19th-century writers on German opera condemned him as the untalented creator of tasteless and bombastic Baroque texts, he was, in fact, a gifted experimenter who sought to revitalize the German language and its poetry. Many of his librettos are translated and adapted from French and Italian texts, a not unusual practice for early 18th-century German opera. He subscribed to the taste of the time by retaining large numbers of arias in Italian, which created the curious mixture of languages to be found in the works of Keiser, Telemann and Schürmann. While his librettos rely on many characteristic dramatic stereotypes of the early 18th century and depend heavily on the conventions of stage decoration, machines and ballets, they are often models of straightforward, uncomplicated plot development, excelling in comedy, and with a realistic, natural and frequently folklike language. König also wrote many sacred texts including the Passion oratorio Der zum Tode verurteilte und gecreuzigte Jesus, which with the Brockes Passion is one of the most important oratorio texts of the 18th century.

WRITINGS

only those relating to music

Theatralische, geistliche, vermischte und galante Gedichte (Hamburg and Leipzig, 1713) [incl. orat, Brautmesse: die geistliche Vermählung der Seele mit Christo]
'Untersuchung von dem guten Geschmack in der Dicht- und Redekunst', Des Freyherrn von Canitz Gedichte, ed. J.U. von König (Leipzig, 1727), suppl.
'Von der Vergleichung des Numerus in der Dichtkunst und Musik', Dess Herrn von Besser Schrifften, ed. J.U. von König (Leipzig, 1732), suppl.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.C. Wolff: Die Barockoper in Hamburg 1678–1738 (Wolfenbüttel, 1957)
D.I. Lindberg: Literary Aspects of German Baroque Opera: History, Theory and Practice (Christian H. Postel and Barthold Feind) (diss., UCLA, 1964)
H.J. Marx and D. Schröder: Die Hamburger Gänsemarkt-Oper: Katalog der Textbucher (Laaber, 1995)

GEORGE J. BUELOW

Königsberg (Ger.). See KALININGRAD.

Königslöw, Johann Wilhelm Cornelius von (b Hamburg, 16 March 1745; d Lübeck, 14 May 1833). German organist and composer. He first studied the piano and singing with his father Johann Christoph Burchard von Königslöw, a music teacher in Hamburg. At the age of 13 he went to Lübeck as a boy soprano in the Abendmusiken directed by the organist at the Marienkirche, A.C. Kunzen, with whom he also studied the organ, violin, composition and, perhaps, the cello. Königslöw became Kunzen's assistant (1772), then his successor as organist (1781). From 1773 he was a leading figure in Lübeck's concert life, continuing the Abendmusiken, conducting Good Friday concerts, promoting amateur concerts, performing in chamber music and organ concerts, founding a choral society and directing a series of subscription concerts of large-scale choral works by Beethoven, Graun, Handel, Homilius, Mozart and Rolle.

Most of Königslöw's compositions are oratorio-like works written for the Abendmusiken. They are firmly within the Classical tradition; apart from fugal treatment of the choral parts in passages with biblical verse and frequent tone-painting effects in the manner of Haydn, the part-writing is generally homophonic and the music is infused with Mozartian cantabile. His fugues for organ, each comprising a slow introduction and a fugue, were probably composed for concert performance. They are not strictly contrapuntal, and are valuable examples of the shift towards Classical stylistic elements in organ music.

WORKS

MSS, mostly in D-LÜh

Orats (Abendmusiken): Des jungen Tobias Verheirathung, 1782; Davids Thronbesteigung, 1785; Der geborene Weltheiland, 1788; Die Rettung des Kindes Mose, 1788; Davids Klage am Hermon, 1793

Cants.: Musik fürs Gymnasium, 1779; Kirchenmusik am Neujahrstage; Lobet den Herrn, D-STBp; Johannismusik

Inst: [60] Fugen für Freunde und Liebhaber des Orgelspiels, vols.ii–v, 2 ed. in Lübecker Orgelbuch, vol.1, ed. A. Schnoor (Lübeck, 2000); Introduction und Fuge, G, org; Fuge, C, org; Introduction und Fuge, d, 2 org; Hpd conc., 1781

LOST WORKS

Orats (Abendmusiken): Die Zuhausekunft des jungen Tobias, 1782; Saras Ankunft bey Tobias, 1783; Joseph, 1784; Jojada, der Hohepriester, 1786; Esther, 1787; Die eherne Schlange, 1789; Tod, Auferstehung und Gericht, 1790; Petrus, 1791; Paulus, 1792, collab. M.A. Bauck; Saul und David im Kriege, 1800

Cants.: Musik am Michaelisfeste; Michaelismusik, 1801–2

Inst: Ov., orch; [60] Fugen für Freunde und Liebhaber des Orgelspiels, vol. i

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GerberNL; ScheringGO

H.W. Stahl: Die Lübecker Abendmusiken im 17. und 18. Jahrhundert (Lübeck, 1937)

J. Hennings and H.W. Stahl: Musikgeschichte Lübecks (Kassel, 1951–2)

A. Edler: Der nordelbische Organist (Kassel, 1982)

H. Voss: Orgelmusik in der zweiten Hälfte des 18. Jahrhunderts in Norddeutschland (Lübeck, 1993)

GEORG KARSTÄDT/ARNDT SCHNOOR

Königsperger, Marianus [Johann Erhard] (b Roding, nr Regensburg, 4 Dec 1708; d Prüfening, nr Regensburg, 9 Oct 1769). German composer. The son of an instrument maker, he went to the Benedictine abbey of Prüfening as a choirboy. His talent for music proved so great that he abandoned the study of theology in its favour; having entered the Benedictine order, he became organist and choirmaster at Prüfening in 1734, a post he retained for the rest of his life. On entering Prüfening he took the name Marianus, renouncing his baptismal names Johann Erhard which he never used in connection with his musical activities. From 1740 until his death he produced a steady stream of publications, most of which were church music, but which also included symphonies and keyboard pieces. With the considerable profits from the sale of nearly 40 publications Königsperger was able to finance not only the building of a new choir organ for Prüfening, but also the improvement of the main organ, the purchase of books for the abbey library and the publication of scholarly works by his fellow monks.

Königsperger was one of the most popular and prolific composers of his generation in south Germany, and his music had a very wide circulation. The Augsburg publisher J.J. Lotter, who issued most of his works, described them as the foundation stone of his firm's prosperity, and Königsperger was said to have done more than any other composer to improve musical standards in Bavarian village churches. His popularity seems to have been widespread and unusually long-lasting; the last of Lotter's printed music catalogues, of 1820, lists a Missa pastoritia of his, when the church music of his contemporaries had long been out of print. He also had a considerable local reputation as an organist.

Königsperger belongs to the second generation of composers to write in the 18th-century Bavarian church style. This style, to be found in countless publications of liturgical music for parish choirs with limited resources, was largely developed by J.V. Rathgeber in his publications of 1721–36. Its chief characteristics were compactness combined with liturgical propriety, tunefulness, non-contrapuntal choral writing and simple solo parts. The normal scoring was solo SATB, chorus, two violins and basso continuo, with optional trumpets and drums. By the mid-1740s the style was beginning to develop in two directions. Some composers began to write more elaborate music, for well-equipped town or monastery churches; those more concerned with the average rural parish church simplified the style even further. In much of his music Königsperger seemed uncertain which of these lines to follow, and in many ways his earliest publications, in which his style is most homogeneous, are his best. The vesper psalms of op.5 show his gift for writing good, broad melodies for chorus as well as soloists, and for applying ritornello principles to a through-composed psalm setting. In his psalms of 1750 the melodic gift is less conspicuous, the sense of form and balance less assured. Expansive settings of the first few verses are often followed by a dull, perfunctory alla breve tutti, in which the different voices sing different words simultaneously as was common in the Gloria and Credo sections of contemporary missa brevis settings; he made comparatively little use of ritornello techniques, and the touches of word-painting occasionally to be found in the 1743 psalms are absent.

In his masses the dichotomy between the two styles is particularly clear. In his op.15 set (1750) he followed the general trend towards greater sectionalization of the Gloria and Credo; the choral sections are short, and often dull, while the solos are usually fully developed da capo arias which make considerable demands on the singers' technique. The same is true of a much later publication of masses, op.23 (1764), but here the divergence in style is even wider, the solos being more difficult, the choruses relying increasingly on fast repeated chords. After *c*1750, his style seems to have changed little. In these later psalms and in many of his smaller liturgical works, such as offertories, he made little or no use of the principle of solo–tutti alternation that was an important feature of the Bavarian church style in its early days and which he himself employed at the beginning of his career. On the one hand, his offertories of op.12 (1748) are entirely chordal, in a four-part homophonic style of little melodic interest; on the other, the cantatas and offertories of op.22 (1763) each consist of a long, difficult aria, followed by a short chorus (which the composer said may be omitted).

Little of Königsperger's secular music survives. His preludes and fugues on the eight tones suggest that he was a competent contrapuntist, but had little sense of form in instrumental music; they also indicate an interest in chromatic harmony, rare in his works for the church. His enormous reputation as a composer may have been unjustified, yet his music appears to have satisfied public demand, and it is clear that Königsperger was outstanding among south German composers who wrote for parish churches.

WORKS
printed works published in Augsburg unless otherwise stated

SACRED

Odeum sacrum, sive 33 cantilenae sacrae, 1v, 2 vn, org, op.1a (1733)
Decachordon sive 10 missae solemnes, quibus accesserunt . . . 2 missae pastoritiae, una cum hymno Veni Sancte Spiritus, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt/hn and timp ad lib, bc, op.1b (Regensburg, 1740)
Philomela suaviter . . . 8 offs, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt/hn ad lib, bc, op.2 (Regensburg, 1741)
Threnodia Davidica et Mariana, seu psalmus Miserere et planctus Stabat mater . . . 4vv, 2 vn, 2 hn ad lib, bc, op.3 (1743)
6 liturgiae canorae sive 6 missae praemissis 10 solemnioribus additae, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt/hn and timp ad lib, bc, op.4 (1743)
Sacrificium vespertinum, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt/hn and timp ad lib, bc, op.5 (1743)
Sacrae ruris deliciae, seu 6 missae rurales . . . 2 missae de requiem, 2vv, other vv ad lib, 2 tpt ad lib, vc, org, op.6 (1744)
Mariale lauretanum, complectens 6 solemnes lytanias, 4vv, 2 vn, va, 2 tpt/hn ad lib, bc, op.7 (1744)
Cymbala benesonantia, 17 off, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt/hn ad lib, vc, org, op.8 (1744)
Cymbala jubilationis, sive 6 missae solemniores cum . . . Te Deum, 4vv, 2 vn, va, 2 tpt/hn and timp ad lib, bc, op.10 (1747)
Luctus Marianus . . . sive 6 Stabat mater, 4vv, 2 vn, bc, op.11 (1748)
Eucharisticon complectens 4 off de SS Sacramento, 8 . . . Pange lingua, 1 off . . . 1 aria de passione domini, 1 . . . TeD, 4vv, 2 vn, va, 2 tpt/hn and timp ad lib, bc, op.12 (1748)
Sacra ruris laetitia, sive vesperae rurales, continens omnes psalmos per annum . . . antiphonae de BVM, 2vv, other vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt and timp ad lib, vc, org, op.13 (1749)
Cythara Davidica qua psalmi vespertini, 1. pro festis Domini et dominica, 2. de BV Maria, 3. de sanctis apostolis, una cum 4 antiphonis de BVM stylo breviori . . . 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt/hn and timp ad lib, bc, op.14 (1750)
Jubilatio lyturgica . . . sive 6 missae solemniores cum hymno Veni Sancte Spiritus, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt/hn and timp ad lib, bc, op.15 (1750)
Echo Marialis lauretani resonans 6 lytaniis solemnibus de BVM, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt/hn and timp ad lib, bc, op.17 (1753)
Alauda Mariana 6 lytanias rurales et 4 arias laetis modulis, 2vv, other vv ad lib, 2 vn, 2 tpt and timp ad lib, vc, org, op.19 (1755)
Lessus ecclesiae in 2 missis de requiem et 2 Libera, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt ad lib, vc, org, op.20 (1756)
Laudetur Jesus Christus sive offertorium, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt/hn ad lib, vc, org (1756)
Offertorium duplicis textus, 4vv, 2 vn, vc, org (1757)
Sacrificium matutinum 6 missis solemnibus, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt/hn and timp ad lib, bc, op.21 (1760)
Philomela benedictina sive 10 cantate de BVM, communi sanctorum et pro omni tempore, 4vv, 2 vn, va, 2 tpt/hn ad lib, vc, bc, op.22 (1763)
Oliva plena fructifera . . . constans 6 missis solemnibus, quarum ultima de requiem, 4vv, 2 vn, va, 2 tpt/hn and timp ad lib, bc, op.23 (1764)
VI missae solemnes quarum ultima de requiem 4vv, 2 vn, va, 2 tpt/hn and timp ad lib, bc (1764)
Psaltes vespertinus . . . seu 2 Vesperae de dominica cum psalmis de BVM . . . quibus accedunt 4 antiphonae Marianae, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt/hn and timp ad lib, bc, op.24 (1767)
Sabbathum requietionis . . . seu 2 missae . . . cum offertoriis duobus . . . una cum Te Deum, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt/hn and timp ad lib, bc (org), op.25 (1767)
II Vesperae de dominica cum psalmis de BVM . . . IV antiphonae Mariae, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt/hn and timp ad lib, bc (1767)
Missa pastoritia . . . 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt, timp, vc, org (1769)
[III Vesperae . . . IV antiphonae], 4vv, 2 vn, org (n.p., n.d.)

SECULAR

Chordae corda trahentes, seu 12 sonatae concertantes pro missis solemnibus, vn obbl, 2 vn, va, bc, op.9 (1745)
Cibus sapidus . . . seu 10 symphoniae, 2 vn, va, 2 tpt and timp ad lib, org, op.16 (1751)
Certamen musicum complectens 6 concerta communia et 2 pastoritia, org, 2 vn, va, 2 tpt/hn and vc ad lib, op.18 (1754)
Praeambulum cum fuga [I to VIII] toni facili methodo elaboratum (1752–6, repr. 1776)
Der wohl-unterwiesene Clavier-Schüler [preludes, versets, arias], kbd (1755)
Finger-Streit oder Clavier-Übung durch ein Praeambulum und Fugen, kbd (1760)
Many Singspiels and inst works, lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FellererG; FrotscherG
U. Kornmüller: 'Die Pflege der Musik im Benediktiner-Orden [iv]', Wissenschaftliche Studien und Mitteilungen aus dem Benedictiner-Orden, ii/1–2 (1881), 209–35, esp. 229 [Fr. Marian Koenigsberger]
E. von Werra: 'Beiträge zur Geschichte des katholischen Orgelspieles', KJb, xii (1897), 28–36, esp. 32
O. Ursprung: Die katholische Kirchenmusik (Potsdam, 1931/R)
F. Zwickler: Frater Marianus Königsperger OSB (1708–1769): ein Beitrag zur süddeutschen Kirchenmusik des 18. Jahrhunderts (diss., U. of Mainz, 1964)

ELIZABETH ROCHE

Konink [Coninck, Koning, Koninck etc.], Servaas [Servaes, Servatius] de (b Dendermonde, bap. 9 Oct 1654; d Amsterdam, bur. 15 July 1701). Dutch composer. He was trained as a choirboy at St James, Ghent, before becoming a student in Leuven. He then lived in Brussels for a few years, and around 1685 he must have moved to Amsterdam, where he lived the rest of his life. During his Amsterdam period he was probably continuously employed by Stadsschouwburg, where a small group had been formed to play incidental music before, during and between the acts of plays. He provided the music for the short Dutch Singspiel De bruiloft van Kloris en Roosje, which had its première in 1688 and was performed every Christmas from 1708 to 1772, together with Joost van den Vondel's tragedy Gysbrecht van Aemstel.

As a composer De Konink worked within the gamut of French and Italian stylistic elements of his time. His trios, perhaps written for incidental performance at the Stadsschouwburg, are modelled after French examples; they are organized neither as sonatas nor suites, but in groups with common keys. The choral music for Athalie is thoroughly French and basically styled after Lully. In his Dutch songs he employed both French and Italian styles, with rondeaux and da capo arias. The recorder sonatas (which were also published as duets) are relatively simple Italian sonate da chiesa. The most Italian of all are the Latin concertato motets in his Sacrarum armoniarum flores; they follow G.B. Bassani's examples closely and even borrow some of Bassani's texts.

De Konink's son, Servaas de Konink the younger (b Brussels, bap. 8 Sept 1682; d Amsterdam, bur. 13 Feb 1718), also worked as a theatre musician in Amsterdam. He is not documented as a composer, though he edited three volumes of theatre and other tunes for Estienne Roger (Hollantse Schouwburg en Plugge Dansen, 1714–16). He is often confused with his father.

WORKS
all music published in Amsterdam

STAGE

De bruiloft van Kloris en Roosje [The Wedding of Kloris and Roosje] (Singspiel, ? D. Buysero), Amsterdam, 1688, music lost
Music in Athalie (play, J. Racine) (1697)

OTHER VOCAL

Hollandsche minne- en drinkliederen, 1–2vv, bc [op.3] (1697)
Sacrarum armoniarum flores (motets), 1–4vv, 2 insts, op.7 (1699)
4 Dutch cont songs, Verscheide nieuwe zangen (1697), Boertige en ernstige minnezangen (4/1705)
5 Fr. airs, 1697[4], 1697[5]
2 It. cants., Cantate a I et II voci con tromba e flauti, e sensa (1702)

INSTRUMENTAL

Trios, rec, vn, ob, insts, op.1 (1696); partially ed. F. Noske (Locarno, 1988)

Trioos, rec, ob, vn, op.4 (1698); partially ed. F. Noske (Locarno, 1988)
XII sonates, 2 rec/vn/ob, op.5 (1698), lost, same music as in op.6
XII sonates, rec/vn/ob, op.6 (1698), lost, MS copy, D-W
3 ensemble suites, W

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Noske: 'Une partition hollandaise d'Athalie (1697)', Mélanges d'histoire et d'esthétique musicale offerts à Paul-Marie Masson, ii (Paris, 1955), 105–11
F. Noske: Music Bridging Divided Religions (Wilhelmshaven, 1989)
R. Rasch: 'De Dendermondse componist Servaas de Konink (1654–1701)', Gedenkschriften van de Oudheidkundige Kring van het Land van Dendermonde, x (1990), 5–35
F. Noske: 'Un caméléon musical: de Konink et la partition d'Athalie', 'Athalie': Racine et la tragédie biblique, ed. M. Couvreur (Brussels, 1992), 145–6
R. Rasch: 'Servaas de Konink et les représentations d'Athalie à Amsterdam', ibid., 133–44

RUDOLF A. RASCH

Koninklijke Vereniging voor Nederlandse Muziekgeschiedenis [KVNM; Royal Society for the History of Netherlands Music]. Dutch musicological society. It is the oldest surviving musicological society, founded in 1868 on the initiative of Jan Pieter Heije as a section of the Maatschappij tot Bevordering der Toonkunst; it became independent in 1889. From 1873 to 1911 its name was Vereeniging voor Noord Nederlands Muziekgeschiedenis. At first the society was principally concerned with the publication of music and documents of Dutch music from the 15th century to the 17th; in 1909 the 'Noord' was dropped from its title and by 1959 the scope of the society's activities had broadened to include all periods of music history. In 1993 the society was awarded the epithet 'Koninklijke'.

The society published a yearbook, Bouwsteenen, from 1872; it was superseded in 1882 by the periodical Tijdschrift der Vereeniging voor Noord-Nederlands Muziekgeschiedenis, now known as the Tijdschrift van de Vereniging voor Nederlandse Muziekgeschiedenis. The society's first music publication appeared in 1869 (Sweelinck's Regina coeli, ed. H.A. Viotta). The society undertook the publication (1894–1901) of the complete works of Sweelinck in nine volumes, edited by Max Seiffert, followed by the complete works (1908–21) of Obrecht, edited by Johannes Wolf. In 1921 Albert Smijers started to edit the complete works of Josquin, which were completed after Smijers's death (1957) by Mirosław Antonowycz and Willem Elders.

After the presidencies of D.F. Scheurleer (1885–1927) and Albert Smijers (1934–57), Eduard Reeser was elected; the scope of the society continued to expand. New series of publications were created: Monumenta musica neerlandica (MMN), Exempla musica neerlandica (EMN) and Muziekhistorische Monografieën. For the centenary of Alphons Diepenbrock, Reeser published the first volume of his Brieven en documenten (1962). A few years later the society took in hand a second edition of the complete works of Sweelinck. The 1980s saw the start of large new projects: the New Obrecht Edition (general editor Chris Maas) and the New Josquin Edition, in cooperation with the AMS. The society also functions as a meeting-place for Dutch musicologists.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Bottenheim: Catalogus van de bibliotheek der Vereeniging voor Nederlandsche muziekgeschiedenis (Amsterdam, 1919)
E. Reeser, ed.: De Vereeniging voor Nederlandsche muziekgeschiedenis 1868–1943: gedenkboek (Amsterdam, 1943)
De Vereeniging voor Nederlandsche muziekgeschiedenis 1868–1968: Chronologie (Amsterdam, 1968) [incl. list of all the pubns of the society]
100 jaar muziek en wetenschap in Nederland, Gemeentemuseum, 28 Nov 1968 – 13 Jan 1969 (The Hague, 1968) [exhibition catalogue]
C. von Gleich: 'The Society for Dutch Music History', FAM, xxi (1974), 134–6
P. van Reijen: 'De Vereniging voor Nederlandse Muziekgeschiedenis Chronologie 1968–1993', TVNM, xliii (1993), 141–83

CLEMENS VON GLEICH

Koninklijke Vlaamse Opera (Flem.: 'Royal Flemish Opera'). Company founded in ANTWERP in 1893; it was known simply as the Vlaamsche Opera until 1920.

Konitz, Lee (b Chicago, 13 Oct 1927). American jazz alto saxophonist. In his youth he studied the clarinet with a member of the Chicago SO, which probably helped to form his later 'cool' tone on the saxophone. After taking up the alto saxophone, he played in 1947 with Claude Thornhill's band, which was the source of much of the talent that shaped cool jazz in New York. This established his contact with Miles Davis, and he took a leading part in the latter's famous nonet performances and recordings of 1948–50.

Konitz had by this time already begun his association with Lennie Tristano, under whose influence and tutelage his mature style emerged; among his recordings with Tristano was Subconscious-Lee (1949, NewJ). After breaking with Tristano, he toured Scandinavia (1951) and worked in Stan Kenton's big band (1952–3). From this time on he mainly led his own small groups, occasionally touring abroad but generally shunning publicity and exposure. In 1954–5 he recorded again with Tristano.

Konitz withdrew from music in the early 1960s but re-emerged in the middle of the decade to establish links with the experimental jazz of Paul and Carla Bley. Rejecting the premises of avant-garde jazz, he then returned to improvising over chord sequences, probing and deepening his basic style of the 1950s. He was also active as a private teacher, conducting lessons by tape with students throughout the world and issuing a useful duet series for Music Minus One. In 1975–6 he joined up with Warne Marsh, his fellow sideman in earlier sessions with Tristano, to tour Europe and record; also in 1975 he founded his own nonet modelled on that of Davis. He continued to perform regularly in clubs and at festivals in the 1980s.

Konitz is the foremost saxophonist in the cool style of jazz, and one of the few alto saxophonists of his generation to create a viable jazz style outside the dominating influence of Charlie Parker. Unlike Parker, he cultivated a smooth sound with few overtones and no vibrato, much like the French classical approach to the instrument. He also rejected Parker's characteristic rhythmic procedures, preferring to play evenly and smoothly over the full range of the instrument without the sudden cross-accents, counter-rhythms and formulae of bop. This enabled him to create long serpentine lines, rich in harmonic implications, with an almost metronomical precision but with varied subdivisions of the beat and a discreet, urgent sense of swing (ex.1). Konitz's concept ideally coincided with

Tristano's contrapuntal approach to group improvisation, and it is in performances with adherents of the Tristano

Ex.1 Solo from G. Mulligan: Lover Man (1953, PJ); transcr. J. Mehegan school, such as Billy Bauer and Sal Mosca, that Konitz is heard to best advantage, particularly in duet with other like-minded improvisers.

Later Konitz broadened his style to include blues inflections and elements of bop. His influence is immediately apparent in the work of the West Coast alto saxophonists Art Pepper, Bud Shank and Paul Desmond, and also played a decisive role in the emergence of European jazz in the 1950s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Morgan: 'Lee Konitz', Jazz Monthly, v/4 (1959), 4–6
M. Harrison and M. James: 'Lee Konitz: a Dialogue', Jazz Review, iii/6 (1960), 10–12
D. Heckman: 'Lee Konitz', Jazz Review, iii/1 (1960), 28–9
M. James: 'Lee Konitz', Ten Modern Jazzmen (London, 1960), 49–64
N. Tesser: 'Lee Konitz: Searches for the Perfect Solo', Down Beat, xlvii/1 (1980), 16
W. Balliett: 'Ten Levels', Jelly Roll, Jabbo and Fats (New York, 1983), 177–86
M. Frohne: Subconscious-Lee: 35 Years of Records and Tapes: the Lee Konitz Discography, 1947–1982 (Freiburg, 1983)
H. Hellhund: Cool Jazz: Grundzüge seiner Entstehung und Entwicklung (Mainz, 1985)
G. Schuller: 'Lee Konitz', Musings: the Musical Worlds of Gunther Schuller (New York, 1986), 98–101
W. Enstice and P. Rubin: 'Lee Kontiz', Jazz Spoken Here: Conversations with Twenty-two Musicians (Baton Rouge, LA, 1992), 197–211
Oral history material in US-NEij

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Konjović, Petar (b Čurug, Bačka, 5 May 1883; d Belgrade, 1 Oct 1970). Serbian composer and writer on music. After attending the Sombor Teachers' Training College he went to the Prague Conservatory, where he studied composition under Stecker (1904–6). Until World War I he worked as a music teacher and choirmaster in Zemun and Belgrade. He returned to Sombor during the war, and in 1917 he moved to Zagreb where, for the first time, his music was heard in public at a concert devoted to his works. It was also in Zagreb that his first opera, Ženidba Miloša Obilića, ili Vilin veo ('The Marriage of Miloš Obilić, or The Fairy's Veil', 1917), had its première. At that time he wrote on music and the theatre for various periodicals. He was director of the Croatian National Opera (1921–6, 1933–5) and of theatres in Osijek, Split and Novi Sad between 1927 and 1933. From 1939 he lived in Belgrade, where he was a professor at the academy of music (1939–51) and twice rector. He was elected to full membership of the Serbian Academy of Sciences and Arts in 1946, and was founder-director of its musicological institute (1947–54). In addition, he was made a foreign member of the Czechoslovak Academy of Sciences and Arts in 1937.

Besides the majority of his compositions, which continued the aesthetic of Mokranjac and Czech music, he composed in a late Romantic style that included Impressionistic elements. His studies in Prague had a decisive influence on his music: acquaintance with the work of Janáček and Musorgsky contributed to his determined orientation towards folk music, a source which he regarded as a 'fertilizer' of art music. Following Janáček, he consistently drew melodies from speech intonation. In the operas that followed the Weberian The Marriage of Miloś Obilič he adopted the symphonic music drama form, together with what he described as 'realistic expressive recitatives'; in Knez od Zete ('The Prince of Zeta') the lives of Montenegrins and Venetians are portrayed by the contrast of Romantic musical language with Montenegrin songs. Koštana, is a powerful psychological study, taking up south Serbian folk motifs in a style of luxurious orchestral brilliance and great melodic richness. As with many of his works, he revised Koštana several times, and in 1936 made an independent Simfonijski triptihon [Symphonic Triptych], highly various in rhythm and mood. Konjović's songs include 100 folksong arrangements collected as Moja zemlja ('My Country') and a set of 24 original songs, Lirika, which show an impressionist treatment of voice and piano, and also a characteristically Serbian oriental feeling. His inventive choral pieces, such as Tri ženska hora ('Three Female Choruses') and several of the orchestral works, are inspired by folk music. Despite the range of influence to which he was open, there is always strong individuality in Konjović's work. He brought a new depth and contemporary awareness to Serbian music.

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE

Ženidba Miloša Obilića, ili Vilin veo [The Marriage of Miloš Obilić, or The Fairy's Veil] (op, 3, D. Ilić, 1917, Zagreb, 25 April 1917; rev., Belgrade , 4 Oct 1922
Knez od Zete [The Prince of Zeta] (musical drama, 4, after L. Kostić, 1927, Belgrade, 1 June 1929; rev., 29 Dec 1946
Koštana (op, 3, after B. Stanković), 1931, Zagreb, 16 April 1931; rev., Belgrade, 29 May 1940; rev., Belgrade, 4 April 1948
Seljaci [The Peasants] (op, 3, J. Konjović, after J. Veselinović and D. Brzak), 1951; Belgrade, 3 March 1951
Otadžbina [The Fatherland] (solemn sacred spectacle, 3, after I. Vojnović), 1960; Belgrade, 19 Oct 1983
Orch: Serbia liberata, sym. poem, 1906; Sym., c, 1907, rev. D. Jakšić, 1954; Na selu [In the Country], sym. variations, 1915, rev. 1936; Koštana, sym. triptych, 1936; Jadranski kapričo [Adriatic Capriccio], vn, orch, 1937; Makar Čudra, sym. poem, 1944; 3 psalma, str, 1964
Vocal: Lirika, 24 songs, 1v, pf, 1903–22; Moja zemlja [My Country], 100 folksong arrs., 1v, pf, 1903–38; 20 choral pieces, incl. Tri ženska hora [3 Female Choruses], 1917
Chbr: 2 str qts, 1917, 1937; pf and vn pieces
Principal publishers: Edition Slave, Napredak, Prosveta, Srpska Akademija Nauka i Umetnosti, Udruženje Kompozitora Srbije

WRITINGS

Ličnosti [Personalities] (Zagreb, 1920)
Knjiga o muzici srpskoj i slovenskoj [Book of Serbian and Slavonic music] (Novi Sad, 1947)
Miloje Milojević (Belgrade, 1954)
Stevan Mokranjac (Belgrade, 1956)
Ogledi o muzici [Essays on music] (Belgrade, 1965)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO (R. Pejović)
P. Milošević: 'Petar Konjović', Zvuk, no.2 (1933), 41–3
Special issues of Zvuk, no.58 (1963) and Pro musica (1968), no.37
V. Peričić: Muzički stvaraoci u Srbiji [Musical creators in Serbia] (Belgrade, 1969)

Spomenica posvećena preminulom akademiku Petru Konjoviću [Memorial to the late Academician, Peter Konjovic] (Belgrade, 1971)
S. Đurić-Klajn: Serbian Music through the Ages (Belgrade, 1972)
S. Nikolajević: Libretistički postupak Petra Konjovića (Belgrade, 1984)
Život i delo Petra Konjovića: Belgrade 1983 [with Eng. summary]
Folklor i njegova umetnička transpozicija: Belgrade 1987 [summaries in Eng., Fr., Ger.]
R. Pejović: Kritike, članci i posebne publikacije u srpskoj muzičkoj prošlosti [Critiques, articles and other publications in Serbia's musical past] (Belgrade, 1994)
Srpska muzička scena: Belgrade 1993, ed. N. Mosusova (Belgrade, 1995) [summaries in Eng., Fr., Ger.]

STANA ĐURIĆ-KLAJN/ROKSANDA PEJOVIĆ

Kono, Kristo (b Korça, 17 July 1907; d Tirana, 22 Jan 1991). Albanian composer. After early training in Korça from the composer Thomas Nasi, he obtained a scholarship to attend the Schola Cantorum, Paris, where he studied the clarinet and took harmony lessons with Le Flem (1927–8). He then enrolled at the Conservatorio di Musica G. Verdi, Milan, from which he graduated in 1932. On his return to Albania, he was briefly professor of music at the Pedagogical Institute, Tirana, before taking up an appointment in 1933 at the Shkolla Normale, Gjirokastra. In 1936 he settled as a music teacher and band leader in Korça; after his appointment to the Committee of Fine Arts and Culture in 1945, he divided his time between that city and the capital. He served as director of the Palace of Culture, Korça (1953–62), and from 1962 until his death worked as a 'free professional composer', salaried by the state.

Kono's music played an important role in Albanian musical life in the 1950s and 60s. His stage work Agimi (1954), generally acknowledged as the first Albanian operetta, was performed 87 times throughout the country. His music rarely appeared on concert programmes in the 1980s, perhaps partly as a result of the criticism his unperformed opera Prometheu (1965) drew from Enver Hoxha on account of its non-socialist subject matter. His songs, like his arias, betray a rich and spontaneous melodic gift, which owes something to his knowledge of Italian opera. Of his many mass songs the best known is Marsh partizan ('Partisan March', 1944).

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE

Studenti [The Student] (musical sketch, ?1), Korça, *c*1938; Grua me mjekër [The Bearded Woman] (musical sketch), *c*1938; Agimi [Dawn] (operetta, 3, K. Jakova), Korça, 1954; Së bashku, jeta është e bukur [Life is Beautiful Together] (operetta, 3, A. Mara and A. Skali), Korça, 1957; Lulja e kujtimit [The Flower of Remembrance] (op, 3, Mara and Skali, after F. Postoli), Tirana, 1961, rev. version, Tirana, 1978; Brigadjerja [The Girl of the Brigade] (operetta, V. Ziko), 1964; Prometheu (op, 1, Ziko, after Aeschylus), 1965, unperf.

VOCAL

35 school songs (Asdreni [A.S. Drenova]), mixed chorus, small orch, 1933–6, incl. Vjeshta [Autumn], Mëma [Mother], Mir se na erdhe përseri e bukura pranvera [Once Again, Welcome Fair Spring]
Mass songs (for mixed chorus, orch unless otherwise stated): Kënga e Brigades VIII [Song of the 8th Brigade] (?Z. Mero), 1943; Marsh partizan [Partisan March] (A. Skali), male chorus, band, 1944; Kënga e Brigades II [Song of the 2nd Brigade] (K. Cepa), 1944; Kanali Myzeqesë [The Canal of Myzeqe], ?1945; Shqipëria e re [New Albania]; Ushtarë të popullit [People's Soldiers], male chorus, orch, 1945–8; Me gjak do ta mbrojmë kufinë [With Blood we shall Defend the Frontier], male chorus, orch, ?1945–6; Republikë [Republic], 1945–6; Të mbjellim [Let us Sow], ?1946–7; Udha e dritës [The Way of Light], ?1948–9; Dhuratë Stalinit [A Present to Stalin], *c*1951–2; Enveri na prin ndër beteja [Enver Leads us to the Battle], *c*1951–2; Fëmijve të lumtur të Shqipërisë [Happy Children of Albania], children's chorus, orch, 1952–3
Other choral-orch: Rapsodite korale [Rhapsodies with Chorus], mixed chorus, orch: no.1, 1938, no.2, 1939; Borova martire [The Martyrdom of Borova] (vocal sym. poem, Kono), B, mixed chorus, orch, 1948–53; Labëria (vocal sym. poem, A. Varfi), nar, ?T, ?Bar, mixed chorus, orch, 1950; Rapsodite korale nos.3–4, mixed chorus, orch, 1950–60; Me ty Parti, me ty përherë [With Thee, O Party, with Thee Always], cant., mixed chorus, orch, 1951–3; 3 short cants., mixed chorus, orch, after 1953: Kantat e Partisë [Cant. for the Party], Zemra e maleve [The Heart of the Mountains], Shqipëri e re [New Albania]; Malli për Atdhe [Longing for the Fatherland] (vocal sym. poem, N. Frasheri), nar, male v, mixed chorus, orch, 1956; Lavdi, Tetorit të math [Glory to the Great October], B, mixed chorus, ?orch
Songs: Asnjë shpresë [Hopeless], B, pf, before 1932; Vjollcat/Vjollcave [Violets/To Violets], male v, pf, before 1932; Kthehu [Come back], male v, pf, before 1932; Kënga e prikës [The Song of the Dowry] (K. Cepo), male v, pf, before 1932; Vasha dhe hëna [The Maiden and the Moon], S, pf, *c*1945; Kënga e tallazeve [The Song of the Waves], B, pf, after 1945; Shqipëri, vend trimash [Albania, Land of the Valiants], male v, pf, after 1945; Vëllezerve të rënë [To our Brothers, Fallen in Battle], male v, pf, after 1945; Me këngët e mia [With my Songs], male v, pf, after 1945; Dallëndyshet [Swallows], children's song, 1v, pf, after 1945
Numerous transcrs. of folksongs and popular songs

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Rapsodia Shqiptare [Albanian Rhapsody], no.1, perf. 1942; Valle Shqiptare [Albanian Dances], 1947; Mezhgorani, fantasia, 1947; Fantasia Shqiptare [Albanian Phantasy], 1947; Bredhat e Drenovës [Fir-Trees of Drenova], sym. poem, 1947; Kompozitorët në Selitë [Composers at Selitë], ?1951; Rapsoditë Shqiptare [Albanian Rhapsodies]: no.2, 1958, no.3, 1960, no.4, 1969, no.5, *c*1971, no.6, 1980; Ov., 1978; Albanian Rhapsody no.6, 1980; Fantasia, cl, orch; Suite; sym. dances
Other: Settimino, fl, ob, eng hn, cl, bn, hn, db, 1970; 13 pieces for music schools, various insts, pf

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Hoxha: Mbi letërsine dhe artin (Nëntor 1942–Nëntor 1976) [On literature and art (November 1942–1976)] (Tirana, 1976)
S. Kalemi: Arritjet e artit tonë muzikor: vepra dhe krijues të muzikës Shqiptare [Achievements of our musical art: creations and creators of Albanian music] (Tirana, 1982)
P. Bello: 'Le mouvement musical à Korça depuis la fin du XXe siècle jusqu'à la libération du pays', Les lettres albanaises, no.3 (1987), 172–80

GEORGE LEOTSAKOS

Konotop, Anatoly Viktorovych (b Kharkiv, 28 August 1937). Ukrainian musicologist. He was educated at L′viv Conservatory in musicology and the organ (1956–61) and later pursued postgraduate studies at Moscow Conservatory (1970–72) with V.V. Protopopov and M.V. Brazhnikov, gaining the kandidat degree (1974) with a dissertation on the Suprasl Heirmologion. He taught at the Kiev and L′viv conservatories (1972–6, 1976–85) and in 1985 began working at the State Institute of Art, Moscow, as a senior research fellow. In 1996 he defended his doctorate thesis on Russian polyphony at the Institute for the History of Art, St Petersburg. The main focus of his study has been early Russian polyphony, style and textology in 17th-century polyphony, and links between professional and folk music of the period. Besides his academic work, he has been concerned with the integration of early Russian choral music into modern culture and has prepared early Russian concert programmes and made recordings of psalms whose notation he has deciphered.

WRITINGS

'K voprosu rasshifrovki pevcheskikh notolineynïkh pamyatnikov XVII veka' [A contribution to deciphering 17th-century vocal music in staff notation], SovM (1973), no.7, pp.78–85

Suprasl'skiy irmologion 1598–1601 i teoriya transpozitsii znamennogo raspeva: na materiale pevcheskikh notolineynïkh rukopisey XVII veka [The Suprasl Heirmologion of 1598–1601 and the theory of transposition of the znamennïy chant: on the singers' stave-notated manuscripts of the 17th century] (diss., Moscow Conservatory, 1974)

'Struktura Suprasl'skogo irmologiona 1598–1601: drevneyshego pamyatnika ukrainskogo notolineynogo pis'ma' [The structure of the Suprasl Heirmologion of 1598–1601: the oldest record of Ukrainian staff notation], Musica antiqua IV: Bydgoszcz 1975, 522–33

'Drevneyshiy pamyatnik ukrainskogo notolineynogo pis'ma: Suprasl'skiy Irmologion 1598–1601' [The oldest record of Ukrainian notation: the Suprasl Heirmologion, 1598–1601], Pamyatniki kul'turï: noviye otkrïtiya 1974 (Moscow, 1975), 285–93

'Ob odnom muzïkal'no-paleograficheskom priznake "tsarskogo" irmologiya 1680 g.' [Concerning a musical-palaeographic indication of the 'tsar's' heirmologion of 1680'], Musica antiqua V: Bydgoszcz 1978, 531–41

'O nekotorïkh printsipakh prochteniya russkikh notolineynïkh rukopisey XVI–XVII vekov' [Some principles for reading staff notation in Russian musical manuscripts of the 16th–17th centuries], Teoreticheskiye nablyudeniya nad istoriyey muzïki (Moscow, 1978), 200–24

'K probleme proiskhozhdeniya i ispolnitel'skogo vosproizvedeniya strochnogo peniya' [The origins and performance of staff-notated choral music], Musica antiqua VI: Bydgoszcz 1982, 777–90

'Strochnoye peniye v kontekste chinovnikov russkoy tserkvi XVII v.' [Strochnoye singing in the context of the officialdom of the 17th-century Russian church], Musica antiqua VII: Bydgoszcz 1985, 667–78

'Bolgarskiy rospev v nevmennïkh partiturakh XVII v.' [Bulgarian chants in the neumatic scores of the 17th century], Bulgarian Studies II: Sofia 1986

'Noviy pamyatnik russkoy muzïkal'no-teoreticheskoy mïsli XVIII veka' [A new example of Russian 18th-century musicological theory], Musica antiqua: folio musica V, 4 no.2 (Bydgoszcz, 1986)

'Vologodskiye pevcheskiye stroki' [Notated lines of choral music from Vologda], Pamyatniki kul'turï: noviye otkrïtiya 1985 (Moscow, 1987), 165–70

'"Musikiya" Koreneva o zvukovïsotnoy organizatsii i stilevoy oriyentatsii strochnogo mnogogolosiya XVII veka' [Korenev's Musikiya on the pitch organization and style orientation of strochnoy polyphony of the 17th century], Musica antiqua VIII: Bydgoszcz 1988, 527–42

'Novoye tolkovaniye putno-demestvennogo znaka "Ye": k problemï sokhraneniya i rasprostraneniya vizantiyskoy pevcheskoy traditsii na Rusi' [A new interpretation of the sign 'E' in demestvennïy chant notation: the problem of preserving and disseminating the Byzantine choral tradition in Russia], Starinnaya muzïka v kontekste sovremennoy kul'turï: problemï interpretatsii i istochnikovedeniya, ed. T. Baranova (Moscow, 1989), 436–68

'Tserkovnoye peniye po khironomii s isonom na Rusi v X–XVI vv' [Hyronomia with ison chant in Russia during the 10th century to the 16th], Byzantine specialists XVIII: Moscow 1991

with G.L. Golovinskiy: 'Musorgskiy i drevnerusskaya pevcheskaya traditsiya: opït prakticneskoy razrabotki problemï' [Musorgsky and early Russian choral-singing traditions: the path to a practical consideration], Muzïkal'naya akademiya (1993), no.1, pp.203–6

'Iz istorii monastïrskikh rospevov Drevney Rusi (putnoy rospev)' [The history of Old Russian monastic chanting (putnoy chant)], MAk (1995), no.3, 128–32

Russkoye strochnoye mnogogolosiye: tekstologiya, stil', kul'turnïy kontekst [Russian linear polyphony: textology, style and cultural context] (diss., Institute for the History of Art, St Petersburg, 1996)

'Znacheniye notolineynïkh rukopisey dlya ponimaniya strochnogo peniya' [The importance of line-notated manuscripts for understanding strochnoy singing], MAk (1996), no.1, pp.173–80

NATAL'YA SEMYONOVNA SERYOGINA

Konrad, Ulrich (b Bonn, 14 Aug 1957). German musicologist. He studied musicology at the universities of Vienna and Bonn with Kross, Massenkeil and Emil Platen and took the doctorate at Bonn in 1983. He worked as a research assistant (1983–91) and lecturer (1991–3) at Göttingen University, and completed his Habilitation there in 1991 with a study on Mozart's autographs and sketches. He was professor of musicology at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik in Freiburg (1993–6) and in 1996 became professor at the University of Würzburg. His principal areas of research are Mozart, Weber, Nicolai and Schumann, church music and the history of musicology. He is a contributing editor of the new collected editions of Mozart and Schumann, a member of the Zentralinstitut für Mozartforschung der Internationalen Stiftung Mozarteum and an assistant editor of the New Köchel catalogue. He was awarded the Dent Medal of the Royal Musical Association in 1996.

WRITINGS

Otto Nicolai (1810–1849): Studien zu Leben und Werk (diss., U. of Bonn, 1983; Baden-Baden, 1986)

ed., with A. Roth and M. Staehelin: Musikalischer Lustgarten: kostbare Zeugnisse der Musikgeschichte, Herzog August Bibliothek, Wolfenbüttel, 5 May – 1 Dec 1985 (Wolfenbüttel, 1985) [exhibition catalogue]

'Ökonomie und dennoch: Reichtum: zur Formbildung im ersten Satz des Trios für Klavier, Klarinette und Violoncello a-Moll, op.114 von Johannes Brahms', Collegium Musicologicum: Festchrift Emil Platen zum sechzigsten Geburtstag, ed. M. Gutierrez-Denhoff (Bonn, 1986), 153–74

'Der Wiener Kompositionswettbewerb 1835 und Franz Lachners Sinfonia passionata: ein Beitrag zur Geschichte der Sinfonie nach Beethoven', Augsburger Jb für Musikwissenschaft, iii (1986), 209–39

'Johann August Günther Heinroth: ein Beitrag zur Göttinger Musikpflege und Musikwissenschaft im 19. Jahrhundert', Musikwissenschaft und Musikpflege an der Georg-August-Universität Göttingen, ed. M. Staehelin (Göttingen, 1987), 43–77

'Der Beitrag evangelischer Komponisten zur Messenkomposition im 19. Jahrhundert', KJb, lxxi (1987), 65–92

'Robert Schumann und Richard Wagner: Studien und Dokumente', Augsburger Jb für Musikwissenschaft, iv (1987), 211–320

'Carl Maria von Weber und das Nationaltheater Braunschweig: zur Frühgeschichte des Freischütz', Quaestiones in musica: Festschrift für Franz Krautwurst, ed. F. Brusniak and H. Leuchtmann (Tutzing, 1989), 303–16

'Otto Nicolai und die Palestrina-Renaissance', Palestrina und die Kirchenmusik im 19. Jahrhundert, ed. W. Kirsch (Regensburg, 1989), 117–42

ed., with M. Staehelin: Allzeit ein Buch: die Bibliothek Wolfgang Amadeus Mozarts (Wolfenbüttel, 1991)

'Bemerkungen zu Problemen der Edition von Mozart-Skizzen', Mf, xliv (1991), 331–45

Mozarts Schaffensweise: Studien zu den Werkautographen, Skizzen und Entwürfen (Habilitationschrift, U. of Göttingen, 1991; Göttingen, 1992)

'Mozart's Sketches', EMc, xx (1992), 119–30

'Ochs, Donna Anna und Max im Wirtshausgarten: zum dramatischen Kontext der "Zitate" in Bergs Wozzeck (II, 4)', Musik als Text: Freiburg 1993, ii, 480–86

'Fragmente aus der Gegenwart: Mozarts unvollendete Kompositionen für Streichquintett', Mozarts Streichquintette, ed. C. Eisen and W.-D. Seiffert (Stuttgart, 1995), 163–93

'Instrumental Kompositionen von Heinrich Bach (1615–1692) zwei bislang unbeachtete Sonaten in einem Gothaer Partiturbuch', BJb 1995, 93–113

'"... Mithin liess ich meinen gedanken freyen lauf": erste Überlegungen und Thesen zu den "Fassungen" von W.A. Mozarts "Die Entführung aus dem Serail" KV384', Opernkomposition als Prozess: Bochum 1995, 47–64

'Neuentdecktes und wiedergefundenes Werkstattmaterial Wolfgang Amadeus Mozarts: erster Nachtrag zum Katalog der Skissen und Entwürfe', MJb 1995, 1–28

'Leben-Werk-Analyse: vorläufige Gedanken zu Form und Funktion der Analyse in der Mozart-Biographik von 1800 bis 1920', Zur Geschichte der Analyse Mozartscher Musik im 19. und frühen 20. Jahrhundert, ed. G. Gruber and S. Mauser (forthcoming)

KONRAD KÜSTER

Konrad von Würzburg [Würzburc; Meyster Conrat von Wertzeburc] (b Würzburg, *c*1230; d Basle, 31 Aug 1287). German poet and composer. He was the most distinguished and successful German poet of the late 13th century. He was of bourgeois origin, and after a thorough education he became an itinerant musician, later settling in Basle and Strasbourg; he was probably the first Minnesinger to earn his living from writing, and, thanks to his city life and clients, counted patricians, noblemen and ecclesiastical lords among his patrons. His work shows him to be the most individual poetic figure from the second half of the 13th century and suggests that his knowledge of Latin and his understanding of theology and the law were considerable. Although he was in the direct line of descent from the classic courtly poetry of Gotfrid von Strassburg, Konrad managed to develop a style that was terse in its language but at the same time exhibited a wealth of images, similes and learned arabesques. His virtuoso poetic talent, brilliant formal skill and masterly originality of formulation transcend the transitional era in which he lived.

Konrad's massive output, totalling some 85,000 lines and including all poetic genres, survives in many manuscripts. This suggests that educated society took a lively interest in his thematic range. He seems also to have had a profound effect on later generations of poets: he was praised by, among others, Boppe, Frauenlob and Heinrich von Mügeln. In particular, the Meistersinger numbered him among their 12 alte Meister. His lyric poetry comprises 23 songs: nine summer songs, ten winter songs, two dawn songs, a sacred Leich and a secular Leich (Tanzleich) as well as numerous Sprüche (see SPRUCH): 51 stanzas are now considered to be authentic. There is also a long allegorical poem, Die Klage der Kunst, and the epics Engelhard (after a Latin source), Partonopier und Meliur and Buoch von Troye (unfinished); but his real strength was in the minor epic, especially the Versnovelle: Herzmaere, Otte mit dem Barte, Schwanritter and Der Welt Lohn. His hymn to the Virgin, Die goldene Schmeide, represents the culmination of the florid style.

The music for his poetry raises many questions of authenticity: the only early source for a melody by Konrad (in the Jena manuscript, D-Ju El.f.101) contains music for the 'Hofton' which is only very distantly related to that in the source containing most surviving Konrad melodies (the 15th-century Colmar manuscript, D-Mbs Cgm 4997). The survival of so much music for a 13th-century poet in a manuscript of 200 years later represents an extreme case of the fundamental problem in German song transmission: the poetic form is Konrad's, but probably not the music even though it is implicitly ascribed to him. The single melody in the Jena manuscript is much more florid and formally free than those in the Colmar manuscript.

WORKS

Editions: Kleinere Dichtungen Konrads von Würzburg, ed. E. Schröder, iii (Berlin, 1926, 2/1959) [standard complete text edn]
Die Sangesweisen der Colmarer Handschrift, ed. P. Runge (Leipzig, 1896/R) [R]
Das Singebuch des Adam Puschman, ed. G. Münzer (Leipzig, 1906/R) [M]
The Art of the Minnesinger, ed. R.J. Taylor (Cardiff, 1968) [T]

EARLY MELODIES

'Hofton' with text Der nît sîn Vahs vil tunkel verwet, Jena MS (D-Ju El.f.101), f.101, ascribed 'Meyster Conrat von Wertzeburc'; T i, 36

MELODIES IN MEISTERSINGER MSS late and therefore of dubious authenticity

'Hofton' with text Waz in dem Paradys ie wart, Mbs Cgm 4997 (Colmar MS), f.531, ascribed 'In Cunrads von Wirczburg Hoff Don'; cf different melodies in Ju and PL-WRu 356 (lost: Adam Puschman's Singebuch), no.63; R 128, M 63, T i, 37
'Abgespitzter Ton', with text Aus der Dieffe schrei ich zu dir; M 64
'Aspislied' with text Hoffart ist worden also gross, D-Mbs Cgm 4997, f.506, ascribed 'In meinster Cunrades von Wirczburg Auspis', ? for text An Liuten hât diu Gotes Kraft; R 126, T i, 34
'Morgenweise' with text Ave Maria, kusche Maget stete, Mbs Cgm 4997, f.512, ascribed 'In Cunradz von Wirczburg Morgenwyse', ? for text Wart ie bezzer iht vür ungemüete; R 126, T i, 35

MELODIES CONSIDERED SPURIOUS

'Blauer Ton' with text Er mac vil lîhte Witze hân, Mbs Cgm 4997, f.541*v*, ascribed 'In Meinster Cunratz von Wirczeburg blawen Ton' but in PL-WRu 356 to Regenbogen; R 129, M 45, T i, 116
'Goldene Reihen' with text Wolûff ir Geist, hin über Mêr, D-Mbs Cgm 4997, f.43, ascribed 'Meinster Cunrads guldin Reyel'; R 27, T i, 117
'Kurzer Ton' or 'Werder Ton' with text Dez soltû clein geniessen, Mbs Cgm 4997, f.528, ascribed 'In Conratz von Wirtzburg kurczen oder im werden Don' [but the same Ton appears in HEu 392 ascribed 'In dem freyen Don Erenpots von Rein']; R 128, T i, 115
'Nachtweise' with text Avê, ich lob dich, reine Meit, Mbs Cgm 4997, f.526, ascribed 'In Conrads von Wirczburg Nachtwyse; alii dicunt esse in Frider von Suneburg sussem Don'; R 127, T i, 115

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Brauneck: Die Lieder Konrads von Würzburg (Bamberg, 1964)
H. Brunner: 'Konrad von Würzburg', Die deutsche Literatur des Mittelalters: Verfasserlexikon, ed. K. Ruh and others (Berlin, 2/1977–)
W. Arlt: 'Konrad von Würzburg und die Musik', Das ritterliche Basel: zum 700. Todestag Konrads von Würzburg, Stadt- und Münstermuseum, Kleine Klingental, Basle, 20 May – 23 Aug 1987, ed. C. Schmid-Cadalbert (Basle, 1987), 73–82 [exhibition catalogue]
F. Schanze, B. Wachinger and others, eds.: Repertorium der Sangsprüche und Meisterlieder, iv (Tübingen, 1988), 183–228
J. Dettelbach: 'Aspis, du meisterlicher Ton! Konrads von Würzburg Sangspruchtöne in der Tradition', Jb der Oswald von Wolkenstein-Gesellschaft, v (1988–9) [Konrad von Würzburg issue], 133–46
G. Hübner: 'Versuch über Konrad von Würzburg als Minnelyriker', Artibus: Kulturwissenschaft und deutsch Philologie des Mittelalters und der frühen Neuzeit: Festschrift für Dieter Wuttke zum 65. Geburtstag, ed. S. Füssel, G. Hübner and J. Knape (Wiesbaden, 1994), 63–94

BURKHARD KIPPENBERG/LORENZ WELKER

Konstanz [Constance]. City in southern Germany. It stands on the site of a Roman fort, Constantia (*c*300 CE), named after Emperor Constantius Chlorus. In the 6th century it became the bishop's see of the largest German diocese, and in 1192 the emperor raised it to a Freie Reichsstadt. When the city joined the followers of Zwingli it was outlawed by Emperor Charles V, and in 1548 was annexed to Austria. During the Napoleonic wars it fell to Baden (1805), and with the dissolution of its bishopric (1821) diminished in importance. In the 20th century industry developed in the area and a university was established, and the city again flourished.

The early medieval liturgical music of Konstanz was probably influenced by the neighbouring Benedictine monasteries of St Gallen and Reichenau. Around 1300 the Minnesang flourished; the Weingartner Liederhandschrift, one of the most important sources of Minnesang, is believed to have been written in Konstanz. The Church Council, held in Konstanz between 1414 and 1418, brought musicians to the city from all parts of Europe. Episcopal, municipal and travelling minstrels played a large part in the musical life of the medieval city. In the early 16th century Emperor Maximilian I visited frequently; his musical entourage included such eminent musicians as Isaac and Hofhaimer (see illustration). In 1508, on one such visit, Isaac was commissioned by the cathedral chapter to compose the cycles of mass propers that appear in the second volume of his Choralis constantinus.

During the Reformation the Konstanz reformers Johannes Zwick and Ambrosius Blarer, with others, published the Nüw gsangbüchle. Hans Kotter, a pupil of Hofhaimer, went to Konstanz as a teacher in 1538, but after a few months returned to Berne.

For many centuries the cathedral was the centre of the city's musical life. The building was begun in Romanesque style in the 11th century, and was completed in the 16th century in Gothic style. An organ was installed between 1120 and 1134; the new instrument built by Hans Schenker (1517–20) was one of the largest of its time. Its Renaissance case survives. The provision of choral music was originally the duty of the canons; after the end of communal life, probably around 1100, the task fell to the succentors. In the early 16th century the cathedral choir consisted of nine succentors and eight boys, and was one of the leading pre-Reformation vocal groups in Germany. Outstanding members included Johannes Martini in the late 15th century, and, in the early 16th the composers Johannes Taiglin, Virdung, Wolfgang Lausser, Sixt Dietrich and Siess. Hans Buchner, another pupil of Hofhaimer, was an eminent organist there (1512–26). A gradual, supposedly published in Konstanz around 1473, is one of the earliest surviving examples of printed music.

Maximilian I's Hofkapelle in Konstanz Cathedral: miniature from Diebold Schilling the younger's 'Luzerner Bilderchronik', 1511–13 (CH-Lz S.23, f.233v)

With the spread of the Reformation the bishop, cathedral chapter and many of the clergy left the city. The cathedral choir moved to Überlingen in 1527 and Radolfzell in 1542, finally returning to Konstanz in 1549. At the end of the 16th century, following the decisions of the Council of Trent, the Roman breviary was introduced. Outstanding succentors in the late 16th century were Herpol and Geisenhof; in the 17th century the Kapellmeister Spiegler, Megerle, Banwart, Steingaden and Galley were also composers, as were C.B. Tschudi and J.A. Omlin in the 18th century. The Kapellmeister frequently held the post of organist as well. In the second half of the 17th century instruments were increasingly used, and by the 18th century the concertante style predominated in church music. The dissolution of the bishopric of Konstanz resulted in the disbanding of the cathedral choir (1827).

Monasteries and collegiate churches were other important centres of music in Konstanz. The Benedictine monastery of Petershausen, founded by 983, possessed an organ before 1159. In the 17th and 18th centuries the composers Bernard Rauchenstein, Petrus Peterle, Alfons Albertin and Aemilian Kayser were active there. The Capuchin monastery employed such composers as Laurentius von Schnüffis and Theobaldus in the 17th century, and Constantin Steingaden worked at the Franciscan monastery. During the Baroque era the Jesuits, who had gone to Konstanz in 1592, were influential through their presentation of musical dramas, meditations and dialogues. The musical repertory of the collegiate and parish church of St Stephan is typical of sacred music of the period 1750–1850; its collection of prints and manuscripts is one of the largest in south-west Germany, containing sacred music by Joseph and Michael Haydn, Mozart and Rosetti. After the dissolution of the Jesuit college in 1775, the Gymnasium became a theatre, and travelling companies performed operas, melodramas, operettas and plays there. In 1852 the theatre was taken over by the city; in 1949 Henze was engaged as musical director of the ballet, but in the following year musical productions ceased.

Konstanz's regimental band, augmented by both amateur and professional musicians, gave symphony concerts in the 19th and early 20th centuries. Since 1932 the city has had its own orchestra, originally the Städtisches Orchester, and subsequently the Bodensee SO (also known as the Südwestdeutsche Philharmonie). Of the city's choirs the Konstanzer Oratorienchor is outstanding; it originated in the Fidelia choral society, founded in 1842 and later known as the Bürgerverein Bodan.

Music printers in Konstanz have included Leonhard Straub the elder and Nikolaus Kalt (*c*1600); Jakob Straub, Johann Geng, David Hautt, Franz Straub and J.A. Köberle (17th century); and Leonhard Parcus (early 18th century). The city's organ builders include Anton Neuknecht (*c*1600), Michael Schnitzer (17th century), Elias Köberlin (*c*1700), J.M. Bihler (18th century), Melchior Reindl and Gottfried Maucher (*c*1800); in the 19th century, Benedict Grieser, Peter Nägeli and F.X. Hieber built organs and pianos in Konstanz. Violin makers of the 18th and 19th centuries include Joseph Wagner, Rudolf Abel and Conrad Nägeli.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. zur Nedden: 'Zur Musikgeschichte von Konstanz um 1500', ZMw, xii (1929–30), 449–57

O. zur Nedden: Quellen und Studien zur oberrheinischen Musikgeschichte im 15. und 16. Jahrhundert (Kassel, 1931)

W. Salmen: 'Der Spielmannsverkehr im spätmittelalterlichen Konstanz', Zeitschrift für die Geschichte des Oberrheins, cvi (1958), 176–9
M. Schuler: 'Die Konstanzer Domkantorei um 1500', 'Der Personalstatus der Konstanzer Domkantorei um 1500', AMw, xxi (1964), 23–44, 255–86
M. Schuler: 'Die Musik in Konstanz während des Konzils 1414–1418', AcM, xxxviii (1966), 150–68
M. Schuler: 'Das Noteninventar der Kollegiat- und Pfarrkirche St. Stephan in Konstanz', KJb, lviii–lix (1974–5), 85–103
M. Schuler: 'Orlando di Lasso und die Konstanzer Domkantorei', Mf, xxxiii (1980), 184–9
P. Zinsmaier: 'Die Kapellmeister am Konstanzer Münster von 1555 bis 1800', Freiburger Diözesan-Archiv, ci (1981), 66–139
M. Schuler: 'Die Bischöfe und die Musik', Die Bischöfe von Konstanz, ed. E.L. Kuhn (Friedrichshafen, 1988), ii, 239–47, 260–62
M. Schuler: 'Die Musik am Konstanzer Dom um 1100', Die Konstanzer Münsterweihe von 1089 in ihrem historischen Umfeld, ed. H. Maurer (Freiburg, 1989), 131–9

MANFRED SCHULER

Konstas of Chios, Apostolos [Konstalas, Apostoles; Krystallas, Apostoles] (b ?1767; d Constantinople, 1840). Romaic (Greek) theorist, scribe and composer. He learnt Byzantine chant from PETROS BYZANTIOS and Georgios of Crete at the Ecumenical Patriarchate in Constantinople, where his father Joannes was a priest and official. Like many other church musicians of his generation, he also became an accomplished instrumentalist in the Ottoman classical tradition. As a scribe, Konstas is known to have copied at least 106 codices, the majority of which are musical manuscripts. In addition to reproducing the works of others verbatim, he produced realizations (exēgēseis) in which orally transmitted melodic formulae (theseis) traditionally notated in shorthand were transcribed more fully, assembled pedagogical collections of 'difficult theseis' and composed many chants for the Byzantine Divine Office and eucharistic liturgies, most of which remain unpublished. Among his chants for Orthros and Hesperinos are 27 Great Doxologies, including a modally ordered series of 16 short and long settings (GR-An 1869, ff.265*r*–376*v*), the 11 morning Gospel Hymns of Emperor Leo VI (An 1869, ff.205*r*–12*v*), and many stichēra for the liturgical year, including three for Hesperinos of 15 August as transcribed by Amphilochios Docheiarites (ed. Euthymiadēs). His eucharistic chants include 11 Cherubic Hymns (nine for the Liturgy of St John Chrysostom, AOdo 389, ff.70*r*–79*v*; two for the Liturgy of the Presanctified Gifts, Athens, Benaki Museum 13, ff.601*r*–06*r*), and numerous communion verses for Sundays, weekdays and feasts. (For a full list of works see Apostolopoulos, pp.53–5.)

Konstas's significance today derives from the writings he produced as the last theorist operating within the framework of medieval Byzantine notation before its reform by CHRYSANTHOS OF MADYTOS. A member of the conservative musical faction led by JAKOBOS PELOPONNESIOS, Konstas sought to defend the received tradition through systematized instruction in performing practice, by which he claimed to reduce the training of a cantor to 18 months. In 1800 he opened a chant school in Constantinople and wrote the first of nine known versions (three are now considered lost) of a treatise explaining the realization of Byzantine notation in contemporary performance. The final revision of 1820 (GR-An 1867) contains an additional comparative section on Arabo-Persian music. Patriarchal approval for the New Method of Chrysanthos and its subsequent dissemination through printed music books, however, consigned Konstas's work to obscurity.

WRITINGS

Theōrētikon: mousikē technē, technologia, grammatikē (MS, 1820, GR-An 1867); facs. ed. C. Karakatsanēs: Byzantinē potamēis [Byzantine river], i: Theōrētikon Apostolou Konsta tou Chiou kōdix 1867 tou 1820 E.B.E [The theoretical treatise of Apostolos Konstas of Chios: codex 1867 (dated 1820) of the National Library of Greece] (Athens, 1995)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MUSIC EDITION

A. Euthymiadēs, ed.: Neon tetratomon phōnais aisiais [New four-volume collection [entitled] 'with Fitting Voices'], iv (Thessaloniki, 1991), 51

STUDIES

G.T. Stathēs: Ta cheirographa byzantinēs mousikēs: Hagion Oros [The MSS of Byzantine Music: Holy Mountain] (Athens, 1975–93)
G.T. Stathēs: Hē exēgēsis tēs palaias byzantinēs sēmeiographias [The exegesis of Old Byzantine notation] (Athens, 1978, rev. 2/1989) [with Fr. summary]
M. Chatzēgiakoumēs: Cheirographa ekklēsiastikēs mousikēs (1453–1820) [MSS of ecclesiastical music] (Athens, 1980)
S.I. Karas: Methodos tēs hellēnikēs mousikēs: theōrētikon [Method of Greek music: theoretical treatise] (Athens, 1982)
A. Alygizakēs: Ekklēsiastikoi ēchoi kai arabopersika makamia [Ecclesiastical modes and Arabo-Persian maqāmāt] (Thessaloniki, 1990)
T. Apostolopoulos: Ho Apostolos Kōnstas ho Chios kai hē symbolē tou stē theōria tēs mousikēs technēs [Apostolos Konstas of Chios and his contribution to the theory of musical art] (diss., U. of Athens, 1997)

ALEXANDER LINGAS

Kont, Paul (b Vienna, 19 Aug 1920). Austrian composer. He studied at the Vienna Conservatory (1936–40) and after World War II at the Vienna Music Academy, where his teachers included Swarowsky, Josef Krips and Josef Lechthaler. He also took lessons in analysis with Josef Polnauer, and attended courses taught by Fortner at Darmstadt (1951) and Honegger, Milhaud and Messiaen in Paris (1952). In the years that followed, Kont lived in Vienna, Berlin and Rome, devoting himself primarily to composition, but also remaining active as a writer on music. In 1969 he began to organize a course on composing for audio-visual media at the Vienna Musikhochschule; he became professor in 1980 and continued to teach until 1986.

Kont's enormous oeuvre has made him one of the most versatile of contemporary Austrian composers. Not averse to avant-garde trends, he has nevertheless sought to achieve his aims within traditional means. After initially adhering to a principle of 'captured improvisation', he soon developed a 'comprehensive technique', based 'on a tonal foundation with highly individual part-writing (heterogeneous development)' and anticipating several principles of minimal music. In his serial compositions, he has worked with statistical values, organizing sounds according to principles of frequency and creating dynamic fields with clear inner structures. His vocal works make use of metrical feet and verse forms. His 'new tonality', comprised of 35 notes based on an evolving series of overtones, proposes a conception of relative pitch based on the tension in 'real' (i.e. not equal-tempered) intervals.

WORKS

(selective list)

DRAMATIC

Ops: Indische Legende (Kurzoper, J. Mauthe), 1950, Austrian Radio, 1951, stage, Vienna, 1954; Lysistrate (3, Kont, after Aristophanes), 1957–60, Dresden, 1961; Traumleben

(musikalische Märchen, Mauthe, after F. Grillparzer), 1958, Salzburg, 1963; Celestina (musikalische Schauspiel, C. Terron and K. Paryla, after F. de Rojas), 1966, Cologne, 1966; Plutos (Kont, after Aristophanes), 1975–6, Klagenfurt, 1977
Ballets: Amores Pastorales (H. Berger), 1950; Grosse Amouren (Kont), 1952–81: Daphnis und Chloe, Abälard und Heloïse, George und Frédéric; Italia passata (Kont), 1967; Il ballo del mondo (Divertimenti mediterranei) (Kont), 1980–82: Roma – la notte, Il mare – la mattina, La terra – il pomeriggio, Venezia – La sera; K. (Kont), 1984; Lebenslauf des Klavierlehrers (Kont), 1987
Incid music, radio plays, film scores

OTHER WORKS

Orch: 3 Tanzskizzen, 1946–51; Konzertantes Triptychon: 1950–69: I 'Amores pastorales', ob, cl, str, II 'Amores bellatores' ob, hn, timp, str, III 'Amores infelices', pf, str; 4 Little Syms. with Epilogue, 1953–72 [based on W.H. Auden]; Vc Conc., 1960; Conc., brass, str, 1964; Der Raucher, vc, str, 1973 [arr. b cl, orch, 1974]; Mediterrane Harmonien, db, orch, 1976–7; Pf Conc., 1977; 3 Alt-Österreicher-Märsche, 1978; Sinfonia, 1979–80; Sinfonina 'Die Unbegonnene', 1979–80; Sym. no.1, 1979; Sym. no.5, 1980; Sym. no.2 'Den Toten' (liturgical, F. Hebbels), S, mixed chorus, orch, 1981; Sym. no.3, 1981; Sonata und Variationen 'über John Bulls Selbstbildnis', 1982; Perc Conc., 1983; Sym. no.4 'Den Liebenden' (F. Kürenberger), T, female vv, orch, 1983; Sache für Musikanten, 1985; Conc., a sax, orch, 1987; Bn Conc., 1988–90; Miss Lyss Nausick, 1988; 3 kleine Klavierkonzerte, 1989; Kolschitzky, Stranitzky, Pavlitzky (E.A. Ekker), S, T, orch, 1991; Cronica hungarica, 1992; Der rumänische Räuberhauptmann Terente, 1992; Sequenzen, 1994
Vocal: 3 Afrikan Liebessehnsuchtslieder (African texts), female v, fl, vn, pf, 1947; Das Tagverkünden (M. Claudius), S, A, T, Bar, orch, 1948, rev. 1985; Wiener Charaktere (G. Fritsch), 5 chansons, 1v, pf, 1955; Missa magistri, Tr, A, male vv, Renaissance insts, 1963; Vom Manne und vom Weibe (orat, J. Weinheber), A, Bar, chorus, solo vc, wind, high str, 1963–4; 5 Gesänge (Weinheber), Bar, vc, 1964–84; Der Rabe (E.A. Poe), spkr, str, pf, tape, 1995; see also ORCH [Sym. no.2, 1981; Sym. no.4, 1983; Kolschitzky, Stranitzky, Pavlitzky, 1991]; many other lieder (J.F. von Eichendorff)
Chbr and solo inst: Übungen I–III, 2–3 str, 1950, rev. 1984; Etüden I–III, 3–4 str, 1950, rev. 1984; Die traurigen Jäger, fl, 2 hn, timp, 2 vn, db, 1952; Holzmusik I, 4–6 ww, 1954, rev. 1982; Qnt in memoriam Fr. Danzi, wind qnt, 1961; Blachmusik I, 3–5 brass, 1966–8; Blechmusik II, 5–7 brass, 1972–3; Finis austriae, str qt, 1973–6; Holzmusik II, 2–6 ww, 1980–82; Skizzen, pic, tpt, db, 1996; Österreich, cl, pf trio, 1997; Georgica (12 Skizzen aus dem bäuerlichen Leben), 4 cl, 1988
Kbd: Heptameron, pf 4 hands, 1946; Sonata, hpd, 1946; 2 italianische Suiten, 2 pf, 1947, rev. 1981; Klavierissimo, 9 progressive exercise bks, pf, 1947–64; Alt-Wiener Tänze, pf, 1948; Duo-Toccata, org, 1948; Pariser Walzer, accdn, 1952, rev. 1994; Löwenspiele, pf 4 hands, 1953, rev. 1990; Monodien, va, 1955; Sym., org, 1992; Kleines Konzert 'Hommage à Brahms', 2 pf, 1996; Kleines Konzert 'Hommage à Prokofjew', 2 pf, 1996; Souvenir de Tango, accdn, 1996; Hommage à Mozart, 1997; 7 piano sonatas, many other works
Principal publisher: Doblinger

WRITINGS

Antiorganikum: Beobachtungen zur Neuen Musik (Vienna, 1967)
'Blick in die Zeit: Entwurf einer neuen Tonalität', Melos, xxxviii (1971), 554–5

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO (J. Clark) [incl. further bibliography]; LZMÖ; MGG1 suppl. (R. Klein)
R. Klein: 'Paul Konts Vision einer neuen Tonalität', ÖMz, xxvi (1971), 253–6
Kinsky: 'Biographie Paul Kont', Film als Instrument staatlicher Propaganda (Munich, 1993), 225–33

HARTMUT KRONES

Kontakion [kondakion] (Gk.: 'scroll'). A liturgical poem sung mainly at ORTHROS in the Byzantine rite. One of the two most important poetic forms in medieval Byzantine religious poetry (the other being the kanōn), the kontakion most likely originated in Byzantium, although a strong Syrian influence is evident, particularly the poetry of EPHREM SYRUS (cf Petersen, 1985). It is a kind of poetic homily whose narrative and dramatic content greatly influenced later Byzantine poetry. According to legend, the Blessed Virgin Mary gave to ROMANOS THE MELODIST, a notable 6th-century hymn writer and composer, a scroll on which he wrote, by divine inspiration, a Christmas kontakion, Hē parthenos sēmeron ('Today the Virgin').

Introduced into the Byzantine Hours during the 6th century, the kontakion was originally part of the Constantinopolitan 'cathedral' vigil that later came to be incorporated into Orthros (see Lingas). In its full form it consisted of an initial strophe – the prooimion or koukoulion – followed by some 18 to 30 strophes – the oikoi – whose common metrical structure was different from that of the prooimion. Each kontakion was recited in a simple manner (for ease of understanding), and the people responded with the prooimion and oikoi refrain, which underlined the main theme of the hymn. When in the 9th and 10th centuries monastic Orthros began to fuse with the cathedral Office, the full performance of the kontakion became optional. It was eventually reduced to the prooimion and first oikos alone and sung immediately after the 6th ode of the KANŌN. The melodies of the two remaining strophes were often subject to melismatic elaboration and became the showpiece of the psaltēs (soloist).

The classical collection of kontakion melodies covers the whole of the church year. Two melodic traditions are preserved in the various psaltikon manuscripts: an older, 'short' form (also referred to as 'psaltikon I') and a more recent, 'long' form ('psaltikon II'); they differ from each other to a greater extent than the shorter and longer traditions of the allēlouïarion (see ALLELUIA, §II) and the PROKEIMENON. The first two lines of the prooimion of the Christmas kontakion Hē parthenos sēmeron illustrate the 'short' kontakion tradition (see ex.1, taken from the 13th-century manuscript I-Rvat Ashb.64). In general, however, this festival hymn is not typical of the kontakion style but is more akin to the celebrated Akathistos Hymn (the kontakion of the Annunciation of the Virgin Mary). Many manuscripts give all the oikoi of the Akathistos with neumes, and the performance of this highly elaborate hymn must have lasted at least an hour.

In addition to the psaltikon transmission, there is in manuscripts dating from the 13th century onwards a collection of syllabic kontakia melodies that were used for model stanzas (automela) for many troparia (see TROPARION). The relationship between the syllabic tradition and the two embellished, melismatic, psaltikon traditions is yet to be fully studied (see Raasted, 1989).

Ex.2

With regard to melodic structure, both kontakia and allēlouïaria use very similar material, especially the initial motifs and cadences. This shows either that kontakia depended on the allēlouïarion tradition or that the two types developed from the same simple text recitation. Analysis of the kontakion melodies makes it possible to identify certain formulae that tend to occur in the same sequence, thus establishing 'melody types'. The prooimion and the oikos are structurally similar: both are divided into lines that correspond to a restricted number of melody types. The common kontakion tradition may be exemplified by the kontakion of All Saints for the Sunday after Pentecost (the first line of the oikos is given in ex.2).

Although the melodic formulae are shared among the eight modes, there are very few melodies in the 1st and 3rd modes, and with the exception of the Christmas kontakion in the 3rd mode (see ex.1), the melodies are without any character of their own. There is not, in fact, sufficient melodic material among the kontakion melodies for eight modes. The tonal system tends to be one of conjunct tetrachords, taking the form of either a 'low' (ex.3*a*) or a 'high' system (ex.3*b*). This system is apparent both from an analysis of formulae and cadences that have the same interval structure but are pitched a 4th apart, and also from an analysis of the 'wrong' medial signatures (i.e. signatures that seem to indicate an abnormal pitch; see BYZANTINE CHANT, §3(ii)).

Ex.3

While the psaltikon is the melody book of the psaltēs, containing principally kontakia, the asmatikon is the choirbook of a psaltēs group. In many cases the psaltikon manuscripts include part of the asmatikon repertory (a completely different style from the kontakion). The Byzantine sources reveal that part of the psaltikon repertory, the hypakoai, also occurs in an asmatikon version. Furthermore, the Slavonic manuscripts from the same period as the Byzantine sources give asmatikon counterparts of the kontakia. Only the prooimia are delivered in this choral recension – possibly a relic of a practice by which the psaltēs choir sang the prooimion while one psaltēs performed the oikoi. The notation of the Slavonic manuscripts remains problematic. At any rate the kontakion melodies of this tradition seem to be less melismatic.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Høeg, ed.: Contacarium ashburnhamense, MMB, Principale, iv (1956) [incl. important introduction, 11ff]
E. Wellesz: The Akathistos Hymn, MMB, Transcripta, ix (1957)
A. Bugge, ed.: Contacarium palaeoslavicum mosquense, MMB, Principale, vi (1960)
F. Constantin: 'Das Kontakion', Deutsche Vierteljahrschrift für Literaturwissenschaft und Geistesgeschichte, xxiv (1960), 84–106
C. Thodberg: The Tonal System of the Kontakarium: Studies in Byzantine Psaltikon Style (Copenhagen, 1960)
K. Levy: 'An Early Chant for Romanus' "Contacium trium puerorum"', Classica et mediaevalia, xxii (1961), 172–5
K. Levy: 'A Hymn for Thursday in Holy Week', JAMS, xvi (1963), 127–75
H.Husmann: 'Modalitätsprobleme des psaltischen Stils', AMw, xxvii (1971), 43–72
C. Thodberg: 'The Discussion of the Psaltikon Tonality', IMSCR XI: Copenhagen 1972, 786–90
J. Raasted: 'Zur Melodie des Kontakions "Hē parthenos sēmeron"', Musica antiqua VI: Bydgoszcz 1982, 191–204; repr. in Cahiers de l'Institut du Moyen Age grec et latin, lix (1989), 233–46
A. Şirli: 'The Akathistos Hymn in the Greek and Romanian Manuscripts of the 14th–18th Centuries', Musica antiqua VI: Bydgoszcz 1982, 565–79
W.L. Petersen: The Diatesseron and Ephrem Syrus as Sources of Romanos the Melodist (Leuven, 1985)
A. Lingas: 'The Liturgical Place of the Kontakion in Constantinople', Liturgiya, arkhitektura i iskusstvo vizantiyskogo mira: Moscow 1991 [Liturgy, architecture and art of the Byzantine world], ed. K.K. Akent'yev, i (St Petersburg, 1995), 50–57

CHRISTIAN THODBERG/R

Kontarsky, Alfons (b Iserlohn, 9 Oct 1932). German pianist, brother of ALOYS KONTARSKY. He studied at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik in Cologne with Else Schmitz-Gohr and Maurits Frank (1953–5) and in Hamburg with Eduard Erdmann (1955–7). Since 1955 he has appeared widely with his brother. He held a seminar at the Darmstadt summer courses from 1962 to 1969, when he became responsible for a masterclass at the Cologne Musikhochschule. He was appointed professor at the Munich Musikhochschule in 1979 and professor at the Salzburg Mozarteum in 1983. His Pro musica nova: Studien zum Spielen neuer Musik für Klavier (Cologne, 1973) contains original contributions by leading contemporary composers. In the mid-1960s he became more involved with the classics and in 1971 formed a trio with Saschko Gawriloff and Klaus Storck. With his brother he has recorded or given the premières of a number of major works by Boulez (Structures I–II), Ligeti (3 Objekte), Stockhausen and Zimmermann (Dialoge, Monologe). His discography includes music for two pianos and four hands (with his brother) by Bartók, Debussy, Ravel and Stravinsky.

RUDOLF LÜCK/ATEŞ ORGA

Kontarsky, Aloys (b Iserlohn, 14 May 1931). German pianist, brother of ALFONS KONTARSKY. He studied at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik in Cologne with Else Schmitz-Gohr and Maurits Frank (1952–5) and in Hamburg with Eduard Erdmann (1955–7). In 1955 he and his brother won the first prize for piano duo at the Bavarian Radio International Festival in Munich.

Since then they have given concerts together throughout the world, winning an international reputation, predominantly in contemporary music. Their repertory includes Mozart, Schubert, Reger and Debussy, and they have given many first performances of works by Berio, Brown, Bussotti, de Grandis, Gielen, Kagel, Pousseur, Stockhausen (including Mantra, 1970) and Zimmermann. At Darmstadt in 1966 Kontarsky gave the first complete performance of Stockhausen's Klavierstücke I–XI, which he also recorded and played frequently with great aplomb and precision. Known as an unorthodox interpreter of avant-garde music, he has taken part in many performances with Stockhausen's ensemble, and in the mid-1960s formed a duo with the cellist Siegfried Palm. In 1960 he began taking a seminar at the Darmstadt summer courses and in 1969 he became responsible for a masterclass at the Staatliche Hochschule in Cologne.

WRITINGS

'Notation für Klavier', Darmstädter Beiträge für neue Musik, ix (1965), 92–109 with Alfons Kontarsky: 'A quatre mains', Begegnungen mit Eduard Erdmann, ed. C. Bitter and M. Schlösser (Darmstadt, 1968), 209

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Lück: Werkstattgespräche mit Interpreten neuer Musik (Cologne, 1971), 73ff [with discography]

RUDOLF LÜCK/ATEŞ ORGA

Kontrabass (i) (Ger.). See DOUBLE BASS.

Kontrabass (ii) (Ger.). A military and brass-band instrument. See BASS (iii)

Kontrafagott (Ger.). A double bassoon. See BASSOON, §9.

Kontrapunkt (Ger.). See COUNTERPOINT.

Kontretanz (Ger.). See CONTREDANSE.

Kontskï, de. See KĄTSKI family.

Konwitschny, Franz (b Fulnek, Northern Moravia, 14 Aug 1901; d Belgrade, 28 July 1962). German conductor. After studying at the Leipzig Conservatory he began his career as a string player, and played the viola in the Gewandhaus Orchestra under Furtwängler. He turned to conducting in 1927, working his way up from répétiteur to chief conductor at Stuttgart (1930). He then went to Freiburg, where he was appointed musical director in 1933. He held a similar position in Frankfurt from 1938 (at the Frankfurt Opera and as conductor of the Museum Concerts). Immediately after the war he worked in Hanover. In 1949 Konwitschny was appointed conductor at the Gewandhaus in Leipzig and retained this position to the end of his life, though from 1953 to 1955 he worked simultaneously as the conductor of the Dresden Staatsoper, and in 1955 was appointed musical director at the rebuilt Deutsche Staatsoper in Berlin. Konwitschny's many guest appearances also won him an international reputation. In 1959 he conducted the Ring at Covent Garden. He toured widely with the Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra, and the orchestras of the Berlin and Dresden Staatsopern. He died while on a tour of Yugoslavia, during a rehearsal of Beethoven's Missa solemnis.

His expansive gestures and dislike of an exact beat, as well as the markedly expressive cast of his musical personality, made him a conductor of Furtwängler's type; like Furtwängler, he was most at home with symphonic music from Beethoven to Brahms, and he made fiery, muscular recordings of the complete Beethoven symphonies. As an opera conductor he was outstanding in Wagner, whose works he projected with broad dimensions and infused with great intensity. He also had a strong affinity with the music of Richard Strauss, above all Die Frau ohne Schatten and the tone poems Ein Heldenleben and Sinfonia domestica. He was less drawn to modern music; yet he repeatedly championed such contemporary composers in East Germany as Hanns Eisler, Paul Dessau (of whose Orchestermusik 1955 he gave the first performance) and Ottmar Gerster.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.S. Sanders, ed.: Vermächtnis und Verpflichtung: Festschrift für Franz Konwitschny (Leipzig, 1961)

WOLFRAM SCHWINGER/R

Kónya, Sándor (b Sarkad, 23 Sept 1923). Hungarian tenor. He studied in Budapest and, after the war, in Detmold and Milan. He made his début in Bielefeld in 1951 as Turiddu, moved in 1954 to Darmstadt and then to the Berlin Städtische Oper. His best-known role was Lohengrin, in which he made his débuts at Bayreuth in 1958, at the Metropolitan in 1961 and at Covent Garden in 1963. He sang regularly at the Metropolitan, his roles including Walther, Parsifal, Calaf, Max and Don Carlos. His clear, strong tenor lay between the lyrical and the heroic, and he was a good actor.

ALAN BLYTH

Konyus (Conus), Georgy Ėduardovich (b Moscow, 18/30 Sept 1862; d Moscow, 29 Aug 1933). Russian musicologist and composer. He was the son of Ėduard Konstantinovich Konyus (1827–1902), a well-known piano teacher. Georgy was first taught music by his father; he then studied the piano with Pabst, and composition with Taneyev and Arensky at the Moscow Conservatory. Subsequently he taught theory there (1891–9), leaving as a result of his quarrel with the director Safonov, and was professor of composition (1902–6) and director (1904–5) at the music and drama institute of the Moscow Philharmonic Society; he was also professor of composition (1902–19) and rector (1917–19) at the Saratov State Conservatory, a member of the music department of the National Commissariat of Culture (1919–20) and (from 1920) professor at the Moscow Conservatory, dean of the faculty of composition (until 1929) and director of the department of analysis which he created (the first in Russia). His pupils included Skryabin, Medtner, Vasilenko, Kabalevsky and Khachaturyan.

Konyus's chief work was the creation and partial elaboration of an original theory of musical form, 'metrotectonism' (measured structure), which attempted to apply a sense of spatial symmetry to the temporal relationships of musical form. Konyus saw musical composition as a combination of special metrical units ('musically creative volitional statements') which in general do not coincide with the broader phrase structures; the task of analysis is to reveal these basic units (usually of different lengths) and to explain the order governing their arrangement under the one law which governs all musical styles, the 'balance of temporal values'. He rejected the traditional nomenclature for the theory of forms and often explained his analyses with sketches, reminiscent of architectural drawings. From 1922 he was head of the department of metrotectonism analysis at the State Institute for Musical Research. To popularize his theories he undertook lecture tours in Germany (1923–4) and France (1923–4, 1928–9). Konyus's theories found sharp criticism from traditionalist Russian theorists and Marxist musicologists alike, the latter group impugning him in the 1920s for what they saw as his 'formalism'; after his death, 'metrotectonism' was not taken up or developed further in either Russia or the West. As a composer Konyus was representative of the Moscow school, one of the offshoots of Russian academicism of the late 19th and early 20th centuries. His works include a series of symphonic pieces, a ballet, songs and instrumental music.

He had two brothers who were musicians. Yuly Ėduardovich (1869–*c*1950), a violinist, teacher and composer, studied at the Moscow Conservatory and in Paris, where he played in the Colonne orchestra and others; in the 1900s he led a quartet and a trio, playing with Rachmaninoff and Brandukov in Moscow. He advised Tchaikovsky in matters of violin technique, and his Violin Concerto (1896) was performed by many violinists, including Fritz Kreisler. He taught at the Moscow Conservatory, 1893–1901; in 1919 he left Russia and settled in Paris, but he returned to Russia in 1939. Lev Ėduardovich Konyus (1871–1944), a pianist and composer, graduated from the Moscow Conservatory, where he was professor of piano, 1912–20. He then left Russia and settled in Paris, moving in 1935 to Cincinnati.

WORKS
(selective list)

Iz detskoy zhizni [From a Child's Life], op.1, suite, chorus, orch, 1891; Kantata pamyati Aleksandra III [Cant. in Memory of Alexander III], op.8; Daita, op.11 (ballet, K.F. Walz, after Jap. fairy tale), 1896; Sym. 'Iz mira illyuziy' [From the World of Illusions], sym. poem, c, op.23, chorus, orch, 1902; Db Conc., op.29, 1910, unpubd; Les shumit [The Forest Sounds], op.30, ov. to inc. op, after Korolenko, 1910–11

Principal publishers: Jurgenson, State Publishing House

WRITINGS

Sinopticheskaya tablitsa ėlementarnoy teorii muzïki [Synoptic table of elementary music theory] (Moscow, 1891)
Zadachnik po instrumentovke [Set of exercises on orchestration] (Moscow, 1906–9)
Kurs kontrapunkta strogogo pis'ma v ladakh [A course of strict counterpoint in harmony] (Moscow, 1930)
Kritika traditsionnoy teorii v oblasti muzïkal'noy formï [Criticism of the traditional theory in the realm of musical form] (Moscow, 1932)
Metrotektonicheskoye issledovaniye muzïkal'noy formï [Metrotectonic research on musical form] (Moscow, 1933)
Nauchnoye obosnovaniye muzïkal'nogo sintaksisa [The scientific foundation of musical syntax] (Moscow, 1935)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P.D. Krïlov: G.Ė. Konyus (Moscow, 1932)
V. Ferman: 'Pamyati G.Ė. Konyusa' [In memory of Konyus], SovM (1933), no.9, pp.110–47
G.L. Golovinsky, ed.: G.Ė. Konyus: stat'i, materialï, vospominaniya [Articles, materials, reminiscences] (Moscow, 1965)
G.B. Bernandt and I.M. Yampol'sky: Kto pisal o muzïke [Writers on music], ii (Moscow, 1974)
G.D. McQuere, ed.: 'Russian Theoretical Thought in Music', Russian Music Studies, x (Ann Arbor, 1983), 293–312
I. Rïzhkin: 'Prostranstvo v muzïkal'nom vremeni: o teorii metrotektonizma G.Ė. Konyusa' [Space in musical time: Konyus's theory of metrotectonics], SovM (1987), no.2, pp.58–61
L.A. Kozhevnikova, ed.: Georgy Ėduardovich Konyus, 1862–1933: materialï vospominaniya, pis'ma (pri uchastii N.G. Konyusa) [Materials, reminiscences and letters (with the participation of N.G. Konyus)] (Moscow, 1988)

L.M. BUTIR/LYUDMILA KORABEL'NIKOVA

Konzertina (Ger.). See CONCERTINA.

Konzertmeister (Ger.: 'concertmaster'). See LEADER.

Konzertstück [Concertstück] (Ger.: 'concert piece'). A work for solo instrument or instruments with orchestra, shorter than a Concerto and frequently in one movement (e.g. Weber's Konzertstück for piano and orchestra in F minor J282). The term was used by many French composers for one-movement solo works with orchestra. In Germany the term is sometimes applied to works that would elsewhere be called 'concertino'.

□

Kooiman, Ewald (b Wormer, 14 June 1938). Dutch organist and musicologist. He studied at the Amsterdam Muzieklyceum with Piet Kee and at the Schola Cantorum in Paris with Jean Langlais. He also studied French literature at the Free University of Amsterdam and musicology at the University of Poitiers. Kooiman is organist and organ professor at the Free University of Amsterdam, taught the organ at the Sweelinck Conservatory (1987–95) and regularly takes part in the International Summer Academy for organists in Haarlem. In his performances and masterclasses he concentrates particularly on the works of J.S. Bach and on Classical French organ music. He has published numerous articles on this repertory and has edited obscure organ music from the 17th to the 19th centuries in the series Incognito Organo. His recordings include the complete organ works of Bach.

GERT OOST

Kool and the Gang. American soul and funk group. Its members were Robert 'Kool' Bell (b Youngstown, OH, 8 Oct 1950; bass guitar), Ronald Bell (b Youngstown, 1 Nov 1951; tenor saxophone), Dennis 'Dee Tee' Thomas (b Jersey City, NJ, 9 Feb 1951; saxophone, flute), Claydes Smith (b Jersey City, 6 Sept 1948; guitar), Robert 'Spike' Mickens (b Jersey City; trumpet), Rickey Westfield (b Jersey City; keyboards) and George 'Funky' Brown (b Jersey City, 5 Jan 1949; drums). Originally formed in Jersey City in 1964 as the Jazziacs, by 1969 the group had changed its name to Kool and the Gang and the style from jazz to funk. Released on the band's own De-Lite Records, Kool and the Gang (1969) established the sound that characterized their recordings during the mid-1970s. The bass and guitar play hyperactive, syncopated parts, while the drums maintain a steady pattern, with prominently recorded congas adding to the excitement. The horns contribute staccato riffs and fills, and a party atmosphere is created by voices talking, shouting and laughing.

Kool and the Gang enjoyed a string of hits during the period 1973–4 including Funky Stuff, Jungle Boogie and Hollywood Swinging, which featured chanted group vocals in the choruses and complex forms not easily described by the usual verse–chorus–bridge terminology. In the late 1970s the band's popularity declined, but adding the smooth soul-influenced lead singer James 'J.T.' Taylor and the producer Eumir Deodato, the group reached new heights of popularity, notably with their number one hit Celebration (1980). In addition to the disco-funk of this record they explored calypso-influenced rhythms in Let's go dancin' (Ooh La, La, La) (1982), middle-of-the-road ballads in Joanna (1983) and Cherish (1985) and hard rock on Mislead (1984).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Hildebrand: Stars of Soul and Rhythm and Blues (New York, 1994)
R. Vincent: Funk (1996)

DAVID BRACKETT

Koopman, Bertha. See FRENSEL WEGENER, BERTHA.

Koopman, Ton [Antonius] (b Zwolle, 2 Oct 1944). Dutch conductor, organist and harpsichordist. He studied the organ with Simon Jansen and the harpsichord with Gustav Leonhardt at the Sweelinck Conservatory, Amsterdam (1965–70), while studying musicology at Amsterdam University. As a student he founded the ensemble Musica da Camera (1966) and a Baroque Orchestra, Musica Antiqua Amsterdam (1970), and in 1968 won first prize in both the solo and continuo categories of the Bruges International Competition. He went on to win the Prix d'Excellence for organ (1972) and harpsichord (1974), and the Johan Wagenaar Prize (1978). From 1978 to 1988 Koopman was professor of harpsichord at the Sweelinck Conservatory, Amsterdam, and in 1988 was appointed professor of harpsichord at the conservatory in The Hague; the following year he was made an honorary fellow of the RAM, London, and in 1994 he became principal conductor of the Netherlands Radio Chamber Orchestra. Koopman has also been guest conductor of the Concertgebouw Orchestra, the Rotterdam PO and the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra. In 1979 he founded the Amsterdam Baroque Orchestra of period instruments, and in 1992 founded the Amsterdam Baroque Choir. As an organ and harpsichord soloist Koopman has performed all over the world and has also formed a duo with his wife, the harpsichordist Tini Mathot. As director of his own choir and orchestra he has made many recordings, including the Bach Passions, choral works by Handel and Mozart and a complete survey of Bach's cantatas. He has also recorded with René Jacobs, Jordi Savall and Hopkinson Smith. Among his many solo recordings are Bach's Das wohltemperirte Clavier, harpsichord concertos and complete organ works, and the organ concertos of Handel. Koopman's interpretations, both as a conductor and as a player, are characterized by a lively feeling for Baroque ornament, clear articulation and rhythmic vitality.

NICHOLAS ANDERSON

Kooy, Peter (b Soest, 17 Sept 1954). Dutch bass. He started his formal musical studies as a violinist. At the Sweelinck Conservatory in Amsterdam (1977–80) he studied singing with Max von Egmond. He has subsequently performed as a leading bass in the Baroque field for conductors including Ton Koopman, Gustav Leonhardt and, especially, Philippe Herreweghe. His many recordings range from Bach to Kurt Weill. His performances of Bach's cantatas and Passions are unusually sympathetic, assisted by a soft-grained timbre and an eloquent verbal delivery. His recordings in the complete series of Bach cantatas with Masaaki Suzuki and Bach Collegium Japan have received wide acclaim. In 1995 Kooy was appointed a professor of singing at the Sweelinck Conservatory.

JONATHAN FREEMAN-ATTWOOD

Kooy, Simon Jacobus (Jos) van der (b Rotterdam, 6 Dec 1951). Dutch organist. He studied at the Sweelinck Conservatory in Amsterdam with Piet Kee and gained prizes for improvisation at organ competitions in St Albans (1977), Bolsward (1978) and Haarlem (1980 and 1981). His favoured repertory includes the works of Max Reger and of 20th-century Dutch composers. He has given first performances of works by Piet Kee (Bios, 1993; Network, 1996), Daniël Manneke (Offertoire sur les grands jeux, 1996) and Wim de Ruiter (OKS, 1995). He teaches at the conservatories of Alkmaar (since 1983), The Hague (since 1992) and at the International Summer Academy for organists in Haarlem (since 1996). In 1981 Kooy was appointed director of music at the Westerkerk in Amsterdam, and in 1990 he became organist of St Bavokerk, Haarlem, with its famous Müller organ. Here he gives frequent recitals and has recorded music by, among others, Reger and Manneke.

GERT OOST

Kopelent, Marek (b Prague, 28 April 1932). Czech composer. After studying composition with Řídký at the Prague Academy (1951–5) he worked as an editor of modern scores for Supraphon. In 1969 he received a grant from the German Academy of Arts in West Berlin. During the 'normalization' period in Czechoslovakia (the restoration of hard-line communism beginning in the early 1970s) Kopelent was persecuted by the authorities and forced from his post at Supraphon; his works, though performed and published abroad, were boycotted in official circles. After the 1989 revolution he served briefly as adviser to President Václav Havel, and in 1991 he became professor of composition at the Prague Academy. He has been a member of the Prague New Music Group and of the Musica Viva Pragensis ensemble. In 1991 he was made a Chevalier des arts et lettres by the French government.

The music of Webern had a decisive influence on Kopelent when he heard it for the first time in about 1960: as well as embracing serial procedures, he began to use forms and textures of great delicacy. Among Czech composers of his generation, he became one of the best-known in western Europe: his Third Quartet was performed at the 1966 ISCM Festival in Stockholm; Snehah received its première in Venice in 1967 and Zátiší was first heard at the 1968 Donaueschingen Festival.

WORKS
(selective list)

DRAMATIC AND VOCAL

Dramatic: Bludný hlas [Wandering Voice], actress, ens, tape, lights, film, 1970; Musica (singspiel, B. Sobotka), 2 actors, S, fl, ob, hpd, 1978–9; Nářek ženy [Woman's Lament] (melodrama, M. Procházková), actress, 14 female vv, chorus, 7 brass insts, 1980; Vrh kostek [The Casting of Dice] (S. Mallarmé), 4 spkrs, tape, 1980

Choral: Matka [Mother], chorus, fl, 1964; Madlitba kamene [Prayer of Stone] (V. Holan), reciter, spkr, 2 chbr choruses, 3 gongs, tomtom, 1967; Syllabes mouvementées, 1973; Vacillat pes meus, 1973; Legenda 'De passione Sti Adalbert Martyris', spkr, chorus, orch, 1981; Agnus Dei (M. Luther), S, chbr chorus, 1983; Regina lucis (J. Franus: kancionál), 1985; Ona skutečně jest [She Really Exists] (cant., V. Holan), spkrs, T, B, children's chorus, chorus, orch, 1985–6; Mon amour (M. Chagall), S, T, female chorus, chbr chorus, 1988; Messaggio della bonta (orat, T. Bosco), spkr, S, Bar, children's chorus, orch, 1994; Holanovská reminiscence [A Reminiscence of Holan] (Holan), spkr, Mez, chorus, cl, trbn, of, 1995; Judex ergo, Bar, mixed chorus, orch, 1995 [movt 4 Requiem der Versöhnung, collab. Berio, Cerha, Dittrich and others]

Other vocal: Snehah (oriental text), S, jazz A, ens, tape, 1967; Il canto de li augei (aria, It. Renaissance poetry), S, orch, 1977–8; Zjitřený hlas [Excited Voice] (J. Hora), Bar, brass qnt, 1983; Alouette (C.B. de Gazstold), 12vv, 1990; Le chant du merle au detenu (J. Zahradnícek), Mez, fl, accdn, pf, 1991; Cantus de nativitate filii, medium/low v, 1997; cantus de dilectione filiarum Dei, Bar, 5 female vv, 3 trbn, 1998

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Rozjímání [Meditation], chbr orch, 1966; Sváry [Contentions], 12 insts, orch, 1968; Appassionato, pf, orch, 1970; Plauderstünduchen, a sax, orch, 1974–5; Sym., 1982; Concertino, eng hn, chbr orch, 1984; Pozdravení [A Greeting], ov., 1984; Musique concertante, vc, 12 vc, orch, 1991; Arrijah, sym. song, 1996

Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt no.1, 1954; Str Qt no.2, 1955; Str Qt no.3, 1963; Hommage à Vladimír Holan, 9 insts, 1965; Hra [Play], str

qt, 1966; Bijoux de Bohème, fl, vib, hpd, 1967; Str Qt no.4, 1967; Zátiší [Still Life], va, ens, 1968; Rondo, vor der Ankunft der liebenswürden Henker oder die dreimalige Anbetung der Hoffnung, 5 perc, 1973; Sonata 'Das Schweisstuch der Veronika', ens, 1973; A Few Minutes with an Oboist, ob, ens, 1974; Ťukáta, hp, hpd, cimb/gui, 1974; Capriccio, tpt, 1975; Ballade, pf, 1976; Musica lirica, fl, vn, pf, 1977–9; Triste e consolante, wind qnt, 1977; Toccata, va, pf, 1978; Furiant, pf trio, 1979; Str Qt no.5, 1979–80; Eines Tages, 6 vc, 1987; Etres fins en mouvement, 6 perc, 1987; Karrak, vc, pf, 1991; Le petit rien, pic, perc, 1991; Romance, 2 pf, 1991; Canto espansivo, cl, 1993

Principal publishers: Gerig, Supraphon

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS
O. Pukl: 'Marek Kopelent', HRo, xxiii (1970), 423–8
O. Pukl: 'Snehah', Konfrontace (1970), no.4, p.19

OLDŘICH PUKL/JAROMÍR HAVLÍK

Kopenhagener Chansonnier (DK-Kk Thott 291, 8°). See SOURCES, MS, §IX, 8.

Köpfer, Georges-Adam. See GOEPFERT, GEORGES-ADAM.

Kopfmotiv (Ger.). See HEAD-MOTIF.

Kopfstück (Ger.). See BELL (ii).

Kopïlov, Aleksandr Aleksandrovich (b St Petersburg, 2/14 July 1854; d Strelna, nr St Petersburg, 20 Feb/5 March 1911). Russian composer. He entered the court chapel in 1862, became a singing member two years later, and at the age of 12 became a soloist. During this time he studied the violin with Mayer, and was taught by Kremenetsky, who was attached to the chapel. From 1868 to 1872 he took piano lessons from Ribasov, the conductor at the Aleksandrinsky Theatre. When his voice broke at the age of 18 he tried unsuccessfully to enter the St Petersburg Conservatory. But his piano teacher helped him by obtaining for him the post of violinist and pianist at the Aleksandrinsky Theatre. At this time he studied harmony with Hunke. He also taught singing to the court chapel choir until 1892, replacing Rozhnov. Through his work at the chapel he met Balakirev. Kopïlov's songs (some quite attractive) may owe something to Balakirev, but some critics consider that he was more profoundly affected by Tchaikovsky. During the 1870s he took composition lessons from Lyadov and Rimsky-Korsakov. Through them he became known to Belyayev who published some of his works. Kopïlov wrote a prelude and fugue for string quartet on B–la–F as a tribute to the Russian publisher. He composed orchestral music, several pieces for string quartet (in which his first-hand knowledge of violin technique is used to good effect), piano works and songs.

WORKS

all published in Leipzig

Orch: Scherzo, A, op.10; Sym., c, op.14 (1890); Concert Ov., d, op.31

Chbr: Andantino sur le thème B–la–F, str qt, op.7; Prélude et fugue sur le thème B–la–F, str qt, op.11; 4 str qts, G, op.15, F, op.23, A, op.32, C, op.33; Souvenir de Peterhof, vn, pf, op.29; Feuille d'album, vn, pf, op.45; Polka, C, for 'Les vendredis', str qt, collab. Borodin and others

Pf: 2 Mazurkas, op.3; Valse, op.6; Mazurka, op.8; Etude, op.9; 3 Fugues, op.12; 4 petits morceaux, op.13; Polka de salon sur le thème B–la–F, op.16; 4 Miniatures, op.17; 5 morceaux, op.20; 3 feuilles d'album, op.26; 2 morceaux, op.39; Musikalische Bilder aus dem Kinderleben, op.52; 2 études, op.60; 2 Mazurkas

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Obituaries: V. Baskin, Istoricheskiy vestnik (April 1911); 'Pamyati A.A. Kopïlova' [In memory of Kopïlov], Narodnoye obrazovaniye (1911), no.3, p.409 [signed N.B.]; RMG, xviii (1911), no.7, p.190 only; addns, ibid., no.15–16, pp.387–8 [signed O.V-va]

M. MONTAGU-NATHAN/JENNIFER SPENCER

Kopït'ko, Viktor Nikolayevich (b Minsk, 8 Oct 1956). Belarusian composer. He graduated from the Leningrad Conservatory in 1982 having studied under D. Mnatsakan'yian; since then he has composed full-time, often working with a number of film studios in Belarus' and Russia.

The first works by Kopït'ko to gain public recognition were written at the end of the 1980s and beginning of the 90s. A notable event in Belarusian music was the première of his oratorio Kurantï ('The Bell Chimes') based on the composer's own transcriptions of anonymous music and poetry from a manuscript of 18th-century Slavic domestic music of mainly Polish and Belarusian origin. He also attracted attention with his suite Pesni arbatskogo dvora ('Songs of the Arbat Courtyard') which is a unique reading of the genre of the Soviet urban popular song (which had never been used before in academic music); also of note are his original interpretations of Belarusian cimbalom style in a number of chamber and instrumental works. The most important work of the 1990s is the Mass in honour of St Francis which he based on a combination of the traditions of Catholic musical culture and modern styles. The non-standard deployment of musical forces in this work is characteristic of his general outlook which embraces a wide range of ideas associated with post-medieval western European, Eastern and Slavic art of both religious and secular fields. His eclecticism and his fascination with oral and phonetic aspects place him among the group of composers who make up the New Belarusian avant garde, and who employ compositional techniques of Lutosławski, Penderecki and Cage.

WORKS

(selective list)

Op: Devochka, nesushchaya khleb [The Girl Carrying Bread] (Yu. Borisov, Kopït'ko), 1981, Leningrad TV

Orch: Malen'kaya simfoniya [A Little Sym.], 15 pfmrs, 1985; Igraya Chekhova [Playing Chekhov], 1994

Vocal: Karnavalnaya noch' [Carnival Night] (cant., T. Mann), A, B, inst ens, 1984; Motet, vocal inst ens, tape, 1988; Pesni arbatskogo dvora [Songs of the Arbat Courtyard] (B. Okudzhava), suite, chorus, inst ens, 1988; Kurantï [The Bell Chimes] (orat, anon. 18th-century), Bar, chorus, inst ens, 1990; Severnïy veter [North Wind], Chin. fantasy, 2 performers, spkr, 1992; Simvolï [Symbols] (cant., N. Roerich), chorus, fl, hp, 1992; Messa v chest' Svyatogo Frantsiska [Mass in Honour of St Francis], 1990s; Plach Isoldï [Isolda's Lament], concert aria, S, chbr chorus; settings for 1v, pf, of words by S. Kirsanov, O. Mandelstam, A.S. Pushkin

Chbr: Divertimento, cimb, pf, 1976; Nocturne, cimb, elec org, perc, 1981; Gloria, str trio, 1992; Bibleyskiye stsenï [Biblical Scenes], inst ens, 1994

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Savitskaya: 'Avangardïstskiya tendentsïi w belaruskay muzïtsï 1960-kh – pachatku 1990-kh gadow i prablema buynoy instrumental'nay formï' [Avant-garde tendencies in Belarusian music of the 1960s to early 1990s and the problem of an animated instrumental form], Pïtanni kul'turï i mastatstva Belarusi, xii (1993), 38–46
A. Garikhavik and V. Kapïts'ko: 'Lyublyu vandrouki w chase i prastorï' [I love to wander in time and space], Mastatstva (1995), no.8, pp.33–6

VALENTINA ANTONEVICH

Kopp, Georg (b ?Passau; d Passau, 24 Aug 1666). German composer, organist and schoolmaster. He is described as a schoolmaster in the register of deaths of the parish of St Paul, Passau. In 1637 he succeeded Urban Loth (who may have been his teacher) as organist at Passau Cathedral, where he remained until his death. In 1657 he received a warning from the cathedral authorities because he had composed nothing for a long time. After the great fire in the city in 1662, however, he had to 'compose music day and night for the cathedral' because its collection of music had been destroyed. His masses and other liturgical works are rooted in the traditions of vocal polyphony of his time. He is particularly notable, however, for his settings of sacred texts by Procopius von Templin, which account for all his other published music and reveal his imaginative and markedly expressive qualities as a song composer.

WORKS

all published in Passau

Harmonia missarum, 5, 6vv (1642), inc.

Mariae Hülff Ehren Kräntzel, das ist himmelische Lobgesänger (1642)

Der gross-wunderthätigen Mutter Gottes Mariae Hülff Lob-Gesang, 1v, bc (org) (1659); 11 ed. in Ruhland

Eucharistiale, das ist 26 . . . Predigten von Fr. Procopius . . . mit 6 Melodien von G. Kopp, 1v, bc (1661)

Requiem, 10vv, CZ-KRa

Benedicite omnia opera, 8vv, formerly in Breslau, Stadtbibliothek, ?PL-WRu

1 sonata, 2 vn, 2 va, 2 clarini, bc (org), CZ-KRa

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; GerberL; WaltherML

W.M. Schmid: 'Zur Passauer Musikgeschichte', ZMw, xiii (1930–31), 289–308

N. Tschulik: 'Procopius von Templin und das deutsche Lied im 17. Jahrhundert', Mf, vi (1953), 320–24

A. Scharnagl: 'Geistliche Liederkomponisten des bayerischen Barock', KJb, xlii (1958), 81–7

R. Münster and H. Schmid: Musik in Bayern (Tutzing, 1972)

K. Ruhland: Introductionto Georg Kopp: Elf Marienlieder aus 'Der Gross Wunderthätigen Mutter Gottes Mariae Hülff Lob-Gesang' des Fr. Procop von Templin für Singstimme und Orgel, Musik aus Ostbayern, lviii (Altötting, 1994)

AUGUST SCHARNAGL/DIETER HABERL

Koppel (i) (Ger.). See COUPLER.

Koppel (ii) (Ger.). See under ORGAN STOP (Coppel).

Koppel, Herman D(avid) (b Copenhagen, 1 Oct 1908, d Copenhagen, 14 July 1998). Danish composer of Polish parentage. The Koppels are among the foremost musical families in Denmark: Herman's younger brother Julius led the orchestra of the Royal Chapel from 1939 to 1979; Herman's daughter Therese, a pianist, became his successor at the Royal Danish Conservatory, Copenhagen; his second daughter Lone (b 1938) became a leading soprano with the Royal Danish Opera and the Australian Opera, and his two sons Thomas, leader of the highly successful rock group Savage Rose, and Anders are composers.

Herman Koppel's earliest musical experiences came from the synagogue, and also from the music of Nordic fiddlers. He had begun to study the piano and compose by the age of seven. In 1926 he entered the Royal Danish Conservatory, where he was taught by Simonsen (piano) and Bangert (theory); as a student he also attracted the attention of Carl Nielsen. His début concert in 1930, which included Nielsen's Theme and Variations, established him as one of the leading pianists of his generation. In the following year he gave a memorable recital of Nielsen's works, the interpretations of which the composer had sanctioned. Nielsen's music was to be a lifelong source of guidance and inspiration for Koppel, both as a pianist and as a composer. Further studies in Berlin, London and Paris deepened Koppel's knowledge of the 1930s European avant garde, chiefly Bartók and Stravinsky, whose principal works he often performed on tours in Denmark and abroad. His experience as a pianist ranged from being répétiteur for the Royal Theatre and for Danish radio in the 1930s to playing with popular groups; in 1942 he became solo accompanist for the Tivoli Concert Hall. Throughout a long performing life Koppel remained at the forefront of practising musicians, and, until he retired in 1996, his repertory extended from Brahms to Bartók and Boulez, from Nielsen through Schoenberg to Stravinsky and Henze. In 1949 he joined the teaching staff of the Royal Danish Conservatory, where he was a highly regarded professor from 1955 to 1978. His artistic standing, personal integrity and ability as an educator came to be of great significance for numerous younger pianists, both Danish and foreign.

As a composer Koppel was self-taught; like many other classically trained intellectuals, he was attracted by the socially critical, jazz-inspired cultural radicalism of the 1930s, as is shown in the cabaret-like, socio-realistic play Melodien, der blev vaek ('The Lost Melody', 1935); on a larger scale he at the same time developed his personal idiom to virtuoso mastery (Second Piano Concerto, 1936–7). His music of this period is characterized by a naive, lyrical melodiousness and frank, slightly ironic motor rhythms clearly reminiscent of Prokofiev. The German occupation of Denmark in 1940 forced Koppel and his family into exile in Sweden (1943–5); this direct encounter with Nazi barbarism left deep marks in his music, and the experience of the shocking frailty of humanity remained indelible, both on his art and in his personal life. Accordingly, a vocal element – the human voice – unfolds in his music with existential necessity as if a corrective to the instrumental music-loving element, and rises around it by virtue of audaciously combined, contrasting Bible quotations and eschatological incantations (Tre Davids-salmer, 1949, the oratorio Moses, 1963–4 and Requiem, 1965–6). In attitude and expression these works approach both Schoenberg's A Survivor from Warsaw (1947) and Britten's War Requiem (1962). In the debate on modernism that was taking place in Denmark in the early 1960s Koppel did not take sides unambiguously against the Darmstadt avant garde in favour of neo-classicism. On the contrary, in the 1960s and 1970s he increasingly brought dodecaphonic and serial elements into his musical idiom. This is heard as an increased intensity in expression, greater rhythmic differentiation and nuancing of sound, but no actual change of style takes place. Yet despite his great sympathy for the changing currents of the time, Koppel never became purely modernist, let alone post-modernist. His development proceeded organically, although not always without problems. Koppel was an exponent of an intellectual passion and 'aristocratic radicalism' which, without prejudice, cultivates clear forms, sharply outlined melody and pregnant rhythm; this attitude reflected his lifelong loyalty to the decisive impulses of his childhood and youth – the Nordic fiddlers and synagogue singers.

WORKS

(selective list)

DRAMATIC AND ORCHESTRAL

Dramatic: Macbeth (op, after W. Shakespeare), op.79, 1967–8, Copenhagen, Royal Opera, 1970; 29 film scores, 15 theatre scores, 12 radio scores

Syms.: no.1, op.5, 1929–30; no.2, op.37, 1943; no.3, op.39, 1944–5; no.4, op.42, 1946; no.5, op.60, 1955; Sinfonia breve (no.6), op.63, 1957; no.7, op.70, 1960–61
Other orch: Pf Conc. no.1, op.13, pf, chbr orch, 1931–2; Pf Conc. no.2, op.30, 1936–7; Cl Conc., op.35, 1941; Conc., op.43, vn, va, orch, 1947; Pf Conc. no.3, op.45, 1948; Vc Conc., op.56, 1952; Pf Conc. no.4, op.69, 1960–63; Ob Conc., op.82, 1970; Fl Conc., op.87, 1971; Conc. for Orch, op.101, 1977–8; Prelude to a Symphony, op.105, 1981; Concertino, op.110, vn, va, vc, orch, 1983; Bn Conc., op.118, 1990

OTHER WORKS

Choral: 3 Davids-salmer, op.48, T, chorus, orch, 1949; Moses (orat), op.76, solo vv, chorus, orch, 1963–4; Requiem, op.78, solo vv, chorus, orch, 1965–6; Anthems (Hymns of Thanksgiving), op.93, solo vv, chorus, orch, 1974; Hexaëmeron, op.112, SATB, 1984
6 str qts: op.2, 1928–9; op.34, 1939; op.38, 1944–5; op.77, 1964; op.95, 1975; op.102, 1978–9
Other chbr: Sextet, op.36, pf, wind, 1942; Ternio, op.53, vc, pf, 1951; Pf Qnt, op.57, 1953; Sonata, op.62, vc, pf, 1956; Variations, op.72, cl, pf, 1961; Capriccio, op.73, fl, pf, 1961; 8 Variations and Epilogue, op.89, pf, 13 insts, 1972; Divertimento, op.91, str trio, 1972; Variazione pastorale, op.94, fl, str trio, 1975; Variazione libere, op.98, 2 cl, b cl, perc, 1976; 15 Miniatures, op.76b, pf, wind, 1977; Patch Work, op.106, fl, va, hp, 1981; Pf Qt, op.114, 1986; Trio, op.115, cl, vc, pf, 1986; Music for Wind Oct, op.123, 1991; Biocattolo, op.125, fl, cl, perc, vn, pf, 1993
Songs: 5 Biblical Songs, op.46, 1949; 4 Love-Songs, op.47, 1949; 4 Songs (Old Testament), op.49, 1949; Ps xlii, op.68, 1960; 3 Songs (Bible), op.96, 1976; 3 Songs (Kristensen, La Cour), op.119, 1989
Pf: 10 Pieces, op.20, 1933; Suite, op.21, 1934; 2 Dances, op.31, 1937; Sonata, op.50, 1950; 15 Miniatures, op.97, 1976; 50 Short Pieces, op.99, 1977; 30 Little Pieces, op.111, 1983–4; Memory, op.126, 1994

Principal publishers: Hansen/Music Sales, Leduc, Samfundet til Udgivelse af Dansk Musik

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Heerup: 'Herman D. Koppel: Symfoni nr.4, op.42', DMt, xxii (1947), 12–17
V. Kappel, ed.: Contemporary Danish Composers (Copenhagen, 1950)
N.V. Bentzon: 'Tradition og fornyelse', Nordisk musikkultur (1952), 123–6
H.D. Koppel: 'Davids-salmer', Modern nordisk musik, ed. I. Bengtsson (Stockholm, 1957), 137–51 [incl. list of works]
S. Lunn, ed.: La vie musicale au Danemark (Copenhagen, 1962)
J. Müller-Marein and H. Reinhardt, eds.: Musikalske selvportraetter (Hamburg, 1963)
B. Wallner: Vår tids musik i norden (Stockholm, 1968)
N. Schiørring: Musikkens historie i Danmark, iii (Copenhagen, 1978)
F. Behrendt: Fra et hjem med klaver: Herman D. Koppel's liv og erindringer (Copenhagen, 1988)
'Koppel, Herman D.', Kraks blå bog 1997

SVEN ERIK WERNER

Koppelung (Ger.). See COUPLING and COUPLER.

Kopřiva. Czech family of musicians.

(1) Václav Jan Kopřiva (b Brloh, nr Cítoliby, 8 Feb 1708; d Cítoliby, 7 June 1789). Composer and organist. His compositions are often found under the name Urtica (a Latin translation of the Czech word Kopřiva, meaning 'nettle'). He studied music under M.A. Kalina at Cítoliby, and at Prague was an organ pupil of F.J. Dollhopf, organist of the Crusaders' Church. He was then cantor and organist at Cítoliby (from 1730; definitive appointment as cantor in 1742) and Louny (1733–4). He was also secretary to Count Ernest Karl Pachta, the owner of Cítoliby, at least for some time (*c*1754–6). In 1777 he tried to obtain a post as cantor at Louny; although he was recommended as an outstanding musician, he did not gain the post and remained in Cítoliby until his death. Outstanding among his pupils were J.A. Gallina, J. Vent, J. Lokaj and his own two sons.

WORKS

principal sources: CZ-Bm, Cítoliby Church, K, KU, LUa, ME, Pnm, SO

Missa pastoralis, D [Lat. with interposed sections of Cz. text], Gl ed. in Germer; Sacrum pastorale integrum [Christmas mass]; TeD, D; Alma Redemptoris mater, D
Offs: Vox clamantis, ed. in Thesaurus musicae bohemicae, ser. B (Prague, 1989); In omnem terram; 2 pastoral offs, D, A
Lits: C, D, E♭, A, B♭

(2) Jan Jáchym Kopřiva (b Cítoliby, 17 March 1754; d Cítoliby, 17 Aug 1792). Composer, son of (1) Václav Jan Kopřiva. He studied music with his father and succeeded him as cantor at Cítoliby in 1778; in 1785 he also became church organist there as successor to his brother (3) Karel Blažej. He also taught music to Count Pachta's family. His only extant works are three masses, two missa brevis settings and an aria for alto (all in CZ-Pnm).

(3) Karel Blažej Kopřiva (b Cítoliby, 9 Feb 1756; d Cítoliby, 15 May 1785). Composer and organist, son of (1) Václav Jan Kopřiva. After studying the organ and composition (first with his father, later in Prague with J.F.N. Seger), he became church organist at Cítoliby. He also taught keyboard instruments and composition. His first known work, a Requiem in C minor, was performed at Klatovy on 22 May 1774. He suffered from tuberculosis and died at the age of 29.

The three Kopřivas were the outstanding members of a ramified Czech musical family. Thanks to their activity, and in accordance with the artistic interests of Count Ernest Karl Pachta (who had an orchestra of his own), the little village of Cítoliby became a unique centre of musical life in northern Bohemia at that period. Whereas (1) Václav Jan and (2) Jan Jáchym adhered to the traditional type of Czech village music of the late Baroque and pre-Classical period, (3) Karel Blažej used an advanced Classical idiom of Mozartian character. His style is markedly individual and very expressive, with abundant chromaticism. He was also well schooled in counterpoint and his fugues are among the most remarkable of their kind in Czech organ music of the second half of the 18th century. A virtuoso organist himself, he usually treated the organ part of his church compositions in concertante manner. The demanding, florid solo parts in his vocal works are evidence of the high quality of provincial performers in Bohemia at the time.

WORKS

principal sources: Cítoliby Church, CZ-LUa, Pnm, SO

SACRED VOCAL

4 Missa solemnis, E♭, E, F, B♭; 4 masses, C, c, e, E♭; Missa brevis, C, Requiem, c
Motets: Veni sponsa Christi, D, 4vv, ob, orch; Gloria Deo, D; Dictamina mea, E♭
Arias: 2 for S, B♭, E♭; Amoenitate vocum, S, chorus; Quod pia voce cano, B
Salve Regina, F

INSTRUMENTAL

Org fugues and preludes, incl.: Fugue, f, ed. [C.F. Pitsch], Museum für Orgel-Spieler (Prague, 1832–4), also ed. in Ecole classique de l'orgue, xiii (Paris, 1900), and in MAB, xii (1953); Fugue, A♭, ed. [C.F. Pitsch], Museum für Orgel-Spieler (Prague, 1832–4), also ed. in Ecole classique de l'orgue, xiii (Paris, 1900); Fughetta, G, 'nach Haendel', ed. [C.F. Pitsch], Museum für Orgel-Spieler (Prague, 1832–4); Fuga pastorella, C, ed. in MVH, lvi (1991); Fuga supra cognomen Debefe, d; Fugue, a: all 3 ed. in Organistae bohemici (Prague, 1970, 2/1972)

Concerto, E♭, org [1 of orig. set of 8]
12 syms., lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS; Dlabacž, ii-iii; EitnerQ; WurzbachL
G.J. Dlabacž: 'Versuch eines Verzeichnisses der vorzüglichern Tonkünstler in oder aus Böhmen', Materialien zur alten und neuen Statistik von Böhmen, ed. J.A. Riegger, xii (Leipzig and Prague, 1794), 225–98, esp. 248
A. Hnilička: 'Z archivalií o hudebnících rodu Kopřivů' [Archival resources relating to musicians of the Kopřiva family], Dalibor, xxxvii (1920), 53
J. Němeček: Nástin české hudby xviii. století [Outline of 18th-century Czech music] (Prague, 1955)
Letter of J.J. Kopřiva to B.J. Dlabač, 13 Jan 1788, pubd by R. Mužiková, MMC, no.3 (1957), 42–4
Z. Šesták: Hudba citolibských mistrů 18.století [Music of the Citoliby masters of the 18th century] (Prague, 1968) [disc notes]
Z. Pilková: 'Doba osvícenského absolutismu (1740–1810)' [The age of enlightened absolutism], Hudba v českých dějinách: od středověku do nové doby [Music in Czech history: from the Middle Ages to the modern era] (Prague, 1983, 2/1989), 211–84, esp. 246, 248, 255, 272–4
Z. Šesták: 'Citoliby: středisko českého hudebního klasicismu' [Citoliby: a musical centre in the Classical era], HRo, xxxix (1986), 43–6
M. Germer: The Austro-Bohemian Pastorella and Pastoral Mass to c1780 (Ann Arbor, 1989) [appx contains edn of Gloria from V.J. Kopřiva: Missa pastoralis]

MILAN POŠTOLKA

Koptagel, Yüksel (b Istanbul, 27 Oct 1931). Turkish composer and pianist. She studied the piano with Rana Erksan and composition with Cemal Reşit Rey in Istanbul, then with Rodrigo and Tansman in Spain and Levy, Wissmer, Daniel-Lesur and Aubin in Paris. Her career as a concert pianist has included many radio and TV appearances and concerts in Europe, the USA and the former USSR, as well as in Turkey. Her most important works, Pastorale (1963) and Capriccio (1998), are both for piano and orchestra. One of the leading first-generation women composers in Turkey, Koptagel's compositions have won awards in Turkey and in Europe.

WORKS
(selective list)

Pf: Fossil Suite (Suite Antique), 1957, arr. gui, 3 pieces; 3 Pieces, 1957; Schumanniana, 1957; Tamzara (Turkish Dance), 1957, arr. gui; Marcia Funèbre, 1958; Toccata, 1958; Epitafio, 1959; '... et les souris dansent', 1959; Sonata Menorca, 1959; Etude, 1961; Prelude on the Murmur of a River, 1961; Lullaby, 1964; Independence March, 1965; MTA March, 1966, Le carnet du petit Brian, 1973; Sakura, 1993
Other inst: Romance de Castille, vc, pf, 1957; Pastorale, pf, orch, 1963; Cappriccio, pf, orch, 1998
Vocal (1v, pf, unless otherwise stated): 2 Songs of Tchetin, 1958; Hiroshima Lieder, 1960; Lied, 1960–64; 2 spanische Lieder, 1961; Les heures de Prague, 1962; Terezin Lieder, 1962; Vêpres du dimanche, chorus, 1964

Principal publishers: Max Eschig, Bote & Bock

MÜNİR NURETTİN BEKEN

Kopytman, Mark (b USSR, 1929). Israeli composer. While practising medicine, he studied composition at the L'viv Academy with Simovitch and at the Tchaikovsky State Conservatory, Moscow, with Bogatïryov. After completing his second doctoral degree in 1958, he taught at music academies in Moscow, Alma-Ata and Kishinau. Several of his compositions, such as Casa mare (1966), won prizes in the USSR. After emigrating to Israel in 1972, he was appointed professor of composition at the Rubin Academy of Music and Dance in Jerusalem, where he later served as dean and deputy head (1974–94). He has also taught at the Hebrew University and the University of Pennsylvania (1982–3, 1988–9), and served as composer-in-residence at the Canberra School of Music (1985). He established the Doron Ensemble for 20th-century music in 1991, and became composer-in-residence of the Jerusalem Camerata in 1992. With the political changes in Eastern Europe, Kopytman renewed his activities in the cultural world he had left 20 years earlier. He served as music adviser to the International Festival in St Petersburg (1991), founded the International Summer Courses and the International Composers' Contest in Moldova (1992–3), and lectured at the Tchaikovsky State Conservatory (from 1991), at the Seminar for Young Composers in Kaziemierz Dolny (1992), at the Chopin Academy in Warsaw (1994) and at the Brandenburg Colloquium in Berlin (1995). In 1998 he founded the International Symposium 'The Art of Composition – Towards the 21st Century' in Jerusalem. His honours include a Koussevitzky International Award (1986) for Memory and a lifetime achievement award from the Israel ACUM (1992).

Kopytman's early style is best illustrated by the powerful dramatic gestures, ostinatos and meticulous motivic work of his Second String Quartet (1966). With his emigration to Israel he turned to Hebrew poetry and Arabic music, forging a style dominated by sophisticated heterophonic devices and a sensitivity to instrumental timbre. In Rotations (1979) a dense cloud of tiny motives is gradually transformed into an unaccompanied vocal melody. In Memory (1981) the melody and timbre of an unaccompanied traditional Yemenite song are taken up in rich orchestral heterophony and explored in a series of contrasting sections. A quotation from a traditional Jewish melody is the source of the meditative etheral heterophony of Beyond (1997).

Kopytman's concern for political and social issues is expressed in works such as Fermane (1999), a Kurdish song of protest against Iraqi atrocities. He has collaborated regularly with performers such as contralto Mira Zakai, viola player Tabea Zimmermann, choreographer Rina Shönfeld, conductor Gary Bertini and folk singers Gila Bashari and Ilana Ilié.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Casa mare (op, V. Teleuke), 1966; Monodrama (ballet), 1975; And a Time for Every Purpose (ballet), 1979; Chbr Scenes from the Life of Susskind von Trimberg (op, R. Freier), 1982–3
Vocal: Distance beyond Distance (A. Tvardovsky), SATB, 1960; Songs of Anguished Love (S. Kaputikian), 1v, pf, 1964; Songs of the Woods (Teleuke), SATB, orch, 1965; Shemesh October [October sun] (Y. Amihai), Mez, fl, vn, vc, pf, perc, 1974; Voices, S, fl, orch, 1975; Rotations, Mez, orch, 1979; Memory, Yemenite singer, orch, 1981; Eight Pages (E. Jabes), 1v, 1988; Scattered Rhymes (Amihai), SATB, orch, 1988; Love Remembered (Amihai), SATB, orch, 1989; Fermane, Kurdish singer, 3 cl, 1999
Orch: Sym., 1955; 6 Moldavian Tunes, 1965; Pf Conc., 1971; Conc. for Orch, 1976; Kaddish, vc/va, str, 1982; Cantus III, b cl, orch, 1984; Cantus V, va orch, 1990; Cantus VI, ob, chbr orch, 1995; Beyond, chbr orch, 1997
Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt no.1, 1962; Str Qt no.2, 1966; Str Qt no.3, 1969; For Pf I, 1973; Lamentation, fl, 1973; For Perc, 1975; For Hp, 1976; For Hpd, 1976; About an Old Tune, pf, qt, 1977; Cantus II, str trio, 1980; Dedication, vn, 1986, Chbr Music, cl, pf, 1992; Alliterations, pf, 1993; Discourse I-II, ob, str qt, 1994; Tenero, vc, 1994; Strain, str qt, 1995; Str Qt no.4, 1997

Principal publishers: Israel Music Institute, Theodore Presser

BIBLIOGRAPHY
Y.W. Cohen: Werden und Entwicklungen der Musik in Israel (Kassel, 1976) [pt.ii of rev. edn. of M. Brod: Die Musik Israels]

JEHOASH HIRSHBERG

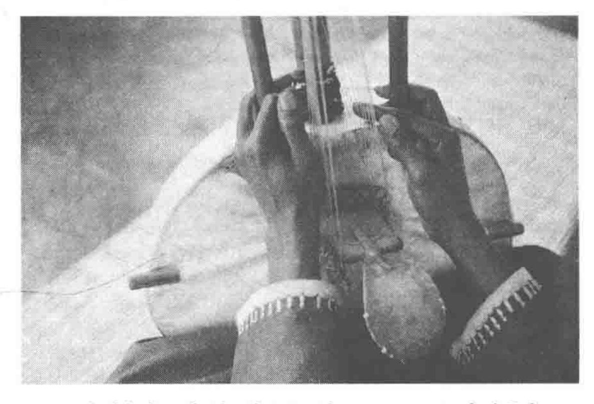
Kora [korro, cora]. A large 21-string bridge-harp played by the male jali or jeli, professional musicians of the Mande people of The Gambia, Senegal, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau and Mali (fig.1). The profession, called jaliyaa, also encompasses verbal arts such as oratory, genealogy and historical narrative, and women performers (sing. jali muso) excel as singers (see also GAMBIA).

1. Morphology. 2. History and organology. 3. Playing technique and musicology.

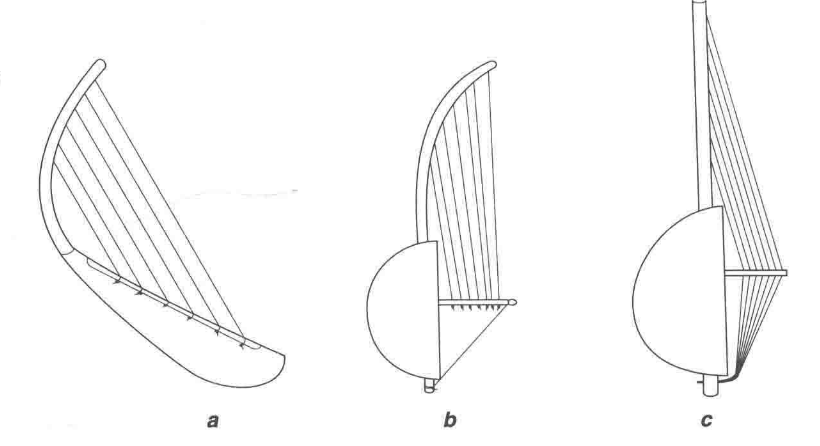
1. MORPHOLOGY. The kora is similar in size and range to the guitar, but in sound it resembles the Egyptian plucked zither qanun. In appearance, it is unique. The body is made of a large half-calabash, about 40–50 cm in diameter, covered with cowhide to form the soundtable. The body is 'spiked' or pierced by a stout wooden pole, about 120–30 cm long, which forms both the neck and tailpiece. The player may sit or stand, but optimum resonance is achieved when the tailpiece rests on the floor. The player holds the instrument with the soundtable facing him, the calabash dome facing the listeners, and the neck towering above him. The cowhide forming the soundtable also extends part way over the gourd, and this portion is studded with decorative chrome tacks and cut with a soundhole to one side of the neck. The strings, extending downwards from collars along the neck, diverge into two planes and pass over notches on either side of a tall bridge mounted on the soundtable. Below the bridge the strings are knotted to anchor strings with a weaver's knot, and the anchors in turn are looped around an iron ring in the tailpiece. From a frontal aspect, the player's hands are barely visible as he holds lightly the dowel-like handgrips parallel to the neck and plucks the strings with forefingers and thumbs.

African rosewood, called keno (Pterocarpus erinaceus), is the preferred material for the neck (falo), the bridge (bato) and the handgrips. The mirango ('calabash') is the 'kettle gourd' variety of Lagenaria siceraria. The collars (sing. konso), raised or lowered to tune the strings, are made of cowhide strips wound in a turk's-head knot. Koras with tuning pegs have been introduced by monks of the Keur-Moussa monastery in Senegal, but most kora players still prefer collars. The strings (sing. julo) were once made of thin strips of antelope or cow hide twisted to form a round cross section, but since the introduction of nylon have been made of 40–150 lb-test fishing line. The bright sound and durability of nylon have been factors in the kora's rise as a versatile and popular instrument. A single commercial recording made by Gilbert Rouget of the seron, related to the kora, preserves the sound of the now archaic rawhide.

A vital accessory in the past was the nyenyemo, a leaf-shaped plate of tin or brass with wire loops threaded around the edge (fig.2). Clamped to the bridge, it produced sympathetic sounds, serving as an amplifier since the sound carried well in the open air. In today's environment players usually prefer or need an electric pickup.



2. HISTORY AND ORGANOLOGY. Ibn Battuta visited the Mande empire of Mali in 1353, about 100 years after its founding by Sunjata. A visitor at the court, Battuta described the xylophone and plucked lute, but not the



1. Masireng Kuyateh playing the kora (bridge-harp), Bakau, The Gambia, 1970

kora (1939, p.328). The kora is often linked to Sunjata's time in the popular imagination, but most jalolu recognize it as an instrument of the westernmost branch of the Mande people, i.e. the Mandinka, and the Mandinka only emerged as Mali disintegrated after the 14th century and the Mande spread out to form smaller kingdoms. Mungo Park, living among the Gambia river Mandinka in the 1790s, noted among their instruments 'the korro, with eighteen strings' (1954, p.213). Lacking more data, an origin for the kora may be projected back from this first reference to perhaps the 16th or 17th century.

According to legend, the kora began with Jali Madi Wuleng. One version of the story relates that while

2. Detail of the kora bridge (bato) with nyenyemo attached, Bakau, The Gambia

3. Some African harp types: (a) arched harp, Central Africa; (b) spike harp with upright string holder (Mande simbingo); (c) bridge harp (Mande kora) walking in the forest one day he heard beautiful music. Seeking its origin, he found a jinn (a genie or spirit) playing the kora. The jinn agreed to teach him to play if he would marry his daughter and remain in the spirit world forever. Wuleng agreed, but after some years escaped and brought the kora to the Mandinka.

The kora was probably created by adding strings to an existing Mande harp, of which there are several with three to eight strings. Known as spike harps, these are a type unique to West Africa (fig.3). The curved neck (a feature shared with other arched harps of the world) spikes the body as on the kora, and a string carrier stands upright on the soundtable to hold the strings. Straightening the neck and passing the strings over the holder (making it a bridge) enabled the instrument to accommodate the tension of more strings. Erich Moritz von Hornbostel and Curt Sachs coined the term 'harp lute' to describe the kora (1914), implying a 'harp-like lute' (see HARP-LUTE (i)). But in ancestry and playing technique, the kora is a harp. The term 'BRIDGE HARP' (Knight, 1971; 1973) places it clearly in the harp family as a variety of the spike harp (see also HARP, §III, 2(i), fig.13*d*).

3. PLAYING TECHNIQUE AND MUSICOLOGY. With palms facing, thumbs up and forefingers curled down in front of the handgrips, the player plucks 11 strings on the left and ten on the right. The separation is deceptive, for the music does not divide into right and left parts. Instead, the thumbs create a bass line, while the fingers play a treble melody; the instrument is inherently polyphonic. The pitches ascend in 3rds on both sides of the bridge (fig.4). This facilitates the playing of two- to four-note chords, rapid scalar passages (fingers or thumbs in alternation) and octave doubling. Brushed chords (strummed by one finger) and damped notes (detero) are also possible.

The traditional role of the kora is to accompany praise-songs and songs of commemoration, performed either by the kora player himself, his wife or other male or female singers. The kora part, the kumbengo, is typically derived from the vocal line, konkilo. In its simplest form, the kumbengo consists of playing the donkilo in octaves, but the more idiomatic style is to create a polyphonic ostinato from a fragment of the donkilo (ex.1). The layers of polyphony are often rhythmically offset, and hemiola is common. One player's kumbengo will differ from Ex.1 Jula Faso ('Merchant's Tune'), in hardino, a short kumbengo with two offset parts based on the second half of the vocal line.

4. Bridge of the kora with the strings shown as pitches on the western staff; the tuning shown approximates tomoraba or hardino

TABLE 1: The four kora tunings shown graphically aligned under a cents ruler with intervals in cents

Cents (x100) 0 . . . . . 1 . . . . . 2 . . . . . 3 . . . . . 4 . . . . . 5 . . . . . 6 . . . . . 7 . . . . . 8 . . . . . 9 . . . . . 10 . . . . 11 12

Tuning	Pitch 1		Pitch 2		Pitch 3		Pitch 4		Pitch 5		Pitch 6		Pitch 7		Pitch 1
Sauta	1	183	2	223	3	198	4	96	5	183	6	223	7	96	1
Hardino	1	183	2	223	3	96	4	198	5	183	6	223	7	96	1
Tomoraba	1	201	2	184	3	118	4	200	5	201	6	184	7	118	1
Tomora mesengo	1	250	2	97	3	155	4	200	5	250	6	97	7	155	1

another's, but all are compatible, creating further polyphony if several players join. The kumbengo is repeated with subtle variations and interrupted occasionally for birimintingo, improvisatory scalar and sequential motifs, usually played at dazzling speed. Occasionally the kumbengo is punctuated by a knock on the handgrip by the right forefinger in a technique called bulukondingo podi. Another type of knock, konkong, is more common; it is a time-line pattern tapped on the back of the kora by an apprentice or a male singer. Kora players compose their own songs to new or modified kumbengolu and often develop basic accompaniments into virtuoso solo pieces.

The kora spans a range of three octaves and a third. Most of the strings on the kora are not named, but the first and third strings on the right are called timbango and timbango a jingkandango ('timbango' and 'the one that answers timbango'). The two lowest strings, on the left, reinforce these at the octave. Named for their importance, the right hand strings, a 5th apart and played in alternation, establish the tonal centre for the majority of kora pieces.

The precedent for notating the kora on F was established prior to 1970 by a book of études produced for the Ecole des Arts in Dakar by Mamadou Kouyaté. Kora players, who make their own instruments, pitch them to suit themselves, and the choice may range from a 4th below to a 5th above F. But players like to be able to play together or with fixed-pitch instruments such as the balo (xylophone), and studies by Roderic Knight (1971) and A. King (1972) show that a significant number of koras are pitched between E♭ and G. Thus F makes a suitable de facto standard for notation.

There are four standard tunings for the kora, each with a regional association (Table 1). Tomoraba, also know as silaba or 'main way', is regarded by kora players in western Gambia, southern Senegal and Guinea-Bissau, the kora's presumed homeland, as the original kora tuning. Pieces in tomoraba, such as the well-known Kelefaba, are generally songs composed by kora players rather than adapted from other instruments. King has observed that tomoraba matches the Western major scale in just intonation, with the 3rd and 7th lower by 15 cents than the tempered intervals (1972, p.133).

The other three tunings are prevalent in eastern Gambia, northern Guinea and southern Mali. The first is hardino, nearly identical to the tempered Western major scale. The second, sauta, is tuned from hardino by augmenting the 4th. Tomora mesengo ('little tomora') is associated primarily with eastern Gambia, where it is simply called tomora. It is tuned by lowering the 3rd and 7th another 35 cents from tomoraba, making these notes 'half-flat', while raising the 2nd and 6th to within a semitone of three and seven respectively.

Table 1 presents a single octave of the tunings in graphic alignment under a cents ruler and gives intervals in cents. The cents figures were derived from tunings by 20 players studied by King. The figures are representative, not definitive, for although kora players agree on tunings, there is much room for individual variation in actual practice.

Generally, kora pieces utilize these tunings in what may be termed 'timbango mode', i.e. with pitch one as the tonal centre. Some songs call for other modes when played on the kora. In tomoraba, the most common alternates are modes centred on pitches three and seven, the latter including a diminished fifth, unusual in the West but familiar to Mandinka ears through popular seruba drumming songs.

In hardino, modes three and six are utilized, and sauta may be achieved without retuning by placing the tonal centre on pitch four. Sauta tuning itself is used only in its principal mode. In tomora mesengo, mode three is in fact the most common. The sound of this mode resembles sauta, although kora players do not equate the two. The versatility of kora tunings and their modes enables kora players to adapt to performing with the balo, kontingo (Mande plucked lute), other African instruments and Western instruments.

These collaborations are common today. In the 20th century, kora players migrated from the village-based courts of Mande kings and chiefs, seeking the patronage of national governments and the urban setting of African capitals. Today they are increasingly visible on the international music scene, collaborating with African musicians of other cultures, Western jazz and classical musicians and the avant garde.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AND OTHER RESOURCES

E.M. von Hornbostel and C. Sachs: 'Systematik der Musikinstrumente', Zeitschrift für Ethnologie, xlvi (1914), 553–90

Ibn Battuta: Travels in Asia and Africa, 1325–1354 (London, 1939)

R. Miller, ed.: The Travels of Mungo Park (New York, 1954) [originally published as Travels in the Interior Districts of Africa, 1799]

R. Knight: 'Towards a Notation and Tablature for the Kora, and its Application to other Instruments', AfM, v/1 (1971), 23–36

A. King: 'The Construction and Tuning of the Kora', African Language Studies, xiii (1972), 113–36

R. Knight: Mandinka Jaliya: Professional Music of The Gambia (diss., UCLA, 1973)

S.G. Pevar: 'The Construction of a Kora', African Arts, xi/4 (1978), 66–72

L. Duran: 'Theme and Variation in Kora Music: a Preliminary Study of "Tutu Jara" as performed by Amadu Bansang Jobate', Music and Tradition: Essays on Asian and Other Musics Presented to Laurence Picken, ed. D.R. Widdess and R.F. Wolpert (Cambridge, 1981)

R. Knight: 'The Style of Mandinka Music: a Study in Extracting Theory from Practice', Selected Reports in Ethnomusicology, v (1984), 3–66
S.C. DeVale: 'African Harps: Construction, Decoration, and Sound', Sounding Forms: African Music Instruments, ed. Marie-Thérèse Brincard (New York, 1989), 53–61
R. Knight: 'Music out of Africa: Mande Jaliya in Paris', World of Music, xxxiii/1 (1991), 52–69
R. Knight: 'Vibrato Octaves: Tunings and Modes of the Mande Balo and Kora', Progress Reports in Ethnomusicology, iii/4 (1991), 1–49
E. Charry: Musical Thought, History, and Practice among the Mande of West Africa (diss., Princeton, 1992)
E. Charry: 'West African Harps', Journal of the American Musical Instrument Society, xx (1994), 5–53
M. Kouyaté: Méthode de Kora (Dakar, n.d.)

RECORDINGS

Guinée: Musique des Malinké Le Chant du Monde, CNR 2741112 (1999) [originally issued as Music of Occidental Africa, 1952]
Amadu Bansang Jobarteh, Master of the Kora, coll. L. Duran, Eavadisc EDM 101 (1978)
Jali Nyama Suso: Kora Player of The Gambia, videotape, dir. R. Knight, Original Music OMV-003 (1991)
Gambie: l'art de la kora–Jali Nyama Suso, coll. R. Knight, Ocora CD 580027 (1996)
Jali Kunda: Griots of West Africa and Beyond, Ellipsis Arts CD 3510 (1996) [book and CD]

RODERIC C. KNIGHT

Korabel'nikova, Lyudmila Zinov'yevna (b Odessa, 7 Aug 1930). Russian musicologist. After graduating from the Moscow Conservatory in 1953, she was deputy director of academic work at the Tchaikovsky House-Museum in Klin (1953–7). She was secretary of the 'Glinka, M.I.' Central Museum for Musical Culture in Moscow (1957–68) and in 1968 was appointed the leading scientific officer at the State Institute for Art History (previously the Institute for the History of the Arts). She gained the doctorate in 1968. She is a laureate of the B.V. Asaf'yev Prize for Musicologists and co-chairperson of the Tchaikovsky Society. Her chief area of academic interest is Russian music in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Her writings include studies of Arensky, Anton and Nikolay Rubinstein, Smolensky, and the history of Russian musical education. She has written reviews of a variety of books and music editions and examined the problems surrounding musical sources and textology. She has edited a collection of the vocal works of Taneyev and is a member of the editorial committees for new editions of the works of both Musorgsky and Tchaikovsky. She is also the editor of individual volumes for the Tchaikovsky edition. Korabel'nikova was one of the first to study the culture of the first wave of the Russian emigration. Her work is characterized by its reliance on documentary sources and the cultural and historical context, and its reference to genres that are new to Russian musicology (e.g. the thematic and bibliographic index). She has also been involved in a number of international conferences.

WRITINGS

'S. Smolenskiy: ėntuziast russkoy khorovoy kul'turï' [Smolensky: the enthusiast of Russian choral music], SovM (1959), no.12, pp.79–86
'Stroitel' muzïkal'noy Moskvï (N.G. Rubinshteyn)' [The builder of music in Moscow (Rubinstein)'], SovM (1960), no.6, pp.80–88
'Taneyev o vospitanii kompozitorov' [Taneyev on the education of composers], SovM (1961), no.7, pp.50–54
'Moskovskaya konservatoriya v 1880-e godï' [The Moscow Conservatory during the 1880s], Moskovskaya konservatoriya, 1866–1966 (Moscow, 1966), 117–71
'Polacy w pierwszych konserwatoriach rosijskich' [The Poles in the first Russian conservatories], Polsko-rosyjskie miscellanea muzyczne, ed. Z. Lissa (Kraków, 1967), 421–8
ed., with F.G. Arzamanov: S.I. Taneyev: iz nauchno-pedagogicheskogo naslediya [Taneyev: his legacy as a scholar and teacher] (Moscow, 1967)
'Lew Tolstoj o Chopinie' [Tolstoy on Chopin], Rocznik chopinowski/Annales Chopin, vii (1969), 109–24
'Zhivaya traditsiya' [A living tradition], Muzïkal'noye ispolnitel'stvo, vi, ed. G.Ya. Ėødel'man (Moscow, 1970), 174–213
S.I. Taneyev v Moskovskoy konservatorii: iz istorii russkogo muzikal'kalnogo obrazovaniye (Moscow, 1974), 1–148
'Peterburg Petra Chaykovskogo' [Tchaikovsky's St Petersburg], Teatr (1978), no.8, pp.47–53
'"Oresteya" S.I. Taneyeva: antichnïy syuzhet v russkoy khudozhestvennoy kul'ture vtoroy polovinï XIX veka' [Taneyev's Oresteia: an ancient subject in Russian artistic culture of the second half of the 19th century], Tipologiya russkogo realizma vtoroy polovinï XIX veka, ed. G.Yu. Sternin (Moscow, 1979), 79–119 Instrumental'noye tvorchestvo S.I. Taneyeva: opït istoriko-stilisticheskogo analiza [Taneyev's instrumental works: an attempt at an historical and stylistic analysis] (Moscow, 1981)
ed.: S.I. Taneyev: dnevniki v tryokh knigakh, 1894–1909 [Taneyev: diaries] (Moscow, 1981–5)
'Arkhiv kompozitora kak material dlya izucheniya protsessov tvorchestva' [A composer's papers as material for studying the process of their creative work], Khudozhestvennoye tvorchestvo, deystvitel'nost', chelovek, ed. M.B. Khrapchenko (Leningrad, 3/1982), 265–71
Tvorchestvo S.I. Taneyeva: istoriko-stilisticheskoye issledovaniye [Taneyev's creative output: an historical and stylistic study] (diss., State Institute of Art, 1968; Moscow, 1986) with P.Ye. Vaydman: 'Problemï tekstologii ir muzïkoznanii' [Problems of textology and music research], Metodologicheskiye problemï muzïkoznaniya, ed. D.V. Zhitomirsky and others (Moscow, 1987), 122–50
'Muzïka' [Music], Russkaya khudozhestvennaya kul'tura vtoroy polovinï XIX veka: sotsial'no ėsteticheskiye problemï: dukhovnaya sreda [Russian artistic culture of the second half of the 19th century: social and aesthetic problems: the spiritual domain], ed. G.Yu. Sternin (Moscow, 1988), 98–137
'Muzïkal'noye obrazovaniye' [Music education], 'Kontsertnaya zhizn'' [Concert life], Istoriya russkoy muzïki v desyati tomakh, vi, ed. Yu.V. Keldïsh, O.Ye. Levashyova and A.I. Kandinsky (Moscow, 1989), 167–87, 188–234
'Uchastniki i svideteli zolotogo veka Rossii' [The participants and the witnesses of Russia's 'Golden Age'], MAk (1993), no.4, pp.207–11
'Muzïkal'noye obrazovaniye' [Music education], Istoriya russkoy muzïki v desyati tomakh, viii, ed. Yu.V. Keldïsh, L.Z. Korabel'nikova, O.Ye. Levashyova and A.I. Kandinsky (Moscow, 1994), 408–43
'S.I. Taneyev', Istoriya russkoy muzïki v desyati tomakh, ix, ed. Yu.V. Keldïsh, O.Ye. Levashyova and A.I. Kandinsky (Moscow, 1994), 148–215
'Vvedeniye' [Introduction], 'A.G. Rubinshteyn', Istoriya russkoy muzïki v desyati tomakh, vii, ed. Yu.V. Keldïsh, L.Z. Korabel'nikova, O.Ye. Levashyova and A.I. Kandinsky (Moscow, 1994), 5–27, 77–126
'Chaykovskiy v samosoznanii Russkogo Zarubezh'ya 20-kh - 30-kh godov' [Tchaikovsky in the consciousness of the Russian émigrés of the 1920s and 30s], P.I. Chaykovskiy: k 100-letiyu so dnya smerti (1893–1993), ed. Ye.G. Sorokina (Moscow, 1995), 10–18
Aleksandr Cherepnin: dolgoye stranstviye [Tcherepnin: a long wandering] (Moscow, 1999)
Amerikaniskiye dnevniki Artura Lur'ye: Keldïshevsky collection [American journal of A. Lur'ye], ed. S.G. Zvereva (Moscow, 1999)
'Muzïkal'naya kul'tura russkogo varubezh'ya: na putyakh k okkrïtii' [Musical culture of Russia abroad: on paths to discovery]', Russkoye zarubezh'ye: ocherki, ed. G.Yu. Sternin (Moscow, 1999), 5–51

EDITIONS

S.I. Taneyev: Vokal'nïye sochineniya s soprovozhdenii fortepiano [Vocal works with piano accompaniment] (Moscow, 1979–81)

MARINA PAVLOVNA RAKHMANOVA

Koran reading. See QU'RAN READING.

Körber, Georg (b Nuremberg, *c*1570; d Amberg, Upper Palatinate, in or after 1613). German composer and music editor. He probably attended the University of Altdorf.

This was close to Nuremberg, where he is next heard of as an assistant at St Lorenz until 1598 at the latest. In that year he is recorded as Kantor at Amberg and remained in that position until the end of his life. In 1613 he held a position of trust as 'alumnorum oeconomus'. Although it could certainly have been used in worship too, he seems always to have pursued educational ends in his music, as can be assumed from his preference for small forms such as bicinia, canons and pieces for equal voices. He made a typical contribution to the small-scale dance-song forms imported from Italy about 1600. To the new edition of Balthasar Musculus's 40 schöne geistliche Gesenglein he contributed 13 Latin pieces 'ad aequales voces' with biblical texts, and he also included 41 other pieces by various composers. Of these the best represented is Orazio Vecchi with eight pieces, and there are seven each by Gallus Dressler and Jacob Meiland; ten are anonymous.

See also MUSCULUS, BALTHASAR.

WORKS

Tyrocinium musicum (Nuremberg, 1589)

Distiche moralia, 2vv, item benedictiones et gratiarum actiones, aliaeque sacrae cantilenae, 4vv, fugis concinnatis (Nuremberg, 1590)

13 works, 1597[7]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Sandberger: 'Bemerkungen zur Biographie Hans Leo Hasslers und seiner Brüder, sowie zur Musikgeschichte der Städte Nürnberg und Augsburg', DTB, viii, Jg.v/1 (1904/R)

K.W. Niemöller: Untersuchungen zu Musikpflege und Musikunterricht an den deutschen Lateinschulen vom ausgehenden Mittelalter bis um 1600 (Regensburg, 1969)

W. Dupont: Werkausgaben Nürnberger Komponisten in Vergangenheit und Gegenwart (Nuremberg, 1971)

WALTER BLANKENBURG

Korchinska, Maria (b Moscow, 16 Feb 1895; d London, 17 April 1979). Russian harpist. A student of Xenia Erdeli and Alexander Slepushkin, she was the first harpist to graduate from the Moscow Conservatory with the gold medal (1910). She herself taught at the Conservatory from 1918 to 1924 and before leaving Russia for England she was also solo harpist at the Grand Opera of the Moscow State Theatre. From 1926, having settled in London, she played much contemporary chamber music, with the Harp Ensemble and the Wigmore Ensemble, giving the first performance of Bax's Fantasy Sonata for viola and harp, which is dedicated to her. Conducted by the composer, in December 1943 she gave the first performance of the completed version of Britten's Ceremony of Carols with the Morriston Boys' Choir, with whom she subsequently recorded the work for Decca. From 1960 onwards she collaborated with the Dutch harpist Phia Berghout in the organization of the famous harp weeks held at the Eduard van Beinum Foundation's Huis Queekhoven at Breukelen, the Netherlands.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Shameyeva: The Development of Harp Music in Russia (Moscow, 1994)

W.M. Govea: Nineteenth- and Twentieth-Century Harpists: a Bio-critical Sourcebook (Westport, CT, 1995), 145–50

ANN GRIFFITHS

Korchmaryov, Klimenty Arkad'yevich (b Verkhnedneprovsk, 21 Jun/3 July 1899; d Moscow, 7 April 1958). Russian composer and pianist. He received his musical education at the Odessa Conservatory, from which he graduated in 1919 with a gold medal (he was a student in G.M. Biber's piano class and in V.I. Malishevsky's composition class). On graduating from the conservatory he went into teaching and also appeared as a concert artist in Ukraine. In 1923 he moved to Moscow, where he became a member of the Association of Revolutionary Composers and Musicians. He worked a great deal in the field of campaign art (at that time he wrote a great number of songs especially intended for the campaign teams). Korchmaryov's first opera Ivan-soldat ('The Soldier Ivan') (1924), in which he actively used folklore motifs, was the subject of some lively discussions among music critics. His so-called 'vocal symphonies' scored a great success, especially no.2 'Gollandiya' ('Holland'), a large-scale composition for soloists, chorus and orchestra. His investigations into the 'song symphony' ultimately led to the composition of the vocal symphonies which were warmly received in the Soviet musical press. From 1939 to 1947 he worked in Turkmenistan, where he studied the musical folklore, made recordings of more than 200 folksongs, and also wrote the first Turkmen national ballet Vesyolïy obmanshchik ('The Merry Deceiver'). In the 1950s he wrote a number of works on Chinese themes including the cantata Svobodnïy Kitay ('Free China') which won the USSR State Prize in 1951, and the opera Ditya radosti ('The Child of Joy') of 1954. He also worked as a music critic. By contrast with what he produced in the 1920s and 30s, when attempts had been made to renew musical language and efforts made to discover new genres, the works of the 1950s are marked by extreme sterility in harmonic thinking and genre. This can be partly explained by the ideological battle that was being actively waged in the late 1940s and early 50s against so-called formalism. Korchmaryov was made an Honoured Representative of the Arts of the Turkmen SSR in 1944.

WORKS

STAGE

Ops: Ivan-soldat [The Soldier Ivan] (4, D. Smolin), 1924, Moscow, 5 Feb 1927; Molodost' [Youth] (comic op, 4, A. Argo), 1927–30; 10 dney, kotorïye potrasli mir [10 Days that Shook the World] (4, S. Gorodetsky, after J. Reed), 1930–32; Bagtlï Yashlïk [Happy Youth] (3, 4 scenes, A. Afinogenov, L. Cherkashina and R. Seidov), 1940–41, Ashkhabad, 23 Feb 1942; Ditya radosti [The Child of Joy] (4, Cherkashina, N. Klïkov and G. Registan, after Chin. folk drama), 1954, Ulan-Ude, 21 April 1955, rev. (Cherkashina and A.A. Zharov), Minsk, 26 Sept 1959

Operettas: Opasnïy kvartal [The Dangerous Quarter] (3, V. Zak and M. Svetlov), 1934; Ganna rannyaya [An Early Beauty]/Gioconda (3, S. Vetlugin and L. Oshanin), 1938, Khabarovsk, 1939; Panzabiyaka [Mr Trouble-Maker] (3, Ya. Galitsky and Cherkashina), 1945

Ballets: Krepostnaya balerina [The Serf Ballerina] (5, 8 scenes, D. Smolin), 1925, Leningrad, 11 Dec 1927; Aldar-Kose (4, 7 scenes, K. Burunov, N. Kholfin, after Turkmen folklore), 1942, Ashkhabad, 31 Oct 1942; rev. as Vesyolïy obmanshchik: priklyucheniya Aldar-Kose [The Jolly Deceiver: the Adventures of Aldar-Kose] (4), 1949, Moscow, 5 Nov 1949; Devushka morya [The Girl of the Sea] (3, 6 scenes, P. Abolimov, R. Zacharov), 1947, Leningrad, 26 June 1949; Alen'kiy tsvetochek [The Little Crimson Flower] (4, 12 scenes, Cherkashina, after Aksakov), 1948, Novosibirsk, 2 April 1949

Incid music

VOCAL

Vocal-orch: Ivan-soldat [The Soldier Ivan], suite, 1v, orch, 1928 [from op]; Oktyabr' [October] (Vocal Sym. no.1) (S. Gorodetsky, V. Mayakovsky), spkr, 2 solo vv, chorus, orch, 1932; Gollandiya [Holland] (Vocal Sym. no.2) (D. Last, trans. N. Berendgof), 4 solo vv, orch, 1932–3; Svobodnïy Kitay [Free China] (cant., Matusovsky), spkr, Mez, chorus, orch, 1950

Acc. chorus: Levïy marsh [March of the Leftists] (V. Mayakovsky), 2-pt chorus, pf, 1923; Narodï sovetskoy stranï [The Peoples of the Soviet Land] (Vocal Sym. no.3) (M. Ulitsky, trad.), chorus, fl, ob, cl, bn, vn, 1935

Vocal-chbr: Oneginskiye strofï [Stanzas from Onegin] (A.S. Pushkin), 1v, str qt, 1936

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Ov., 1937; Vn Conc. 'Dvadtsatiletiyu Oktyabrya' [For the 20th Anniversary of October], 1937; Simfonicheskiy val's [Sym. Waltz], 1940
Chbr: Sonata, va, db, pf, 1921; Variatsii na temu Skryabina [Variations on a Theme of Skryabin], vn, vc, pf, 1923; Sonata, vn, pf, 1928; Str Qt, 1934; Kontsertnoye rondo [Concert Rondo], vn, pf, 1948
Pf: Skazka [Tale], 1916; 3 p'yesï: Vesennyaya pesnya, Improvizatsiya, Svetloye [3 Pieces: Spring Song, Improvisation, Radiant], 1918–22; Amerikanskoye [American], 1928; Prelude, LH, 1922; Revolyutsionnïy karnival [Revolutionary Carnival], fantastic variations on the theme of the French song 'Carmagnole', 1924; Zhizn'i bït narodov SSSR [The Life and the Conditions of the Peoples of the USSR], suite, 1926

WRITINGS

'Prichinï krizisa "sovremennoy muzïki"' [The reasons for the crisis in 'contemporary music'], Muzïkal'naya nov', ix (1924)
'Skryabin v nashi dni' [Skryabin in our times], Muzïkal'naya nov', vi (1924)
'Kak nas kritikuyut' [How we are criticized], Muzïka i revolyutsiya (1928), no.4, pp.16–18

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A.P.: 'Ivan-soldat' [The soldier Ivan], Muzïka i revolyutsiya (1926), no.9, pp.21–23
Sadko [V. Blyum]: 'Ne novaya i ne revolyutsionnaya (opera "Ivan-soldat" v Eksperimental'nom teatre) [It is not new and not revolutionary (The opera 'The soldier Ivan' at the Experimental Theatre)], Zhizn' iskusstva (19 April 1927)
G. Polyanovsky: 'Klimentiy Korchmaryov', SovM (1933), no.5, pp.36–56
G. Shneyerson: 'Kantata o novom Kitaye' [A cantata about the new China], SovM (1951), no.3, pp.40–43
S. Shatrov: 'Podryad na muzu (o neblagovidnïkh deystviyakh kompozitora K. Korchmaryova)' [A contract for a muse (On the unseemly actions of the composer K. Korchmaryov], Pravda (22 Feb 1955)
B/a: 'Pamyati K.A. Korchmaryova: khronika' [To the memory of Korchmaryov: a chronicle], SovM (1958), no.6, p.208 only

ELENA DVOSKINA

Kord, Kazimierz (b Pogórze, 18 Nov 1930). Polish conductor. He took first prize for piano at the Leningrad Conservatory and studied composition and conducting at Kraków. He joined the Warsaw Opera and made his début there in 1960. He was artistic director at the Kraków Opera, 1962–8, where he produced and conducted works. He directed and toured abroad with the Polish Radio-Television Orchestra, 1968–73, during which time he made his début at the Metropolitan in 1972 in The Queen of Spades (the first Russian opera to be sung in its original language at that theatre) and conducted Boris Godunov at San Francisco the next year. Kord's Covent Garden début was in Yevgeny Onegin in 1976; since then he has held mainly orchestral appointments, with the Warsaw PO (from 1977), the SWF SO, Baden-Baden (1980–86), the Cincinnati SO (1980–82) and the Pacific SO, Irvine, California (1989–91). His conducting has drawn praise for its commitment and precision, sometimes with more attention to detail than to overall character. Among his recordings are Massenet's Don Quichotte and works by Elsner, Młynarski, Lutosławski (Chain 2) and Górecki (Symphony no.3).

NOËL GOODWIN

Korea. East Asian peninsula. Korea existed as a single kingdom from 668 until 1910, when it was annexed by Japan until 1945. After World War II, it was divided into the Republic of Korea (South Korea, Taehan Min'guk) and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (North Korea, Chosŏn Minjujuŭi Inmun Konghwaguk), suffering a civil war between 1950 and 1953 but retaining the division after the signing of an armistice. South Korea has an area of about 99,300 km² and a population of about 46·88 million (2000 estimate); North Korea covers about 122,800 km², with a population estimated at 23·91 million. Ethnic Korean minority populations of some size are also found in northeast China, Japan, Central Asia (especially Uzbekistan) and the USA (see UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, §II, 5(iv)).

I. Introduction. II. Traditional music genres. III. Musical instruments. IV. Music theory. V. Modern developments.

I. Introduction

1. Connections with China and Japan. 2. Social contexts. 3. History. 4. Archaeological and documentary evidence.

1. CONNECTIONS WITH CHINA AND JAPAN. The Korean peninsula projects southwards from the coast of north-eastern China, nearly forming a land bridge to Japan. Korea's proximity to better-known neighbours and a relative lack of reliable information about its culture have led to a widespread but ill-informed assumption that Korean culture derives from or simply imitates that of China or Japan. While some clear connections to those countries do exist, Korean musical practices are more remarkable for their distinctiveness than their similarity to other East Asian musics.

Korea's musical indebtedness to China is quantifiably small but qualitatively significant. Of the 60 or so musical instruments listed and illustrated in traditional documents, over half are clearly copies of (or derived from) Chinese instruments, but only a handful of these are still used with any frequency; those that are are generally used in court music, which forms only a small part of the total musical landscape. Most of the instruments used for almost all the traditional music in Korea, in other words, are native constructions (even if partly influenced by foreign models), carefully designed to suit the requirements of Korean music, which are distinct from those of China. There is a small surviving body of court music considered to have been borrowed from China (see §II, 1 below), but this forms only a tiny part of the already small court repertory. On the other hand, much of Korea's literary and philosophical traditions bear a close relationship to Chinese Confucianism, and both musical notation and theory in Korea are much indebted to China.

Korea's musical remains in Japan are difficult to measure. Ancient documents state that Korean musicians of the Paekche dynasty (ended 663 CE) taught music in Japan, but it is impossible to say how much lasting influence this may have had on Japanese musical history. Komagaku, a category of Japanese gagaku, actually means 'music of Korea', and it may preserve elements of Korean musical practices; but it comes from a much earlier stratum of musical repertory than any music now surviving in Korea itself, and comparisons of musical content have failed to produce convincing evidence of relationships.

2. SOCIAL CONTEXTS. Historically, most Korean music served occasional purposes. At the royal court, ensemble music and dance were performed at formal banquets, royal marriage celebrations, welcoming ceremonies for foreign envoys, and state sacrificial rites to ancestral and other 'spirits' in keeping with the Confucian code of proper conduct. Religious occasions employing music included various Buddhist observances and commemorative rites, as well as shamanistic rituals such as exorcisms, typically performed in response to a particular need. Secular folk music was performed most frequently in conjunction with the agricultural cycle, as work-songs and at seasonal festivals. As the Korean climate could be unforgiving (hot and wet summers rising from South-east Asia, and cold and dry winters descending from Siberia), farmers enthusiastically welcomed short periods of relief and pleasure with song and dance. Additional anxiety arose from the seemingly continual threat of foreign invasion from both land and sea, and the directness and emotion of much Korean folk music may reflect a desire to celebrate in the face of an uncertain future. As explained below, the modern environment of Korean music is radically different.

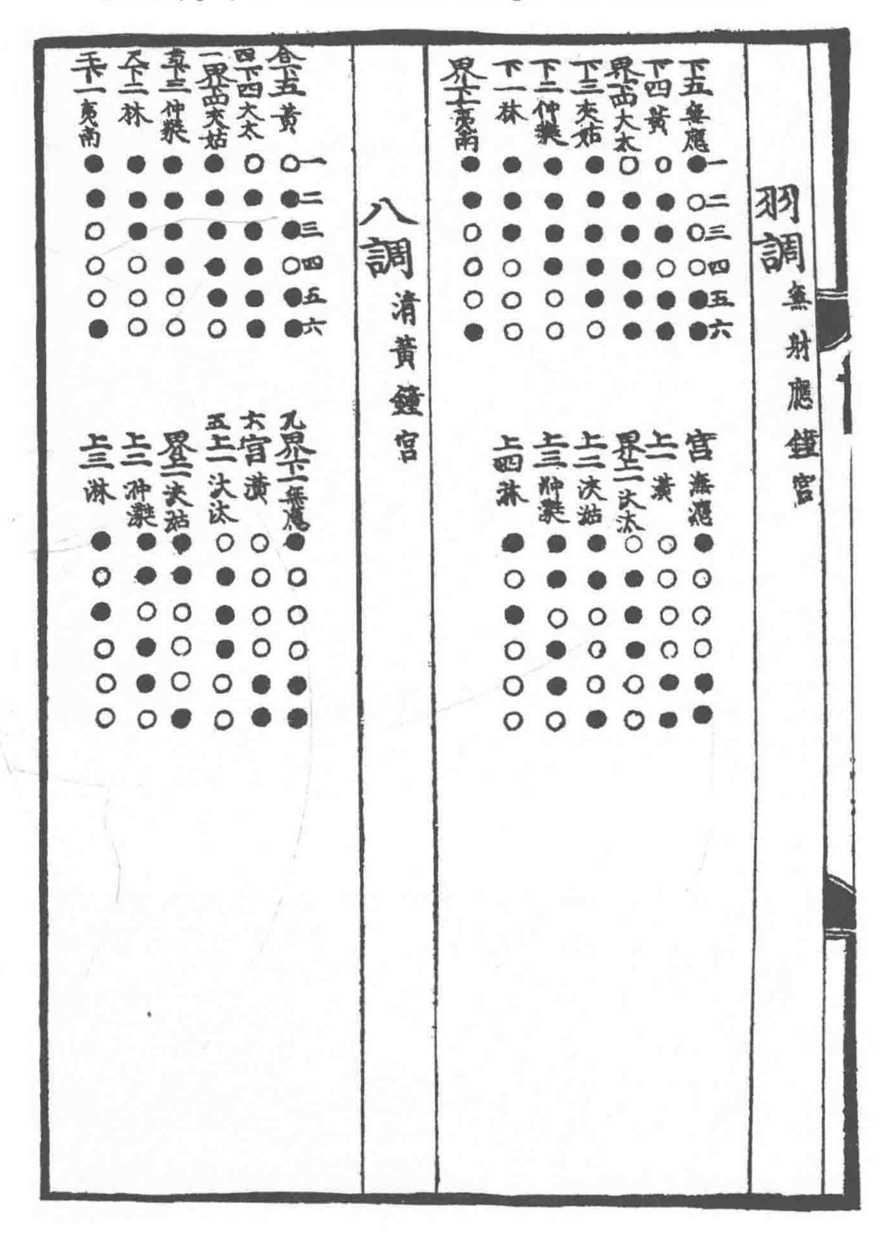
3. History. The documented history of the Korean peninsula roughly coincides with the Christian era. From a number of tribal confederations in the first few centuries CE, three emerged as distinct states by the 3rd or 4th century: Koguryŏ, Paekche and Silla. This early period of statehood, known as the Three Kingdoms, is attested by written history (both Korean and Chinese), legends and archaeological discoveries; it lasted until 668 CE, when Silla established ascendancy over its two rivals and brought a substantial portion of the peninsula under unified rule.

The remainder of Korean history until modern times has involved a succession of dynasties of varying character but not a great deal of geographical expansion or contraction. Silla lasted until 935, overlapping briefly with the Koryŏ dynasty (from which comes the name 'Korea') of 918–1392. Chosŏn supplanted Koryŏ in 1392 and persevered through mixed fortunes, including a number of foreign invasions from the mainland and from Japan, until 1910, when the whole Korean peninsula was annexed by Japan. The subsequent dissolution of the royal structure of government meant the end of nearly all court occasions in which music was a part. Freed from Japanese occupation in 1945, the Korean peninsula was divided in half politically and remains so.



4. Archaeological and documentary evidence. The earliest information on music in Korea comes from wall paintings in tombs, located in the northern part of the peninsula and dating mostly from the Koguryŏ kingdom, together with a few archaeological artefacts recovered in 20th-century excavations. From these we learn of early forms of a few musical instruments still used in Korea, especially the kŏmun'go zither, which has attracted considerable attention from Japanese organologists. The mural artists often engaged in foreign (especially Chinese) styles of tomb decoration, rather than simply depicting contemporary Korean practices, and this has left the misleading impression of heavy foreign influence. Much information is doubtless awaiting discovery in the hundreds of unexcavated tombs near the Yalu river in China. A limited amount of musical information, chiefly to the effect that Koreans like to sing, dance and drink, can be found in contemporaneous Chinese historical sources such as the so-called 'standard histories'.

Native Korean documents containing musical material survive only from the mid-Koryŏ period (12th century) onwards; they are increasingly abundant from early Chosŏn (15th century) to the present. These give us (for Koryŏ and Chosŏn) remarkably thorough descriptions of ritual and ceremonial contexts in which music was performed, though as the authors were of the educated upper class writing for their peers, the information is almost exclusively about court and aristocratic music, with folk music receiving little mention.

The Samguk sagi ('History of the Three Kingdoms') of 1145 is in most respects like a short Chinese standard history, and it contains a few pages devoted to an essay on music, derived from earlier written sources and providing almost the only documentary data that survives about the Three Kingdoms period. The essay gives a short survey of music in Silla, Paekche and Koguryŏ, listing musical instruments used at the time and in particular giving legendary origin stories for the 12-string zither kayagŭm and the six-string zither kŏmun'go. The presence of these instruments during the Three Kingdoms period is also attested by tomb paintings and various artefacts.

In the Chosŏn dynasty, documentation becomes much more plentiful. The contexts of court music and many heated discussions about music and its uses are described in court annals called sillok, which preserve a nearly day-to-day account for the entire Chosŏn dynasty (from 1392 onwards). The sillok also contain a number of subject-specific monographs, including some dedicated to music and ceremonies. The court also produced ritual manuals (ŭigwe) specifying precisely the order and content of particular ceremonies on specific historical occasions, giving illustrations of musical instruments and ensembles, and naming the pieces of music to be played. A number of musical treatises survive, of which by far the most important is the 1493 Akhak kwebŏm ('Guide to the Study of Music'), which describes musical theory, ensembles and instrument construction, as well as performance techniques, dance and costumes (fig.1). All these sources habitually refer back to earlier authoritative documents, as is characteristic of Confucian scholarship.

The earliest surviving musical notation in Korea dates from 1430; it contains a copy of part of a 1349 Chinese source that was used in the revival of aak at that time, together with hundreds of modified transpositions of the Chinese pieces, prepared for use in Korean court ceremonies. From 1447 onwards there are hundreds of pages of scores of court and aristocratic music written in a precise rhythmic notation called chŏngganbo, a grid of lines that allows the insertion of symbols for almost any musical information (note names, tablature, solfège, mnemonics, dance choreography) in a particular time frame (see §IV, 3 below). The presence of such a notation in Korea at a time when both China and Japan used only rudimentary rhythmic symbols reinforces the assertion that explicit rhythmic structure is essential to Korean music to a degree not shared by China and Japan. The earliest mensural scores contain specific rhythmic patterns for drum, melodies for singers, string and wind instruments (though only one generic string line and one wind line) and song texts, so that the core features of Korean music (rhythmic pattern and melodic mode) are clearly indicated, while secondary and individual features such as ornamentation and idiomatic instrumental technique are missing.

1. A page from the 'Akhak kwebŏm' showing fingering charts in two modes for the flute taegŭm

From 1572 onwards there are dozens of kŏmun'go tablature scores (see fig.8 below), in which it is possible to trace the development of some pieces of music down through several centuries; indeed, this has been a major activity of Korean musicology. From the 19th century come a number of singers' notebooks, grouping thousands of poems (mostly the three-line sijo) for singing; some of these include a rudimentary neumatic notation that allows correlation with surviving kagok melodies (see fig.9 below).

In total, the historical information on Korean music is almost exclusively about musical activities of interest to the upper ruling class. The information relates to what the Koreans have always considered important in connection with their music: the context in which the music is performed, the rhythmic patterns, skeletal melodies (giving mode and tune, but apart from kŏmun'go tablature not ornamentation or specific instrumental techniques), song texts and reference to earlier authorities.

II. Traditional music genres

1. Court music. 2. Aristocratic genres. 3. Folk music. 4. Religious music. 5. Theatrical music.

1. COURT MUSIC. Chinese ritual music (yayue, Korean pronunciation, aak) came to Korea as a gift from the Chinese emperor in 1116 and was originally performed in a number of formal court ceremonies. The surviving descendants of that music, still using early 12th-century melodies, are just two short pieces performed only at the semi-annual sacrifice to Confucius at the shrine of Confucius (Munmyo) and at concerts by the National Center for Korean Traditional Performing Arts in Seoul. This is stately, rarified music performed by two alternating ensembles of special wind and percussion instruments of Chinese origin, such as the sets of tuned bronze bells (p'yŏnjong) and stone chimes (p'yŏn'gyŏng) (figs.2 and 3); many of these instruments are used for no other purpose.

Other court ceremonial music, mainly of Korean origin (for which the native term is hyangak but also loosely called aak), includes two suites (Pot'aep'yŏng and Chŏngdaeŏp) of 11 pieces each, performed by singers and two large instrumental ensembles at the annual sacrifice to royal ancestors at the royal ancestral shrine (Chongmyo) in Seoul and in concert. The history of these suites can be traced in detail through numerous scores as far back as their origin in the mid-15th century. Less well known is a set of pieces for a late 18th-century sacrificial rite at a shrine called Kyŏngmogung; these are now performed only in concert. A number of individual pieces originally played at banquets and other celebratory occasions to accompany dancing and singing survive only as concert pieces. Sujech'ŏn, held in special esteem, is thought to be a purely native piece (hyangak) and to have roots many centuries old; Yŏmillak is a long piece (over 80 minutes) with a documented history back to the 15th century; Ch'wit'a, derived from court processional music, employs especially loud instruments and proceeds at a regular, walking pace; and Nagyangch'un and Pohŏja derive ultimately from Chinese ci music of the Song dynasty (960–1279; see CHINA, §II, 4) or earlier, but their performing style is fully Koreanized – they are the only two pieces of so-called tangak, that is, music other than aak that has been imported from China. There are numerous other individual court pieces, and many of the court pieces exist in multiple arrangements.

2. ARISTOCRATIC GENRES. Non-ceremonial instrumental music of the former ruling aristocracy of the Chosŏn dynasty is essentially limited to one suite of nine increasingly faster movements, Yŏngsan hoesang, which is performed in a number of versions of varying instrumentation and is employed both as chamber music and dance accompaniment. Hyŏnak Yŏngsan hoesang is set for mixed ensemble of strings, winds and percussion; Kwanak Yŏngsan hoesang is for winds and percussion only; P'yŏngjo hoesang is set for mixed ensemble but is melodically transposed down a 4th and somewhat more ornamented; and Pyŏlgok is again for mixed ensemble but omits some movements and adds three other quick movements at the end. Individual movements and extracts from this suite have a pervasive presence in concerts and dances, in countless different instrumentations; it is an essential item in the repertory of every traditional musician.

Refined, subtle vocal music setting poetry of high literary quality is found in kagok, sijo and kasa. The repertory of kagok, for male or female solo voice with eight accompanying string, wind and percussion instruments, consists of about 40 interrelated pieces, each setting a poem in the favourite national form known as sijo, consisting of three couplets. Although each kagok melody is now associated with a single text, in the past each tune could be used to perform many different texts; traditional sources of sijo texts, in fact, are singers' collections of texts (generally late 19th century), organized into sections according to the kagok melody used (see fig.9 below). The word sijo, confusingly, is used in Korea to refer both to this poetic form used in kagok and to a

2. Tŭngga (ensemble on the terrace) for aak (ritual music) at the Sacrifice to Confucius, showing (left to right) p'yŏn'gyŏng (set of stone chimes), t'ŭkkyŏng (single stone chime) and ch'uk (wooden box)

3. Tŭngga (ensemble on the terrace) showing p'yŏnjong (set of bronze bells) simplified musical setting of such poems for voice and drum (optionally with a few melody instruments added); several short sijo melodies, distinguished mainly by range and voice quality, are used to present countless different texts in the same poetic form. Kasa are settings of longer texts, some in the nature of travel diaries in verse, also with mixed ensemble accompaniment; the extant repertory consists of only 12 pieces and is much less frequently performed than kagok or sijo.

3. Folk music. Music considered by Koreans to form their folk tradition includes both professional and amateur genres. The highest artistry and training is required for p'ansori, a dramatic narrative form for solo voice and drum (puk), which has developed over several centuries; it employs song, speech and gesture. Only five stories remain in the active modern repertory, but each lasts several hours and provides ample scope for individual interpretation and development. Training and memorization require years of sustained effort, and a complex structural system of melodic modes and cyclical rhythmic patterns appears in the music, correlated with emotions and developments in the drama.

A more recent (late 19th-century) virtuoso instrumental form, partly derived from p'ansori, is sanjo, played on a single melody instrument (which may be any of a number of standard Korean string or wind instruments) with Changgo drum accompaniment. Unlike p'ansori, in which rhythmic patterns vary according to the emotional content of the story, sanjo presents four or more rhythmic patterns in ascending order of metrical speed, each movement being set to one rhythmic pattern and the slow movements being more intensely ornamented in melody. A system of 'schools' of playing exists for each instrument used in sanjo, essentially a genealogy of influences passed down by famous teachers.

In the recent past, other folk genres have been refined to a professional level. Nongak, farmers' music, for example, has been performed by bands of percussion instruments for many centuries at both a simple local level and at a professional level by touring bands. Loud music for outdoor events, nongak ranges from simple work rhythms to assist repetitive tasks in the fields to complex set pieces performed by professional bands at concerts and festivals. There are still elements of regional variants in farmers' music. Following its near obsolescence in the 1970s, nongak has become highly popular throughout South Korea and among ethnic Koreans abroad, especially in a derivative form, samullori, in which it is played on four specific instruments (the drums changgo and puk, and the gongs ching and kkwaenggwari) taken to a highly developed and professionalized level by the originating group Samul nori and numerous imitators.

Although professional musicians all perform folk genres, the repertory as a whole is far more widespread. Korean folksongs, minyo, typically display a verse and refrain form, and solo improvisation of words for a verse in a group performance is a common practice. There are strong regional characteristics of Korean folksong, the main distinctions lying in rhythmic patterns, melodic modes and vocal style. Although many folksongs are performed throughout the country, they are still considered to be characteristic of particular regions, the primary areas being the central Kyŏnggi province, south-western Chŏlla province, the eastern provinces of Kangwŏn and Kyŏngsang, and the northern provinces (now in North Korea). Some musicologists distinguish between widespread folksongs and songs known only in a limited locality. The more professional forms such as p'ansori, sanjo and some nongak are highly practised and informed by wide musical knowledge, often obscuring remnants of regional traits, though there remain a few well-developed regional types of singing (chapka) in which the local stylistic traits are consciously cultivated.

4. RELIGIOUS MUSIC. Religious music includes several genres associated with Buddhism and shamanism. The most commonly heard form of Buddhist music is yŏmbul, a simple and highly repetitive sutra chanting (in either Chinese or Sanskrit), which can be sung by virtually any monk; many recordings of yŏmbul are available on cassette and CD. Pŏmp'ae are long and complex chants that move through their texts very slowly; these chants require extensive training and are not often heard. Buddhist songs in folksong style and vernacular language that anyone can sing are called hwach'ŏng, and a particularly well-known and often recorded Buddhist piece sung by various professional singers is Hoesimgok. The yŏmbul and pŏmp'ae are usually accompanied only by simple percussion, a 'wooden fish' (mokt'ak) or metal gong (ching).

Shaman music comes in many types, names and regional variants, but there is a broad distinction drawn between vocal forms (muga) and instrumental ones (sinawi). The muga are varied in nature, being narrative, dramatic or lyrical. They are generally sung by a shaman, in Korea usually a woman, with little accompaniment other than the changgo drum, and their length varies enormously from a few minutes to several hours duration.

Sinawi is instrumental music, originally accompanying dance and other acts in shaman rites but nowadays often played in concert with no religious connection. It may be played by any combination of melodic instruments, so long as the near ubiquitous changgo drum is present. Typically it uses only two or three rapid rhythmic patterns and a single melodic mode. In combination with the high vocal art of p'ansori, it is one of the precursors of sanjo.

5. THEATRICAL MUSIC. In addition to the narrative p'ansori described above, two further types of Korean theatre typically employ music. One is masked dance drama (t'alch'um), of which there are several regional variants. These have a long history and were documented by official sources as they were sometimes used to entertain visiting dignitaries from foreign countries at various stages along the journey. In the last couple of centuries, the dramas have come to be the property of the common people, and their content often includes earthy material of a satiric nature, poking fun at the aristocracy. Each type of drama has a slightly different musical accompaniment, but generally they contain drums, gongs and a few loud melody instruments such as the p'iri (oboe). The actors sing and dance in folk style to the musical accompaniment.

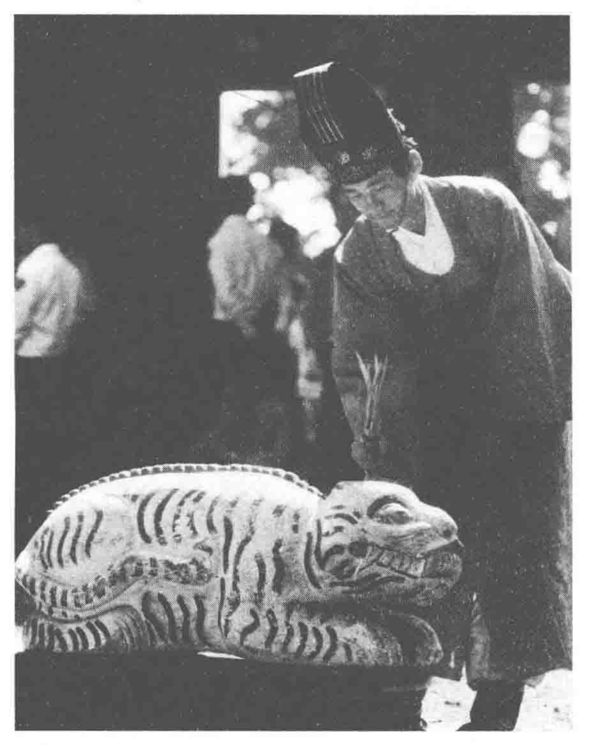
The other theatrical form employing music is the puppet drama kkoktugaksi, which uses a small enclosed stage and a few musicians, like those of the masked drama, who provide accompaniment for songs and occasional instrumental pieces.

III. Musical instruments

1. General. 2. Types: (i) Percussion (ii) String (iii) Wind.

1. GENERAL. The rich Korean instrumentarium is too large to list in detail here (see GroveI). The 1493 Akhak kwebŏm contains precise descriptions and illustrations of 65 musical instruments, many complete with fingering charts (see fig.1 above); more instruments have been introduced in the intervening centuries. It is instructive, however, to consider the frequency of use of the instruments: of the 60 or so instruments typically listed in recent accounts of Korean music, many are either rarely used or are entirely obsolete, and only about a quarter of them enjoy a measurable popularity. Many of the instruments used in the music performed at the sacrifice to Confucius and the sacrifice to royal ancestors, for example, are used only on those occasions (or in infrequent concert performances). Similarly, many instruments are used in court music only, and that music now forms only a small portion of the active modern repertory in South Korea. The remarkable and beautiful sets of tuned bronze bells (p'yŏnjong) and stone chimes (p'yŏn'gyŏng) (see figs.2 and 3 above), for example, appear only in the music for sacrificial rites and a handful of other court pieces (see §V, 2 below for details of instrumentarium used in North Korea).

On the other hand, a few characteristic Korean instruments are used frequently. Melody instruments need to be able to play readily in the Korean melodic modes, to render a wide vibrato, to bend notes over a considerable pitch range and to produce florid ornamentation. Drums must be able to provide both a secure rhythmic underpinning and a variety of stroke and timbre, since a simple deep thump is inadequate to articulate the subtle elements of patterning in rhythmic cycles. One-sound percussion instruments are usually supplemental instruments, rather than essential ones. Many of the imported melody and percussion instruments, such as those used in the court sacrificial rites, are restricted in range and capability from the standpoint of native Korean musical practices and therefore are not often used.



2. TYPES. In modern times, Korean instruments have been classified under three main headings: percussion, strings and winds. In the past (as in Akhak kwebŏm), instruments were classified under the Chinese 'eight sonorous sounds' system: metal, stone, silk, bamboo, gourd, earth, skin and wood (see CHINA, §III). Some instruments, such as the haegŭm fiddle, use several of the materials, so that their position in the classification is not obvious, while in some cases the sounding material of the instrument is not actually the classifying material. A particular Korean twist in instrument classification is that bowed strings (the haegŭm and ajaeng), because they are capable of sustaining and shaping tones, are members of so-called 'wind' ensembles.

(i) Percussion. The standard accompanying percussion instrument in both folk and court music is the double-headed hourglass drum CHANGGO. Two heads, made of animal skin stretched across metal hoops, are laced together to hold them onto the hollow drum body, with the heads overhanging by a few centimetres. In most indoor music, the changgo is played on the left side with an open hand and on both the overhanging flange and in the centre of the right side with a slender bamboo stick. In loud outdoor music such as nongak, it is played with a ball-headed mallet on the left and a sturdy bamboo stick on the right. The distinct sounds produced by the different mechanisms allow subtle variations of basic rhythmic patterns to be performed.

Percussion instruments best known in the highly popular genre samullori include the changgo, puk, KKWAENGGWARI and CHING. The puk is a barrel drum that reinforces the strong beats of rhythmic patterns. The kkwaenggwari and ching are both bronze gongs: the kkwaenggwari is a small instrument with an extremely penetrating sound, played by the leader of the ensemble, and the ching is a large lipped gong, often with a rising pitch, played primarily on the main beats of a rhythmic pattern.

Other notable percussion instruments include chabara (brass cymbals) played in Buddhist dances; pak, a set of six slender slabs of wood bound loosely together at one end played by the ensemble director in court music; and ch'uk and ŏ, two single-purpose wooden instruments for court music. Ch'uk is a wooden box, played by thumping a heavy stick against its bottom for the purpose of signalling the start of a piece of music (see fig.2 above), while ŏ (fig.4) is a wooden tiger with a serrated ridge down the backbone scraped by a brush of split bamboo, which is used to signal the end of a piece. There are also many highly decorated membranophones used only in the court repertory.

(ii) String. The four most popular string instruments are the KŎMUN'GO, KAYAGŬM, HAEGŬM and AJAENG. The kŏmun'go is a six-string fretted long zither played with a pencil-shaped plectrum. The body is of paulownia and chestnut wood, and the strings were originally silk but are now usually nylon; the tall frets lie under only three of the strings, while the others are supported by individual movable bridges. The characteristic vibrato and note-bending of Korean music is achieved by pressing the melody strings laterally across the frets with the left hand. The kŏmun'go is the leader of court ensembles in which it appears and has the reputation of being a masculine instrument.

4. Ŏ (scraper) in the form of a tiger

The kayagŭm is a similarly shaped, 12-string long zither, but is plucked with the fingers of the right hand. It has no frets, but has 12 movable bridges ('wild goose feet'), so that it bears some resemblance (and probable genetic relationship) to the Chinese zheng and Japanese koto. The player modifies pitches and produces vibrato by pressing the strings behind the movable bridges with the left hand. The kayagŭm is the most popular (and reputedly the original) instrument for performing sanjo, though all the other melody instruments described here may also be used in that genre. The kŏmun'go and kayagŭm are the best documented musical instruments in historical sources.

The haegŭm and ajaeng are bowed chordophones. The haegŭm is a two-string fiddle (held vertically) with a long, slender neck piercing a bamboo soundbox. The strings are not pressed against the neck; rather, their sounding length and pitch are determined by the distance from soundbox to fingers and by the tension created by finger pressure. The horsehair bow passes between the two strings, producing a sound that in ensemble playing closely resembles a human voice. The haegŭm often appears in sinawi improvisation.

The ajaeng is a long zither similar in basic shape to the kŏmun'go and kayagŭm, and with movable bridges like the kayagŭm; in court music it has seven strings (more recently nine) and is much longer than the eight-string folk version. The bow is a slender, rosined stick of forsythia wood.

An imported trapezoidal dulcimer, yanggŭm, is found in a number of court pieces, as well as in the aristocratic suite Yŏngsan hoesang. It was brought to Korea from Beijing in the 18th century and is related to the Chinese YANGQIN. In South Korea, it is much less sophisticated than the Chinese instrument in either a technical or artistic sense, but in North Korea it is highly developed.

(iii) Wind. The chief aerophones are TAEGŬM, P'IRI and TANSO, all made of bamboo. The taegŭm is a large transverse flute with six large fingerholes and a membrane-covered hole. Partial holing and varying embouchure allow players to produce characteristic Korean melodic features of vibrato, note-bending and ornamentation, and the membrane hole imparts a variety of timbres (gentle and pure at lower pitches and volume, and penetrating at higher pitches and volume). In court ensembles, it functions as the tuning instrument.

The p'iri is a small, double-reed cylindrical pipe with eight holes, and it comes in three forms: the hyang-p'iri, a general purpose instrument of medium diameter; the se-p'iri, a more slender and gentle-sounding version used in ensembles accompanying vocal music such as kagok; and the tang-p'iri (fig.5), a thick, stubby and rough-sounding version used only in certain pieces of court music requiring a more substantial sound. The tanso is a small, notched vertical flute with five fingerholes; comparatively simple to play, it is a cheap and popular instrument that often serves as preparation for the more difficult wind instruments.

Another double-reed instrument is the conical, wooden t'aep'yŏngso (or nallari), closely related to the Chinese SUONA. Extremely penetrating and loud, it is the only melodic instrument found in farmers' music (nongak) and

5. Tang-p'iri (double-reed pipes)

also appears in the court orchestras at the Royal Ancestral Shrine.

IV. Music theory

1. Rhythmic patterns. 2. Pitch and mode. 3. Notation. 4. Form.

Although genres of Korean music are highly varied in style and instrumentation, there are some consistent features that link them together and partly distinguish them from types of music in neighbouring countries such as China and Japan. Triple rhythms, not common in either China or Japan, are very characteristic of both Korean folk and court music, and even passages considered to be duple are often bent (as in jazz) to give a swaying, dance-like, triple rhythm. Most types of Korean music (Buddhist pŏmp'ae chant being a notable exception) employ regularly recurring rhythmic patterns or cycles: long ones in the more refined genres, such as kagok and court instrumental ensemble pieces, and comparatively short ones in the cases of professional and amateur forms in the folk tradition.

Similarly, there are a restricted number of scales and melody types used across the whole range of Korean music, though the use of these in court music is rather more subtle and complex than in folk music. Korean listeners quickly fasten their attention on the rhythmic pattern and melodic mode, using them as a secure structure from which they can appreciate the variants and deviations of melody, rhythm and form that are cultivated in performance.

1. Rhythmic patterns. The Korean term for rhythmic pattern is changdan, basically meaning 'length'. Court and aristocratic music generally has repeating metrical and rhythmic structures, though typically with irregular expansions and contractions that have arisen as a result of long historical development by performing musicians. In all cases the rhythmic structure is clearly marked by percussion instruments. The succession of metre-marking rhythmic events is particularly important, even if, especially in slow tempo, the length of constituent beats (from a Western standpoint) is irregular. The slow court piece Sujech'ŏn, for example, has an underlying 18-beat metre of 6+3+3+6 beats (ex.1) emphasized by strong strokes on the changgo drum, but over the course of 20 repetitions the pattern is variously contracted to 16, 14 or even 9 beats.

Ex.1 Basic pattern for Sujech'ŏn

In the aristocratic kagok and Yŏngsan hoesang, the repetition of metrical structure is clearer and more regular than in court ensemble music. Each movement of Yŏngsan hoesang carries a single metrical structure, the opening movement 'Sangyŏngsan' having, for example, a 20-beat (6+4+4+6) pattern (ex.2) and the eighth movement

Ex.2 Rhythmic pattern for 'Sangyŏngsan'

'T'aryŏng' having a four-beat pattern (ex.3). Kagok uses

Ex.3 Rhythmic pattern for 'T'aryŏng' two main repeating structures, either 16 beats (11+5) or 10 beats (7+3), where the 10-beat pattern is clearly a contraction of the 16-beat one (ex.4*a* and b).

Ex.4 Kagok rhythmic patterns

(a)

(b)

Korean folk music, whether professionalized or not, mostly shares in a collection of rather straightforward rhythmic patterns that are well known to all performers and listeners and immediately recognized. The patterns are characterized by their length (the primary consideration, as reflected in the name changdan: 'length'), a sense of speed and character, a basic metre (which may be varied if the length remains the same) and certain recognizable and recurring events. On the main drums for accompanying folk music, the changgo and puk, open left-hand strokes have greater metrical strength than do strokes with the right-hand stick.

Four core patterns are chinyangjo, chungmori, chungjungmori and chajinmori. Chinyangjo is about 10 to 12 seconds long; it is very slow and usually in a six-beat metre, with each beat having triple subdivision (18/8). Characteristically, little happens in the drum part until the last two beats, when a reinforcing articulation at the end of the melodic phrase occurs. The moments of highest emotion in p'ansori and the saddest folksongs (such as the south-western Yukchabaegi) are set in chinyangjo (ex.5*a*).

Chungmori is about ten seconds long, of a moderate speed, and typically in a 12-beat metre with duple division of each beat (12/4). The first beat is usually strongly marked, with a sharp stick accent on the ninth beat. In performance, the 12 beats may be metrically organized as four groups of three, three groups of four and other groupings (ex.5*b*).

Chungjungmori (ex.5*c*) is about four seconds long and of a swaying, dancing speed. It is typically in 12/8, with a strong downbeat and an accent on the last quaver before the fourth beat. Metrical change is very common with chungjungmori, and performances may modulate quickly between 12/8, 6/4, 3/2, 3/4+6/8 and other possibilities. In p'ansori, this pattern is remarkably flexible, being used both for sad and jolly scenes. An important variant of chungjungmori, in which the right-hand stick is particularly active, is kutkŏri, used to good effect in sanjo and sinawi.

Chajinmori (ex.5*d*) is about two to three seconds long and in a fast tempo. Again in 12/8, it is rather like a speeded-up chungjungmori, with similar metrical modulations. An even faster version of this pattern is called hwimori. Excited passages of p'ansori are often set in this pattern.

2. Pitch and mode. Melodic modes have been described in various ways in Korea. Historical documents are usually in the Confucian tradition, ignoring folk music and describing modes only for court and aristocratic music with Chinese terminology. In this description, scales (heptatonic and pentatonic) are defined using sets of notes derived from the circle of 5ths, and those scales are applied to Korean music (e.g. in Akhak kwebŏm). It does not, however, take into account the various melody types characteristic of Korean performance.

A more modern modal description frequently used by Koreans divides the modes into two basic types, one anhemitonic pentatonic (p'yŏngjo) and one of variously five, four and three notes (kyemyŏnjo). The five- and four-note kyemyŏnjo are used to describe certain pieces of court music, and the three-note kyemyŏnjo is used for folk music. Important characteristics of the folk kyemyŏnjo are a large vibrato on the note a 4th below the tonic and a slowly descending, drooping quality in the note a step above the tonic; ex.6 shows two possible versions of p'yŏngjo and kyemyŏnjo.

There are variants of both types of modes, depending on which notes are used as cadence tones, which have the most heavy vibrato and so on, and in performance the definitions are much enriched by ornamentation, notes foreign to the mode and modulations between different modal variants. Korean musicologists distinguish a number of regional melodic styles and modes, in particular for the music of the capital area, the north-west, the east coast, the south-west, and the island of Cheju to the south of the peninsula.

Like rhythmic patterns, melodic modes have associations of certain expressive qualities, so the kyemyŏnjo, for example, is used for sad songs such as the south-western Yukchabaegi. In a genre such as the narrative p'ansori, there is a complex interaction between the dramatic and emotional qualities of melodic modes and rhythmic patterns, together with types of ornamentation.

3. Notation. Korea's most important contribution to musical notation in East Asia is a precise rhythmic notation called chŏngganbo, which was invented in the 15th century and continues in a highly developed form. Chŏngganbo consists of a lattice of lines read downwards and from right to left, groups of columns being separated by wider lines. Each column contains information for a voice, instrument or category of instrument, and each box in a column represents a unit of time; several columns taken together provide a kind of score for ensembles (fig.6). The columns starting from the right show a melodic line (notation discussed below), named strokes for the changgo drum, the occurrences of the director's pak clapper and the singer's text. The modern version of the chŏngganbo notation allows for subdivision of a box for smaller rhythmic values and a great many additional symbols for dynamics, ornaments and other details.

In the case of percussion instruments, the name of the stroke (for the changgo) or simply the name (or drawing) of the instrument is inserted at the appropriate point. In fig.6, every second column in each group of four has the same rhythmic pattern recurring.

There are a number of pitch notations used in conjunction with the chŏngganbo rhythmic notation. A Chinese pitch-name system, yulchabo (Chinese lulu), simply names the pitch and can be inserted in the appropriate time slot. A Korean system of modal notation, oŭmyakpo ('pentatonic simplified notation'), involves naming the tonic pitch (kung) and indicating how many scale degrees above or below that tonic the other notes are; it is necessary to know which melodic mode is in use in order to work out the actual pitch. In fig.6, which is in p'yŏngjo, the pitches in the first column are the tonic (which might be taken as A♭ for illustration), two steps above the tonic (D♭), one step above the tonic (B♭), two steps above and one step above in one box (D♭–B♭), and back to the tonic (A♭) twice.

A notation system used frequently in historical notation books from the late 16th century onwards is the tablature system called hapchabo for the six-string kŏmun'go. This notation, apparently based in part on Chinese qin tablature, indicates which string to use, which left-hand finger to stop the string at which fret, which plucking technique to use with the right hand, and other details (fig.8). The tablature books document changes in pieces and their performing style through the centuries and are therefore particularly helpful to historical musicologists.

6. 'Sŏgyŏng pyŏlgok' ('Song of the Western Capital'), from 'Siyong hyangakpo' (c1500) in chŏngganbo rhythmic notation

In the column to the left of each group of three in fig.8, a mnemonic notation system called yukpo is also shown. These syllables, written in the native Korean alphabet (invented in the 15th century), imitate the sounds of the instrument and are more useful as a memory aid than for illustrating precise pitch and rhythm. Modern derivatives of the yukpo system, with differing syllables for each type of instrument, are still in common use in instrumental teaching and for communication between musicians when their instruments are not at hand.

A last type of notation to mention is yŏnŭmp'yo, a partly neumatic notation system consisting essentially of articulation marks written adjacent to columns of poetic text, allowing the experienced singer to correlate the particular text with the inflections of the memorized kagok tune to which the text is to be sung. This notation is found only in singers' text collections such as the Kagok wŏllyu ('Original Source of kagok') of the late 19th century (fig.9).

4. Form. Koreans identify a number of interrelated aspects of form as being characteristic of their traditional music, dividing them into structural forms and performative forms. One type of structural form is the varied repetition found in some court music (such as the tangak pieces Nagyanch'un and Pohŏja) and aristocratic music (some movements of Yŏngsan hoesang); it may be described as, for example, AB+CB, where B is the same, but where C is either a variant of A or entirely different (this is termed 'varied head with identical continuation').

Another type of structural form arises from increasing ornamental detail within a given melody, either retaining the original melodic length or making it longer. In the case of the vocal aristocratic music sijo, poems with larger numbers of syllables are sung to a variant of a basic tune in a more decorated style but retain the same overall length. Similar forms arise in folk music as well, where the greater decoration results in greater length.

A third type of structural form is the joining of slow and fast versions of a single piece, such as the southwestern folksongs Yukchabaegi and Chajin Yukchabaegi ('fast Yukchabaegi'). An extension of this form of increasingly fast movements may also be found in the aristocratic chamber music suite Yŏngsan hoesang and in the virtuoso sanjo.

7. Modern chŏngganbo notation, showing the opening of the haegŭm (fiddle) part of the court piece 'Sujech'ŏn'

Performative aspects of form include the joining of phrases of melody in court music, where a small group of instruments extend the end of one phrase until the remaining instruments join in for the next phrase. This form is particularly noted in the court piece Sujech'ŏn. Another performative aspect of form, common in folk music, is call and response.

V. Modern developments

The dominant musical culture of modern Korea, both north and south, is Western; indigenous traditional music is a minority interest. No doubt this situation results largely from the outward-looking attitude engendered by industrialization and modernization in the 20th century. Yet since the division of the Korean peninsula into two halves ollowing the defeat of Japan in 1945, musical traditions have also developed in different ways, with political dogma determining artistic policy in North Korea.

1. South Korea.

(i) Traditional music. In the 1960s there was fear that traditional music would disappear entirely from the active musical scene in South Korea, but during the 1980s and 90s there was an encouraging trend to reverse the situation, though with an inevitable change of context. University students in particular took up traditional music as a cause, and many students have studied traditional instruments (especially kayagŭm and farmers' percussion music instruments), buying commercial recordings and supporting concert performances by professional

8. (a) Two consecutive lines (vertical) of hapchabo notation for kŏmun'go, from 'Yanggŭm sinbo' ('Yang's new kŏmun'go scores'), 1610: column 1 in each line contains the singer's text, column 2 the hapchabo symbols, and column 3 the yukpo mnemonic syllables; (b) breakdown of one hapchabo symbol musicians. The government of South Korea has offered support by encouraging interest in traditional culture in general, by naming and paying certain musicians as 'national treasures' to keep their arts alive, and by sending cultural troupes on foreign tours.

As mentioned earlier, music in Korea was traditionally linked to occasion, and nearly all those occasions have disappeared in modern times. Governments are no longer royal, and with very few exceptions court ceremonies and banquets are no longer carried out except as special events and tourist attractions. In Seoul the music for such occasions is preserved, mainly for concert purposes, by the government-supported National Center for Korean Traditional Performing Arts (formerly called the National Classical Music Institute), which takes much of its instrumental and musical heritage from the Royal Music Institute (Changagwŏn) of the Chosŏn dynasty.

The predecessor of the National Center suffered during the Japanese occupation of the first half of the 20th century and subsequently under successive South Korean governments, surviving only because of the extreme dedication of its musicians. With national economic success and revival of interest in national heritage, support for the National Center grew, and in the 1980s it moved to a large set of purpose-built buildings south of the main part of the capital Seoul, where its activities include supporting frequent concerts, teaching students, housing a museum and carrying out valuable research and publication. While its predecessors were primarily concerned with court and aristocratic music, the present National Center preserves and teaches all types of traditional music as well as fostering new composition using national instruments and musical concepts.

At the folk level, the mechanization of agricultural tasks has meant the disappearance of the community work groups that traditionally provided the performers for much farmers' music and folksong, so that such music has become largely the extra-curricular activity of school children and the property of festivals and contests. The increasing dominance of Christianity has led to the comparative rarity of shamanistic occasions for the performance of music and the stagnation of development in Buddhist musical forms: folk music has become almost entirely a secular affair. The powerful and rich in Korea are typically the staunchest adherents to Western religion and culture, and until the late 20th century their influence has rarely been to support the cultural heritage that they themselves have largely abandoned.

9. A page from 'Kagok wŏllyu', showing yŏnŭmp'yo neumatic notation alongside columns of text; the beginning of each poetic text is indicated by a circle at the top of the column; the three texts on the left of the page are sung to the kagok tune 'Kyerak'

The present revival of interest in traditional music comes with an upsurge of interest in national traditions in general, but the music is unavoidably repackaged. Performances on recordings, television, radio and stage require exact (and often short) timings foreign to the less rigid performing circumstances of the past; international tours perform music to suit foreign audiences, and the presence of the media, modern competitiveness and heightened audience expectation have led to a professionalization of much that was formerly rural music. Regional traits, originally retained in the isolated pockets of society in royal Korea, are disappearing in the tide of national media and communication systems.

The more highly developed forms of music were traditionally taught by rote over a long period of time, a method that fostered many individual, personal variants of musical style and technique. The usual modern practice is to use notation (often Western rather than Korean) and teach a large quantity of music as set pieces, without the encouragement to develop individual styles. As a result, much of the traditional flexibility and spontaneous quality of the past is being replaced by precision of reproduction, brilliance of execution and largeness of repertory. Encouraging signs of a return to more traditional, creative methods of rote teaching, however, were evident at the end of the 20th century.

(ii) Western-style art music. In modern South Korea there is a thriving industry in Western art music, with a number of major orchestras and concert halls. In Seoul, there is the Seoul Philharmonic Orchestra (begun 1957), the KBS (Korean Broadcasting System) Symphony Orchestra (1956), the Korean Symphony Orchestra (1987), while a number of regional orchestras have also been formed in Pusan, Taegu, Inch'ŏn and other cities. Concerts are frequently given by international touring artists, and record shops are filled with the latest classical CDs. Korean performers such as the violinist Kyung-Wha Chung (Chŏng Kyŏnghwa in standard romanization) and the conductor Myung-Whun Chung (Chŏng Myŏnghun) have established impressive international careers.

Composition is taught at a number of universities to many hundreds of students, the leading institution being the College of Music at Seoul National University, where the chief composition teacher is Kang Sŏkhŭi. The most famous ethnic Korean composer in the 20th century was ISANG YUN (1917–95), who spent much of his professional career in Germany. Yun's compositions often bear Korean names, and he claimed they contained deeply Korean significance, but their instrumentation and structure are essentially Western.

In addition to this contemporary and often avant-garde Western-style art music, a widely performed and enjoyed type of lyric song, confusingly called kagok like the traditional aristocratic genre, has occupied many composers since about 1920. The first work in this genre is thought to be Pongsŏnhwa ('Balsam Flower') by Hong Nanp'a (1900–40), and many hundreds of such songs have been written since then, becoming a staple of radio and television. The style of this lyric kagok is entirely Western, employing orchestra and a purely diatonic, conservative harmony, combined with Korean words; many Koreans feel, however, that kagok expresses deeply Korean sentiments and that this is a very Korean form of music.

(iii) Popular music. In Korea, 'popular music' refers to music that is neither Western classical music or Korean traditional music. Korean popular music can be divided into two categories: 'easy-listening' instrumental music and popular song. The former, known as kyŏng ŭmak ('light music'), was introduced to Korea by a Western-style military band established around 1901, and it is now mostly played by Western-style bands or orchestras to provide background music for films, television programmes or musical theatre, in original or arranged compositions.

When Koreans speak of popular music, however, they usually mean popular song (yuhaengga or taejung kayo). Originating at the turn of the 20th century from ch'angga (Korean versions of Western songs), the term yuhaengga ('song in fashion') did not appear until 1926, when a ch'angga called Saŭi ch'anmi ('Adoration of Death'), Ivanovich's 'Blue Danube' with Korean words sung by Yun Simdŏk, became an unprecedented hit. A recording industry soon emerged because of the profit potential of the Korean song market, and in 1931 Ch'ae Kyuyŏp made his début as the first full-time professional popular singer.

Despite a few efforts to create sin minyo ('new folksong') based on Korean traditional folksong style, most Korean popular songs during the Japanese occupation (1910–45) were heavily influenced by enka, a genre of Japanese popular song. Using the pentatonic scales and duple metre characteristic of enka, these Korean popular songs came accidentally to be known as t'ŭrot'ŭ, a word derived from 'fox trot'.

The period after independence in 1945 and during the Korean War (1950–53) was devastating for recording facilities. Korean popular musicians were forced to rely on live performances in akkŭktan (musical theatres) or dance halls. Most star singers (such as Kim Chŏnggu, Hyŏn In and Paek Sŏrhŭi) continued to sing t'ŭrot'ŭ songs, which by this time were also called ppongtchak (an onomatopoeic word reflecting the duple metre), but a few marchlike war songs with patriotic content, called chinjung kayo, ('war pop song') also gained brief popularity. With the frequent appearance of the term taejung ('mass public') in print media, the term taejung kayo ('mass song') started to be used along with yuhaengga to refer to popular songs.

Following the cease-fire agreement between the North and the South at the end of the war, the popular music of the stringently isolationist North Korea has been virtually unknown outside its borders (see §2 below). In South Korea, the recording industry was revived, and commercial broadcasting companies were established after the war. A new type of song, influenced by contemporary American popular song, was introduced to the South Korean public by various Korean singers who had once provided musical entertainment for the American soldiers stationed in Korea (e.g. Ch'oe Hŭijun, Han Myŏngsuk and Patti Kim (Korean name Kim Hyeja)). Despite the continuing presence of t'ŭrot'ŭ sung by Yi Mija, Nam Chin and Na Huna, especially after the normalization of diplomatic relations between South Korea and Japan in 1965, the impact of American popular music on South Korea has continued to grow.

T'ong-guitar (a boxlike guitar) music, the Korean imitation of the 1960s American folksong movement, was a symbol of South Korean youth culture in the early 1970s, along with blue jeans. While t'ŭrot'ŭ singers had orchestral accompaniment, t'ong-guitar singers (such as Song Ch'angsik, Yong Hŭiŭn and Kim Min'gi) mainly relied on the acoustic guitar, which served as a symbol of their identity. Meanwhile, American-style rock bands, known in South Korea by the English term 'group sound', introduced electronic instruments and synthesizers. With the t'ong-guitar music and the 'group sound', the major age group of popular music consumers shifted from adult to youth. By the mid-1970s, however, the t'ong-guitar movement had lost its momentum, owing to the government prosecution of many t'ong-guitar singers for smoking marijuana; rock-style t'ŭrot'ŭ by singers such as Cho Yongp'il filled the void.

The 1980s were marked by diverse trends: the revival of t'ŭrot'ŭ (led by Chu Hyŏnmi), which confirmed the strong undercurrent of Japanese legacy in Korean musical aesthetics; the introduction of heavy-metal rock bands and dance music; and the establishment of sentimental ballads as a major popular musical genre that had its origin in the early 1970s t'ong-guitar music. Also, to counter mainstream popular songs, the formation of Norae undong ('Song Movement'), led by the group Noraerŭl ch'annŭn saramdŭl ('People Seeking Songs'), was supported by college students, young intellectuals and working-class people.

The sentimental balled genre continued to account for the major portion of record sales in the 1990s. With the decline of t'ŭrot'ŭ and the dominance of reggae and Korean rap with strong and fast dance rhythms in television programmes, however, teenagers became the major popular music consumers, supporting teen idols such as Sŏ T'aeji wa Aidŭl ('Taiji Boys'), Lulla and Kim Kŏnmo; adult consumers, alienated by the mass media, sought noraebang (song booths for private karaoke) to satisfy their musical needs.

(iv) Hybrid forms. The traditional musician Kim Kisu (1917–86), who trained as a singer and kŏmun'go player, advocated the development of new music using Korean musical instruments and concepts. For some years near the end of his career, he was director of the National Center for Korean Traditional Performing Arts and spearheaded developments of the traditional rhythmic notation system, chŏngganbo, and publication of new compositions. He also published many transcriptions of Korean traditional music in Western staff notation.

Following Kim, a number of composers who employ traditional Korean materials have come to prominence. Hwang Byungki (Hwang Pyŏnggi, b 1936) trained as a lawyer but became professor of music at Ewha Women's University in Seoul and has written a substantial number of pieces for the kayagŭm, both in traditional styles and using avant-garde ideas. One of his most popular pieces, for kayagŭm and changgo, is Ch'imhyangmu, written for a film about excavations of Silla tombs; it frequently appears in recital programmes. Hwang is himself a noted kayagŭm player, and in 1998 he published a much expanded and revised sanjo score based on the school of a famous player, Chŏng Namhŭi, who went to North Korea after the 1945 partition.

Other composers widely performed in South Korea include Yi Sŏngch'ŏn (b 1936), professor of music at Seoul National University, and Yi Sanggyu (b 1944). Both these composers use traditional materials in a wide variety of ways, employing harmonic structures and modified instruments, writing operas based on traditional stories and so on.

2. North Korea. Kim Il Sung, the head of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (North Korea) from 1948 until his death in 1994, and his son Kim Jong Il, groomed as his successor since the 1970s and leader since 1994, are routinely given credit for guiding artists. The most significant early policy statement concerning music is contained in Kim Il Sung's early talks with artists and writers, notably 'On Some Questions Arising in our Literature and Art', dated June 1951. Written at a time when Kim Tubong, an established literacy critic who led the Korean communist faction in China during the early 1940s, had some influence, these echo Mao Zedong's 1942 Yan'an speeches and reflect Soviet socialist realism. Kim noted that artists were 'engineers of the human soul', whose works should serve the people as a 'powerful weapon and great inspiration'. At the same time artists were criticized for having 'lost touch with life' and for lagging 'behind our rapidly advancing reality'.

The Tadong Chohap was a famed Pyongyang association of kisaeng (entertainment girls); signalling its training function, it was re-named the Chosŏn kwŏnbŏn. A number of prominent musicians, including Ha Kyuil (1867–1937) and Ch'oe Chŏngsik (1886–1951), taught there, and students included the prominent post-division South Korean singers Muk Kyewŏl (b 1921) and An Pich'wi (b 1926). It is known that several singers of folksongs in the Kyŏnggi and Sŏdo styles (see below) performed regularly in Pyongyang. The city was a centre of Protestant mission activities, and it is reasonable to suppose that American revival hymns would have been familiar to many. The Japanese colonial regime also promoted Western-style military bands and songs – ch'angga (the Korean pronunciation of Japanese shōka), tongyo children's songs and kagok lyric songs – and from the late 1920s, Japanese record companies based in Seoul issued recordings of yuhaengga (popular songs, the Korean pronunciation of Japanese enka).

Pyongyang's musical establishment grew rapidly after the political division of the peninsula. Left-leaning musicians crossed to North Korea as the southern state moved to ban socialist activity, initially under the American military trusteeship and then, more urgently, from 1948, as the Republic of Korea (South Korea) was proclaimed. Among the migrants who specialized in Korean traditional music were Kong Kinam, An Kiok, Pak Tongsil, Im Sohyang, Chŏng Namhŭi, Cho Sangsŏn and Ch'oe Oksŏn. Western musicians included the composers Kim Sunnam, An Kiyŏng, Ri Kŏnu, Yun Naksun, Pak Ŭnyong and Chŏn Chonggil, the critics Pak Yŏnggŭn and Chŏn Hakchu, and several dozen well-known singers, pianists and instrumentalists. The composer Kim Sunnam (1917–86) reflected socialist ideals in both his compositions and musical activities. Similarly, Ri Kŏnu wrote revolutionary songs such as Haebang chŏnsa ŭi norae ('Song of the Independence Fighters'), Kanŭn kil ('The Way to Go') and Yŏmyŏng ŭi norae ('New Era Song'). An Kiyŏng, reflecting emerging nationalism, published important folksong notations in his 'Chosŏn minyo wa akpohwa' in the journal Tonggwang (May 1931) and wrote many songs, including a further Haebang chŏnsa ŭi norae published in November 1945.

Creating a musical undercurrent that has continued to the present day, songs that perpetuated Japanese models were composed for a while, now labelled with a Korean term as taejung kayo ('popular songs'), rather than yuhaengga. But the socialist revolution, at least at the public level, required a new type of proletarian artist, and as the regime moved to silence dissent many musicians were purged, along with other artists. Political dogma demanded a new type of music, and this was provided by revolutionary songs using the Chinese geming guqu model. The composer Kim Wŏn'gyun (b 1917) was representative of the new type of artist. In 1946, when still a farmer, he wrote Kim Ilsŏng changgŭn ŭi norae ('Song of General Kim Il Sung'), followed in 1947 by the Aegukka (national anthem). These two remain the most frequently heard of all North Korean songs and are given prime position in collections; to inspire walkers, the words of 'Song of General Kim Il Sung' are even chiselled into the rocks of Myohyang mountain.

Song production remains central to North Korean music, as demonstrated by the prodigious output of composers such as Ri Myŏnsang and Kim Oksŏng (both have now died), the 536 songs dating from 1949–80 published in Chosŏn ŭmak chŏnjip (1987), and the collection of 2,000 songs published in 1994 as Chosŏn kayo 2,000 kokchip. The appropriateness of songs is judged in terms of lyrics more than music. Kim Jong Il, in his 1975 'For the Further Development of our Juche Art' speech, wrote that '. . .we should inspire the people to the revolutionary struggle by means of songs'. He criticized composers for not paying sufficient attention to lyrics: 'Before good songs can be produced prettily-worded texts are necessary. The words should be poetic. But [since] many are turned into prose. . .no good songs can be produced'.

Music and dance are compulsory school subjects, and gifted students receive supplementary training in 'children's palaces' (haksaeng sonyŏn kungjŏng). Palaces now operate in each province, and since 1989 Pyongyang has boasted two: a new facility near Kim Il Sung's birthplace at Man'gyŏngdae supplementing an older, central institution. A music academy, the Pyongyang Music and Dance College, was founded in March 1949, offering specialist education from primary to tertiary level. In 1992, 1500 students were enrolled in its five departments (vocal, instrumental, composition, education, Korean music), and 50 more worked in a research division. Other specialist institutes, controlled by the Munhwa yesulbu (Ministry of Culture and Arts), include the Minjok akki kaeryang saŏpkwa (Committee for the Improvement of People's Instruments) and the Minjok ŭmak yŏn'gusil (People's Music Study Institute). The P'yŏngyang muyong p'yogibŏp yŏn'gushil (Pyongyang Dance Notation Study Institute) has promoted a new dance notation based partly on the Korean alphabet. The Yun Isang ŭmak yŏn'gushil (Isang Yun Music Research Institute), closely associated with the composer ISANG YUN (1917–95), was charged with developing composition techniques and promoting knowledge of the European avant garde but was temporarily closed shortly after Kim Il Sung's death.

State performance troupes function in each province and in the cities of Kaesŏng, Pyongyang, Namp'o and Ch'ŏngjin. In recent years these have worked primarily as propaganda squads, mobilized, according to the party newspaper, to encourage 'workers to greater successes through artistic agitation'. There are also three state orchestras (the Chosŏn inmin'gun hyŏpchudan, the Kungnip kyohyang aktan and the Sahoe anjŏnbu hyŏpchudan) and an opera troupe, the P'i pada kagŭktan (Sea of Blood Opera Company). Musicians themselves are, in an echo of the Soviet system, appointed as in'min yesulga ('people's artists') and konghun yesulga ('merit artists'). Appointments follow either a presidential nomination or the award of a gold medal by the Kukka misul chakp'um simŭi wiwŏnhoe (National Arts Council) or other equivalent bodies. Musicians who have been recognized in this way include Kim Wŏn'gyun, Kim Yŏn'gyu, Kang Kich'ang, Kim Rinok, Kim Kilhak, Ri Chŏngŏn and Kim Yunbong.

The state policies for art have not remained static but have evolved and developed with political changes. After the Korean war, the Sino-Soviet tensions that followed the death of Stalin led North Korean policy makers to distance themselves from the Soviets. This led to a major change in artistic policy as part of the Ch'ŏllima undong ('Galloping horse movement'). Launched in 1957, the movement was the first of many 'speed battles' that essentially tried to enhance indigenous production. In art, it strengthened central control and promoted Kim Il Sung as sole arbiter through the doctrine of yuil sasang ('ideology of one'). Kim was claimed to be in total harmony with the wishes of the people, but the people alone still owned production, hence vestiges of the élite culture of the past were abandoned, because, according to a 1960 speech by Kim, the people 'could write better works than professional [musicians] confined to their offices'.

The concept of mass culture meant that only the vernacular was to be researched and studied, particularly when policy makers declared that 'nihilism' was unacceptable, so that Korean heritage had to form the basis of contemporary production. Folksong collections based on fieldwork began to appear, published in two distinct periods, first in the late 1950s and then in the mid-1960s. In both periods, to avoid what was termed 'resurrectionism', texts were modified to reflect the socialist agenda, and melodies were updated and homogenized to fit diatonic modes. Arrangements offered piano accompaniments. Effectively, the characteristic folksong style of the region around Pyongyang, Sŏdo, and the more professional style associated with southern folksongs, namdo minyo (and the related genre of p'ansori), were abandoned in favour of Kyŏnggi-style melodies from the region around Seoul and folksongs of more recent vintage. Other traditional performing arts were also promoted, but always in a manner appropriate to socialism. The masked dance-drama pongsan t'al ch'um from near Pyongyang, for example, abandoned ritual and play in its revised form to shift the emphasis to the oppression of the proletariat, the central role of an itinerant Buddhist monk being further satirized to expose the 'hypocritical and foul life of monks'.

By the mid-1960s, the doctrines of the Galloping Horse Movement had led to attempts to modify Korean traditional instruments by the Committee for the Improvement of People's Instruments. Two basic tenets were behind the 'improvements' applied to what were now defined as ko akki ('old instruments'). First, any links to the court or the élite of the past were to be removed; hence the AJAENG (8-string bowed long zither) and KŎMUN'GO (6-string plucked long zither) were abandoned. Second, instruments that traditionally had restricted pitch ability and were fashioned as much after aesthetic concerns as with ease of playing in mind were to be 'improved' to enable them to compete with Western orchestral instruments. The results, in the case of wind instruments, were the chang saenap (shawm), so p'iri, tae p'iri and chŏ p'iri (oboes), and the TANSO and chŏttae (flutes). Simple system metal keywork was added to each, and hardwood or metal bodies replaced bamboo. Among zithers, the KAYAGŬM (traditionally, a 12-string plucked long zither) gained nine additional strings made from nylon or metal rather than the silk of old, as well as more user-friendly tuning pegs. The HAEGŬM (traditionally, a two-string fiddle), was redesigned as a four-string instrument in four distinct sizes, from the smallest (so haegŭm), through medium-sized versions (chung haegŭm, tae haegŭm), to a bass instrument (chŏ haegŭm). Each was tuned to match a corresponding Western string instrument. The yanggŭm dulcimer was modified to resemble East European equivalents in both structure and playing techniques, and a new string instrument appeared, the ongnyugŭm. This last instrument, named after a site in Pyongyang, was, it is said, designed after Kim Jong Il asked the Committee why none of the harps from Korea's past were still played. Mounted on trestles, the ongnyugŭm retains the trapezoid shape of the yanggŭm but adds bridges from the kayagŭm and a system of rotating tuning triskeles operated by foot pedals not dissimilar to those on the western orchestral harp.

During the 1970s a new ideology took hold. Often glossed as 'self reliance', this was juche. Juche subsumed individual creativity under group responsibility within a collectivized art. Kim Il Sung was still sole arbiter, but artists were now required to reflect state policy through a 'seed theory' (chŏngjaron) in which ideology was always to provide the kernel for composition. In keeping with this, themes were rationed. Revolutionary songs and folksongs became the models for instrumental and orchestral composition, which, as taejung ŭmak ('popular music'), still reflected proletarian culture. Songs were coupled to patriotic or heroic stories – stories labelled as 'immortal' or 'revolutionary' – to create a new style of opera, known after the title of the first production, in 1971, as the P'i pada ('sea of blood') genre. Each opera was written by a collective of musicians based at the P'i pada kagŭktan (Sea of Blood Opera Company). Operas, in turn, were used as the basis for symphonic works, the most renowned being a symphony based on P'i pada. Subsequent operas included Kkŏt panŭn ch'ŏnyŏ ('The Flower Girl'), Ch'unhaengjŏn ('Story of Spring Fragrance'), Tang ŭi ch'amdwin ttal ('A True Daughter of the Party), Kŭmgangsan ŭi sori ('Song of the Diamond Mountains'), Yŏnp'ungho ('Gentle Breeze'), and Millima iyagi hara ('Tell the Story, Forest'). Operas mix the indigenous with imported elements, for example traditional Korean and Soviet dance, and Western orchestras augmented by ensembles of 'improved' Korean instruments. Operas dispense with arias, replacing them with company choruses known as pangch'ang, a sub-genre for which Kim Jong Il is credited as inventor. Pangch'ang allow the action to continue, perhaps the heroine to die or a battle to be fought, while the singing company interprets to the audience what is happening on stage. Some pangch'ang have become concert items in their own right, an example being Haemada pomi omyŏn ('Spring Comes Every Year') from Kkot p'anŭn ch'ŏnyŏ.

By the late 1980s, synthesizers and electric guitars began to appear as North Korea tentatively embraced pop music, labelling it kyŏng ŭmak ('light music'). Developments were allied to the widespread availability of cassettes, produced in the capital city by state companies such as Mansudae, Meari, Mokran, Naenara and Pyongyang. Three troupes provided the main artists for recordings. Reflecting their revolutionary credentials, three were named after sites where Kim Il Sung allegedly fought against Japanese colonialism in the 1930s: Mansudae yesultan (Mansudae Art Troupe), Wangjaesan kyŏng ŭmaktan (Wangjaesan Light Music Band), and Poch'ŏnbo kyŏng ŭmaktan (Pochonbo Electronic Orchestra). A fourth troupe, the Yonghwa mit pangsong ŭmaktan (Film and Media Music Troupe), was responsible for recording filmscores by Ri Chŏngŏn, Sŏng Tongch'un, Chŏn Ch'angil, Ko Suyŏng, Kim Yŏngsŏn and others. Although each troupe is large, and the line-up for different tracks varies, some individual singers remain celebrated. From 1993 onwards, in keeping with the trend throughout East Asia, the same troupes were used in the production of karaoke videos of popular songs and folksongs.

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

A General. B Historical studies and sources. C Scores and transcriptions. D Periodicals. E Popular and Western music. F North Korea.

A: GENERAL

GroveI

M. Courant: 'La musique coréene', Essai historique sur la musique classique des Chinois (Paris, 1912), 211–20

A. Eckardt: Koreanische Musik (Tokyo, 1930)

Ch. S. Keh [Kye Chŏngsik]: Die Koreanische Musik (Strasbourg, 1935/R)

Lee Hye-Ku [Yi Hyegu]: Han'guk ŭmak yŏn'gu [Studies in Korean music] (Seoul, 1957/R)

Chang Sahun: Kugak kaeyo [Outline of Korean music] (Seoul, 1961)

Im Tonggwŏn: Han'guk minyo chip [Collection of Korean folksongs] (Seoul, 1961–92)

Chang Sahun: Kugak non'go [Studies of Korean music] (Seoul, 1966)

W. Kaufmann: Musical Notations of the Orient (Bloomington, IN, 1967)

Lee Hye-Ku: Han'guk ŭmak sŏsŏl [Topics in Korean Music] (Seoul, 1967)

A. Eckardt: Musik, Lied, Tanz in Korea (Bonn, 1968)

Chang Sahun: Han'guk akki taegwan [Korean musical instruments] (Seoul, 1969)

Song Bang-song: An Annotated Bibliography of Korean Music (Providence, RI, 1971)

Chang Sahun: Sijo ŭmak-non [A study of sijo music] (Seoul, 1973)

Survey of Korean Arts: Traditional Music [pubn of the Korean National Academy of Arts] (Seoul, 1973)

Song Bang-song: 'Supplement to An Annotated Bibliography of Korean Music', Korea Journal, xiv/12 (1974), 59–72; xv/1 (1975), 59–72; xv/2 (1975), 58–68; xv/3 (1975), 64–70; xv/4 (1975), 69–76

Survey of Korean Arts: Folk Arts [pubn of the Korean National Academy of Arts] (Seoul, 1974)

Chang Sahun: Han'guk chŏnt'ong ŭmak ŭi yŏn'gu [Studies in Korean traditional music] (Seoul, 1975)

R.C. Provine: 'The Sacrifice to Confucius in Korea and its Music', Transactions of the Korea Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, l (1975), 43–69

Chang Sahun: Kugak ch'ongnon [Introduction to Korean music] (Seoul, 1976)

Lee Hye-Ku: Han'guk ŭmak nonch'ong [Essays on Korean music] (Seoul, 1976)

Song Bang-song: 'A Discography of Korean Music', AsM, viii/2 (1977), 82–121

Pak Hŭngsu: Toryanghyŏng kwa kugak nonch'ong [Essays on measurements and Korean music] (Seoul, 1980)

Song Bang-song [Song Pangsong]: Han'guk ŭmakhak nonjŏ haeje [Annotated bibliography of scholarship on Korean music] (Sŏngnam, 1981)
Lee Hye-Ku [Yi Hyegu]: Essays on Traditional Korean Music (Seoul, 1981)
Chang Sahun: Kugak taesajŏn [Dictionary of Korean music] (Seoul, 1984)
W. Burde, ed.: Korea: Einführung in die Musiktradition Koreas (Mainz, 1985)
Lee Hye-Ku: Han'guk ŭmak nonch'ong [Collection of essays on Korean music] (Seoul, 1985)
Han'guk ŭmak sajŏn [Dictionary of Korean music] [pubn of the Korean National Academy of Arts] (Seoul, 1985)
Song Bang-song: The Sanjo Tradition of Korean Kŏmun'go Music (Seoul, 1986)
Byong Won Lee [Yi Pyŏngwŏn]: Buddhist Music of Korea (Seoul, 1987)
K. Howard: Korean Musical Instruments: a Practical Guide (Seoul, 1988)
K. Howard: Bands, Songs, and Shamanistic Rituals: Folk Music in Korean Society (Seoul, 1989, 2/1990)
Song Bang-song [Song Pangsong]: Han'guk ŭmakhak sŏsŏl [Topics in Korean musicology] (Seoul, 1989)
Kim Duk Soo [Kim Tŏksu] and others: Samullori 1–3 (Seoul, 1990–96)
Hahn Man-young [Han Manyŏng]: Kugak: Studies in Korean Traditional Music (Seoul, 1991)
K. Howard: 'Where did the Old Music Go?', Minjok ŭrakhak, xv (1993), 122–51
R.C. Provine: 'Korea', Ethnomusicology: Historical and Regional Studies, ed. H. Myers (London, 1993), 363–76
The Traditional Music and Dance of Korea [pubn of the National Center for Korean Traditional Performing Arts] (Seoul, 1993)
M.R. Pihl: The Korean Singer of Tales (Cambridge, MA, 1994)
B. Walraven: Songs of the Shaman (London, 1994)
K. Howard: Korean Musical Instruments (Hong Kong, 1995)
K. Howard: 'A Compact Discography of Korean Traditional Music', Korea Journal, xxxvi/3 (1996), 115–32; xxxvi/4 (1996), 120–40
K. Howard, J. Bühler and Chu Kyŏng-sun: 'Korea', Die Musik in Geschichte und Gegenwart, v (Kassel, 1996), 733–56
Yang Hyesuk, ed.: Korean Performing Arts: Drama, Dance and Music Theater (Seoul, 1997)
Kim Sŏnghye, comp.: Han'guk ŭmak kwallyŏn hagwi nonmun ch'ongmok 1945–1995 [Complete list of theses on Korean music, 1945–1995] (Seoul, 1998)
Ŭmakhak nonch'ong [Essays in musicology: an offering in celebration of Lee Hye-Ku on his ninetieth birthday] (Seoul, 1998)

B: HISTORICAL STUDIES AND SOURCES

Sŏng Hyŏn, ed.: Akhak kwebŏm [Guide to the study of music] (Seoul, 1493/R)
Chosŏn wangjo sillok [Annals of the Chosŏn dynasty] (Seoul, 1955–8)
Chang Sahun: Yŏmyŏng ŭi tongsŏ ŭmak [Eastern and Western music in the early 20th century] (Seoul, 1974)
Chang Sahun: Han'guk ŭmaksa [History of Korean music] (Seoul, 1976/R)
K.L. Pratt: 'Music as a Factor in Sung-Koryŏ Diplomatic Relations, 1069–1126', T'oung pao, lxii/4–5 (1976), 199–218
J. Condit: 'A Fifteenth-Century Korean Score in Mensural Notation', Musica asiatica, ii (1979), 1–87
Han'guk ŭmakhak charyo ch'ongsŏ [Collection of sources for the study of Korean music] (Seoul, 1979–) [collection of facsimiles of historical documents]
Lee Hye-Ku [Yi Hyegu]: Kugyŏk Akhak kwebŏm [Modern Korean translation of the Guide to the Study of Music] (Seoul, 1979–80)
Song Bang-song: Source Readings in Korean Music (Seoul, 1980)
J. Condit: 'Two Song-dynasty Chinese Tunes Preserved in Korea', Music and Tradition: Essays Presented to Laurence Picken, ed. D.R. Widdess and R.F. Wolpert (Cambridge, 1981), 1–39
Song Bang-song [Song Pangsong]: Han'guk ŭmaksa yŏn'gu [Studies in Korean music history] (Kyŏngsan, 1982)
J. Condit: 'Korean Scores in the Modified Fifteenth-Century Mensural Notation', Musica asiatica, iv (1984), 1–116
Song Bang-song: Han'guk ŭmak t'ongsa [Complete history of Korean music] (Seoul, 1984)
Song Bang-song: Han'guk kodae ŭmaksa yŏn'gu [Studies in Korean ancient music history] (Seoul, 1985)
Lee Hye-Ku: Chŏngganbo ŭi chŏnggan taegang mit changdan [A study of Korean rhythmic notation] (Seoul, 1987)
K.L. Pratt: Korean Music: its History and its Performance (Seoul and London, 1987)
Mun Sŏngnyŏp and Ri Ch'ayun: Chosŏn ŭmaksa [History of Korean music] (Pyongyang, 1988–90)
R.C. Provine: Essays on Sino-Korean Musicology: Early Sources for Korean Ritual Music (Seoul, 1988)
Song Bang-song: Koryŏ ŭmaksa yŏn'gu [Studies in Koryŏ music history] (Seoul, 1988)
R.C. Provine: 'State Sacrificial Rites and Ritual Music in Early Chosŏn', Kugagwŏn nonmunjip [Journal of the National Center for Korean Traditional Performing Arts], i (1989), 239–307
Lee Hye-Ku: Han'guk ŭmak non'go [Korea's music: theory and history] (Seoul, 1995)
Song Bang-song: Han'guk ŭmaksa non'go [Essays on Korean music history] (Kyŏngsan, 1995)
R.C. Provine: 'State Sacrificial Music and Korean Identity', Harmony and Counterpoint: Ritual Music in Chinese Context, ed. Bell Yung, E.S. Rawski and R.S. Watson (Stanford, 1996), 54–75

C: SCORES AND TRANSCRIPTIONS

Han'guk ŭmak [Anthology of traditional Korean music] [pubn of the National Center for Korean Traditional Performing Arts] (Seoul, 1968–) [scores in staff notation]
Kugak chŏnjip [Complete collection of Korean music] [pubn of the National Center for Korean Traditional Performing Arts] (Seoul, 1974–) [in Korean notation]
J. Condit: Music of the Korean Renaissance: Songs and Dances of the Fifteenth Century (Cambridge, 1984) [transcriptions]

D: PERIODICALS

Han'guk ŭmak yŏn'gu [Journal of the Korean Musicological Society] (1971–)
Minjok ŭmakhak [Journal of the Asian Music Research Institute] (1977–)
AsM, ix/2 (1978) [Korean music issue]
Han'guk ŭmaksa hakpo [Journal of the Society for Korean Historico-Musicology] (1988–)
Han'guk ŭmak san'go [Miscellaneous studies of Korean music] (Seoul, 1989–)
Kugagwŏn nonmunjip [Journal of the National Center for Korean Traditional Performing Arts] (1989–)

E: POPULAR AND WESTERN MUSIC

Yi Yusŏn: Han'guk yangak paengnyŏnsa [A hundred years of Western music in Korea] (Seoul, 1968/R)
Yi Yusŏn and Yi Sangman: 'Hyŏndae yangak' [Contemporary Western music], Han'guk ŭmaksa (Seoul, 1985), 477–608
Pak Ch'anho: Han'guk kayosa [History of Korean popular music] (Seoul, 1987)
Hwang Munp'yŏng: Han'guk taejung yŏnyesa [History of Korean popular entertainment] (Seoul, 1989)
Hwang Munp'yŏng : 'Taejung ŭmak' [Popular music] and 'Taejung kayo' [Popular song], Han'guk minjok munhwa taebaekkwa sajŏn [Encyclopaedia of Korean culture] (Sŏngnam, 1991)
Kim Yŏngjun: Han'guk kayosa iyagi [Korean song history] (Seoul, 1994)

F: NORTH KOREA

Kim Il Sung: 'On Some Questions Arising in our Literature and Art', Kim Il Sung Selected Works, vi (Pyongyang, 1951), 336–42
Kim Il Sung: 'Talks with Writers, Composers and Film Workers', Kim Il Sung Selected Works, ii (Pyongyang, 1960), 594–5
N. Freeland and others: Area Handbook for North Korea (Washington DC, 1969, 2/1976)
Chosŏn myŏnggŏk chip [Collection of famous Korean pieces] (Pyongyang, 1975)
F.M. Bunge, ed.: North Korea: a Country Study (Washington DC, 1981)
Han Chungmo and Chong Songmu: Chuch'e ŭi munye iron yŏn'gu [Theoretical studies on Juche arts] (Pyongyang, 1983)
Han Namyong: Haegŭm (Pyongyang, 1983)
Pak Hyŏngsŏp: Tanso (Pyongyang, 1983)
Pak Kyangae and others, eds.: Chosŏn ŭmak chŭnjip [Complete collection of Korean music] (Pyongyang, 1985–91)
Kim Ch'angjin: P'iri (Pyongyang, 1986)
Kim Naech'ang and Sŏn Hŭich'ang: Chosŏn ŭi minsok [Korean folklore] (Pyongyang, 1986)
Yang Okhŭi: Muyong p'yogibŏp [Dance notation] (Pyongyang, 1987)

Chosŏn ŭi minsok nori [Korean folk plays and games], ed. Institute of Archaeology, Academy of Sciences (Seoul, 1988)
Ch'oe Yŏngnam and Maeng Ch'ŏngjong: T'aakki [Percussion instruments] (Pyongyang, 1988)
Kim Kilhwa: Ongnyugŭm (Pyongyang, 1988)
U Chang Sop: The Chamo System of Dance Notation (Pyongyang, 1988)
Ch'oe Ch'angnim: Ko akki [Ancient musical instruments] (Pyongyang, 1989)
Yun Isang Ŭmak Yŏn'guso: Yun Isang ŭmak yŏn'gu ronmunjip [Collection of treatise, Isang Yun Music Study] (Pyongyang, 1989)
Yun Isang Ŭmak Yŏn'guso: Ŭmak yŏn'gu [Music study] (Pyongyang, 1989–)
No Tungŭn: Han'guk minjok ŭmak hyŏndan'gye [Current condition of Korean indigenous music] (Pyongyang, 1990)
Ro Ikhwa, ed.: Ri Myŏnsang chakkok chip [Collection of Ri Myŏnsang's compositions] (Pyongyang, 1990)
Kim Jong Il: On the Art of Opera (Pyongyang, 1990)
Pak Changnam: Paehap kwanhyŏnak p'yŏnsŏngbŏp [Orchestration] (Pyongyang, 1990)
Ro Chaewan, Kim Ch'o-ok and Pak Sunnyŏ, eds.: Chosŏn ŭmak yŏn'gam 1988 [Korean music yearbook, 1988] (Pyongyang, 1990)
Han Chanmyŏng, ed.: Chang soenap kyoch'ŭkpon [Manual for the long soenap] (Pyongyang, 1991)
Kim Ch'oewŏn: P'i pada-sik hyŏngmyŏng kagŭk [Revolutionary operas in Sea of Blood style] (Pyongyang, 1991)
Kim Ch'oewŏn: Chuch'e ŭmak ch'ongsŏ [Complete collection of Juche music] (Pyongyang, 1991)
Nam Yŏngil: Minjok ŭmak ŭi kyesŭng palchŏn [Discovery of indigenous music] (Pyongyang, 1991)
Kim Jong Il: For the Further Development of our Juche Art (Pyongyang, 1992)
Lee Byong Won: 'Contemporary Korean Musical Cultures', Korea Briefing (1993), 121–38
Ro Ikhwa and Han Sangch'ŏl, eds.: Yŏnghwa norae 1.100 kok chip [1100 pieces of film music] (Pyongyang, 1993)
Ŭmak tosa p'yŏnjippu, eds.: Chosŏn kayo 2000 kok chip [2000 Korean songs] (Pyongyang, 1994)
K. Howard: 'Juche and Culture: What's New?', North Korea in a New World Order, ed. H. Smith and others (Basingstoke, 1996), 169–95

ROBERT C. PROVINE (I–IV, V, 1(i), (ii) and (iv)), OKON HWANG (V, 1(iii)), KEITH HOWARD (V, 2)

Koreshchenko, Arseny Nikolayevich (b Moscow, 6/18 Dec 1870; d Kharkiv, 6 Jan 1921). Russian pianist and composer. From his early childhood he showed an exceptional gift for music: at the age of three he began playing the piano, and he was composing from the age of four. When he was eight he played before Anton Rubinstein, who was captivated by his talent. On Rubinstein's recommendation he studied the piano with Nikolas Zverev (teacher to Rachmaninoff and Skryabin), and theory with Arensky. In 1884 he was accepted into the Moscow Conservatory and graduated in 1891 from the class of Taneyev (piano) and Arensky (composition).

During the period 1891–4 Koreshchenko taught at the Moscow Conservatory and at the School of the Synod; he later taught composition and the piano at the school of music and drama attached to the Moscow Philharmonic Society. Simultaneously, he appeared in concerts as a pianist and as a superb interpreter of chamber music: he accompanied well-known Russian singers, and worked extensively with Chaliapin in particular. From 1894 he contributed almost 200 articles and reviews to the newspaper Moskovskiye vedomosti, and ran the music section of the journal Zolotoye runo.

The turn of the 19th and 20th centuries was the time which brought the composer the greatest acclaim and his finest creative achievements. Koreshchenko's work in organizing and conducting concerts of Armenian and Georgian music received wide public recognition. He notated and studied the folklore of the Caucasus, made arrangements of folksongs and produced original compositions based on Armenian and Georgian melodies, e.g. the Armyanskaya syuita op.20. In 1919 Koreshchenko and his family moved to Kharkiv, where in 1920 he was elected rector of the Kharkiv Music Academy.

Among the major works by Koreshchenko there are three operas, the ballet Valshebnoye zerkalo ('The Magical Looking Glass'), which remained in the repertory of the Bol'shoy Theatre for almost 20 years, the cantata Don Zhuan and the Liricheskaya sinfoniya ('Lyrical Symphony') op.23. His piano miniatures and romances, of which there are more than 80 altogether, are considered his finest works. Many works have not survived. Koreshchenko's style is elegant, polished, well-proportioned in terms of form and marked by contrapuntal mastery; it resembles closely the style of Tchaikovsky, but for all its merits it does not possess a clear stamp of individuality.

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE

Pir Valtasara/Posledniy den' Bel'Sar-Ussura [Belshazzar's Feast/The Last Day of Bel Sar-Ussur] (op), op.7, perf. 1892, vs (1892)
Angel smerti [Angel of Death] (op, M.Yu. Lermontov), op.10, 1893, unstaged
Ledyanoy dom [The Ice House] (op, M.I. Tchaikovsky), op.38, perf. 1900, vs (1899)
Volshebnoye zerkalo [The Magic Looking Glass] (ballet, M.I. Petipa), op.39, perf. 1905, piano score (1902)
Troyanki [The Trojans] (ov, entr'actes, choruses, Euripides), op.15, 1892, lost
Ifigeniya v Avlide [Iphigenia in Aulis] (incid music, Euripides), op.18, 1894, lost

OTHER

Orch: Kontsert fantaziya, pf, orch, op.3, 1891–94; Barcarolle, op.6, 1891, lost; Rasskaz [A Story], op.11, lost; Poèticheskaya stsena [A Poetic Scene], op.12, lost; 2 simfonicheskieye kartinï [2 Sym. Pictures], op.14, lost; Armyanskaya syuita [Armenian Suite], op.20, 1893; Liricheskaya simfoniya [Lyrical Sym.], A♭, op.23, 1895, lost Choral: Don Zhuan (cant., A.K. Tolstoy), op.5, 1891, lost; Prologue, op.9, chorus, orch, 1892, lost; Fantasticheskaya syuita [Fantastic Suite], op.21, chorus, orch, 1894, lost; Muzïkal'nïye kartinki [Musical Pictures], op.27, chorus, orch, 1897, lost; 3 khora i melodeklamatsiya [3 Choruses and Melodeclamation], op.29, 1897; Armyanskiye pesni [Armenian songs], opp.8, 13, lost; Choruses for Children, op.37, n.d.
Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt, A, op.25, 1895, lost; over 30 pf works, incl. opp.1, 19, 22, 30, 33, 40, 43 (1893–1907); pieces, vn, pf; pieces, vc, pf
Over 50 songs, 1v, pf, incl. opp.2, 17, 26, 28, 31, 36, 41, 42 (1893–1907)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Archives in RUS-Mcm
N. Kashkin: Ocherki istorii russkoy muzïki [An outline of the history of Russian music] (Moscow, 1908), 167, 183–5
M. Montagu-Nathan: A History of Russian Music (London and New York, 1914, 2/1918/R)

TAT'YANA MASLOVSKAYA

Korg. Japanese firm of electronic instrument manufacturers. It was founded in Tokyo in 1963 by Tsutomu Katoh and the accordion player Tadashi Osanai as Keio Geijutsu Kenkyujo. From 1968 the firm became known as Keio Electronic Laboratories; although they used the brandname Korg ('Katoh-Osanai organ') on the products, this became the company's official name only in the mid-1980s. Keio began by constructing rhythm units for Yamaha's Electone electronic organs, then produced its own separate units, the Doncamatic rhythm machine followed by the MiniPops series. Korg soon became one of the most successful Japanese manufacturers of electronic instruments, and produced the first Japanese synthesizer in 1968. In 1986 Yamaha bought a 40% stake in Korg.

The range of Korg instruments has included monophonic and polyphonic synthesizers (such as the Polysix), synthesizer modules, electronic organs and pianos (many digital models), string synthesizers, home keyboards, electronic percussion units, guitar synthesizers, samplers, electronic tuners and a vocoder. Its most successful product has been the M1 work station (1988), a sequencer-based synthesizer; some 250,000 were sold, rivalled only by Yamaha's DX7. Recent synthesizers have included the Wavestation, Trinity and Prophecy. Different organs and synthesizers include controls (drawbars, adjustable key-click control, joy-stick, pitch-bend and modulation wheels, and electronic simulation of rotary loudspeaker effects) that are more familiar from electronic instruments produced earlier by other companies; but Korg instruments are notable for the ingenious design of their electronic circuitry. Current models are based on sampled timbres.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Forrest: The A–Z of Analogue Synthesisers, i (Crediton, Devon, 1994, 2/1998)

J. Colbeck: Keyfax Omnibus Edition (Emeryville, CA, 1996), 50–69, 160–63

HUGH DAVIES

Korjus, Miliza (b Warsaw, 17 Aug 1913; d Culver City, CA, 27 Aug 1980). Polish soprano. Daughter of a Swedish diplomat, she travelled widely in her youth, studying, it is said, in as many as 16 conservatories; she also learnt from recordings of famous coloratura sopranos such as Tetrazzini and Galli-Curci. In 1929 she gave her first public recital and toured eastern Europe. She was engaged by the Berlin Staatsoper in 1933, making her début as Gilda in Rigoletto. Other lyric and coloratura roles followed, but she became most widely known through some best-selling records and her appearance in The Great Waltz (1938), a film about the life of Johann Strauss. In the same year Korjus toured the United States where she reappeared with considerable success at Carnegie Hall, New York, in 1944, having meanwhile lived in Mexico. She continued to give concerts but never returned to opera or films. The best of her recordings, such as the Prayer from Lakmé, show a distinctive tone and style. Her range and flexibility were exceptional and, with her attractive appearance, might have ensured a career comparable to that of her contemporary, Lily Pons: perhaps there was not room in the USA for both.

J.B. STEANE

Körling, (Sven) August (b Kristdala, Kalmar län, 14 April 1842; d Ystad, 21 Oct 1919). Swedish composer and conductor. He completed his studies at the Swedish Royal Academy of Music in 1861. Five years later he settled in the little town of Ystad on the south coast of Sweden, where he worked for the rest of his life as an organist, school music teacher and conductor of various musical ensembles. He was elected a member of the Swedish Royal Academy of Music in 1888. As a composer, chiefly of vocal music in smaller forms, Körling was influenced by the national Romantic movement. Some of his solo songs became widely popular. Among his compositions for male chorus, the two ballads Sten Sture and Håtunaleken are the best known.

FOLKE BOHLIN

Körling, (John) Felix (August) (b Kristdala, nr Oskarshamn, 17 Dec 1864; d Halmstad, 8 Jan 1937). Swedish composer and conductor, son of AUGUST KÖRLING. He left the conservatory of the Swedish Royal Academy of Music in 1886 and worked from 1889 in Halmstad on the west coast of Sweden. He made the Halmstad Choral Society well known throughout Scandinavia and was also one of the principal conductors of the Swedish choral association Svenska Körförbundet (founded in 1925). Many of his songs became popular, especially those for children and young people. His marching song En glad trall is often used in community singing; its tune has also become well known in Turkey, where it is sung to a Turkish patriotic text. Körling's other compositions include choral and orchestral works and music for the stage, among them three operettas which were performed at the Oscarsteater in Stockholm.

His brother Sven Körling (1879–1948), also a composer, worked as an organist, conductor and music teacher in Göteborg. (SBL, L. Hedwall)

FOLKE BOHLIN

Korn [née Gerlach], Clara Anna (b Berlin, 30 Jan 1866; d New York, 14 July 1940). American pianist, composer and teacher of German birth. She went to the USA at the age of three, and later studied with William G. Vogt. After a brief career as a concert pianist she received a letter from Tchaikovsky, who had seen some of her compositions in manuscript while visiting New York. He urged her to devote her time to composing, and in late 1891 she won a scholarship to the National Conservatory in New York, where she studied with Dvořák, Horatio Parker and Bruno Klein. From 1893 until 1898 she taught theory at the conservatory. She was a founder of the National Federation of Music Clubs, the Women's Philharmonic Society and the Manuscript Society of New York. In 1899 she settled in Brooklyn, where she taught the piano privately.

Korn wrote for several music journals. She spoke out regarding the difficulty women faced in obtaining orchestral performances, and encouraged women composers not to isolate themselves or retreat to club work. Her compositions are varied and numerous including an opera, Their Last War, orchestral works, chamber music, piano works and songs. Few were published. Korn's style varies by genre and medium, but is generally characterized by short, lyrical phrases, a conservative yet effective harmonic language and careful part-writing.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Their Last War (op, Korn) (Boston, 1932)

Orch: Sym., c; Morpheus, sym. poem; 2 suites: Ancient Dances, Rural Snapshots; Pf Conc.; Vn Conc.

Other inst: Suite, vn, vc, pf; Pf Sonata (Nautical), op.14 (East Orange, NJ, 1911); Gymnasium March, pf (Philadelphia, n.d.); Swinging (Philadelphia, n.d.); Overture solennelle (arr. of Tchaikovsky: 1812 Ov.), 2 pf (n.d.); pieces for vn, pf

Solo vocal: 9 Songs, S/T, pf (New York, 1903)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S.R. Crothers: 'Woman Composers of America: Clara A. Korn', MusAm, x/4 (1909), 4–26

PAMELA FOX

Korn, Johann Daniel. German music publisher, co-founder of the firm LEUCKART.

Korn, Peter Jona (b Berlin, 30 March 1922; d Munich, 12 Jan 1998). American composer of German birth. He studied at the Palestine Conservatory, Jerusalem (from 1936), where his teachers included Stefan Wolpe and Hermann Scherchen. After emigrating to the USA in 1941, he studied with Schoenberg and later at the University of Southern California with Ernst Toch, Hanns Eisler, Miklós Rózsa and Lilian Steuber, among others. He took American citizenship in 1944. In 1948 he founded the New Orchestra of Los Angeles. His teaching appointments included positions at the Trapp Conservatory, Munich (1960–61), and the University of California (1961–4). An active participant in German musical life after his return in 1965, he served as director of the Richard Strauss Conservatory (1967–87), chair of the Association of Munich Musicians (1974–8), vice-president of the German Composers' Association and co-founder of the Richard Strauss Society.

Korn described himself as an eclectic who reformed divergent styles into his own musical language. His book Musikalische Umweltverschmutzung (Wiesbaden, 1975) objects to the politics of controlled music and to the demands for absolutism within certain schools of composition, pleading instead for a more liberal approach. His honours include the Munich music prize (1968) and the distinguished service cross of Bavaria (1984).

WORKS
(selective list)

Op: Heidi in Frankfurt (3, Korn, after J. Spyri), op.35, 1961–3, Saarbrücken, 28 Nov 1978

Orch: Romantic Ov., op.1, 1943, rev. 1983; Sym. no.1, op.3, 1946, rev. 1977; Tom Paine Ov., op.9, 1950, rev. 1985; Sym. no.2, op.13, 1951, rev. 1983; Hn Conc., op.15, 1952; Adagietto, op.23, small orch, 1954, rev. 1986; Variations on a Tune from Beggar's Op, op.26, 1955; Sax Conc., op.31, 1956, rev. 1982; Sym. no.3, op.30, 1956, rev. 1969; Berolinasuite, op.34, 1959; Vn Conc., op.39, 1965; Exorcism of a Liszt Frag., op.44, 1968; Beckmesser Variations, op.64, 1977; Tpt Conc., op.67, 1979; Sym. 'Salute to the Lone Wolves', op.69, wind, 1980; Romanza concertante, op.84, ob, orch, 1987; Conc. classico, hpd, orch, 1988; Eine kleine Festmusik, op.92, str, 1991; 10 other orch works

Vocal: Yes and No (P. Bargman, Korn), op.8, S, pf, 1951; 2 Nocturnes (P.B. Shelley), op.20, S, A-cl, hp, 1953; Der Pfarrer von Cleversulzbach (E. Mörike), op.24, Bar, pf, 1954; Von Krieg und Frieden (M. Claudius), op.48, low v, pf, 1971; Eine kleine deutsche Stadt (cant., R. Kunze), op.71, T, hpd, orch, 1981; Der Psalm vom Mut (cant., L. Feuchtwanger), op.75, Bar, orch, 1983; Wir sind die letzten (H. Sahl), op.98, Bar, pf; many other vocal pieces, incl. choral works

Chbr (3 or more insts): Str Qt no.1, op.10, 1950; Aloysia-Serenade, op.19, fl, va, vc, 1953; Fantasy, op.28, hn, vn, vc, pf, 1955; Serenade, op.33, 4 hn, 1957 [arr. 4 trbn, 1997]; Str Qt no.2, op.36, 1963; Wind Qnt, op.40, 1966; Serenade, op.45, 12 str, 1968; Pf Trio, op.56, 1975; Wind Octet, op.58, 1976; Bei Nacht im Dorf der Wächter rief, op.63, ob, hn, pf, 1977 [arr. ob, hn, str qt, 1988]; Goya, op.72/3a, 12 vc, 1982, rev. 1987; Pavane nocturne, op.74, fl, vn, vc, pf, 1983; Divertimento, op.97, vn, va, vc, 1992; 7 other chbr works

Chbr (1–2 insts): Sonata, op.6, vc, pf, 1949; Sonata, op.7, ob, pf, 1949; Sonata, op.18, hn, pf, 1952; Duo, op.66, va, pf, 1978, rev. 1986; 3 intermezzi, op.73, fl, pf, 1982; . . . ruft uns die Stimme, op.81, trbn, org; Sonata, op.83, vn, pf, 1986; Gavotte für Felix, op.95, vn, pf, 1992; solo works for pf, org; 5 other works

Principal publishers: Leukart, Peters, J. Schuberth & Co., Simrock, Zinneberg

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Ott: 'Mentor liberaler Musikpolitik', Neue Musikzeitung, xxi/2 (1972)

N. Düchtel, ed.: Peter Jona Korn (Tutzing, 1989) [incl. selection of writings]

H. Müller: 'Zum Tode Peter Jona Korns', Cellesche Zeitung (20 Jan 1998)

HARALD MÜLLER

Kornauth, Egon (b Olmütz, 14 May 1891; d Vienna, 28 Oct 1959). Austrian composer and pianist. As a child he studied the piano, making his début at the age of 15; he also played the organ in his home town church, and the cello in an amateur string quartet and in the Brno theatre and symphony orchestra. In 1909 he moved to Vienna, studying at the Academy of Music with Robert Fuchs, among others, and at the university, where he changed his focus from philology to musicology (graduated 1915) and became a student of Guido Adler. Differences quickly developed between Kornauth and his next teacher, Schreker, whose interest in dramatic music did not accord with his pupil's preference for lyrical composition. More apt supervision followed with Franz Schmidt.

In 1910 Kornauth acted as accompanist for the Vienna Gesangsverein on an American tour. He served as coach at the Vienna Staatsoper from 1916, and in 1919 taught music theory at Vienna University. He soon embarked on an international career as an accompanist, conductor and pianist, becoming active in Europe, organizing an orchestra in Medan, Sumatra (1926–7), and touring Indonesia (1928–9) and South America (1934–5) with his trio. In 1940 he was appointed to teach music theory at the Vienna Academy, and in 1945 gained a post teaching composition at the Salzburg Mozarteum. His honours include the Austrian State Prize (1913) for his Viola Sonata op.3, the Gustav Mahler Foundation prize (1919), the Vienna music prize (1929) and the Austrian Würdigungspreis (1951). He was elected to the Austrian Kunstsenat in 1954.

In his short autobiography ('Versuch eines Selbstbildnisses', Sudetenland: Böhmen, Mähren, Schlesien, i, 1958–9, 178–82), Kornauth declared musical epigonism to be inherent in his personality. While he surveyed various styles as a theorist, he found only one style that accorded with his personal aesthetic as a composer. He did not search for new techniques, logic or forms with which to compose. Instead, his compositions are appealing tone poems, influenced by the spirit of late Romanticism. Ambitious textures and lyrical melodies are characteristic of his relatively modest style.

WORKS

Orch: Sym. Suite no.1 'Aus der Jugendzeit', g, op.7, 1913, rev. 1928; Burleske, op.11, fl, orch, 1914, rev. 1931; Sym. Ov. (Festliches Vorspiel), E♭, op.13, 1914, rev. 1925; Elegie auf den Tod eines Freundes, c♯, 1916; Ballade, g, op.17, vc, orch, 1917 [arr. as Nachtstück, pf trio; vc, pf]; Konzertstück, b, op.19, vn, chbr orch, 1917, rev. 1924 [arr. vn, pf]; Suite (Sinfonietta), a, op.20, 1918, rev. 1922; Sym. Suite no.2, f♯, op.35, 1926–31, rev. 1937 [arr. as op.35a, pf qnt]; Romantische Suite, c♯, op.40, 1932–6, rev. 1940; Suite, c♯, op.42, 1937–8; Suite no.2, e, op.50, str [arr. as op.50a, str qt]

Vocal (1v, pf, unless otherwise stated): 6 Lieder, op.1, 1908–11; 4 Gesänge, op.8, 1v, orch, 1912–14; 8 Gesänge (R. Smekal), op.12, 1912–16, arr. 1v, orch; Gesang der späten Linden (Smekal), op.16, female vv, chbr orch, 1917; 6 Lieder, op.21, 1917–18; 3 Gesänge, op.24, 1v, fl, chbr orch, 1918–21; 6 Lieder (H. Hesse), op.22, 1918, arr. 1v, orch; 4 Lieder (C.M. Brentano), op.34, 1930–31 [arr. as op.34a, female vv, chbr orch, 1931; op.34b, 1v, orch]; 8 Lieder (J.F. von Eichendorff), op.36, 1932; 8 Lieder (Eichendorff), op.37, 1932; 8 Lieder (Eichendorff), op.38, 1932–3; Lied der Freundschaft (F. Hölderlin), op.39/1, male vv, 1933; Lied der Liebe (Hölderlin), op.39/2, vv, 1933

Chbr: Sonata, c♯, op.3, va, pf, 1912 [arr. (cl, pf)/chbr orch]; Sonata, f, op.5, cl, pf, 1912–13 [arr. vn, pf]; Sonata, e, op.9, vn, pf, 1913–14; Burleske, E, op.11, fl, pf, 1914; Kleine Abendmusik, a, op.14, str qt, 1915; Sonatina, D, op.15, vn, pf, 1916; Pf Qt, c, op.18, 1917; Str Sextet, a, op.25, 1918–19; Rhapsody, d, op.6, vc, pf, 1919; Str Qt, g, op.26, 1920; Pf Trio, b, op.27, 1921; Sonata, e, op.28, vc, pf, 1922; Str Qnt no.1, g, op.30, 1923; Kammermusik

(Nonett), op.31, fl, ob, cl, hn, str qnt, 1924 [arr. as op.31a, fl, ob, cl, bn, hn, vn, va, vc, db]; Cl Qnt, f♯, op.33, 1930; Pf Qnt, f♯, op.35a, 1931; Str Qnt no.2, c♯, op.40, 1932–7 [arr. orch, 1939; cl, bn, hn, str qnt]; Suite, op.45, vn, vc/va, pf; Suite, op.46, fl, str qt [arr. fl/vn/va, pf]; 3 Pieces, op.47, vc, pf (1939–40) [arr. va, pf]
Pf: 5 Klavierstücke, op.2, 1911–12; Fantasy, E♭, op.10, 1912–15 [arr. orch]; Sonata, A♭, op.4, 1912; 3 Klavierstücke, op.23, 1918–20, arr. 2 pf; Kleine Suite, op.29, 1923, arr. pf trio, 1930; 4 Klavierstücke, op.32, 1926, arr. 2 pf; Klavierstücke, op.41, 1932–6 [arr. as op.41a, Kleine Hausmusik, str qt; op.41b, Sonatine]; Präludium, Passacaglia, op.43, 1939; Suite no.2, op.44, 1939–40
MSS in A-Wn

Principal publishers: Doblinger, Peters, Hofmeister-Figaro, Bundesverlag, Tischer & Jagenberg, Universal, Zimmermann

WRITINGS

Die thematische Arbeit in Josef Haydns Streichquartetten seit 1780 (diss., U. of Vienna, 1915)
'Theorie und Praxis', Wissenschaft und Praxis: eine Festschrift zum 70. Geburtstag von Bernhard Paumgartner, ed. E. Preussner (Zürich, 1958), 128–33
'Versuch eines Selbstbildnisses', Sudetenland, i/3 (1958–9)
Many essays in ÖMz

BIBLIOGRAPHY

LZMÖ [incl. further bibliography]
E.H. Müller von Asow: Egon Kornauth (Vienna, 1941)
E.H. Müller von Asow: Verzeichnis der Werke von Egon Kornauth (Vienna, 1941, 2/1958)
T. Leibnitz: Österreichische Spätromantiker: Studien zu Emil Nikolaus von Reznicek, Joseph Marx, Franz Schmidt und Egon Kornauth (Tutzing, 1986)

GEROLD W. GRUBER

Korndorf, Nikolay Sergeyevich (b Moscow, 23 Jan 1947). Russian composer. He studied composition with Balasanian at the Moscow Conservatory, graduating in 1972, and then undertook a postgraduate conducting course with Lev Ginzburg, gaining a diploma in 1979. In 1975 he was appointed lecturer in instrumentation at the Moscow Conservatory; by this time he was an active propagator of new music, and many contemporary works were performed under his baton. In 1991 he moved to Canada where he continued to compose.

Korndorf makes frequent reference to early music and oral traditions in his works and seeks to create new structures within such contexts. An important turning point in his development was Yarilo (1980), for piano and tape, named after a sun god and the awakening of spring. If previous works such as the Second Symphony and the opera Pir vo vremya chudï ('Feast in the Time of Plague') were written in the confrontational manner typical of the 1970s, then Yarilo and the chamber works that followed in the 1980s are characterized by unhurried and meditative musical development. His artistic outlook is informed by pantheism and man's desire to merge with nature in an attempt to solve the crises of modern society. Musically, this is embodied by tonality replacing atonality. Although he often employs techniques of motif repetition in a manner that recalls minimalism, he does this with the intention of imparting formal dynamism rather than creating a continuous field of sound. His works of the late 1980s and early 1990s are mostly symphonic and are distinguished by sincere pathos, dynamic power and monumental qualities. He was awarded the Duisburg City Prize in 1990 and the Hindemith Prize in 1991.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Pir vo vremya chumï [Feast in the Time of Plague] (op), 1973; Yes!! (ritual), 3 vv, chbr ens, tape, 1982; The Dance in Metal in Honour of John Cage (music theatre), 1 perc, 1986; MR (Marina and Rainer) (chbr op, 1, Yu. Lane), 1989, Munich, 20 May 1994; . . . si muove! (music theatre), S, T, rock singer, 2 conductors, actors, dancers, inst ens, 1993
Orch: Sym. no.1, 1975; Sym. no.2, 1980; Con sordino, 16 str, hpd, 1984; Conc. capriccioso, vc, perc, str, 1986; Hymn I (Sempre tutti), 1987; Hymn II, 1987; Prol, 1992; Epilogue, 1993; Viktor (The Victor), 1995; Sym. no.4 (Underground Music), 1996
Vocal: Singing, Mez, tape, 1982; Tristful Songs (no text), chbr chorus, 1 perc, 1983; Sym. no.3, spkr, boys' chorus, mens' chorus, pf, orch, 1989; Hymn III (In Honour of Gustav Mahler), S, orch, 1990; Welcome!, female chorus, insts played by singers, 1995, arr. 6 female vv, insts played by singers, 1995
Chbr and solo inst: Confessiones, 14 pfmrs, tape, 1979; Movts, perc ens, 1981; Primitive Music, 12 sax, 1981; Yarilo, pf, tape, 1981; Lullaby, 2 pf, 1984; Brass-Qnt, 1985; Amoroso, 11 pfmrs, 1986; In Honour of Alfred Schnittke (AGSCH), str trio, 1986; Mozart-variationen, str sextet, 1990; Continuum, org, tape, 1991; The Magic Gift of Segnoro Luigi, perc ens, 1991, collab. V. Yekimovsky and others; Let the Earth Bring Forth, chbr ens, 1992; Str Qt, 1992; Get Out!!!, any 4 or more insts, 1995; Are you Ready Brother?, pf trio, 1996; Music for Owen Underhill and his Magnificent Eight, chbr ens, 1997; Passacaglia, vc, 1997; Canzone triste, hp, 1998

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Porwol: 'Die alternative Komponistengeneration in Moskau', Sowjetische Musik im Licht der Perestroika, ed. H. Danuser, H. Gerlach and J. Köchel (Laaber, 1990), 117–24, esp. 120
A. Ferenc: 'The Association for Contemporary Music in Moscow: an Interview with Nikolai Korndorf', Tempo, no.190 (1994), 2–4
N. Gulyanitskaya: 'Zametki o stilistike sovremennïkh dukhovno-muzïkal'nïkh kompozitsii' [Notes on style in sacred contemporary music], MAk(1994), no.1, pp.18–25
O. Kuzima: 'Nikolay Korndorf', Kompozitorï Moskvï, ed. R.G. Kosacheva, iv (Moscow, 1994), 142–65

TAT'YANA REXROTH

Korner, Alexis (b Paris, 19 April 1928; d London, 1 Jan 1984). British guitarist, bandleader, journalist and broadcaster. In the late 1940s and 50s he played traditional jazz and skiffle, but his musical sympathies lay with the country blues of artists such as Leadbelly, Robert Johnson and Big Bill Broonzy. He befriended the jazz musician Chris Barber, who had similar musical interests and had brought several blues artists over to England; Korner met many of these artists and promoted them in articles for journals including Melody Maker and Jazz on Record, and from 1958 through broadcasts on the BBC. With Cyril Davies, he formed the first British blues club, the London Blues and Barrelhouse Club. He had played acoustic guitar in the armed forces in Germany (1947–9), but took up electric guitar only after hearing Muddy Waters in 1958. With Davies he formed the electric band Blues Incorporated (1962), with a fluid personnel it was practically the only outlet for aspiring British blues musicians at the time. Consequently their performances attracted many who subsequently became prominent in the British blues revival and blues-rock scene: Keith Richards, Eric Clapton, Eric Burdon, Mick Jagger, Long John Baldry, Charlie Watts and Brian Jones all played with the band.

Although Korner was a competent guitarist he was not a soloist, and the album R&B from the Marquee reflects his interest in the creation of more complex contrapuntal textures. He was part of the folk music scene in the 1950s and was also fond of jazz, often playing with prominent British jazz musicians, as on the album Alexis Korner's Blues Incorporated (1963). Blues Incorporated disbanded in 1967 and Korner recorded several other albums under his own name as well as with the groups New Church and CCS (Creative Consciousness Society). He never achieved the same status of many of his protégés, partly because of his stylistic changes away from the electric blues that made such groups as the Rolling Stones and Led Zeppelin so commercially viable.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bailey: 'Alexis Korner, Father of us All', Rolling Stone (8 July 1971)
C. Welch: 'From the Roots Comes Alexis', Melody Maker (22 April 1978)
R. Dopson: disc notes, I Wonder Who, BGO CD136 (1992)
H. Shapiro: Alexis Korner (London, 1996) [incl. discography]

SUSAN FAST

Körner, (Karl) Theodor (b Dresden, 23 Nov 1791; d Gadebusch, Mecklenburg, 26 Aug 1813). German poet and librettist. After studying geology, philosophy and law at Freiberg, Leipzig and Berlin, he went to Vienna in 1811 to work as a Dramaturg. He met Eichendorff, Beethoven, Weber, Moscheles and Meyerbeer and wrote a quantity of dramas and poems. He also discussed opera projects with Beethoven and Spohr but in 1813, before bringing these ideas to fruition, he enlisted in Lützow's volunteer corps and fell in battle. His most popular and perhaps also his best works are the soldiers' songs he wrote in the months before his death. Schubert set the libretto Der vierjährige Posten in 1815, as did Reinecke in 1855; J.P.S. Schmidt set Das Fischermädchen (1818) and Alfred der Grosse (1830). Flotow's settings of Die Bergknappen and Alfred der Grosse, however, were unperformed, and Dvořák's setting of the latter was not staged during his lifetime. A number of other composers (including A.R. von Adelburg, F.X. Grutsch, F.X. Kleinheinz, Karl Steinacher and C.T. Weinlig), now largely forgotten, based operas on Körner's dramas and librettos.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Schäfer: Historisches und systematisches Verzeichnis sämtlicher Tonwerke zu den Dramen ... Körners (Leipzig, 1886)
R. Musiol: Theodor Körner und seine Beziehungen zur Musik (Ratibor, 1893)
K. Goedeke and others: Gundriss zur Geschichte der deutscher Dichtung, vii/1 (Dresden, 1900), 838–45
K. Berger: Theodor Körner (Bielefeld, 1912)
L. Siegel: Music in German Romantic Literature (Novato, CA, 1983)

PETER BRANSCOMBE

Kornett (i) (Ger.). See CORNET (i).

Kornett (ii) (Ger.). See under ORGAN STOP (Cornett).

Kornfeld, Peter. See SCHULTZE, NORBERT.

Korngold, Erich Wolfgang (b Brno, 29 May 1897; d Hollywood, CA, 29 Nov 1957). Austrian composer. The second son of the eminent music critic Julius Korngold (1860–1945), he was a remarkable child prodigy composer. In 1906 he played his cantata Gold to Gustav Mahler, who pronounced him a genius and recommended that he be sent to Zemlinsky for tuition. At the age of 11 he composed the ballet Der Schneemann, a sensation when it was first performed at the Vienna Court Opera (1910); he followed this with a Piano Trio and a remarkable Piano Sonata in E that so impressed Artur Schnabel that he championed the work all over Europe. Richard Strauss remarked: 'One's first reaction that these compositions are by a child are those of awe and concern that so precocious a genius should follow its normal development .... This assurance of style, this mastery of form, this characteristic expressiveness, this bold harmony, are truly astonishing!'. Giacomo Puccini, Jean Sibelius, Bruno Walter, Arthur Nikisch, Engelbert Humperdinck, Karl Goldmark and many others were similarly impressed.

Korngold was 14 when he wrote his first orchestral work, the Schauspiel Ouvertüre; his Sinfonietta appeared the following year. His first operas, Der Ring des Polykrates and Violanta, were completed in 1914. With the appearance of the opera Die tote Stadt, completed when he was 23 and acclaimed internationally after its dual première in Hamburg and Cologne (1920), his early fame reached its height. After completing the first Left Hand Piano Concerto, commissioned by Wittgenstein in 1923, he began his fourth and arguably greatest opera, Das Wunder der Heliane (1927), and started arranging and conducting classic operettas by Johann Strauss and others. He also began teaching opera and composition at the Vienna Staatsakademie and was awarded the title professor honoris causa by the president of Austria.

Max Reinhardt, with whom Korngold had collaborated on versions of Die Fledermaus and La belle Hélène, invited him to Hollywood in 1934 to work on his celebrated film of Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream. Over the next four years, Korngold pioneered a new art form, the symphonic film score, in such classics as Captain Blood, The Prince and the Pauper and Anthony Adverse (for which he won the first of two Academy Awards). The Anschluss prevented him from staging his fifth opera, Die Kathrin, and he remained in Hollywood composing some of the finest music written for the cinema. The Adventures of Robin Hood (1938, winner of his second Academy Award), The Sea Hawk (1940) and Kings Row (1941) are his greatest works in the genre. Treating each film as an 'opera without singing' (each character has his or her own leitmotif) he created intensely romantic, richly melodic and contrapuntally intricate scores, the best of which are a cinematic paradigm for the tone poems of Richard Strauss and Franz Liszt. He intended that, when divorced from the moving image, these scores could stand alone in the concert hall. His style exerted a profound influence on modern film music.

After the war Korngold returned to absolute music, composing, among other works, a Violin Concerto (1937, rev. 1945) first performed by Heifetz, a Cello Concerto (1946), a Symphonic Serenade for string orchestra (1947) given its première by Furtwängler, and the Symphony in F♯ (1947–52). His late Romantic style, however, was completely out of step with the postwar era and when he died at the age of 60, he believed himself forgotten. After decades of neglect, a gradual reawakening of interest in his music occurred. At the time of his centenary (1997) his works were becoming increasingly popular, appearing on major recordings and concert programmes around the world.

WORKS
(selective list)

DRAMATIC

Ops: Der Ring des Polykrates (1, J. Korngold and L. Feld, after H. Teweles), op.7, 1914, Munich, 28 March 1916; Violanta (1, H. Müller), op.8, 1914, Munich, 28 March 1916; Die tote Stadt (3, P. Schott [E.W. and J. Korngold], after G. Rodenbach: Bruges la morte), op.12, 1920, Hamburg and Cologne, 4 Dec 1920; Das Wunder der Heliane (3, Müller, after H. Kalneker), op.20, 1927, Hamburg, 7 Oct 1927; Die Kathrin (3, E. Decsey), op.28, Stockholm, 7 Oct 1939

Film scores: A Midsummer Night's Dream (dir. M. Reinhardt), 1934 [arr. of Mendelssohn]; Captain Blood (dir. M. Curtiz), 1935; Anthony Adverse (dir. M. Le Roy), 1936; Give Us This Night (dir. A. Hall), 1936; The Green Pastures (dir. W. Keighley), 1936 [orch sequences]; Rose of the Rancho, 1936 [one song]; Another Dawn (dir. W. Dieterle), 1937; The Prince and the Pauper (dir. Keighley), 1937; The Adventures of Robin Hood (dir. Curtiz and Keighley), 1938; Juarez (dir. Dieterle), 1939; The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex (dir. Curtiz), 1939; The Sea Hawk (dir. Curtiz), 1940; Kings Row (dir. S. Wood), 1941; The Sea Wolf (dir. Curtiz), 1941; The Constant Nymph (dir. E. Goulding), 1942; Between Two Worlds (dir. E.A. Blatt), 1944; Devotion (dir. C. Bernhardt), 1943; Of Human Bondage (dir. Goulding), 1944; Deception (dir. I. Rapper), 1946; Escape Me Never (dir. P. Godfrey), 1946; Magic Fire (dir. Dieterle), 1954 [arr. of Wagner]

Other: Gold (cant.), solo vv, pf, 1906, lost; Der Schneemann (ballet pantomime, E.W. Korngold), Vienna, 4 Oct 1910 [orchd Zemlinsky, rev. Korngold 1913]; Much Ado about Nothing (incid music, W. Shakespeare), op.11, 1918–19, 6 May 1920; The Silent Serenade (stage comedy, E.W. Korngold, B. Reisfeld and W. Okie), op.36, 1946, 26 March 1951

ORCHESTRAL

Schauspiel Ouvertüre, op.4, 1911; Sinfonietta, op.5, 1912; Sursum corda, sym. ov., op.13, 1919; Pf Conc., C♯, op.17, pf left hand, orch, 1923; Baby Serenade, op.24, small orch, 1928–9; Vn Conc., D, op.35, 1937, rev. 1945; Tomorrow, sym. poem, op.33, Mez, chorus, orch, 1942; Vc Conc., C, op.37, 1946; Sym., F♯, op.40, 1947–52; Sym. Serenade, B♭, str, op.39, 1947; Theme and Variations, op.42, school orch, 1953

CHAMBER AND KEYBOARD

Don Quixote, pf, pieces, 1908; Pf Sonata no.1, d, 1908; Pf Trio, D, op.1, 1909; Pf Sonata no.2, E, op.2, 1910; Märchenbilder, 7 pf pieces, op.3, 1910; Sonata, D, op.6, vn, pf, 1912; Str Sextet, D, op.10, 1914–16; Pf Qnt, E, op.15, 1921; Str Qt no.1, A, op.16, 1921–3; 4 Little Caricatures, op.19, pf, 1926; Tales of Strauss, op.21, pf, 1927; Suite, op.23, pf left hand, str, 1930; Pf Sonata no.3, C, op.25, 1931; Str Qt no.2, E♭, op.26, 1933; Str Qt no.3, D, op.34, 1944–5; Romance impromptu, vc, pf, op. posth., 1946

SONGS

6 einfache Lieder (J.F. von Eichendorff, E. Honold, H. Kipper, S. Trebitsch), op.9, 1911–13; [4] Abschiedslieder (C. Rosetti, A. Kerr, E. Ronsperger, E. Lothar), op.14, A, pf/orch, 1920–21; 3 Lieder (H. Kaltneker), op.18, 1924; 3 Lieder (K. Kobald, E. van der Straten), op.22, 1928–9; The Eternal (E. van der Straten), song cycle, op.27, 1933; 4 Lieder (Shakespeare: Othello, As You Like It), op.31, 1937; Songs of the Clown (W. Shakespeare: Twelfth Night), op.29, 1937; 5 Lieder (R. Dehmel, Eichendorff, H. Koch, Shakespeare), op.38, medium v, pf, 1948; Sonett für Wien (Kaltneker), op.41, Mez, pf, 1953

MSS in US-Wc

Principal publisher: Schott

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KdG (S. Rode-Breymann)
E. Newman: 'The Problem of Erich Korngold', The Nation (24 Aug 1912)
R.S. Hoffmann: Erich Wolfgang Korngold (Vienna, 1922)
E.W. Korngold: 'Some Experiences in Film Music', Music and Dance in California, ed. J. Rodríguez (Hollywood, 1940), 137–9
R. Behlmer: 'Erich Wolfgang Korngold – Established Some of the Film Music Basics Film Composers Now Ignore', Films in Review, no.182 (1967), 86–100
L. Korngold: Erich Wolfgang Korngold (Vienna, 1967)
J. Korngold: Die Korngolds in Wien (Zürich, 1991)
S. Blickensdorfer: Erich Wolfgang Korngold: Opern und Filmmusik (diss., U. of Vienna, 1993)
R. van der Lek, trans. M. Swithinbank: 'Concert Music as Reused Film Music', AcM, lxvi (1994), 8–112
B.G. Carroll: The Last Prodigy (Portland, OR, 1997)

BRENDAN G. CARROLL

Kornowicz, Jerzy (b Lublin, 12 Aug 1959). Polish composer. He studied composition with Baird and then Borkowski at the Warsaw Academy of Music (1978–84) and later under Louis Andriessen (1992–5) in the Hague. Since 1988 he has been active in Polish musical organizations and festivals, notably those involving young Polish composers, such as the Youth Circle of the Polish Composers' Union, of which he was secretary (1988–90). A composer of mostly instrumental music, Kornowicz is best known for his solo pieces and duets. Although his music bears elements of non-Western traditions, ranging from chant in Tybet I to the creation of new modes through pitch-bending in Relacja ('Relation'), the strongest characteristic is its obsessive roulades, built on motifs and set in sequential and interlocking episodes. These quasi-ritualistic repetitions explore and define harmonic fields through arpeggiation and additive–substractive processes. Their étude-like virtuosity and nervous energy are harnessed to particularly good effect in Warkocz Bereniki ('The Tress of Berenice') and the formally well-organized Nieustanne rzeczy wirowanie ('The Ceaseless Spinning of Things').

WORKS
(selective list)

Interatcje [Interactions], 6 perc, 1983; Harmonikos, orch, 1984; Pisane w Polsce [Written in Poland], tape, 1984; Transmission, pf, 1984; Totale, orch, 1985; Tybet I, tape, 1985; Off reduction, vn, 1986; Tukuang: płaskowyż feniksów [Tukuang: Plateau of the Phoenixes], mar, 1986; Fractus, db, 1988; Relacja [Relation], a fl, reverberation, 1990; Warkocz Bereniki (Coma Berenices) [The Tress of Berenice], pf, 1990; Mała pavana 'Kroki w chmurach' [Little Pavane 'Footfalls in the Clouds'], vn, pf, 1993; Tchnienie i pył [Breath and Dust], chbr orch, 1993; Nieustanne rzeczy wirowanie [The Ceaseless Spinning of Things], vn, 1995; Puzzler, chbr orch, 1995; Turlajśpiewka, sax qt, 1997; Figury w oplocie [Frayed Figures], ens, 1998; Metanoja, hpd, tape, 1998

Light music, jazz, incid music, film scores

Principal publisher: Brevis

ADRIAN THOMAS

Kórodi, András (b Budapest, 24 May 1922; d Venice, 17 Sept 1986). Hungarian conductor. He studied conducting with János Ferencsik and composition with László Lajtha at the Liszt Academy in Budapest, and joined the Budapest Opera as répétiteur in 1946. The same year he made his conducting début there with Kodály's Háry János, was appointed conductor, and became principal conductor in 1963. He gave several premières, including those of Hungarian operas such as Szokolay's Blood Wedding (1964). He was the first Hungarian to conduct the Bol'shoy Opera when he gave Carmen there in 1957; that year he was appointed a professor of conducting at the Budapest Academy. He became president-conductor of the Budapest PO in 1967. Kórodi's favoured repertory was the 20th-century mainstream and Wagner, and he recorded some works in the complete Bartók edition. He received the Kossuth Prize in 1970 and was named Artist of Merit in 1960.

PÉTER P. VÁRNAI

Korolyov, Anatoly Aleksandrovich (b Leningrad, 31 March 1949). Russian composer. He studied at the Leningrad Conservatory as a choral conductor and composer (in the class of Vladimir Tsïtovich), completing his postgraduate studies under the guidance of Boris Arapov in 1983. In 1989 he became a teacher in the Department of Orchestration at the Leningrad Conservatory, and in 1991 director of the studio for electronic music with the St Petersburg Union of Composers.

Korolyov's work is characterized by an original and dramatic use of timbre, but above all by an abundance of genres and subject matter ranging from impressionistic and urban landscapes (the symphonic poems O trave, kamnyakh i vode ['Of Grass, Stones and Water'], Gorod ot zari do poludnya ['The City from Dawn to Midday'] to the poster-like anthems (Prazdnicheskaya muzïka Sankt-Peterburgu ['Festival Music for St Petersburg']) and the ritualistic and religious (the oratorio Zhitiye knyazya Vladimira ['The Life of Prince Vladimir']). He is drawn to unusual folk sources, has combined live music with electronic sounds (Pamyati Oliv'ye Messiana ['To the Memory of Olivier Messiaen'], for chorus and sampler) and has utilized minimalist techniques (Tri napeva ['Three Melodies'], for organ). Despite the allusions to various styles and the 'reflection of culture' that is so frequently encountered, his work is devoid of eclecticism, and is notable for its distinctiveness and its adherence to epic dramatic plans.

WORKS
(selective list)

Vocal: Zhitiye knyazya Vladimira [The Life of Prince Vladimir] (orat), 1981; Sled v mire [Trace in the World] (I. Bunin), cycle, chorus, 1982; 2 poėmï (A. Tarkovsky), T, pf, 1983; 3 poėmï (Tarkovsky), chorus, 1984; Slava bogu za vsyo [Glory to God for Everything] (conc., G. Petrov), chorus, 1988; Adazhio, chorus, str orch, 1990; 3 fragmenta iz Otkroveniya Svyatogo Ioanna [3 Fragments from the Revelation of St John] (conc.), chorus, 1994; Lux fulgebit, S, chbr ens, 1995

Orch: Gorod ot zari do poludnya [The City from Dawn to Midday], sym. poem, 1979; O trave, kamnyakh i vode [Of Grass, Stones and Water], sym. poem, 1979; Chbr Sym., 1984; Sym., 1985; Andante, 1989; Prazdnichnaya muzïka Sankt-Peterburgu [Festive Music for St Petersburg], 1990; Allegro, 1991, arr. 2 pf, 1991; Vn Conc., 1993; Variatsii, pf, orch, 1995 [after M. Luther: A Mighty Fortress is Our God, chorale]

Chbr and solo inst: V shume vetra [In the Sound of the Wind], ob, 3 perc groups, pf, 1983; Sonata, 2 pf, 1984; 3 napeva [3 Melodies], org, 1985; Bol'shoy raspev [Great Chant], str, perc, hpd, 1986; Tetrad' [Note Book], pf, 1986; Con amore, 15 solo str, pf, hpd, synth, elec gui, 1987; Pritcha, tolkovaniye, kommentariy [Parable, Interpretation, Commentary], pf, 1987; Chakona, pf, 1989; Malen'kiy putevoditel' po russkim narodnïm pesnyam [Small Guidebook of Russian Folk Songs], pf, 1990; Ėlegiya, org, 1991; Arkhitektura nochi [Architecture of the Night], org, 1992, arr. for elecs, 1994; Severnïy veter [The North Wind], pf, 1992; Trio, 2 vn, vc, 1992; Partita, pf, 1995; Inventio, solo insts, 1996

El-ac: Baykal'skiye mirazhi [Baykal Mirages], elecs, 1994; Dvoynoy kanon [Double Canon], cptr, 1994; Pamyati Oliv'ye Messiana [In Memory of Olivier Messiaen], motet, chorus, sampler, 1996

Incid music, film scores, reconstruction and arr. of 2 motets by C. Gesualdo (Sacrae cantiones)

MARINA GALUSHKO

Korones, Xenos [Xenophon] (*fl c*1325–50). Byzantine monk and composer of liturgical chant. According to the akolouthiai manuscript GR-An 2458, dated 1336, Korones was lampadarios at Hagia Sophia, that is, the cantor of the left choir and the second highest office in the chant hierarchy. Sources from approximately one century later indicate that he even attained the rank of prōtopsaltēs, but the precise date and circumstances of his promotion to this office are not known. Korones also set a religious poem written by Patriarch Isidoros I (1347–9), thereby confirming the dates of the composer's activity.

Although he was probably somewhat younger than JOANNES GLYKYS, JOANNES KOUKOUZELES and NIKEPHOROS ETHIKOS, Korones belonged to the first generation of composers writing in the mature kalophonic style. He reworked older kalophonic stichēra and a considerable number of his new compositions appear in Koukouzeles's redaction of the kalophonic stichērarion. In the akolouthiai manuscripts Korones's name is attached to several pieces for both the Office and the Divine Liturgy, including a Trisagion in the ēchos deuteros (authentic mode 2) that is introduced by the deacon's shout 'dynamis' and expanded by a melismatic kratēma, and Epi soi chairei kecharitomenē in the ēchos plagios tetartos (plagal mode 4) for the Liturgy of St Basil; both compositions are found in almost every akolouthiai manuscript copied from the second half of the 15th century onwards.

The akolouthiai manuscripts contain at least six different methodoi by Korones, which confirms his reputation as a teacher of chant and his asssociation with the maistores Glykys and Koukouzeles. The simpler pieces, for example, an exercise demonstrating Byzantine intonation formulae by modulating through the eight modes, shed light on the elementary chant training in the 14th century. The two longest methodoi, however, are of a different class: one, the longest preserved exercise in the kalophonic style, consists, like Koukouzeles's methodos, of teretismata in the ēchos prōtos (authentic mode 1); the other, known as 'Method of the Stichērarion', uses the first item in this traditional chant collection (Epestē hē eisodos) as the formal framework for a highly sophisticated cento of melodic formulae and phrases drawn from the entire stichērarion collection.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Velimirović: 'Byzantine Composers in MS. Athens 2406', Essays Presented to Egon Wellesz, ed. J. Westrup (Oxford, 1966), 7–18
D. Conomos: Byzantine Trisagia and Cheroubika of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Centuries (Thessaloniki, 1974)
M.K. Chatzēgiakoumēs: Mousika cheirographa tourkokratias, 1453–1832 [Music MSS from the period of Turkish rule] (Athens, 1975), 316–21
G.T. Stathēs: Hē dekapentasyllabos hymnographia en tē byzantinē melopoiïa kai ekdosis tōn keimenōn eis hen corpus [Hymnography in 15-syllable verses in Byzantine melodic composition and an edition of the texts in one corpus] (Athens, 1977), 102–03
E. Trapp: Prosopographisches Lexikon der Palaiologenzeit, vi (Vienna, 1983), 21 only
D. Conomos, ed.: The Treatise of Manuel Chrysaphes, the Lampadarios: On the Theory of the Art of Chanting and on Certain Erroneous Views that Some Hold about it, MMB, Corpus scriptorum de re musica, ii (1985)
A. Jakovljević: Diglōssē palaiographia kai melōdoi-hymnographoi tou kōdika tōn Athēnōn 928 [Old dual-language writings and hymn writers in Athens codex 928] (Leukosia, 1988), 79–81
G. Stathēs: 'Hē asmatikē diaphoropoiēsē, hopōs katagraphetai ston kōdika EBE 2458 tou etous 1336' [A comparison of the chants in codex Gr-An 2458 dating from 1336], Christianikē Thessalonikē, palaiologeios epochē: Vlatadōn 1987 (Thessaloniki, 1989), 165–211
C. Adsuara: 'The Kalophonic Sticherarion Sinai gr. 1251: Introduction and Indices', Cahiers de l'Institut du Moyen-Age grec et latin, no.65 (1995), 15–58

CHRISTIAN TROELSGÅRD

Korro. See KORA.

Korte, Karl (Richard) (b Ossining, NY, 25 Aug 1928). American composer. He studied at the Juilliard School (BS 1952, MS 1956) with Copland, Luening, Mennin, Persichetti and Petrassi. After teaching at Arizona State University (1963–4) and at SUNY, Binghamton (1964–70), he was appointed professor of music at the University of Texas, Austin (1971–97). His awards include two Guggenheim Fellowships (1960, 1970), the Gershwin Memorial Award (1957), the gold medal in the 1969 Queen Elisabeth International Competition, Belgium, and two NEA grants (1975, 1978). His Concerto for Piano and Winds was commissioned for the centennial of the Music Teachers National Association (1976).

A prolific composer, Korte has written in virtually every genre of music except opera, and has explored the major compositional techniques of the 20th century including serialism, neotonality, electronic music and computer-generated music. In the Piano Trio (1977, rev. 1982) and subsequent works, he has sought ways of achieving a simpler style in a basically tonal language. Several of his works have been recorded.

WORKS

Orch: Concertato on a Choral Theme, 1955; For a Young Audience, 1959; Sym. no.2, 1961; Southwest, 1963; Sym. no.3, 1968

Band: Ceremonial Prelude and Passacaglia, 1962; Nocturne and March, 1962; Prairie Song, tpt, band, 1963; Gestures, wind ens, perc, pf, amp db, 1970; I think you would have understood, tpt, band, tape, 1971; Fibers, 1977; Texarkana, 1991

Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt no.2, 1966; Matrix, wind qnt, sax, perc, pf, 1968; Remembrances, fl, tape, 1971; Conc., pf, wind, 1977; Pf Trio, 1977, rev. 1982; Concertino, b trbn, wind, perc, 1981; Double Conc., fl, db, tape, 1983; Te Maori, vc, 1987; Evocation and Dance, b trbn, tape, 1988; other works, incl. pf pieces

Vocal and choral: 4 Blake Songs, female vv, pf, 1961; Mass for Youth, SSA, orch, 1963; Aspects of Love (Bible: Song of Solomon, R.L. Stevenson, R.W. Emerson, Li Po, L. Hunt, W. Blake), SATB, 1968; May the Sun Bless us (R. Tagore), male vv, brass, perc, 1968; Ps xiii, SATB, tape, 1970; Pale is this Good Prince (orat, Egyptian), solo and choral vv, 2 pf, 4 perc, 1973; Songs of Wen I-to, high v, pf, 1973; Of Time and Season (various texts), solo vv, SATB, pf, mar, 1975; The Whistling Wind (Wang Xiaoni), Mez, tape, 1982; 5 New Zealand Songs, v, pf, 1989; Christmas music, other choral works

Tape: Hill Country Birds, tape, slides, 1982

Principal publishers: Elkan-Vogel, Galaxy, E.C. Schirmer, Seesaw, Presser

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R.E. Faust: 'Composer Profile: Karl Korte', National Association of College Wind and Percussion Instructors Journal, xxxix/4 (1991), 45–7

JEROME ROSEN/MICHAEL MECKNA

Korte, Werner (b Münster, 29 May 1906; d Münster, 26 Nov 1982). German musicologist. He studied mathematics, natural sciences and musicology at the universities of Freiburg and Münster (1924–6) and musicology, art history and philosophy at the University of Berlin (1926–8), where he took the doctorate under Johannes Wolf in 1928 with a dissertation on harmony in the early 15th century. He then became an assistant lecturer in the musicology department of Heidelberg University (1928–31) under Besseler. In 1932 he completed his Habilitation in musicology at the University of Münster with a study of early 15th-century Italian music; in the same year he succeeded Fellerer as director of the musicology department at the University of Münster. In 1937 he was appointed reader, and, despite a negative judgment in the denazification proceedings, was promoted to professor in 1946. He had previously occupied briefly the chairs of musicology at the universities of Göttingen and Marburg.

Several of Korte's publications concern the function of musicology and educational and cultural problems in music. In his numerous Nazi-era commentaries on the state of musicology, he used gratuitous attacks on Jews and other persecuted colleagues to argue his point of view. In his studies on Bruckner, Brahms and Stamitz, he developed a method of structural analysis which attempted, by systematic reference to symbols, to pinpoint the work of art scientifically as a unique phenomenological document.

WRITINGS

Die Harmonik des frühen 15. Jahrhunderts in ihrem Zusammenhang mit der Formtechnik (diss., U. of Berlin, 1928; Münster, 1929)

Deutsche Musikerziehung in Vergangenheit und Gegenwart (Danzig, 1932)

Studien zur Geschichte der Musik in Italien im ersten Viertel des 15. Jahrhunderts (Habilitationsschrift, U. of Münster, 1932; Kassel, 1933)

'Aufgabe der Musikwissenschaft', Die Musik, xxvii (1934–5), 338–44

Johann Sebastian Bach (Berlin, 1935)

'Bildungs- und Ausbildungsfragen der Musik', Die Musik, xxviii (1935–6), 348–56

Ludwig van Beethoven (Berlin, 1936)

Robert Schumann (Potsdam, 1937)

'Die Grundlagenkrisis der deutschen Musikwissenschaft', Die Musik, xxx (1938), 668–74

Musik und Weltbild (Leipzig, 1940)

'Darstellung eines Satzes von Johann Stamitz', Festschrift Karl Gustav Fellerer, ed. H. Hüschen (Regensburg, 1962/R), 282–92

Bruckner und Brahms: die spätromantische Lösung der autonomen Konzeption (Tutzing, 1963)

'Struktur und Modell als Information in der Musikwissenschaft', AMw, xxi (1964), 1–22

De musica: Monolog über die heutige Situation der Musik (Tutzing, 1966)

'Johann Sebastian Bach (1940)', Johann Sebastian Bach, ed. W. Blankenburg (Darmstadt, 1970), 23–42

Articles on Bach, Bruckner, Mozart and Schütz in Nationalsozialistische Monatshefte (1935–41)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K.W. Niemöller: 'Zum Gedenken an Werner Korte', Mf, xxxvi (1983), 65–6

HANS HEINRICH EGGEBRECHT/PAMELA M. POTTER

Kortekangas, Olli (Paavo Antero) (b Turku, 16 Jan 1955). Finnish composer. He studied composition with Rautavaara and Hämeenniemi at the Sibelius Academy in Helsinki (1974–81) and with Schnebel in West Berlin (1981–2). In 1977 he was one of the founding members of the Ears Open society, set up in order to study, perform and promote contemporary music. He has had a special interest in music education: following periods of teaching at various schools (e.g. the National Theatre Academy, the Sibelius Academy and the Espoo Music School), he has been involved in several educational projects with children and young adults.

In his early works Kortekangas tended to mock outdated conventions of music and musical life, and set out to expand musical boundaries by combining music with the visual arts, theatre, movement, spoken word and electronics. Some of his pivotal works are written for electronic media, which gives him the freedom of multi-dimensional expression. His opera Grand Hotel (1985) was awarded the City of Salzburg Television Opera Prize in 1989 and his radiophonic composition Memoria (1989) the Gian Franco Zaffrani Prize at the 1989 Prix Italia. The latter work grew out of a collaboration with the celebrated Tapiola Choir, as did others of his most important works, MAA (1985), A (1988) and Kajo (1996). The texts of his vocal works range from meaningless vowels (Lumen valo, 1984) to religious and philosophical poetry (Verbum, 1992; Joonan kirja, 1995) and his vocal techniques are no less varied, encompassing everything from speech and singing to Sprechgesang and whispers. His instrumental music includes works of dramatic power (Ökologie 2: Konzert, 1987) on the one hand and of innate lyricism (Arabesken der Nacht, 1995) on the other.

WORKS

Operas: Short Story (1, Kortekangas), 1980; Grand Hotel (1, A. Melleri), 1985; Joonan kirja [The Book of Joonah] (1, J.-P. Hotinen), 1995

Choral unacc.: Vihreä madonna [The Green Madonna] (H. Juvonen), SATB, 1975; Tuutulaulu [Lullaby] (Kanteletar), SSAA, 1980; Metamatiikkaa (L. Nummi), SSAA, obbl. insts, 1983; Madrigaali (Finnish folk poem), SSAA, 1984; Kolme Waltarin tekstiä [3 Texts by Waltari], SATB, 1985; Verbum (Bible, D.H. Lawrence), double SATB, 1987; Matkalla [On the Road] (5 Jap. haiku by Bashō, trans. K. Nieminen), TTBB, 1992; Sun in Me (Lawrence), TTBB, 1992; Kolme laulua [3 Songs] (A. Hellaakoski), TTBB, 1994; Luna

(Kortekangas), SSAA, 1994; 3 Fiord Sketches (I Ching), SSAA, 1994; 3 Romances (Lawrence), SATB, 1995; Lyyrinen sarja [Lyric Suite] (Nieminen), SATB, 1997; Movement Echoing, SATB, 1997

Choral with insts: Lumen valo [The Glow of Snow] (Kortekangas), TTBB, perc, 1984; MAA [Earth], SSAA (children), 1985; A, SSAA, perc, elec, 1988; Kuu ja aurinko [Sun and Moon] (L. Pappila, Bashō, trans. Nieminen), SSAA (children), orch, 1992; Vindöga [Wind's Eye] (J. Bargum), SSAA, fl, perc, str qt, 1994; Kigi no uta [Song of Trees] (H. Kijima, S. Paulaharju, Jap., Finnish, Eng.), SSAA, perc, 1995, collab. M. Mamiya; Kajo [Shimmer] (M. Walkari, Bashō trans. Nieminen, trad. Latin), double SSAA (children), 5 solo male vv, elec, orch, 1996

Other vocal: Kolme varhaista laulua [3 Early Songs] (H. Juvonen), 1v, pf, 1975, rev. 1980; Memoarer [Memoirs] (N. Ferlin, Kortekangas), 1v, pf, 1982; Paraabeli [Parable] (Finnish folk poem), 5 solo male vv, 1983; Istuin meren rannalla [I was Sitting by the Sea] (P. Saarikoski), 1v, 1987; Amores (Lawrence), Mez, orch, 1989; Sanat [The Words] (O. Arvola, R. Rinne, Bible), S, chbr orch, 1992; Lyhyesti [In Short], S, Bar, pf, 1993; Messu [Mass], S, org, 1993; Kolme invokaatiota [3 Invocations] (Bashō, trad.), 5 solo male vv, 1996; Maa johon tahdot [The Land You Long for] (T.K. Mukka), spkr, fl, ob, cl, bn, str, 1996; Syvä ilo [Profound Joy] (A. Hellaakoski, Nieminen, Nummi), 1v, pf, 1997

Orch: Ökologie 1: Vorspiel, 1983; Ökologie 2: Konzert, 1987; Alba, cl, pf, vc, orch, 1988; Fanfare, 1991; Konzertstück, cl, vc, orch, 1993; Mukka-sarja [Mukka Suite], fl, ob, cl, bn, str, 1996; Org Conc., 1997; Ark, 1998

Other inst: Threnody, hn, pf, 1977; Cereal Sweet, pf 4 hands, 1979; Sonata per organo, 1979; Sehr schnell, vn, 1984; Koraali 'Punavuoren nuottikirjasta' [Chorale from the Punavuori Note Book], hmn, 1986; Emotion, variable ens, elecs, 1988; Iscrizione, cl, vc, 1990; Omaggio à M.C. Escher, a fl, gui, 1990; Mi, vn, pf, 1991; Valoa ja varjoa [Light and Shadow], 2 vn, pf, 1994; Arabesken der Nacht, gui, cl, hn, perc, vn, va, vc, db, 1995; La banda, gui ens, 1996; Postludium, org, 1996; Rondino, vn, vc, pf, 1997

Radiophonic: Memoria (Lawrence, Nummi, H. Tikkanen, Kortekangas), 1989; Kaivaja [The Digger] (K. Hotakainen), 1994

Principal publishers: Edition Love, Fazer

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Heiniö: Aikamme musiikki [Contemporary music], Suomen musiikin historia [The history of Finnish music], iv (Helsinki, 1995)

K. Korhonen: Finnish Composers since the 1960s (Jyväskylä, 1995)

A. and H.-C. Fantapié, eds.: La musique finlandaise: des origines à nos jours, Boréales, lxx–lxxiii (1997)

ILKKA ORAMO

Kortes [Cortes] Sergey Al'bertovich (b San Antonio, Chile, 18 Feb 1935). Belarusian composer. The son of a Latin-American father and an emigré Russian mother, he was raised by his mother's family in Buenos Aires where he began to study music. He moved to Minsk in 1955, graduated in 1962 from the National Conservatory where he studied with Bahatïrow, and then worked as a music director in various theatres, in the Belarus film studio (1981–7), and later a manager and artistic director in the National Academic Opera Theatre (1991 onwards). He has been awarded the titles Honoured Art Worker of the Belarusian SSR and People's Artist of the Belarus. Opera – and especially tragi-comedy – occupies a central place in his output; he attempts to render unusual or alien various elements of the genre without negating what he considers the essence of the tradition, namely compassion and catharsis. His expressive means are broad and range stylistically from diatonicism and polytonality to aleatory and serial techniques. Structurally, he frequently makes use of simple couplet forms and ostinati (especially in choral episodes whose texture often reveals the influence of Orff), and is inclined to doubling in his part-writing. His operas are conceived on a grand scale and proceed by means of continuous symphonic development; the innate sense of theatre in his musical thinking is also apparent in his oratorios and instrumental works.

WORKS

Ops: Dzhordano Bruno [Giordano Bruno] (V. Khalip), 1973, Minsk, 1977; Matushka Kurazh [Mother Courage] (Khalip and S. Shteyn, after B. Brecht), 1980, Kaunas, Lithuania, 1982; Vizit damï [Visit of a Lady] (Khalip, after F. Dürrenmatt), 1990, Minsk, 1995

Ballet: Posledhiy inka [The Last Inca] (G. Errera, P. Reyman), 1987, Havana, 1990

Choral: Pepel [Ash], vocal-sym. poem, chorus, orch, 1966; Pamyatsi paeta [In Memory of a Poet] (orat, Ya. Kupala), 1972; Bay prïdumaw [Bay's Inventions] (orat, R. Borodulin), boys' chorus, orch, 1975

Orch: Pf Conc. 'Kaprichchos', 1969; Muzïka dlya strunnïkh [Music for Strings], 1970

Chbr and solo inst: Suite, cimb, pf, 1966; Kontrastï [Contrasts], suite, pf, 1970; Skazka [Fairy Tale], suite, pf, 1972; Str Qt, 1995

Song cycles (1v, pf) after F. García Lorca, S. Marshak, W. Shakespeare, A. Vertinsky

Incid music

Principal publishers: Sovetskiy Kompozitor, Muzïka

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Auerbakh: Belorusskiye kompozitorï: Ye. Glebov, S. Kortes, D. Smol'sky, I. Luchenok (Moscow, 1978), 109–58

N. Mikhaylovskaya: 'Po dolgu sovesti . . .' [By duty of conscience], SovM (1978), no.6, pp.51–7

Ye. Solomakha: 'V soglasii s Brekhtom, v polemike s nim' [Agreeing with Brecht, in a polemic with him], SovM (1984), no.4, pp.57–61

M. Galushko: 'Noviy Vizit nestraoy damï' [New visit of the young lady], MAk (1996), no.3–4, pp.80–83

YELENA SOLOMAKHA

Kortholt [Kort Instrument, Kurz Pfeiff] (from Ger. kurzes Holz: 'short woodwind'). A generic term, referring to double-reed instruments from the 16th and 17th centuries with bores that double back on themselves (as in bassoons). The pitch of such instruments is thus deeper than their length would suggest. Specifically the word 'Kortholt' was applied to four kinds of instrument: a dulcian or early BASSOON (especially in England, according to Praetorius (2/1619), where the word 'curtal', a corruption of Kortholt, was used); a RACKET, according to various late 16th- and early 17th-century inventories cited by Kinsky and Boydell; a SORDUN, or 'courtaut' as Mersenne (1636–7) called a similar instrument; and a wind-cap sordun.

The instrument Praetorius illustrates as a Kortholt is of the last type; it has a wind cap over a double reed and an apparently cylindrical bore, doubled back on itself within a single wooden column (see illustration). The bore issues through a small lateral hole at the back below the wind cap. The instrument has 16 soundholes in all: the tips of all the fingers and the thumbs cover ten holes, and the joints of the index fingers cover two more; the latter and the little-finger holes are duplicated to allow for left- and right-handed playing (the four holes not in use are presumably stopped with wax). There are two closed keys which extend the range upwards. The range is shown in the illustration as C–b♭, though elsewhere Praetorius writes that it is a full two octaves, B♭′–b♭. In dealing with most wind instruments Praetorius both illustrated them and described them in the text; this is not the case with the Kortholt, which is only mentioned in passing (sometimes by the name 'Kort Instrument'), though its range is given with those of the sorduns.

Kortholt of the wind-cap sordun type: detail of woodcut from Praetorius's 'Syntagma musicum' (2/1619–20), ii, pl.xii

Describing the 'courtaut', which Mersenne characterized as an open-reed sordun, Trichet (see Lesure, 1955) wrote that 'one covers the reed with a cap, and [the instrument] is used as a bass in consort with musettes'; according to Trichet, therefore, the courtaut is effectively the same as Praetorius's 'Kortholt'. (See OBOE, §I and WIND-CAP INSTRUMENTS.)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Praetorius: Syntagma musicum, ii (Wolfenbüttel, 1618, 2/1619/R; Eng. trans., 1986, 2/1991) [incl. Theatrum instrumentorum (Wolfenbüttel, 1620/R) as appx]

M. Mersenne: Harmonie universelle (Paris, 1636–7/R; Eng. trans. of the bks on insts, 1957)

G. Kinsky: 'Doppelrohrblatt-Instrumente mit Windkapsel', AMw, vii (1925), 253–96

F. Lesure: 'Le Traité des instruments de musique de Pierre Trichet', AnnM, iii (1955), 283–387; iv (1956), 175–253; edn pubd separately (Neuilly-sur-Seine, 1957)

H. Moeck and H. Mönkemeyer: Zur Geschichte der Kortinstrumente (Celle, 1973)

B.R. Boydell: The Crumhorn and Other Renaissance Windcap Instruments (Buren, 1982)

HOWARD MAYER BROWN, BARRA R. BOYDELL

Kortkamp, Johann (b ?Kiel, 1643; d Hamburg, 20 May 1721). German organist and writer, son of Jakob Kortkamp. He studied under Weckmann from 1655 until about 1661, and later in the 1660s he served for a short time as organist at the Jakobikirche, Hamburg, under Christoph Bernhard. His main posts – though they were not important ones – were as organist at two other Hamburg churches, the Maria-Magdalena Kloster (1669–1721) and St Gertrud (1676–1721). His only known composition is a jigg. He also arranged for organ a Magnificat secundi toni by Weckmann and wrote the alto and tenor parts of a cantata by Bernhard. His importance lies in his manuscript chronicle of north German music from 1291 to about 1718, written between 1702 and 1718 (it is now in D-Ha). This gives invaluable accounts of north German organs and their sounds, as well as information about the lives and works of organists, clergy and Kantors, notably in the 16th and 17th centuries. The information he gave on the men whom he and his father knew personally, such as Hieronymus and Jacob Praetorius, Weckmann and Bernhard, is particularly important.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (M. Reimann)

L. Krüger: 'Johann Kortkamps Organistenchronik: eine Quelle zur hamburgischen Musikgeschichte des 17. Jahrhunderts', Zeitschrift des Vereins für hamburgische Geschichte, xxxiii (1933), 188–213

JOHN H. BARON

Koruphaios (Gk.). Leader of the chorus in ancient Greek drama. See TRAGŌIDIA.

Korzyński, Andrzej (b Warsaw, 2 March 1940). Polish composer. He studied composition (with Kazimierz Sikorski), music theory and conducting at the State Higher School of Music, Warsaw. In 1964, after completing his studies, he formed the ensemble Ricercar 64, and later joined the staff of Polish Radio. During the 1960s and 70s he was one of the most popular composers of music for radio and television, and worked with the leading musicians in this field. He made his début as a film composer in 1967 with two television films by Andrzej Żuławski: Pavoncello and Pieśń triumfującej miłości ('Song of Triumphant Love'). In 1969 he began a long association with the celebrated director Andrzej Wajda, for whom he wrote the music for some of the director's most famous films, including Wszystko na sprzedaż ('Everything for Sale'), Brzezina ('The Birch Wood'), Człowiek z marmuru ('Man of Marble') and Człowiek z Żelaza ('Man of Iron'). During the 1980s Korzyński enjoyed great popular success with his songs for the children's film Akademia Pana Kleksa ('The School of Mr Ink-Blot').

Korzyński's music combines elements of pop, jazz, rock and classical styles. Among its most positive attributes are the vivid quality with which it stands in relief, its expressive motifs based on simple harmony, clear application of rhythm, and contemporary arrangements. The composer pays great attention to quality of sound, and combines with great success the timbre of acoustic instruments – especially strings – with electronic sounds. He was one of the first composers in Poland to make full and artistic use of electronic instruments for film and the entertainment media.

WORKS
(selected list)

Film scores: Le Grabuge (dir. E. Lunz), 1969; Polowanie na muchy [Hunting for Flies] (dir. A. Wajda), 1969; Wszystko na sprzedaż [Everything for Sale] (dir. Wajda), 1969; Brzezina [The Birch Woods] (dir. Wajda), 1970; Sette donne a testa (dir. S. Nievo-Cavallina), 1970; Diabeł [The Devil] (dir. A. Żuławski), 1972; Trzecia część nocy [The Third Part of the Night] (dir. Żuławski), 1972; Człowiek z marmuru [Man of Marble] (dir. Wajda), 1976; Na srebrnym globie [On a Silver Globe] (dir. Żuławski), 1977–86; Possession (dir. Żuławski), 1979; Człowiek z żelaza [Man of Iron] (dir. Wajda), 1981; Akademia Pana Kleksa [The School of Mr Ink-Blot] (dir. K. Gradowski), 1984; Pan Kleks w kosmosie [Mr Ink-Blot in the Cosmos] (dir. Gradowski), 1988; Panna Nikt [Miss Nobody] (dir. Wajda), 1995; Szamanka [The Shaman] (dir. Żuławski), 1996; *c*160 other film scores incl. TV

Principal recording companies: Koch, Sound-Pol

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EMuz (B. Chmura)

R. Waschko: 'Korzyński, Andrzej', Przewodnik Iskier: Muzyka Jazzowa I Rozrywkowa [The Iskier guide to jazz and media music] (Warsaw, 1970)

H.D. Erlinger and C. Winter: Erzählen im Kinderfernsehen: das Beispiel 'Janna' (diss., U. of Heidelberg, 1991)

Encyklopedia Polskiej Muzyki Rockowej, Rock and Roll, 1959–1973 (Kraków, 1995), esp. 134–5, 188–9

BOGDAN CHMURA

Kos, Božidar (b Novo Mesto, 3 May 1934). Slovenian composer, active in Australia. He studied the cello, music theory and mechanical engineering in Slovenia and was active as a jazz player and arranger throughout Europe before moving to Australia in 1965. Kos studied composition with Richard Meale at the University of Adelaide

(MA 1975). After teaching at Torrens College of Advanced Education (1975) and the University of Adelaide (1976) he became fellow in composition at the University of Adelaide (1978–83) before moving to the Sydney Conservatorium in 1984, where he became chair of the composition unit in 1991. He was awarded a doctorate by the University of Sydney in 1998. His honours include three Sounds Australian National Music Critics' Awards for his Violin Concerto (1986)

Taking the music of Boulez as a seminal influence, Kos's style can be seen as an attempt to incorporate the textural and harmonic discipline of the European avant garde within a harmonic context derived from jazz (Crosswinds, 1993), folk (Violin Concerto) and the higher partials of the harmonic series. After early work in electronics, a series of ensemble pieces in the 1980s, notably the String Quartet (1982), Catena I–II (1985–7), Quasar (1987) and Ludus ex nominum (1989), established a style of carefully crafted, harmonically sensitive complexity. The 1990s saw the same craft increasingly applied to orchestral writing in such works as Aurora Australis (1997).

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Meditations, 2 orch, 1974; Metamorphosis, 1978; Sinfonietta, str, 1983; Vn Conc., 1986; Gui Conc., 1992; Crosswinds, a sax, jazz trio, orch, 1993; Aurora Australis, 1997

Chbr and solo inst: Modulations, fl, 2 perc, synth, 1974; Reflections, pf, 1974; Qt, fl, va, pf, perc, 1980; Pf Sonata, 1981; 3 Movts, fl, trbn, pf, perc, 1982; Str Qt, 1982; Kolo, pf, 1984; Catena I, fl, cl, vn, vc, mar, pf, 1985; Catena II, fl + pic, cl, vn, va, vc, pf, 1987; Quasar, 4 perc, 1987; Spectrum, b cl, mar, tape, 1988; Ludus ex nominum, fl, ob + eng hn, trbn, pf, perc, 1989; Evocations, vc, 1994

PETER McCALLUM

Kos, Koraljka (b Zagreb, 12 May 1934). Croatian musicologist. She took the diploma in musicology at the Zagreb Academy of Music with Josip Andreis (1957) and undertook further studies at Edinburgh University with H.F. Redlich and Hans Gál (1957–8), at Göttingen with Wolfgang Boetticher and at Heidelberg with Reinhold Hammerstein (1973–4). She took the PhD at Ljubljana University with Dragotin Cvetko in 1967 with a dissertation on Croatian medieval iconographical sources. She was librarian (from 1967), assistant professor (from 1970) and professor (1976–94) at the Zagreb Academy of Music and director of the Institute for the History of Croatian Music at the Croatian Academy of Sciences and Arts (1985–93). She was editor-in-chief of Arti musices (1980–86, 1989–90).

Kos has published extensively on all aspects and periods of Croatian music history and has produced pioneering studies of Croatian musical iconography, the history of Croatian song, Renaissance music and early 20th-century Croatian music. Through her teaching and writing, she gave Croatian musicology its direction throughout the 1970s and 80s.

WRITINGS

Muzički instrumenti u srednjovjekovnoj likovnoj umjetnosti Hrvatske (diss., U. of Ljubljana, 1967); repr., with Eng. summary, in Rad JAZU, no.351 (1969), 167–270; Ger. trans., 1972, as Musikinstrumente im mittelalterlichen Kroatien: Beitrag zur allgemeinen Organographie der Musikinstrumente und zur mittelalterlichen Musikgeschichte

'Luka Sorkočević i njegov doprinos pretklasičnoj instrumentalnoj muzici' [Sorkočević and his contribution to pre-Classical instrumental music], Arti musices, v (1974), 67–95 [with Eng. summary]

'Appariran per me le stell' in cielo von O. di Lasso und J. Skjavetić (Schiavetto): stilkritischer Vergleich', MZ, ix (1975), 17–28

'Geschichte, Stand und Perspektiven der Forschungen zur mittelalterlichen Kirchenmusik in Kroatien', IRASM, vi (1975), 289–306

'Začeci nove hrvatske muzike: poticaj za revalorizaciju stvaralaštva zapostavljene generacije hrvatskih skladatelja' [The beginnings of modern Croatian music: an attempt to evaluate the work of a neglected generation of Croatian composers], Arti musices, vii (1976), 25–39; repr., with Eng. summary, in Arti musices, xxv (1994), 201–14

'Madrigali Andrije Patricija i Julija Skjavetića u svom vremenu: prilog analizi njihova stila' [The madrigals of Andrea Patricio and Giulio Schiavetto in their time: a stylistic analysis], Rad JAZU, no.377 (1978), 277–314

Dora Pejačević (Zagreb, 1982; Ger. trans., 1987)

'Die Grazer Jahre des Ferdo Wiesner-Livadić (1816–1822)', Grazer musikwissenschaftliche Arbeiten, v (1983), 73–95

'Dragan Plamenac, istraživač i objavljivač rane glazbe' [Dragan Plamenac, researcher and editor of early music], Arti musices, xvii (1986), 159–73 [summaries in Eng., Ger.]

'Osten und Westen in der Feld- und Militärmusik an der türkischen Grenze', Imago musicae, v (1988), 109–27

'Vertonungen lateinischer Texte von Schütz und Lukačić: vergleichende analyse/Schützove i Lukačićeve skladbe na latinske tekstove: usporedbena analiza', The Musical Baroque: Zagreb 1989, 45–62, 197–213

'Izražajni rasponi vokalne lirike Božidara Kunca' [Expressive range in Božidar Kunc's vocal works], Arti musices, xxi (1990), 81–98

'Die angeblichen Zitate von Volksmusik in Werken der Wiener Klassiker', GfMKB: Baden, nr Vienna, 1991, 225–40 with A. Šojat and V. Zagorac: Pavlinski zbornik 1644 [Pauline anthology] (Zagreb, 1991)

'Aspekte des Volksmusizierens in der bildenden Kunst des 19. Jahrhunderts', IRASM, xxiii (1992), 153–69

'Leopold Ebners Kirchenmusik: einleitende Betrachtungen', Off-Mozart: glazbena kultura i 'mali majstori' srednje Europe 1750.–1820.: Zagreb 1992, 129–37

'Das Volksmusikinstrument Gusle in der bildenden Kunst des 19. Jahrhunderts: zum Wandel eines ikonographischen Motivs', Glazba, ideje i društvo: svečani zbornik za Ivana Supičića/Music, Ideas and Society: Essays in Honour of Ivan Supičić, ed. S. Tuksar (Zagreb, 1993), 161–72; Eng. trans. in RIdIM/RCMI Newsletter, xx/2 (1995), 58–63

EDITIONS

Ivan Zajc: Popijevke [Solo songs], Izabrana djela Ivana Zajca, i (Zagreb, 1982)

Luka Sorkočević: Two Symphonies, The Symphony 1720–1840, ser. F, viii (New York, 1984)

ZDRAVKO BLAŽEKOVIĆ

Kósa, György (b Budapest, 24 April 1897; d Budapest, 16 Aug 1984). Hungarian composer and pianist. At the age of ten he became a pupil of Bartók, and he studied composition with Kodály and Herzfeld at the Budapest Academy of Music (1908–12); he also studied the piano at the academy (1908–15) and with Dohnányi (1915–16). In 1916–17 he was co-répétiteur at the Royal Hungarian Opera House in Budapest, where he took part in the first performance of Bartók's The Wooden Prince. He undertook concert tours in Europe and North Africa, and in 1920–21 was a theatre conductor in Tripoli. He then settled in Budapest and from 1927 was professor of piano at the academy. In the 1920s, in conjunction with Kadosa and others, he founded the Society of Modern Hungarian Musicians. He received the Erkel Prize (1955), and was later created Merited Artist (1972) and Honoured Artist (1972) of the Hungarian People's Republic.

In outlook, Kósa showed marked affinities with Mahler, combining complexity with an almost childlike naivety. Man's greatest problems stand at the centre of his work, and this preoccupation is reflected in the sub-titles of his symphonies (e.g. 'Man and the Universe', 'Salvation in Christ'). Existence, fate and man's beliefs, and beauty and inspiration drawn from the widest possible cultural background, embracing Greek and Chinese, Old French and Scandinavian civilizations, coloured his thought. Stylistically his music is influenced neither by folk music nor by serialism. The striving gestures of a believing soul in conflict with the world characterize his type of expressionism, in which the eruptive statement of his experience appears more important than the form that the statement takes.

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE

Ops: A király palástja [The King's Cloak] (3, M. Kósa, after H.C. Andersen), 1927; Az két lovagok [Two Knights] (comic op, 3, A. Keleti), 1934; Cenodoxus (mystery op, 3, Kósa, after J.J. Biedermann, J. Gregor), 1942; Anselmus diák [Student Anselmus] (3, G. Devecseri, after E.T.A. Hoffmann: Der goldne Topf), 1945; A méhek [The Bees] (1, R. Meller), 1946; Tartuffe (comic op, 3, F. Jankovich and G. Kósa, after Molière), 1951; Pázmán lovag [Knight Pázmán] (comic op, L. Hollós-Korvin), 1962–3; Kocsonya Mihály házassága [The Marriage of Mihály Kocsonya] (comic op, after Hung. 18th century), 1971; Kiálts, város [Cry, City!] (op, 3, M. Szabó), 1980–81

Ballets and pantomimes: Fehér Pierrot [White Pierrot] (ballet, L. Fodor), 1916; Phaedra (ballet, 1, V. Dienes), 1918; Mese a királykisasszonyról [A Tale of a Princess] (pantomime, 1, M. Gaál), 1919; Laterna magica (pantomime, 1, A. Szederkényi), 1922; Árva Józsi három csodája [The 3 Miracles of Józsi Árva] (pantomime, 1, J. Mohácsi, L. Márkus), 1930; Dávid király [King David] (ballet, 1, G. Kósa, after M. Rabinovszky), 1937; Ének az örök bánatról [Song of Everlasting Sorrow] (ballet, Bai Juyi), 1955

VOCAL

Orats: Jonah, 1931; Easter Orat, 1932; Saulus, 1935; Joseph (chbr orat), 1939; Elijah (chbr orat), 1940; Christus (chbr orat), 1943; Hajnóczy (Devecseri), 1954; Villon, 1961

Cants.: Laodomeia (M. Babits), 1925; Job, 1933; Küldetés [Mission], 1948; Perlekedő prófécia [A Quarrelling Prophecy] (Bible: Habbakuk), 1953; Szól az úr [The Lord is Saying], 1957; Amor sanctus (medieval Lat.), 1958; Báránybka [Lambkin], 1964; 2 Cants. (J. Pilinszky), 1964; Balázsolás [St Blaise Play] (Babits), 1967; Cantata humana (J. Pannonius), 1967; Orpheus, Eurydike, Hermes (R.M. Rilke), 1967; Őszikék [Autumn Songs] (J. Arany), 1970; Johannes (C. Morgenstern), 1972; Szálkák [Splints] (Pilinszky), 1972; 2 Cants. (T.S. Eliot), 1973–4; Cant. (F. Karinthy), 1974; Bikasirató [Dirge for a Bull] (Devecseri), 1975; Kakasszó [Crowing of the Cock] (I. Vas), 1975; Todesfuge (P. Celan), 1976; Szólítlak hattyú [I call you, Swan] (L. Nagy), 1978

Mystery: Kincses Ádám halála [The Death of Ádám Kincses] (B. Szabolcsi), 1923

Works to liturgical texts: Dies irae, 1937; 2 masses, 1946, 1949; De profundis, 1947; Requiem, 1948; Stabat mater, 1949; Te Deum, 1949; Biblikus mise [Biblical Mass], 1951; Requiem, 1966

Songs: *c*500 (incl. E. Ady, L. Aragon, Arany, Babits, Csokonai Vitéz, R. Dehmel, Devecseri, St George, G. Hernádi, A. József, G. Juhász, F. Molnár, Morgenstern, S. Petőfi, Petrarch, Rilke, A. Silesius, T. Storm, Szilágyi, R. Tagore, Á. Tóth, E. Tóth, P. Verlaine, S. Weöres, Z. Zelk)

INSTRUMENTAL

9 syms.: 1922, 1930, 1933, 1934, 1937, 1947, 1957, 1959, 1969

Other orch: Suite, 1915; 6 Pieces, 1919; Suite (három irónikus portré) [3 ironic portraits], 1925; Fantázia három magyar népdalra [Fantasy on 3 Folksongs], 1948; Táncszvit [Dance Suite], 1951; Conc., pf, vn, cymbals, perc, 1973; Homálybann [In Darkness], vc, orch, 1977

8 str qts: 1920, 1929, 1932, 1935, 1956, 1960, 1963, 1965

Other chbr: Chbr Music, 17 insts, 1928; Duo, vn, db, 1928; 6 Portré [6 Portraits], 6 hn, hp, 1933; Qnt, fl, cl, bn, hn, hp, 1938; Trio, fl, va, vc, 1946; Wind Qnt, 1960; Rondo, wind qnt, 1961; Pf Trio, 1962; Duo, vn, vc, 1964; Sonata, vc, pf, 1965; 6 Intermezzó, str trio, 1969; 6 Miniatures, va, hp, 1969; Dialogus, b tuba, mar, 1975

Pf: Fantasy, 1917; 13 Bagatelles, 1918; Jutka, 12 pieces, 1928; Duo, 2 pf; Pf Sonata, 1941; Pf Sonata [no.2], 1947; Kis cipőben [Little Shoe], 1953; Jutka-ballada, 1946; Hommage à Béla Bartók, 1947; 2 darab [2 Pieces], 1955; Pf Sonata [no.3], 1956; Divertimento, 1960; Öt kis darab [5 Little Pieces], 1967

Principal publishers: Editio Musica, Universal

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Pollatschek: 'Georg Kósa', Der Auftakt, v (1925), 208–9
L. Fábián: 'Georg Kósa', Musikblätter des Anbruch, viii (1926), 51–4
M. Pándi: Kósa György (Budapest, 1966) [incl. list of works]
A. Dalos: Kósa György (Budapest, 1998) [incl. list of works]

FERENC BÓNIS (work-list with ANNA DALOS)

Koscheluch, Johann. See KOZELUCH, JOHANN ANTONIN.

Koschovitz, Joseph. See KOSSOVITS, JÓZSEF.

Köselitz, Johann Heinrich. See GAST, PETER.

Kosenko, Viktor Stepanovich (b St Petersburg, 12/24 Nov 1896; d Kiev, 3 Oct 1938). Ukrainian composer and pianist. In 1918 he graduated from the St Petersburg Conservatory where he studied with Nikolay Sokolov (composition) and Irina Miklashevskaya (piano). In the period 1918–28 he lived in Zhitomir, teaching at the music school; from 1929 he lived in Kiev, teaching at the Lysenko Music Institute (1929–34) and at the conservatory (1934–8), where he ran the classes in piano, chamber music and analysis. He performed as a soloist and as an ensemble player; he was awarded the order of the Workers' Red Banner (1938). His works are Romantic in style and rely in particular on the Russian traditions of Tchaikovsky, Rachmaninoff and Skryabin.

Music schools in Zhitomir and Kiev (which he helped to set up) bear his name; a Kosenko stipend is awarded to the best students of the Zhitomir school and the Kiev conservatory. The house in Kiev where Kosenko lived has become a memorial museum.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Vn Conc., 1919; Geroicheskaya uvertyura [Heroic ov.], 1932; Moldavskaya poėma [Moldavian Poem], 1937; Pf Conc., 1937

Chbr and solo inst: Sonata, vc, pf, 1923; Klassicheskoye trio [Classical Trio], vn, vc, pf, 1927; Str Qt, 1930; Sonata, vn, pf, 1928; Sonata, va, pf, 1928; 3 pf sonatas, almost 100 pf pieces, inc. 11 ėtyudov v forme starinnïkh tantsov [11 Studies in the Form of Old Dances], 24 detskiye p'yesï [24 Pieces for Children]

Vocal: *c*40 romances, choruses, songs for children, folksong arrs., incid music

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Dovzhenko: V.S. Kosenko (Kiev, 1951)
P. Stetsyuk: Viktor Kosenko (Kiev, 1974)
V.S. Kosenko: spogady. Lysty [Reminiscences. Letters] (Kiev, 1975)
O. Oliynik: Fortepianna tvorchist' V.S. Kosenko [The piano works of V.S. Kosenko] (Kiev, 1977)
O. Oliynik: V. Kosenko (Kiev, 1989)

YELENA ZIN'KEVICH

Košetický, Jiří Evermod (b Vlašim, 6 April 1639; d Prague, 20 Jan 1700). Bohemian priest. He was active at the Premonstratensian Strahov monastery in Prague and, after 1669, in various places in Bohemia. Between 1680 and 1699 he wrote out five volumes of Quodlibetica (now in CZ-Ps) – miscellanies of historical documents of the period, religious texts, occasional poems, satires, folk dramas etc. in Czech, German and Latin. They contain nothing by Košetický himself. The texts in verse form include many 17th-century songs, some with melodies. Most of them are favourite Czech sacred songs of the period, and there are also Czech, German and Latin secular songs (many of them unica) reflecting life in the monasteries, towns and villages: drinking-songs, homage songs and songs with historical, polemical, satirical or humorous texts.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Podlaha: 'Rukopisný sborník Evermoda Jiřího Košetického' [Košetický's MS collection], Sborník historického kroužku Vlast, 2nd ser., ii–xxv (1901–24)

B. Ryba: Soupis rukopisů Strahovské knihovny/Catalogus codicum bibliothecae Strahoviensis, iii (Prague, 1979), 253–317 [incl. detailed discussion of the volumes of Quodlibetica and gives p. nos. of the articles by Podlaha]

JAN KOUBA

Koshetz [Koshits], Nina (Pavlovna) (b Kiev, 18/30 Dec 1894; d Santa Ana, CA, 14 or 15 May 1965). Ukrainian soprano. The daughter of Pavel Koshitz, a leading tenor at the Bol'shoy, she was trained in Moscow, first as a pianist, and then as a singer under Sergey Taneyev. She made her début as Tatyana in Yevgeny Onegin with the Zimin Private Opera company in 1913, and remained with the company until 1919. During this period she also toured Russia and in 1917 appeared as Tatyana at the Mariinsky, Petrograd. Other roles included Lisa in The Queen of Spades, Marina in Boris Godunov, Tosca, and Electra in Taneyev's Oresteya. In 1920 she left Russia and joined the Chicago Opera Association, singing Fata Morgana in the première of The Love for Three Oranges in 1921. She sang as a guest artist with the Russian Opera Company in New York and on tour in 1922, and in 1924 was at the Colón, Buenos Aires. The later 1920s were spent largely in France, where she sang at the Paris Opéra in 1925, and at the Trocadéro in 1927 in the first Paris production of Rimsky-Korsakov's Sadko. There were further concert seasons and occasional operatic appearances in Europe and the USA; in 1940 she retired to Hollywood, where she managed a restaurant and appeared in several films. Her few recordings, prized by collectors, show a clear, steady voice excitingly combined with an imaginative, emotionally charged style.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Dennis: 'Nina Pavlovna Koshetz', Record Collector, xvii (1966–8), 53–61 [with discography by V. Liff]

M. Scott: The Record of Singing, ii (London, 1979), 23–5

J.B. STEANE

Košice (Ger. Kaschau; Hung. Kassa). Town in eastern Slovakia. The oldest musical documents, mostly vocal music, include the Epistola venerabilis (13th–14th centuries), Pontifical strigoniensis (14th century), Liber conventus Cassoviensis (14th–15th centuries) and the Missal of Košice parish (15th–16th centuries). The two-volume gradual of Košice represents imported polyphonic music from the 16th century and demonstrates a high musical standard. The illuminations portray the oldest views of Košice and its surroundings.

Guilds played an important role in cultivating secular music; flautists and violinists played at their feasts. Sebestyén Tinódi's Cronica (1554) includes a musical entertainment for the Royal Captain of Košice. The Protestant minister Gál Husár was the first Košice printer of music (1560); a permanent music printing firm was founded in 1610. The University of Košice was established in 1657 and sacred music was performed in its church, where a Slovak passion play has been preserved. At the end of the 18th century, Viennese symphonic music was heard at the cathedral. Chamber music was performed in the homes of the nobility and the middle class.

Theatre music began in the 14th century with plays in the markets and schools. Travelling groups performed at the old permanent theatre building (1789) and then at the present theatre (1899). Performances were in German, Hungarian, Italian, Czech and Slovak and included contemporary operas and operettas. The Košice State Opera, founded in 1945, presents the standard repertory and some native compositions. The Slovak national opera Krútňava ('Whirlpool') by Eugen Suchoň was first performed in Košice in 1953.

The system of educating professional organists and instrumentalists at college level (schola musices), established in 1784, continued through the 20th century. In 1951 a new college of music was established for teachers; in 1961 it became a conservatory. Choral singing was cultivated at elementary schools and churches. Civic choirs were established in the 19th century, at first German (Gesangverein) and later Hungarian and Slovak groups. There were also workers' choirs. The best-known choirs in the late 20th century were the Cantica Veterinaria, the Košice Teachers Choir and the cathedral choir of St Cecilia.

In 1927 the General Orchestra, the Military Orchestra and the Theatre Orchestra were joined by the Radio Orchestra. In 1969 the State PO was established; its regular concert season culminates in the Košice Musical Spring Festival. Since 1970 an annual International Organ Festival has been held. The Košice Quartet, the Košice Chamber Orchestra, brass ensembles and military orchestras perform at various celebrations. Among numerous folk ensembles, Carnica excels.

Notable among Košice composers have been F.X. Zomb (1779–1823; also a music critic), Josef Zomb (1791–1850), Jozef Janigh (1782–1837), Josef Kerner (1851–1914), Oldrich Hemerka (1862–1946), Josef Grešák (1907–87), Josef Podprocký (b 1944) and Norbert Bodnár (b 1955).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Hudobný život Košíc [Musical life in Košice] (Košice, 1981)

M. Potemrová: Hudobný život v Košiciach v rokoch 1848–1918 [Musical life in Košice] (Košice, 1981)

200 rokov hudobného školstva v Košiciach 1784–1984 [200 years of music education in Košice] (Košice, 1984)

60 rokov hudobného vysielania z rozhlasového štúdia Košice [60 years of music broadcast from Radio Košice] (Košice, 1987)

M. Potemrová: 'Konservatorium v Košiciach v rokoch 1951–1986', Historica carpatica, xix (1988), 161–75

Hudobné divaldo v Košiciach 1789–1989: Košice 1989

MARIA POTEMROVÁ

Koskelin, Olli (Juhani) (b Helsinki, 16 April 1955). Finnish composer. He studied composition privately with Tiensuu and Hämeenniemi (1975–83) and with Murail in France (1986). He also studied the clarinet at the Helsinki conservatory and literature at Helsinki University. In 1987 he became music teacher in the dance department of the Theatre Academy.

His early style is founded on post-serial harmonies and strives forcefully towards modernist means of expression; harmonic colouring is his central interest. His compositions have a strong inner cohesion, but there are significant stylistic differences between individual works. He explores the expressive limits of instruments in such solo works as Act I for cello (1982) and Exalté for clarinet (1985). The latter especially is a virtuosic and technically very demanding piece, which he later extended into the Pas de deux for clarinet and cello (1991) and the Pas de trois for clarinet, cello and accordion (1991). Towards the end of the 1980s the mood of his works became more meditative, and he explored often powerful areas of feeling through tranquil harmonic effects. At the same time Koskelin exploited stylistic allusions, as in the piano work Courbures (1989), where a sudden Baroque cadence appears within a glittering neo-Impressionist texture. In his small orchestral output the stress is on fields of harmonic stasis. Murail's influence, which was not manifest before the 1990s, lies behind Koskelin's use of certain resources to create spectral music: in the 1993 work for chamber orchestra ... kuin planeetta hiljaa hengittävä (' ... Like a Planet Silently Breathing') there are small-scale dynamic changes; otherwise the music is utterly motionless. Harmonies are based on harmonic series of equal-tempered scales. This is also prominent in the Piano Concerto (1995), in which a virtuoso solo part forms a powerful contrast to soft harmony. The second of the two movements in the Clarinet Concerto is built on a low C pedal point – and again, almost all the action takes place in the solo part while the orchestra provides a static, undisturbed surface of sound.

Koskelin's work in the Theatre Academy's dance department has led to many productions with different choreographers. In these works he has often used tape, as in Yönvartija ('The Nightwatchman', 1992) and Minä olen ruumiini ('I Am My Own Body', 1994), a duo for cello and tape. In the 1990s his musical expression moved cautiously towards more traditional formal solutions. In his chamber work Uurre ('Furrow', 1997), which won a competition in a phone-in on Finnish National TV, Koskelin approaches a static neo-Impressionist sound reminiscent of Debussy.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Strip-Tease (incid music, J. Siltanen), 1991; Kylmäntähti [Coldstar] (ballet, U. Koivisto), 1992; Yönvartija [The Nightwatchman] (ballet, A. Aaltokoski), tape, 1992; Minä olen ruumiini [I Am My Own Body] (ballet, Aaltokoski), vc, tape, 1994

Orch: For the Time Being, 1991; ... kuin planeetta hiljaa hengittävä [... Like a Planet Silently Breathing], 1993; Pf Conc., 1994; Cl Conc., 1995; Sarja baletista Kylmäntähti [Suite from the ballet Coldstar], 1996

Chbr: Music, str qt, 1981; Echos colorés, b cl, pf, 1991; Pas de deux, cl, vc, 1991; Pas de trois, cl, vc, accdn, 1991; Uurre [Furrow], fl, cl, hn, vib, pf, 2 vn, va, vc, db, 1997

Solo inst: Act I, vc, 1982; Exalté, cl, 1985; Tutte le corde, gui, tape, 1989; Courbures, pf, 1989; Soitto [Music], pf, 1994

Vocal: Lacrimosa (Finnish text, P. Saaritsa), male chorus, 1990; Breaking the Silence (M. Bashō, Eng. trans. N. Yuasa), S, fl, cl, vib, va, vc, 1991; Recordare (Finnish text, Saaritsa), male chorus, 1995

El-ac: To Whom It May Concern, radiophony, 1990

Principal publishers: Love, Fazer, Otava

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Kaipainen: 'Olli Koskelin at the Helsinki Summer', Finnish Music Quarterly, (1988), no.3, p.57 only

K. Korhonen: Olli Koskelin (Helsinki, 1995) [pubn of the Finnish Music Information Centre]

OSMO TAPIO RÄIHÄLÄ

Koskinen, Jukka (b Espoo, 4 March 1965). Finnish composer. From 1984 he studied composition at the Sibelius Academy in Helsinki with Rautavaara, Aho and Eliasson; he continued his studies in Biella and Siena with Donatoni (1988–9), and with Szalonek in Berlin from 1991 to 1993. His output consists of short pieces that are complex in rhythm, and either fiercely expressive or sensitive and fragile, often developing only a single idea. His string quartet was awarded a prize at the 1989 UNESCO Rostrum of Composers.

WORKS

Qt, fl, cl, vn, vc, 1983; Pf Trio, 1985; Str Qt, 1987; Transformazioni, pf, 1987; Angst, vc, 1989; Suoraan sanoen [Straight to the Point], 17 solo str, 1990; Until the Deadline, wind, perc, 1992; Octet, fl, ob, cl, bn, str qt, 1993; Ululation, fl/a fl, ob/eng hn, cl/b cl, bn, hn, tpt, trbn, str qt, 1994; Qt, ob, cl, bn, accdn, 1995; H, sax qt, 1995; Nausea, a fl, b cl, vn, vc, pf, 1996; Faravidin maa [The Land of Faravid], 6 dancers, ob, cl, bn, vn, vc, pf, 1998

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Korhonen: Finnish Composers since the 1960s (Jyväskylä, 1995)

M. Heiniö: Aikamme musiikki [Contemporary music], Suomen musiikin historia [A history of Finnish music], iv (Porvoo, 1995)

ILKKA ORAMO

Kosleck, Julius (b Naugard, Pomerania, 3 Dec 1825; d Berlin, 5 Nov 1905). German trumpeter. The son of poor parents, he was sent at the age of eight to a military school in Annaburg, Saxony; in 1843 he became first trumpeter in the 2nd infantry guard regiment band in Berlin. From 1853 to 1893 he was first trumpeter in the Königliche Kapelle there, and from 1872 until 1903 he taught the trumpet and trombone at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik (professor from 1893). He was well known in northern Germany as an oratorio trumpeter, although his long A trumpet does not seem to have been taken up by other players there. His main interest, however, was playing light music on conical brass instruments. As a cornet soloist and as the leader of a cornet quartet founded in 1870 (later known as the Kaiser-Cornet-Quartett), he travelled throughout Germany, Switzerland, England, Denmark, Sweden, Russia (spending five months in St Petersburg and Pavlovsk in 1868) and the USA (1872). In 1890 he founded the 100-member Kosleck'sche Bläserbund, which won great popularity.

Kosleck is known for his participation in a historic performance of Bach's Mass in B minor in London on 21 March 1885, in which he played the first trumpet part on the so-called BACH TRUMPET. A diagram of his mouthpiece, which he carefully concealed from his English colleagues, was printed by Menke in 1934. His Grosse Schule für Cornet à piston und [F-]Trompete (Leipzig, 1872) was translated into English (*c*1907) by Walter Morrow, a noted champion of the F trumpet.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Rudolph: 'Kosleck', Theater- und Concert-Lexikon nebst Geschichte des Rigaer Theaters und der Musikalischen Gesellschaft (Riga, 1890), 123

H. Eichborn: Das alte Clarinblasen auf Trompeten (Leipzig, 1894/R)

R.K.: 'Ein Altmeister deutscher Trompeterkunst', NZM, xciii (1897), 525–6

B. Garlepp: Die Geschichte der Trompete nebst einer Biographie Julius Koslecks (Hanover, 1914)

W. Menke: History of the Trumpet of Bach and Handel (London, 1934/*R*1972 with new introduction, index and bibliography by S.J. Glover)

E. Tarr: East Meets West (Stuyvesant, NY, forthcoming)

EDWARD H. TARR

Košler, Zdeněk (b Prague, 25 March 1928; d Prague, 2 July 1995). Czech conductor. He was first taught music by his father, an orchestral player, then studied the piano, composition and conducting at the Prague Academy of Musical Arts, where his teachers included Karel Ančerl. His first appointments were as répétiteur for the Kühn Children's Choir and the Czech Choir (later the Prague Philharmonic Choir), and in 1948 he joined the Prague National Theatre, where he made his conducting début with Il barbiere di Siviglia in 1951. The same year he conducted his first major concert with the Prague SO, and he toured with the National Theatre company to Moscow in 1955 and Brussels in 1958. He won the 1956 International Conducting Competition at Besançon and the 1963 Mitropoulos Competition in New York, where he worked as assistant to Bernstein in the 1963–4 season. He was director of the Olomouc Opera (1958–62) and the Ostrava Opera (1962–6), principal conductor of the Prague SO (1966–7), and conductor and later General-musikdirektor of the Berlin Komische Oper in association with Felsenstein (1965–8). From 1971 to 1976 he was director of the National Theatre in Bratislava and from 1971 to 1981 resident conductor of the Czech PO. As musical director of the Prague National Theatre (1980–85) he conducted a complete cycle of Smetana's operas. He conducted Salome at the Vienna Staatsoper in 1965, toured in other European countries and Canada, and from 1968 was a frequent guest conductor in Japan. His performances were deeply emotional yet balanced in character, as can be heard on his recordings of the complete Dvořák and Prokofiev symphonies. His wide repertory also included many works by 20th-century Czech and Slovak composers, and he conducted many premières, including the first performance of Martinů's Second Cello Concerto (1965). He wrote a volume of autobiographical essays, Poselství (Prague, 1996).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS

'Košlerův nástup v Bratislavě' [Košler's appearance in Bratislava], HRo, xxv (1972), 109 only

V. Procházka, ed.: Národní divadlo a jeho předchůdci [The National Theatre and its predecessors] (Prague, 1988), 238–9 [incl. list of repertory and discography]

ALENA NĚMCOVÁ

Kosma, Joseph [Kozma, Jozsef] (b Budapest, 22 Oct 1905; d La Roche-Guyon, 7 Aug 1969). French composer of Hungarian birth. He studied at the Liszt Academy of Music (1926–8) then worked as a répétiteur and assistant conductor at the Hungarian State Opera. He began composing scores for Hungarian films in 1929, the year in which he went to Berlin to study with Eisler, and was active in performances staged by the Young Communist Group (known as 'the Red Megaphone'). With the rise of Nazism, Kosma (who was Jewish) fled to France where he first found work as a café pianist. His meeting with the poet Jacques Prévert led to an engagement at the cabarets Le boeuf sur le toit and La folie de Lys Gauty, where he accompanied the singers Marianne Oswald, and Lys Gauty. Oswald, much admired by the poets Jean Cocteau and Raymond Queneau, made a lasting impression with her performances of Kosma's earliest settings of Prévert, La chasse à l'enfant and La grasse matinée. The director Jean Renoir used one of the Kosma-Prévert songs, A la belle étoile, in his 1936 film Le crime de Monsieur Lange, where it is sung by Odette Florelle. This began a long association between Renoir and Kosma, interrupted by World War II (when Renoir was in Hollywood), but re-established when he returned to France in the mid-1950s.

Kosma chose to remain in France during the war years, when he was obliged to spend much of the time in hiding, and what little music he composed was used by film makers either anonymously or under pseudonyms. His music for the pantomime scenes in Marcel Carné's Les enfants du paradis (1944) eventually led to his first postwar works for the stage, the ballets Le rendez-vous (with choreograhy by Roland Petit, a curtain by Picasso and sets by the photographer Brassai), and Baptiste, a reworking of material from Les enfants du paradis, which was staged by Jean-Louis Barrault in the first seasons of the Renaud-Barrault company. Later, the leading role was mimed by Marcel Marceau who collaborated with Kosma on three further pantomimes.

Marcel Carné used the music for Le rendez-vous in his film Les portes de la nuit (1946) in which the most famous of all the Kosma-Prévert songs, Les feuilles mortes ('Autumn leaves') was first heard, sung by Yves Montand. It quickly became an international hit, sung in France by Juliette Gréco (who later created several more Kosma songs), Edith Piaf and many other artists. Kosma had success with a light-hearted work set in ancient Greece, Les chansons de Bilitis (1953), but his later work became more serious. His 'oratorio scénique' Les Canuts, about the Lyons silk workers, was first given in Berlin (1959), then in Lyons (1964), when the main role was sung by Hélène Bouvier. During the last year of his life, Kosma composed the score for Renoir's final film (Le petit théâtre de Jean Renoir) and finished his opera, Les hussards, which was given its première a few weeks after Kosma's death.

Like his near-contemporary Weill, Kosma brought a refined and original talent to the small-scale chanson. Much of his work remains unpublished, but in the last years of the 20th century young French performers have begun to take up Kosma's music with renewed interest.

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE

Jeu de cirque (L'éléphant ne sait plus barrir) (children's op), ?1929 (pubd 1934)
Le rendez-vous (ballet, J. Prévert), Paris, Sarah Bernhardt, 15 June 1945
Baptiste (pantomime, J.-L. Barrault), Paris, Marigny, 1946
L'écuyère (ballet, C. Nepo, choreog. S. Lifar), 1948
Pierrot de Montmartre (pantomime, M. Marceau), Paris, Sarah Bernhardt, 1952
Les chansons de Bilitis (opérette, J. Valmy and M. Cab after P. Louÿs), Paris, Capucines, 1953
Un soir aux funambules (pantomime, M. Marceau), Paris, Sarah Bernhardt, 1953
Hôtel de l'espérance (ballet, F. Carco), 1957
Les Canuts (orat. scénique, 1, J. Gaucheron), Berlin, Staatsoper, 19 June 1959
Paris qui rit, Paris qui pleure (pantomime, M. Marceau), Paris, Champs-Elysées, 1959
Un amour éléctronique (opéra-bouffe, 1, A. Kedros), 1961
La queue du diable (comédie musicale, Y. Jamiaque), 1962
Le proscrit (ballet, G. Skibine), Nice, 1965
Les hussards (op, 2, after P.A. Bréal), Lyons, 21 Oct 1969

Incid music for about 20 plays

FILM MUSIC
directors' names in parentheses

Over 170 scores including: Le crime de Monsieur Lange (J. Renoir, 1935; 1 song, the rest by J. Wiener); Jenny (M. Carné, 1936); Une partie de campagne (Renoir, 1936); La grande illusion (Renoir, 1937); La bête humaine (Renoir, 1938); La Marseillaise (Renoir, 1938); La règle du jeu (Renoir, 1939); Les visiteurs du soir (Carné, 1942); Adieu, Léonard (Prévert, 1943); Les enfants du paradis (Carné, 1945); Les portes de la nuit (Carné, 1946); Voyage-surprise (Prévert, 1946); Il miracolo (R. Rossellini, 1948); La Marie du port (Carné, 1949); Juliette, ou La clé des songes (Carné, 1951); Huis clos (J. Audry, 1954); Cela s'appelle l'aurore (L. Buñuel, 1955); Eléna et les hommes (Renoir, 1956); Le déjeuner sur l'herbe (Renoir, 1959); Le testament du Dr Cordelier (Renoir, 1959); Le caporal épinglé (Renoir, 1962); Le petit théâtre de Jean Renoir (Renoir, 1969)
Music for radio and TV

SONGS

all for solo voice and piano

Collections: 21 chansons (J. Prévert) (1946): Le cauchemar du chauffeur de taxi; Chanson dans le sang; Chanson du geôlier; Chanson pour les enfants l'hiver; Dans ma maison; Déjeuner du matin; Deux escargots s'en vont à l'enterrement; L'enfance; Les enfants qui s'aiment; En sortant de l'école; Et puis après; Familiale; Fête foraine; Le gardien du phare aime beaucoup trop les oiseaux; La grasse matinée; Inventaire; Le jardin; Le message; Page d'écriture; Paris at night; La pêche à la baleine

D'autre chansons (J. Prévert) (1947): Barbara; Un beau matin; A la belle étoile; La belle saison; Le bonheur des uns; Les bruits de la nuit; Le cancre; Cet amour; Chanson; Chanson de l'oiseleur; Chasse à l'enfant; Le concert n'a pas été réussi; Le désespoir est assis sur un banc; Epiphanie; Et la fête continue; Fable; La fête; Les feuilles mortes; Fille d'acier; Immense et rouge; Le miroir brisé; Les oiseaux du souci; On frappe; L'orgue de Barbarie; Presque

10 chansons, 8 poètes (1954): Attente (J. Anouilh); La belle jambe (L. Aragon); Il pleut (R. Queneau); Art poétique (Queneau); Jésus-la-Caille (F. Carco); La robe (G. Neveux); Rondel (Charles d'Orléans); Celui qui part pur la guerre (Guillevic); La petite chêvre (J.-M. Croufer); La guitare solitaire (Croufer)

La ménagerie de Tristan (R. Desnos) (1965): La grenouille aux souliers percés; Le chat qui ne ressemble à rien; L'oiseau du Colorado; Le poisson sans souci; L'araignée aux moustaches

La parterre d'hyacinthe (R. Desnos) (1965): L'arbre qui boit du vin; La dame Pavot nouvelle épousée; La rose à voix de soprano Separate songs: Les soutiers (T. Plivier, trans. G. Bonheur), 1936; Je ne veux que tes yeux (Constanti), 1937; Dis-moi pourquoi? (M. Vaucaire), 1938; L'heure du rêve (J.M. Huard and G. Groener), 1938; D'abord on sourit un peu (M. Vaucaire), 1947; C'est la maison où je suis né (Vaucaire), 1947); Si tu t'imagines (R. Queneau), 1949; Rue des Blancs-Manteaux (J.-P. Sartre), 1949; Le port du Cafard (J.-P. Aumont), 1950; La fourmi (R. Desnos), 1950; Tournesol (J. Prévert), 1950; La fiancée du prestidigitateur (J.-P. Le Chanois), 1951; Nicolas chien d'expérience (R. Queneau), 1951; Marie (G. Apollinaire), 1954; Oncle Bill (H. Ithier), 1954; 3 chansons (J. Renoir) and many others

OTHER VOCAL

Les ponts de Paris (orat., J. Prévert), spkrs, solo vv, chorus, orch, 1948; A l'assaut du ciel (H. Bassis), solo vv, chorus, orch, 1951; Ballade de celui qui chanta dans les supplices (L. Aragon), T, B, chorus, orch, 1951; Aux pays des mines (Bassis), chorus, 1954

ORCHESTRA

Tous les jours, reportage musical, 1934; Suite romantique, 1950; Burlesque, fl, bn, orch, 1962; Concertino, cl, orch, 1969

CHAMBER AND SOLO INSTRUMENTAL

Chants du ghetto, pf, 1934; Petite suite exotique, pf, 1936; Esquisses béarnaises, suite, pf; Danse des automates, pf, 1946; Fantaise concertante, pf, 1947; Suite languedocienne, pf, 1947; 2 pièces, pf, 1948; Sonatine, vn, pf, 1951; 5 chansons populaires de Languedoc, vn, pf, 1952; Fantaisie concertante, harmonica, 1955; Divertissement, fl, cl, bn, pf, 1960; 3 movts, fl, pf, 1961; Duo, db, pf, 1964

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Brunschwig, L.-J. Calvet and J.-C. Klein: 100 ans de chanson française (Paris, 1972)

J.-L. Barrault and M. Renaud: Paris, notre siècle (Paris, 1982)

H. Traber and others: Verdrängte Musik: Berliner Komponisten im Exil (Berlin, 1987)

'Joseph Kosma', ReM, nos.412–15 (1989)

G. Mannoni: Roland Petit, un chorégraphe et ses peintres (Paris, 1990)

J. Renoir: Letters, ed. L. LoBianco and D. Thompson (London, 1994)

PATRICK O'CONNOR

Kosmas of Jerusalem [Kosmas Hagiopolitēs, Kosmas Hierosolymitēs, Kosmas the Monk, Kosmas of Maiuma, Kosmas the Melodist] (b ?Jerusalem; fl 1st half of the 8th century). Saint and Byzantine hymnographer. The epithets 'Hierosolymitēs' and 'Hagiopolitēs' which accompany his name in manuscripts and in the Suda (a 10th-century Byzantine lexicon), seem to indicate Jerusalem as his birthplace, although he may have been born elsewhere in that patriarchate; according to Detorakēs, his birthplace was Damascus. He was a monk in the Palestinian monastery of St Sabas, like his contemporary JOHN DAMASCENE. The hagiographical tradition, in order to emphasize the relationship between the two, made Kosmas the foster-brother of John Damascene and the latter's companion in his youthful studies and entry into the monastery; it is pure legend. Kosmas was nominated Bishop of Maiuma, near Gaza, in 742/3 (or, according to some scholars, 734/5); John Damascene dedicated his work The Source of Knowledge to Kosmas when he was Bishop of Maiuma.

Kosmas wrote stichēra idiomela, kanōnes and triōdia for the most solemn festivals of Christ and the Virgin. (See also KANŌN.) During the 9th century many of his hymns were introduced into Lenten services: the kanōnes for Palm Sunday and Maundy Thursday, the triōdia for Monday and Wednesday of Holy Week and for Good Friday, the diōdion for Tuesday of Holy Week and the tetraōdion for Holy Saturday. Not all the hymns ascribed to 'Kosmas the Monk' or 'Kosmas Hagiopolitēs' in the manuscripts can be attributed to him (see Detorakēs for a list of his works).

The poetry of Kosmas is distinguished by its formal elegance, and his musical and metric schemes are remarkably original. Kosmas admired St Gregory Nazianzen and often imitated his writings; he wrote an extensive commentary on Gregory's poetry and composed a kanōn for his feast day.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FACSIMILES, TRANSCRIPTIONS

W. Christ and M. Paranikas, ed.: Anthologia graeca carminum christianorum (Leipzig, 1871/R), 161–204 [text only]

H.J.W. Tillyard, ed.: Twenty Canons from the Trinity Hirmologium, MMB, Transcripta, iv (1952), 7–12, 18–23, 34–8, 51–6, 72–83, 90–95, 100–05

A. Ayoutanti, M. Stöhr and C. Høeg, eds.: The Hymns of the Hirmologium: I, MMB, Transcripta, vi (1952)

A. Ayoutanti and H.J.W. Tillyard, eds.: The Hymns of the Hirmologium: III/2, MMB, Transcripta, viii (1956), 17–20

H.J.W. Tillyard, ed.: The Hymns of the Pentecostarium, MMB, Transcripta, vii (1960), 27–9

LITERATURE

A. Chappet: 'Cosmas de Maïouma', Dictionnaire d'archéologie chrétienne et de liturgie, eds. F. Cabrol and H. Leclercq, iii/2 (Paris, 1914), 2993–7

S. Eutratiadēs: 'Kosmas Hierosolymitēs ho poiētēs', Nea sion, xxviii (1933), 83–9, 143–58, 202–18, 257–73, 330–38, 400–16, 489–505, 530–44

H.-G. Beck: Kirche und theologische Literatur im byzantinischen Reich (Munich, 1959), 515–16

T.E. Detorakēs: Kosmas ho Melōdos: bios kai ergo [Kosmas the Melodist: life and work] (Thessaloniki, 1979)

For further bibliography see BYZANTINE CHANT.

ENRICA FOLLIERI

Kosmerovius, (Stanislaus) Matthäus. See COSMEROVIUS, (STANISLAUS) MATTHÄUS.

Kosovo. See YUGOSLAVIA, §III, 3.

Kospoth, Otto Carl Erdmann, Freiherr von (b Mühltroff, Vogtland, 25 Nov 1753; d Mühltroff, 23 June 1817). German composer. He attended the Ritterakademie at Liegnitz (now Legnica). In 1776 he became chamberlain and maître des plaisirs at the Prussian court, where he often played the violin or cello in performances with Frederick II. He was also an excellent keyboard player and could play other instruments, too. His earliest compositions are dated 1771. In 1783 he visited Italy, spending at least six months at Venice, where he composed church works and an opera and oratorio that were performed there, probably privately. Kospoth remained a chamberlain at the court of Friedrich Wilhelm II, but in 1789 returned to his estates at Mühltroff. In 1790 he was made a Reichsgraf. Whereas earlier he had appeared a typically versatile Enlightenment figure, engaging in chemical, physical and mechanical experiments and literary activities as well as music (in June 1787 he published a biography of his friend, the composer J.H. Rolle, in Der teutsche Merkur), in the 1790s he turned increasingly to necromancy, alchemy, spiritualism and other eccentric pursuits with a strong megalomaniac colouring. His position in Berlin had required considerable expenditure and in the early 1790s he lavished a great deal of money on improving his estates at Mühltroff, which he eventually lost entirely, apart from the right to an apartment in the castle, and supported himself by the piecemeal sale of his furniture and collection of musical instruments. When the castle caught fire in 1817 he refused to leave it, mistakenly claiming to be impervious to fire.

Kospoth's music is agreeable and facile, qualities that helped produce his considerable success as both a dramatic and an instrumental composer (he seems to have published nothing after the late 1790s). Several of his Singspiele had long runs and manifold productions. Gerber judged him 'among the most industrious and inventive dilettantes', and praised his serenade op.19 for its richness of ideas, while censuring his lack of economy in treating them. According to Gerber, he was working on a Singspiel on Lessing's Emilia Galotti in 1790, but it was never produced.

WORKS

STAGE

Der Freund deutscher Sitten (Operette, 3, G.W. Burmann), Berlin, Döbbelin's, 25 Sept 1778

Adrast und Isidore, oder Die Serenate (komische Oper, 2, C.F. Bretzner, after Molière: Le sicilien), Berlin, Döbbelin's, 16 Oct 1779, D-Bsb, Favourite Songs (Berlin, n.d.)

Der Irrwisch, oder Endlich fand er sie (komische Oper, 3, Bretzner), Berlin, Döbbelin's, 2 Oct 1780; Favourite Songs (Berlin, n.d.)

Timante ed Emirene, oder Die Macht der Liebe, 1783, unperf.

Karoline, oder Die Parforcejagd (Operette, 4, C.A.G. Seidel), unperf.

Das Fest der Schäfer (divertimento), Berlin, 18 Oct 1787

Der kluge Jakob (komische Oper, 3, J. Wetzel), Berlin, National, 26 Feb 1788, Bsb

Bella und Fernando, oder Die Satyr (Operette, 1, C.A. Vulpius), Berlin, 1790

Der Mädchenmarkt zu Ninive (komische Oper, 2, K.A. Herklots), Hamburg, Gänsemarkt, 3 Sept 1793, excerpts (Leipzig, 1795)

Il trionfo d'Arianna, Dl

OTHER VOCAL

Orats: Holofernes, Venice, 1783; Abraham, Venice, 1787, Dl

Cants.: Die Macht der Harmonie, Berlin, 1783; Le beau de Nans, Berlin, 1787

Miserere, Bsb, Dl; 3 Lieder, 1v, pf (Brunswick, 1795)

INSTRUMENTAL

Syms.: D, E♭, F, op.1 (Berlin and Amsterdam, 1778); D, op.12; C, op.13 (Darmstadt, 1793); G, op.22 (Brunswick and Amsterdam, 1795); A, op.23 (Brunswick and Amsterdam, 1796); D, op.24 (Brunswick, 1797); D, op.25 (Brunswick, 1798); G (n.p., n.d.)

Hpd Conc., op.6 (Offenbach, 1787); Ob Conc. (Darmstadt, 1793), lost

Other orch: Grande sérénade, 2 vn, 2 va, 2 hn, vc, b, op.11 (Speyer, 1790); Serenata, hpd/pf, ob/fl, 2 basset hn/va, 2 bn/vc, op.19 (Offenbach, 1794); Composizioni . . . sopra il Pater noster consistenti in 7 sonate caratteristiche con un introduzione, 2 vn, 2 ob, 2 hn, bn, va, b, op.20 (Darmstadt, 1794)

Chbr: 6 qnts, fl, vn, va, vc, b, listed in Breitkopf catalogue (1771); 8 qnts, 2 vn, 2 va, vc, opp.1–2 (London, ?1786); 5 str qts, listed in Breitkopf catalogue (1771); 6 qts, fl, vn, va, vc, op.5 (Offenbach, 1786), lost; 6 str qts, op.8 (Offenbach, 1789); 6 str qts, op.10 (Speyer, 1789); 6 sonatas, vn, va, b, op.1 (Offenbach, 1778); 6 sonatas, hpd, vn, op.2 (Berlin and Amsterdam, 1784)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GerberL; JohanssonH; MGG1 (T.M. Langner); StiegerO

C.H. Richter: Die Herrschaft Mühltroff und ihre Besitzer (Leipzig, 1857)

C. Ledebur: Tonkünstler-Lexikon Berlin's (Berlin, 1861)

W. Matthäus: Johann André Musikverlag zu Offenbach am Main: Verlags-geschichte und Bibliographie 1772–1800 (Tutzing, 1973)

T. Bauman: North German Opera in the Age of Goethe (Cambridge, 1985)

H. Schneider: Der Musikverleger Heinrich Philipp Bossler, 1744–1812 (Tutzing, 1985)

H. Unverricht: 'Freiherr von Kospoths instrumentale Vertonung des Pater noster: wortgebundene Erfindung nach Haydns Vorbild?', Die Sprache der Musik: Festschrift Klaus Wolfgang Niemöller, ed. J.P. Fricke and others (Regensburg, 1989), 609–15

HUBERT UNVERRICHT

Kosrae. See MICRONESIA, §II, 3.

Kössler, Hans [János]. See KOESSLER, HANS.

Kossmaly, Carl (b Breslau [now Wrocław, Poland], 27 July 1812; d Stettin [now Szczecin, Poland], 1 Dec 1893). German conductor, music critic and composer. Kossmaly's writings reveal much about 19th-century German musical life and intellectual history. He studied in Berlin (1828–30) with Mendelssohn's teachers Ludwig Berger and C.F. Zelter, and also with Bernhard Klein. From 1838 to 1849 he was music director at opera houses in Wiesbaden, Mainz, Amsterdam, Bremen, Detmold, and Stettin, where he settled and became a highly respected teacher and orchestra conductor. In 1837 Schumann invited Kossmaly to report on music in Frankfurt and Holland for the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik; in 1839 he moved to Leipzig, continuing to contribute profusely to the journal. Schumann, who published some of his lieder there, commended his reviews for their practical musicianship and philosophical depth. Kossmaly's review of Schumann's piano works (AMZ, xlvi (1844), 1–5, 17–21, 33–7; trans. in R.L. Todd, ed.: Schumann and his World (Princeton, 1994), 303–16) was the first substantial appraisal of the composer in a German journal. Schumann appointed Kossmaly his successor as editor of the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik in 1841. An original member of Schumann's anti-philistine Davidsbund, Kossmaly campaigned for the New Romantics' subjective view of art, opposing the pro-Wagner New German realists. He also contributed to the AMZ, the Neue Berliner Musik Zeitung and the Stettiner Zeitung. He wrote books on Mozart's operas (1848) and programmatic music (1858), as well as the Schlesisches Tonkünstlerlexikon (1846–7). His compositions include symphonies, overtures and other works.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Schering: 'Aus der Geschichte der musikalischen Kritik in Deutschland', Jb der Musikbibliothek Peters, xxxv (1929), 9–23

I. Fellinger: Verzeichnis der Musikzeitschriften des 19. Jahrhunderts (Regensburg, 1968)

C.H. Porter: 'The Rheinlieder Critics', MQ, lxiii (1977), 74–98

CECELIA H. PORTER

Kossovits, József [Koschovitz, Joseph] (b after 1750; d after 1819). Hungarian composer and cellist. He served as a musician at the court of Menyhért Szulyovszky at Rákócz, Upper Hungary, until 1794, when his employer was arrested for participating in the Jacobin uprising in Hungary; this event inspired Kossovits's Slow Hungarian Dance in C minor, published as the last of his 12 danses hongroises pour le clavecin ou pianoforte (Vienna, *c*1800), which became one of the best-known dance pieces of the verbunkos period. Mihály Csokonai Vitéz, the most important Hungarian poet of the turn of the century, wrote his A' reményhez ('To Hope', 1803) to the melody of this dance, thus contributing significantly to its popularity. It was arranged by Liszt in his Magyar dallok – Magyar rhapsodiák (i:6, v:12) and also in his Hungarian Rhapsody no.5. In 1804 Kossovits was in the service of Countess Andrássy in Kassa (now Košice, Slovakia), where he remained at least until 1819. On 4 July 1818 the Wiener allgemeine musikalische Zeitung mentioned him as an inexhaustible composer of Hungarian dances; all his other Hungarian dances in the verbunkos style remain in manuscript.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'Nachrichten: Caschau, im April', AMZ, xxi (1819), 346–7
E. Major: 'Liszt Ferenc magyar rapszódiái' [Liszt's Hungarian rhapsodies], Muzsika, i/1–2 (1929), 47
B. Szabolcsi and F. Bónis: Magyar táncok Haydn korából [Hungarian dances from the time of Haydn] (Budapest, 1959, 2/1977)
G. Papp: 'Die Quellen der "Verbunkos-Musik"', SM, xxi (1979), 151–217
F. Bónis: Ungarische Tänze (Vienna, 1993)

FERENC BÓNIS

Kostelanetz, André (b St Petersburg, 22 Dec 1901; d Port-au-Prince, Haiti, 13 Jan 1980). American conductor and arranger of Russian birth. He studied at the conservatory in Petrograd (now St Petersburg) from 1920 to 1922, when he went to the USA; he became an American citizen in 1928. In 1930 he was engaged as conductor for the CBS radio network, beginning the association with broadcasting and film work, and with the popularizing of classical music, for which he principally became known, in performances of lively and robust style. During World War II he conducted many concerts for the US armed forces. Also a successful guest conductor elsewhere, and principal conductor of the New York PO's promenade concerts, he made a valuable contribution to musical life by commissioning works by Copland (Lincoln Portrait), Schuman, Hovhaness and other contemporary composers. He is the dedicatee of Walton's Capriccio burlesco, of which he conducted the première by the New York PO in 1968. Kostelanetz's successful arrangements of light music, using densely concentrated instrumental sonorities and rich, saturated harmonies, influenced film music of the time. Together with G. Hammond he wrote Echoes: Memoirs of André Kostelanetz (New York, 1981).

BERNARD JACOBSON

Kostić, Dušan (b Zagreb, 23 Jan 1925). Serbian composer. He studied at the Belgrade Academy (1947–55) with Milošević (composition) and in 1955 took conducting lessons with Scherchen at Bayreuth. He was music editor of Radio Belgrade (1957–9) and from 1964 a lecturer and later professor at the Belgrade Academy, retiring in 1991. He gained the PhD in 1963 and the DMA in 1995.

His music takes late Romanticism as its starting-point, with the use of a harmonic idiom somewhat influenced by Hindemith and an impressionist orchestration. Many of his later works are strongly neo-classical in style. In his first major work, the Symphony in G, he also used elements of 12-note technique, especially in the 12-note passacaglia, as well as carefully thought-out motivic working. Two fine expressionist choral and orchestral works from 1961, Otadžbina ('The Fatherland') and Kragujevac, show his use of polytonal techniques, together with a dramatic Wagnerian leitmotif structure. Kostić's great sense of humour is particularly in evidence in some of his recent instrumental pieces and most explicitly in his two operas, which demonstrate a skilful mixture of irony and parody.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ops: Majstori su prvi ljudi [Artisans are the Most Important People] (J. Putnik, after K. Trifković), 1962; Sumnjivo lice [Suspected Person] (2, B. Nušić), 1993–6

Orch: 2 Musics for Movies, orch à 2, 1955–6; Crnogorska svita [Montenegro Suite], 1957; Kontrasti, sym. poem, 1957; Sym. no.1, 1957; Vn Conc., 1962; Svečana uvertira [Festive Ov.], 1962; Sym. no.2, 1965; Sym. no.3, 1965–6; Pf Conc., 1967; Conc. antifonale, 1971; Divertimento, str, 1972; Conc., tpt, chbr orch, 1972; Pf Conc., 1992; Sym. no.3b [no.4], 1993–4

Chbr and solo inst: Sonata, bn, pf, 1952; Str Qts no.1, 1953; no.2, 1954; Sonata amorosa, vn, pf, 1957; Str Qts no.3, 1976; no.4, 1977; 3 pieces, ob, pf, 1979; Suite, vc, 1981; Četiri i po parčeta [4½ Lumps], pf, 1985; Suite, 2 pf, 1989; Intrada, Aria, Quartetto e gran' finale d'una opera seria, trbn, pf, 1993; Burlesca for the Polynesian Chieftain Tramba Rapa Tetoo Haha Hendoo Rivinade, org, 1994; Sedam hipopotamskih etida [7 Hippopotamic Studies], pf, 1995; Mala slobodnozidarska muzika [Little Masonic Music], pf, 1995; Girnata d'un bambino [A Children's Day], pf, 1996

Choral: Sutjeska (cant., J. Brković), 1958; Brod [The Boat] (cant., G. Tartalja), 1959; Morača (cant., J. Đonović), 1959; Duž duge, duge ulice [Along the Long, Long Street] (cant., V. Borhert), 1959; Otadžbina [The Fatherland] (cant.), 1961; Kragujevac (cant., D. Maksimović), 1962; Jama [The Pit] (cant., I.G. Kovačić), 1962; 6 Madrigals and Motets, ?1969; Bačke pošalice [Jokes from Bačka], female chorus, 1971; Serbia (cant., 19th century Serbian), chorus, orch, 1978; Niški epitaf [Epitaph for Niš], chorus, orch, 1980; Liturgija, chorus, 1990; 4 Folksongs from Montenegro, chorus, 1995; Amuleti, chorus, orch, *c*1962–8; Basne [Fables] (S. Usković), chorus, orch, *c*1962–8; short pieces, folksong arrs.

Solo vocal: Severno leto [Northern Summer] (R. Dimitrijević), Bar, pf, 1957; Pjesma gorka [Painful Songs] (D. Cesarić), Bar, pf, 1959; Posmrtne pesme [Songs of Death] (anon. 13th century, orthodox prayer bk, pss), Mez, pf, 1992; Ćutljivost [Verschwiegenheit] (J. Goethe), 1v, pf, 1994; Devojačke tajne [The Maiden's Secrets], S, pf, 1996

Principal publisher: Udruženje kompozitora Srbije

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Peričić: Muzički stvaraoci u Srbiji [Musical creators in Serbia] (Belgrade, 1969), 197–204
T. Reich: Susreti sa suvremenim kompozitorima Jugoslavije [Meetings with contemporary Yugoslav composers] (Zagreb, 1972), 119–21
A. Koci and others: Jugoslovanska glasbena dela [Yugoslav musical works] (Ljubljana, 1980), 232–4

NIALL O'LOUGHLIN

Köstlin, Heinrich Adolf. German theologian and music historian, son of JOSEPHINE LANG.

Kosugi, Takehisa (b Tokyo, 24 March 1938). Japanese composer. He studied musicology at the National University of Fine Arts and Music in Tokyo, graduating in 1962; with the foundation in 1960 of Group Ongaku, he began his work in group improvisation and event music. Works such as South II (1964) and Instrumental Music (1965) were performed by the avant-garde performance group Fluxus during his stay in the USA, mainly in New York, from 1965 to 1967. He established the electro-acoustic group Taj Mahal Travellers in 1969 and performed music for mixed media with them until 1975. After emigrating to the USA in 1977 he was active as a composer and performer with the Merce Cunningham Dance Company, along with Cage and David Tudor; in 1995 he became its musical director. Among the many exhibitions and festivals at which he presented sound installations was Für Augen und Ohren, held in Berlin in 1980. In 1994 he won the John Cage Award for Music. His interests lie in Messiaen's rhythmic modes and in jazz, rock and folk music; his performances on the electric violin and on electronic modulation devices are informed by oriental sonic gestures.

WORKS
(selective list)

Events: Anima I, long string, 1961; Micro I, microphone, 1961; Anima II 'Chamber Music', large bag with zips, 1962; Chironomy I, hand, 1962; Ear Drum Event, window, door, 1962; South I, v, 1962; Theater Music, walking, 1963; Malika V, flower, 1963; To W, wall, 1964; Anima VII, slow motion, 1964; South II, v, 1964; South III 'Malika', v/action, 1965; Film & Film IV, paper screen, 1965; Piano, object floating on pond, 1966; South VIII, mixed-media, 1979; Cycles for 7 Sounds, multi-space performing event, 1981; Walking, 1983; +–, multi-purpose event, 1987; Metal Interspersion, sound object, 1992

Sound installations: Interspersion for 54 Sounds, 1980; Melodies, mixed-media, 1984; Loops I, II, 1988; Modulation, 1991; Islands, 1991; Streams, 1993; Zoom, 1993; Imitated Summer, 1996; Illuminated Summer, 1996

Mixed-media performance: Organic Music, 1962; Tender Music, 1965; Instrumental Music, 1965; Music G, 1966; Eclipse, 1967; Module, audio-visual music, 1990

El-ac: S. E. Wave/E. W. Song, 1976; Interspersion, 1979; Assemblage, 1986; Rapsody, el-ac, v, 1987; Spectra, 1989

Live elecs: Catch-Wave 'Mano-Dharma', 1967; Heterodyne, 1972; Untitled Piece, 1980; Cycles, 1981; Spacing, 1984; Streams, 1991; Reflections, 1992; Transfiguration, 1993; Streams II, 1994; Tetrafeed, 1997; Wave-Code A–Z, 1997

Other elec: Catch-Wave '71, tape, 1971; South V, chorus, elecs, 1971; The Fly, tape, 1982; Intersection, pf, elecs, 1983

Conventional forces: Piano-Wave-Mix, pf, v, 1972; Wave-Code ♯e-1, v, 1974; Numbers/Tones, pf, 1976

Principal publisher: Lovely Music

YOKO NARAZAKI

Košut, Michal (b Brno, 7 June 1954). Czech composer. He studied composition with Ctirad Kohoutek at the Janáček Academy in Brno. In the 1980s he devoted himself to composition, winning prizes at home and abroad. His works have been performed in Switzerland, Germany, the Netherlands, France, Great Britain, the USA and Japan. He has also written music for several films. His compositions frequently use a combination of live and electronic music and he has been involved in the creation of a 'bizarre orchestra', which combines transformed orchestral and synthesized sounds. In the 1990s he took up a post teaching theory of music at the Masaryk University in Brno (PhD 1995), becoming a professor in 1999.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Slečna Čarodějka [Miss Witch] (op, I. Běhalová, after V. Našredinová), 1980

Orch: Jan Santini Aichel, sym. tableau, 1979; Gepard (after G.T. di Lampedusa), 1987

Chbr and solo inst: Svět Jana Zrzavého [The World of Jan Zrzavý], 1979; Musica per clarinetto solo, 1982; Musica per quattro, sax qt, 1983; Země zakletého slunce ii [The Country of the Enchanted Sun ii], a sax, mar, vib, 1988; Sonata, vn, 1993; Trio, vn, cl, pf, 1995

Vocal: Šaty pro Desdemonu [A Dress for Desdemona], S, va/Mez, vn, 1988

Elec: Katedrála v Coventry [Coventry Cathedral], 1984; Mimikry [Mimicry] (TV ballet), 1991; Valerie (op-pantomime after V. Nezval), 1993; Ifigenie (J.A. Pitínský), 1996

Principal publishers: Panton, Czech Music Fund

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Čeští skladatelé současnosti [Czech composers of today] (Prague, 1985)

J. Havlík: Česká symfonie 1945–1980 [The Czech symphony 1945–80] (Prague, 1989)

KAREL STEINMETZ

Kosviner, David (Gordon) (b Johannesburg, 2 Dec 1957). South African composer. He studied at the University of Cape Town, where his teachers included Klatzow and James May (BMus 1978, MMus 1986), at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik und Darstellende Kunst, Stuttgart, with Lachenmann (Künstlerische Abschlussprüfung, 1989) and at Keele University with George Nicholson. His music is primarily linear in conception. By superimposing independent musical strata, he creates irregular rhythmic patterns that are either augmented to become the form of the composition, or diminished to be perceived as individual rhythmic units. Specific pitches are identified with each impulse of the resulting rhythms and a harmony or harmonic field is associated with each pitch. The influence of his South African-Jewish roots and their cultural associations within Germany, the country he has adopted as his home, are reflected in the titles of his compositions. Many works are scored for unusual instruments and ensembles.

WORKS

Inst: ... furG ... , fl, pf, 1981; Ciascun apra ben gli orecchi, str qt, 1982; Patchwork, passacaglia, org, 1983; Tonal Implications, pf, 1983; Botosani, orch, 1984–5; Thumbprint, str qt, 1984; Tocamiento, ob, bn, str trio, hpd, 1985–6, rev. 1987; Met Titel, pf qt, 1987; Ogni pensiero vola, org, 1987; en verdwyn met die sypaadjie, vn/va, 1988; Hamba Kahle, trbn, va, vc, 1988; Worksong, pf, 1988; Deciso, pf qt, 1989; For Nancy Ruffer, fl, vc, pf, 1989; Sea and Sand, vn, pf, str, 1989–90; Mayibuye, str qt, 1992, rev. 1996, 1997; TRIO 1992, fl, cl, pf, 1992; baYom haHub, org, 1993; Lo-Yisá, orch, 1993–4; Richiesta III, tr rec, 1994; Worksong II, conc., pf, ens, 1994; Brass Qnt, 1995; Richiesta IV, b flugelhorn, 1996; ha'azinab, fl d'amore, orch, 1997–8; Ngoku sifikile, mar, org, 1997

Vocal: [zal] (D.G. Kosviner), 16vv, 1991–2; La balada del agua der mar (F.G. Lorca), 16vv, 1992–3; Dein Leib im Rauch durch die Luft (N. Sachs), SSSSAAAA, 1995; Liederzyklus für Barbara (M. Hille), Mez, T, pf, 1996–7

DAVID BLAZEY

Koswick, Michael (b in or nr Finsterwalde; fl 1507–20). German music theorist. He matriculated at the University of Frankfurt an der Oder in 1507 and obtained the master's degree there in 1516. By 1520 he had adopted the title 'Frater'. He may have been the Michael Kosswig who was sub-deacon at Merseburg Cathedral in 1517.

In his Compendiaria musicae artis aeditio (Leipzig, 1516), Koswick endeavoured to present elementary music theory in a concise form. The foreword praises the usefulness and effects of music by quoting from the Bible and ancient Greek authorities. At the centre of the first part, 'Musica choralis', is the chapter on church modes together with numerous examples and intonation formulae; the second part deals with polyphonic music and concentrates particularly on mensural theory. The treatise concludes with a chapter on counterpoint, in which Koswick made new progress in compositional theory. After surveying consonances and dissonances, Koswick gave rules for progressions in two-voice settings and for the various possible effects in three-voice compositions, starting with the interval between the tenor and the discant. Koswick himself admitted that he gathered the contents of his treatise from various textbooks, but he added some new points. He quoted only Gaffurius, but his prime sources are the treatises of the Cologne school: Cochlaeus, Wollick and an anonymous Introductorium musicae (D-LEu, *c*1500; ed. H. Riemann, MMg, xxix (1897), 12; xxx (1898), 1).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K.W. Niemöller: Nicolaus Wollick (1480–1541) und sein Musiktraktat (Cologne, 1956), 281ff

R. Federhofer-Königs: Johannes Oridryus und sein Musiktraktat (Cologne, 1957)

A.M. Busse Berger: Mensuration and Proportion Signs: Origins and Evolution (Oxford, 1993)

MARTIN RUHNKE

Koszewski, Andrzej (b Poznań, 26 July 1922). Polish composer and musicologist. He studied musicology with Chybiński at the university (1945–50) in Poznań, and theory and composition with Poradowski at the conservatory (1946–53) before becoming a pupil of Szeligowski in Warsaw (until 1958). He also undertook studies on the music of Chopin and the folk music of Wielkopolska. In 1965 he was appointed lecturer at the Poznań Conservatory, later becoming professor (1978) and chair (1984) of theory and composition. He has received prizes from the Polish Ministry of Arts and Culture (1978, 1982, 1988) and the Union of Polish Composers (1986).

The largest and most original group of compositions by Koszewski are his works for unaccompanied chorus. Of these, most individual are the pieces from the 1960s and 70s which employ novel means of articulation: La espero and Ba-no-sche-ro, for example, explore sounds formed from syllables and include whistling, hissing and frullato, while Muzyka fa–re–mi–do–si (1960), based on a five-note series (FryDEryk CHopin), thematically incorporates parlando and vocal glissandos. Such extended techniques in Koszewski's choral style can be attributed to the influence of contemporaneous Polish instrumental music. The remainder of his choruses tend to be either based on folk pieces or inspired by the Polish liturgy and its music, familiar from his formative years as a boy chorister at Poznań Cathedral.

WORKS
(selective list)

VOCAL

Choral (mixed chorus, unless otherwise stated): Kołysanka [Cradle Song] (H. Piotrowski), female chorus, 1952; Mazowianka (Pol. folk), 1952; Muzyka fa-re-mi-do-si (syllabic text), 1960; La espero [The Hope] (in Esperanto, L. Zamenhof), 2 choruses, 1963; Tryptyk wielkopolski (Pol. folk), 1963; Ave Maria Praeclara (Pol. anon.), male/mixed chorus, 1963; Nicolao Copernico dedicatum (cant., J. Ratajczak, 3 mixed choruses, 1966; Gry [Games] (Ratajczak, H. Orłowski), female/mixed chorus, 1968; Kantylena (vocalise), female chorus, 1969; Ba-no-sche-ro (Ratajczak, Orłowski, E. Tłuchowski, Koszewski), 1971–2; Canzone e Danza (Koszewski), female/male/mixed chorus, 1974; Prologus (Gallus), 1975; Ad musicam (Koszewski), 2 mixed choruses, whistling group, 1979; Campana (Latin anon.), male/mixed chorus, 1980; Angelus Domini, 1981; 3 chorały eufoniczne [3 Euphonic Chorales] (Hippocrates, A. de Lille, Koszewski), 2 mixed choruses, 1982, Strofy trubadura [Troubadour Poems] (G. de Poitiers), 1986; Serioso-giocoso (Koszewski), 1989; Carmina sacrata (Latin anon.), 1992–4; Missa Gaude Mater, 1998; arrs. of Chopin songs

3 Songs, works for whistling group

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Conc. grosso all'antica, str, 1947; Taniec wielkopolski [Wielkopolska Dance], 1951; Allegro symfoniczne, 1953; Sinfonietta, 1956

Chbr and solo inst: Pf Trio, 1950; Sonata breve, pf, 1954; 5 dawnych tanców [5 Old Dances], pf, 1954–63; Tryptyk wielkopolski, pf, 1963; Makowe ziosenka [Poppy Seeds] (F. Ratajezak), reciter, pf, 1969; Przystroje [Ornamentations], pf, 1970; 3 sonatiny, pf, 1978

WRITINGS

'Melodyka walców Chopina', Studia muzykologiczne, no.2 (1953), 276–341

'"Kantata Pokoju" Stanisława Skrowaczewskiego', Muzyka, v/5–6 (1954), 29–36

'"Koncert na orkiestre" Witolda Lutosławskiego', RM, ii/21 (1958), 15–18

'Problemy rytmiczne i agogiczne w walcach Chopina' [Rhythmical and agogical concerns in Chopin's waltzes], Annales Chopin, no.3 (1958), 113–32

'Das Walzerelement im Schaffen Chopins', DJbM, v (1960), 58–66

'Das Wienerische in Chopins Walzern', Chopin-Jb (1963), 27–42

'Ksiądz Wacław Gieburowski jako dyrygent i kompozytor' [Father Gieburowski as conductor and composer], Monochord, nos.6–7 (1995), 85–93

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EMuz (J. Danuta)

T. Marek: 'Composers' Workshop: Andrzej Koszewski', Polish Music, no.1 (1976), 13–17 [interview]

A. Podhajska: 'Twórczość: fortepianowa Andrzeja Koszewskiego' [Koszewski's piano works], Prace specjalne, no.18 (1979)

R. Połczyński: 'Traktuję chór jako orkiestrę głosów ludzkich: rozmowa z Andrzejem Koszewskim' [I treat the choir as an orchestra of human voices: interview with Koszewski], RM, xxx/8 (1986), 3–5

L. Zielińska: Przewodnik po twórczości Andrzeja Koszewskiego [A guide to the music of Koszewski] (Poznań, 1993)

□

Kotek, (Eduard) Yosif [Joseph] (Yosifovich) (b Kamenets-Podol'sk, nr Moscow, 25 Oct/6 Nov 1855; d Davos, 4 Jan 1885). Russian violinist and composer. He studied the violin with Jan Hřimalý and theory with Tchaikovsky at the Moscow Conservatory, whose director, Nikolay Rubinstein, recommended him in 1876 as resident violinist to Nadezhda von Meck. In 1877 Tchaikovsky dedicated his Valse-scherzo to Kotek, who in 1878 advised Tchaikovsky on technical problems in the solo part of his Violin Concerto, which they performed (with piano accompaniment) privately in Clarens, Switzerland, on 3 April 1878. Kotek played the piece in public only once, in Moscow in November 1882. After further lessons with Joachim in Berlin, Kotek became a violin teacher at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik (1882). He wrote some studies, duets and solo pieces for the violin, which remained in the repertory for some years.

FRIEDRICH BASER/DAVID BROWN

Kothari, Komal (b Kapasan, between Udaipur and Chittaurgarh, Rajasthan, India, 4 March 1929). Indian folklorist and scholar of traditional music. His early education was in Udaipur and Jodhpur. Having taken a degree in Hindi at the University of Rajasthan, he first pursued scholarly interests in Hindi literature. In 1961 he founded the Rupayan Sansthan, the Rajasthan Institute of Folklore, at the village of Borunda about 112 km from Jodhpur, and became its director. Here he initiated his life's work of collecting, documenting and preserving the oral traditions of Rajasthani performing arts. The Institute now houses a huge and unparalleled documentary collection of folktales, songs, proverbs and riddles of Rajasthan. For several years Kothari has been a leading force in introducing traditional Rajasthani professional musicians and folksingers such as the Langas and Manganiyars to Indian and Western audiences, travelling with groups of them to Europe. In 1960 he published a volume of criticism in Hindi, Sāhitya, saṅgīt aur kalā ('Literature, Music and Art'). His Monograph on Langas (1972) contains the texts and English translations of 12 songs with valuable notes on their ethnographic and musical background. Publications of the Rajasthan Institute of Folklore include recordings, a folktale text series, a monthly journal on folk arts and another, Lok saṃskṛti ('Folk Culture'), on folklore and literature, which have been valuable sources for the study of the history and oral literatures of the region. Kothari was secretary to the Rajasthan Sangeet Natak Akademi in the 1960s and was awarded the Nehru Fellowship in 1976.

WRITINGS

Sāhitya, saṅgīt aur kalā (Jodhpur, 1960)
'Problems of Preservation in Folk-Lore Studies', Sangeet Natak, no.3 (1966), 5–15
Monograph on Langas: a Folk Musician Caste of Rajasthan (Borunda, 1972)
'The Folk Legacy of Rajasthan', National Centre for the Performing Arts Quarterly Journal, i/2 (1972), 1–10
'Langas: a Folk Musician Caste of Rajasthan', Sangeet Natak, no.27 (1973), 5–26
'Report from Rajasthan', National Centre for the Performing Arts Quarterly Journal, vi/1 (1977), 15–26
'The Shrine: an Expression of Social Needs', Gods of the Byways: Shrines of Rajasthan (Oxford, 1982), 4–31 [pubn of the Museum of Modern Art, Oxford]
'Epics of Rajasthan', National Centre for the Performing Arts Quarterly Journal, xiii/3 (1984), 1–19
'Performers, Gods, and Heroes in the Oral Epics of Rajasthan', Oral Epics in India, ed. S.H. Blackburn and others (Berkeley, 1989), 102–17

JONATHAN KATZ

Köthen. See CÖTHEN.

Kotík, Petr (b Prague, 27 Jan 1942). American composer and conductor of Czech birth. He studied the flute in Prague with František Čech and in Vienna with Hans Reznicek. He studied composition in Prague with Jan Rychlík, and at the Vienna Music Academy with Karl Schieske, Jelinek, and Cerha (1963–66). In Prague, Kotík founded and directed two experimental music ensembles: Musica Viva Pragensis (1961–4) and the QUAX Ensemble (1966–9), performing his own and other Czech compositions, as well as music by Boulez, Cage, Cardew, Feldman, Nono, Schwertsik, Stockhausen, Webern, and others.

In 1969 Kotík moved to the USA as a member of the Center of the Creative and Performing Arts at the University of Buffalo (1969–73). In 1970 he founded the SEM Ensemble which toured the USA, Europe and South America. In 1992 he founded the Orchestra of the SEM Ensemble, one of America's leading large-scale new music groups.

Kotík's compositional method is based on indeterminacy as well as consciously controlled decisions. Since the early 1960s he has worked with graphic material to determine parameters in the compositional process. Kotík's compositions in 1970–83 contain independent parts which can, by overlapping, form various ensembles. A common pulse serves as a unifying element to the diverse parts which can be performed either as a solo or simultaneously with any number of other parts. During the 1980s Kotík's compositions became more fixed, his latest scores being precisely notated. Even though his recent pieces involve complex harmonies, the basic structure of the chords is still based on 5ths, 4ths, and octaves.

WORKS
(selective list)

Alley, variable ens, 1960–70; Congo, 7 insts, 1962; Kontrapunkt II, a fl, eng hn, cl, bn, va, vc, 1962–3; Hudba pro tři [Music for Three], va, vc, db, 1964; Spontano, pf, 9 insts, 1964; 6 Plums, orch, 1965–8; Kontrabandt, elecs, 2–6 pfmrs, 1967; There is Singularly Nothing (G. Stein), 10vv, 12 insts, 1971–3, rev. 1995; If I Told Him (Stein), 2vv, insts, 1973–4; John Mary (Stein), 2vv, fl, ob, trbn, perc, 1974; Many, Many Women (Stein), 6vv, 6 insts, 1975–8; Adagio, orch, 1977; Drums, 2 perc, 1977–81; Explorations in the Geometry of Thinking (R. Buckminster Fuller), 2vv, 1981; Commencement (Buckminster Fuller), 2vv, 1981; August/October, va, ens, 1981, rev. as Apparent Orbit, a fl, ens, 1984–5; Music for Winds, variable ens, 1981–2; Solos and Incidental Harmonies, fl, vn, 2 perc, 1983, rev. 1984; Integrated Solos, fl, tambourine, tpt, elec, 1986–8; Wilsie Bridge, 2 fl, 2 tpt, 2 synth, 8 perc, 1986–7; Dopisy Olze [Letters to Olga] (V. Havel), 5 spkrs, 7 insts, 1989–91
Quiescent Form, orch, 1964–96

Principal publishers: Srajer, Universal

IVAN POLEDŇÁK

Koto. A Japanese long zither, one of the family of East Asian zithers that includes the Chinese zheng, the Korean KAYAGŬM and the Vietnamese ĐÀN TRANH. The koto probably originated in China and was introduced to Japan around the start of the Nara period (710–84) or somewhat earlier. The term originally referred to a variety of plucked chordophones, including the BIWA. The modern instrument has 13 silk or nylon strings of equal length and thickness, stretched with equal tension over 13 movable bridges. The tuning of the strings, while always pentatonic, depends on the mode of the piece. The modern koto repertory dates from the end of the 16th century. Sōkyoku (koto music) includes song-cycles (kumiuta), instrumental pieces (shirabemono) and a form consisting of two or more song sections separated by extended instrumental interludes (tegotomono). In the jiuta ensemble, the koto joins the SHAMISEN (long-necked lute) and the SHAKUHACHI (end-blown flute). The koto is also used in the tōgaku repertory of gagaku court music. In modern Japan it is most important as a household instrument and is considered a valuable adjunct to a refined upbringing and education, although this role is rapidly being usurped by the piano.

For illustration and further discussion of the history and repertory, see JAPAN, §II, 4. For illustration of a koto bridge, see BRIDGE, fig.1*e*.

W. ADRIAANSZ

Kotoński, Włodzimierz (b Warsaw, 23 Aug 1925). Polish composer, teacher and writer on music. He studied composition with Rytel at the Warsaw Academy of Music (1945–51) and took lessons with Szeligowski in Poznań. During the last years of socialist realism in Poland he devoted his energies to studying folk music of the Tatra mountains. He attended the Darmstadt summer courses between 1957 and 1961, and was the first composer to make use of the Experimental Studio (founded 1957) of Polish Radio; he has since worked in many other European studios and held residencies abroad. In 1967, he was appointed lecturer in composition at the Warsaw Academy, where he also directed the electronic music studio. A gifted composition teacher, his pupils have included Grudzień, Krupowicz, Kulenty, Szymański, Wielecki and Mykietyn.

After 1956 Kotoński severed ties with neo-classicism and in so doing became one of the most radical composers in Poland at that time. His absorption of pointillistic serialism in Sześć Miniatur ('Six Miniatures') and Muzyka kameralna led to his greatest achievement of this period, the orchestral Musique en relief (1959). In the 1960s his music was indicative of the Polish trend towards 'sonorism', aleatorism and extended instrumental techniques, though it was characterized by a particular delicacy, textural refinement and by his preference for chamber groupings and specific instruments, especially percussion. He was a pioneer in Poland of tape pieces, of live electronic sound-distribution and in the development of synthesized and computer music.

In 1972, in the Oboe Concerto, he combined electronics with orchestral sonorities. This was followed by a series of symphonic poems, starting with Róża wiatrów ['Wind Rose'], which take up the subject of meteorological and navigational winds touched upon in earlier pieces. After 1976 his astute sense of colour, particularly in chamber textures, is accompanied by less dissonant harmony and melody, and in an idiom that includes heterophonic arabesques of frequently Asian-like quality. These relaxed musings were overtaken in the mid-1990s by procedural and expressive concerns of a more traditional symphonic nature. The Concerto for Electric Guitar (1994) is the most extrovert example of Kotoński's later brand of fusion, though the ethos of this period remains consistent with his early interest in folk culture and musique concrète.

WORKS

(selective list)

Orch: Tańce góralskie [Highlander Dances], 1950; Prelude and Passacaglia, 1953; Muzyka kameralna, 21 insts, perc, 1958; Musique en relief, 6 orch groups, 1959; Conc. per 4, pf, hpd, gui, hp, orch, 1960, rev. 1965; Musica per fiati e timp, 1963; Muzyka na 16 talerzy i smyczki [Music for 16 Cymbals and Str], 1969; Ob Conc., ob + ob d'amore, live elecs, orch, 1972; Róża wiatrów [Wind Rose], 1976; Bora, 1979; Sirocco, 1980; Terra incognita, 1984; Elec Gui Conc., gui, 11 insts, 1994; Sym. no.1, 1995; Speculum vitae, orch, tape, 1996; Vn Conc., 1996

Chbr and solo inst: Quartettino, 4 hn, 1950; 6 miniatur, cl, pf, 1957; Trio, fl, gui, perc, 1960; Canto, ens, 1961; Selection I, cl, a sax, t sax, gui, 1962; Monochromia, ob, 1964; Pezzo, fl, pf, 1964; Wind Qnt, 1964; A battere, perc, gui, va, vc, hpd, 1966; Pour 4, cl, trbn, vc, pf, 1968; Multiplay, 2 tpt, hn, 2 trbn, tuba, 1971; Musical Games, 5 pfmrs, 1973; Muzyka wiosenna [Spring Music], fl, ob, vn, synth/tape, 1978; Pełnia lata [Midsummer], cl, vc, pf, live elecs, 1979; Pieśń jesienna [Autumn Song], hpd, tape, 1981; Sceny liryczne, 9 pfmrs, 1986; Tlalocl, hpd, perc, 1986; Ptaki [Birds], cl, vc, pf, 1988; La gioia, 9 str insts, 1991, arr. str orch; Podróż zimowa [Winter Journey], fl, ob, cl, vn, vc, hpd, tape, 1995; Mijikayo, Jap. insts, 1996

Vocal: Harfa Eola [Aeolian Harp], S, inst ens, amp, 1973; 7 haiku (Bashō), female v, rec, ob, cl, hp, 1993

Other el-ac: Etiuda na jedno uderzenie w talerz [Study on 1 Cymbal Stroke], tape, 1959; Mikrostruktury, tape, 1963; Klangspiele, tape, sound-distribution, 1967; AELA, tape, 1970; Skrzydła [Wings], tape, 1973; Tableaux vivants dans un jardin à l'anglaise, synth, tape, 1986; Antiphonae, tape, 1989; Tierra caliente, tape, 1992

Incid music, film scores

Principal publishers: PMW, Agencja Autorska, Brevis, Moeck, PWM, Schott

WRITINGS

'Uwagi o muzyce ludowej Podhala' [Notes on the folk music of Podhale], Muzyka, iv/5–6 (1953), 3–25; iv/7–8 (1953), 43–58; iv/11–12 (1953), 26–45; v/1–2 (1954), 14–27

Góralski i zbójnicki [Highlander and bandit dances] (Kraków, 1956)

Instrumenty perkusyjne we współczesnej orkiestrze [Percussion instruments in the modern orchestra] (Kraków, 1968; Ger. trans. Mainz, 1963)

Muzyka elektroniczna (Kraków, 1989)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Zieliński: 'Concerto i Trio Włodzimierza Kotońskiego', RM, v/21 (1961), 9 only

T. Zieliński: 'Kwintet dęty' [Wind Quintet], RM, ix/17 (1965), 10–11

T. Zieliński: 'A battere Włodzimierza Kotońskiego', RM, x/23 (1965), 8–9

D. Detoni: 'Under the Impact of Kotoński's Jeux de sons', Polish Music, 4 (1967), 17–19 [on Klangspiele]

T. Zieliński: 'Pour quatre Włodzimierza Kotońskiego', RM, xiii/23 (1968), 9 only

M. Kominek: 'Róża wiatrów Włodzimierza Kotońskiego', RM, xxii/4 (1978), 6–7

B. Smoleńska-Zielińska: 'Epopeja żeglarska Włodzimierza Kotońskiego' [Kotoński's nautical epic], RM, xxxi/15 (1987), 3–5 [on the symphonic poems]

K. Jaraczewska-Mockałło: Włodzimierz Kotoński: katalog twórczości i bibliografia [Catalogue of works and bibliography] (Warsaw, 1995)

ADRIAN THOMAS

Kotter [Cotter, Kotterer, Kotther], Hans [Johannes] (b Strasbourg, *c*1485; d Berne, 1541). German organist and composer. He studied the organ with Paul Hofhaimer from 1498 until about 1500 at the expense of the Elector of Saxony. Until 1508 he was employed at the electoral court in Torgau, first as 'Meister Pauls Knabe' and later as an organist. He was probably in Basle some time after this, and met the Amerbach family. In 1514 he was appointed organist in the collegiate church of St Nicolas in Fribourg. Because of his Protestant leanings, which he had expressed in a poem before 1522, he was expelled from Fribourg at the end of 1530. After unsuccessful attempts to find a post in Strasbourg and Basle, Kotter settled in Berne, where, at least after 1534, he earned his living as a schoolmaster. In 1538 he was appointed schoolmaster in Konstanz, but without formally taking up this post he returned to Berne in the same year.

Kotter played a considerable part in the planning and copying of three keyboard tablatures that belonged to the Basle humanist and lawyer Bonifacius Amerbach (1495–1562) (ed. in SMd, vi, 1967). A large part of the first of these is in Kotter's own hand. The tablatures include some compositions of his own as well as arrangements by him of vocal settings by Barbireau, Hofhaimer, Isaac, Johannes Martini, Sermisy and other composers. A further composition by Kotter is contained in Fridolin Sicher's organ tablature (ed. in SMd, viii, 1992, 78), and it is possible that Leonhard Kleber's organ tablature contains some arrangements by him. Kotter's compositions show him to have been an accomplished musician, able to combine technical skill with musical inventiveness. His freely composed pieces merit special attention as early examples of an individual instrumental style. It is probable that Amerbach's three tablatures were intended primarily for the clavichord.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Merian: Die Tabulaturen des Organisten Hans Kotter (Leipzig, 1916/R) [incl. edns of some pieces]

W. Merian: 'Bonifacius Amerbach und Hans Kotter', Basler Zeitschrift für Geschichte und Altertumskunde, xvi (1917), 141–206

W. Gurlitt: 'Johannes Kotter und sein Freiburger Tabulaturbuch von 1513', Elsass-Lothringisches Jb, xix (1941), 216–37

H.J. Marx: 'Der Tabulatur-Codex des Basler Humanisten Bonifacius Amerbach', Musik und Geschichte/Music and History: Leo Schrade zum sechzigsten Geburtstag (Cologne, 1963), 50–70

M. Schuler: 'Ein Beitrag zur Biographie Hans Kotters', Mf, xxii (1969), 197–200

MANFRED SCHULER

Kotzebue, August von (b Weimar, 3 May 1761; d Mannheim, 23 March 1819). German dramatist, diplomat and man of letters. His adventurous career included appointments as lawyer and theatre secretary, Russian court councillor and editor, poet and Russian consul. His satires, his quarrels, and above all his duty to report to the Tsar of Russia on all affairs of interest in Germany and France, made him many enemies, and he was assassinated in 1819 by a student who suspected him of being a traitor and spy.

Kotzebue's immense output of plays includes a majority of ephemera, yet he dominated the repertory of German and Austrian (and many foreign) theatres for a considerable part of the 19th century, and the best of his comedies (including Die deutschen Kleinstädter, the first of a prodigious number of plays set in the self-important country town of Krähwinkel, the German equivalent of Gotham) are still effective. Beethoven wrote music for his Die Ruinen von Athen and König Stephan; Boieldieu, Kreutzer, Lortzing, Reichardt and Spohr are among composers who set his works; and Schubert wrote two operas to Kotzebue texts: Der Spiegelritter(?1812, incomplete), and Des Teufels Lustschloss (1813–14).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO (P. Branscombe) [inc. list of plays with musical connections]
August von Kotzebue's sämmtliche dramatische Werke (Leipzig, 1827–9)
W. von Kotzebue: August von Kotzebue: Urtheile der Zeitgenossen und der Gegenwart (Dresden, 1881)
K. Goedeke and others: Grundriss zur Geschichte der deutschen Dichtung, v (Dresden, 2/1893), 270–88; xv (Berlin, 2/1966), 151–278, 1138–40
L.F. Thompson: Kotzebue: a Survey of his Progress in France and England (Paris, 1928)
F. Stock: Kotzebue im literarischen Leben der Goethezeit (Düsseldorf, 1971)
K. Pendle: 'August von Kotzebue, Librettist', JM, iii (1984), 196–213
J. Krämer: Deutschsprachiges Musiktheater im späten 18. Jahrhundert: Typologie, Dramaturgie und Anthropologie einer populären Gattung (Tübingen, 1998)

PETER BRANSCOMBE

Kotzeluch, Leopold. See KOZELUCH, LEOPOLD.

Kotzwara, Francis. See KOCŽWARA, FRANTIŠEK.

Kouba, Jan (b Vysoké nad Jizerou, 28 July 1931). Czech musicologist. He studied musicology and history with Očadlík and Sychra at Prague University (1950–55) and took the diploma with a study of the hymns of the Union of the Bohemian Brethren (Příspěvky ke zpěvu Jednoty bratrské). In 1969 he took the doctorate at Prague with a dissertation on the oldest printed hymnbook (1501) from Bohemia. Subsequently he worked as assistant lecturer at the musicology department of Prague University, later moving to the Musicology Institute of the Czechoslovak Academy of Sciences (1965–91); in 1975 he became executive editor of Hudební věda (until 1988). His particular areas of research are Czech hymnology and the history of Czech music in the 15th and 16th centuries.

WRITINGS

'Kancionály Václava Miřínského' [Václav Miřínský's hymnbooks], MMC, no.8 (1959), 1–146
'Václav Klejch a jeho "Historia o vydání kancionálů v národu českém"' (Klejch and his History of the Publication of Hymnbooks in the Czech Nation], MMC, no.13 (1960), 61–203
'Blahoslavův rejstřík autorů českobratrských písní a jeho pozdější zpracování' [Blahoslav's list of the writers of Bohemian Brethren hymns and its later revision], MMC, no.17 (1962), 1–175
'Zu den Liedern des Ján Sylvanus', JbLH, xi (1966), 169–70
Der älteste Gesangbuchdruck von 1501 aus Böhmen (diss., U. of Prague, 1969); extracts in JbLH, xiii (1968), 78–112
'Jan Hus und das geistliche Lied', JbLH, xiv (1969), 190–96 with J. Bužga, E. Mikanová and T. Volek: Průvodce po pramenech k dějinám hudby: fondy a sbírky uložené v Čechách [Guide to the sources of music history: collections in Bohemia] (Prague, 1969)
'Období reformace a humanismu (1434–1620)' [Czech music during the Reformation and age of Humanism], Československá vlastivěda, ix/3, ed. M. Očadlík and R. Smetana (Prague, 1971), 53–86
'Německé vlivy v české písni 16. století' [German influences on Czech 16th-Century songs], MMC, nos. 27–8 (1975), 117–77
'Koledy v předbělohorských písňových pramenech' [Carols in song sources from the period before the Battle of the White Mountain], MMC, no.30 (1983), 9–37
ABC hudebních slohů: od raného středověku k W.A. Mozartovi [ABC of musical genres: from the early Middle Ages to W.A. Mozart] (Prague, 1988)
'Hudebně vědecká dokumentace' [Musicological documentation], HV, xxv (1988), 891–988
'Nejstarší české písňové tisky do roku 1550' [The earliest Czech song prints before 1550], MMC, no.32 (1988), 21–92
'Od husitství do Bílé hory (1420–1620)' [From the Hussite movement to the White Mountain], Hudba v českých dějinách (Prague, 1983, 2/1989), 83–146

JOSEF BEK

Koukouzeles [Papadopoulos], Joannes (*fl c*1300–50). Singer, composer and reviser of Byzantine chant. Traditionally known as the maïstōr ('master'), the 'second source of Greek music' (the first being John Damascene, 8th century) and angelophōnos ('angel-voice'), he was one of the most eminent Byzantine musicians during the Palaeologan dynasty (1261–1453) and was later made a saint of the Greek Orthodox Church.

1. LIFE. Koukouzeles probably lived during the reigns of the Emperor Andronikos II Palaeologos (1282–1328) and his successor. Evidence in Byzantine music manuscripts suggests that his musical career was well established by about 1300, and by the mid-14th century he was considered the most important Byzantine composer.

Much of what is known about Koukouzeles' life is contained in a short saint's biography, or vita, the earliest extant copies of which date from the 16th century. According to this text he was born in Dyrrachium, now Durrës in Albania, but moved to Constantinople while still a child to attend the imperial school as a protégé of the Byzantine emperor. His mother appears to have been Slavonic, according to instances of her speech recorded (albeit in Greek letters) in the vita; nothing is known about his father, although a few music manuscripts state that Koukouzeles' real surname was 'Papadopoulos', that is, 'son of a priest'. The vita says that Koukouzeles was not the composer's true name, but that it was given to him by his fellow pupils at the imperial school when they observed his difficulties with the Greek language; the nickname was a combination of the Greek word koukia ('beans') and the Slavonic zeliya ('cabbage').

Koukouzeles became famous at the imperial court for his exceptional voice, but at the height of his fame as a singer he left Constantinople to enter the monastery of the Great Lavra on Mount Athos. Although he sang for the liturgical services in the monastery church on Sundays and important feasts during the week, he lived outside the walls in a small chapel that he had built himself. The description in the vita of Koukouzeles's life on Mount Athos suggests that he was influenced by hesychasm, a mystical movement within Orthodoxy that was prevalent among the Athonite monks during the first half of the 14th century. There is no evidence that he ever left the Holy Mountain.

2. WORKS. Strunk suggested that Koukouzeles may have revised the traditional Byzantine HEIRMOLOGION and STICHĒRARION. The two earliest heirmologia with references to his name, RUS-SPsc gr.121 and ET-MSsc gr.1256, were copied in 1302 and 1309 respectively; and a stichērarion dating from 1341, GR-An 884, has the subscription '[copied] from a thoroughly corrected exemplar written by the old [?late] Koukouzeles'. Raasted's comparison of the traditional stichērarion with Koukouzeles's revised version has shown that original conflicts between melody and textual accent have been eliminated; some parts of the repertory have been transposed to a higher register, and the transitions between lines have been treated more uniformly. The general impression, however, is that Koukouzeles remained faithful to the older tradition.

Although the oldest known chants by Koukouzeles are preserved in appendixes to the two heirmologia mentioned above, most of his music is transmitted in the newer liturgical books, the AKOLOUTHIAI manuscripts and the kalophonic stichēraria; rubrics in these manuscripts reveal that Koukouzeles played a major role in their organization and early development. Many akolouthiai manuscripts include as part of the PAPADIKĒ (a brief treatise often attached to such manuscripts) Koukouzeles's most famous single work, the didactic chant Ison, oligon, oxeia (also known as To mega ison), which provides a melodic realization of the Byzantine neumes and traditional musical formulae represented in the notation and named in the text (see BYZANTINE CHANT, ex.5, for an extract from this chant). Ison, oligon, oxeia is based on a similar work by JOANNES GLYKYS, Koukouzeles' older contemporary and former teacher, but Koukouzeles' version is more refined. A number of diagrams attributed to Koukouzeles demonstrating the Byzantine scales and modes are also often included in papadikai, that of a wheel (trochos) to illustrate the tetrachords being most commonly found.

As a composer at the beginning of the 14th century, Koukouzeles was undoubtedly an innovator; he was perhaps the first to abandon the older, conservative traditions of chant composition in favour of new melodic invention. For example, the prooimiakos (Psalm ciii, sung at Saturday HESPERINOS) in the older, traditional layer of chant has a simple refrain that functions as a brief cadential appendage to certain lines of the psalm; in Koukouzeles' settings, however, the refrain is no longer subordinate but is expanded through textual tropes and has greater melodic interest than the psalm verse (in two of his five prooimiakos settings the music for the refrain is almost twice as long as that for the verse). Koukouzeles also expanded the text in his kalophonic settings of Psalm ii for Hesperinos; all such chants by his older contemporaries are built on a single line from the psalm, whereas Koukouzeles always augmented the basic text by incorporating into the principal line of the psalm at least one phrase from a different line, or elements from another verse (or even other verses). As a result of this textual expansion, Koukouzeles's kalophonic settings of Psalm ii are all of great length.

Koukouzeles also used a bolder vocal style in his chants than earlier composers: the melodic range either equals that of the traditional repertory or exceeds it, as the psalm refrains particularly show; and there is a substantial increase in the use of disjunct motion through the employment of intervals greater than the ascending and descending 3rd, even though his melodic lines remain predominantly conjunct. In general, the melodies of Koukouzeles are more skilfully and seamlessly wrought than those of the older, traditional repertory as well as the vast majority of chants by his contemporaries and successors.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Eustratiadēs: 'Iōannēs ho Koukouzelēs, ho maïstōr, kai ho chronos tēs akmēs autou' [Joannes Koukouzeles, the maïstōr, and the date of his activity], Epetēris hetaireias byzantinōn spoudōn, xiv (1938), 3–38

R. Palikarova-Verdeil: La musique byzantine chez les Bulgares et les Russes (du IXe au XIVe siècle), MMB, Subsidia, iii (1953), 193–210

G. Dévai: 'The Musical Study of Koukouzeles in a 14th-Century Manuscript', Acta antiqua Academiae scientarum hungaricae, vi (1958), 213–35

O. Strunk: 'Melody Construction in Byzantine Chant', Congrès d'études byzantines XII: Ohrid 1961, 365–73

E.V. Williams: John Koukouzeles' Reform of Byzantine Chanting for Great Vespers in the Fourteenth Century (diss., Yale U., 1968)

O. Strunk: 'P. Lorenzo Tardo and his "Ottoeco nei manoscritti melurgici": some Observations on the Stichera Dogmatika', Essays on Music in the Byzantine World, ed. K. Levy (New York, 1977), 255–67

A. Jakovljević: 'Ho Megas Maïstōr Iōannēs Koukouzelēs Papadopoulos', Klēronomia, xiv (1982), 362–74

E. Trapp: 'Critical Notes on the Biography of John Koukouzeles', Byzantine and Modern Greek Studies, xi (1987), 223–4

E. Trapp: Prosopographisches Lexikon der Palaiologenzeit, vi (Vienna, 1983), 34

S. Karas: Iōannēs Maïstōr ho Koukouzelēs kai hē epochē tou [Koukouzeles and his times] (Athens, 1992)

C. Troelsgård: 'The Development of a Didactic Poem: some Remarks on the "Ison, oligon, oxeia" by Ioannes Glykys', Byzantine Chant: Athens 1993, 69–85

J. Raasted: 'Koukouzeles' Revision of the Sticherarion and Sinai gr. 1230', Laborare fratres in unum: Festschrift László Dobszay zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. J. Szendrei and D. Hiley (Hildesheim, 1995), 261–77

M. Alexandru: 'Koukouzeles' Mega Ison: Ansätze einer kritischen Edition', Cahiers de l'Institut du Moyen Age grec et latin, lxvi (1996), 3–23

EDWARD V. WILLIAMS/CHRISTIAN TROELSGÅRD

Koulsoum, Ibrahim Oum. See UMM KULTHUM.

Koumendakis, Yorgos (b Réthymnon, Crete, 29 Nov 1959). Greek composer. He studied the piano and theory at the Réthymnon branch of the Hellenic Conservatory, before moving to Athens where he took private lessons in composition, analysis and conducting from Diamantis Diamantopoulos (1977–9). In Paris he followed courses at IRCAM (1979–80) and Xenakis's classes at the University of Paris (1980–81). In 1985 Ligeti commissioned his Symmolpa V for the European Community Youth Orchestra, and in 1990 his opera Essetai hemar ('The Day will Come', 1986) was performed in Oslo by the Oslo Sinfonietta. After winning the Prix de Rome in 1992, he spent 1993 at the Villa Medici composing his opera Bacchae.

With his striking aural conceptions and the sensuality of his approach to timbre, Koumendakis is one of the most remarkable of younger Greek composers. His approach to composition involves the unexpected juxtaposition of opposites: aggressive dissonance versus harmonic suavity, cluster-like harmonies or impulsive rhythms versus intimate melodic lines, lyrical or even liturgical utterances versus almost expressionistic climaxes. This rare coexistence of aural sensuality and an atmosphere of tragedy is as evident in short works (Horomimos, 1988) as it is in such larger-scale compositions as I Iphigenia sto yefyri tis Artas ('Iphigenia on the Bridge of Arta', 1994) and the Requiem ya to télos tou érota ('Requiem for the End of Love', 1995), where an existential despair is expressed through harmonic restraint and a continuous melodic flow.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ops: Aftokonia I, Aftokonia II [Suicide I, II] (Koumendakis), 1978–9; Kathimerinés aftoktonies [Daily Suicides] (Koumendakis), 1980–81, unperf.; Essetai hemar [The Day will Come] (Homer: Iliad, Odyssey), 1986, Oslo, 1990, rev. 1995; Bacchae (Koumendakis, after Euripides), 1992–4

Ballets: Apomakrynsi 3 [Remoteness] (Plato: Symposium), 1976, rev. 1977–8; O molyvénios stratiotis [The Leaden Soldier] (after H.C. Andersen), 1982; O Stratis Thalassinos ston kato kosmo [Stratis Thalassinos in the Underworld] (G. Seféris), 1982–3; Thyssia [Sacrifice] (part III of I trilogia tou iliou [Trilogy of the Sun]); Eros anikate machan [Love Invincible] (from Sophocles: Antigone), A, male chorus, 10 insts, 1988; Sappho (part I of Ta fengaria [The Moons]), 1993; I Iphigenia sto yefyri tis Artas [Iphigenia on the Bridge of Arta] (Y. Koumendakis, D. Papaïoannou), 1994; Requiem ya to télos tou érota [Requiem for the End of Love] (D. Kapetanakis), 1995; Dracula (D. Papaïoannou, after B. Stoker), 1997; Kataeghidha [Storm] (1, Papaïoannou), Athens, Concert Hall, 8 Nov 1997

Vocal: Apopeira hypnou [An Attempt to Sleep] (Y. Kondos), S, orch, 1979; 3 Poems (Y. Koumendakis), Ca, orch, 1979–80 [graphic score]; Conc. (Heraclitus and others), T, Bar, 6 vocal and inst groups, brass, str orch, 1982–3, destroyed; Elpomai [I Hope] (orat, Thucydides, St Paul, ancient Gk. texts), 28-pt mixed chorus, 11 brass, 44 str, 1984; Patria [Fatherland] (T. Galatis), S, Mez, cl, vn, vc, db, hpd, 1987; Ypsipolisapolis (Sophocles: Antigone, ancient Gk. texts), Mez, male chorus, fl, ob, tpt, 2 pf, 3 vc, 2 db, 1988; In dolore (Vergil), mixed chorus, 1988; Eros daemon (Sappho), Ct, 2 pf, 1991; Conc. (textless), S, orch, 1996; Missa harmoniae verbi (liturgical texts), S, Mez, T, B, mixed chorus, str qt, orch, 1998

Inst: Approche, pf, 1980; 2 Pieces, fl, pf, 1981; Anololyxe ke kateedhe, varvara mélee mayévoussa [She chanted loud some alien hymn of wizardry], str qt, 1982; Symmolpa I, pf, 1984; Symmolpa II, fl, cl, vn, va, pf, 1984, rev. 1986; Symmolpa III, fl, ob, cl, b cl, bn, hn, tpt, trbn, 2 perc, pf, str qnt, 1984, rev. 1985; Symmolpa IV, ob, cl, hn, 2 perc, pf, vn, va, vc, db, 1984; Symmolpa V, cl, b cl, pf, 2 vn, 2 va, 2 vc, 2 db, 1984; Symphania I, 2 pf, 1984, rev. 1988; Horomimos, pf, 1988; Symphania II, vc, pf, 1988; Small Conc., pf, fl, cl, vn, va, vc, mar, vib, 1989; Phyllon atimiton [Priceless Leaf], orch, 1990; Conc., pf, ww qnt, tpt, trbn, va, vc, db, 1991–2; Melody, mand, 1994; The Grimm Brothers Suite, str qt, 1996

Incid music for many plays

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PEM (S. von Harsdorf)

N. Slonimsky: Music Since 1900 (New York, 5/1994), 969, 977 only

GEORGE LEOTSAKOS

Kounadis, Arghyris (b Constantinople, 14 Feb 1924). Greek composer, conductor and pianist. A piano student of S. Farandatos at the Athens Conservatory, he graduated in 1952; he studied composition under Yannis Papaioannou at the Hellenic Conservatory in Athens, graduating in 1956. Scholarships from the Greek and West German governments enabled him to pursue his studies at the Freiburg Hochschule für Musik, where his composition teacher was Fortner and his conducting teacher Karl Ueter. In 1963 he was appointed assistant professor to Fortner and director of the Musica Viva concerts, succeeding Fortner as a professor in 1972; he retired in 1989. Kounadis has gradually emerged as one of the most important 20th-century Greek composers for the stage, his early ballets moving away from Kalomiris's National School toward more advanced idioms. He was one of the first composers to show an interest in rebétiko (a type of urban folksong) and during the period 1949–57 he composed a number of works which show the influence of this and, to some extent, of Stravinsky and Bartók. All but four of the works of this period were later withdrawn as he turned towards more novel techniques, including serial writing and aleatory forms, although his music has retained a strong lyrical basis. His operas, increasingly successful in Germany, though mostly unperformed in Greece, as well as his vocal music, represent perhaps the most important phase of his career. The former often display a sarcastic humour and social criticism, and are usually extended one-act works for chamber ensemble (sometimes with tape). The music, although essentially atonal, tends to incorporate a great variety of references, and even direct quotations – in Teiresias, for example, from Bellini, Maillart, Saint-Saëns and Donizetti, and in Die Bassgeige from Verdi. Lysistrata employs elements of Greek folk music and Byzantine melody, while in The Return – a modern approach to the myth of Orestes and Electra – speech and singing parallel the contrast between two different psychological states. Byzantine liturgical elements are also discernable in Bacchae, representing one of Kounadis's most mature achievements.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Sapfeiros [Sapphire] (ballet, 1, choreog. de Chirico), perf. 1950; Morfés mias ghinékas [Episodes from a Woman's Life] (ballet, 3, choreog. Manou), perf. 1951; Pandora (ballet, 1, choreog. R. Manou), Delphi, amphitheatre, 10 Aug 1951; Helioyénniti [Sun-Born] (ballet, 3, choreog. Y. de Chirico), perf. 1952; Nekrés fysseis [Still Live] (ballet, 7 scenes, choreog. A. Evanghelidou and D. Tsatsou), Athens, Ethnikos keepos, 10 Sept 1956, rev. 2 pf, 1989–90; Parodia st'aspra [Parody in White] (ballet, 1, choreog. A. Evanghelidou), Athens, Ethnikos keepos, 3 Sept 1956; Madame Hortense (ballet, 1, M. Arghyrakis, after N. Kazantzakis: Aléxis Zorba), 1956–7, unperf.; Heroica (film score, dir. M. Kakoyannis), 1960; The Return (op, 1, K. Cicellis and C. Clerides, after Cicellis: The Way to Colonos), 1961, rev. 1974 and 1987–8 as O Gyrismos; Der Gummisarg (op, 1, V. Ziogas, Ger. trans. O. Steininger), 1962; Die verhexten Notenständer (music theatre, 1, after K. Valentin), 1939, rev. 1991; Teiresias (revue, 10 scenes, Kounadis and S. Schönbohm), 1971–2; Doctor Faustus (incid music, C. Marlowe), chorus, org, ens, 1972–3; Der Ausbruch (op, 1, W. Jens), 1974; Die Bassgeige (op semiseria, 5 scenes, Schönbohm, W. Reuter, L. Lütkehaus and Kounadis, after A. Chekhov), 1978; Lysistrate (op, 1, Lütkehaus and Kounadis, after Aristophanes), 1980–81, rev. 1997–8; Der Sandmann (op, 1, P. Sievert, after E.T.A. Hoffmann), 1983–4; Kloios [Encircled] (film score, dir. K. Koutsomytis), 1988; Epilogos A (op, 1 scene, Kounadis after M. Sachtouris, Ger. trans. L. Lütkehaus), db, chorus, chbr ens, tape, 1989; Epilogos B (op, 1 scene, Gk. text, Kounadis after Sachtouris), Bar, chorus, chbr ens, tape, 1989; Bacchae (lyric drama, 1, Kounadis and Schönbom, after ancient Gk. text and free trans. by M. Kopidakis), 1993–6

Orch: Sinfonietta, 1951; 5 Compositions, 1957–8; Chorikon, 2 versions, 1958; Triptychon, fl, orch, 1964; Epitýmvion, 6 perc, 15 fl, 1965; Heterophonika idiomela, 1967; Moussiki ya piano ke orchistra, pf, orch, 1955; Suite, pf, cl, str, perc, *c*1955; Per viola ed orchestra da camera, va, 16 insts, 1977; Per pianoforte ed orchestra da camera, pf, 16 insts, 1985

Chbr: Moments musicaux, vn, pf, 1949–50; 5 Sketches, fl, 1959; Str Qt, 1960; Duo, fl, pf, 1961; 4 pezzi, version 1, fl, vc, pf, 1965; 'Wer Ohren hat zu hören, der höre', wind qnt, 1970; Blues [from Die verhexten Notenständer], fl, hpd, 1970; Die Sanduhr der Zeitluppe, action piece, cl, pf, perc, tapes, 1975; Moments musicaux, gui, 1988; Proanarkrousma se mia elegheia [Prelude to an Elegy], vc, pf, 1991

Vocal: Plans for a Summer (G. Seferis), Bar, pf, 1949; 3 Poems (Sappho), S, fl, cel, vib, va, vc, 1959; Epigramma I (U. Thomson), chorus, 1961; 3 Poems (C.P. Cavafy), S, fl, cel, gui, vc, 1963; 4 pezzi, version 2 (Enzensberger), S, fl, vc, pf, 1965; Rhapsodia (A. Hadrian, N. Engonopoulos, Homer), S, ens, 1967; 3 Poems (M.

Sachtouris, trans. T. Hensch), S/Bar, pf, 1967; Epigramma II (V. Ziogas), chorus, 1968; Epigramma III (Kounadis), chorus, 1968; Die Nachtigall (Sappho, ancient Gk.), S, 10 db, 1974; En Athinaes (TV score, Goufas and M. Pondikas), 1 male v, 1 female v, chorus, fl, cl, tuba, gui, elec gui, perc, prep pf, dzouras, 2 mand, 1976; Adieu der Metöken (N. Engonopoulos: I kalosyni ton anthropon [Human Kindness], Homer: Odyssey), T/Bar, tailor's dummy, pf, 1982; 5 Short Poems by Aléxis D. Zakythinos, S/Bar, pf, 1983; Ta horika [The Choral Songs] (Euripides: Bacchae), Mez, dramatic S, female chorus, chbr ens, 1993

Principal publishers: Bote & Bock, Modern, Tonger, Schott (Mainz)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Dounias: Moussikokritiká (Athens, 1963), 137, 170, 223, 227–8, 316

N. Slonimsky: 'New Music in Greece', MQ, li (1965), 25–35

B. Schiffer: 'Neue griechische Musik', Orbis musicae, i (1971–2), 193–201

G. Leotsakos: 'Kounadis, Arghyris', Pangosmio Viografiko Lexiko [Universal biographical dictionary] (Athens, 1988), 63 only

GEORGE LEOTSAKOS

Koundouroff [Koundouros], Aristotelis (b Tbilisi, Georgia, 29 Dec 1896/10 Jan 1897; d Volos, 8 July 1969). Greek composer. His father owned copper mines and foundries in Georgia. Little is known about his early musical studies. He later attended the conservatories of Tbilisi (1924–5) and Moscow (1927–30), studying with Ippolitov-Ivanov at both institutions, and additionally with Glère and Vasilenko at the latter, where he became head of Ippolitov-Ivanov's composition studio. In December 1930 he settled in Greece, where he earned his living teaching theory, first at the Piraeus League Conservatory (1931–2) and then at the pianist Woldemar Freeman's Musical Lycée (1932–8) and conducting the Nea Ionia (an Athenian suburb) municipal band (1938–41). From 1943 until his retirement in 1964 he was head of the music library and sound archives of Athens Radio. Xenakis and Vangelis were among his pupils.

Though Koundouroff's reputation during his lifetime was that of a marginal figure somewhat in the shadow of Kalomiris, he is now regarded as one of the most noteworthy figures of Greek music in the period 1930–60. Skilfully orchestrated, his earlier compositions, such as the Suite-fantaisie sur des thèmes populaires grecs (1930–31) and the one-movement Sinfonietta (1934), which received an award from the Academy of Athens, show the influence of his Russian training, and of Prokofiev's 'Soviet' style in particular. Later works, including the tone poem Orpheus and Eurydice (1962) and the Mazurka for piano (1963), are harmonically more adventurous, inviting comparison with the more radical Russian modernists such as Skyrabin (whom Koundouroff particularly admired) and Roslavets.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Pastorale (ballet), Batoum, 1919; Aul Bastundji [The Village Bastundji] (op, 4 scenes, Z.S., after M.Yu. Lermontov), 1917, rev. 1921–2, 1967, unfinished

Orch: Skaz'ki [Tales], 1919; Ikar [Icarus], 1929; Suite-fantaisie sur des thèmes populaires grecs, 1930–31; Sinfonietta, 1934; Marche militaire, C, 1937; Marsh na narodnuyu revolustionnuyu kretanskuyu temu [March on a Revolutionary Cretan Folk Theme], wind band, ?1941 [transcr. of 4th mvt of Suite-fantaisie]; Larghetto, 1947 [3rd mvt of Sym., f♯]; Predchustviye/Proaesthesis [Premonition], 1952; Corfu, suite, 1954; Orpheus and Eurydice, tone poem, 1962

Choral: Chorus for G. Xenopoulos's play Sabbath of the Souls, S, mixed chorus, pf, 1919; I zoi en tafo, S, A, T, B, pf, 1925–6 [with notes on orch]; 2 fragmenta iz syuitï Kartinï iz khudozhestvenno revulutsionnoy galerii [2 Frags. from the Suite 'Pictures from the Revolutionary Gallery of Painting'] (textless), mixed chorus, pf, 1929; Torzhestvennaya kantata k 70 letiyu M.M. Ippolitova-Ivanova [Triumphal Cant. on the 70th Anniversary of M.M. Ippolitov-Ivanov], SATB, pf, 1929; Sym. (G. Stambolis), f♯, S, Mez, Bar, mixed chorus, orch, 1947: Vostaniye [Uprising], Iz rabstva Indii [From the Indian Slavery]; Pages musicales historiques (suite, Gk. and Russian texts), mixed chorus ad lib, *c*1945–7; Paean (L. Karzis), 4-pt male chorus, fl, 2 ob, 2 cl, 2 bn, 2 hn, str, 1946; So sviatemi upokoi [May he Rest with the Saints], SATB [after Tchaikovsky: Sym. no.6, 4th mvt]

Solo vocal with orch: Slova tvoyey lyubvi [The Words of Your Love] (Russian text, trans. J. Ikonomidis), 1v, orch, 1922; Ya budu zhdat' tebya/Se kartero [For Thee I Wait] (O.D.A), 1v, orch, ?1923; Dva kota/Dhyo gatoi [Two Male Cats] (Russian text, trans. Y. Markakis), B/Bar, orch, 1932; Pro kota/O gatos [To the Male Cat] (Russian text, trans. Y. Markakis), B, orch, 1932; Makrya [Far Away] (C. Cavafy), 1942; Ortho kratondas nou [Correctly Thinking], Bar, orch [frag.]

Other solo vocal: Romance no.1 'Sta thambà makrinà paramythia' [Dim Distant Tales] , 1v, pf, 1919; Ya prishyol k tebe [I Came to You] (L. Mareeva), 1v, pf, 1919; Ya dochital stikhi [Reciting Verses] (V. Palei), 1923; Apo ti founda o kotsifas [By the Crest of the Blackbird] (V. Rotas), 1932; transcr. of N. Lambelet: Triandafyllia ke Kuparissi [The Rose Bush and the Cypress] (K. Papadopoulos), 1v, str qt

Pf: Moy pervïy romans bez slov [My First 'Romance sans paroles'], op.1/1, 1919; Valse, d, 1914–15; Fuga v smeshennom stile [Fugue in a mixed style]; Marche caprice, *c*1915; Skazka ruchi'ya [The Tale of the Brook], 1917; Berceuse, B, op.14, 1919; Poème lyrique, g♯, 1922; Les joies, suite, 1923; Ballada eroica, f♯, 1925; Menuet à Mme. L. Radowitch, 1934; Polka de concert, 1935; Mazurka, 1963; Skazka morya [The Tale of the Sea], 1964 [on a theme of 1912–20]; Barcarolla, c; Ballade [to accompany recitation of poems by K. Georgakopoulou]; Mazurka, e; Prelude; Valse, A; untitled piece, e

Other inst: Elégie, Fantasia, pf, str qt, 1926; Chorale, e♭, org

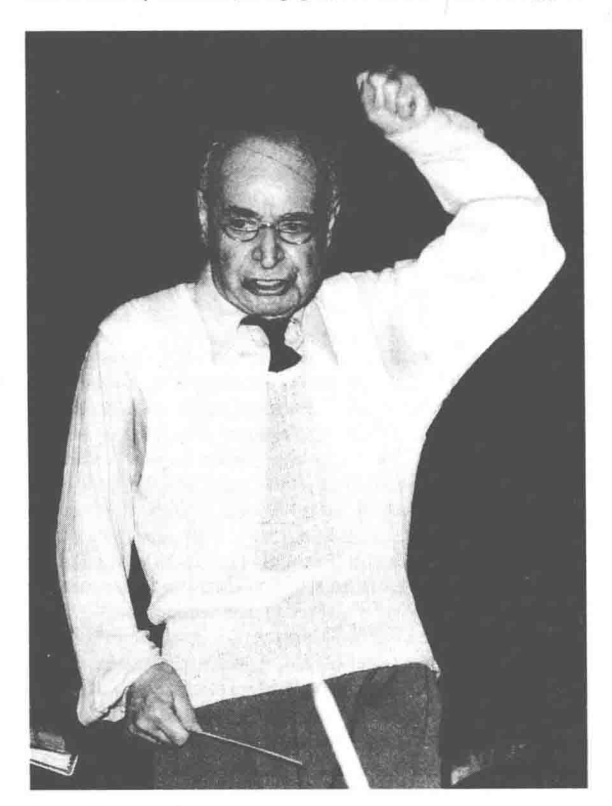
BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (J.G. Papaïoannou)

M.M. Ippolitov-Ivanov: Pyat'desyat let russkoy muzïki v moikh vospominaniakh [50 years of Russian music in my reminiscences] (Moscow, 1934)

K. Zileménos: 'Aristotelis Koundouroff', Radioprogramma, no.179 (1953), 27

I. Grêkas: 'Koundouroff, Aristotelis', Pangosmion lexicon ton érgon epistimis, téchnis, filosofias [Universal dictionary of the works of science, art and philosophy], ed. B.A. Spanopulos (Athens, 1964–6)



G. Leotsakos: 'Koundouroff, Aristotélis', Pangosmio viografiko lexico [Universal biographical dictionary], v (Athens, 1986), 69 only

GEORGE LEOTSAKOS

Koussevitzky [Kusevitsky], Sergey (Aleksandrovich) (b Vïshniy Volochek, 26 July 1874; d Boston, 4 June 1951). American conductor and double bass player of Russian birth. As a young boy he learned the trumpet. Since Jews were not allowed to live in Moscow, he was baptized at 14 in order to enter the Musico-Dramatic Institute of the Moscow Philharmonic, where he studied the double bass under Rambusek. By 1894 he had joined the Bol'shoy Theatre orchestra, and in 1901 he succeeded Rambusek as principal double bass, making his public début (25 March) as a soloist in Moscow. In this period he married Nadezhda Galat, a member of the corps de ballet. His many European solo concerts and tours featured his own arrangements and compositions. With Glière's help he wrote a double bass concerto, of which he gave the première in Moscow in 1905. Later the same year he married his second wife, Nataliya Ushkov (Konstantinovna), the daughter of a wealthy tea merchant and soon resigned his post with the Bol'shoy. They moved to Berlin, where he observed Nikisch, Strauss and Weingartner conducting and continued to give double bass recitals. After two years of practice with a student orchestra in his home, he hired the Berlin PO for his public conducting début in 1908, in a programme which included the Rachmaninoff C minor Concerto with the composer as soloist. Returning to Russia, Koussevitzky founded the publishing house Editions Russes de Musique in 1909 and eventually signed contracts with Skryabin, Stravinsky, Prokofiev, Rachmaninoff and Medtner. While continuing to tour Europe as a soloist, he formed his own orchestra in Moscow. Touring by riverboat they played in towns along the Volga in 1910, 1912 and 1914, including many new works in their programmes. Koussevitzky survived the 1917 Revolution, despite his wealth, and accepted an offer to conduct the newly named State SO in Petrograd (1917–20). He left the USSR in 1920 for Berlin and then Paris, where he founded the Concerts Koussevitzky (1921–9), presenting new music with his own orchestra. He took over the Boston SO from Monteux in 1924 and remained there for a quarter of a century, rivalling Stokowski and Toscanini in his influence on American concert life.

One of the most ardent advocates of contemporary music, Koussevitzky always championed native composers. In Russia he was the special ally of Skryabin. In Paris he commissioned and conducted Ravel's orchestration of Musorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition (1922) and gave first performances of Honegger's Pacific 231 (1924), Prokofiev's Violin Concerto no.1 (1923) and Stravinsky's Symphonies of Wind Instruments (1921), among many others. In Boston he gave 99 premières, including works by Barber, Copland, Hanson, Harris, Piston and Schuman. For the 50th anniversary of the Boston SO in 1931 he commissioned Stravinsky's Symphony of Psalms, Ravel's Piano Concerto in G, Hindemith's Konzertmusik and works by Roussel, Respighi, Prokofiev and Honegger.

Sergey Koussevitzky

He also gave the first performances of works by Bax, Diamond, Gershwin, Foss, Malipiero and Martinů. He was less friendly to the Second Viennese School, although he did give the first performance of Schoenberg's Theme and Variations (1944).

Koussevitzky's second great legacy was Tanglewood. After a series of outdoor concerts in 1934, the Berkshire Symphony Festival invited Koussevitzky to present summer concerts with the Boston SO in the Berkshire hills of western Massachusetts. The summer music school (now the Tanglewood Music Center) was opened in 1940 with Koussevitzky as director and Copland as assistant director. Guest instructors included Hindemith, Honegger and Messiaen. Koussevitzky taught conducting until his death, when he was succeeded by his former student, Leonard Bernstein.

In concert Koussevitzky could be passionate and electric; in rehearsal, as surviving film and audio recordings demonstrate, he was a tyrant who pleaded and shook with rage, rarely asking for any correction of pitch or articulation, but rather for changes in colour and emotion. Building on the achievement of Monteux, he established a fine tradition of playing French music. He created luminous textures in the French and Russian repertory (as can be heard on the many recordings he made for RCA Victor and EMI), but his treatment of the German masters drew mixed reviews. Despite his support of modern music, he was utterly incapable of learning a score by himself and employed pianists (including Nicolas Slonimsky) to play new scores for him while he conducted an imaginary orchestra. During his early years in Boston, he seems to have felt profoundly ill-prepared; indeed, many players thought him a sadistic bluffer. However, with his iron will, and employing only the finest musicians available, he eventually induced the orchestra to follow his wishes, if not his indications. Koussevitzky rarely appeared as a guest conductor during the last 25 years of his career.

He became a naturalized American citizen in 1941. After his wife died in 1942 he set up the Koussevitzky Music Foundation to commission new works; Britten's Peter Grimes (1945) was the foundation's first commissioned opera and Bartók's Concerto for Orchestra its first major orchestral work. In 1947 he married Ol′ga Naumov (1901–78), a niece of his second wife. He received many honorary degrees in America and was appointed a Chevalier of the Légion d'Honneur. Besides his Double Bass Concerto, he wrote a Humoresque, Valse miniature, Chanson triste and many other works for double bass, in addition to a Passacaglia on a Russian Theme (1934) for orchestra.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Leichtentritt: Serge Koussevitzky, the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the New American Music (Cambridge, MA, 1946/R)

M. Smith: Koussevitzky (New York, 1947)

D. Brook: International Gallery of Conductors (London, 1951), 102–7

H.C. Schonberg: The Great Conductors (New York, 1967/R), 300–08

D. Wooldridge: Conductor's World (London, 1970), 137–52

H. Kupferberg: Tanglewood (New York, 1976)

N. Slonimsky: Perfect Pitch (New York, 1988)

C. Barber and J. Bowen: International Dictionary of Conductors (Berkeley and Los Angeles, forthcoming)

JOSÉ BOWEN

Kovačević, Krešimir (b Zagreb, 16 Sept 1913; d Zagreb, 6 March 1992). Croatian musicologist. He studied composition at the Academy of Music in Zagreb, graduating in 1938. For a time he worked as a répétiteur at the opera houses in Zagreb and Belgrade (1936–9) and then taught music in schools in Osijek and Dubrovnik (1940–50). In 1943 he obtained the doctorate in musicology at the University of Leipzig with a dissertation on Croatian folksong. He relaunched the Dubrovnik City Orchestra in 1946 and was its conductor until 1950. In 1950 he became professor at the Zagreb Academy of Music where he taught until his retirement in 1977. He was music critic of Zvuk (1956–66) and the daily Borba (1957–87). He was the general editor of the second edition of Muzička enciklopedija (1971–7) and Leksikon jugoslavenske muzike (1984), and editor of the periodical Arti musices (1973–9).

Kovačević's main interest was the history of Croatian music of the 19th and 20th centuries. As a critic covering numerous first performances of Croatian music he became an authoritative chronicler of its trends and developments; in Hrvatski kompozitori i njihova djela (1960) he published analytical notes on all the major works of Croatian composers of the late 19th and 20th centuries.

WRITINGS

Das kroatische Volkslied aus dem Murinselgebiet (diss., U. of Leipzig, 1943)
Hrvatski kompozitori i njihova djela [Croatian composers and their works] (Zagreb, 1960)
Muzičko stvaralaštvo u Hrvatskoj 1945–1965 [Musical creativity in Croatia] (Zagreb, 1966)
'Die kroatische Musik des XVII. und XVIII. Jahrhunderts', Musica antiqua Europae orientalis: Bydgoszcz and Toruń 1966, 200–20
'Nationalism in Textbooks, Articles and General Studies in the History of Music in Yugoslavia', Yugoslav-American Seminar on Music: Sveti Stefan 1968, 194–8
'Muzička akademija u Zagrebu: Povodom 140. obljetnice začetka' [The Zagreb Music Academy: on the occasion of the 140th anniversary of its foundation], Arti musices, i (1969), 9–22
'Krešimir Baranović', Arti musices, vii (1976), 5–17
'Music in Croatia and the Croatian Musical Institute', Arti musices (1979), 135–48 [special issue]
Stjepan Šulek (Zagreb, 1987)

BOJAN BUJIC

Kovacevich [Bishop], Stephen (b San Pedro, CA, 17 Oct 1940). American pianist. He studied with Lev Schorr (a student of Anna Essipoff), made his début at the age of 11, playing the Jean Françaix Concertino, and gave a solo recital in the same year. Three years later he played the Ravel G major Concerto and the Schumann Concerto with the San Francisco SO. In 1959 he moved to London to study with Myra Hess, who rekindled his early love of late Beethoven. His Wigmore Hall début in 1961 was notable for an outstanding performance of the 'Diabelli' Variations, a triumph later repeated at the Royal Festival Hall (he subsequently made a memorable recording of the work). His repertory was, however, already eclectic, and his many recordings include works by Grieg, Schumann, Chopin, Bartók and Richard Rodney Bennett (whose Piano Concerto is dedicated to him), as well as Bach, Mozart, Beethoven and Brahms. His series of the Beethoven and Schubert sonatas begun in the 1990s are notable for their uncompromising strength, articulacy and acuity, and his noble, searching reading of Brahms's D minor Concerto with Sawallisch won a Gramophone Award. He has performed all the Mozart piano concertos and has made something of a speciality of the Tippett Concerto, while his recordings with Jacqueline du Pré and Martha Argerich are justly celebrated. In 1984 he embarked on a second career as a conductor working frequently with the Australian Chamber Orchestra and, subsequently, the Irish Chamber Orchestra.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Wigmore: 'Second Time Around', Gramophone, lxxii/Oct (1994), 14–17

BRYCE MORRISON

Kovács, Béla (b Budapest, 1 May 1937). Hungarian clarinettist. He studied with György Balassa at the Liszt Academy of Music, and while still a student became a member of the Hungarian State Opera Orchestra (1956); he was later appointed a soloist. He was a founder of the Hungarian Wind Quintet, in which he played from 1961 to 1971, and a member of the Budapest Chamber Ensemble. In 1975 he was appointed a professor at the Liszt Academy. A notable virtuoso, and the leading Hungarian clarinettist of his generation, he is a fine player of both classical and contemporary music. His recordings include Mozart's concerto and quintet, the quintets of Weber and Brahms, Bartók's Contrasts and a number of contemporary Hungarian works. He was awarded the Liszt Prize in 1964 and named Artist of Merit in 1972.

PÉTER P. VÁRNAI/R

Kovács, Dénes (b Vác, 18 April 1930). Hungarian violinist. After making his début when he was six, he studied with Ede Zathureczky at the Liszt Academy in Budapest, graduating in 1950, and was first violinist at the Budapest Opera, 1951–60. He won the 1955 Carl Flesch Competition in London, and in 1957 was appointed a professor at the Liszt Academy, becoming director in 1966, rector in 1971 and head of the string department in 1980. For many years he played in a duo with the pianist Mihály Bächer. His crystalline tone and sense of style in a repertory from Bach to Bartók make him pre-eminent among Hungarian violinists; he has toured in other European countries and in China. Kovács plays a Guarneri del Gesù violin of 1742, on which he has made a number of recordings, including Bartók's Concerto no.2, Rhapsodies and Solo Sonata for the complete recorded edition. He has given the first performances of several contemporary Hungarian works, most of them dedicated to him, and he was awarded the Liszt Prize in 1954 and 1958, the Kossuth Prize in 1963, and named Eminent Artist in 1970.

PÉTER P. VÁRNAI/R

Kovács, Sándor (b Budapest, 26 Jan 1886; d Budapest, 24 Feb 1918). Hungarian piano teacher. He studied the piano with Árpád Szendy, composition with Hans Koessler at the National Hungarian Royal Academy of Music, arts at Budapest University and music history in Berlin. He took the doctorate in 1907 at Budapest University (the first music dissertation there) with a dissertation on the evolution of music and was subsequently professor at the Fodor School of Music, Budapest (1910–18). In 1911 he founded, with Bartók and Kodály, the Hungarian Society for New Music (UMZE), which later became the Hungarian section of the ISCM. Kovács was one of the first piano teachers to make use of the results of experimental psychology and to establish a systematic method of music teaching in Hungary. This method concentrated on ear training (anticipating the Leimer-Gieseking method), analysis of sound and touch, practising without the instrument and training the memory; he outlined its principles in his book Hogyan gyakoroljunk? (1916). His compositions include Petőfi-dalok ('Petőfi lieder') and two books of songs.

WRITINGS

Prolegomena a zene fejlődéstani történetéhez [Prolegomena to the evolution of music] (diss., U. of Budapest, 1907; Budapest, 1907)
'La jeune école hongroise', BSIM, vii/9 (1911), 47–59
'Zur Frage der musikalischen Renaissance', AMz, xxix (1911), 1199–201, 1227–8
Hogyan gyakoroljunk? [How to practise?] (Budapest, 1916, 3/1960)
ed., with I. Popper, O. Gombosi and A. Molnár: Hátrahagyott zenei írásai [Posthumous works] (Budapest, 1928)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Vitányi: 'A magyar zenetudomány kezdetei: Kovács Sándor és Molnár Antal' [The beginnings of Hungarian musicology: Sándor Kovács and Antal Molnár], Muzsika, xi/11 (1968), 12–20

IMRE FÁBIÁN/R

Koval', Marian Viktorovich (b Pristan' Vozneseniya, Olonets province, 4/17 Aug 1907; d Moscow, 15 Feb 1971). Russian composer. He studied in Nizhniy Novgorod (1918–21), in Petrograd and at the Moscow Conservatory (1925–30), where he was a pupil of Gnesin and Myaskovsky. In the 1920s he was a member of Prokoll, a 'production collective' of composers whose aim was to write music in the spirit of the new revolutionary era, and of the Russian Association of Proletarian Musicians, 1925–32. He began his creative career as a composer of choral pieces, and such works were to form the greater part of his output. From 1957 to 1961 he was artistic director of the Pyatnitskiy Choir. He was also active in the Composers' Union and held the titles Honoured Art Worker of the RSFSR and Honoured Art Worker of the Lithuanian SSR, as well as the State Prize. The most celebrated of his compositions is the monumental oratorio Yemel'yan Pugachyov (1938), which the composer subsequently converted into a five-act opera of the same name. His style has its roots in folk music, with distinctively Russian, lyrical melodies.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Zemlya vstayet [The Earth Rises] (musical-dramatic scene, 4, after A. Hidas), 1932; Volk i semero kozlyat [The Wolf and 7 Kids] (children's op, prol, 3, Koval' and Ye. Manucharova), 1939–40; Yemel'yan Pugachyov (op, prol, 4, V. Kamensky), 1940, rev. 1959; Sevastopol'tsï [Inhabitants of Sevastopol] (op, 4, epilogue, N.L. Braun and S.D. Spassky), 1943–5, rev. 1949; Aksyusha (ballet), 1964
Choral: Skaz o partizane [Tale of the Partisan] (poem) (1935); Yemel'yan Pugachyov (orat, Kamensky) (1940); Narodnaya svyashchyonnaya voyna [National Holy War] (orat) (1942); Chkalov (orat); Zvyozdï kremlya [Stars of the Kremlin] (orat); other pieces for chorus/children's chorus
Chbr music, pf pieces, songs, music for the theatre and cinema

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO (G. Grigor'yeva)
B. Yarustovsky: 'O "Yemel'yane Pugachyove" M. Kovalya', SovM(1940), no.2, pp.22–38
M. Bruk: Marian Koval' (Moscow and Leningrad, 1950)
B. Yarustovsky: 'Novoye i staroye v "Yemel'yane Pugachyove"' [Old and new in 'Yemel'yan Pugachyov'], SovM (1959), no.4, pp.30–40
M.V. Koval': S pesney skvoz' godï [With a song through the years] (Moscow, 1968)
G. Polyanovsky: Marian Koval' (Moscow, 1968)
Obituary, SovM (1971), no.5, p.158

GALINA GRIGOR'YEVA

Kovaříček, František (b Litětine, nr Pardubice, 17 May 1924). Czech composer. He studied composition in Prague with Hlobil at the conservatory and with Řídký at the academy, graduating in 1952. Appointments followed as music editor for Czechoslovak radio in Prague (1953–7) and as professor (1966–85) and then director (1990–91) at the conservatory, where he taught many younger leading composers. From 1971 to 1993 he was president of Jeunesses Musicales of the Czech Republic; since his inauguration as honorary president (1993) he has directed all the organization's summer activities. His opera Ukradený měsíc ('Stolen Moon') took first prize in the national competition commemorating the 50th anniversary of the founding of the state (1968). His starting-point was neoclassicism, enriched later through use of an extended tonal vocabulary. The forms of his works are clear and concise, with individual sections given contrasting textures, while musical ideas are developed to the full. Emphasis is given to melody punctuated by dissonance.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Ukradený měsíc [Stolen Moon] (Lyric comedy, L. Aškenazy and V. Mikeš), 1966–7
Orch: Ov., 1952; Conc. comaroso (V. Čtvrtková, V. Frühaufová, nar, chbr orch, 1956; Capriccio, chbr orch, 1971; 4 temperamenty, str, 1998
Chbr and solo inst: Pf Sonata no.2, 1968; Díkůvzdání [Thanksgiving], org, 1997; Sonata, vn, pf, 1998
Vocal: Písničky [Songs] (folk poetry), cycle, low v, pf, 1951; Zlatá vlna června [Golden Wave of June] (M. Florian), song cycle, high v, pf, 1957; Posmívánky [Mocking Songs] (folk poetry), SATB, pf, 1968; 3 tváře lásky [3 Faces of Love] (folk poetry), SA, 1997

Principal publishers: Dilia, Panton, Supraphon

JIŘÍ MACEK

Kovařovic, Karel (b Prague, 9 Dec 1862; d Prague, 6 Dec 1920). Czech conductor and composer. He studied the clarinet, piano and harp at the Prague Conservatory (1873–9) and composition with Fibich (1878–80) before working as harpist with the Provisional (later National) Theatre in Prague (1879–85), as piano accompanist to the violinist František Ondříček and to the baritone Leopold Stropnický (1881–7), and as director (1898–1900) and répétiteur at Pivoda's Prague school for singers (1880–1900). He conducted orchestral concerts of the Umělecká Beseda artists' association in 1893–4 and was one of the first conductors of the Czech PO.

In 1900 Kovařovic was appointed opera director at the National Theatre; he formed a new orchestra and chorus in the next year, and remained in this post until shortly before his death. His work at the Theatre was his most important contribution to Czech musical life. He began his career there with Dalibor and thereafter paid particular attention to the classics of the Czech repertory – Smetana, Dvořák (including the première of Rusalka) and Fibich. He also gave first performances of operas by Ostrčil, Foerster and Novák and the first Prague performance (1916) of Jenůfa, which led immediately to performances in Vienna and Berlin and established Janáček's reputation. This followed his 12-year refusal to consider the work (though it had been successfully performed in Brno) and was conditional upon his revision and reorchestration of the work – in which form it is still played in the Czech Republic. He had a special sympathy with French opera and conducted Russian and German works, notably those of Wagner and Strauss. At the same time he directed the Czech PO in new orchestral works by Novák, Suk and others. He was elected to extraordinary (1901) and ordinary (1906) membership of the Czech Academy of Science and Arts, and in 1910 was made an officer of the Académie Française.

Before establishing himself as a conductor, Kovařovic had already made a reputation as a composer, at first with the opera Ženichové ('The Bridegrooms') and the ballet Hašiš, both successfully performed in 1884. He had a feeling for dramatic tension and stage effect, and a refined sense of instrumental colour; his work overflows with a lyricism and elegance close to French music. The operas Psohlavci ('The Dog Heads') and Na starém bělidle ('At the Old Bleaching-House') were the most popular, their patriotic pathos proving a moral prop to the Czech people at times of oppression. The former won first prize in a competition held in 1897 for new Czech operas. He is the author of K otázce dramaturgie operní ('On the problem of operatic dramaturgy'; Prague, 1904).

WORKS
(selective list)

OPERAS

Ženichové [The Bridegrooms] (comic op, 3, Kovařovic, after K.S. Macháček), 1880–83, Prague, 1884; Cesta oknem [The Way through the Window] (E. Züngl, after G. Lemoine, A.E. Scribe), 1885, rev. 1914, 1920; Crespo (Kovařovic, after P. Calderon), 1886–7, inc.; Armida (J. Vrchlický, after T. Tasso), 1888–95, inc.; Noc Šimona a Judy (comic op, 3, K. Šípek [J. Peška], after P. Antonio d'Alarcón), 1890–91, Prague, 1892

Psohlavci [The Dog Heads] (3, Šípek, after A. Jirásek), 1895–7, Prague, 1898; Na Starém bělidle [At the Old Bleaching-House] (4, Šípek, after B. Němcová), 1898–1901, Prague, 1901, reorchd 1916; Slib [The Promise] (Šípek, after G. Feuillet), *c*1905, prologue orchd R. Zamrzla; Flétna [The Flute] (J. Kvapil), 1910, inc.

OTHER WORKS

Operetta: Edip král [Oedipus the King] (A.V. Nevšímal, after Sophocles), 1889–90, Prague, 1894

Ballets: Hašiš (1), V. Reisinger, 1883, Prague, 1884; Pohádka o nalezeném štěstí [A Tale of Happiness Discovered] (3), A. Berger, 1888–9, Prague, 1889; Na záletech [On Excursions] (ballet pantomime, 10 scenes, A. Viscusi), 1909, Prague, 1909

Incid music: Ďáblovy pilulky [The Devil's Pills] (3, F. Lalone, A. Burgeois Anicet, Laurent), Prague, 1890

Orch: Předehra veseloherní [Comedy Ov.], 1880; Pf Conc., 1887; Předehra dramatická, 1891; 2 sym. poems

3 str qts, 1878, 1887, 1894; inst pieces, songs, choruses

Principal publishers: Dilia, Hudební Matice, Otto, Umělecká Beseda, F.A. Urbánek

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Křička: 'Karel Kovařovic', Almanach České Akademie Věd a Umění, xxxi–xxxii (1921–2), 124–32

J. Procházka, ed.: Karel Kovařovic: první šéf Národního divadla v Praze 1900–1920 [First head of the Prague National Opera 1900–1920] (Prague, 1946)

A. Rektorys, ed.: Korespondence Leoše Janáčka s Karlem Kovařovicem a ředitelstvím Národního divadla (Prague, 1950)

B. Štědroň: 'Ke korespondenci a vztahu Leoše Janáčka a Karla Kovařovice' [Correspondence and relationship between Janáček and Kovařovic], SPFFBU, F6 (1960), 31–69

F. Pala: Opera Národního divadla v období Otakara Ostrčila [The opera of the National Theatre at the time of Otakar Ostrčil], i (Prague, 1962)

J. Němeček: Opera Národního divadla za Karla Kovařovice [Opera in the National Theatre during the time of Kovařovic] (Prague, 1968)

Dějiny české hudební kultury, 1890–1945 [History of Czech music culture, 1890–1945], i (Prague, 1972)

S. Zachařová: 'Nejedlý a Kovařovic' [Nejedlý and Kovařovic], Zdeněk Nejedlý: doba, život, dílo (Prague, 1975), 89–170

J. Tyrrell: Czech Opera (Cambridge, 1988) [incl. bibliography]

J. Dehner: 'Kovařovicovy retuše Mé vlasti' [Kovařovic's revision of Má vlast], OM, xxiv (1992), 40–48

J. Tyrrell: Janáček's Operas: a Documentary Account (London, 1992)

MILAN KUNA

Kovnatskaya, Lyudmila Girshevna (b Leningrad, 5 Feb 1941). Russian musicologist and teacher. She studied the organ with Isayya Braudo and musicology at the Leningrad Conservatory, graduating in 1965. She began teaching at the conservatory in 1968 and in 1970 she completed her postgraduate studies there as a pupil of Druskin with a dissertation on Benjamin Britten. She became a senior lecturer in 1980 and took the DSc in 1987 with the study Angliyskaya muzïka XX veka. In 1992 she was appointed professor at the conservatory and in 1994 she became senior research fellow at the Russian Institute for the History of Fine Arts in St Petersburg. She has been visiting professor throughout Russia and has participated in musicological congresses worldwide; she has also contributed significantly to the cultural life of St Petersburg by organizing international symposiums and conferences.

Kovnatskaya is the leading Russian specialist on the history of English music and her writings, which include Benjamin Britten, Angliyskaya muzïka XX veka and many articles, form the main corpus of writings in Russian on this topic. Her monograph on Britten remains the only one ever published on this composer in Russian. Her later writings have examined the musical culture of Leningrad during the 1920s, particularly the Leningrad Association of Contemporary Music and Shostakovich. She instigated and edited the first collection of essays (1996) published in post-Soviet Russia to examine Shostokovich's life and work according to contemporary scholarship; a second collection followed in 2000. She has also prepared editions of works by her former mentors, Druskin and Braudo. Her own writings are notable for their profound research, broad context and literary value A distinguished Russian historian and brilliant lecturer, she has supervised many graduate and postgraduate students.

WRITINGS

Benjamin Britten (diss., Leningrad Conservatory, 1970; monograph, Moscow, 1974)

'Fol'klorniye ėlementï vokal'noy melodiki Brittena' [Folklore elements in Britten's vocal style], Voprosï muzïkoznaniya, xviii (1972), 298–325

Introduction and epilogue in Russ. trans. of J.A. Westrup: Purcell (Leningrad, 1980), 3–4, 204–39

'Michael Tippett: k 75-letiyu' [Michael Tippett on the occasion of his 75th birthday], SovM, 1980, no.11, pp.123–9

ed., with M. Sabinina and A. Klimovitsky: M. Druskin: Istoriya i sovremennost' (Leningrad, 1981) [incl. 'K biografii M.S. Druskina', 261–80]

'Michael Tippett i yego opera Tsar' Priyam' [Michael Tippett and his opera King Priam], Ocherki iz istorii zapadno-yevropeyskoy muzïki XX veka (Leningrad, 1983), 40–58

Angliyskaya muzïka XX veka: istoki i ėtapï razvitiya [English music of the 20th century: the sources and the stages of its development] (Moscow, 1986; diss., Leningrad Conservatory, 1987)

'"Death in Venice": an Opera by Benjamin Britten', Muzikalni khorizonti (1987), no.3, pp.59–73

'Kompozitorï Anglii', Muzïka XX veka, ii (Moscow, 1987), 269–93

ed. Traditsii muzïkoznaniya [The traditions of musicology] (Leningrad, 1989) [incl. introduction]

'Iz istorii angliyskogo khorovogo dvizheniya' [From the history of the English choral movement], Muzikalni khorizonti (1990), no.9, pp.41–58

'Russian Funeral through Russian Ears: Oral Impressions and some Questions', International Journal of Musicology, ii (1993), 321–32

'Zhizn' v pis'makh: k 80-letiyu Bendzhamina Brittena' [A life in letters: for the 80th anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Britten], MAk (1993), no.4, pp.214–21

'Note on a Theme from "Peter Grimes"', On Mahler and Britten: Essays in Honour of Donald Mitchell, ed. P. Reed (Woodbridge and Aldeburgh, Suffolk, 1995), 172–85

'Vernut' Stravinskogo na rodinu' [To return Stravinsky to his homeland], MAk (1995), nos. 4–5, pp.195–229 [based on the monograph by Druskin and his papers]
'"Ize cheruvim" o neizvestnom avtorskom nabroske M.A. Balakireva', Balakirevu posvjaschajetsa sbornik statey k 160-letiyu sodnya rozdeniya kompozitora (1836–1996), ed. T. Tzaitseva (St Petersburg, 1996), 113–39
ed.: Pamyati N.S. Rabinovicha [In memory of N.S. Rabinovich] (Washington DC, 1996)
ed.: Dmitriy Shostakovich: sbornik statey k 90-letiyu so dnya rozhdeniya [Dmitry Shostakovich: collection of articles for the 90th anniversary of his birth] (St Petersburg, 1996) [incl. 'Shostakovich v protokolakh LASM' [Shostakovich in the LASM reports], 48–67; 'Shostakovich i Britten: nekotorïye parallelï' [Shostakovich and Britten: some parallels], 306–23
ed.: D.D. Shostakovich: mezdu mgovenijem i vechnostiu (dokumenti, materialis, stat'i) [D.D. Shostakovich: between the moment and eternity (documents, articles, materials)] (St Petersburg, 1996) [incl. 'Shostakovich i Bogdanov-Berezovsky (20-e godi)' [Shostakovich and Bogdanov-Berezovsky (1920s)]; 'Epizod iz zhizni knigi (Interview s Genrikhom Orlovim)' [An episode of the book's life (Interview with Henry Orlov)]]
'Opera v tserkvi' [Opera in the church], Voprosï operï, ii (St Petersburg, 1998)
'Angliyskaya muzïka mezh dvukh voyn' [English music between the wars], A 20th Century Music Textbook

OL'GA MANUL'KINA

Kowalski, Henri (b Paris, 1841; d Bordeaux, 8 July 1916). French pianist and composer of Polish and Irish descent. He entered the Paris Conservatoire in 1853 and studied the piano under Marmontel, Prudent and Anatole Petit and composition under Carafa and Samuel David. After experience as a chorister at the imperial chapel and as pianist at the Opéra he began in 1858 a concert career which included tours of southern France (1864), Germany and Spain (1868), England, the USA and Canada (1869, 1876) and Australia (1880–82). By 1870 he had composed many songs and sacred works and over 100 piano pieces, including the celebrated Marche hongroise (1864). In 1870 he was music critic of L'Europe; his first opera, the five-act Gilles de Bretagne, was produced unsuccessfully by Vizentini at the Théâtre Lyrique in 1877. He went to Melbourne in 1880 to give a series of concerts and act as French juror at the International Exhibition, and subsequently toured country centres in Victoria and other states. He acted as overseas correspondent to Le Figaro, began work on a comic opera by the Melbourne writer Marcus Clarke and enhanced his reputation for personal generosity, charm and pianistic virtuosity. He returned to Europe for the première of his 'Australian' opera Moustique in Brussels (1883) but in 1885 finally settled in Sydney, where he was much more appreciated (Pougin had called his A travers l'Amérique 'absolument insignificant et dénué d'intérêt'). He was appointed conductor of the Sydney Philharmonic Society (1886–9) and was co-founder with Leon Caron of Sydney's Orpheus Club (1887–91), and his activities included teaching, concert appearances (often for the benefit of Australian artists), the establishment of a French musical depot to promote his native music and polemics calling for government subsidy of his training schemes to improve theoretical and practical standards in Australia. Many of his piano pieces and songs were performed, as were his three-act lyric opera Vercingetorix (Sydney and Melbourne, 1881) and an oratorio The Future Life (Sydney, 1895).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB
H. Kowalski: A travers l'Amérique: impressions d'un musicien (Paris, 1872)
O. Comettant: Au pays des kangourous et des mines d'or (Paris, 1890)
D.J. Quinn: 'Musicians and Musical Taste in Australasia; 1: Sydney', Review of Reviews [Sydney] (20 April 1895), 391–3
Cosmos [Sydney] (30 April 1895), 433–6
B.R. Elliott: Marcus Clarke (Oxford, 1958), 231, 238–9

ELIZABETH WOOD

Kowalski, Jochen (b Wachow, Brandenburg, 30 Jan 1954). German countertenor. He studied in Berlin, making his début while still a student as an apprentice in Die Meistersinger at the Komische Oper and then joining the company. In 1985 he sang the title role of Handel's Giustino, and repeated the part in Vienna (1986) and Schwetzingen (1989). His unusually wide repertory includes the title role and Ptolemy in Handel's Giulio Cesare, Daniel (Belshazzar), Annius (La clemenza di Tito), Fyodor (Boris Godunov), Britten's Oberon and Gluck's Orpheus, which he sang during the Komische Oper's visit to Covent Garden (1989). With the Royal Opera he has sung Prince Orlovsky (Die Fledermaus), Orpheus and Pharnaces (Mitridate, re di Ponto), which he also sang in Amsterdam (1992). He sang Otto (L'incoronazione di Poppea) in Salzburg in 1993, and the following year appeared as Rossini's Tancredi in Berlin. In 1995 he created Creon in Liebermann's Freispruch für Medea in Hamburg. Kowalski's recordings include Didimus (Theodora), Orpheus and discs of Baroque arias. His voice, sweet-toned, flexible and unusually resonant for a countertenor, is equally well suited to Baroque, Classical and 20th-century music, while he is a powerful and expressive actor.

ELIZABETH FORBES

Kowalski, Max (b Kowal, 10 Aug 1882; d London, 4 June 1956). German composer of Polish birth. In 1883 he was taken to Germany. He took a doctorate in law at the University of Marburg and studied singing with Alexander Heinemann in Berlin and composition with Sekles in Frankfurt. Among his first publications was a set of songs on poems from the Giraud–Hartleben Pierrot lunaire which appeared at about the same time as Schoenberg's settings. Kowalski's songs, unlike Schoenberg's, fall within the tradition of the Romantic lied, to which he was one of the last successful contributors. In 1939, after his release from the Buchenwald concentration camp, he fled to England, where he found work as a piano tuner and synagogue singer. Later he taught singing in London and continued to compose until his death.

WORKS
(selective list)

SONGS
all for 1v, pf

6 Lieder (O.J. Bierbaum, R. Dehmel, K. Kamlah, P. Verlaine), op.1 (1913); Die Sonne sinkt (F. Nietzsche), op.2 (1913): 6 Gesänge (V. Blüthgen, Dehmel, J. von Eichendorff, J.P. Jacobsen, Su Chien-yüeh), op.3 (1913); 12 Gedichte aus Pierrot lunaire (A. Giraud, trans. O.E. Hartleben), op.4 (1913); 3 Lieder (M. Greif), op.5 (1915); 3 Balladen (C.F. Meyer), op.7 (1914); 3 Gedichte (Greif), op.8 (1914); 4 Gesänge (Dehmel, E. Lissauer, Novalis, J. Vogel), op.9 (1916); 6 Lieder auf alte Gedichte (1919), op.10; 6 Liebeslieder aus dem Rokoko (H.C. Boie, J.W.L. Gleim, F. von Hagedorn, E. von Kleist, G.E. Lessing), op.11 (1921)

5 Marienlieder, op.12, 1927; 6 Gedichte (Verlaine), op.13, 1928; 5 Gedichte (H. Hesse), op.14 (1931); 6 Gedichte (H. Klabund), op.15, 1930; 5 Lieder (F. Hebbel, R. Huch, Lessing, Lissauer, Nietzsche), op.16 (1931); 6 Lieder aus dem West-Östlichen Divan (J.W. von Goethe), op.17 (1934); 7 Gedichte (Hafiz), op.18, 1933; Japanische Frühling (trans. H. Bethge), 10 songs, 1934–8; 4 zusätzliche Lieder (Jap. verse), 1934–7; 5 Jüdische Lieder, 3

zusätzliche Jüdische Lieder, 1935–7; 12 Kinderlieder, 1936; 6 Heine-Lieder, 1938
12 Lieder (Li Tai Po), 1938–9; Ein Liederzyklus (O. Khayyām), 1941; 8 Lieder (Hafiz), 1948; 7 Lieder (Meyer), 1949; 6 Lieder (F. Hölderlin), 1950–51; 7 Lieder (R.M. Rilke), 1951; 7 Geisha-Lieder, 1951; 6 Lieder auf indischen Gedichte (trans. Bethge), 1951–2; 5 Lieder (S. George), 1952; 6 Lieder auf arabischen Gedichte (trans. Bethge), 1953–4

OTHER WORKS

2 Klavierstücke, op.6 (1913)

Principal publishers: Eos, Leuckart, Simrock, Universal

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.F. Schaub: 'Max Kowalski', ZfM, Jg.113 (1952), 407–9
H.F. Redlich: 'Max Kowalski', Musica, xi (1957), 584 only
P. Gradenivitz: 'Max Kowalski (1882–1956): Rechtsanwalt und feinsinniger Musiker', Bulletin des Leo Baeck Institut based on MGG1 (xvi, 1049–50) by permission of Bärenreiter

PHILIP L. MILLER

Kox, Hans (b Arnhem, 19 May 1930). Dutch composer. After early studies with his father, an organist and choral conductor, he attended the Utrecht Conservatory and was then a private composition pupil of Badings; his piano studies were completed with Jaap Spaanderman. He was director of the Doetinchem Music School 1956–71, which he brought to a high standard. In 1974 he became director of the Concertgebouw Orchestra, but resigned shortly afterwards as a result of the critical reception of his opera Dorian Gray. Thereafter, he lived in Haarlem as a freelance composer, at the same time teaching composition at the Utrecht Conservatory.

He made his début with a string trio performed at the Gaudeamus Foundation in 1953, and he increased his reputation with the Piano Sonata no.1 and the First String Quartet. He wrote his first large orchestral work, the Concertante muziek, in 1956 to a commission from the Concertgebouw Orchestra. Kox's music from these early years until 1963 is marked by classical forms and by the harmonic influences of Berg, Mahler and Badings, which gradually disappear; chief among the compositions of this period are the First Symphony, the Piano Concerto and the First Violin Concerto. The Symphony no.2 (1966), in which Kox began to explore the implications of Mahler's work for contemporary music, brought this phase to a definite close, for Kox had felt the need for greater formal freedom and the desire to apply newer techniques. In works like Phobos (1970) and the Six One-Act Plays (1971), Kox experimented with Kaleidoscopic timbres in static constellations, similar to Ligeti's slowly shifting tonal fields. Occasionally, as in Requiem for Europe and Dorian Gray, he employed graphic and proportional notation.

In fact, this changing attitude to form was emerging much earlier. The main vehicle for his explorations in this field was his Cyclophony cycle, a series of 15 compositions he began in 1964 and to which he periodically returned. They are generally short pieces, scored for a wide variety of mostly chamber settings. The term 'cyclophony' refers to the unlimited possibilities of an open, unrestricted concept. No.7, for example, is made up of five blocks, each with seven subdivisions which may be played simultaneously or in different successions, and each allowing improvisation around given melodic and rhythmic formulae.

Large choral works hold an important position in his output, which now consists of more than 140 works in every conceivable genre. For the 25th anniversary of the Battle of Arnhem, Kox composed In Those Days, which won the Prix Italia in 1970. Each group has different starting-points in relation to the others, and so a fluctuating form is achieved. The Requiem for Europe is scored for four spatially disposed choirs with instrumental groups; some freedom is allowed to the conductor, whose choices are to be influenced by the acoustic of the hall. In later works, the accent on the metaphysical aspects of life increases. The persecution of Jews and the ruptured musical, spiritual and social harmony of this century are treated with growing intensity in monumental works like the Anne Frank Cantata (1984), Sjoah (1989), Das Credo quia absurdum (1995) and the Third Symphony (1980–5), whose mottos come from the book of Isaiah.

In the later concertos, chamber works and his more than ten works for saxophone (all written for the American alto saxophonist John-Edward Kelly), a dense, expressionist style has come to the surface. A curious form of disquiet is discernible, especially in the restless, virtuoso solo parts, which reveal a theatrical nature. Although his music, neglected for many years, is now gradually establishing itself in Dutch musical life, his second opera Das grüne Gesicht (1981–91) remains unperformed.

WORKS
(selective list)

VOCAL

Op: Dorian Gray (2, Kox, after O. Wilde), 1973, Amsterdam, 1974, Circustheater, Scheveningen, 30 March 1974, rev. 1975; Das grüne Gesicht (1, Kox, after G. Meyrink and L. Jacobowski), 1991, suite, orch 1994, unperf.
Choral: Chansons cruelles (N. Louvrier, K. Merz, R.M. Rilke), 1957; De kantate van Sint Juttemis (H. Gijsbers), T, Bar, male vv, pf, 1962; Litania, female vv, orch, 1962; Zoo (T. Fop), male vv, orch, 1964; In Those Days (Old Testament, Livy, Erasmus, W. Churchill), 2 groups of 4vv, 3 orch groups, 1969; Requiem for Europe (P. Celan, Kox, Deuteronomy), 4 choruses, 2 org, orch, 1971; Puer natus est, vv, orch, 1971; Anne Frank Cant. (A Child of Light), S, C, B, chorus, orch, 1984; Sjoah (orat.), S, T, B, chorus, orch, 1989; Das Credo quia absurdum (F. Nietzsche, R.M. Rilke), S, B, chorus, orch, 1995
Solo vocal: 3 coplas (J.W.W. Buning), 1v, pf, 1955; Vues des anges (Rilke), 1v, pf, 1959; 3 Chinese Songs, Bar, pf, 1962; L'allegria (G. Ungaretti), S, orch, 1967; Gedächtnislieder, S, orch, 1972; Cyclophony XV, Mez, ens, 1998

ORCHESTRAL

Concertante muziek, hn, tpt, trbn, orch, 1956; Little Lethe Sym., 1956; Fl Conc., 1957; Conc. for Orch, 1959; Sym. no.1, str, 1959; Ballade, 1960; Spleen, ballet, 1960; Pf Conc., 1962; Vn Conc., 1963; 2 Vn Conc., 1964; Cyclophony no.1, vc, chbr orch, 1964; Cyclophony no.2, 1964; Cyclophony no.5, ob, cl, bn, 19 str, 1966; Sym. no.2, 1966; Cyclophony no.6, vn, tpt, pf, vib, 16 str, 1967; Vc Conc. no.1, 1969; Phobos, 1970; 6 One-Act Plays, 29 insts, 1971; Conc. bandistico, 1973; Cyclophony no.9, perc, orch, 1974; A Gothic Conc., hp, chbr orch, 1975; Sinfonia concertante, vn, vc, orch, 1976; Vn Conc. no.2, 1978; Sym. no.3, 1980–5; Face to Face, a sax, str, 1992; Vn Conc. no.3, 1993; Vc Conc. no.2, 1997

CHAMBER AND INSTRUMENTAL

3 sonatas, vn, pf, 1952, 1955, 1961; 3 str trios, 1952, 1954, 1955; 2 Pf Pieces, 1954; 2 pf sonatas, 1954, 1955; Str Qt no.1, 1955; Sextet no.1, fl, ob, hpd, str trio, 1957; Str Qnt, 1957; Sextet no.2, str qt, hpd, pf, 1957; 3 Pieces, vn in 31st-tones, 1958; Pf Qt, 1959; Sonata, vc, 1959; Sextet no.3, wind qnt, pf, 1959; Barcarolle, pf, 1960
3 Studies, pf, 1961; Studies in Counterpoint, fl, hpd, 1962; Cyclophony no.3, pf, elec, 1964; Cyclophony no.4, rec, 9 str, 1965; Pf Qt, 1968; Cyclophony no.7, vn, pf, 6 perc, 1971; Capriccio, 2 vn, pf, 1974; Pf Trio, 1976; Cyclophony no.8, 8 vc, 1979; Concertino, a sax, wind ens, 1982; Sonata, t sax, pf, 1983; Cyclophony no.13, 2 pf; Sonata, a sax, pf, 1984; Sax Qt no.1, 1985; Sax Qt no.2, 1987; Through a Glass, Darkly, a sax, pf,

1989; Asklepios, 2 ob, 2 cl, 2 bn, 2 hn, 1990; Cyclophony no.14, vn, hp, 1992; Str Qt no.2, 1996; Galgentrio, a sax, vc, pf, 1997

Principal publisher: Donemus

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO (J. Wouters/L. Samma)

W. Paap: 'De componist Hans Kox', Mens en melodie, xxiv (1969), 35–42

G. Werker: '"In Those Days": a Musical Memory of the Battle of Arnhem', Sonorum speculum, no.43 (1970), 24–30

R. Starreveld: 'Hans Kox: Cyclophonies', Sonorum speculum, no.52 (1973), 28–37

B. van Putten: 'Return to the Critical Mass', Key Notes, xxxix/4 (1995), 10–15

B. van Putten: Hans Kox (Amsterdam, 1998) [publisher's catalogue]

JOS WOUTERS/BAS VAN PUTTEN

Kozarenko, Oleksandr (b Kolomiïya, Ivano-Franko province, 1963). Ukrainian composer. He graduated from the Kiev Conservatory where he studied the piano with Vorob′yov and composition with Skoryk with whom he undertook postgraduate work, gaining his Candidate of Arts degree in 1993. He has been a laureate of the Lysenko piano competition (1984) and of the Revuts′ky Prize (1996); he was appointed senior lecturer at the Lysenko Institute in L′viv in 1995. His compositional style is shaped by the Romantic tradition of the Ukrainian school (as exemplified by Lysenko), by the Expressionist tendencies of the Second Viennese School and, lastly, by various sources ranging from Carpathian and Hutsul folklore to the music of the Orthodox Church and vernacular urban styles. His distinctive language combines tonal thinking with aleatory and sonoristic techniques, turns of phrase from folklore with church monody, and melodies of the romance type with declamatory devices. His thinking tends towards theatricality while he prefers to work with chamber forces in tested formats. The fusion of different sources and styles, as well as the array of different techniques found in each composition makes it possible to place Kozarenko's work within the postmodern trend in late 20th-century Ukrainian music.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Don Zhuan iz Kolomiï [Don Juan from Kolïmiya] (ballet), 1994; Oresteya [The Oresteia] (monodrama), 1996; Chas pokayannya [The Hour of Repentance] (chbr op), 1997

Chbr cants.: Mikroskhemï [Microcircuits], 1989; 5 vesil′nykh ladkan′ z Pokuttya [5 Merry Wedding Songs from Pokutt], 1992; P′ero mertvopetlyue [Pierrot at the Death of Petlyura], 1994

Inst: Chaconne, orch, 1989; Passacaglia, organ, 1989 [based on Galician theme]; Vn Conc., 1989; Konzertstück, fl, kbd, str, 1990; Concerto rutheno, chbr ens, 1991; Ėpistolï [Letters], orch, 1991; Chanson triste in memory of Lutosławski, org, str, 1994

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Pavlyshyn: 'Kompozytory-liryky' [Lyric composers], Muzyka [Kiev] (1993), no.3

L. Kiyanovs′ka: 'Muzychnyy svit Oleksandra Kozarenka' [The musical world of Kozarenko], Muzyka [Kiev] (1996), no.3, p.4 only

YELENA and YURY CHEKAN

Kozeluch [Koscheluch, Koželuh], Johann Antonin [Jan Evangelista Antonín Tomáš] (b Velvary, 14 Dec 1738; d Prague, 3 Feb 1814). Bohemian composer, Kapellmeister and music teacher, a cousin of LEOPOLD KOZELUCH. He studied music at school in Velvary, as a chorister at the Jesuit college in Březnice and in Prague with J.F.N. Seger. He then worked for a short time as Kapellmeister in Rakovník and cantor in Velvary (to March 1762). Between about 1763 and 1766 he lived in Vienna, where he studied composition with Gluck and Gassmann and recitative with Hasse. After his return to Prague he soon became renowned as a music teacher and was subsequently Kapellmeister at St František at the Crusaders' monastery. He applied unsuccessfully for the post of cappellae magister at Prague Cathedral on F.X. Brixi's death in 1771, but was appointed there on 2 March 1784 as successor to Anton Laube and held this position until his death. Among his pupils were Václav Praupner and Leopold Kozeluch; he also taught composition to his two sons, Wenzel Franz (b 1784, a teacher of Joseph Proksch) and Vinzenz Emanuel (1780–1839), and to his daughter Barbara, a singer and pianist.

Kozeluch was one of the most important Bohemian composers in the second half of the 18th century, and his music was performed well into the 19th century. In his own day it was mainly as 'the masterly contrapuntist' that he was known; polyphonic texture is significant not only in the works of his first period (e.g. a fugue for double chorus, 1765), but also in his mature church works of about 1786 and later, in which he reduced the role of virtuoso vocal solos in favour of harmonic and contrapuntal depth. The works of his middle period show a predominantly operatic style. His two operas (the first, after Mysliveček's, by a native Czech composer to be staged at Prague) are in the opera seria style of Jommelli, with alternating recitatives and arias in abridged da capo form. He made considerable use of accompanied recitative (especially in Il Demofoonte), and he used the orchestra to depict the dramatic situation and add harmonic depth to the accompaniments. Despite Italian inspiration and some traces of French opéra comique in the melodies, the fundamental Czech colouring of Kozeluch's idiom is unmistakable. The oratorios and other church music of his middle period are in the same operatic style; he adapted some of the opera arias for use in church. Apart from the opera and oratorio librettos nothing of his output was printed during his lifetime. His music collection at the cathedral (now in the archive of Prague Castle), includes 439 works by himself, F.X. Brixi, Caldara, Hasse, Michael Haydn, Leopold Hofmann, Laube, Jan Zach and others.

WORKS

Alessandro nell'Indie (op, 3, P. Metastasio), Prague, spr. 1769, A-Wn, frag. CZ-Pnm

Il Demofoonte (op, 3, Metastasio), Prague, spr. 1771, *Pnm, 2 arias ed. in Němeček (1956)

Sacred: La morte d'Abel (Easter orat, Metastasio), Prague, Crusaders' monastery, 1776, BRE; Gioas re di Giuda (Easter orat, Metastasio), Prague, Crusaders' monastery, 1777, only lib extant; *c*400 other works, incl. *c*45 masses, 98 offs, 90 grads, 60 arias, 30 motets, 10 TeD, 5 requiems, 2 lits, mostly Bm, Pnm, Pak (see also Kouba, 1969)

Orch, Pnm: 4 syms., listed in Breitkopf catalogue (1774–5); 2 bn concs., 1 ed. H. Vexman (London, 1978); Ob Conc., ed. O. Schmid-Dresden with pf acc. (Hanover, n.d.); Cl Conc., also attrib. L. Kozeluch, ed. with pf acc. in MVH, xiv (1964/R)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AMZ, ii (1799–1800), 499; ix (1806–7), 67–8, 628

A. Podlaha: Catalogus collectionis operum artis musicae quae in bibliotheca capituli metropolitani pragensis asservantur (Prague, 1926), nos.548–803, pp.v, xxxi, xxxiii, xxxvi

R. Fikrle: Jan Ev. Ant. Koželuh: život, dílo a osobnost svatovítského kapelníka [Kozeluch: life, work and personality of the St Vít Kapellmeister] (Prague, 1946) [incl. list of works]

W. Vetter: 'Tschechische Opernkomponisten', SPFFBU, F9 (1965), 353–63

J. Pešková and T. Volek: Introduction to J. Pešková: Collectio ecclesiae březnicensis: catalogus collectionis operum artis musicae (Prague, 1983) [Eng. and Ger. summaries]

M. Kostílková: 'Nástin dějin svatovítského hudebního kůru' [A historical survey of the St Vít choir], in J. Štefan: Ecclesia metropolitana pragensis: catalogus collectionis operum artis musicae (Prague, 1983–5), 5–33 [Eng. and Ger. summaries]

K. Hálová: Opera Demofoonte J.A. Koželuha (diss., U. of Prague, 1989)

For further bibliography see KOZELUCH, LEOPOLD.

MILAN POŠTOLKA

Kozeluch [Kotzeluch, Koželuh], Leopold [Jan Antonín, Ioannes Antonius] (b Velvary, 26 June 1747; d Vienna, 7 May 1818). Bohemian composer, pianist, music teacher and publisher. He was baptized Jan Antonín, but began (not later than 1773) to use the name Leopold to differentiate himself from his older cousin of that name. He received his basic music education in Velvary and then studied music in Prague with his cousin, who probably gave him a thorough grounding in counterpoint and vocal writing, and with F.X. Dušek, whose piano and composition school prepared him mainly for writing symphonies and piano sonatas. After the success of his first ballets and pantomimes (performed in Prague, 1771–8), Kozeluch abandoned his law studies for a career as a musician. In 1778 he went to Vienna, where he quickly made a reputation as an excellent pianist, teacher and composer. By 1781 he was so well established there that he could refuse an offer to succeed Mozart as court organist to the Archbishop of Salzburg. By 1784 Kozeluch was publishing his own works; the following year he founded a music publishing house, later managed as the MUSIKALISCHES MAGAZIN by his brother Antonín Tomáš Kozeluch (1752–1805). His compositions were also published almost simultaneously by a number of other houses in various countries. Kozeluch's business contacts with English publishers, particularly John Bland, Robert Birchall, and Lewis, Houston & Hyde, are well documented by correspondence. In September 1791 he achieved success in high circles with a cantata commissioned by the Bohemian Estates for the Prague coronation of Leopold II as King of Bohemia. After the accession of Emperor Franz II he was appointed (12 June 1792) Kammer Kapellmeister and Hofmusik Compositor. From about 1804 Kozeluch's original work as a composer took second place to his arrangements of Scottish, Irish and Welsh folksongs for the Edinburgh publisher George Thomson, to teaching, and to the activities connected with his court appointment, which he held until his death. His daughter Catharina Cibbini (1785–1858) was a well-known pianist and composer of piano music during the early 19th century in Vienna.

Leopold Kozeluch: mezzotint by William Ridley, 1797

Kozeluch was one of the foremost representatives of Czech music in 18th-century Vienna. His influence as a pianist and piano teacher was such that early contemporary accounts praised him for helping in the development of an idiomatic piano style and for discouraging the use of the harpsichord in favour of the piano. As a composer he devoted himself almost exclusively to secular music (his sacred compositions are mostly arrangements of secular works). His chief interest lay in piano music – sonatas, piano trios and concertos – but he wrote almost as much symphonic and vocal music; he also composed for the stage, though most of his ballets and all but one of his operas are lost, making his achievement difficult to assess.

Kozeluch's output falls into three main stylistic (though not chronological) divisions: except for the oratorio Moisè in Egitto the galant style of the Viennese Rococo characterizes the greater part of his vocal output of the 1780s, particularly the songs and ariettas; his piano concertos and symphonies use the normal expressive language of the Viennese Classical style at that period, and a number of piano and chamber works of the 1780s and 1790s even presage the Romantic lyricism of Schubert. Elements of Beethoven's tragic-pathetic style and (more rarely) his lyricism are most evident in works of about 1785–97 (like the piano sonatas PXII:17, 20, 27, 34, 37, and the piano trios PIX:11, 15, 33), and can also be discerned in works from the first decade of the 19th century (e.g. PXII:38–40). Romantic expression is foreshadowed in the chamber works and piano music of 1785–91 (e.g. PXII:26, 28 and PVIII:3) and above all in the Trois caprices for piano (PXIII:3–5, about 1797) and the piano trios using Scottish and Irish melodies (PIX:40–45, 52–4, 1798–1803). The caprices, with their novel sonorities, colourful harmony and unusual form, represent an early stage of the single-movement lyrical piano piece; the other works hint at Schubert and Weber in some stylistic traits and in the character of their melodic inspiration.

WORKS

printed works published in Vienna unless otherwise stated; catalogue numbers are from Poštolka (1964), which includes doubtful and lost works; editions are listed in MAB, lxxii (1969)

VOCAL

9 cants., XIX:1–9: Denis Klage auf den Tod Marien Theresien (1781); Quanto è mai tormentosa (*c*1782); Joseph, der Menschheit Segen, perf. 1783 (1784); Cantate (K.G. Pfeffel, 'auf M.T. von Paradis', perf. 1783 (1785); Chloe, recit and aria (1783); Cantate ded. Leopold II (Meissner), perf. 1791, CZ-Pk; La Galatea, 1802, perf. April 1806, Pk; In un fiero contrasto, A-Wgm; Cantata pastorale, I-Fc

7 sacred, XXV:1–7: Mass, CZ-Pnm; Tantum ergo, A-Wn; off or grad, CZ-Pnm; 2 arias, Pnm; 1 aria, NA; hymn (Prague, 1833)

*c*60 songs (1v, hpd/pf, unless otherwise stated), XXI:1–15, XX:1–3: 15 Lieder (1785); 12 Lieder (1785); The Happy Pair, in 6 Ballads

(London, ?c1788); 12 Italian Arietts, 1v, hp/pf (London, 1790); De l'arbre ces fruits (1795); march song (1796); march song (1797); 3 airs françois (1797); Hört! Maurer (Berlin, 1799); In questa tomba oscura, arietta (1808); 6 [12] canzonets (1815); Mein Mädchen (1811); Des Kriegers Abschied (Berlin, c1818–19); Let the Declining Damask Rose (London, n.d.); Caro bene, recit and rondo, S, orch (London, n.d.); 2 arias, A-Wgm; 1 aria, D-Bsb

Moisè in Egitto, XVI:1 (orat), 1787, A-Wgm; La Giuditta, XVI:2 (orat, G. Bertati), ?c1790–92, I-Fc; 6 notturni, XVIII:1–6, S, A, T, B, pf, vc (1796); Non v'è nembo ne procella nò, XVII:1, chorus, orch, A-Wgm; 27 solfeggi, XXI:C 2, CZ-Pnm

Arrs., XXII:1–2: A Select Collection of [110] Original Scottish Airs, 1v, pf, vn, vc (London, 1798); A Select Collection of [59] Original Welsh Airs, 1v, pf, vn, vc, collab. J. Haydn (London, 1809)

STAGE

6 ops, XXIII:1–6: Mazet [Le Muzet] (französische komische Oper, 2, L. Anseaume, after J. de La Fontaine), Vienna, Kärntnertor, 1780 ? or 1786, lost; Didone abbandonata (os, 3, P. Metastasio), Vienna, Hof, 1795, lost; Gustav Wasa (grosser heroische Oper, 3), after ?1792, CZ-Pk; 3 others, lost

6 ballets and pantomimes, XXIV:1–6: La ritrovata figlia di Ottone II (ballo eroico, 5, A. Muzzarelli), Vienna, 24 Feb 1794 (1794); Arlechino (? F. Clerico), arr. pf, A-Wgm; ballet, str, *D-Bsb; ballet, hpd, CZ-Pnm; pantomime, hpd, Pnm; Télémaque dans l'île de Calypso (2, J. Dauberval), A-Wgm

ORCHESTRAL

11 syms., I:1–11: D (Paris, c1786); C (Paris, c1786); D, F, g (1787), ed. in MAB, lxxii (1969); C, A, G (1787); C, D-DO; A, 'à la française', c1779–84, CZ-Pnm; B♭, 'l'irresolu', Pnm

22 hpd/pf concs., IV:1–20: F, B♭ (1784); G (1785); A, E♭ (1785); C (Paris, 1786); D (1787); F (Mainz, c1785); Concerto en rondo, C (Offenbach, 1793); Concert favori, E♭ (London, 1800); B♭ for 4 hands, listed in Breitkopf catalogue, 1785–7, CZ-Pnm; D, D, Pnm; Rondo concerto, E♭, Pnm; E, *Pnm; F, KRa; C, A-Wgm; C, Wn; Fantasia concertante, d, Wn; E, B-Bc; F, B♭, BR-Rn [without catalogue numbers]

Sym. concertante, II:1, E♭, perf. 1798, A-Wn; Sym. concertante, II:2, C, Wn; Ov., III:2, D, Wgm; 2 cl concs., V:1–2, E♭, E♭, before 1790, CZ-Pnm; 5 sets of dances, VII:1–5, A-Wn [nos.1, 3–5 arr. pf]; march, VII:6, lost [arr. 2vv, hpd]

CHAMBER

6 str qts, VIII:1–6: B♭, G, E♭ (1790) [nos.2–3 arr. trios; no.3 partly arr. trio]; C, A, F (1791) [nos.4–5 arr. trios]: all ed. in RRMCE, xli (1994)

63 trios (sonatas), IX:1–63, pf/hpd, vn/fl, vc: D, F, E♭ (1780) [arr. duos]; C, G, B♭ (1781); C, A, E♭ (1786) [no.8 arr. duo]; G, c, F (1787) [arr. duos]; B♭, A, g (1788); E♭, D, e (1789); B♭, G, C (1791); C (1792); G, E♭ (Paris, ?c1792) [arr. of str qts]; C, A, op.33 (Paris, 1793) [arr. of str qts]; D, F, G (1793); F, C, e (1795); B♭, D, G (1796) [arr. 2 vn]; F, G, D (1799); Grand Sonatas, G, B♭, F, C, A, g, 1798–9 (London, ?c1799); E♭, A, B♭ (London, 1800); D, E♭, C, 1801 (1802); B♭, D, E♭, 1803 (London, 1804); B♭, F, C, 1817 (London, n.d.); D, G, E♭, 1817 (London, n.d.); D, C, B♭, c1805–6 (London, 1800); E♭, CZ-Pnm [arr. partly from str qt]

31 duos, X:1–11, 13–24 and others (pf, vn, unless otherwise stated): E♭, C (Paris, 1785) [arr. of kbd sonatas]; G, c, F (Paris, ?c1785) [arr. of trios]; 6 sonatas, E, G, D, B♭, f, G, op.23 (Paris, n.d.); g, C, A♭ (London, ?c1788) [arr. of kbd sonatas]; f, A, E♭ (London, ?c1788) [arr. of kbd sonatas]; e, C, D, XV:7–9, fl, vc (London, after 1792); D (London, c1820) [arr. of kbd sonata]; C (London, c1820) [arr. of kbd sonata]; Sonata, XII:49, G (London, ?c1820); 6 [3] grands duos symphoniques, XV:1–3, D, B♭, G, 2 vn (Paris, n.d.) [arr. of trios, no.3 arr. of La chasse, kbd]; D, XV:6, vn, va, A-Wgm; A, CZ-Pnm [arr. of trio]; D, F, E♭, Pu [arr. of trios]

2 serenades, VI:1–2, D, E♭, vn, va, b, fl, bn, hn, op.11 (Offenbach, 1787); 16 fanfares, XV:5, 3 hn, JIa; 2 divertimentos, VI:9–10, E♭, E♭, pf/hpd, 2 vn, 2 ob, 2 hn, A-Wn; 3 divertimentos, VI:4–5, 7, D, D, E♭, 2 cl, bn, 2 hn, CZ-Pnm; Nocturne, VI:6, D, fl, vn, 2 va, vc/basset hn, Pnm; Trio, XV:4, G, fl, vn, vc, Pnm; Parthia, VI:3, F, 2 va, fl, 2 cl, 2 bn, 2 hn, D-W; Parthia, VI:8, F, 2 fl, 2 cl, 2 bn, 2 hn, RUS-SPsc

KEYBOARD

7 sonatas for 4 hands, XI:1–7: F (?c1781); B♭ (1784); F (1784); B♭ (1789), C, F, D, op.12 (Paris, n.d.)

49 solo sonatas, XII:1–48, 50: F, E♭, D (1780); B♭, A, c (1780); E♭, e, G (1784), no.3 also pubd with others, F, C (Paris, 1784) [no.5 arr. duo]; D (Amsterdam, n.d.) [arr. duo], E♭, C (1784) [arr. duo]; g, C, A♭ (1785) [arr. duo]; f, A, E♭ (1785) [arr. duo]; F, C, d (1786); D, a, E♭ (1788); B♭, G, c (1789); F, A, g (1791); E♭, C, f (1793); G (London, ?c1797); E♭, c, d, 1803 (London, 1807); F, before 1773, RUS-SPsc; A, 1776, CZ-Pnm; C, A-Wn; E♭, Wn; Grandes sonates, B♭, A, e, I-PAc; G, F, E♭, before Oct 1806 (London, 1809)

Other solo works: La chasse, XIII:2, F (1781) [arr. 2 vn]; Ov., III:1, G (London, ?c1785); Minuet, XIV:6 (1789); XII Menuetten, XIV:7 (1793); XV neue deutsche Tänze, XIV:8 (1793) [arr. of orch dances]; 6 écossaises, XIV: 9 (?1793); 15 deutsche Tänze, XIV:9 (?1793) [arr. of orch dances]; 6 contredanses, XIV:5 (1795) [arr. of orch dances]; march, XIV:10 (c1797); 3 caprices, XIII:3–5, E♭, B♭, c (1798); 12 Pieces ... for the Use of Beginners, XIII:6–17 (London, 1799); 12 neue deutsche Tanze, XIV:11, A-Wn [arr. of orch dances]; andante and march, XIII:1, 1779–80, D-Bsb; 23 minuets, 1 polonaise, XIV:1–4, ?1778, CZ-Pnm

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DlabacžkL, ii

G.J. Dlabacž: 'Versuch eines Verzeichnisses der vorzüglichern Tonkünstler in oder aus Böhmen', Materialien zur alten und neuen Statistik von Böhmen, ed. J.A. Riegger, xii (Leipzig and Prague, 1794), 225–98, esp. 249

J.F. von Schönfeld, ed.: Jb der Tonkunst von Wien und Prag (Vienna, 1796/R), 33

R. Sondheimer: 'Die formale Entwicklung der vorklassischen Sinfonie', AMw, iv (1922), 85–99, 123–39

H.J. Wedig, ed.: Beethovens Streichquartett op.18 Nr.1 und seine erste Fassung (Bonn, 1922), 8

E. Alberti-Radanowicz: 'Das Wiener Lied von 1789–1815', SMw, x (1923), 37–76

G. Löbl: Die Klaviersonate bei Leopold Kozeluch (diss., U. of Vienna, 1937)

C. Hopkinson and C.B. Oldman: 'Thomson's Collections of National Song', Transactions of the Edinburgh Bibliographical Society, ii/1 (1940); addenda and corrigenda, iii/2 (1954), 123–4

O.E. Deutsch: 'Kozeluch ritrovato', ML, xxvi (1945), 47–50

A. Weinmann: Verzeichnis der Verlagswerke des Musikalischen Magazins in Wien (Vienna, 1950, 2/1979)

K. Pfannhauser: 'Wer war Mozarts Amtsnachfolger?', Acta mozartiana, iii (1956), 6–13

M. Poštolka: Leopold Koželuh: život a dílo [Life and works] (Prague, 1964) [with thematic catalogue, bibliography; Eng. and Ger. summary]

C. Flamm: Leopold Koželuch: Biographie und stilkritische Untersuchung der Sonaten für Klavier, Violine und Violoncello (diss., U. of Vienna, 1968)

C. Flamm: 'Ein Verlegerbriefwechsel zur Beethovenzeit', Beethoven-Studien, ed. E. Schenk (Vienna, 1970), 57–110

G. Balassa: 'Az elsö bécsi klasszikus iskola klarinétversenyei (1770–1810)' [Clarinet concertos of the first Viennese school], Magyar zene, xviii (1977), 49–74, 134–83

B. Edelmann: 'Haydns Il Ritorno di Tobia und der Wandel des "Geschmacks" in Wien nach 1780', Joseph Haydn: Cologne 1982, 189–214

J. Beránek: 'K otázce hudební složky českých korunovačních slavností v roce 1791: na okraj jednoho problému mozartovské historiografie' [Concerning the question of the music at the Bohemian coronation ceremonies in 1791: remarks on a problem of Mozart historiography], MMC, no.30 (1983), 81–110 [with Ger. summary]

R. Hickman: 'Leopold Kozeluch and the Viennese quatuor concertant', College Music Symposium, xxvi (1986), 42–52

K. Komlós: 'The Viennese Keyboard Trio in the 1780s: Sociological Background and Contemporary Reception', ML, lxviii (1987), 222–34

J.A. Rice: 'Muzzarelli, Koželuh e La ritornata figlia di Ottone II (1794): il baletto viennese ordinato nello spirito di Noverre', NRMI, xxiv (1990), 1–46

MILAN POŠTOLKA

Kozina, Marjan (b Novo Mesto, 4 June 1907; d Novo Mesto, 19 June 1966). Slovenian composer and writer on music. He studied mathematics at Ljubljana University and music at the conservatory (1925–7), later continuing his compositional studies with Joseph Marx at the Vienna Music Academy (1927–30) and with Suk in the Prague Conservatory masterclasses (1930–32), where he was also a conducting pupil of Malko. On his return to Yugoslavia he worked successively as répétiteur at the Ljubljana and Zagreb operas (1932–4), conductor of the Maribor Glasbena Matica and director of its music school (1934–9), teacher at the Belgrade Music Academy (1939–43, 1945–7), director of the Slovenian Philharmonic (1948–50) and composition teacher at the Ljubljana Academy of Music (1951–60). He composed in a neo-Romantic, naturalistic style, incorporating pictorialism and elements of folksong. He was a member of the Slovenian Academy of Sciences and Arts.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Suite, 1939; Sym. in 4 sym. poems: Bela Krajina, 1946, Ilova gora [Mt Ilova], 1947, Padlim [To the Fallen], 1948, Proti morju [Towards the Sea], 1949; Davnina, sym. poem, 1959

Vocal: Lepa Vida [Beautiful Vida], 3 solo vv, chorus, 1939; Ekvinokcij (op), 1943; Balada Petrice Kerempuha, B, orch, 1946; Tlaka [Socage] (cant.), 3vv, male chorus, orch 1956

Ballets, songs, choruses, film scores

Principal publisher: Edicije DSS

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Kuret: 'Marjan Kozina: prispevek za biografijo' [Kozina: a contribution to his biography], MZ, vii (1971), 90–101

C. Cvetko: Marjan Kozina (Ljubljana, 1983)

ANDREJ RIJAVEC

Kozina, Zh. See ZEYFAS, NATAL'YA MIKHAYLOVNA.

Kozlovsky, Aleksey Fyodorovich (b Kiev, 2/15 Oct 1905; d Tashkent, 9 Jan 1977). Russian composer and conductor. He began to compose at the age of six, and studied the piano and composition with Yavorsky at the Kiev Conservatory (1917–19) and the First Moscow Technical College of Music. Subsequently he studied composition with Myaskovsky and Zhilyayev at the Moscow Conservatory and went to Khessin for conducting lessons. On graduating from the conservatory in 1931 he made his début as a conductor at the Stanislavsky Opera Theatre, where he worked for several years, meanwhile making himself a reputation in the USSR and the USA as a composer. In 1936 he moved to Tashkent; his activities in Uzbekistan were extremely varied. He collected and studied examples of Uzbek and Karakalpak folk music, sometimes under the guidance of Viktor Uspensky, and in his compositions he used only folk material which he himself had recorded; he composed in all genres and wrote articles on Uzbek folk music; during the World War II years he formed a relationship with Anna Akhmatora; in 1944 he began teaching composition and conducting at the Tashkent Conservatory (he was made professor in 1958 and for many years he was the chief of the department of composition and instrumentation); he also served as principal conductor of the Uzbek Philharmonic SO (1949–57, 1960–66). His awards included the title People's Artist of Uzbek SSR (1955), the Order of Lenin (1959) and Khamza State Prize (1973).

Kozlovsky was one of a number of leading Russian composers working in Uzbekistan in the 1930s who tried to achieve a creative synthesis of European and Uzbek music traditions. Though he was reared on the music of Russian Romantics and the French Impressionists, he displayed a rare insight into the essence of Asian folklore. An inventive harmonist and orchestrator, he was drawn to programmatic orchestral genres which provided rich opportunities for imaginative sonorities, and to musical theatre. Of his works the most popular are the Ferganskaya syuita Lola and the vocal-symphonic poem Tanovar (based on the lyrical folk melody Kora soch); both were written shortly after his arrival in Uzbekistan and retain their artistic value decades later. As a conductor he was responsible for making the Uzbek Philharmonic SO into a highly professional body.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Afdal' (op, G. Gerus), 1942; Ulugbek (op, Kozlovsky, Gerus), 1942, Tashkent, 19 Nov 1942, rev. 1958; Slava Oktyabryu [Hail October] (ballet, Gerus), 1947; Tanovar [The Oriole] (ballet, Gerus), 1971

Orch: Sym. no.1 'Khoreograficheskaya', 1934; Sym. no.2, 1935; Ferganskaya syuita Lola, sym. suite, 1937; Tanovar, vocal-sym. poem, 1v ad lib, orch, 1937, orchd 1951; Gornaya syuita, 1948; Po prochtenii Ayni [On Reading Ayni], sym. poem, 1952; Dastan, sym. poem, 1954; Uzbekskaya tantseval'naya syuita [Uzbek Dance Suite], 1954 [from the op Ulugbek]; Indiyskaya poėma, 1955; Karakalpakskaya syuita no.1, 1956; Karakalpakskaya syuita no.2, 1962; Prazdnestvo [Celebration], sym. poem, 1964; Pamyat' gor [Memory of the Mountains], sym. poem, 1973

Vocal: 2 suites, chorus, 1934; Nastavleniye mudrïm [Admonition to the Wise] (cant., Navoyi), 1948; Nigorim, 1v, orch, 1956; Tekenalish, 1v, orch, 1956; songs, folksong arrs.

Uzbek music dramas, collab. Uzbek composers; chbr works incl.: Va Sonata, 1965; Gijjak-alt Sonata, 1967; 232 pf fugues; incid music, film scores

Principal publishers: Gosizdat UzSSR, Goslitizdat UzSSR, Muzïka, Sovetskiy kompozitor

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Kozlovsky: 'Otrazheniye tembrov uzbekskikh narodnïkh instrumentov v simfonicheskom orkestre' [The reflection of the timbres of Uzbek folk instruments in the symphony orchestra], Voprosï muzïkal'noy kul'turï Uzbekistana, ed. I.N. Karelova (Tashkent, 1961), 143–55

T. Vïzgo: Aleksey Kozlovskiy (Moscow, 1966)

Yu. Kon: 'Zametki o garmonizatsii obrabotok uzbekskikh pesen A.F. Kozlovskim' [Remarks about Kozlovsky's harmonizations of arrangements of Uzbek songs], Nekotorïye voprosï ladovogo stroyeniya uzbekskoy narodnoy pesni i yeyo garmonizatsii (Tashkent, 1979) 71–83

N. Yanov-Yanovskaya: Uzbekskaya simfonicheskaya muzïka (Tashkent, 1979)

G. Gerus [G. Kozlovskaya]: 'Dni i godï odnoy prekrasnoy zhizni' [Days and years of a splendid life], MAk (1994), no.3, pp.40–54; no.4, pp.110–14

L.M. BUTIR/NATALIYA YANOV-YANOVSKAYA

Kozlovsky, Ivan Semyonovich (b Mar'yanovka, Kiev province, 11/24 March 1900; d Moscow, 21 Dec 1993). Ukrainian tenor. He graduated from the Kiev Institute of Music and Drama in 1920, having made his début in 1918 at Poltava. He joined the Bol'shoy Theatre in 1926 and was made People's Artist of the USSR in 1940. Kozlovsky was the most popular Soviet singer of his time. The distinctive features of his singing were his clear, silvery tone and flexible upper register extending to e'', his remarkable technique, expressive use of words and finished phrasing. A versatile artist and a fine actor, he sang such contrasting roles as Lensky, Berendey (The Snow Maiden), Lohengrin and the Holy Fool (Boris Godunov). From 1938 to 1941 Kozlovsky directed his own opera company and took part in Gluck's Orfeo ed Euridice and Massenet's Werther.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Polyanovsky: Ivan Semyonovich Kozlovskiy (Moscow and Leningrad, 1945)

V. Slyotov: I. Kozlovskiy (Moscow, 1951)

I.M. YAMPOL'SKY

Kozłowski, Józef (b Warsaw, 1757; d St Petersburg, 15/27 Feb 1831). Polish composer, administrator and teacher.

Born into a well-established Polish family, he was a chorister in the collegiate church of St John the Baptist, Warsaw, where he also played in the instrumental ensemble. As a violinist, he was a member of the troupe of J. Stempkowski, governor of Labun′ (Zasiaw district), who was a keen musician and a supporter of promising musical talent. Between 1775 and 1777 Kozłowski entered the service of Prince André Ogiński and taught music at the court of the prince and his brother at Guzów and Troki. During the early 1780s he moved to St Petersburg and in September 1786 enrolled as ensign in the Kinburg Dragoons; he then entered the service of Grigory Potyomkin and probably accompanied him to the Ukraine in 1787, shortly before the outbreak of the Russo-Turkish war. On his return to St Petersburg in 1790, Kozłowski remained as music master to Potyomkin's household. Following the capture of Izmail, he directed the music at the victory celebrations at the Tauride Palace in April 1791; his polonaise Grom pobedï razdavaysya ('Thunder of victory, resound!') was performed as a fanfare for the arrival of Empress Yekaterina II. This work became an official Russian hymn, predating the later national anthem by A.F. L′vov (1833).

On the death of Potyomkin in October 1791 Kozłowski entered the service of Prince Narishkin, retaining this position until 1799. He became increasingly involved in St Petersburg musical life and in March 1799 he was appointed inspector of music to the city's Imperial Theatres. Two years later he became a director, with responsibility for the musical aspects of all productions. In 1802 he agreed to teach music at the theatre school. His involvement with the Imperial Theatres lasted until 1819 when, owing to failing health, he was forced to retire. He spent a short period in Poland (1822–4) before returning to St Petersburg, where he remained for the rest of his life.

Although Kozłowski composed orchestral, vocal and instrumental music, he was best known during his lifetime as a composer of polonaises (writing more than 200), a form he popularized (with Ogiński) in Russia and which became widely used by composers in the early 19th century. His earliest polonaises probably appeared anonymously in the Journal de musique pour le clavecin ou pianoforte, dédié aux dames, first published in St Petersburg in 1785. By the early 1790s Kozłowski's output had increased dramatically. Many of his keyboard polonaises were based on themes from popular operas of the day and were arrangements of orchestral originals. They were performed at official functions and festivities celebrating important military successes, while some were composed as choral works, often based on the verses of the eminent poet G.R. Derzhavin. The leading St Petersburg publishing house Gerstenberg and Dittmar issued more music by Kozłowski than by any other single composer in the period before 1800, indicating the popularity of his works and the important role he played in the early development of keyboard music in Russia.

Among Kozłowski's earliest large-scale works were a cantata La gloire de Pierre I (based on a text by P.M. Karabanov, performed at the memorial service for Potyomkin in September 1794), music for the coronation of Pavel I in Moscow (1797) and a Missa pro defunctis, commissioned by the last King of Poland, Stanisław August, and performed at his funeral in St Petersburg (February 1798). The handsome edition of this work by Breitkopf & Härtel includes a catalogue of Kozłowski's published music in the period to 1798. As director of music at the Imperial Theatres, he composed a variety of incidental music for dramatic productions, most notably for Ozerov's Oedipus in Athens (1804) and Fingal (1805), Shakhovskoy's Deborah (1810) and Racine's Esther (translated by P.A. Katenin, 1816). After 1820 Kozłowski's output steadily declined, although he continued to write piano music and songs, as well as the official funeral music on the death of Aleksandr I (1826) and a Te Deum for double choir and orchestra dedicated to Nikolay I (?1827). The principal collection of Kozłowski's manuscripts in the Zubov Institute for the History of the Arts contains the important Zavadovsky manuscript, which comprises 67 pieces, mainly for keyboard.

Although Kozłowski achieved tremendous success with his keyboard polonaises, there are few distinguishing features of his musical style; the technical demands made upon the performer are slight, suggesting that most works were intended for amateurs, and his style hardly developed over his lifetime. Polonaises based on a similar elementary formula to those of the early 1790s continued to be published up to at least 1820.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Findeyzen: Ocherki po istorii russkoy muzïki v Rossii s drevneyshikh vremyon do kontsa XVIII veka [Essays on the history of Russian music from earliest times to the end of the 18th century], ii (Leningrad, 1929)

S. Golachowski: 'Missa pro defunctis J. Kozłowskiego', KM, no.16 (1932), 671–85

B.V. Asaf′yev: 'Pamyatka o Kozlovskom', Izbrannïye trudï, iv (1955), 35–8

M.S. Druskin and Yu.V. Keldïsh, eds.: Ocherki po istorii russkoy muzïki 1790–1825 [Essays on the history of Russian music 1790–1825] (Leningrad, 1956)

I. Belza, ed.: Russko-polskiye muzïkal′nïye svyazi [Musical links between Russia and Poland] (Moscow, 1963)

Yu.V. Keldïsh: Russkaya muzïka XVIII veka (Moscow, 1965)

O. Levashova: 'Kozlovsky i russkiy klassitsizm', Musica antiqua: Bydgoszcz 1972, 825–46

N.A. Kopchevsky, ed.: Russkaya fortepiannaya muzïka, i (Moscow, 1986)

NIGEL YANDELL

Kozolupov, Semyon Matveyevich (b Krasnokholmskaya, Orenburg prov., 22 April 1884; d Moscow, 18 April 1961). Russian cellist and teacher. He studied at the St Petersburg Conservatory with A.V. Wierzbiłłowicz and I.I. Seifert, and in 1911 won the Moscow Cello Competition. A soloist of the Bol′shoy Theatre Orchestra (1908–12, 1924–31), he was also a member of the Moscow Quartet. His playing was distinguished by virtuosity and a broad, full tone. He taught at the conservatories in Saratov (1912–16, 1921–2) and Kiev (1916–20), and from 1922 until his death was a professor at the Moscow Conservatory, where he was head of the cello department (1936–54); among his pupils were Rostropovich and Knushevitsky. His progressive views on technique are reflected in his editions of Bach's cello suites, Davïdov's concertos, and early sonatas and studies. He was made People's Artist of the RSFSR in 1946.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L.S. Ginzburg: Istoriya violonchel′nogo iskusstva [The history of the art of the cello], iii (Moscow, 1965), 398–432

LEV GINZBURG

Krabber. Variant term for the Flemish Vlier (box zither). See HOMMEL.

Kracher, Joseph Matthias (b Mattinghofen, Upper Austria, 30 Jan 1752; d ?Kuchl [now in Salzburg], between *c*1827 and 1830). Austrian composer. He received his first musical training from the schoolmaster in Lochen (Upper Austria), and as a boy he was a singer at the Cistercian monastery at Fürstenzell, the Jesuit seminary at Landshut and the Augustinian abbey of St Nikola at Passau. He was a capable pianist and violinist, and abandoned his plans for a university career to become a schoolmaster and organist at Lochen (from 1765), later serving at Kestendorf, Bavaria (from 6 July 1766), Teisendorf (from 1769) and Michelbeuern, near Salzburg (from 1771), where he also worked as a valet at the local Benedictine abbey. On 1 May 1772 he became the organist of the collegiate church in Seekirchen and in 1807 took a post as schoolmaster at Kuchl, near Hallein. Kracher was on friendly terms with Michael Haydn, who prompted his first attempts at composition in about 1775. As a composer he was self-taught; his compositions (apparently exclusively sacred music) follow the same traditions as those of Joseph and Michael Haydn. Although few of his works are extant, they included some 22 masses, 4 requiems, 4 litanies, a vesper service, 24 graduals, 15 offertories, 2 settings of the Te Deum, 6 Tenebrae motets, 20 vesper hymns and lieder.

WORKS

only those extant

Mass, A-SEI; mass, Gd; Deutsche Messe, 1817, Gd, Sca; Requiem, KR; lit, *Wgm; 2 lits, Sca; Vesperae de BVM, Wn; off, Wn; Salve regina, Wn; TeD, Wn

BIBLIOGRAPHY

WurzbachL

B. Pillwein: Biographische Schilderungen oder Lexikon Salzburgischer . . . Künstler (Salzburg, 1821), 117–18

OTHMAR WESSELY

Kradenthaler, Hieronymus. See GRADENTHALER, HIERONYMUS.

Krader [née Lattimer], Barbara (b Columbus, OH, 15 Jan 1922). American ethnomusicologist. She took the AB in music in 1942 at Vassar College, where her teachers included Ernst Krenek and George Dickinson. In 1948 she took the AM in Russian language and literature at Columbia University; she worked with George Herzog and Roman Jakobson. After a year at Prague University (1948–9) she began work for the doctorate at Radcliffe College; she took courses in Slavonic folklore, linguistics and literature under Roman Jakobson and took the PhD in 1955 with a dissertation on Serbian peasant wedding ritual songs. She was assistant to the chief of the music section of the Pan American Union (1957–9), a reference librarian and bibliographer in the Slavonic division of the Library of Congress (1959–63) and a lecturer in the Slavonic department of Ohio State University (1963–4). She worked as executive secretary of the IFMC in London (1965–6); returning to the USA, she taught at Columbia University (1969) and served as foreign editor of the American Musical Digest (1969–70). She lectured at the Freie-Universität, Berlin (1976–8). Since 1978 she has worked as a professional translator.

Krader's research has centred on Slavonic folk music and music of non-Slavonic Balkan countries; she is particularly interested in wedding ritual songs. She has made field recording expeditions to the former Czechoslovakia, the former Yugoslavia, northern Greece, Rhodes and Romania. In 1971–3 she was president of the Society for Ethnomusicology.

WRITINGS

'Russian Folklore and Y.M. Sokolov', Midwest Folklore, ii (1952), 119–27

Serbian Peasant Wedding Ritual Songs: a Formal, Semantic and Functional Analysis (diss., Harvard U., 1955)

'Bibliography of George Herzog', EthM Newsletter, no.6 (1956), 11–28; no.8 (1956), 10 only

'Bibliography of André Schaeffner', EthM, ii (1958), 27–34

ed. and trans.: N.P. Andreev: 'A Characterization of the Ukrainian Tale Corpus', Fabula, i (1958), 228–38

'Soviet Research on Russian Folk Music since World War II', EthM, vii (1963), 252–61

with B.C. Aaronson: 'A Partial Survey of Late 18th-Century Publications of Czech Music in Western Europe', SPFFBU, F9 (1965), 13–21

'Folk Music Archive of the Moscow Conservatory, with a Brief History of Russian Field Recording', Folklore and Folk Music Archivist, x/2 (1967–8), 13–46

'Viktor Mikhailovich Beliaev', EthM, xii (1968), 86–100

'Bulgarian Folk Music Research', EthM, xiii (1969), 248–66

'Music of Czechoslovakia', 'Folklore of Czechoslovakia', East Central Europe: a Guide to Basic Publications, ed. P.L. Horecky (Chicago, 1969), 312–17, 347–53

'The Philosophy of Folk and Traditional Music Study in the United States', Yugoslav-American Seminar on Music: Sveti Stefan 1968, 149–63

'Vasil Stoin, Bulgarian Folk Song Collector', YIFMC, xii (1980), 27–42

'Slavic Folk Music: Forms of Singing and Self-Identity', EthM, xxxi (1987), 9–17

'Recent Achievements in Soviet Ethnomusicology with Remarks on Russian Terminology', YIFMC, xxii (1990), 1–16

'Southern and Eastern Europe', Ethnomusicology: Historical and Regional Studies, ed. H. Myers (London, 1993), 160–87

PAULA MORGAN

Kraf, Michael (b Neustadt, nr Fulda, bap. 5 Sept 1595; d Altdorf, nr Ravensburg, Swabia, 15 March 1662). German composer, organist and public and court official. He completed his education at the Jesuit College at Fulda. On 4 April 1616 he was appointed composer and organist of the Benedictine abbey at Weingarten, and remained there until 1633. It appears likely that his duties consisted primarily of composing sacred music, since the abbey also employed a full-time organist. When from 1632 its musical activities were curtailed because of the Thirty Years War, Kraf became active in political affairs. After successfully negotiating the preservation of the monastery from destruction by the Swedish army he became burgomaster of Altdorf-Weingarten on 29 June 1633. In 1639 he entered the service, in non-musical capacities, of Archduke Leopold of Swabia after whose death he continued to serve his successor, Ferdinand Karl; both rulers resided at Innsbruck. Though he did not resume his musical career after 1633, Kraf did maintain his ties with the abbey at Weingarten, which bestowed upon him in perpetuity the title of 'Dominus'. With one exception, the collection of four masses and a requiem published in 1652, all of his publications date from the period of his tenure at the monastery. His masses and Magnificat settings, as well as some early motets, are in the stile antico polyphonic tradition; several masses and motets use parody technique. The motets of 1620, 1624 and 1627 show familiarity with the techniques of the stile nuovo.

WORKS

Musae novae (19 masses, motets, Mag), 8vv, bc (Dillingen, 1616)

Liber I [24] sacrorum concentuum, 2–4vv, bc (Rorschach, 1620)

Canticum Deiparae virginis, liber I (8 Mag), 6, 8vv, bc (Rorschach, 1620)
Augustissimae caelorum dominae virginis parentis canticum (8 Mag), 6–8vv, bc (Rorschach, 1620)
Canticum Deiparae virginis, liber II (10 Mag), 8–10vv, bc (Ravensburg, 1623)
[5] Missae, 6–12vv, bc (Ravensburg, 1623)
Liber II [21] sacrorum concentuum, 2–8vv, bc (Ravensburg, 1624)
[20] Motectae quibus Deo ... accinuit, pars I, 6–8vv, bc (Ravensburg, 1625; 6 ptbks 1626)
[15] Sacri litaniarum concentus, 4–6vv, bc (Ravensburg, 1627)
Camaenopaedia sacra concertus vocant, liber III (19 motets), 2–8vv, bc (Ravensburg, 1627)
Agalliama vespertinum quo maxumam coelitum reginam virginum, liber III (8 Mag), 6–12vv, bc (Rottweil, 1627)
Opus XI musicum, seu Missae quatuor, cum una pro defunctis, 4–8vv, bc (Innsbruck, 1652)
Motets, psalms, A-KR, D-Mbs

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; SennMT
P. Lindner: 'Professbuch der Benediktinerabtei Weingarten', Fünf Professbücher süddeutscher Benediktinerabteien, ii: Professbuch Benediktinerabtei Weingarten (Kempton, 1909)
A. Beer: Die Annahme des stile nuovo in der katholischen Kirchenmusik Süddeutschlands (Tutzing, 1989), 171–95
A. Beer: 'Michael Kraf (1595–1662) – Lebensweg und Schaffen', Bedeutende Bad Neustädter, i, ed. E. Nowak (Bad Neustadt, 1998), 33–76

CHRISTOPHER WILKINSON/AXEL BEER

Krafft [Crafft]. Flemish family of composers and musicians of German descent.

(1) Jean-Laurent Krafft (b Brussels, 10 Nov 1694; d Brussels, bur. 1 Jan 1768). Engraver and printer. Son of Jean-Georges Krafft and Marie Jors, he received his artistic education in Germany and then came back to his native city. He was married firstly to Jeanne-Marie Borremaecker (1716) and secondly to Marie Aubersin (1719). Krafft engraved and printed six musical publications: J.-H. Fiocco's Pièces de clavecin op.1, in two suites, the first dated example of music engraving in Brussels (1730), C.-J. Van Helmont's Pièces de clavecin op.1 (1737), H.-J. de Croes's Sonates op.4 (1747), Andrau's Six sonates italiennes (1748) and G.-G. Kennis's Six sonates en trios op.2 (*c*1742–50). Krafft also wrote some books and plays, and composed a Passion de notre seigneur Jésus-Christ performed at the Théâtre de la Monnaie in Brussels on 8 April 1727 and on 6 April 1732.

(2) François-Joseph Krafft (b Brussels, bap. 22 July 1721; d Ghent, 13 Jan 1795). Organist, conductor and composer, son of (1) Jean-Laurent Krafft and Marie Aubersin. He is believed to have been a chorister in St Baaf Cathedral, Ghent, and to have studied composition in Italy (perhaps under Durante), where it is claimed that he won a prize for the motet In convertendo. Little is known of his career: he may be the Krafft mentioned in the Brussels Almanach nouveau ... ou Le guide fidèle as a composer, organist and harpsichord teacher from 1761 to 1768, but it could equally be his cousin (3) François. The same applies to the 'Kraft' named as a composition teacher in Brussels in the list of subscribers to Jean-Jacques Robson's op.4, published about 1760; this could alternatively be Jean-François (b 1732), François' brother. On 9 January 1768 François-Joseph married Jeanne Catherine Willems in the church of St Nicolas, Brussels; on 7 April 1769 he was appointed music director of St Baaf Cathedral in Ghent, a position he held until his resignation on 23 August 1794. In 1772 he was invited to Mechelen to sit on a jury of an organ and carillon competition.

WORKS

presumed lost unless otherwise stated

Masses: d, 8vv, orch; G, vv, orch; 5vv, org, 1771; a, 5vv, org, 1776; d, 4vv, org, 1791; G, 4vv, orch, 1792
Missa da requiem, 4vv, org, 1765
3 TeD, 8vv, org: C, 1769, D, 1774, d, 1774, all B-Geb
Magnificat sesti toni
Psalms: 7 psaumes de la pénitence, 4vv, orch; Dixit Dominus, F, vv, orch, 1782, Geb; Dixit Dominus, C, 6vv, orch, 1789, Geb; Ecce panis, D, 2 solo vv, orch, 1741, Geb; In exitu Israel, 8vv, orch, 1794; Laetatus sum, G, 4vv, orch, 1789, Geb; Laudate pueri, E♭, 4vv, org, orch, 1782, Geb; Laudate pueri, D, 4vv, orch, 1791, Geb
Motets: Ave regina; Ave verum; Beatus vir, D, 4vv, orch, 1777, Geb; Commendationes animae, 1766; In convertendo, 4vv, orch; O sacrum convivium, F, 2 solo vv, orch, 1792, Geb; O sacrum convivium, D, 8vv, orch, 1792, Geb; O salutaris, F, 5vv, orch, 1792, Geb; Quem admodum, 2 solo vv, orch, Bc; Quis sicut Dominus, G, 5vv, orch, 1786, Geb; Super flumina Babylonis, 5vv, orch

(3) François Krafft (b Brussels, bap. 3 Oct 1733; d after 1783). Harpsichordist and composer, nephew of (1) Jean-Laurent Krafft. He was the third son of Jean-Thomas Krafft and Elisabeth Van Helmont and is thought to have studied in Liège. Choron and Fayolle and, following them, Fétis, stated that he was a conductor in Brussels around 1760 – not at Notre Dame du Sablon, where the position was held by Delhaye, but possibly at the royal chapel (as seems to be confirmed by the frontispiece to his Sei divertimenti op.5), probably from 1770 to 1783. During that period he was well known as a professor of harpsichord at Liège and in Germany, where he may have lived for a time. The survival of manuscripts of his religious works at the collegiate church of Sts Pierre et Guidon in Anderlecht (near Brussels) and at the St Jacobskerk in Antwerp may cast some light on his activities.

WORKS

all MSS in B-Asj or Sts Pierre et Guidon, Anderlecht

VOCAL

Masses, 4vv, orch: Missa Sancti Francesci, D; Missa solemnis; Missa tertia, E♭
Te Deum, 4vv, orch
Motets: Beatus vir, D, 4vv, orch; Cum invocarem, D, 4vv, orch; In convertendo, D, 5vv, orch; Litania BVM, D, 4vv, orch; Qualis turbine, 4vv, orch; Quare fremuerunt, D, 4vv, orch; Quis strepitus, 4vv, orch; Salve regina, 4vv, 9 insts; Si consistunt adversamo, D, 4vv, orch; Super flumina, g, 4vv, orch
Arias, ariettes, duos from Le faux astrologue, arr. in L'echo, ou Journal de musique française et italienne (March–Aug 1759, Jan–Sept 1760)
Cori Zephiri volate, 4 vv, inst, ?lost

INSTRUMENTAL

VI Symphonies, 2 vn, va, bc, 2 hn ad lib, op.1 (Nuremberg and Liège, 1756)
12 minuets, hpd, vn, fl, ob (Augsburg, 1758)
6 sonate a tre, 2 fl, bc, op.2 (Paris, n.d.)
6 divertimenti, hpd, vn, op.5 (Brussels, n.d.), ?lost
2 sonatas, hpd, in J.U. Haffner: Raccolta musicale (Nuremberg, 1756–65)
13 pieces 'en écho', org

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BNB (C. Piot); Choron-FayolleD; EitnerQ; FétisB; Vander StraetenMPB, ii
L'echo, ou Journal de musique française et italienne [Liège] (1759–60)
Almanach nouveau ... ou Le guide fidèle (Brussels, 1758–75)
E. Thys: Les sociétés chorales en Belgique (Ghent, 1855, 2/1861), 204

X.V.F. van Elewyck, ed.: Collection d'oeuvres composées par d'anciens et de célèbres clavecinistes flamands (Brussels, 1877)
F. Faber: Histoire du théâtre français en Belgique (Brussels, 1878–80)
E. Grégoir: Les artistes-musiciens belges au XVIIIme et au XIXme siècle (Brussels, 1885–90, suppl. 1887)
R. Vannes: Dictionnaire des musiciens (compositeurs) (Brussels, 1947)
P. Raspé and H. Vanhulst: 'L'édition musicale', La musique en Wallonie et à Bruxelles, ed. R. Wangermée and P. Mercier (Brussels, 1980), 301–5
P. Raspé: 'Les débuts de la gravure musicale à Bruxelles, à la fin de l'Ancien Régime', Annales d'histoire de l'art et d'archéologie, ii (1980), 123–31

MARIE CORNAZ (1), PAUL RASPÉ (2–3)

Krafft, Georg Andreas. See KRAFT, GEORG ANDREAS.

Kraft. Bohemian and Austrian family of cellists and composers.

(1) Anton Kraft (b Rokycany, Bohemia, 30 Dec 1749; d Vienna, 28 Aug 1820). He was the son of Franz Kraft, a brewer and amateur musician who was his first teacher. Kraft furthered his cello studies with Werner, cellist at the Crusaders' church (St František) in Prague, until Werner's death in 1768. He also studied law and philosophy at the University of Prague, but chose to pursue a musical career. Probably through Werner's connections as former cellist to the court of Count Morzin, Kraft was engaged as principal cellist in the Kapelle of Prince Nikolaus Esterházy in 1778, a post he retained until the orchestra was dissolved in 1790; he studied composition with Haydn. He married Maria Anna Schevitzka and had at least five children.

Haydn composed his Cello Concerto in D major HVII*b*:2 for Kraft in 1783. This work was erroneously attributed to Kraft in Schilling's Encyclopädie (iv, 1837), leading to doubt about its authenticity until Haydn's autograph was found in Vienna in 1951. However, the work differs substantially in technical demands and musical content from Haydn's earlier Concerto in C major HVII*b*:1. Its style and special effects give ample opportunity for the soloist to display virtuosity, tone and expressiveness, suggesting a high degree of collaboration between Kraft and Haydn. Between 1780 and 1790 Kraft undertook numerous concert tours to European cities. A letter written by Mozart to his wife in 1789 states that Kraft and his son (2) Nikolaus met Mozart in Dresden, where Kraft played Mozart's Divertimento K563. After Esterházy's death in 1790, Kraft was employed in the Kapelle of Prince Anton Grassalkovich of Gyarak (d 1794) and then (with Nikolaus) in the Kapelle of Prince Joseph Lobkowitz in Vienna. From 1793 he performed with other prominent Viennese musicians at Prince Lichnowsky's Friday morning chamber music recitals, which led to the establishment of the famous Schuppanzigh string quartet with Kraft as cellist. He became a favourite in performances of early chamber works by Beethoven; contemporary sources note his beautiful tone, technical ease and expressive playing. Kraft's Sonatas op.2 were published in 1799, and he undertook further concert tours with Nikolaus in 1801–2. Beethoven composed the cello part of his Triple Concerto op.56 with Kraft in mind, and Kraft played in the première in 1808. A letter written by Beethoven to Archduke Rudolph in 1813 contains a petition for accommodation on Kraft's behalf showing that a friendship with Beethoven was sustained into the later years of Kraft's life.

After Kraft stopped playing with Schuppanzigh, about 1809, his son Nikolaus took his place in the quartet. He remained in Lobkowitz's service for the rest of his life, but from 1809 his fortunes declined, reflecting the decline in those of Lobkowitz. He was appointed cello teacher at the conservatory of the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde in 1819, but died the following year.

WORKS

Vc: 3 sonatas, op.1 (Amsterdam and Berlin, 1790/*R*1991 in ECCS, viii); 3 sonatas, op.2 (Offenbach, 1799), 1 ed. C. Adam (New York, 1948); Conc., op.4 (Leipzig, ?1792), ed. in MVH, ii (1961); 2 duos, opp.5–6 (Vienna, n.d.); Divertissements d'une difficulté progressive, vc, db, op.7 (Leipzig, n.d.); Duett, *A-Wgm
Other inst: 3 grands duos concertants, vn, vc, op.3 (Leipzig, ?1792); Notturno, 4 str, 2 fl, 2 hn, listed in Traeg catalogue, 1799; trios, 2 barytons, vc, Esterházy Archive, Budapest

(2) Nikolaus Kraft (b Eszterháza, Hungary, 14 Dec 1778; d Cheb, Bohemia, 18 May 1853). Eldest son of (1) Anton Kraft. A godson of Prince Nikolaus Esterházy, he began cello lessons with his father at the age of four and accompanied him on concert tours from the age of nine. He received a general education at the Universität-Gymnasium in der Josephstadt from 1792 to 1795. In 1801 Kraft travelled to Berlin with his father and was accepted as a pupil of J.-L. Duport. He returned in 1802 to Vienna, where, along with his father, he was employed by Prince Lobkowitz as a Kammervirtuose and performed often with his father as a duo between 1804 and 1809. His independent reputation as a cello virtuoso was established by 1809, when he succeeded Anton in Schuppanzigh's quartet, though owing to Lobkowitz's financial difficulties he also accepted the post of solo cellist at the Kärntnertortheater.

From 1814 to 1834 Kraft served as first cellist in the Kapelle of the Duke of Württemberg in Stuttgart. He toured extensively as a soloist, performing in Mannheim, Hamburg, Vienna, Prague, Leipzig, Berlin and Dresden and earning a reputation as one of the leading cello virtuosos of the day. These concerts often included his own compositions. In 1824, however, he permanently injured a finger while tuning his cello and was forced to stop giving concerts abroad. He moved in 1838 to Chemnitz and later to Cheb, where he died.

WORKS

printed works published in Leipzig unless otherwise stated

Vc, orch: Fantasie, op.1, Polonaise, op.2, with str (Offenbach, 1808–9); 4 concs., no.1, op.3 (*c*1810), no.2, op.4 (1813), op.5 (1819), op.7, 1820, mentioned in Oberleitner; Bolero, op.6 (?1819); Scène pastorale, op.9 (?1820); Rondo à la chasse, op.11 (?1822); Pot-pourri sur des thèmes du Freyschutz, op.12 (Offenbach, ?1822); Variations, ?1822); Variations, op.13 (Hanover, ?1822)
2 vc: 8 divertissements d'une difficulté progressive, op.14 (Offenbach, ?1823); 6 duos, opp.15, 17 (Offenbach, ?1824–5)
Other inst: Potpourri, pf, orch, op.8, 1820, A-Wst; Divertimento, vc, hp, *D-Bsb; Andante und Polonaise, vc, kbd, op.10, 1821, see Oberleitner

(3) Friedrich Anton Kraft (b Vienna, 13 Feb 1807; d Stuttgart, 4 Dec 1874). Son of (2) Nikolaus Kraft. He was taught the cello by his father, and in 1824 became cellist of the Stuttgart court orchestra. As a soloist he appeared with his father in Vienna in 1820 and 1821, and alone in Stuttgart in 1824 and 1825.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; MGG1('Kraft, Anton', O. Wessely) [incl. further bibliography]
K. Oberleitner: Anton Kraft: biographische Skizze (MS, A-Wgm)

C.F. Pohl: Joseph Haydn, i (Berlin, 1875, 2/1878/R), ii (Leipzig, 1882/R)
T. Frimmel: Beethoven-Handbuch (Leipzig, 1926/R), i, 296–7
K. Geiringer: Haydn: a Creative Life in Music (New York, 1946, enlarged 2/1963/R)
D. Markevitch: Cello Story (Princeton, NJ, 1984), 79–81, 133–4, 145–7
M.S. Morrow: Concert Life in Haydn's Vienna (New York, 1989)
V. Walden: An Investigation and Comparison of the French and Austro-German Schools of Violoncello Bowing Techniques: 1785–1839 (diss., U. of Auckland, 1994)

OTHMAR WESSELY/SUZANNE WIJSMAN

Kraft [Krafft, Crafft, von Crafft], Georg Andreas (b Nuremberg, *c*1660; d Kaster an der Erft, Rhineland, 1 Dec 1726). German composer. He can be traced from 1679 at the court at Düsseldorf of the Elector Palatine Johann Wilhelm, whose reign began in that year. According to Rapparini, Johann Wilhelm sent Kraft to Rome to further his musical studies under Corelli. As its director he contributed greatly to the improvement of the electoral orchestra at Düsseldorf. He enjoyed the close friendship of the Kapellmeister Sebastiano Moratelli and J.H. von Wilderer, for whose operas he wrote much of his music. He was appointed bailiff at Kaster before 1700 and court chamber councillor shortly afterwards. In 1711 he took part, together with the Palatine Kapelle, in the coronation of the emperor at Frankfurt. He apparently gave up his composing duties not long after that, since he was not involved in Wilderer's opera Amalasunta in 1713; he also resigned his post as director of the orchestra. He retired to Kaster and, after the death of Johann Wilhelm in 1716, did not follow the new ruler, Karl Philipp, to Heidelberg and Mannheim, as did most of the Düsseldorf musicians. He was succeeded as bailiff at Kaster in 1722 by his son Sebastian Johannes. There is a portrait of him in Rapparini (medallion no.22). As director of the electoral orchestra, which subsequently developed into the famous orchestra of the Mannheim school, he stood at the head of a line of directors leading through Gottfried Finger and Johann Sigismund Weiss to Johann Stamitz. As a composer, Rapparini placed him on a level with Wilderer. His work, which is largely confined to overtures and ballets, bears the hallmarks of a good Italian training, though as with Moratelli and Wilderer, its thoroughly Italian style is occasionally impregnated with French elements.

WORKS

STAGE

Ovs. and dance music for ops performed at Düsseldorf unless otherwise stated

all MSS in A-Wn

S. Moratelli: Erminia ne' boschi, 1687; Didone, 1688; Erminia al campo, 1688; Il fabbro pittore, 1695
J.H. von Wilderer: Giocasta, 1696; La monarchia risoluta, ?1697; Q. Fabio Massimo, 1697; Il giorno di salute ovvero Demetrio in Athene, 1696, 1697; La forza del giusto, 1700; La monarchia stabilita, 1703 and 1705; Faustolo, 1706
Possibly also collab.: Festa boschereccia, 1696; Il marte romano, Heidelberg, 1702; Il pregi della rosa, Heidelberg, 1702; Tiberio imperator d'oriente, 1703; J.H. Wilderer: L'Armeno, *c*1698

CHAMBER

Sonata da camera, 2 vn, vc, bc, op.1 (Amsterdam, *c*1714), lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; GerberNL
G.M. Rapparini: Le portrait du vrai mérite dans la personne serenissime de Monseigneur l'Electeur Palatin (MS, 1709, D-DÜl); ed. H. Kühn-Steinhausen (Düsseldorf, 1958)
F. Walter: Geschichte des Theaters und der Musik am kurpfälzischen Hofe (Leipzig, 1898/R)
F. Zobeley: 'Die Musik am Hofe des Kurfürsten Johann Wilhelm von der Pfalz', Neues Archiv für die Geschichte der Stadt Heidelberg, xiii (1925–8), 133–64
F. Lau: 'Die Regierungskollegien zu Düsseldorf und der Düsseldorfer Hof zur Zeit Johann Wilhelms (1679–1716)', Düsseldorfer Jb, xxxix (1937), 228–42; xl (1938), 257–88
G. Croll: 'Musikgeschichtliches aus Rapparinis Johann-Wilhelm-Manuscript (1709)', Mf, xi (1958), 257–64
G. Steffen: Johann Hugo von Wilderer (1670 bis 1724), Kapellmeister am kurpfälzischen Hofe zu Düsseldorf und Mannheim (Cologne, 1960)
A. Freitäger: Die Barockoper unter Jan Wellem (1679–1716): Studien zur Düsseldorfer Hofoper als Verherrlichung des Fürsten, Düsseldorfer Familienkunde (Düsseldorf, 1989) [special issue]

GERHARD CROLL, ERNST HINTERMAIER

Kraft, Günther (b Suhl, 2 April 1907; d Weimar, 20 Sept 1977). German musicologist. He studied with Danckert and Zur Nedden (University of Jena, 1935–7) and with Schering (University of Berlin, 1937–8), taking the doctorate at Jena in 1938 with a dissertation on Johann Steuerlein's life and works. In 1940 he qualified as a secondary schoolteacher and in 1964 completed his Habilitation at the University of Halle with a study of the Bach family in Thuringia. A productive scholar and administrator who retained his standing under a variety of political regimes, he taught in schools in Berlin and Weimar and in 1949 became a lecturer and in 1952 professor of musicology at the Weimar Musikhochschule; he also lectured at the University of Jena (from 1950). He founded (1950) and directed (1950–72) the Institut für Volksmusikforschung at Weimar and was director of the Bach House at Eisenach (1964–71). His main research concerned the history of music in Thuringia, especially around 1600; he also wrote extensively on the Thuringian associations of Bach and his family, and on the relations between Thuringian and Russian music in the 18th and 19th centuries.

WRITINGS

Johann Steuerlein (1546–1613): Leben und Werk (diss., U. of Jena, 1938; Würzburg, 1941, as pt 2 of Die thüringische Musikkultur um 1600)
ed. with H. Besseler: Johann Sebastian Bach in Thüringen: Festgabe zum Gedenkjahr 1950 (Weimar, 1950) [incl. 'Thüringer Stadtpfeifer-Familien um Bach']
ed.: Festschrift zur Ehrung von Heinrich Albert (1604–1651) (Weimar, 1954) [incl. 'Heinrich Albert und seine Zeit'] Musikgeschichtliche Beziehungen zwischen Thüringen und Russland im 18. und 19. Jahrhundert (Weimar, 1955)
'Zur Entstehungsgeschichte des "Hochzeitsquodlibet" (BWV 524)', BJb 1956, 140–54
'Polnische Folklore im Lied der Vormärz-Bewegung in Deutschland', The Works of Frederick Chopin: Warsaw 1960, 560–64
'Das Schaffen von Franz Liszt in Weimar', Liszt – Bartók: Budapest 1961, 193–210
Entstehung und Ausbreitung des musikalischen Bach-Geschlechtes in Thüringen (Habilitationsschrift, U. of Halle, 1964; extracts in BMw, i/2 (1959), 29–61)
'Das mittelthüringische Siedlungszentrum der Familien Bach und Wölcken', Musa – mens – musici: im Gedenken an Walther Vetter (Leipzig, 1969), 153–64
'Quellenstudien zur thematischen Konzeption des "Fidelio"', Beethoven Congress: Berlin 1970, 283–90

HORST SEEGER/R

Kraft, Leo (Abraham) (b Brooklyn, NY, 24 July 1922). American composer, teacher and writer on music. He studied composition with Karol Rathaus at Queens College, CUNY (BA 1945), with Randall Thompson at Princeton University (MFA 1947) and with Nadia Boulanger in Paris on a Fulbright Scholarship (1954–5). From 1947 to 1989 he taught at Queens College. He has held important posts in the College Music Society (CMS), the American Society of University Composers, the Society for Music Theory, the American section of the ISCM and the AMC (president, 1976–8).

Kraft's numerous music theory and ear-training texts and his active role in the CMS attest to his involvement in university teaching. His pedagogical approach has been influenced by Boulanger's emphasis on practical musical skills and by Heinrich Schenker's theories as exposed in Salzer's Structural Hearing (New York, 1952, 2/1962). His early music reflects the neo-classical attitudes of his teachers, together with the diatonicism of Hindemith and Copland. With his Second String Quartet (1959) he began to develop a more chromatic and intense musical language. During the 1980s, however, his style returned to its diatonic roots and developed greater lyricism, though harmonic tension can still be heard in Omaggio (1993). Later works, such as Cloud Studies (1989) and From the Hudson Valley (1997), reflect his lifelong love of nature. His rhythms draw upon diverse sources that range from the Baroque to jazz. (EwenD)

WORKS

Orch: Conc. no.1, fl, cl, tpt, str, 1951; Larghetto in Memory of Karl Rathaus, str, timp, 1955; Variations, 1958; 3 Pieces, 1963; Conc. no.2, 13 insts, 1966, rev. 1972; Toccata, band, 1967; Conc. no.3, vc, wind qnt, perc, 1969; Conc. no.4, pf, 14 insts, 1979, rev. 1982; Chbr Sym. no.1, 1980; A New Ricercare, str, 1983; Conc. no.6, cl, orch, 1986; Pacific Bridges, cl, str, 1989; Sym. Prelude, 1993; Chbr Sym. no.2, 1996; From the Hudson Valley, fl, hp, str, 1997

Choral: Festival Song, SATB, 1951; Let me laugh, 3vv, pf, 1954; Ps xviii, SA, pf, 1954; A Proverb of Solomon, SATB, orch, 1957; Thanksgiving, SATB, 1958; Pss xl, lxxxix, TB, 1963–8; When Israel came forth (Ps cxiv), SATB, 1963; Fyre and Yse, SATB, tape, 1966; 8 Choral Songs (Moses Ibn Ezra), SATB, 1974; 3 3-Part Songs, SSA/TTB, 1975; Set me as a seal, SATB, vc, hp, 1993; The Vision of Isaiah, SATB, orch, 1998; other choral songs

Solo vocal: Pastorale, 1v, pf, 1949; 3 Songs from the Hebrew, 1v, vn, cl, pf, 1949; 4 English Lovesongs, 1v, pf, 1961; Spring in the Harbor (S. Stepanchev), S, fl, vc, pf, 1970; 4 Songs from the Chinese, S, fl, perc, 1990; Cummingsong, T, fl, ob, vn, va, vc, 1995

Chbr: Suite, brass, 1947; Str Qt [no.1], 1950; Short Suite, fl, cl, bn, 1951; Sextet, cl, str qt, pf, 1952–3; Sonata, vc, pf, 1954; Sonata, vn, pf, 1956; Wind Qnt, 1956; Two's Company, 2 cl, 1957; Str Qt [no.2], 1959; Partita no.2, vn, vc, 1961; 5 Pieces, cl, pf, 1962; Ballad, cl, pf, 1963; Fantasy no.1, fl, pf, 1963; Partita no.3, wind qnt, 1964; Trios and Interludes, fl, va, pf, 1965; Str Qt [no.3], 1966; Dialogues, fl, tape, 1968; Dualities, 2 tpt, 1970; Pentagram, a sax, 1971; Line Drawings, fl, perc, 1972; Diaphonies, ob, pf, 1975; Partita no.4, fl, cl, vn, db, pf, 1975; Conductus novus, 4 trbn, 1979; Strata, 8 insts, 1979, rev. 1984; Fantasy no.2, fl, pf, 1980, rev. 1997; O Primvera, fl, ob, cl, 1983; Inventions and Airs, cl, vn, pf, 1984, rev. 1997; Cloud Studies, 12 fl, 1989; 5 Fantasies, vn, vc, 1990; Washington Square, 12 players, 1990; 6 Pieces, vn, pf, 1991; Cape Cod Sketches, fl, vn, va, vc, 1992; Omaggio, fl, cl, vn, va, vc, 1993; Duettini, 2 tpt, 1996; 5 Short Pieces, ww qt, 1997

Kbd (pf, unless otherwise stated): Scherzo, 1949; Variations, 1951; Sonata, 1956; Allegro giocoso, 1957; Partita no.1, 1958; Statements and Commentaries, 1965, rev. 1996; Short Sonata no.1, hpd, 1969; Antiphonies, 4 hands, tape, 1970; Sestina, 1974; 10 Short Pieces, 1977; 5 Short Pieces and a Reprise, 1981; Venetian Reflections, 1988

Other works, withdrawn

Principal publishers: Seesaw, Presser

WRITINGS

with S. Berkowitz and G. Fontrier: A New Approach to Sight Singing (New York, 1960, rev. 2/1997)

A New Approach to Ear Training (New York, 1967, rev. 2/1999)

Gradus: an Integrated Approach to Harmony, Counterpoint and Analysis (New York, 1976, rev. 2/1988) with A. Brings and others: A New Approach to Keyboard Harmony (New York, 1979)

BRUCE SAYLOR

Kraft, Ludwicus (*fl c*1460). German composer. He is known only through the three-voice introit, Terribilis est locus iste, ascribed to him in Trent Manuscript 90 (in I-TRmp; ed. in M. Gozzi: Il manoscritto Trento, Museo Provinciale d'Arte, cod. 1377 (Tr 90), Cremona, 1992). The chant melody is ornamented in the top voice, which is the only one with text. The work includes the Eastertide alleluia at the end of the antiphon but does not set the psalm verse. It is typical of the functional liturgical polyphony of the Trent manuscripts.

TOM R. WARD

Kraft, Walter (b Cologne, 9 June 1905; d Amsterdam, 9 May 1977). German organist and composer. He studied the piano and the organ in Hamburg, then studied composition in Berlin with Hindemith, who helped to initiate his career as a composer. He first appeared in Hamburg as a pianist in 1924 but that year took a post there as organist at the Markuskirche; in 1927 he moved to the Lutherkirche in Altona-Bahrenfeld. In 1929 he became the organist of the Marienkirche, Lübeck; the church was destroyed in 1942 but he resumed his post there after the war. In 1945 he worked temporarily at the Nikolaikirche, Flensburg. He was professor of organ at the music college in Freiburg from 1947, director of the Schleswig-Holstein Musikakademie (1950–55) and later of the north German organ school in Lübeck. His activity centred round his post at the Marienkirche, in which he continued the tradition of the Lübeck 'serenades' that goes back to 1646. He also attracted attention both as a brilliant improviser and as a composer of such oratorios as Christus (1942–3), Die Bürger von Calais (1953–4), Lübecker Totentanz (1954) and Die Gemeinschaft der Heiligen (1956–7). He was awarded the Lübeck Buxtehude Prize, the Schleswig-Holstein cultural prize and the Grand Prix du Disque for his recording of the complete Buxtehude organ works. Through his range of activities Kraft achieved a breadth of style and approach in which interpretation became artistic re-creation.

GERHARD WIENKE

Kraft, William (b Chicago, 6 Sept 1923). American composer, conductor, timpanist and percussionist. He studied at Columbia University (BA 1951, MA 1954), where his teachers included Beeson, Cowell, Luening and Ussachevsky. He also studied privately with Morris Goldenberg and Saul Goodman at the Juilliard School of Music. In addition to performing as percussionist (1955–61) and principal timpanist (1962–81) with the Los Angeles PO, Kraft served as the orchestra's assistant conductor (1969–72) and composer-in-residence and founder/director of LAPO New Music Group (1981–5). He has also acted as composer-in-residence for the Cheltenham New Music Festival (1986). His honours include fellowships from the Guggenheim Foundation and the Norlin/MacDowell Colony, residencies at the Rockefeller Foundation Center in Bellagio (1975, 1996), and awards from the Kennedy Center, the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters, the ACA, the Australia Symphony, Vienna Modern Masters and other organizations.

Most of Kraft's music from the 1960s and 70s is serial. He has also experimented with electronic music. During the 1980s rhythmic elements derived from jazz and Impressionistic harmonies were absorbed into his style. Although he is particularly known for his percussion works, from 1996 to 1998 he devoted his compositional energies exclusively to his first opera, Red Azalea.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Red Azalea (op, C. Hawes), 1996–8, London, April 1999; film, TV and radio scores

Orch: A Simple Introduction to the Orch, 1958; Contextures I: Riots – Decade 1960, 1967; Pf Conc., 1972; Dream Tunnel, 1976; Double Play, vn, pf, chbr orch, 1982; Interplay, vc, orch, 1982, rev. 1984; Of Ceremonies, Pageants and Celebrations, 1986, rev. 1987; A Kennedy Portrait, nar, orch, 1988; Veils and Variations, hn, orch, 1988; Vintage Renaissance, 1989; Fanfare Vintage 90–91, 1990; Gossamer Glances, 1993; Sym. of Sorrows, 1995

Vocal: Silent Boughs (E. St Vincent Millay), Mez, str, 1963; The Sublime and the Beautiful (F.M. Dostoyevsky, A. Rimbaud), T, fl, cl, vn, vc, pf, perc, 1979; Contextures II: the Final Beast (Virgil, H.W. Longfellow, W. Owen, others) S, T, chorus, chbr ens, 1985, orchd 1986; Settings from Pierrot lunaire (after A. Giraud), S, chbr ens, 1987–90; Songs of Flowers, Bells and Death (K. Issa, M. Bashō, W. Owen, others), SATB, perc, 1991

Perc: Theme and Variations, perc qt, 1956; 3 Miniatures, perc, orch, 1958; Momentum, 8 perc, 1958; Suite, 4 perc, 1958; French Suite, 1962; Corrente II Triangles, conc., perc, 10 insts, 1965–8; Conc., 4 perc, orch, 1966; Des imagistes (E. Pound, e.e. cummings, others), 2 nar, perc ens, 1974; Soliloquy: Encounter I, perc, tape, 1975; Timp Conc., 1983; Perc Qt, 1988; Conc., perc, chbr ens, 1993; Divinations, 1995; Encounters IX, eng hn, perc, 1999

Other chbr and solo inst: Nonet, brass, perc, 1958; Double Trio, tuba, perc, pf, prep pf, amp gui, 1966; Encounters II, tuba, 1966; Games: Collage no.1, brass, 1969; Requiescat for Rhodes Elec Pf, 1975; Gallery '83, fl, cl, vn, vc, pf, perc, 1983; Gallery 4–5, cl, vn, va, vc, pf, 1985; Melange, fl, cl, vn, vc, pf, cel, perc, 1985; Episodes, vn, pf, 1987; Qt for the Love of Time, cl, pf trio, 1987; Cadeau, fl, pf, 1992; Music for Str Qt and Perc, 1993

El-ac music, cptr installations incl. Sky's the Limit, O'Hare Airport, Chicago

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Baker; EwenD; GroveA (D. Cope)

W.G. Harbinson: 'Analysis: William Kraft's Dialogues and Entertainments', Journal of Band Research, xix/2 (1983–4), 16–25

P. Wilson: 'William Kraft on Conducting, Performance and New Music', Symphony, xxxvii/6 (1986), 18–20, 69, 71

LAURIE SHULMAN

Kräftig (Ger.: 'powerful', 'vigorous'). As a tempo direction it is particularly frequent in the work of Schumann and later German composers.

Kraftwerk. German electronic pop group. Kraftwerk's founder members, Ralf Hütter (b Krefeld, 1946) and Florian Schneider-Esleben (b Düsseldorf, 1947), met at the Schumann Conservatory, Düsseldorf, in 1968, and have been joined by various others including Wolfgang Flur and Karl Bartos. Originally known as Organisation, they recorded the album Tone-Float, which was released only in Germany (RCA, 1970). Along with Can, Tangerine Dream, Ash Ra Temple and La Dusseldorf, Kraftwerk became one of the leading exponents of kosmische music, a fusion of Stockhausen's avant-garde music with American pop. Following four experimental albums which married synthesized and treated sounds with woodwind instruments, they had an unexpected transatlantic hit in 1975 with Autobahn (from the album Autobahn, Vertigo, 1974), a paean to German Wanderlust. Following Radio-Aktivität (Capitol, 1975), the title track of which dealt with the dangers of nuclear energy (reflecting Germany's Green politics), Kraftwerk recorded three seminal albums. Trans-Europa Express (Capitol, 1977) codified what would later develop into techno (the title track was famously sampled by Afrika Bambaataa for his 1982 rap album Planet Rock). Die Mensch Maschine (Capitol, 1978), a huge influence on the burgeoning British synth-pop groups such as New Order, Orchestral Manoeuvres in the Dark, the Human League and Depeche Mode, remains their finest work, while Computerwelt (EMI, 1981) was both musically and thematically prescient, detailing the rise of the global village and extending Kraftwerk's music into polyrhythmic dances.

Since the commercial success of their single The Model/Computer Love (EMI, 1982), Kraftwerk have operated together less often. Their bizarrely hermetic working practices are unique within popular music, seemingly bypassing all aspects of the media. Electric Cafe (EMI, 1986) reflected the emergent dance styles of the time rather than set a new agenda as their earlier work had done, while The Mix (EMI, 1991) successfully reworked old material. Although Hütter and Schneider-Esleben continue to meet at their recording studio Kling

Kraftwerk

Klang almost daily, there have been no commercial releases of new material since the late 1980s, although such work has been included in rare live performances.

One of the most important bands of the 1970s, Kraftwerk's pioneering work and musical legacy have influenced almost every scion of dance music in the 1980s and 90s. At their best they possess a sardonic, deadpan humour, highlighted by their statuesque stage presentation, which sets itself against the Anglo-American tradition of rock and blues structures and sentimentalities. Kraftwerk's synthesizer-based music has been criticized as being clinical and lacking in emotion, but in reality it has redefined emotional boundaries in popular music and widened music's expressive base by introducing emotional understatement and calculation into the mainstream.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Bangs: 'Kraftwerkfeature', Psychotic Reactions and Carburetor Dung, ed. G. Marcus (London, 1990), 154–60

P. Bussy: Kraftwerk: Man, Machine and Music (Wembley, 1993)

J. Cope: Krautrocksampler (London, 1995)

J. Evans: 'The Art of the Kraft', The Guardian (26 Feb 1997)

DAVID BUCKLEY

Kraków [Cracow]. City in Poland. Probably founded in the 8th century, it was the country's capital from the 11th century to 1596, and has remained a cultural and artistic centre. It passed to Austria at the third partition (1795), became part of the Duchy of Warsaw in 1809 and the Kraków Republic in 1815, and was again incorporated into Austria in 1846; in 1918 it was returned to Poland when that country was reconstituted. Its main cultural centres were the royal castle and cathedral on the Wawel hill, where coronations took place; the Jagiellonian University, founded in 1364; and the numerous churches, of which St Mary's (completed 1396) is the largest.

1. To 1596. 2. 1596–1764. 3. 1764–1815. 4. 1815–46. 5. 1846–1918. 6. 1918–45. 7. From 1945.

1. To 1596. Kraków was an episcopal see from 1000 and the earliest liturgical music used was Benedictine chant. The Liber ordinalis or Pontificale of the Kraków bishops (11th and 12th centuries), the first rhymed Office Dies adest celebris by Wincenty z Kielc (mid-13th century) and other sources of the 13th and 14th centuries come from Kraków Cathedral and monasteries. Several 15th-century liturgical books have also survived, some with valuable illumination. There are few records of musical life at the court and in the city before the mid-14th century. The guild of musicians was granted its first royal privilege in 1549, but, as some statements of the edict show, it had existed on the strength of common law much earlier. The earliest examples of polyphonic music of Kraków date from the 14th century (Surrexit Christus hodie). Two substantial collections of polyphonic music and one of two-part pieces, all from about 1430, survive (in PL-Wn and Kj); they contain compositions by Ciconia, Zacharias, Grossin, Antonius de Civitate Austrie and some Polish composers, including Nicholaus de Radom, probably a royal musician. The collections were probably for the use of the royal chapel, which then consisted of a group of singing clerks and lay instrumentalists, some of whom were soloists (citharedae). More detailed information on its composition is available from the mid-16th century, when it had over 30 members (at least 12 singers, about six discantists and several groups of instrumentalists); in addition there was a separate group of 13 trumpeters. The vocal ensemble gradually took on a greater number of lay members. Composers active in the royal chapel in the 16th century include Heinrich Finck, Josquin Baston, Wacław z Szamotuł, Marcin Leopolita, Marcin Wartecki, Gomółka, Długoraj, Cato, Klabon, Marenzio and, among the eminent virtuosos, the lutenist Bakfark.

Kraków University, founded in 1364, flourished in the 15th century. Musical training was then based chiefly on Johannes de Muris's Musica speculativa and Boethius's De institutione musica. The first known Polish treatise on choral music was written by Szydłowita about 1414; several other anonymous treatises survive (in PL-Kj). In the early 16th century a number of compendiums of musical science originated in the circle of university scholars and lecturers (Sebastian z Felsztyna, Marcin Kromer and Jerzy Liban) and were all published in Kraków, some being reprinted several times; they were clearly influenced by Gaffurius and Ornithoparchus. In the 16th century some parish schools had high standards of music education, especially that of St Mary's, where Liban and Gawara worked. The Kraków printing houses of Jan Haller, Ungler, Wietor, Andrysowicz, Siebeneicher and Szarfenberg published liturgical compositions from 1505, theoretical treatises from 1514, and sacred and occasional polyphonic songs, the earliest surviving example of which dates from 1530. Among the most important publications were Lamentationes Hieremiae Prophętae by Wacław z Szamotuł (1553), Bakfark's lute tablature Harmoniarum musicarum (1565) and several monophonic hymnbooks.

A number of instrument workshops thrived in Kraków in the second half of the 16th century: Dobrucki and Groblicz made violins, Kejcher chiefly woodwind instruments. The names of many 15th-century Kraków organists are known, but the earliest sources of organ music date from the 16th century: the tablature from the monastery of the Holy Ghost (1548) and Jan z Lublina's tablature (1537–48). In addition to numerous anonymous compositions, they contain works of Janequin, Jacotin, Festa, Verdelot, Finck and Senfl, and Polish compositions or arrangements by Mikołaj z Chrzanowa and Mikołaj z Krakowa, as well as transcriptions of Polish dances. Strzeszkowski's lute tablature, written in the second half of the 16th century, presents a variety of songs and dances of the period.

2. 1596–1764. At the end of the 16th century the political and economic situation of Kraków changed; between 1596 and 1609 the court moved to Warsaw, which became the capital, and privileges were limited. In 1596 Sigismund III reorganized the royal chapel to include a group of over 20 Italian singers and instrumentalists (the ensemble thus had about 38 members, excluding trumpeters); it was active in Kraków for short periods only, but nevertheless introduced new stylistic trends. In 1604 a collection of polychoral compositions written by members of the chapel, Melodiae sacrae, was printed, the last important Kraków publication of polyphonic music. Gorczyn's Tabulatura muzyki (1647) and Starowolski's Musices practicae erotemata (1650) are among the theoretical works published in Kraków in the 17th century. The traditional cultivation of leading stylistic trends was taken over by the 30-member vocal-instrumental cathedral chapel, founded in 1619 and augmented by singers from the cathedral school. The chapel was directed by a succession of fine composers: Orgas, Franciszek Lilius, Pękiel, Gorczycki and Maxylewicz. Their production characterizes the repertory of the chapel only indirectly, as no vocal–instrumental compositions earlier than the late 18th century survive in the cathedral archives.

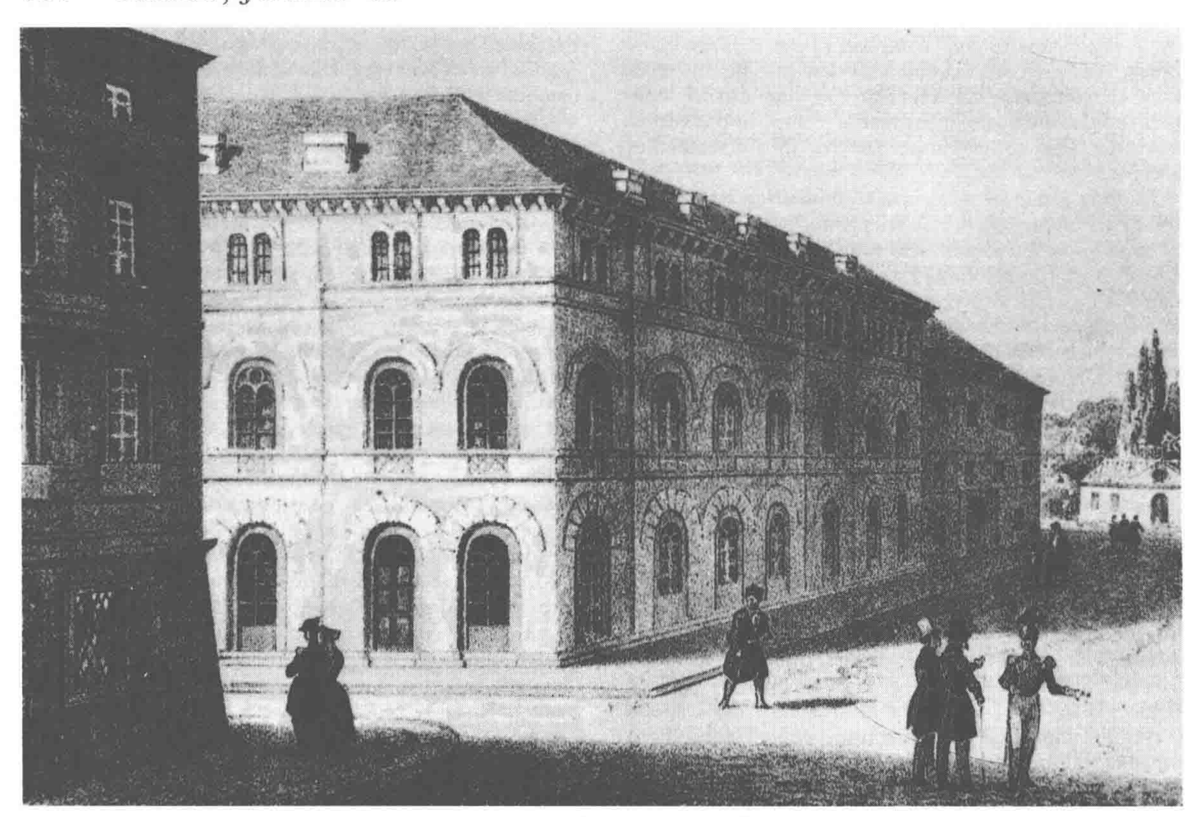
Another group of musicians to flourish in Kraków in the 17th century was the Capella Rorantistarum, a group of nine priest-musicians who sang daily services in the chapel built for the cathedral by the last Jagellons. Its name is thought to derive from the introit Rorate coeli and from the Rorata (dawn masses sung during Advent) with which the choir was associated (see RORATE CHANTS). It was founded in 1540 by Sigismund I to sing polyphony daily 'perpetuis futuris temporibus', and was active from 1543 to the Third Partition of Poland in 1795. The Capella excluded boys and originally confined its membership to Poles, though foreigners, notably Italians, were admitted from the early 17th century. Its repertory embraced works by leading Polish composers of the 16th and 17th centuries as well as by composers from the Netherlands, France, Italy and Spain, particularly those resident in Poland. Many transcriptions were made for the ensemble of equal men's voices (e.g. Josquin's Missa 'Mater Patris'). The choir's directors included Mikołaj z Poznania (1543–57), Borek (1557–74) and Orgas (1628–9). Throughout its existence the Capella played an important part in continuing in Poland the a cappella tradition based on 16th-century polyphony.



Of Kraków's remaining ensembles, the Jesuit chapel (founded 1637) was of great importance in the 17th and 18th centuries. It was organized as an institution of music education, developing into a focal point of the city's music in the early 18th century, when it was attended by young musicians from the chapels of rich landowners. It had about 50 members (including pupils) and performed in the city's churches as well as at private secular functions. Its repertory included many Polish compositions, some by its members; the most outstanding of these was Jacek Szczurowski, who entered the Jesuit order in 1735. An ensemble of seven instrumentalists, recruited from members of the musicians' guild, was available after 1630 at St Mary's. Until the mid-18th century the main state celebrations, such as coronations and royal funerals, took place in Wawel Castle. On such occasions the city organized festivities that featured music by local chapels, including that performed by the chapels of magnates (e.g. Lubomirski's); in the castle itself, however, the Warsaw royal chapel was predominant. No information about the repertory of the private chapels survives.

3. 1764–1815. As the city was destroyed by the Seven Years War (1757–64), Kraków's musical life was reduced during the 1760s and 70s to activity in a few church chapels – the Rorantists, the cathedral, St Mary's, the Jesuits (until the suppression of the order in Poland in 1773) and the academy of the collegiate church of St Anna – and music-making in the homes of a few wealthy citizens. The association known as the Kazimierz Congregation of Musicians was founded and, reminiscent of the medieval guilds, channelled its energies into competitive battles with non-professional musicians. After 1800 matters improved; musical activity in Kraków was revived through the efforts of Wacław Sierakowski, a canon and parson at Wawel Cathedral, and Jacek Kluszewski (1761–1841), proprietor of the Kraków Theatre. Sierakowski organized public concerts in his home from 1781 to 1787 on the model of the fashionable concerts spirituels; cantatas by Italian composers, translated by Sierakowski himself, were performed. To support these concerts he founded a singing school (1781–7), attended by boys, most of whom subsequently became members of church chapels. The head of the school was F.K. Kratzer, cantor and later conductor at the Wawel Cathedral, and the first of a family of Wawel cantors. Two other cathedral musicians taught at the school, Jakub Gołąbek and F.M. Lang. In 1795 Sierakowski published the first volume of his work devoted to music education, Sztuka muzyki dla młodzieży kraiowey ('The art of music for the country's youth'), and in 1796 two further volumes appeared. Containing the rudiments of music and instructions for the performance of church music, the work is a rich source of information on 18th-century Polish music. Other centres of music education included the Jesuit boarding schools (1638–1773), the music school attached to the collegiate church of St Anna (founded 1764) and the music school of Jósef Zygmuntowski (1773–81).

Kluszewski founded the first permanent public opera company in Kraków. Between 1787 and 1789, with the help of an Italian opera company and an orchestra of church and army musicians, comic operas by Paisiello, Piccinni, Salieri and others were performed in Italian; from 1789 to 1794 performances in Polish were given. From 1 January 1799 Kluszewski continued this work in new, purpose-built premises (now the Teatr Stary, or Old Theatre; see illustration). The years 1809–16 were a period of decline for the opera, after which it began to recover. Its most distinguished period of development came between 1820 and 1830, when the repertory included works by Rossini, Mozart and Weber. Among operas by Polish composers the most popular were those of Kurpiński and Elsner.

After the seizure of Kraków by Austria performances in Polish ceased, but they began again in 1805. When the Austrians left in 1809 Wojciech Bogusławski, the 'father of Polish theatre', brought his company to the city and gave many performances there, including a number of operas. During the 1790s a number of music teachers and instrument makers probably moved to Kraków from Vienna, Prague and Berne, and Kraków booksellers began to deal in music.

4. 1815–46. As Kraków became more settled after the political disorganization of the period up to 1815, there was renewed activity in the intellectual and artistic life of the city. As a result of the Vienna Congress, Kraków and the surrounding area attained the status of an independent state, the Kraków Republic. Modern concert life began with the founding of the Society of Friends of Music in 1817, headed by Sebastian Sierakowski, Wacław's brother. The society, with about 400 members, included nearly all the city's musicians and amateur players. It had its own choir (conducted by the outstanding Wawel organist Wincenty Gorączkiewicz, who popularized the music of Palestrina, in particular) and a symphony orchestra of 30 players (directed by K. Nowakiewicz, the organist of St Mary's); unlike anywhere else in Poland, it organized symphony concerts at least once a month. The years 1819–24 saw the greatest development in the society and its activities, after which it gradually declined until its formal dissolution in 1844. Viennese Classical works were predominant at its concerts, and choral singing was important; the repertory included polyphonic masterpieces and works of Haydn and Mozart. The society also sponsored concerts by visiting virtuosos such as Catalani. Liszt (1843) and Lipiński gave concerts in Kraków independent of the society.

Teatr Stary (Old Theatre), Kraków : lithograph, early 19th century

The orchestra of the National Guard was founded in 1811 as a janissary band of percussion and wind instruments. In 1820 the orchestra of the Militia of the Free Town of Kraków was formed, modelled on the Austrian military orchestra, introduced to the city when the Austrian army invaded the town in 1796; it entertained at occasional tattoos and religious and national ceremonies. The theatre continued under the ownership of Kluszewski, and during the period 1820–30 almost all the operas in the contemporary repertory were presented. Besides L'italiana in Algeri, Il barbiere di Siviglia and La gazza ladra, Kraków audiences saw Die Zauberflöte and Der Freischütz; Polish operas performed included almost all those of Elsner; the operas of Kurpiński gained great popularity.

Music teaching was private for both amateurs and professionals, and music teachers with various qualifications were often recruited from church chapels and from theatre and military orchestras. Professionals were educated at the music school at St Anna's, which was under the patronage of the Society of Friends of Music from 1818 to 1841. From 1838 Franciszek Mirecki directed a private school of dramatic singing, which became the municipal School of Singing and Music in 1841; it was the first state music school in Kraków and was important for the development of secular music there. The needs of sacred music were catered for by the School of Polyphonic Chant on the Wawel from 1821 to 1824.

5. 1846–1918. After the suppression of the Kraków Revolution by the Austrian army (1846) Kraków was annexed to Austria, and the musical life of the city came to a standstill, not only as the result of political developments but also because of the deaths of leading musicians, such as Gorączkiewicz and Mirecki. Musical life did not revive until the 1860s, when Stanisław Duniecki, Kazimierz Hofmann and Antoni Vopalka (1837–79) were active. Duniecki was conductor of the theatre, where he presented many operettas and operas, including the first of many performances in Kraków of Moniuszko's Halka (1866), at which the composer was present. Duniecki was succeeded at the theatre by Hofmann, who was also active from 1858 to 1878 as a teacher, pianist and impresario.

As a result of Kraków's greater autonomy, various scientific, cultural and artistic societies developed from 1866. In that year the Muza (Muse) amateur music society was founded, the ideological heir to the former Society of Friends of Music. The society had a male-voice and a mixed choir, which were sometimes accompanied by a military orchestra formed from Austrian units stationed in the town. From 1870 to 1875 Vopalka was artistic director of the society, which gave over 50 concerts in its first ten years, and from 1867 supported a school of music directed by Vopalka at which Hofmann taught the piano and theory. Later the society's importance in the city's cultural life declined. A German choral society, the Liedertafel, existed from 1860 to 1871.

In 1876 the declining Muza society was transformed by a group of enthusiasts into Kraków Music Society, which still exists. From 1876 to 1918 it was responsible for almost all musical activity in Kraków and ran the only music school at the time, later the Conservatory of Music. Its first artistic director was a singer from the Opera at Lwów, Stanisław Niedzielski. During the 1880s the society had about 400 members, and soloists from the School of Music appeared. In 1886 Wiktor Barabasz (1885–1928) was appointed artistic director, a post he held until 1909; he reorganized the society's choirs, which took part in all Kraków's festivals, and through his endeavours an amateur symphony orchestra was founded in 1888. A cycle of historic concerts that he organized with this orchestra was so popular that each had to be repeated. On Barabasz's initiative the society organized popular concerts in 1903 and 1904. From 1909 to 1914 the artistic director of the society was Feliks Nowowiejski, who gave fine symphony concerts, although the choir was neglected. During World War I the society's concerts ceased, and all its income was devoted to the upkeep of the conservatory. In that period the cultural life of Kraków was maintained only by 19 exhibition days given by pupils of the conservatory.

Besides the society's concerts, there were those of Princess Marcelina Czartoryska, both in her home and in public. In 1908 a concert agency was founded by Teofil Trzciński and amateur concerts began to decline in favour of systematically managed concert enterprises. The undertaking did much to acquaint Kraków with the new music of western Europe and Poland, and brought the best foreign soloists and ensembles to the town. In a fine concert guide Trzciński informed the public of contemporary developments abroad.

Kraków Music Society, founded in 1876, also took over the School of Music from the Muza society. The best musicians of Kraków were engaged as teachers and the number of instrumental classes increased. A new stage in the history of the school began when the eminent composer and teacher Władysław Żeleński settled in Kraków permanently in July 1881; he appeared as a pianist and conductor, organized diverse concerts, wrote music reviews and was active above all as a composer and teacher. The period up to 1914 was the 'Żeleński era'; for 40 years he held the post of director of the School of Music, which through his endeavours was renamed the Conservatory of the Music Society in Kraków in 1888. From 1891 to 1895 the composer Jan Gall taught solo singing and theory at the conservatory. In addition to the conservatory, a music institute was founded in 1908 by the pianist Klara Czop-Umlaufowa and the violinist Stanisław Giebułtowski, and was active until 1918.

In 1911 a seminar on music history and theory was initiated at the Jagiellonian University, the first of its kind in Poland; it later became the Musicology Institute and for many years was directed by its founder, Zdzisław Jachimecki. Two bookshops were particularly important: S.A. Krzyżanowski's was established in 1870, and included a concert bureau which sponsored Paderewski's concerts; that of Antoni Piwarski and Teodor Gieszczykiewicz was founded in 1897 and played an important role in the early 20th century, publishing works by many Polish composers.

One of the most notable instrument makers in Kraków was the luthier K. Häussler (workshop founded in 1832), who was succeeded in 1870 by his nephew and pupil, Gustaw. The latter's violins, modelled on those of Stradivarius, were highly prized. There were also piano makers of high repute, such as Z. Raba (from 1880) and J. Drozdowski (from 1884). In this period Kraków was also able to support several good organ builders: I. Ziernicki, S. Niepielski, B. Głowacki, I. Wojciechowski and A. Sapalski, author of the first Polish book on organ building (published in Kraków in 1880).

6. 1918–45. After World War I concert life was kept alive by various local ensembles, mainly choral. The most important of these were the mixed chorus of the Music Society and Conservatory, and the Academy's male-voice choir. In 1919 the mixed chorus of the Oratorio Society was created, as well as the male-voice choir known as Echo. In the same year the orchestra of the Musicians' Union was founded. Of groups affiliated to the Union of Church Choirs the most outstanding were the choir of St Cecilia (1923 to the present), associated with the Franciscan church, and the choirs of Missionary Priests. Among the orchestras, besides that of the Musicians' Union, were the symphony orchestra and wind band of the conservatory, the wind band of the Union of Train Drivers, the orchestra comprising employees from the health authority (1925–34) and the small orchestra of the Union of Polish Teachers. Concerts were usually given in one of the four concert halls.

The vitality of concert life depended on general economic conditions, and became evident in the second half of the 1920s and in the 1930s. Recitals and chamber concerts dominated, but there was no lack of symphony concerts, particularly in the years 1925–9. Many were organized by the Music Society under the able artistic direction of Bolesław Wallek-Walewski. There were also frequent performances by the orchestra and choir of the conservatory, which towards the end of the 1920s had 39 teachers and 700 students. It was the most important of the four (from 1929 five) music schools.

In 1931, the orchestra of the Musicians' Union closed down, for financial reasons; consequently, the Music Society founded the Kraków PO (1934–7). Then Eugeniusz Bujański, director of the Kraków Concert Office (established in 1908), founded the Kraków SO, recruiting members mainly from the opera ensemble. Between the wars many great soloists and conductors took part in symphonic and choral concerts, among them Artur Rubinstein, Ada Sari, Jan Kiepura, I. Dubiska, Eugenia Umińska, Hermann Abendroth, Walerian Bierdiajew and Grzegorz Fitelberg. At the end of this period a number of events of national and international significance took place, such as the National Congress of Church Music in 1931 and the Religious Music Week in 1938, both organized by the Union of Church Choirs. During the period 1935–9 the Wawel became the venue for several festivals of Polish art. Concerts from these festivals were broadcast throughout Europe by Kraków Radio, which played an important role in the musical life of the city from 1927.

In 1931 the Kraków Opera Society was reactivated and a permanent group was established under the direction of Wallek-Walewski (previously, there had been summer seasons given by visiting opera companies from Lwów, Warsaw and Katowice). This Kraków Opera gave 32 productions in the years up to 1939, and at a high artistic level.

Another feature of musical life in the 1920s was the presence of several composers who had studied with Żeleński and Nowowiejski, including Wallek-Walewski, Stanisław Lipski (author of lyrical piano pieces and atmospheric songs) and K. Garbusiński (known for his church music). They maintained the conservative style of their masters, while newer European trends were introduced by the composer and teacher Bernadino Rizzi (an Italian of the Franciscan order), who was active in the city from 1922 to 1932. In 1931 a group of his pupils (Jan Ekier, Włodzimierz Poźniak and F. Skołyszewski), together with other young composers and musicians, founded the Association of Young Musicians to organize concerts in which they could include their own works. After World War II Artur Malawski was to become the most distinguished of this younger generation.

Musicology also developed. The principal teachers at the Jagiellonian University were Jachimecki, J. Reiss (from 1922) and W. Poźniak (from 1930); they were also active as music critics. The book and publishing trades were still concentrated in the hands of two firms, those of S.A. Krzyżanowski and Piwarski-Gieszczykiewicz, while the house of Gebethner & Wolff acted as an outlet for a large range of music from Poland and abroad. Of 14 piano warehouses that had previously operated, only two remained in business.

The occupying Nazi administration of 1940–44 imposed a new opera company of German artists performing for a German public (Poles were not allowed admission) and established its own Philharmonic Society, which gave separate concerts for Germans and for Poles. Polish musicians who played in these concerts did so with the approval of the Polish underground government. From 1942, in the Old Theatre, there were performances of operetta in Polish, as well as other light musical productions. But these were boycotted by the vast majority of Poles as being improper during a period of national tragedy, and participation in them was regarded at the time (and after the war) as collaboration with the enemy. All music schools were closed down, and radio receivers were confiscated from the Polish population. Under these conditions there grew up a clandestine network of music teaching, and Poles gathered in private houses to listen to solo and chamber music, including the music of Chopin, which was officially banned on pain of imprisonment in the concentration camps.

7. From 1945. After liberation in January 1945 Kraków became the centre of musical life in the country, particularly because Warsaw lay destroyed. However, after the reconstruction of Warsaw in the 1950s a considerable number of musicians moved to the capital. Nevertheless, Kraków remained the second creative centre in the country. Prominent postwar Kraków composers include Wiechowicz, Malawski, Penderecki, Bogusław Schäffer, Moszumańska-Nazar, Krzysztof Meyer and Stachowski. On 3 February 1945 the Kraków Philharmonic was inaugurated as the first music institution in liberated Poland; in 1962 it became the Karol Szymanowski Philharmonic. Zygmunt Latoszewski became its director followed by such excellent conductors as Bierdiajew, Skrowaczewski, Rowicki, Markowski, Czyż and Katlewicz. The Kraków PO reached a high artistic standard; it gave the premières of many works by Penderecki and others. The Philharmonic's other ensembles include mixed and boys' choirs, a string quartet and the Capella Cracoviensis. The Philharmonic gives about 700 concerts each season, including a number in schools, and is responsible for organizing such established cycles of concerts and festivals as the Kraków Spring Festival (from 1962), the Wawel Evenings (from 1966), the international Organ Music Days (also from 1966), the organ recitals at the Benedictine abbey in Tyniec, and the Jan Kiepura Festival of Arias and Songs in Krynica (from 1967). From 1963 a music-lovers' club functioned in connection with the Philharmonic, leading a lively campaign to popularize music.

The orchestra and choir of Polish radio and television in Kraków was founded in 1948 and directed by Jerzy Gert until 1968, when he was succeeded by Krzysztof Missona. Polish music of all periods features in its repertory, and the orchestra's main task is recording for the central tape library of Polish radio, producing a complete history of Polish music in sound. Other performing groups include the Capella (founded in 1970 to play a repertory ranging from medieval to contemporary music), the Fiori Musicali (founded in 1978 for Baroque music) and MW2, a modern-music ensemble founded in 1962 by Adam Kaczyński.

The first postwar period for the Kraków Opera, under the direction of Bierdiajew, was shortlived and ended in 1948. The company was re-established in 1954, and in 1958 it merged with the operetta troupe to form the City Music Theatre. From 1962 to 1968 Kazimierz Kord was responsible for the transformation of the company's fortunes, raising it from a provincial level to one of the best musical theatres in the country. Its stature was maintained by his successors: Robert Satanowski, K. Missona and Ewa Michnik (1980–95), whose special contribution was to establish a separate stage for the performance of Baroque opera, where Monteverdi and Domenico Scarlatti have been performed.

Kraków's music schools were given an entirely different system of administration in 1945, as were those all over Poland. The schools were nationalized and then reclassified as lower, middle or higher. The aim was to achieve a deeper level of musical education, whereby instrumentalists and singers would also study theory and history. The field of music teaching, as a specialism, was also expanded. As a result of these reforms, Kraków was provided with three state lower schools (two from 1945, with a third added in 1958) and two middle schools, in addition to eight music centres providing elementary tuition for children. From the 1970s onwards, Catholic schools provided organ tuition for future church musicians.

The state higher school was initially known as the State Conservatory of Music (from 1945), then as the State Higher School of Music (from 1946) and eventually renamed in 1979 the Academy of Music. 2320 students graduated in the period up to 1988, including many who have become well known in Poland and abroad. Kraków's circle of composers is particularly strong, and maintains close contacts with the academy. The academy's composition teachers from 1945 included Artur Malawski and Wiechowicz; the younger generation includes Zbigniew Bujarski, Krzysztof Meyer, Moszumańska-Nazar, Penderecki, Bogusław Schäffer, Andrzej Stachowski, T. Machl and Adam Walaciński. Another active composer, although not among those teaching at the academy, is Juliusz Łuciuk.

The Jagiellonian University is one of only three state universities in Poland with a department of musicology, which at Kraków was directed until 1953 by its founder, Jachimecki. The fields of staff research were initially focussed on 19th-century music and ethnomusicology, but went on to embrace music of all periods. A special emphasis is placed on the history of Polish music and its relationship to the music of other countries. In 1973 the department inaugurated a special research centre and archive devoted to the life and music of Paderewski; this centre is preparing a collected edition of his works.

Since 1945 Kraków has been the home of Polskie Wydawnictwo Muzyczne (Polish Music Publishers, PWM), which until 1988 had a virtual monopoly in Poland for publishing music and books on music. PWM was directed for most of this time by its founder, Tadeusz Ochlewski, and did not restrict its activities to publishing. It directly employed many musicologists, and also provided a focus for collaborative work by musicologists from all over Poland. It initiated research leading to academic publications (including a series of critical editions of early Polish music, collected editions of the most significant 19th-century Polish composers, and an encyclopedia on music). After 1988, as a result of the profound economic transformation of Poland as a whole, and growing competition (even in Kraków itself), PWM withdrew from these wider activities.

An ancient tradition is preserved in the hourly sounding of the Hejnał mariacki ('St Mary's Bugle-Call') from the higher tower of St Mary's. The triadic trumpet melody is thought to date from the 14th century, and its sudden cessation in mid-phrase supposedly commemorates a Tartar invasion in which the trumpeter was killed.

A society devoted to the performance of contemporary music, Muzyka Centrum, was established in Kraków in 1977, and since 1991 has participated in the European Conference of Contemporary Music Promoters. In 1990 Kraków's musical community initiated the formation of a national organization, the Polish Society for Early Music (based in Kraków), as a forum for performers and those interested in the field. They promote performance on original instruments in authentic style, initiate the publication of early music and organize an annual festival of early music. Contemporary music has had its own festival since 1988, Music Days of Kraków Composers.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Chybiński: Materiały do dziejów królewskiej kapeli rorantystów na Wawelu i: 1540–1624 [Material for the history of the chapel royal of Rorantists in Wawel] (Kraków, 1910)

A. Chybiński: 'Materiały do dziejów królewskiej kapeli rorantystów na Wawelu, ii: 1624–94', Przegląd muzyczny, iv/14–19 (1911)

Z. Jachimecki: 'Kilka niekompletnych kompozycji polskich z XVI wieku' [Some incomplete Polish compositions of the 16th century], KM, i (1911–13)

Z. Jachimecki: Tabulatura organowa z biblioteki klasztoru Św. Ducha w Krakowie z roku 1548 [The organ tablature of 1548 from the library of the monastery of the Holy Ghost, Kraków] (Kraków, 1913)

A. Chybiński: 'Z dziejów muzyki krakowskiej' [From the history of music in Kraków], KM, ii (1913–14), 24–62, 91

W. Gieburowski: Die 'Musica Magistri Szdlovitye' ... und seine Stellung in der Choraltheorie des Mittelalters (Poznań, 1915)

Z. Jachimecki: Muzyka na dworze króla Władysława Jagiełły, 1424–1430 [Music at the court of Władysława Jagiełło, 1424–30] (Kraków, 1916)

J.W. Reiss: Książki o muzyce od XV do XVII wieku w Bibljotece Jagiellońskiej [Books on music from the 15th to 17th centuries in the Jagiellonian Library] (Kraków, 1924–38)

A. Chybiński: 'Nowe materyały do dziejów królewskiej kapeli rorantystów w Kaplicy Zygmuntowskiej na Wawelu' [New material for the history of the Chapel Royal of Rorantists active in the Sigismund Chapel on Wawel Hill], Księga pamiątkowa ku czci Oswalda Balzera (Lwów, 1925), 133–51

A. Chybiński: 'Przyczynki do historii krakowskiej kultury muzycznej w XVII i XVIII wieku' [Contribution towards the history of Kraków musical culture in the 17th and 18th centuries], Wiadomości muzyczne, i (1925), 133–47, 179–86, 218–24, 246–50; ii (1926), 2–7

A. Chybiński: Muzycy włoscy w kapelach katedralnych krakowskich 1619–57 [Italian musicians in the Kraków cathedral chapels, 1619–57], i (Poznań, 1927)

A. Chybiński: 'Trzy przyczynki do historii muzyki w Krakowie w pierwszej połowie XVII wieku' [Three essays on the history of music in Kraków in the early 17th century], Prace polonistyczne ofiarowane Janowi Łosiowi (Warsaw, 1927), 94–113

J.W. Reiss: Muzyka w Krakowie w XIX wieku [Music in Kraków in the 19th century] (Kraków, 1931)

J.W. Reiss: Jak Kraków walczył o operę [How Kraków fought over opera] (Kraków, 1934)

H. Gleason: 'The Cracow Tablature of 1548', BAMS, iii (1939), 14 only

A. Klose: 'Die musikgeschichtliche Beziehungen zwischen Krakau und Schlesien im 15. und 16. Jahrhundert', Deutsche Monatshefte in Polen, vi (1939), 166–73

J.W. Reiss: Almanach muzyczny Krakowa 1780–1914 (Kraków, 1939)

A. Chybiński: Słownik muzyków dawnej Polski [Dictionary of early Polish musicians] (Kraków, 1949)

M. Szczepańska: 'Nieznana krakowska tabulatura lutniowa z drugiej połowy XVI stulecia' [An unknown Kraków lute tablature from the second half of the 16th century], Księga pamiątkowa ku czci Prof. Adolfa Chybińskiego w 70-lecie urodzin (Kraków, 1950), 198–217

Z. Szulc: Słownik lutników polskich [Dictionary of Polish violin makers] (Poznań, 1953)

W. Bieńkowski: 'Krakowska szkoła muzyczna w latach 1841–1873' [Kraków music school 1841–73], Musikwissenschaftliche Studien, iii (1954)

A. Szweykowska: 'Początki krakowskiej kapeli katedralnej' [The beginnings of the Kraków cathedral chapel], Muzyka, iv/2 (1959), 12–21 [with Eng. summary]

J. Dobrzycki: Hejnał Krakowski [The Kraków bugle-call] (Kraków, 1961, 2/1983)

Z.M. Szweykowski: Preface to Muzyka w dawnym Krakowie [Music in old Kraków] (Kraków, 1964)

A. Sutkowski: 'Kompozycje niechorałowe w graduale klasztoru św. Andrzeja w Krakowie (sygn.M 205/594)' [Non-choral compositions in the gradual of St Andrzej's monastery in Kraków], Musica medii aevi, i (1965), 89–95

J. Gołos: 'Muzykalia biblioteki klasztoru karmelitów na Piasku w Krakowie' [Musical materials in the library of the Carmelite monastery at Piasek in Kraków], Muzyka, xii/3–4 (1966), 86–97

K. Witkowska-Chomińska: 'Szkoła krakowska od końca XV do połowy XVI wieku' [The Kraków school from the end of the 15th century to the middle of the 16th], Muzyka, xi/2 (1966), 54–67

K. Mrowiec: 'Niewykorzystane źródło do dziejów Kapeli Akademickiej w Krakowie' [An unused source for the history of the Academic Chapel in Kraków], Muzyka, xii/2 (1967), 32–45

M. Perz: 'Der niederländische Stil in Polen', IMSCR X: Ljubljana 1967, 107–12

T. Przybylski: 'Sztuka muzyki Wacława Sierakowskiego' [The Art of Music by Wacław Sierakowski], Muzyka, xiii/2 (1968), 66–77

A. Szweykowska: 'Przeobrażenia w kapeli królewskiej na przełomie XVI i XVII wieku' [Changes in the royal chapel in the late 16th and 17th centuries], Muzyka, xiii/2 (1968), 3–21 [with Eng. summary]

M. Przywecka-Samecka: Drukarstwo muzyczne w Polsce do końca XVIII wieku [Music printing in Poland up to the end of the 18th century] (Kraków, 1969, 2/1987)

Z.M. Szweykowski, ed.: Musicalia vetera: Katalog tematyczny rekopiśmiennych zabytków dawnej muzyki w Polsce, i: Zbiory muzyczne prowenienсji wawelskiej [Thematic catalogue of early musical manuscripts in Poland, i: Collections of music copied for use at Wawel] (Kraków, 1969–83)

Z. Jabłoński: 'Z dziejów teatru krakowskiego w drugiej połowie XVIII wieku' [From the history of the theatre in Kraków in the second half of the 18th century], Rocznik biblioteki Polskiej Akademii Nauk w Krakowie, xvi (1970), 19–49

E. Głuszcz-Zwolińska: 'Muzycy włoscy na dworze królewskim Jagiellonów' [Italian music at the Royal Jagiellonian court], Polsko-włoskie materiały muzyczne/Argomenti musicali polacco-italiani: Warsaw 1971 and Bardolino 1972 [Pagine, ii (Warsaw, 1974)], 71–7

E. Głuszcz-Zwolińska: 'Music in 16th Century Poland', Poland: the Land of Copernicus, ed. B. Suchodolski (Wrocław, 1973), 193–204

K. Mrowiec: 'Kolędy w osiemnastowiecznych rękopisach biblioteki klasztoru św. Andrzeja w Krakowie' [Carols in 18th-century manuscripts from the library of St Andrzej's monastery in Kraków], Muzyka, xviii/3 (1973), 29–50

M. Perz, ed.: Sources of Polyphony up to c1500, AMP, xiii–xiv (1973–6)

T. Przybylski: Kultura muzyczna Krakowa na przełomie XVIII i XIX wieku [Kraków's musical culture at the turn of the 18th and 19th centuries] (Kraków, 1974)

T. Maciejewski: 'Inwentarz muzykaliów kapeli karmelickiej w Krakowie na Piasku z lat 1665–1684' [The inventory of musical materials of the Carmelite monastery at Kraków from the years 1665–1684], Muzyka, xxi/2 (1976), 77–99

E. Głuszcz-Zwolińska: 'Über die Untersuchungen zur Musikkultur der polnischen Renaissance im 16. Jahrhundert', Musica slavica: Beiträge zur Musikgeschichte Osteuropas, ed. E. Arro (Wiesbaden, 1977)

M. Pamuła: 'Tabulatura muzyki Jana Aleksandra Gorczyna' [J.A. Gorczyn's Tabulatura muzyki], Muzyka, xxii/2 (1977), 65–78 [with Eng. summary]

T. Maciejewski: 'Działalność muzyczna bractwa szkaplerznego w kościele OO. karmelitów trzewiczkowych w Krakowie na Piasku' [Musical activity of the Scapular confraternity in the Carmelite church in Kraków], Muzyka, xxiii/2 (1978), 59–71

K. Mrowiec: 'Pieśni polskie ku czci św. Stanisława biskupa krakowskiego w kancjonałach i śpiewnikach kościelnych', Summarium: sprawozdania Towarzystwa naukowego Katolickiego uniwersytetu Lubelskiego, vii (1978), 119–35

E. Cramer: 'Polish Music in the Sixteenth Century and the Idea of the Golden Age', Canadian Association of University Schools of Music, ix/2 (1979), 14–23

E. Witkowska-Zaremba: 'Zasady muzyki w krakowskich traktatach chorałowych z pierwszej połowy XVI wieku' [Musical rudiments in choral treatises of Kraków from the first part of the 16th century], Muzyka, xxiv/4 (1979), 65–9

C.E. Brewer: '"Musica Muris" w krakowskich rękopisach z XIV i XV wieku' [14th and 15th century Kraków manuscripts on music by Johannes de Muris], Muzyka, xxv/3 (1980), 23–35 [with Eng. summary]

L. Hoffmann-Erbrecht: Henricus Finck, musicus excellentissimus (1445–1527) (Cologne, 1982)

E. Ostaszewska: 'Decadenza della tradizione cracoviana del "cantus planus multiplex"', Sodalium voces (Bologna, 1984), 31–7

E. Witkowska, ed.: Liban Jerzy: pisma o muzyce [Liban Jerzy: writings on music] (Kraków, 1984)

E. Witowska-Zaremba: 'Pojęcie muzyki w krakowskich traktatach Musicae planae połowy XVI wieku' [The concept of music in the early 16th-century treatises of Musicae planae], Muzyka, xxix/4 (1984), 3–22 [with Eng. summary]

J. Berwaldt, ed.: Tradycje muzyczne Katedry Krakowskiej [Musical traditions of Kraków cathedral] (Kraków, 1985)

I. Pawlak: 'Graduały piotrkowskie jako księgi liturgiczne przeznaczone dla diecezji polskich' [Piotrków graduals as liturgical books intended for the Polish dioceses], Tradycje muzyczne katedry wawelskiej (Kraków, 1985), 68–80

E. Witkowska-Zaremba: Ars musica w krakowskich traktatach muzycznych XVI wieku [The Ars musica in Kraków plainchant treatises of the 16th century] (Kraków, 1986)

Z.M. Szweykowski, ed.: Grzegorz Gerwazy Gorczycki (Krakow, 1986–90)

B. Brzezińska: Repertuar polskich tabulatur organowych z pierwszej połowy XVI wieku [The repertory of Polish organ tablatures from the first half of the 16th century] (Kraków, 1987)

E. Dzięboswka, ed.: Muzykologia krakowska, 1911–1986 (Kraków, 1987)

A. Reginek: 'Melodie hymnów brewiarzowych w liturgicznych księgach przedtrydenckich diecezji krakowskiej', Muzyka, xxxii/2 (1987), 93–7

E. Zwolińska: 'Musica figurata in the Jagiellonian Mausoleum: some Remarks on the Polyphony of the Wawel Rorantists in the 16th c.', Polish Art Studies, viii (1987), 145–50

Krakowska szkola kompozytorska: Kraków 1988

E. Głuszcz-Zwolińska: Muzyka nadworna ostatnich Jagiellonów [The court music of the last Jagiellonians] (Kraków, 1988)

D. Brough: Polish Seventeenth-Century Church Music, with Reference to the Influence of Historical, Political, and Social Conditions (New York, 1989)

M. Perz: 'Na tropie "śpiewnika krakowskiego" *c*1470: rzecz o fragmencie nr 8a Biblioteki Jagiellońskiej (PL-Kj 8a)' [On the trail of a 'Krakówian songbook' *c*1470: fragment 8a in PL-Kj], Muzyka, xxxiv/1 (1989), 3–35 [with Eng. summary]

Z.M. Szweykowski: 'Muzyka w barokowym Krakowie (od Liliusa do Gorczyckiego)' [Music in Baroque Kraków (from Lilius to Gorczycki)], Kraków sarmacki: Kraków 1989 (Kraków, 1992), 53–62

C.E. Brewer, ed.: Collectio cantilenarum seculi XV, ZHMP, xxx (1990) [with preface in Eng. and Pol.]

S. Czajkowski: 'Zbiór anonimowych hymnów wielogłosowych z rękopisu proweniencji wawelskiej (XVII–XVIII w.)' [A collection of anonymous polyphonic hymns from a manuscript of Wavel provenance (17th–18th century)], Muzyka, xxxv/4 (1990), 17–40 [with Eng. summary]

M. Perz: 'Wawelska przeszłość muzyczna: mity i domniemana rzeczywistość' [Wawel's musical past: myth and conjecture], Muzyka, xxxv/4 (1990), 3–15 [with Eng. summary]

A. Reginek: 'Repertuar hymnów diecezji krakowskiej' [Repertory of hymns from the Kraków diocese], Musica medii aevi, viii (1991), 142–372

M. Perz: 'Kontrafaktury ballad w rękopisie Krasińskich nr 52 (PL-Wn 8054)' [Contrafacta of ballades in the Krasinscy manuscript no.52], Musyka, xxxvii/4 (1992), 89–111 [with Eng. summary]

E. Witkowska-Zaremba: Musica Muris i nurt spekulatywny w muzykologii średniowiecznej [Musica Muris and the speculative trend in medieval musicology] (Warsaw, 1992)

M. Perz: 'The Structure of the Lost Manuscript from the National Library in Warsaw, no.378 (WarN 378)', From Ciconia to Sweelinck: donum natalicum Willem Elders, ed. A. Clement and E. Jas (Amsterdam, 1994), 1–11

T. Przybylski: Z dziejów nauczania muzyki w Krakowie od średniowiecza do czasów współczesnych [The history of music education in Kraków from the middle ages to the present] (Kraków, 1994)

T.M. Czepiel: Music at the Royal Court and Chapel in Poland, c.1543–1600 (New York, 1996)

ZYGMUNT M. SZWEYKOWSKI (1), MIROSŁAW PERZ(2), TADEUSZ PRZYBYLSKI (3–7)

Krakowiak (Pol.; Fr. cracovienne; Ger. Krakauer Tanz). Polish folk dance, from the Kraków region, characterized by syncopated rhythms in fast duple time. It is associated with aspects of national dress: ribbons for the women and plumed caps, brass belt buckles and boots with steel strikers for the men.

The dance, whose origins may lie in courtship ritual, is performed by several couples led by a male dancer who sings and directs the dancing. The formation is based on a circle. A couple moves towards the band and the man sings to his partner, using traditional melody but improvised words. Instrumental and vocal verses are performed in alternation. The syncopated rhythms (ex.1) are clearly linked to gestures of stamping and heel-clicking, but other gestures often include zapraszalny (invitation), mijany (passing), goniony (chasing), suwany (shuffling) and przebiegany (running). Stamping may be combined with a sliding motion (in the krzesany) or with heel-clicking and a jump (in the hołubiec). There are variations in choreography and the broad term krakowiak may be substituted for one denoting a more precise place of origin within the Kraków region (for example, the proszowiak from Proszowic, or the skalmierzak from Skalmierz). In terms of popularity there has been a long-standing rivalry between the krakowiak and the triple-metre Oberek, but these dances share a syncopated rhythmic character and much use of tempo rubato in performance.

Ex.1

The dance rhythm is correlated with a traditional versification pattern. The krakowiak model comprises a symmetrical structure with four six-syllable lines paired within a 4+4 bar unit (ex.2). The vocal melodic line, which is often varied and elaborated by the instrumentalists, commonly opens with a rising triadic figure which establishes the dance's spirited character. Indeed, on the evidence of Łukasz Gołębiowski's Ludpolski, jego zwyczaje, zabobony (1830), the krakowiak appears to have been reserved as the climactic finale to a sequence of dances including the polski and mazur.

Although the title 'krakowiak' did not appear in print until 1816 with the Warsaw publication of Krakowiaki ofiarowane Polkom ('Krakowiaks offered to the women of Poland'), its characteristic rhythms occur as early as some organ and lute tablatures and songbooks of the 16th and 17th centuries, for example in Jan z Lublina's tablature (1540, PL-Kp), Normiger's tablature (1598, formerly D-Tu, now lost), Fuhrmann's Testudo gallo-germanico (1615) and Giovanni Picchi's Intavolatura di balli d'arpicordo (2/1621). The rhythm also appears occasionally in dances by Telemann and in 18th-century Polish sacred and operatic works (such as Jan Stefani's folk opera The Supposed Miracle, or Krakovians and Highlanders, 1794. It was, however, in the 19th century that its popularity and dissemination increased. The Warsaw collection of 1816 reappeared four years later as Zbiór krakowiaków ułożonych na fortepian ('A collection of krakowiaks arranged for piano') and to this was added Wincenty Gorączkiewicz's Krakowiaki zebrane i ułożone na fortepian ('Krakowiaks assembled and arranged for piano'), published soon afterwards in Vienna by Diabelli. The main theme of Chopin's Rondo à la krakowiak for piano and orchestra op.14 (1828) is very similar to a popular proszowiak of the time, 'Albośmy to jacy jacy', later collected by Oskar Kolberg. Other pieces from Chopin's early career – dance songs, the Rondo in C minor op.1 and the finale of the Piano Concerto in E minor op.11 – incorporate krakowiak elements. By the mid-19th century the dance had reached the theatre stage as well as the concert platform, with its adoption as a 'national' dance and in performances by the Austrian dancer Fanny Elssler in both Europe and America. Following the example of Chopin, several composers turned to the krakowiak dance form. I.F. Dobrzyński used it in the finale of his Symphony 'in the spirit of Polish music' (1834); Zygmunt Noskowski included examples in his opp.2, 5, 7 and 25 (1870s and 80s); Paderewski wrote several – two each in opp.5 and 9 for piano (*c*1883), the Krakowiak for piano (1884), and in the Fantasie polonaise for piano and orchestra op.19 (1893). Others include Statkowski's Alla cracovienne for violin and piano op.7 (*c*1890), part of Ludomir Różycki's ballet, Pan Twardowski op.45 (1921), and the second of Szymanowski's Four Polish Dances for piano (1926).

Ex.2

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG2 (M. Sobieski/P. Poźniak); SMP

F. Starczewski: 'Die polnischen Tänze', SIMG, ii (1900–01), 673–718

Z. Kłośnik: O tańcach narodowych polskich [On Polish national dances] (Lwów, 1907)

T. Norlind: 'Zur Geschichte der polnischen Tänze', SIMG, xii (1910–11), 501–25

T. Zygler: Polskie tańce ludowe [Polish folkdances] (Kraków, 1952) [exhibition guide for Ethnographic Museum, Kraków]

F. Zozula: Tańce ludowe [Folkdances] (Warsaw, 1952)

L. Bielawski: 'Problem krakowiaka w twórczósci Chopina', The Works of Frederick Chopin: Warsaw 1960, 100–03

A. Czekanowska: Polish Folk Music: Slavonic Heritage, Polish Tradition, Contemporary Trends (Cambridge, 1990)

A. Thomas: 'Beyond the Dance', The Cambridge Companion to Chopin, ed. J. Samson (Cambridge, 1992), 145–59

STEPHEN DOWNES

Kramář, František Vincenc. See KROMMER, FRANZ.

Kramer, A(rthur) Walter (b New York, 23 Sept 1890; d New York, 8 April 1969). American publisher, editor, critic and composer. He studied the violin with his father, Maximilian Kramer, and with Carl Hauser and Richard Arnold. After studying at the College of the City of New York he joined the staff of the magazine Musical America (1910–22) and then spent several years studying, writing and composing in Europe; for a time he worked with Malipiero. In 1927 he became music supervisor for the CBS Radio Network, and then returned as editor-in-chief to Musical America (1929–36); subsequently he became managing director of the music publishers Galaxy Music Corporation (1936–56), and after his retirement continued to write and compose. He helped to found the Society for Publication of American Music (1919) and served as its president (1934–40) and on the board of directors of the ASCAP (1941–56). In addition to many articles and reviews in music periodicals, Kramer published over 300 compositions, including works for full orchestra, string orchestra, string quartet, voice, chorus, piano, violin, cello and organ, as well as numerous instrumental and choral transcriptions. His compositions, which are fairly conservative, are marked by much technical refinement and understanding of the instrumental or vocal medium used.

WRITINGS

Discussion of contemporary Italian composers in The Art of Music, iii: Modern Music, ed. E.B. Hill and E. Newman (New York, 1915), iii, 366–403

'The Things We Set to Music', MQ, vii (1921), 309–13

'Three Italian Modernists: Malipiero, Pizzetti, Respighi', The Chesterian, xiii (1931–2), 68–74

'Berg's Wozzeck has U.S. Premiere in Philadelphia', Musical America, li/6 (1931), 3, 13 only

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.T. Howard: A. Walter Kramer (New York, 1926) [comprehensive bio-bibliography; part of biography repr. as 'A. Walter Kramer: the Early Years', Music Journal, xxx/3 (1972), 30–31]

W.T. Upton: Art-Song in America (Boston and Chicago, 1930/R, suppl. 1938/R), 225ff

GUSTAVE REESE/RAMONA H. MATTHEWS

Kramer, Jonathan D. (b Hartford, CT, 7 Dec 1942). American composer and theorist. He was a pupil of Leon Kirchner and Billy Jim Layton at Harvard (BA 1965) and did postgraduate work at the University of California, Berkeley (MA 1967, PhD 1969), where his teachers in composition included Shifrin, Imbrie, Sessions and Felciano. He also studied with Stockhausen at the University of California, Davis (1966–7), and with Chowning at Stanford (computer music, 1967–8). He has served on the faculties of the University of California, Berkeley (1969–70), Oberlin (1970–71), Yale (1971–8), the Cincinnati Conservatory (1978–90) and Columbia University (1988–). Since 1980 he has been programme annotator for the Cincinnati SO, a position he also held with the San Francisco SO (1967–70) and the National SO (1989–92). He has received grants from the Martha Baird Rockefeller Fund, the NEA, the MC and Meet the Composer, among others. His Renascence (1974, rev. 1977, 1985, 1997) was one of three American works performed at the 1980 World Music Days in Israel. Music for Piano V (1980) won the International Rostrum of Composers competition in 1983 and was programmed at the 1985 World Music Days in the Netherlands. Musica Pro Musica (1986–7), commissioned by the NEA, was performed by the Warsaw PO in the 1992 World Music Days in Poland.

Much of Kramer's music is highly eclectic, particularly his early works, which include conceptual pieces (For Broken Piano, Truck, Shaving Cream, Fruit Salad, Toilet, Wife, San Francisco, Color TV, and, 1969–70), as well as highly structured compositions (Music for Piano, nos.2–3). From the mid-1970s he has worked towards the reconciliation of these divergent compositional approaches. Later works employ a limited array of pitches (six is his preferred number), but also allow for influences such as jazz. The propulsive rhythms associated with minimalism are employed in Atlanta Licks (1984). Works from the mid-1980s, including Musica Pro Musica and Notta Sonata (1992–3), revel in conflict and contradiction, questioning the necessity of one of Western music's most basic tenets: structural unity. As a theorist, Kramer has lectured internationally on musical time as well as postmodernism.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage and multimedia: For Broken Pf, Truck, Shaving Cream, Fruit Salad, Toilet, Wife, San Francisco, Color TV, and, tape, slide projections, 1969–70; An Imaginary Dance, tape, slide projections, 1970–73; Blue Music, actor, tape, 1970–72; Higher Education, teacher, office, 1971; You, Too, Can Be a Composer, music theory class, teacher, 1971; Fanfare, actors, tape, 1973–6; En noir et blanc, dancer, 2 pf, 1988

Orch: Requiem for the Innocent, 1970; Moments In and Out of Time, 1981–3; Musica Pro Musica, 1986–7; Cincy in C, 1994; Remembrance of a People, pf, str orch, 1996

Chbr: Septet, fl, ob, bn, vn, va, vc, hp, 1968; One for Five in Seven, Mostly, ww qnt, 1971; The Canons of Blackearth, perc qt, tape, 1972–3; Renascence, cl, tape delay, tape, 1974, rev. cl, tape, 1977, 1985, rev. cl, cptr, 1997; Moving Music, 13 cl, 1975–6; 5 Studies on Six Notes, perc trio, 1976–80; Licks, 3 db/(db, tape), 1980–81; Atlanta Licks, fl, cl, vn, va, vc, pf, 1984; A Game, vc, pf, 1988–92; Another Sunrise, fl, ob, bn, va, vc, perc, pf, 1990; Notta Sonata, 2 pf, perc, 1992–3; Serbelloni Serenade, cl, vn, pf, 1995; Remembrance of a People, str qnt, pf, 1996

Solo inst: 3 Pieces, cl, 1965–6; Music for Pf nos.1–6, 1966–97; 5 Tunes, pf, 1970–78; One More Piece, cl, 1972; 5 Studies on Six Notes, hpd, 1976–7, arr. gui, 1978, arr. perc trio, 1980; The Sunrise Sonata, hpd, 1984–5

Vocal: No Beginning, No End, SATB, orch, 1982–3; Into the Labyrinth, SATB, pf, 1985–6; Another Anniversary, spkr, cl, 1989

Principal publishers: MMB, G. Schirmer

WRITINGS

'The Row as Structural Background and Audible Foreground: the First Movement of Webern's First Cantata', JMT, xv (1971), 158–81

'The Fibonacci Series in Twentieth-Century Music', JMT, xvii (1973), 110–48

'Multiple and Nonlinear Time in Beethoven's Opus 135', PNM, xi/2 (1973), 122–45

'Moment Form in Twentieth Century Music', MQ, lxiv/2 (1978), 177–95; repr. in Breaking the Sound Barrier, ed. G. Battcock (New York, 1981)

'New Temporalities in Music', Critical Inquiry, vii (1981), 539–56

'The Impact of Technology on Music Time', Percussive Notes, xxii/3 (1984), 16

'Studies of Time and Music: a Bibliography', Music Theory Spectrum, vii (1985), 72–106

'Temporal Linearity and Nonlinearity in Music', The Study of Time V, ed. J.T. Fraser, N. Lawrence and F.C. Haber (Amherst, MA, 1986)

'Discontinuity and Proportion in the Music of Stravinsky', Confronting Stravinsky, ed. J. Pasler (Berkeley, 1986), 174–94

Listen to the Music (New York, 1988); repr. as Listening to Music (London, 1991); Sp. trans. as Invitacion a la musica (Buenos Aires, 1993)

The Time of Music (New York, 1988)

ed.: Time in Contemporary Musical Thought (London, 1993)

'Beyond Unity: Toward an Understanding of Postmodernism in Music and Music Theory', Concert Music, Rock and Jazz since 1945, ed. E. West Marvin and R. Hermann (Rochester, NY, 1995)

'Postmodern Concepts of Musical Time', Indiana Theory Review, xvii/2 (1997), 21

JAMES CHUTE

Kranichsteiner Musikinstitut. Name used by the Internationales Musikinstitut in DARMSTADT between 1949 and 1962.

Kranz, Johann Friedrich (b Weimar, 6 April 1752; d Stuttgart, 20 Feb 1810). German conductor, composer and violinist. The son of a court wigmaker Georg Kranz, he was a precociously talented violinist who studied music with the chamber musician C.G. Göpfert and the Hofkapellmeister E.W. Wolf. He had a position in the Weimar court orchestra as early as 1766, and became a chamber musician in 1778. He undertook extended journeys (1780–87) to Mannheim, Munich, Italy, Vienna and Eszterháza at the behest of Duke Carl August. In Rome in 1787 Kranz and Goethe were among the guests at a feast in the home of the painter Angelica Kauffmann; under Kranz's direction the dinner evolved into a 'brilliant concert during the most beautiful summer night'. On his tours he met Cimarosa, Paisiello and Haydn, and this led, on his return to Weimar, to his German adaptations (with the poet C.A. Vulpius) of several operas by Cimarosa, Paisiello and others, as well as his performance of The Seasons in 1801; he later described himself as Haydn's pupil. Besides assisting the aged Göpfert as leader of the Hofkapelle, Kranz also became music director of the court theatres in 1791, working closely with both Goethe and Vulpius, and was awarded the position of Kapellmeister in 1799. In 1801, however, a breach with Goethe was provoked by a disagreement between Kranz and the singer Caroline Jagemann, whose wilful interpretation of Don Giovanni Kranz strenuously opposed. Kranz was soon suspended from his theatrical duties, but he posed such stubborn resistance that Goethe remonstrated: 'If he has the impudence to ask if his action should be forgotten, I will give him a shampooing that he will not forget to the end of his days'. Kranz eventually resigned in 1803 to accept a better position as Hofkapellmeister at Stuttgart. By 1807 his health kept him from working, although he retained the post until his death.

Although Kranz composed music for several plays, as well as keyboard variations and violin concertos (all in a Classical style), he was most significant as a conductor and director. Under his leadership the Weimar Hofkapelle became one of the best in Germany, and his contributions to the court theatres, in collaboration with Goethe, were equally valuable.

WORKS

all stage works first performed in Weimar unless otherwise stated

Inkle und Yarico (ballet), ?1772, scenario pubd

Incid music in plays: Der Gross-Cophta (J.W. von Goethe), 1791; Otto der Schütz (F.O. Hagemann), 1792; Die Jesuiten (J.G.L. Hagemeister), 1797; Wallensteins Lager (tragedy, F. von Schiller), 1798; chorus in Die Hussiten vor Naumburg, Leipzig, 1802, H-SFm

Inst: Romanze, pf (Weimar, *c*1799) [variations on Cimarosa: 'An dem schönsten Frühlingsmorgen' from Die theatralisches Abentheuer]; 2 vn concs., D-WRl; Va Conc., 1798, ?lost; 5 orch pieces, WRl

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; GerberL; GerberNL

J. Wahle: Das Weimarer Hoftheater unter Goethes Leitung (Weimar, 1892)

C. Nisbet, ed. and trans.: J.W. von Goethe: Annals, or Day and Year Papers (London, 1901)

R. Krauss: Das Stuttgarter Hoftheater (Stuttgart, 1908)

W. Bode: Die Tonkunst in Goethes Leben (Berlin, 1912)

K.-H. Köhler: 'Goethes Mozart-Rezeption auf der Weimarer Bühne: Theaterpraxis und Popularisierung in dem ersten Jahrzehnt nach Mozarts Tod', Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart: Leipzig 1991, 169–72

G. KRAFT

Krapp, Edgar (b Bamberg, 3 June 1947). German organist. He started piano lessons at five and was a boy treble in the Regensburg 'Domspatzen'. From 1966 he studied the organ, harpsichord and school music at the Musikhochschule in Munich, where his most important teacher was Franz Lehrndorfer. His artistic breakthrough came after winning a first prize at the ARD Music Competition in Munich in 1971. Further studies followed with Marie-Claire Alain in Paris, where he was also organist at the German Evangelical Church. In 1972 he became lecturer at the Musikhochschule in Munich. At this time he undertook increased concert activity in Europe, America and Japan, and made broadcasts and recordings. In 1974 he was appointed professor of organ at the Musikhochschule at Frankfurt as successor to Helmut Walcha. In 1983 he was awarded the Frankfurt Music Prize. From 1982 to 1991 he was also visiting professor at the Salzburg Mozarteum and in 1993 took a professorship at the Musikhochschule in Munich. In 1983 he became a member of the Bayerische Akademie der Schönen Künste in Munich, and in 1988 was appointed to the committee of the Neue Bach-Gesellschaft in Leipzig. Edgar Krapp, who devotes about one third of his year's work to the harpsichord, and two-thirds to the organ, commands a wide repertory, in which he displays a high degree of virtuosity, a discerning sense of style and an individual musical imagination.

GERHARD WIENKE

Krása, Hans (Johann) (b Prague, 30 Nov 1899; d Auschwitz, 18 Oct 1944). German composer of Czech birth. He studied the piano with Terëse Wallerstein and composition with Zemlinsky. There is no evidence to suggest that he received any other formal musical education. He spent a short period of time as répétiteur at the Neues Deutsches Theater, Prague, where his Symphony for Small Orchestra and his String Quartet received successful performances. The Symphony was later performed at the Zürich ISCM Festival (1926), under Zemlinsky in Prague (1927) and under Koussevitzky in Boston and New York (1926–7). In 1927 Krása accompanied Zemlinsky to the Kroll Opera, Berlin. Although he received conducting offers from Berlin, Paris and Chicago, he could not bring himself to accept a foreign post and returned to Prague before the end of the year.

As a member of the Literarisch-Künstlerischer Verein, Krása threw himself into German musical life in Prague. He began work on his first opera, Verlobung im Traum, in 1928. Although his psalm-cantata Die Erde ist des Herrn was given its première by Heinrich Swoboda in 1932 and received two subsequent broadcast performances in Prague and Hamburg, Verlobung im Traum was not performed until 1933. By this time the National Socialists had already come to power in Germany and despite the opera's acclaim (it won the Czechoslovakian State Prize in 1933) it was not performed in any German opera house. Krása's second opera, Lysistrata, remained unfinished.

Feeling a growing sympathy with Czech artists and intellectuals, Krása included his Music for Harpsichord and Seven Instruments for performance at a concert of Manés, the Czech artists' association (1936). After writing incidental music and song settings for Adolf Hoffmeister's Mládî v hře ('Youth in Play'), the two collaborated on the children's opera Brundibár ('Bumble-bee'). The opera was rehearsed and performed by Rudolf Freudenfeld and the children of Prague's Jewish orphanage in 1942 despite the German occupation. By the time the performance took place, however, Krása had been sent to Terezín concentration camp with the deportation transport of 10 August 1942.

At first the camp's administration merely tolerated artistic activity; later it was encouraged, as it could be used for propaganda. Krása served as director of the music section of the so-called Freizeitgestaltung, a group that organized the prisoners' 'leisure' time. In an act of enormous significance for the Freizeitgestaltung, a piano-vocal score of Brundibár reached the camp, enabling Krása to reconstruct the opera for the available forces. It was performed in the camp on 23 July 1943 in the first of 55 performances. Krása was taken to Auschwitz on 16 October 1944 as part of the so-called Künstlertransport. He died in the gas chamber two days later.

Krása's early works reveal the influence of Zemlinsky, early Schoenberg, neo-classical Stravinsky and French Impressionism. His music characteristically displays subversive humour, grotesque gestures, formal confidence and melodic lyricism. If in the 1920s he was seen by his colleagues as a bohemian, fond of playing chess and demonstrating little ambition as a composer, in the 1930s and especially during his month in Terezín he became an artist who remained true to his ethical and aesthetic principles even in the most arduous circumstances. In the mid-1980s, after a long period of oblivion, Brundibár was rediscovered along with many of Krása's other works. Verlobung im Traum, Chamber Music for Harpsichord and Seven Instruments, and Die Erde ist des Herrn were the last compositions to reappear, reintroduced to the musical world in 1994 and 1995.

WORKS

Stage: Mládí v hře [Youth in Play] (incid music and songs, A. Hoffmeister), 1934; Verlobung im Traum (op, 2, R. Fuchs, R. Thomas, after F.M. Dostoyevsky), 1933; Brundibár [Bumble-bee] (children's op, Hoffmeister), 1938

Inst: Str Qt, op.2 (1924); Sym. (A. Rimbaud, Ger. trans. M. Brod), Mez, small orch (1926); Kammermusik, hpd, 7 insts, 1936; Ov., small orch, 1943–4; Theme and Variations, str qt, 1935–6; Passacaglia and Fugue, str trio, 1944; Tanz, str trio, 1944

Vocal: Grotesques (C. Morgenstern: Galgenlieder), Bar, orch, 1920; 5 Lieder, 1v, pf (1926); Die Erde ist des Herrn (cant.), solo vv, chorus, orch (1932); 3 Lieder (A. Rimbaud), Bar, cl, vc, 1943

Principal publishers: Bote & Bock, Tempo, Eschig, Universal

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Vuillermoz: 'Hans Krása', Der Auftakt, v (1925), 153–6

E. Steinhard: 'H. Krása: Die Erde ist des Herrn', Der Auftakt, xii (1932), 107

E. Steinhard: 'H. Krása: Verlobung im Traum', Der Auftakt, xiii (1933), 73–4

J. Karas: Music in Terezín: 1941–1945 (New York, 1990)

I. Schultz: '3 Beiträge zu Hans Krásas Oper "Verlobung im Traum"', Programmhefte der Prager (27.3.1994) und Mannheimer (26.6.1994) Wideraufführung, repr. in mr Mitteilungen, no.11 (1994), 1–22

INGO SCHULTZ

Krasinsky, Ernest Louis. See MÜLLER, ERNEST LOUIS.

Krasner, Louis (b Cherkassy, Ukraine, 21 June 1903; d Boston, 4 May 1995). American violinist. He was brought to the USA at the age of five, and graduated in 1923 from the New England Conservatory, where he studied the violin with Eugene Gruenberg and composition with Frederick Converse. Further studies in Europe, under Flesch, Lucien Capet and Ševčík, led to an active concert career there and in the USA, during which he became closely identified with 20th-century music. In 1934 he commissioned Berg's concerto, believing that the cause of serial music would be helped by an effective virtuoso work in Berg's impassioned melodic style. He gave its première at the 1936 ISCM Festival in Barcelona, and that of Schoenberg's concerto in Philadelphia in 1940; both concertos were also first recorded by him. His other first performances included concertos by Casella (1928, Boston) and Sessions (1946, Minneapolis), as well as shorter works by Cowell and Harris. Krasner became leader of the Minneapolis SO under Mitropoulos (1944–9), and then moved to Syracuse University, where he taught the violin and chamber music until 1972. He became a visiting professor at the New England Conservatory in 1976. His playing combined technical proficiency with persuasive conviction of musical character, attracting a rare testament of approval from Schoenberg after the première of his concerto (letter, 17 December 1940). (SchwarzGM)

MICHAEL STEINBERG/R

Krásová, Marta (b Protivín, 16 March 1901; d Vráž u Berouna, 20 Feb 1970). Czech mezzo-soprano. She took up singing on the advice of the violinist Ševčík and studied with Olga Borová-Valoušková, Růžena Maturová and, in Vienna, M. Ullanovský. In 1922 she joined the Slovak National Theatre in Bratislava, where under the conductor Oskar Nedbal she changed from soprano to mezzo roles. She made her début at the Prague National Theatre as Azucena (1926) and was a member of the company from 1928 to 1966.

To her musicality, excellent technique, breath control and wide range was allied a great talent as an actress with graceful movement and a rich imagination. She was an outstanding Isabella in Fibich's Bride of Messina, Róza in The Secret, Ježibaba in Rusalka and Death in Rudolf Karel's Death the Neighbour; her non-Czech roles included Amneris, Eboli, Carmen, Gluck's Orpheus and the Countess in The Queen of Spades. Her finest performance was as the Kostelnička in Janáček's Jenůfa. She regularly sang lieder, achieving her greatest success in Dvořák's Biblical Songs and in Mahler. Foerster, Novák and Jirák dedicated songs to her. She appeared as a guest in many opera houses in Europe and in the USA (1937) and made many recordings, including Dvořák's Stabat mater with the Czech PO under Talich. She was made National Artist in 1958.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Pospíšil: 'Písňový večer Marty Krásové' [Krásová's song evening], HRo, v/20 (1952), 32 only

V. Šolín: Marta Krásová (Prague, 1960)

V. Pospíšil: 'Výjimečný zjev českého pěveckého umění' [An exceptional figure of Czech vocal art], HRo, xiv (1961), 144–5

J. Kozák: Českoslovenští koncertni umělci a komorni soubory [Czechoslovak concert artists and chamber ensembles] (Prague, 1964)

V. Procházka, ed.: Národní divadlo a jeho předchůdci [The National Theatre and its predecessors] (Prague, 1988) [incl. list of repertory and discography]

ALENA NĚMCOVÁ

Krasselt. German family of musicians.

(1) (Johann) Gustav Krasselt (b Kohren, 13 Oct 1846; d in or after 1910). Violinist. He became leader of Glauchau's city orchestra in 1869. Three years later he was appointed leader of the Baden-Baden orchestra, a post he held until 1904, though he frequently returned as a guest artist to Glauchau, where his children made their solo débuts. He was also a skilful conductor and composer; his works include an albumleaf and a concert mazurka for violin and piano and a concert mazurka for orchestra. His daughter (Clara) Jenny Krasselt (b Glauchau, 15 Oct 1870; d after 1906), who made her début with Hummel's A♭ Concerto, became a well-known pianist.

(2) (Gustav) Alfred Krasselt (b Glauchau, 3 June 1872; d Eisenach, 27 Sept 1908). Violinist, son of (1) Gustav Krasselt. He studied the violin with Petri and Brodsky in Leipzig and won Joachim's esteem. He was the leader of the newly founded Kaim orchestra in Munich and in 1896 was made leader of the Weimar court orchestra. One of the finest German violinists of his day, he played at the courts of St Petersburg and Vienna and was admired by such conductors as Herman Levi, Hans Richter and Richard Strauss.

(3) Rudolf Krasselt (b Baden-Baden, 1 Jan 1879; d Andernach, 12 April 1954). Cellist, son of (1) Gustav Krasselt. He was a pupil of Julius Klengel and gave recitals in Berlin and Vienna before becoming principal Kapellmeister at the Deutsches Opernhaus in Berlin-Charlottenburg. He was also a lecturer at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik, where he taught Robert Oboussier and Kurt Weill, and until 1943 was Generalmusikdirektor and operatic director of the city of Hanover.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PazdírekH; RiemannL6

A. Einstein: Das neue Musiklexikon (Berlin, 1926) [enlarged trans. of A. Eaglefield-Hull: Dictionary of Modern Music and Musicians, London, 1924/R]

F. Nagler: Das klingende Land (Leipzig, 1936)

H. Sievers: Die Musik in Hannover (Hanover, 1961)

D. Kämper, ed.: Richard Strauss und Franz Wüllner im Briefwechsel (Cologne, 1963)

W. Hüttel: Musikgeschichte von Glauchau und Umgebung (Glauchau, 1995), 145–6, 150, 251, 267

WALTER HÜTTEL

Krastev, Venelin (b Dupnitsa [now Stanke Dimitrov], 22 Sept 1919). Bulgarian musicologist and critic. He graduated from the State Music Academy in Sofia in 1943 and carried on further studies in music history at the Institute of the History of Arts in Moscow (1948–9). Greatly influenced by Soviet musicologists of the 1930s and 1940s, Krastev returned to Sofia in 1949 to hold office in the Committee for Science, Art and Culture; for many years he was also secretary of the musicologists' section of the Union of Bulgarian Composers. Assistant lecturer (1948) and lecturer (1953) in music history at the State Music Academy in Sofia, he became a senior researcher at the Institute for Musicology of the Bulgarian Academy of Sciences in 1971. Apart from two histories of Bulgarian music, Krastev has written numerous monographs on Bulgarian composers. He is active as a concert and opera critic and regularly broadcasts on the concert life of the country.

WRITINGS

Ocherki varkhu razvitieto na balgarskata muzika [Essays on the development of Bulgarian music] (Sofia, 1954)

Dobri Khristov (Sofia, 1954; Russ. trans., 1960)

Petko Staynov (Sofia, 1957)

Aleksander Morfov (Sofia, 1958)

Nasoki v balgarskata masova pesen [Trends in Bulgarian mass songs] (Sofia, 1958)

ed: Entsiklopediya na balgarskata muzikalna kultura [Encyclopedia of Bulgarian music culture] (Sofia, 1967)

'Izpalnitelski problemi na balgarskoto operno i baletno Izkustvo' [Performance problems in Bulgarian opera and ballet], Balgarska muzika (1970), no.3, pp.26–32

Svetoslav Obretenov (Sofia, 1970)

Ochertsi po istoriya na balgarskata muzika [Essays on the history of Bulgarian music] (Sofia, 1970; Russ. trans., 1973)

ed.: Muzikalno-teoretichno i publitsistichno nasledstvo na Dobri Khristov [Dobri Khristov's musical, theoretical and publicist heritage] (Sofia, 1971)

Balgarskata muzikalna kultura: ist. ocerk. [Bulgarian musical culture: historical outline] (Sofia, 1974; Eng trans., 1978)

Profili: Venelin Krastev, i–vi (Sofia, 1976–86) [writings by Krastev on Bulgarian choral societies and composers; incl. biography]

Iz istoriyata na balgarskata muzikalna kultura XIX i nachaloto no XX v [The history of Bulgarian musical culture from the 19th century to the 20th] (Sofia, 1979)

'Nova balgarska muzika '86' [New Bulgarian music, 1986], Balgarsko muzikoznanie, x/3 (1986), 20–34 [incl. Eng. summary]

Articles and reviews in Balgarska muzika and other periodicals

LADA BRASHOVANOVA

Krasteva, Neva (b Sofia, 2 Aug 1946). Bulgarian composer, musicologist and organist. In 1972 she graduated from the Moscow Conservatory, where her teachers included Yury Kholopov (theory) and Royzman (organ); she later studied with Reinberger in Prague and Zürich. In 1974 she was appointed lecturer in counterpoint at the Sofia State Music Academy; two years later she became lecturer in organ. A founder of the first Bulgarian organ school, she gives regular performances.

Krasteva composes mostly for chamber ensembles, often including an organ among the instruments. Her distinctive style is informed by her studies of Renaissance and Baroque music and her knowledge of Bulgarian folk and church music. In the cantata Apokriff, for example, fugues intermingle with fragments of Bulgarian sacred music; there are similar references in her Sonata da chiesa, which contains a dialogue between flute and organ. In her Five Songs from the Mountain of Pirin she unites a spontaneous melismatic style of writing taken from folk music with jazz-like colouristic effects to recall the dramatic gestures of ancient rituals. Her later works draw upon the Orthodox and Catholic musical traditions, creating a dialogue that symbolizes the unity of religions as well as communication.

WORKS
(selective list)

Choral and solo vocal: Mitologichni pesni [Mythological Songs], S, folk vv, org, perc, 1976; Starata ikona [The Old Icon], 1v, org, 1987; Varhat [The Pick] (madrigal), mixed vv, org, 1988; Apokriff (cant.), S, mixed vv, org, 1989; Quantus tremor (cant.), Mez, tpt, org, vc, 1989; Missa Angelus, female chorus, 1991; 5 Songs (D. Debeljanov), female chorus, 1991; Otche nash [Our Father] (St Joannes Koukouzeles), 1v, org, 1993; Reflexii [Reflections] (J.W. von Goethe), 1v, pf, 1994; Rekquiema na Obretenov [Obretenov's Requiem], Ct, mixed chorus, org, 1995

Inst: Heterofoni miniaturi, org, 1974; Sonata da chiesa, fl, org, 1987; 5 Songs from the Mountain of Pirin, solo vv, 1989; Victimae paschali laudes, org, 1990; Sonata, ob, pf, 1991

WRITINGS

'Polifonijata v horovoto tvorcestvo na Svetoslav Obretenov' [Polyphony in Obretenov's choral works], Balgarsko muzikoznanie, ix/1 (1985), 16–29

'Ernst Kurth i negovata Romanticna harmonia' [Kurth and his Romantische Harmonik], Muzikalni horizonti, no.8 (1986), 41–53

'Contrapunctus et compositio: Aspekti na polifonicnata kompozicija' [Contrapunctus and compositio: Aspects of polyphonic creation], Balgarsko muzikoznanie, xviii/4 (1994), 35–71

MAGDALENA MANOLOVA

Kratzer. Polish family of musicians of Austrian descent.

(1) Franciszek Ksawery Kratzer (b Austria, 1731; d Kraków, 3 Aug 1818). Bass and choir trainer. After studying in Vienna he worked in Wieliczka. From 1763 he was a singer in Kraków, and was appointed cantor of Wawel Cathedral in Kraków on 20 February 1768. From 1781 to 1797 he was in charge of the singing school founded by Wacław Sierakowski, and from 1794 to 1806 he was conductor of the Wawel Cathedral choir and singing master to the boy choristers. His memoirs and reminiscences were edited by his son (2) Kazimierz Augustyn Kratzer in 1856.

(2) Kazimierz Augustyn Kratzer (b Kraków, bap. 21 Feb 1778; d Kraków, 19 June 1860). Musician and actor, son of (1) Franciszek Ksawery Kratzer. He studied music at the Sierakowski Singing School (1781–7), and from 1787 was a singer in Wawel Cathedral. Later he was a singer and actor in the Kraków Theatre (1799–1809), and from 1806 cantor and conductor of the Wawel Cathedral choir. He was a member of the Kraków Society of Friends of Music (1817–24) and organized and conducted the choir of the German Amateur Society in Kraków.

(3) Walenty Karol Kratzer (b Kraków, bap. 9 Feb 1780; d Warsaw, 24 April 1855). Composer, singer, actor and conductor, son of (1) Franciszek Ksawery Kratzer. He sang in the choir of Wawel Cathedral (1798–1814), was a singer and actor at the National Theatre in Warsaw (1814–21), and from 1817 was singing master at the Warsaw School for Music and Dramatic Art. In the following year he also joined the staff of the Public School for Elementary Music and the School of Dramatic Art. He taught singing at the Warsaw Conservatory (1826–31) and at the singing school attached to the Wielki Theatre (1835–41), and was also conductor of the Warsaw French and Vaudeville Theatres (1821–9). He composed incidental music and some guitar pieces.

(4) Kazimierz Julian Kratzer (b Kraków, 22 Feb 1844; d Warsaw, 4 Nov 1890). Composer and conductor, grandson of (1) Franciszek Ksawery Kratzer. After studying in Warsaw he appeared, at the age of 12, in the ballet of the Wielki Theatre. From 1864 he was accompanist and répétiteur to the soloists of the Warsaw Opera, and in 1889 was appointed deputy conductor. He composed music for melodramas, and some songs which achieved great popularity.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Przybylski: 'Rodzina Kratzerów' [The Kratzer family], Muzyka, xiv/1 (1969), 34–53

TADEUSZ PRZYBYLSKI

Krätzschmar, Wilfried (b Dresden, 23 March 1944). German composer. He studied at the Carl Maria von Weber Hochschule, Dresden (1962–8), where his teachers included Thilman. After working for a year as music director at the Meiningen Hoftheater (1968–9), he pursued further composition study with Fritz Geissler (1969–71). In 1971 he accepted a post at the Dresden Conservatory, where he founded the Studio Neue Musik in 1990. He was appointed vice-chancellor of the Conservatory in 1994. He has also served as chair of the Saxon division of the German Composer's Union, and co-founder and vice-president of the Saxon Music Council. His numerous awards include the Weber Förderpreis (1971), the Mendelssohn-Stipendium (1971, 1972) and the critic's prize (1990) for possibilimente alla serenata.

Krätzschmar's reputation as a composer was established at the end of the 1970s with orchestral works employing an advanced tonal language: the première of the First Symphony (Dresden, 1979) created an uproar, while the Second 'Explosionen und Cantus' (Berlin, 1978) was a great success. During the 1980s, performances of the Third Symphony 'quasi una fantasia' (Berlin, 1982), the oratorio Heine-Szenen (Leipzig, 1983) and the chamber concerto Canon (Berlin, 1986) were at the centre of debates between supporters of socialist cultural policies and proponents of the avant garde. His works have explored extremely broad spectrums of sound in great detail; compositions for large forces split orchestral grouping into the smallest possible units. Subtle tonal nuances are supported by balanced arcs of tension that discharge explosive power at climatic points. He has also combined quotation or collage with serial and aleatory techniques.

WORKS

Stage: Die Bremer Stadtmusikanten (Märchenstück, G. Kaltofen), 1968

Orch: Konzertante Musik, 1970; Capriccio, 1973; Suoni notturni, fl, chbr orch, 1974; Dynamik, 1976; Kammersinfonie, 6 db, timp, perc, 1976; Ballets imaginaires, chbr orch, 1977; Ophelia-Phantasie, 48 str, perc, 1978; Sketches, hn, ens, 1978; Sym. no.1, 1978; Sym. no.2 'Explosionen und Cantus', 1978; Sym. no.3 'quasi una fantasia', pf, orch, 1980–81; Sym. no.4, 1983–5; Canon, chbr conc., 5 chbr orch, 1984; Die Wettermaschine, 1984; scenario piccolo, pf, ens, 1986; cataracta, 1987; Die Hymnen von den ungesuchten Inseln, 1987; possibilimente alla serenata, chbr ens, 1989; Klanggesächse, 1993; Nachspiel zum Vormittag eines Ubu (Eine kleine Alpträuerei), chbr ens, 1993; Reigen, 1994–5

Vocal: Hölderin-Frag. (F. Hölderin), 2 chorus, fl, hp, pf, timp, tam-tam, 1975; Heine-Szenen (orat, H. Heine), Bar, chorus, perc, hp, str qt, pf, org, orch, 1979–82; ... grüss' ich tausendmal (Heimatlandschaften) (orat), S, A, Bar, children's chorus, youth chorus, chbr chorus, large chorus, orch, 1986–8; und schon jetzt (sequenza lauda), 2 chorus, inst ens, org, timp, perc, 1988–91; other choral works, arrs.

Chbr and solo inst: Epigramme (Music per fiati), 2 tpt, 2 trbn, 1968; 3 Elegien, pf, 1969; 4 Inventions, pf, 1970; Moments musicaux, eng hn, pf, 1970; Stücke, pf, 1971; Sonata bacchica, cl, pf, 1972; Bläsermusik, brass, 1974; Miniaturen, trbn, pf, 1974; Satyr (Scènes imaginaires), bn, pf, 1974; Arlecchino, va, db, 1976; Bekanntschaften, hn, pf, 1976; Quint per fiati I–III, 1976–80: 1 Anakreontische Phantasie; 2 STYX; 3 rests; Nymphenlied, fantasias, 2 fl, 1977; 2 Studies, ob, 1977; Loosening, va, vc, db, 1979–83; Pastelle, viol, hpd, 1980; solitude I–IV, 1980–84: 1 Labyrinth-Puzzle-Spirale, bn; 2 netze, hp; 3 sérénade noir, b drum; 4 tours en silence, va; Str Qt 'Changes', 1984; turns, 6 perc, 1989

Principal publishers: Deutscher Verlag, Peters

BEATE SCHRÖDER-NAUENBURG

Krauklis, Georgy Vil'gel'movich (b Moscow, 12 May 1912). Russian musicologist and teacher. After serving in the war (1941–5), he studied at the Moscow Conservatory (1948–53) with R.I. Gruber (history of music), Zuckermann (analysis of musical forms) and Protopopov (polyphony). He began teaching at the conservatory in 1955, and in 1960 defended his dissertation on Wagner's operatic overtures. In 1984 he completed his second postgraduate degree with a study on the problems of 19th-century western European programme symphonies. He was appointed a professor at the conservatory in 1986 and in 1994 he received the title of Honoured Art Worker of the Russian Federation. Krauklis's research focusses on the history of Romantic European music and he is the author of several books.

WRITINGS

Fortepianniye sonatï F. Shuberta (Moscow, 1963)

Operniye uvertyurï R. Vagnera (diss., Moscow Conservatory, 1960; Moscow, 1964)

Simfonicheskiye poėmï R. Shtrausa (Moscow, 1970)

'Opera Verdi "Otello"', Muzïkal'naya zhizn' (1974), no.23, pp.15–16

Simfonicheskiye poėmï F. Lista (Moscow, 1974)

ed.: Muzïka Avstrii i Germanii XIX veka [The music of Austria and Germany in the 19th century], i, iii (Moscow, 1975–97)

Romanticheskiy programmnïy simfonizm (diss., Moscow Conservatory, 1984; Moscow, 1999

'Vagner i programmnïy simfonizm', Rikhard Vagner: sbornik statey, ed. L.V. Polyakova (Moscow, 1987), 76–95

'Yubiley Ferentsa Lista' [The jubilee of Liszt], SovM (1987), no.3, pp.124–7

VIKTOR VARUNTS

Kraus, Alfredo (b Las Palmas, Canary Islands, 24 Sept 1927; d Madrid, 10 Sept 1999). Spanish tenor. A pupil of Mercedes Llopart, he made his début in 1956 at Cairo in Rigoletto and Tosca and was soon appearing in various Italian theatres, making his La Scala début in 1958. He then sang in Spain, at Covent Garden (1959, Edgardo opposite Sutherland's Lucia) and again at La Scala (1960, Elvino), where he frequently returned. He also sang frequently in the USA, particularly at the Metropolitan where he made his début in 1966 in Rigoletto and subsequently sang Nemorino, Ernesto, Tonio (La fille du régiment), Gounod's Romeo and other roles. Kraus's voice was smooth, bright and well schooled, with an extensive top register up to d″. He was considered the best light, lyric tenor of his generation, and the elegance and stylishness of his singing, combined with warmth of expression and a handsome stage presence, made him the ideal interpreter of such aristocratic roles as Don Ottavio, Almaviva, Alfredo, Faust and Massenet's Des Grieux, Werther and Hoffmann, which he sang at Covent Garden in 1991. He continued singing into his 70s with little deterioration in his tone quality. He recorded extensively; among his early sets, his Ferrando in Böhm's Così fan tutte and Fenton in Solti's Falstaff reveal his plangent tone and elegant style at their best, as does his Alfredo to Callas's Violetta in a live recording of La traviata from Lisbon (1958). His later recording of Werther is a valuable souvenir of his work in French opera.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Celletti: 'Alfredo Kraus', Opera, xxvi (1975), 17–21
E. Forbes: 'Alfredo Kraus and Werther', Opera, xlii (1991), 1131–6

RODOLFO CELLETTI/ALAN BLYTH

Kraus, Ernst (b Erlangen, 8 June 1863; d Wörthsee, 6 Sept 1941). German tenor. He studied in Munich with Schimon-Regan, and later in Milan with Cesare Galliera. He made his début at Mannheim in 1893 as Tamino; after two seasons with the Damrosch Opera Company in the USA he was engaged as leading Heldentenor at the Royal Opera House, Berlin (later Staatsoper), from 1898 to 1924. He sang regularly at Bayreuth from 1899 to 1909 as Walther, Erik, Siegmund and Siegfried, and created Heinrich in Ethel Smyth's Der Wald (1902). He sang the title role in the German première of Dalibor (1904) and Herod in the first London Salome at Covent Garden in 1910, having already appeared there between 1900 and 1907 in the Wagnerian repertory. He sang at the Metropolitan during the 1903–4 season, making his début as Siegmund. Kraus was one of the earliest Wagner singers to record extensively, the early process catching some hardness in his forceful tenor. His son RICHARD KRAUS was a conductor.

HAROLD ROSENTHAL/ALAN BLYTH

Kraus, Joseph Martin (b Miltenberg am Main, 20 June 1756; d Stockholm, 15 Dec 1792). German-Swedish composer. He received his earliest musical education in the central German town of Buchen im Odenwald and during the years 1768–73 was educated in Mannheim, where his teachers included members of the Mannheim Kapelle. He studied at the universities of Mainz (1773–4, philosophy), Erfurt (1774–5, law) and, after an interruption due to family troubles, Göttingen (1776–8, jurisprudence). During this period he published a collection of poems under the title Versuch von Schäfersgedichte (Mainz, 1773) and a drama Tolon (Frankfurt, 1776), as well as writing a number of sacred works, including the oratorios Die Geburt Jesu and Der Tod Jesu. While in Göttingen he became acquainted with members of the Göttinger Hainbund, a Sturm und Drang literary circle under whose influence he wrote the treatise Etwas von und über Musik fürs Jahr 1777 (Frankfurt, 1778; facs. with commentary by F.W. Riedel, Munich, 1977), which devotes a large section to a thorough critique of Anton Schweitzer's opera Alceste. In 1778 a Swedish student, Carl Stridsberg, persuaded Kraus to accompany him to Stockholm and try his fortune at the court of Gustavus III.

For three years Kraus struggled in poverty to obtain an official position; his Sturm und Drang opera Azire was rejected by the court, although he became known as a conductor at the public concert series. During this period he wrote articles for Stockholms Posten and Dagligt Allehanda. In 1781 he was finally elected to the Swedish Royal Academy of Music; his opera Proserpin then won him the post of assistant kapellmästare at court and at the Royal Opera. A commission to provide the inaugural work for the new theatre in 1782 (Aeneas i Cartago) was undermined at the last minute, and he was sent by Gustavus III on a study journey throughout Europe to observe the latest trends in the theatre. This four-year grand tour took him to Germany, Austria, Italy, France and England. In Vienna he met Haydn, who considered him an original genius on the level of Mozart, Salieri and Gluck, who stated: 'That man has a great style, the like of which I have found in no one else' (according to Kraus's biographer F.S. Silverstolpe). Here he also became a member of the same masonic lodge as Mozart.

In Italy he wrote elaborate descriptions of the theatres in Naples and Rome as he accompanied his patron on a state visit, and his lengthy review of Piccinni's Didon, which he saw in Paris in 1785, was published (Mannheim, 1786). In London he attended the second Handel Commemoration before returning late in 1786 to Stockholm. In 1787 he was appointed chief educational administrator at the Royal Academy of Music, and the following year succeeded Uttini as hovkapellmästare. A popular composer at the public concerts and for the Stockholm theatres, his music included the ballet Fiskarena (1789), the drama with music Soliman II (1789) and a large portion of the pasticcio Äfventyraren (1791) in addition to numerous shorter stage works. He achieved a reputation for the discipline of the Hovkapell and became one of the earliest leaders to conduct almost exclusively with a baton. He also became a close friend of the poet and singer Carl Michael Bellman, with whom, along with other intellectuals, he formed the Diktarkretsen (Poetry Society), a literary and musical circle. He died of tuberculosis shortly after the assassination of his patron Gustavus III at a masked ball.

Kraus can be considered the most original and notable composer in Sweden during the Gustavian period. His German education, coupled with his experiences during his grand tour, gave him a cosmopolitan outlook that was absorbed into his music. As early as 1778 he declared himself an ardent admirer of Gluck and Grétry, who served as his models and whose works he knew from memory. His participation in the debate on opera in the Stockholm newspapers Stockholms Posten and Dagligt Allehanda, 1778–82, shows much concern with the fusion of drama and music. He had difficulty, however, in getting his own major operas performed. Azire, written to give the Swedes 'something original', as he put it, was ignored, and Proserpin probably had only a single private performance. Because of intrigues, his greatest work, Aeneas i Cartago, had its première only in 1799, seven years after his death. During the period 1787–92, on the other hand, he was a popular composer whose other music for the stage was highly prized.

Kraus's musical style is highly original, with a distinctive sense of lyrical melody, bold harmonies which often anticipate Beethoven or Schubert, and a complex rhythmic structure, particularly in the inner voices. His overriding compositional premise was the infusion of drama into all genres of music, a notion that stems from his contact with the literary Sturm und Drang. His operas, with their through-composed recitatives and extensive use of choruses and ballet, show his relationship with Gluck; he developed dramatic unity through the use of motivic devices, and he had a keen sense of the inner feelings of his characters, whose moods are often underscored at the expense of virtuoso display. In the serious operas his writings can be terse and emotional, while the comic ones show lightness of touch. A master at developing the operatic epic, Kraus's major works Proserpin and Aeneas i Cartago create realistic scenas that give life and drama to classical stories; in the latter, the tragic love between Dido and Aeneas is played out against gigantic storms, temple sacrifices, a hunt and a final battle with three armies on stage.

Kraus's sacred works, written mostly during his early career, frequently use plainchant as the musical foundation, in addition to having highly complex counterpoint. The oratorio Der Tod Jesu, to which Kraus himself wrote the text, is based upon Graun's more famous work, although it consists mostly of philosophical reflections on the Crucifixion. A motet, Stella coeli, written in 1783 for the Benedictine monastery in Amorbach, contains an extraordinarily complex fugue and was apparently written in only two days, while Handel's influence can be felt in the Te Deum finale of 1785.

Kraus was a sensitive and precise orchestrator, using a rich palette to create varying textures and moods in both dramatic and symphonic music. The Symphony in C minor, hailed by Haydn as one of the most ingenious works of the period, borrows from Gluck's Iphigénie en Aulide in the opening before devolving into powerful, driving rhythms and extensive internal thematic development. The symphonic music often has a dramatic function; one of the earliest works is characterized as a Sinfonia buffa, while the final two, the Riksdagsmusik (a march derived from Mozart's Idomeneo and a Sinfonia da chiesa) and the Symphonie funèbre, were written for state occasions, the former for the parliament of 1789 and the latter for the funeral procession of his patron Gustavus III.

Kraus was also active as a song composer, writing works in seven languages. As a poet himself, he was always sensitive to the emotions evoked by the text, from the cynical philosophy of Die Welt nach Rousseau to the Romantic through-composed ode Skulda winkt and the poignant Farväl mitt kära barn. Of particular note are the short piano cantata series Fiskarstugan to texts by Bellman. Kraus's chamber works include five sonatas for violin and fortepiano, including one with scordatura, a trio, ten string quartets (including six published in 1784 as his op.1 by Hummel) and a flute quintet. These are characterized by considerable rhythmic freedom, extensive use of concertante writing, particularly of the viola and cello, and long lyrical lines. The keyboard music shows the influence of C.P.E. Bach.

WORKS

MSS in S-Uu unless otherwise stated

Catalogue: B. van Boer: Joseph Martin Kraus (1756–1792): a Systematic-Thematic Catalogue of his Musical Works and Source Study (Stuyvesant, NY, 1998)

STAGE

Azire, 1778 (Spl, 3, C. Stridsberg), unperf., only autograph frags. extant

Proserpin (Op, 1, J.H. Kellgren, after Gustavus III and P. Quinault), Ulriksdal Castle, 1 June 1781, S-St

Aeneas i Cartago, eller Dido och Aeneas, 1782–91 (lyric tragedy, prol., 5, Kellgren after Gustavus III and J.-J. le Franc de Pompignan: Didon), Royal Opera, 18 Nov 1799, A-Wn, S-Skma, St; 2 ovs., ed. W. Lebermann (Wiesbaden, 1956)

Le bon seigneur, 1784–6 (oc, 1)

Oedip, 1785 (lyric tragedy, 3), 1 act completed, lost

Zélia, ou L'origine de la félicité (melodrama, 1, J. d'Invilliers), Paris, 1786, lost

Fintbergs bröllop [Fintberg's Marriage] (comedy with song, 2, C.G. von Holthusen), Munkbro, 7 Jan 1788

Fricorpsen, eller Dalkarlarne [The Free Corps, or Men from Dalacarlia] (comedy with song, 1, D. Björn), Bollhuset, 1 Nov 1788, lost

Fiskarena [The Fishers] (pantomine-ballet, choreog. A. Bournonville), Stockholm, Royal Opera, 9 March 1789, St

Soliman den andra, eller De tre sultaninnorna [Soliman II, or The Three Sultanas] (drama with music, 3, divertissement, J.G. Oxenstierna, after C.S. Favart), Royal Dramatic, 22 Sept 1789, St, Skma

Marknaden [The Market Place] (Spl, 1, Björn), Munkbro, 8 Oct 1792, lost

Entr'actes and ballet for Amphitryon (tragedy, Molière), Paris, 1784; 2 ballet movts for Gluck: Armide, Stockholm, 24 Jan 1787, St; 1 aria for Visittimman [The Visiting Hour] (comic play, after Poisinet: Le cercle), in Musikaliskt tidsfördrif (1789); 1 aria for Mexikanska systrarna [The Mexican Sisters] (play with songs, Sparrschöld), Stockholm, Bollhuset, 13 Oct 1789, in Musikaliskt tidsfördrif (1790); music in Födelsedagen [The Birthday] (comedy with song, 1, Gustavus III and Björn), Royal Opera, 20 Nov 1790, lost; music in Äfventyraren, eller Resan till månens ö [The Adventures, or The Journey to the Isle of the Moon] (Spl, 2, J. Lannerstierna), 1791, St; 9 choruses for Oedipe (tragedy, 3, G.G. Alderbeth), Stockholm, 10 March 1792; 2 arias, 2 trios, qt for Le bon seigneur (comic play with music); incid music for Olympie (tragedy, Kellgren); 2 pantomines, 1768–72

OTHER VOCAL

Sacred: Der Tod Jesus (orat, J.M. Kraus), 1776, ed. B. van Boer (Madison, 1987); Die Geburt Jesu (orat, Kraus), lost; Kom din herdestaff att bära [Come Bear your Shepherd's Crook] (cant., C.M. Bellman), D, 1790, St; Fracto demum sacramento, motet, D, 1776; Stella coeli, motet, C, 1783, A-Wn; 2 sacred arias, 1776; Mot en alsvädig magt [Towards an Almighty Power], aria, E♭, 1782, S-Skma; Förkunnom högt [Proclaim on High], contrafactum motet on lost Kraus original, C, Sk; Miserere, c/F, 1774, D-Bsb; Requiem, d, 1775; TeD, D, 1776; TeD finale, g/E♭, 1785–7, S-Skma; other miscellaneous and lost works

Secular, orch acc.: Cant. for the king's birthday (C.C. Gröning), 4vv, 1782; Den frid et menlöst hjerta njuter [An Innocent Heart Enjoys Peace] (cant.), 1782, Skma; Begravningskantat for Gustavus III (C.G. Leopold), 4 solo vv, 4vv, 1792, vs (Stockholm, 1792), ed. in MMS, ix (1979); Chorus, 3 solo vv, 4 vv, from Prol for birthday of Duke Carl of Södermanland, Stockholm, 7 Oct 1791; 4 small cants. (P. Metastasio); 20 concert arias and duets, incl. Son Pietosa (Leipzig, 1797) and Ma tu tremi (Stockholm, 1883), pubd as Plus de crainte, vs (Paris, *c*1900)

Secular, pf acc.: 7 small cants., 1–4vv (Bellman), incl. Elegie, in Musikaliskt tidsfördrif (1793), Fiskarstugan [The Little Fishing Hut] (Stockholm, 1794), ed. (Stockholm, 1964); 56 Lieder in Dan., Dutch, Fr., Ger., It., Swed., incl. 20 airs et chansons (Leipzig, 1797/R), Atis och Camilla (G.P. Creutz), in Musikaliskt tidsfördrif (1793), Se källen, se bålen [See the Spring, See the Grove], zither acc., in Musikaliskt tidsfördrif (1794), Ynglingarne, pubd as Meerstrum, AMZ, iii/3 (1801), ed. in Engländer (1943); Die Mutter bei der Wiege (Die Nase), attrib. Mozart, Cäcilia, xxv (1846); other works, Skma

Canons: Meine Mutter hat Gänse (M. Claudius), 4vv; Sumus hic sedentes (Carmen biblicum), canon and choruses, 4vv; Amici r'in tavola (S. Maffei), canon and choruses, 4vv

INSTRUMENTAL

Syms.: 6, F, C, C, c♯, E♭, D (Riksdagssymfoni), 1775–89, ed. in The Symphony 1720–1840, ser. F, ii (New York, 1982); c, 1783, (Leipzig, 1797), ed. W. Lebermann (Wiesbaden, 1956), ed. in MMS, ii (1960); Symphonie funèbre (Stockholm, 1792), ed. Lebermann (Wiesbaden, 1957), ed. in MMS, ix (1979); D, 1782–3 (Paris, *c*1787–8), ed. Lebermann (Wiesbaden, 1956); e, attrib. G. Cambini (Paris, 1787); F, attrib. Cambini (Paris, 1787); Sinfonia con fugato per la chiesa, 1789, ed. Lebermann (Wiesbaden, 1957–8); Ov. per la chiesa, d, 1789–90, S-Skma, St; Sinfonia buffa, F, 1769–72; A, 1769–72; 6, 1776, lost; other syms., 1769–75, 1784–6, lost

Other orch: Vn Conc., C, 1777, rev. 1783, ed. Lebermann (Wiesbaden, 1959); Conc., 2 vn, 1769–72, lost; Fl Conc., 1777, lost; 2 symphonies concertantes, 1777, lost; Riksdagsmarsch, rev. march from Mozart, Idomeneo (1.ii), D, Skma, L, St; Contradances, lost

Chbr: Qnt, D, fl, str qt, op.7, 1783 (Paris, *c*1799), ed. Lebermann (Wiesbaden, 1959), ed. A. Hoffmann (Wolfenbüttel, 1961); 6 quatuours concertants (Berlin, 1784), ed. Hoffmann (Wolfenbüttel, 1961); 2 qts, HÄ, before 1778; Qt, C, 1782, Skma, ed. Hoffmann (Wolfenbüttel, 1961); Pf trio, D, 1788, Skma, ed. Lebermann (Wiesbaden, 1959); 5 sonatas, vn, pf; sonata, D, fl, va, 1778, ed. in NM, lxxvi (1931), ed. H.-J. Kraus (Frankfurt, 1981)

Pf solo: Due sonate per il Forte Piano (Stockholm, 1788); Sonata for Countess Ingelheim, lost; Rondo, F (n.p., n.d.); Svenska dans, C; 2 Scherzenminuetten, C, c; Allegro, D, pf, vn, acc., Skma

Larghetto, G; Tema con variazioni (Scherzo), C, in Musikaliskt tidsfördrif (1793), also pubd as Minuetto con XII variazioni, pf, vn acc. (London, 1791), attrib. I. Pleyel, also as Sonatina with 12 Variations (London, *c*1805), attrib. J. Haydn

Org: 6 preludes, Skma

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Travel diary, letters, S-Skma, Uu, D-Bsb, BUCH

Sketches for a musical dictionary, S-Skma

C. Stridsberg: Åminnelsetal öfver Kraus (Stockholm, 1798)

F.S. Silverstolpe: Biographie af Kraus (Stockholm, 1833)

B. Anrep-Nordin: Studier över Joseph Martin Kraus (Stockholm, 1924); orig. pubd in STMf, v (1923), 15–20, 55–80, 117–38 and vi (1924), 16–41, 49–93

K.F. Schreiber: 'Verzeichnis der musikalischen Werke von Jos. Kraus', AMW, vii (1925), 477–94

K. Meyer: 'Ein Musiker des Göttinger Hainbundes, Joseph Martin Kraus', ZMw, ix (1926–7), 468–86

K.F. Schreiber: Biographie über den Odenwälder komponisten Joseph Martin Kraus (Buchen, 1928)

R. Engländer: 'Kraus' Proserpin: ett bidrag till Kraus' musikdramatiska stil', STMf, xxi (1939), 48–67

S. Walin: Beiträge zur Geschichte der schwedischen Sinfonik (Stockholm, 1941)

R. Engländer: Joseph Martin Kraus und die Gustavianische Oper (Uppsala, 1943)

V. Bungardt: Joseph Martin Kraus (1756–1792): ein Meister des klassischen Klavierliedes (Regensburg, 1973)

Joseph Martin Kraus: ein Meister im Gustavianschen Kulturleben: Stockholm 1978

I. Leux-Henschen: Joseph Martin Kraus in seinen Briefen (Stockholm, 1978)

B. van Boer: 'The Works of Joseph Martin Kraus', STMf, lxii (1980), 5–21

Joseph Martin Kraus in seiner Zeit: Buchen 1980

Kraus und das Gustavianische Stockholm: Stockholm 1982

B. van Boer: 'A Rediscovered Sacred Work by Joseph Martin Kraus: Some Observations on his Creative Process', STMf, lxv (1983), 109–26

B. van Boer: Dramatic Cohesion in the Music of Joseph Martin Kraus (Lewiston, NY, 1989)

I. Mattsson, ed.: Gustavian Opera: an Interdisciplinary Reader in Swedish Opera, Dance and Theatre 1771–1809 (Stockholm, 1991)

F.W. Riedel: ... das Himmlische lebt in seinen Tönen (Mannheim, 1992)

H. Åstrand: Joseph Martin Kraus, det stora undantaget (Stockholm, 1993)

B. van Boer, ed.: Gustav III and the Swedish Stage: Opera, Theatre and other Foibles: Essays in Honor of Hans Åstrand (Lewiston, NY, 1993)

L. Jonsson and A. Ivarsdotter-Johnson: Musiken i Sverige, ii: Frihetstid och Gustaviansk tid, 1720–1810 (Stockholm, 1993)

BERTIL H. VAN BOER

Kraus, Lili (b Budapest, 4 March 1905; d Asheville, NC, 6 Nov 1986). British pianist of Hungarian birth. She took her first piano lessons at the age of six, and two years later entered the Royal Academy of Music, Budapest, where her teachers included Kodály and Bartók. In 1922 she graduated with a first-class degree, and travelled to Vienna to study with Steuermann and Schnabel at the conservatory, where she was appointed a full professor in 1925. After teaching there for six years, she embarked on a world concert tour, and rapidly established herself during the 1930s as a successful soloist. About this time a number of valuable recordings of Mozart, Haydn and Beethoven, both solos and chamber music, did much to spread her fame as an exceptionally clear and musicianly interpreter of the Classics. In 1942 at the start of another tour she was taken prisoner by the Japanese in Java, and for three years was interned. After the war she toured Australia and New Zealand, and for her 'unrelenting efforts in the aid of countries in need' was granted New Zealand citizenship. She returned to the international circuit in 1948 and then travelled widely, giving recitals and playing with leading orchestras. A pianist of considerable virtuosity and stamina, she played 25 Mozart concertos in a single series in New York in 1966–7; and the next season she gave there the complete Mozart sonatas. From 1968 to 1983 she was artist-in-residence at Texas Christian University in Fort Worth, Texas.

DOMINIC GILL

Kraus, Otakar (b Prague, 10 Dec 1909; d London, 28 July 1980). British baritone of Czech birth. He studied in Prague and with Fernando Carpi in Milan, made his début at Brno in 1935 as Amonasro, then sang with the Bratislava Opera (1936–9). He settled in England in 1940 and appeared at the Savoy Theatre in that year in Musorgsky's The Fair at Sorochintsï. From 1943 to 1946 he sang with the Carl Rosa Opera Company, created Tarquinius in The Rape of Lucretia (1946) and joined the English Opera Group. After a season with the Netherlands Opera (1950–51), he joined the Covent Garden company and sang there until 1973, creating Diomede in Troilus and Cressida (1954) and King Fisher in The Midsummer Marriage (1955). He was also a notable Amonasro, Iago, Scarpia and Orestes. His formidable Alberich was much admired at Covent Garden, where he sang under Kempe; Kempe then took him to Bayreuth, where he repeated the role (1960–62) and recorded it. In 1951 he created Nick Shadow in The Rake's Progress at Venice (which was recorded) and repeated the part at La Scala and Glyndebourne. After leaving Covent Garden he taught in London; his pupils included Gwynne Howell, Robert Lloyd and John Tomlinson. Kraus established himself as a first-rate singing actor, always a vital and striking stage figure and a master of make-up.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Rosenthal: 'Otakar Kraus', Opera, xxiv (1973), 1067–72

HAROLD ROSENTHAL/ALAN BLYTH

Krause, Christian Gottfried (b Winzig [now Wińsko], Silesia, bap. 17 April 1719; d Berlin, 4 May 1770). German music aesthetician and composer. He received instruction on the violin, keyboard and timpani from his father, a town musician also named Christian Krause, but decided upon a career in law, with music as an amateur pursuit. After juristic studies at the University of Frankfurt an der Oder (1740–45), he became a legal secretary to Count Rothenburg in Berlin by the end of 1745. With his appointment as lawyer to the municipal council in 1753 his prestige increased rapidly, and he acquired a large home in Potsdam in which he established a highly popular music salon, attracting writers, poets and philosophers as well as musicians. The performances which he held there during and after the Seven Years War were among the few concert series of serious music in Berlin. He later became Justizrat of the High Prussian Court (probably in 1762) and held that post until his death.

Although Krause composed several cantatas for private performances, some lieder, a few instrumental pieces and a Singspiel, he is most important as a writer and music compiler. His Von der musikalischen Poesie, written by 1747, was one of the first treatises dealing with the setting of words to music. Its publication five years later marked the beginning of a new era for the lied, and the foundation of the first Berlin lied school. In this work Krause advocated a return to folklike simplicity, in contrast to the instrument-orientated style of the Leipzig lied school led by Sperontes. He cited French folksong as an ideal (perhaps a political gesture reflecting the king's preference for French culture) and called for unornamented lieder with simple accompaniments which could be eliminated without destroying the continuity of the vocal line.

Krause soon began to compile lieder of the style he wished to encourage. He collaborated with the poet Karl Ramler in gathering and editing 31 lieder which they published as Oden mit Melodien (1753); a second volume followed in 1755. Neither Krause, Ramler, the poets nor the composers were named in these volumes or others Krause edited, presumably because he wished the lieder to be judged solely on their intrinsic merit. However, Friedrich Marpurg published an index to the first volume of Oden mit Melodien (Historisch-kritische Beyträge zur Aufnahme der Musik, i, 1754, p.55) which showed that Krause himself had composed five songs for it; among the other composers represented were C.P.E. Bach, Quantz and J.F. Agricola, and the poets included J.W.L. Gleim, Friedrich von Hagedorn, E. von Kleist and G.E. Lessing. Krause and Ramler's last and largest compilation was the four-volume Lieder der Deutschen mit Melodien (1767–8), which incorporated most of the lieder from their earlier collections.

WORKS

Lieder edns: [62] Oden mit Melodien, i–ii (Berlin, 1753–5); Oden mit Melodien (Berlin, 1761), doubtful; [240] Lieder der Deutschen mit Melodien, i–iv (Berlin, 1767–8)

Cants.: Der Tod Jesu (K.W. Ramler), *c*1758, D-Mbs [incl. recit by G.P. Telemann]; Gelobet sey der Herr, 4vv, orch, D-Bsb; Unendlicher, in allen Himmeln tönt Dein Lob, 8vv, orch, B-Bc, doubtful; rev. edn of Telemann: Ino, D-Bsb; 8 cants., incl. Lob der Gottheit (Schlegel), 1758 and Pygmalion (Ramler), 1768, lost, cited in Beaujean and MGG1

Other vocal: 8 preussische Kriegslieder in den Feldzügen 1756 und 1757 von einem Grenadier (J.W.L. Gleim) (Berlin, 1758); Der lustige Schulmeister (Spl, F. Nicolai), Berlin, 1766, lost; new arias for G.F. Handel: Alexander's Feast (Ramler), *c*1766, lost; Lied, D-Bsb; several lieder in contemporary anthologies

Inst: 4 syms., formerly Berlin, Deutsche Staatsbibliothek; 2 trios, fl, vn, b, lost; 2 trios, 2 fl, b, lost; 6 sonatas, hpd, Dl; a few kbd pieces in contemporary collections

WRITINGS

Lettre à Mr. le Marquis de B sur la différence entre la musique italienne et françoise (Berlin, 1748; Ger. trans. in F.W. Marpurg: Historisch-kritische Beyträge zur Aufnahme der Musik, i (Berlin, 1754/R), 1–46 [incl. Marpurg's notes])

Von der musikalischen Poesie (Berlin, 1752, 2/1753*R* [Eng. trans. in Mallard])

'Thusnelde, ein Singspiel', in F.W. Marpurg: Historisch-kritische Beyträge zur Aufnahme der Musik, i (Berlin, 1754/R), 93–141 [review]

Other articles in contemporary periodicals

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; GerberL; GerberNL; KretzschmarG; MGG1 (H. Becker)

C. von Ledebur: Tonkünstler-Lexicon Berlin's (Berlin, 1861/R)

J. Beaujean: Christian Gottfried Krause: sein Leben und seine Persönlichkeit im Verhältnis zu den musikalischen Problemen des 18. Jahrhunderts als Ästhetiker und Musiker (Dillingen an der Donau, 1930)

P.F. Marks: 'The Rhetorical Element in Musical Sturm und Drang: Christian Gottfried Krause's Von der musikalischen Poesie', IRASM, ii (1971), 49–64; also in MR, xxxiii (1972), 93–107

J.H. Mallard: A Translation of Christian Gottfried Krause's Von der musikalischen Poesie, with a Critical Essay on his Sources and the Aesthetic Views of his Time (diss., U. of Texas, Austin, 1978)

F. Beinroth: 'Ansätze zur Herausbildung ausdrucksästhetischer Positionen und ihre Einflussnahme auf die "Berliner Schule"', Neue Aspekte zur Musikästhetik und Musikgeschichte im 18. Jahrhundert: Potsdam 1983, 21–36

F. Beinroth: 'Zu Fragen des Wandels in der Affekten- und Nachahmungslehre in der Musikästhetik des 18. Jahrhunderts unter besonderer Berücksichtigung der "Berliner Schule"', Carl Philipp Emanuel Bach in unserer Zeit: Frankfurt an der Oder 1984, 17–25

RAYMOND A. BARR

Krause, Ernst (b Dresden, 28 May 1911; d Berlin, 8 Aug 1997). German music critic. He studied the violin and piano at the Hoch Conservatory and musicology with Gerber, Adorno and Gennrich at Frankfurt University (1932–6). He began his career as a music critic on the Frankfurt General-Anzeiger (1934) and then worked in Dresden, first for the Dresdner Nachrichten (1939–41) and later as arts editor of the Sächsische Zeitung (1946–50); having moved to Berlin he joined the Nationalzeitung, Sonntag, Theater der Zeit and Musik und Gesellschaft. His comments on East German musical life also appeared in numerous foreign journals. His book on Richard Strauss, which was translated into seven languages, established his reputation as a Strauss specialist in the Dresden tradition and as a writer capable of fusing scholarly insight with an essayist's fluency. A specialist in opera, his comprehensive guide, Oper von A–Z (1961), was frequently reprinted.

WRITINGS

Briefe über die Oper (Dresden, 1950)

Richard Strauss: Gestalt und Werk (Leipzig, 1955, 8/1990; Eng. trans., 1964)

Oper von A–Z (Leipzig, 1961, 10/1978)

Opernsänger: 44 Porträts aus der Welt des Musiktheaters (Berlin, 1962, 3/1965 as Opernsänger: 48 Porträts . . .)

Die grossen Opernbühnen Europas (Kassel, 1966)

Walter Felsenstein auf der Probe (Berlin, 1971)

Werner Egk: Oper und Ballett (Wilhelmshaven, 1971)

with E. Richter: David Oistrach: ein Arbeitsporträt (Berlin, 1973)

'Revolution und Dialektik: Paul Dessaus Musiktheater-Werke', Musikbühne 74 (1974), 59–68

Opernsänger: 60 Porträts (Berlin, 1979)

ed.: Richard Strauss: Dokumente (Leipzig, 1980)

Schreiben über Musik (Berlin, 1981, 2/1985/R as Operntagebuch: Essays, Berichte, Kritiken)

Puccini: Beschreibung eines Welterfolgs (Berlin, 1984/R)

HORST SEEGER/HANS-GÜNTER OTTENBERG

Krause, Martin (b Lobstädt, nr Leipzig, 17 June 1853; d Plattling, Bavaria, 2 Aug 1918). German pianist and teacher. He studied at the Leipzig Conservatory, where his professors were Wenzel and Reinecke. Following two years of teaching privately, he gave concerts with success from 1878 to 1880, but then his career was halted by a nervous breakdown. Krause's meeting with Liszt in 1882 proved formative, and besides becoming a pupil and one of the composer's foremost advocates (he was a founder of the Lisztverein in Leipzig in 1885), he attempted to make a systematic study of Liszt's technique and teaching methods. As an interpreter, however, his insights into Beethoven's music were of equal significance. After 1900 Krause taught in Dresden and Munich. In 1904 he became a professor at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, where his pupils included Edwin Fischer, Rosita Renard and, most importantly, Claudio Arrau, who paid tribute to him as an authentic communicator of the Lisztian tradition.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Weitzmann: A History of Pianoforte-Playing and Pianoforte-Literature (New York, 1897)

J. Horowitz: Conversations with Arrau (New York, 1982, 2/1992)

JAMES METHUEN-CAMPBELL

Krause, Tom (b Helsinki, 5 July 1934). Finnish baritone. Studying medicine at Helsinki he became interested in jazz and dance music, developing a talent for singing that took him to the Vienna Music Academy in 1956. He made his operatic début in Berlin (1959) as Escamillo and quickly gained a reputation in opera and concert throughout Germany and Scandinavia. His career was based in Hamburg, where, with the basic repertory of Mozart, Verdi and Wagner, he also appeared in such rarities as Rossini's La pietra del paragone (1963) and Handel's Jephtha (1964); he was awarded the rank of Kammersänger there in 1967. The Herald in Lohengrin was his first role at Bayreuth (1962) and the Count in Capriccio his first in England (1963, Glyndebourne). He sang in the American première of Britten's War Requiem and made his début at the Metropolitan Opera as Mozart's Count Almaviva in 1967, reappearing there every season until 1973. From 1968, when he performed Don Giovanni, he has appeared regularly at the Salzburg Festival, singing in Messiaen's Saint François d'Assise there in 1998. His Paris Opéra début occurred in 1973 and he has also sung at La Scala and Covent Garden. Krause's other major roles include Don Alfonso, Guglielmo, Pizarro, Amonasro, Amfortas, Titurel (which he sang at the Opéra Bastille, Paris, in 1999) and Golaud. He took part in the premières of Krenek's Der goldene Bock (1964) and Searle's Hamlet (1968) both in Hamburg. His recordings include recitals of German lieder and songs by Musorgsky and Sibelius as well as a wide range of religious and operatic music; all show a firm, resonant voice, a sound technique and a power of vivid characterization.

J.B. STEANE/R

Krauss, Clemens (b Vienna, 31 March 1893; d Mexico City, 16 May 1954). Austrian conductor. He was the son of the Viennese actress and singer Clementine Krauss, and great-nephew of the soprano Gabrielle Krauss. At the age of eight he became a treble in the Hofkapelle. In 1912 he went to Brno as chorus director, conducting his first opera there the following year. He was at Riga (1913–14), Nuremberg (1915–16) and Szczecin (1916–21), which gave him frequent opportunities of hearing Nikisch in Berlin, before returning to Austria in 1921 as conductor of the opera and symphony concerts at Graz. In the following year he transferred to Vienna as conductor at the Staatsoper and director of the conducting class at the State Academy of Music. From 1924 to 1929 he was opera Intendant at Frankfurt and director of the Museum Concerts. In 1929 he was back in Vienna as director of the Staatsoper, and in 1930 gave the first performance in that city of Wozzeck. He became director of the Berlin Staatsoper in 1935. The climax of his official career came in 1937 with his appointment as Intendant of the Munich Opera. During the war he was also active at Salzburg with the Festivals, and with the direction and reorganization of the Mozarteum. In 1943, after the destruction in an air raid of the Nationaltheater in Munich, Krauss left for Vienna to conduct the Vienna PO in broadcast concerts.

As his long association with this orchestra implies, Krauss had no lack of success in the concert hall. Yet by blood and temperament he was a man of the theatre, a born opera conductor with a sharp eye for visual as well as musical detail, and a gift for administration. The flair and judgment he showed in his operatic career deserted him in political matters. He made no bones about his Nazi sympathies: he was ready to take over the première of Strauss's Arabella (1933) when Fritz Busch, for whom the opera was intended, had been hounded out of Dresden; his immediate predecessors in Berlin (Kleiber) and Munich (Knappertsbusch) had both resigned for political reasons. Against these acts of public indiscretion must be weighed private deeds of kindness to Jewish artists in trouble. After the war he was forbidden to conduct until 1947, when he resumed work in Vienna, by directing opera at the Theater an der Wien (the Staatsoper was not yet rebuilt) and concerts with the Philharmonic. He made many visits abroad (London included; his Covent Garden début had been in 1934) with the Opera, with the Philharmonic or as guest conductor. His sudden death occurred on one of these tours.

Krauss was closely associated with Richard Strauss both as friend and interpreter. Apart from Arabella, he gave the first public performances of Friedenstag (1938, Munich), Capriccio (1942, Munich), of which he wrote the libretto (with the collaboration of Strauss and Hans Swarowsky), and Die Liebe der Danäe (1952, Salzburg). He married the singer Viorica Ursuleac, a noted exponent of Strauss soprano roles, whom he accompanied in recitals. Krauss had a wide repertory, embracing the German-Austrian classics and much beyond. For the music of the other Strauss, Johann, he had an exceptionally light and happy touch. The Clemens Krauss Archive in Vienna contains his non-commercial as well as commercial recordings.

Clemens Krauss

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Gregor: Clemens Krauss: eine musikalische Sendung (Vienna and Zürich, 1953)
O. von Pandor: Clemens Krauss in München (Munich, 1955)
D. Wooldridge: Conductor's World (London, 1970)
G.K. Kende: Höchste Leistung aus begeistertem Herzen: Clemens Krauss als Direktor der Wiener Staatsoper (Salzburg, 1971)
E. Maschat: 'Clemens Krauss', Recorded Sound, no.42–3 (1971), 740–46 [with list of non-commercial recordings]
C. Höslinger: '"... nichts als ein Wiener Musikant": eine Erinnerung an Clemens Krauss aus Anlass seines 80. Geburtstages am 31. März', Fono-Forum, xviii (1973), 322–7 [with discography of commercial recordings]
G.K. Kende and S. Scanzoni: Der Prinzipal. Clemens Krauss: Fakten, Vergleiche, Rückschlüsse (Tutzing, 1988)

RONALD CRICHTON

Krauss, Fritz (b Lehenhammer, 16 June 1883; d Überlingen, 28 Feb 1976). German tenor. After studying in Munich, Berlin and Milan, he made his début in Bremen in 1911. Engagements followed in Danzig and Kassel, and he was a house tenor at Cologne from 1915 to 1921, when he was called to the Staatsoper in Munich. There he enjoyed his greatest successes until his retirement in 1943. In 1931 he created the role of Asmus Modiger in Pfitzner's Das Herz. He was also a regular guest at the Vienna Staatsoper, took the role of Ferrando in the first performances of Così fan tutte ever given at the Salzburg Festival, and was much admired at Covent Garden in 1926–7 as Walther von Stolzing, Don Ottavio, Belmonte and Florestan. However, to judge from recordings, Krauss's most impressive role was Lohengrin, which showed his strong, shining tenor at its best. He was also a notable Huon (Oberon), Radames, Tannhäuser, Siegmund, Parsifal and Hoffmann.

ALAN BLYTH

Krauss, Gabrielle (b Vienna, 24 March 1842; d Paris, 6 Jan 1906). Austrian soprano. She studied at the conservatory in Vienna with Mathilde Marchesi and made her concert début in Berlin (1858) in Schumann's Das Paradies und die Peri. She sang in Vienna (1859–67), where she was the first local Venus, and then went to Paris where she was engaged by the Théâtre Italien (1859–70). In 1875 she sang Rachel in La Juive at the inauguration of the Opéra's new building; she remained a member of the Opéra company (except for a short period, 1885–6) until the end of 1888. She became famous for her portrayals of Meyerbeer heroines, Leonore and above all Aida and Donna Anna; she created a number of roles, including Pauline in Gounod's Polyeucte (1878) and Catherine of Aragon in Saint-Saëns's Henry VIII (1883). At La Scala she created the title role in Gomes's Fosca (1873) and sang Alice in Robert le diable. She was acclaimed for the dramatic intensity of her performances; to her operatic roles she brought a tragedienne's grand passion and nobility. The French nicknamed her 'La Rachel chantante'. After 1888 she retired from the operatic stage and devoted herself to concerts and teaching.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. de Charnacé: Les étoiles du chant (Paris, 1868–9)
M. Strakosch: Souvenirs d'un imprésario (Paris, 2/1887)
H. de Curzon: 'Mme Gabrielle Krauss', Le théâtre (1906)

HAROLD ROSENTHAL

Kraut, Johann. See BRASSICANUS, JOHANNES.

Krautrock. A mildly patronizing term coined by the British music press in the early 1970s to describe the new wave of experimental bands emanating from Germany in the late 1960s. After the critical success of Julian Cope's book Krautrocksampler (London, 1995), the term has now lost most of its pejorative connotations and has come to describe an important musical movement. The Krautrock bands were united by the common ideology of wanting to create a uniquely German pop culture after those decades post-World War II when Anglo-American culture was pre-eminent. Much of this new music was underpinned by a violent catharsis, a sometimes unacknowledged sense of wanting to purge the past and to establish a new youth cultural formation through experimental music. The movement had disparate musical elements consisting of the metronomic melodies of Kraftwerk, the most influential German band of the time, the rhythmic experimentalism of Can, and also the work of Neu!, Ammon Düül, Cluster and Harmonia.

Perhaps the most extreme band was Faust, whose music was minimalist, often based around one or two chords or riffs played at very high volume. Faust made metonymy the raison d'être of their performance. Echoing the work of the Dadaist and Futurists of the early 20th century, Faust also used various shock tactics such as using road drills to destroy concrete blocks on stage. At a time when American pop had entered its soft rock phase and British music was characterized by the technical virtuosity of the progressive rock music, the experimental Krautrock groups presaged many of the future directions of pop. Rap, hip hop, ambient, industrial and techno music are all indebted to the Krautrock movement.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Bangs: 'Kraftwerkfeature', Psychotic Reactions and Carburetor Dung, ed. G. Marcus (London, 1990), 154–160
P. Bussy: Kraftwerk: Man, Machine and Music (Wembley, 1993)
J. Cope: Krautrocksampler (London, 1995)
J. Evans: 'The Art of the Kraft', Guardian (26 Feb 1997)
A. Gill: 'We Can Be Heroes', Mojo, no.41 (1997), 54–80

DAVID BUCKLEY

Krautwurst, Franz (b Munich, 7 Aug 1923). German musicologist. After attending the Akedemie der Munich Tonkunst (1939–42), and serving in the war (1942–5), he studied musicology at the universities of Munich and Erlangen with von Ficker, Georgiades and Steglich. He took the doctorate in 1950 at Erlangen, joining the faculty there that same year, and completed the Habilitation at Erlangen in 1956. He was appointed professor at Augsburg University in 1980 and retired in 1988. He is founder and editor of the Augsburger Jahrbuch für Musikgeschichte (from 1984) and editor of the series Collectanea Musicologica (from 1991) and the Neues musikwissenschaftliches Jahrbuch (from 1992).

An important scholar in post-war Germany, Krautwurst became known early in his career for his meticulous writings on stemma and manuscript filiation, which have served as models for other scholars. Although he has investigated a broad range of repertory, his later publications concentrate chiefly on the music history of Augsburg and Nuremberg; he has also contributed lengthy articles on composers such as Hassler, Paumann and other minor German composers to the journal Fränkische Lebensbilder.

WRITINGS

Untersuchung zum Sonaten-Satztypus Beethoven, durchgeführt am I. Satz der 1. Symphonie (diss., U. of Erlangen, 1950)
Die Heilsbronner Chorbücher der Universtätsbibliothek Erlangen, Ms.473, 1–4 (Habilitationsschrift, U. of Erlangen, 1956)
'Rudolf Wagner (1885–1909)', Mf, ix (1956), 427–31
'Grundsätzliches zu einer Filiation geistlicher Musikhandschriften der Reformationszeit', IMSCR VII: Cologne 1958, 166–8
Das Schrifttum zur Musikgeschichte der Stadt Nürnberg (Nuremberg, 1964)
'Joachim Heller als Musiker', Convivium musicorum: Festschrift Wolfgang Boetticher, ed. H. Hüschen and D.-R. Moser (Berlin, 1974), 151–62
'Johann Bach (1604–1673) und sein Bruder Heinrich (1615–1692) als Musiker in Schweinfurt (1633–1636)', Jb für fränkische Landesforschung, xxxvi (1976), 65–79
'Die "Pseudovariante": ein harmonisches Phänomen beim jüngeren Bartók', Augsburger Jb für Musikwissenschaft, i (1984), 125–32; see also 'Zur Kadenzbildung mittels Pseudovariante', Neues musikwissenschaftliches Jb, i (1992), 149–54
'Johann Erasmus Kindermanns Beziehungen zu Augsburg', Musik in Bayern, no.33 (1986), 29–49 with W. Zörn: Bibliographie des Schrifttums zur Musikgeschichte der Stadt Augsburg (Tutzing, 1989)
'Zu Schuberts Harmonik', Franz Schubert: der Fortschrittliche? Analysen – Perspektiven – Fakten, ed E.W. Partsch (Tutzing, 1989), 171–83
'Der Augsburger Bach-Schüler Philipp David Kräuter: eine Nachlese', Augsburger Jb für Musikwissenschaft, vii (1990), 31–52
'Armin Knab: ein Lebensbild', Armin Knab, ed. A.L. Suder (Tutzing, 1991), 13–47
'Zur Harmonik im Werk von Joseph Suder', Tractatus de musica bavariae: Festschrift Alexander L. Suder, ed. G. Weiss (Tutzing, 1992), 95–104
'Aus der Frühgeschichte der Schubert-Forschung', Neues musikwissenschaftliches Jb, ii (1993), 91–111
'Das Musikalieninventar (1669) des Grafen Johann Franz Fugger', Neues musikwissenschaftliches Jb, iv (1995), 9–23
'Die Autographen Franz Schuberts im Besitz seines Neffens Karl Schubert', Neues musikwissenschaftliches Jb, vi (1997), 163–75
'Melchior Neuesidler und die Fugger', Musik in Bayern, no.54 (1997), 5–24

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Brusniak and H. Leuchtmann, eds.: Quaestiones in musica: Festschrift für Franz Krautwurst (Tutzing, 1989) [incl. list of writings, 745–58]

KEITH POLK/R

Krauze, Zygmunt (b Warsaw, 19 Sept 1938). Polish composer and pianist. He studied composition with Sikorski and the piano with Maria Wiłkomirska at the Warsaw Conservatory, graduating in 1964; his studies were continued with Boulanger in Paris. An outstanding improviser and interpreter of graphic scores, in 1966 he won the Gaudeamus International Competition for performers of contemporary music in Amsterdam. From 1967 he directed Warsztat Muzyczny (Music Workshop), a quartet of clarinet, trombone, cello and piano for which over 100 new works had been commissioned by 1988. In 1973–4 he worked in Berlin under the aegis of the Deutscher Akademischer Austauschdienst. A tireless promoter of new music, he has organized festivals and directed numerous seminars and courses; he has also worked as a broadcaster in Poland and France, where he lived from 1982 to 1988 and was president of the ISCM (1987–90). In 1984 he was made a Chevalier of the Ordre des Arts et des Lettres and in 1988 he received the prize of the Union of Polish Composers.

Krauze's distinctive compositional expression is inspired by the work of the abstract artist Władysław Strzemiński (1893–1952), whose theory of 'unism' led to paintings devoid of contrast, characterized instead by monochromaticism and irregular repetitive patterns. The avoidance of directional tension is already apparent in Krauze's student compositions, which are characterized by severely reductive material (chromatic and arhythmic) and panelled forms. His unitary pieces of the 1960s nevertheless range from the expressionistic String Quartet no.1 and the febrile Esquisse to the subdued Piece for Orchestra no.1. In the 1970s he incorporated elements of folk and popular music (e.g. Polish światówka tunes are treated heterophonically in Aus aller Welt stammende), even to the point of using traditional instruments and music boxes in Idyll and Automatophone. Krauze has maintained a commitment to spatial composition, often realized in collaboration with architects. Many of these have taken place in art galleries; Fête galante et pastorale was performed in castles in Graz and Strasbourg, where audiences experienced the live and recorded music as they strolled from room to room. With La rivière souterraine, Krauze's tendency to rhapsodize achieved almost New Age proportions; much of his work has anticipated the postmodernism of younger Polish composers. Later works show a growing interest in Romantic idioms, and in creating greater contrasts of dynamics, rhythm and texture.

WORKS
(selective list)

Op: Gwiazda/Die Kleider (chbr op, H. Kajzar), 1981, Mannheim, 17 Jan 1982

Spatial compositions: Kompozycja przestrzenno-muzyczna no.1 [Spatial Composition no.1], 6 tapes, perf. 1968; Kompozycja przestrzenno-muzyczna no.2, 2 tapes, perf. 1970; Automatophone, up to 15 plucked insts, up to 15 mechanical insts, 1974, arr. as concert work 1976; Fête galante et pastorale, 6 groups of insts/13 groups of vv and insts, 13 tapes, perf. 1974; La rivière souterraine, 7 tapes, opt. insts, perf. 1987

Orch: Piece for Orch no.1, 1969; Piece for Orch no.2, 1970; Folk Music, 1972; Pf Conc. no.1, 1976; Suite de danses et de chansons, hpd, orch, 1977; Vn Conc., 1980; Piece for Orch no.3, 1982; Tableau vivant, chbr orch, 1982; Arabesque, pf, chbr orch, 1983; Blanc-rouge/Paysage d'un pays, wind, mands, accdns, 6 perc, 1985; Symphonie parisienne, chbr orch, 1986; Rapsod, str, 1995; Pf Conc. no.2, 1996

Vocal: Pantuny malajskie [Malay Pantuns], A/Mez, 3 fl, 1961; Kondensacje, Bar, ob, drum, 1962; Pocztówka z gór [Postcard from the Mountains] (folk texts), S, fl, ob, cl, vib, str trio, db, 1988; La terre (Y. Bonnefoy), S, pf, orch, 1995; 3 chansons (C. Lefebvre), 16vv chorus, 1997

Chbr: Str Qt no.1, 1965; Polichromia, cl, trbn, vc, pf, 1968; Voices, 15 insts, 1968, rev. 1972; Str Qt no.2, 1970; Aus aller Welt stammende, 5 vn, 3 va, 2 vc, 1973; Song, 4–6 melody insts, 1974; Idyll, 4 players (vn, fifes, hurdy-gurdies, bagpipes, bells), tape, 1974; Soundscape, 4 players (zithers, melodicas, recorders, bells, etc.), tape, 1975; Str Qt no.3, 1983; Je préfère qu'il chante, bn, 1984; Quatuor pour la naissance, cl, pf trio, 1984; For Alfred Schlee with Admiration, str qt, 1991; Pf Qnt, 1993; Terra incognita, pf, 10 str, 1994; Pastorale, wind qnt, 1995

Kbd (pf, unless otherwise stated): 5 utworów [5 Pieces], 1958; Ohne Kontraste, 1960; 5 kompozycji unistycznych [5 Unitary Compositions], 1963; Tryptyk, 1964; Esquisse, 1965, rev. 1967; Fallingwater, 1971; Gloves Music, 1972; Stone Music, 1972; 1 Piano 8 Hands, 1973; The Last Recital, 1973–5; Music Box Waltz, 1977; Ballad, 1978; Diptychos, org, 1981; Commencement, hpd, 1982; From Keyboard to Score, 1987; Nightmare Tango, 1987; La chanson du mal-aimé, 1990; Refrain, 1993

Incid music

Principal publishers: PWM, Edition Modern, Universal, Durand

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KdG (M. Homma)
T. Kaczyński: 'Rozmowa z Zygmuntem Krauzem', RM, xxi/19 (1977), 6–10 [interview]
Z. Krauze: 'Notes on my Piano Concerto', Polish Music, no.3 (1977), 31–4
L. Erhardt: 'z Zygmuntem Krauze: rozmowa nie dokończona' [with Krauze: an unfinished interview], RM, xxvii/10 (1983), 20–22

K. Szwajgier: 'Unistyczna twórczość Zygmunta Krauzego' [Krauze's unistic works], Muzyka polska 1945–1995, ed. K. Droba, T. Malecka and K. Szwajgier (Kraków, 1996), 265–76
B. Młynarczyk: 'Nie tylko o II koncercie fortepianowym' [Not only about the Second Piano Concerto], Dysonanse, no.1 (1998), 3–13 [interview]
K. Tarnawska-Kaczorowska: 'Zygmunta Krauzego przygoda z folklorem' [Krauze's adventure with folklore], Dysonanse, no.3 (1998), 20–24

ADRIAN THOMAS

Kravchenko, Boris Petrovich (b Leningrad, 28 Nov 1929; d Leningrad, 9 Feb 1979). Russian composer. After private lessons in music theory (1946 onwards) and studies in seminars for young composers organized by the Composers' Union (late 1940s and early 1950s), he attended the Music School attached to the Leningrad Conservatory where he studied musicology and composition with Galina Ustvol'skaya (1951–3); at the Conservatory proper he later studied composition with Yury Balkashin and Boris Arapov (1953–8). Vocal music based on Russian folk sources occupies a central place in his output, the six-movement choral cycle Russkiye freski ('Russian Frescoes') (1965) bringing him his first success. Of almost equal importance are his original compositions and arrangements for folk instrument orchestra. He began to write regularly for the theatre in 1962 and the first ever opera for children's puppet theatre – Ay da Balda! ('Well Done Balda!') – in 1971, following the example set by Rimsky-Korsakov in his fairy tale operas, particularly The Golden Cockerel.

Kravchenko's style took shape under the influence of various folk styles, from the traditional peasant song and the urban and village traditions of the 19th and 20th centuries (such as the chastushka), to the mass songs of the 1920s and 1930s and also prison songs. He only occasionally turned his hand to dodecaphonic writing, for example in the 12 fug [12 Fugues] for piano, op.70 (1978). From 1972 to 1976 Kravchenko headed the Leningrad section of the State Music publishers.

WORKS

Ops: Zhestokost' [Cruelty] (3, after P. Nilin), op.41, 1968; Ay da Balda! [Well Done Balda!] (3, after A. Pushkin), op.51, 1971; Leytenant Shmit [Lieutenant Schmidt] (3, Kravchenko), op.52, 1972; Mona Marianna (1, after M. Gor'ky), op.58, 1972; Ay da Balda! (2), op.59, 1974; Posledniy letniy mesyats [The Last Month of Summer] (2, after A. Arbuzov), op.67, 1977
Operettas: Odnazhdï beloy noch'yu [Once During a White Night] (2, V. Krutitsky), op.17, 1962; Obideli devushku [They Caused the Girl Offence] (2, L. Kompaneyets), op.36, 1966; Priklyucheniya Ignata – bravogo soldata [The Adventures of Ignat –a Courageous Soldier] (Kravchenko, Yu. Pogorel'sky), op.61, 1974
Vocal and orchestral: Pesni novoy zhizni [Songs of a New Life] (cant., G. Goppe), spkr, solo vv, chorus, orch, op.11, 1960; Oktyabr'skiy veter [The October Wind] (orat, V. Mayakovsky), 1 solo v, chorus, orch, op.30, 1966; Razmïshleniya o voynye i mirye [Reflections on War and Peace] (orat, M. Dudin), spkr, 2 solo vv, chorus, orch, op.43, 1968
Orch: Moydodïr, suite, op.4, 1958; 3 khoreograficheskiye miniatyurï [3 Choreographic Miniatures], op.6, 1958; Kontsertnaya syuita [Concert Suite], op.44, 1968; Mï iz Kronshtadta [We are from Kronstadt], ov., 1969; Russkiye skazki [Russ. Fairy Tales], suite, op.48, 1970; Russkiye ornamentï [Russ. Ornaments], suite, 1972; Leningradskiye pėyzazhi [Leningrad Landscapes], suite, 1973; Fl Conc., op.57, 1973; Pushkiniana, suite, op.64, 1976
Choral: Russkiye freski [Russian Frescoes] (V. Kostrov, V. Krutitsky, L. Martïnov, V. Tsïbin, A. Voznesensky), bk 1, cycle of choruses, op.31, 1965; Odï revolyutsii [Odes to the Revolution], op.38, 1967; Poėmï o Lenine [Poems about Lenin], op.49, 1969; Skaz o Rossii [A Tale about Russia] (choral cant.), op.45, 1969; Russkiye freski [Russian Frescoes] (D. Kedrin, Kravchenko, V. Lugovskoy, S. Makarov, R. Stratiyevskaya, Voznesensky), bk 2, op.56, 1975
Chbr and solo inst music, works for folk insts orch, romances, songs for children
Incid music

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Fradkina: 'Geroicheskiye operï Borisa Kravchenko' [The heroic operas of Boris Kravchenko], Muzïka i zhizn', iii (Moscow and Leningrad, 1975)
L. Mikheyeva: Boris Kravchenko (Leningrad, 1984)

MIKHAIL MISHCHENKO

Kraynev, Vladimir (Vsevolodovich) (b Krasnoyarsk, 1 April 1944). Russian pianist. Before his first birthday he moved with his parents, who were doctors, to Khar'kiv in Ukraine. Here he studied from 1957 at the Music School with Mariya Itigina. In 1959 he went to Moscow's Central Music School to study with Anaida Sumbatian, continuing at the Conservatory with Heinrich Neuhaus and later with Neuhaus's son Stanislav. A prizewinner at Leeds (1963), his breakthrough came when he won joint first prize with John Lill at the 1970 Tchaikovsky Competition, Moscow. Kraynev has a powerful technique and a wide repertory, from Bach to Bartók, with a special affinity for Chopin. His artistic personality is energetic, warm and engaging. A keen sportsman – he took part in the Soviet tennis championships at the age of 14 – his wife is Tat'yana Tarasova, a well-known figure-skating coach.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Tsïpin: 'Dva ocherka' [Two figures], SovM (1981), no.8, 37–41
M. Zilberquit: Russia's Great Modern Pianists (Neptune, NJ, 1983), 171–215 [interview with Kraynev]
G. Tsïpin: Portretï sovetskikh pianistov (Moscow, 1990), 266–76

DAVID FANNING

Krček, Jaroslav (b Čtyři Dvory, nr České Budějovice, 22 April 1939). Czech composer. Until 1962 he attended the Prague Conservatory, studying composition with Kabeláč and conducting with Bohumír Liška. He worked at Czechoslovak radio in Plzeň and then for the recording company Supraphon before embarking on a career as a freelance composer and performer in 1973. He has collaborated with several ensembles, among them Chorea bohemica, of which he is a co-founder. His compositions are remarkable for their use of many invented or reconstructed instruments, the inspiration for which comes from Czech folkore. Stylistically, he combines archaic folk elements with traits from the historical as well as contemporary classical tradition.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Nevěstka Raab [Rab the Harlot] (elec op, Zd. Barborka), 1971; Žákovské vigilie [Students' Vigils] (dance frescoes, A. Skálová and J. Pecka), 1979; Lod' bláznů [A Ship of Fools] (suite for stage, Skálová, after S. Brant), 1984
Orch: Music for Orch, 1970; Sym. no.1, 1974; Vn Conc., 1979; Conc., ob, hp, chbr orch, 1980; Ad radicibus, suite, after Czech folksongs, 1982; 3 tance ve starém slohu [3 Dances in and Olden Style], str, perc, 1983; Árie, str, 1986
Choral: Písničky s vozembouchem [Songs with vozembouch], children's chorus, vozembouch, 1968; Slavíčkové a bubeník [Nightingales and a Drummer] (folk poetry), SATB, perc, 1968; Radujme se, veselme se [Let's Rejoice, Let's Be Merry] (folk nursery rhymes), solo vv, chorus, chbr orch, 1979; Sym. no.2 (Coptic manuscripts), T, SATB, orch, 1983, rev. chbr ens, 1985; O lux mundi (cant., Comenius), T, SA, 2 chbr ens, 1985; Balady, solo vv, SATB, chbr orch, 1986; Hádej, hádej [Guess] (suite, J. Pecka), children's chorus, chbr orch, 1986; Ne tempori crederis (cant., Gk text, trans. Erasmus), chbr SATB, orch, 1986; Sym. no.3 (Comenius and Barborka), nar, SATB, orch, 1990; Vánoční mše [Christmas Mass], solo vv, chorus, chbr orch, 1990; Česká mše [Czech Mass], solo vv, chorus, chbr orch, 1991

Chbr: Music for Va, Bn, Pf, 1977; Music for Trio, ob, cl, bn, 1985; Barokní suita, ob, vn, vc, db, hp, 1989; Musica per Musica Bohemica, chbr orch, 1990

Solo vocal: Conc. e gioco (textless), S, va, hp, cl, 1968; Písně o vojně [Songs about War], 1v, chbr ens, 1975; 10 lidových písní [10 Folk Songs], 1v, pf, 1976; Suita semplice (textless), 1v, fl, pic, ob, E♭ cl, bn, 2 vn, va, vc, db, hp, tárogató, 1979; Testamenti (Latin texts), S, T, chbr orch, 1984; 3 zpěvy o lásce [3 Songs of Love] (Bible), T, chbr ens, 1986

JIŘÍ MACEK

Krebbers, Herman (Albertus) (b Hengelo, 18 June 1923). Dutch violinist. He studied at the Amsterdam Muzieklyceum with Oskar Back, gave his first concert at the age of nine and at seventeen became leader of the Arnhem Orkestvereeniging. From 1950 to 1962 he was leader of the Residentie-Orkest, The Hague, and from 1962 to 1979 leader of the Concertgebouw Orchestra, Amsterdam. As a soloist he was particularly admired for his fine tone and refined interpretations as well as for his vigorous attack and heroic style. He made numerous tours throughout Europe and the USA and recorded many of the major concertos. In 1963 he founded the Guarneri Trio with the pianist Danièle Dechenne and the cellist Jean Decroos, and for many years he formed a violin duo with Theo Olof. He played a Guarneri del Gesù of 1741. His teaching at the Amsterdam Muzieklyceum and, later, the Sweelinck Conservatory has continued the Back tradition, and his pupils include many of the most talented young European violinists, among them Frank Peter Zimmermann. He is an Officer of the Order of Oranje Nassau.

TRUUS DE LEUR

Krebs. German family of musicians. They were of particular interest for their close relationship with J.G. Walther and J.S. Bach, as well as for their considerable output of good instrumental music, particularly for keyboard.

(1) Johann Tobias Krebs (b Heichelheim, Weimar, 7 July 1690; d Buttstädt, Weimar, 11 Feb 1762). Composer and organist. He attended school in Weimar intending to enter the church. He must also have possessed some musical ability, for in 1710 he was invited to become organist in nearby Buttelstedt. For the next few years he travelled to Weimar twice a week to take lessons, first from J.G. Walther and later from Bach himself. Three important manuscript collections (D-Bsb P801–3) attest to a continued collaboration between the three men in the production of teaching material for Tobias Krebs or for his liturgical needs. Krebs's second and last appointment in 1721 was to the Michaeliskirche in Buttstädt, where he also taught at the school. None of his church music is extant. A few chorale settings for organ (D-Bsb) show a fondness for learned contrapuntal treatment that few other pupils of Bach shared.

(2) Johann Ludwig Krebs (b Buttelstedt, Weimar, bap. 12 Oct 1713; d Altenburg, 1 Jan 1780). Composer and organist, eldest of the three sons of (1) Johann Tobias Krebs. He received his first musical instruction from his father, including organ lessons as early as his 12th year. An improvement in the family fortunes enabled him to enter the Thomasschule in Leipzig in July 1726. He learnt the lute and violin, continued with his keyboard studies, and as late as 1730 was still singing treble in the choir. Anticipating that his eight years of study at the Thomasschule would end in 1734, he competed for the position of organist at St Wenzel, Naumburg, on 25 August 1733, along with his father (who later withdrew), C.P.E. Bach and five others; neither he nor C.P.E. Bach was successful. The Thomasschule therefore extended Krebs's term, and a year later J.S. Bach summed up in a testimonial of 24 August 1735 that his pupil had 'distinguished himself' on the clavier, violin and lute, as well as in composition. This special recommendation undoubtedly refers to an otherwise unknown application for a post, perhaps at St Katharinen, Zwickau. During the next two years (1735–7) Krebs read law and philosophy at Leipzig University, occasionally assisting Bach at the Thomaskirche or playing the harpsichord in Bach's collegium musicum.

During his long professional life Krebs held only three appointments, all in the area south of Leipzig. From 1737 to 1743 he was organist at St Marien, Zwickau. Neither the organ nor the salary was attractive, and in 1744 he moved to Zeitz as organist of the castle. During his 12 years there his beloved teacher died and Krebs applied for the position. He was unsuccessful: in organ playing he was unsurpassed, but the Thomaskirche wanted a Kantor, not a Kapellmeister. Finally in 1755 he went to the castle in nearby Altenburg to become organist at the court of Prince Friedrich of Gotha-Altenburg. The organ was better there, but the salary was scarcely so. Georg Benda, who auditioned him for the post, wrote to the consistory of the castle:

> In view of the rumour that the salary of the organist at Altenburg is hardly greater than what he receives in his present position as organist in Zeitz, [Krebs] lives in the respectful hope, taking into account his wife and seven children, that he might also receive some grain or other remuneration in kind.

Despite economic uncertainties, Krebs's third and last appointment marked the happiest years in his career. Orchestral works such as the string sinfonias, the double concerto for harpsichord and oboe and the two lute concertos (in which Krebs was perhaps soloist) testify to the stimulus afforded by Benda's accomplished band. The demanding wind parts in some of his excellent fantasias for organ and solo instrument may also have been played by court musicians. Certainly the fantasias and later organ works owe much to the possibilities of the large, two-manual organ of forward-looking design that H.G. Trost had installed in the castle church from 1735 to 1739 – 'such a beautiful and excellent organ', Krebs wrote later, 'to which very few can compare'. Before he moved to Altenburg Krebs had been a strong advocate of Gottfried Silbermann's organs, but he came to 'love the court organ more than a father', as the organ builder J.J. Schramm complained when Krebs would not let him play it.

Contemporaries spoke well of Krebs. Charles Burney, for example, reported that 'M. Krebs of Altenburg, scholar of Sebastian Bach, has been much admired for his full and masterly manner of playing the organ'. Forkel considered his organ compositions as among the most important of their time. Others praised his expert knowledge in matters connected with organ building. Krebs may not have been the favourite in the circle of Bach's pupils, as some have suggested; in Spitta's opinion his place in the hierarchy was next to Altnickol, Bach's future son-in-law. But Bach certainly regarded him very highly, if there is any truth to the contemporary pun on 'Krebs' (crayfish) and 'Bach' (stream): 'In this great stream only a single crayfish has been caught', reported by C.F. Cramer in the Magazin der Musik for 1784. The close association between teacher and pupil has given scholars reason to be grateful as well as perplexed. Krebs, with others in the Thomaskirche circle, found useful occupation as a copyist. His work in the period 1729–31 is particularly important, as the parts he made then for cantatas 192, 37 and 140 are primary sources. Other compositions of Bach in his hand have prompted the speculation that Krebs had access to Bach's musical estate. Löffler, for example, whose research into Krebs's life and works was so extensive, thought that this was the case with the unique Krebs copy of Bach's Fantasia and Fugue in C minor BWV537. In fact most of the manuscript (D-Bsb P803) is in the hand of Tobias Krebs, presumably copied when he was studying with Bach; O'Donnell argues that the repetition of the fugal exposition that Ludwig wrote out on 10 January 1751 provides at best only a makeshift solution for an incomplete but otherwise 'noble' and 'balanced' work. Other problems concern the authenticity of works which appear in the hands of both Bach and Ludwig Krebs or bear their ascription. H.-J. Schulze discovered that the Trio in C minor BWV585 was composed by neither man but by J.F. Fasch. Tittel considers the chorale Wir glauben all an einen Gott in similar settings in four parts (Krebs) and five (Bach, BWV740) to be both by the former. Bach's Eight Short Preludes and Fugues BWV553–60 have also been attributed to both Tobias and Ludwig; on stylistic grounds neither seems likely.

Only a handful of the Bach pupils who became professional organists wrote for the instrument, and among these Krebs and J.G. Kittel stand out. Krebs's compositions are the more diverse in free forms, toccatas and trios, as well as in the variety of the chorale-based works. The organ works of the younger and more prolific Kittel (who also copied a great many of Krebs's organ pieces) anticipate the new currents of pre-Classical change. The style of Krebs's music, on the other hand, reflects the transitional period in which he lived. Some of his pieces, such as the chorale Jesu, meine Freude for obbligato oboe and organ, are cast in a Bachian mould; others show the leavening influence of the galant style. But even in his warmest melodic works he could not altogether deny the contrapuntal influence of his youth. Few of the lesser composers of the mid-century share his proclivity towards counterpoint. Some of the organ pieces are modelled on his teacher's work. Bach's Toccata in F BWV540 was undoubtedly the stimulus for Krebs's E major Toccata; the Toccata in C BWV564 for a Praeludium in C; and so on. In general his fugues are thoroughly worked out but show few touches of originality. He seems to have considered them more as examples of the craftsman's art than the artist's craft. One fugue on B–A–C–H pays direct homage to his teacher. The chorales and fantasias for organ and solo instrument show a more consistent level of invention, and in the case of the fantasias have no parallel in the music of G.F. Kauffmann, J.B. Bach, G.A. Homilius and others who wrote for such combinations of instruments. Krebs's Fantasia in F minor for oboe and organ has rightly been praised by Sietz, and may well be one of his most expressive works in any form.

Unlike the organ compositions, most of Krebs's clavier works were published in his own lifetime. They range in style from the simpler settings of German chorales in the Clavier Ubung to sophisticated examples in the 'French and Italian taste'. It is tempting to speculate that, like Bach before him, he wished to leave a representative anthology of works in all the current idioms to demonstrate that he was fluent in all styles. His Concerto in A minor for two harpsichords is perhaps superior to the solo pieces; he wrote it for the Dresden court where he performed in 1753. Gerber's account of his success is undoubtedly true, for Krebs's inspiration remains remarkably high, not only in the lively dialogue of the outer movements but also in the appealing slow movement; here the fusion of Baroque and galant is extremely well contrived. Much the same is true of Krebs's sonatas for one and two flutes and harpsichord, where again his contrapuntal skill saves him from writing music of merely empty elegance.

The bulk of the orchestral and choral music awaits modern editions. The brilliant harpsichord writing of the double concerto in B minor pays homage to Bach's Fifth Brandenburg Concerto, and the opening chorus of the cantata Gott fähret auf to BWV51. The five-part motet Erforsche mich, Gott is a strong work in the mainstream of the Bach polyphonic tradition without, however, showing any obvious derivations from Bach's own motets. On the other hand the opening of the oratorio in memory of Queen Maria Josepha of Poland promises well with a solemn and poignant chorus, but then dissolves into a succession of fluent but rather superficial arias and duets. In spite of that, the writing here and in his shorter choral works was never less than competent. He was too much of a craftsman to permit even occasional pieces to become merely perfunctory gestures.

Krebs's three surviving sons were all musicians, the eldest being (3) Johann Gottfried Krebs. Carl Heinrich Gottlieb Krebs (1747–93) was court organist in Eisenberg from 1774; no compositions by him survive. Ehrenfried Christian Traugott Krebs (1753–1804) succeeded his father as court organist at Altenburg from 1780 and published a collection of six organ chorale preludes (Leipzig, 1787); he also wrote a jubilee cantata (music lost) to a text published in Altenburg in 1793. His son, Ferdinand Traugott Krebs, was awarded the post of 'Mittelorganist' at Altenburg in 1808 but nothing further is known of him.

WORKS

Editions: Joh. Ludw. Krebs: Gesammt-Ausgabe der Tonstücke für die Orgel, ed. C. Geissler (Magdeburg, 1847–9); where MSS are lost a primary source

Johann Ludwig Krebs: Sämtliche Orgelwerke, ed. G. Weinberger [W i–iv]

ORGAN

for organ alone unless otherwise stated

principal MS sources, including numerous autographs, D-Bsb, LEm, F-Pn; also A-Wn, B-Bc, Br, D-Dl, DS, GOl, GB-Lbl, US-NH, private collection, Montclair, NJ

7 praeludia (C, c, D, d, f, F♯, G), W i; 2 toccatas and fugues (E, a), W i; 1 fantasia and fugue (F); 11 free preludes/fantasias; 11 fugues; 17 trios, W ii

41 chorale settings (incl. 6 doubtful), W iii

4 fantasias, ob, org; 1 fantasia, fl; 1 fantasia, ob d'amore; chorale fantasia, tpt, org; 15 chorale settings, 1 inst, org (8 for ob or ob/tpt, 1 for ob d'amore, 1 for hn, 5 for tpt/clarino): ed. H. McLean (Borough Green, 1981), ed. G. Weinberger (Wiesbaden, 1991)

OTHER KEYBOARD

Erste Piece, Bestehend In sechs leichten … Praeambulis (Nuremberg, 1740), ed. F. Friedrich (Wilhelmshaven, 1994)

Andere Piece, Bestehend In einer leichten … Suite (Nuremberg, 1741), ed. F. Friedrich (Wilhelmshaven, 1994)

Dritte Piece, Bestehend In einer ... Ouverture (Nuremberg, 1741), ed. F. Friedrich (Wilhelmshaven, 1994)
Vierte Piece, Bestehend In einem ... Concerto (Nuremberg, 1743), ed. F. Friedrich (Wilhelmshaven, 1994)
Clavier Ubung Bestehend in verschiedenen vorspielen und veränderungen einiger Kirchen Gesaenge (Nuremberg, n.d.), W iv
Clavier-Ubung bestehet in einer ... Suite ... Zweyter Theil (Nuremberg, n.d.)
Clavier-Ubung bestehend in sechs Sonatinen ... IIIter Theil (Nuremberg, n.d.), ed. F. Friedrich (Stuttgart, 1999)
Exercice sur le clavessin consistant en VI suites, op.4 (Nuremberg, n.d.), part ed. K. Herrmann, Leichte Tanzstücke (Hamburg, 1949); nos.2 and 6 ed. in Organum, v/32, 34 (Lippstadt, 1965)
Sonata, in Musicalisches Magazin, in Sonaten ... bestehend, pt.2 (Leipzig, 1765)
3 sonatas cited in Breitkopf catalogue
3 partite, D-Bsb, Dl, 2 ed. in Alte Meister, nos.11–12 (*c*1870); Conc. 2 hpd, LEb, ed. B. Klein (Leipzig, 1966)

INSTRUMENTAL

VI Trio, 2 fl/vn, hpd (Nuremberg, n.d.); no.1 ed. in Collegium musicum, xxxi (Leipzig, *c*1910); no.6 ed. in NM, cix (1934); nos.2, 5 ed. H. Ruf (Wilhelmshaven, 1968); MS copies, US-CA
[6] Sonata da camera, hpd, fl/vn (Leipzig, 1762); ed. B. Klein as Sechs Kammersonaten (Leipzig, 1963)
Musikalischer und angenehmer Zeitvertreib bestehet in zwey Sonaten, hpd, fl/vn (Nuremberg, [1752])
III sonate, fl, vn, bc, cited in Breitkopf catalogue, 1762, MS copies in D-Bsb, ed. F. Nagel, no.1 (Wolfenbüttel, 1975), nos.2, 3 (Heidelberg, 1975); VI soli, vn, hpd, cited in Breitkopf catalogue, 1767 (suppl. 2), autograph frag. ALa, MS copies of 4 sonatas B-Bc, D-Bsb
2 sinfonias, 2 vn, va, bc, ed. F. Friedrich (Stuttgart, 1998); 2 concs., lute, str, bc, ed. R. Chiesa (Milan, 1970–71); Conc., hpd, ob, str, bc, ed. K. Jametzky (Heidelberg, 1976); 2 sonatas, vn, bc: all in Bsb; Conc., vn, str; Sonata, vn, bc: both cited in Breitkopf catalogue

SACRED VOCAL
sources: D-Bsb, LEm

Oratorio funebre all'occasione della morte di Maria Gioseppa Regina di Pollonia, SATB, 2 ob, str, bc, *c*Nov 1757
Missa (F), SATB, 2 hn, str, bc, 24 June 1755, ed. N. Klose (Embühren, 1998), ed. F. Friedrich (St Augustin, 1999); Sanctus (D), SATB, 2 hn, 2 ob, str, bc; Sanctus (D), SATB, 3 tpt, 2 ob, str, bc, timp; Sanctus (F), SATB, 2 hn, 2 ob, str, bc (BWV Anh.27, see Kobayashi), ed. F. Friedrich (St Augustin, 1999); Magnificat deutsch (F), SATB, bc; Magnificat (D) SATB, 3 tpt, str, bc, timp
Bist du noch fern (aria), S, hpd; Der Herr hat Grosses an uns getan (cant.), SATB, 2 tpt, 2 ob, str, bc, 23 Dec 1739; Erforsche mich, Gott (motet), SSATB, ed. in Cw, lxxxix (1963), ed. K. Tittel (Stuttgart, 1983); Gott fähret auf mit Jauchzen (cant.), SATB, 2 hn, str, bc, 27 April 1766; Jesu, meine Freude (cant.), SATB, ob, str, bc, ed. N. Klose (Embühren, 1993); Seid barmherzig (cant.), SATB, 2 bn, str, bc, ed. N. Klose (Embühren, 1995)
Tröste uns Gott (motet), 8vv, lost

(3) Johann Gottfried Krebs (b Zwickau, bap. 29 May 1741; d Altenburg, 5 Jan 1814). Organist and composer, eldest son of (2) Johann Ludwig Krebs. From 1758 he discharged the duties of 'Mittelorganist' at churches in Altenburg, playing for services other than the official church service and for weekly prayer meetings, and began to compose (the cantata Ich sterbe gern is dated 15 January 1765). When the Altenburg city fathers confirmed him as Stadtkantor on 10 May 1771 in succession to Gottlieb Schreiter they noted that he 'had already exhibited much ability in musical composition'. Krebs remained in that post until his death and also belonged to the local Concordia Society as well as the concert society in the Fleischerschen Garten. On his father's death in 1780 Johann Gottfried may not have been permitted to audition for the vacant post at the castle because of a youthful indiscretion, but according to Löffler (1934) his 'association with an unacceptable female' jeopardized his career with the court at Zeitz rather than in Altenburg.

Unlike his father, who wrote little church music, Johann Gottfried was a prolific and popular cantata composer, and his works circulated widely in manuscript. About 30 extant de tempore works attest to performances in Leipzig, Dresden, Potsdam, Chemnitz and possibly Prague. In a letter to Breitkopf dated 5 September 1794 Krebs stated that C.P.E. Bach in Hamburg had performed several cantatas from the two complete cycles he had available. In addition to the de tempore cantatas, Krebs wrote others for important church festivals. A treble-dominated, generally homophonic style, with straightforward harmonies, attests to his acceptance of the popular ideals of edification and simplicity in the church music of the Enlightenment. His orchestration, except in three cantatas that use clarinets, follows traditional models; the frequent doubling of instruments and voices suggests performers of only average ability. His cantatas are mostly on a four-movement plan of chorus–recitative–aria–chorale. Like Homilius, Doles, C.G. Tag and Vierling, he occasionally wrote an accompanied recitative in which all four soloists sing the text in the same rhythm.

WORKS

CHURCH CANTATAS
for catalogue and sources see Enns-Braun (1988)

157 de tempore cants. (incl. 68, text only), solo vv, chorus, insts; 36 ed. N. Klose (Embühren, 1993–)
Allein Gott, extended chorale; Herr, straf mich nicht, ps cant. (doubtful); Gott tu wohl, wedding cant.

OTHER SACRED

Ky–Christe (E♭), D-EIb; perhaps one of the 10 Ky Löffler, 1935, lists Die Auferstehung und Himmelfahrt Jesu, orat, 1774, Bsb
Passion orat, lost

SECULAR

Lieder mit Melodien, 2 vols. (Altenburg, 1777, 1782)
Die Nacht, musical drama, B-Bc
Cants.: Brüder lasst uns besingen, D-Bsb, SWl; Der Abend (Leipzig, 1781); Die Macht der Liebe, LEm; Erhebt ihn den König (text only), 1799

INSTRUMENTAL

Sechs Divertimentos, hpd/pf (Altenburg, n.d.)
Several kbd works pubd in 18th-century anthologies, others in MS

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BlumeEK; BrookB; FrotscherG; MGG1 (K. Tittel)
H. Löffler: 'Johann Ludwig Krebs: Mitteilungen über sein Leben und Wirken', BJb 1930, 100–129
H. Löffler: 'Der Stadtkantor J.G. Krebs', Altenburger Heimat-Blätter, iii (1934), 61–3; iv (1935), 39–40
R. Sietz: 'Die Orgelkompositionen des Schülerkreises um Johann Sebastian Bach', BJb 1935, 33–96, esp. 49–61
H. Löffler: 'Johann Tobias Krebs und Matthias Sojka, zwei Schüler J.S. Bachs', BJb 1940–48, 136–48
J. Horstman: The Instrumental Music of Johann Ludwig Krebs (diss., Boston U., 1959) [incl. thematic catalogue]
K. Tittel: Die musikalischen Vertreter der Familie Krebs (diss., U. of Marburg, 1963)
W. Neumann and H.-J. Schulze: Bach-Dokumente, i–iii (Kassel, 1963–72)
K. Tittel: 'Die Choralbearbeitungen für Orgel von Johann Ludwig Krebs', Festschrift Hans Engel, ed. H. Heussner (Kassel, 1964), 406–27
K. Tittel: 'Welche unter J.S. Bachs Namen geführten Orgelwerke sind Johann Tobias bzw. Johann Ludwig Krebs zuzuschreiben?', BJb 1966, 102–37
K. Tittel: 'Vom "einzigen Krebs in meinem Bach": Johann Ludwig Krebs (1713–80) als Bachschüler und Orgelkomponist', Musik und Kirche, xlvi (1976), 172–81
S. Daw: 'Copies of J.S. Bach by Walther & Krebs: a Study of the Manuscripts P801, P802, P803', Organ Yearbook, vii (1976), 31–58
Y. Kobayashi: 'Neuerkentnisse zu einigen Bach-Quellen an Hand schriftkundlicher Untersuchungen', BJb 1978, 43–60, esp. 46–50

C.R. Enns-Braun: Seven Selected Church Cantatas of Johann Gottfried Krebs: a Transcription and Stylistic Commentary (diss., U. of Western Ontario, 1988) [incl. sources, contents and indexes of 134 cants.]
F. Friedrich: 'Johann Ludwig Krebs: Leben und Werk', Beiträge zur Altenburger Heimatgeschichte, iii (1988)
J. O'Donnell: 'Mattheson, Bach, Krebs and the Fantasia & Fugue in C minor BWV537', Organ Yearbook, xx (1989), 88–95
F. Friedrich: 'Aufführungspraktische Beobachtungen am Orgelschaften von Johann Ludwig Krebs', Ars organi, xxxix/3 (1991), 135–50
G. Weinberger: '"es sey in einem Bach nur ein Krebs gefangen worden" (J.N. Forkel): Anmerkungen zur Neuausgabe der Orgelwerke von Johann Ludwig Krebs', Freiberger Studien zur Orgel, ii (1991)

HUGH J. McLEAN

Krebs [Krebser, Kress], Friedrich (b Schalkhausen, nr Ansbach; d Strasbourg, 1493). German organ builder. He was active in Franconia from 1471 until his death. New organs or restorations are known for the churches of St Sebaldus, Nuremberg (small organ 1471; large organ 1481), St Martin, Amberg (1476), the Moritzkirche, Coburg (Meister Friedrich 1487), and Strasbourg Cathedral (small organ 1478; large organ 1491); his work at St Georges, Haguenau (1493), was completed by his nephew Michael Dürr. Krebs was a significant organ builder in the line of development from the Gothic Blockwerk organ to the slider-chest organ with divided Blockwerk, as reflected in his specification of Fleiten (Principal), Zymmel (Zimbel) and Werck (Hintersatz or Mixture). The organ was divided into Diskant (Hauptwerk), Rückpositiv and Tenor (pedal). Krebs extended the range of the manuals (F to a″, previously B to f″) and that of the pedals (F to c′, previously A to a), but he did not achieve the state of development prescribed by Arnolt Schlick (1511). The organ screen of the Gothic 'swallow's nest' organ in Strasbourg Cathedral survives, though altered.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PraetoriusSM, ii
M. Vogeleis: 'Ein Orgelvertrag aus dem Jahre 1491', MMg, xxxii (1900), 155–61
I. Rücker: Die deutsche Orgel am Oberrhein um 1500 (Freiburg, 1940)
M. Barth: 'Elsass, das Land der Orgeln', Archives de l'église d'Alsace, xxxi (Haguenau, 1966), 59–134
H. Fischer: 'Der mainfränkische Orgelbau bis zur Säkularisation', Acta organologica, ii (1968), 101–204

HERMANN FISCHER

Krebs, Helmut (b Dortmund, 8 Oct 1913). German tenor. After studies at the Dortmund conservatory and the Berlin Hochschule für Musik, he made his stage début in 1938 at the Berlin Grosse Volksoper. Following a spell at Düsseldorf from 1945, he joined the Deutsche Oper (Berlin) in 1947, remaining there until his retirement over 40 years later. In 1953 he made his British début as Belmonte (Entführung) and Idamantes (Idomeneo) at Glyndebourne. The following year he sang Aaron in the first performance (unstaged), in Hamburg, of Moses und Aron, and later appeared in the premières of Henze's König Hirsch (1956) and Der junge Lord (1965). He also sang at Covent Garden, La Scala and the Vienna Staatsoper. He was made Kammersänger in 1963. Outside opera, Krebs's evenly controlled technique, wide vocal range, expressive declamation and highly individual timbre were well suited to Baroque music and lieder. He sang the title role in a recording of Monteverdi's Orfeo under Wenzinger, and made many recordings of Bach's cantatas and Henze's Der junge Lord. His interpretations of the Evangelist in Bach's Passions have been especially admired. Late in his career he recorded music by Bach, Mozart and Wolf for the BBC. He began teaching at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik in 1957, and at the Frankfurt Hochschule für Musik in 1966. In 1988 he returned to the Deutsche Oper to sing in Janáček's From the House of the Dead.

NICHOLAS ANDERSON

Krebs [Miedke; Miedcke], Karl August (b Nuremberg, 16 Jan 1804; d Dresden, 16 May 1880). German conductor and composer. The son of A. and Charlotte Miedke of the Nuremberg theatre company, he took, on his mother's death in 1805, the name of his adoptive father, the tenor and composer Johann Baptist Krebs (1774–1851). He first appeared as a pianist at the age of six, and he began composing the following year. He studied with Schelble, then in Vienna with Seyfried (1825). After acting as third Kapellmeister at the Kärntnertortheater (1826), he went to Hamburg as Kapellmeister in 1827, remaining until 1850. He then moved to Dresden as Kapellmeister at the Hofoper in succession to Wagner; his period in this post included the staging of Lohengrin in 1852. He retired from the theatre in 1872 and took over the directorship of Dresden's Catholic court church. He was an enthusiastic supporter of Spontini and Meyerbeer, with a taste for large choirs and orchestras. His talents as a conductor were widely recognized. Wagner, whose early music he also championed, wrote from Hamburg over the Rienzi production there describing him as 'a really excellent conductor … I could have no better conductor for my opera' (letter to Minna Wagner, 17 March 1844); later Wagner lost confidence in him (over the Lohengrin production, describing his conducting as 'mindless') and was affronted by his demand for an extra number in Rienzi for his wife. His works include church music and four operas (Sylvia, Hamburg 1830; Herzog Albrecht, Hamburg 1833, revised as Agnes Bernauer, Dresden 1858; his other two operas, Fedora (1811) and Der Kosakenoffizier (1815) are childhood works). However, he is best known for his many songs, which were once very popular.

In 1850 Krebs married Aloysia Michalesi (b Prague, 29 Aug 1826; d Dresden, 5 Aug 1904), daughter of the singer Wenzel Michalesi (d 1836). She was a mezzo-soprano who made her début in Brno in 1843 and moved to Hamburg in 1846; at Meyerbeer's request, she went to Dresden in 1849 to sing Fidès in Le prophète. She retired from the stage in 1870 but continued to sing in concerts and to teach. Their daughter Mary (b Dresden, 5 Dec 1851; d Dresden, 27 June 1900) was a pianist who first appeared in Meissen at the age of 11. She toured widely in Europe and visited the USA (1870–72), playing frequently in London, at the Crystal Palace (1864), Philharmonic (1874), and with especial success at the Monday Popular Concerts from 1875. She had a large repertory and a fine technique.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. Schmid: Mary Krebs-Brenning (Dresden, 1892)
A. Ehrlich [A. Payne], ed.: Berühmte Sängerinnen der Vergangenheit und Gegenwart (Leipzig, 1895)
H. von Brescius: Die Königliche Sächsische musikalische Kapelle von Reissiger bis Schuch (1826–1898): Festschrift zur Feier des 350jährigen Kapelljubiläums (Dresden, 1898)

H. Chevalley: Hundert Jahre Hamburger Stadt-Theater (Hamburg, 1927)
P. Adolph: Vom Hof- zum Staatstheater Dresden (Dresden, 1932)

JOHN WARRACK/R

Krebsgang (Ger.). See RETROGRADE.

Kreek, Cyrillus (b Ridala, West Estonia, 3 Dec 1889; d Haapsalu, 26 March 1962). Estonian composer and choral conductor. He studied at the St Petersburg Conservatory, where his teachers included Jāzeps Vītols. While still a student, he began to collect Estonian folk music, becoming one of the first Estonians to use the phonograph to record traditional melodies (1914). His transcriptions include collections of folk hymn tunes and music from Estonian Swedish villages. The impact of his folksong study on his compositional style is clear both in his numerous arrangements of folk music and in his large choral and orchestral works based on folk material. In 1917 he returned to Haapsalu, his home town, where he worked as a music teacher and choral conductor until his death. Although he also taught for short periods at the Tallinn Conservatory (1940–41, 1944–50) where he was appointed professor in 1947, he was forced to abandon this post by Soviet authorities who labelled him a 'bourgeois nationalist'.

Kreek, with Mart Saar and Heino Eller, was particularly influential in the creation of a nationalistic Estonian musical style. His compositions make abundant use of classical contrapuntal techniques, but combine modal features with complex tonal chords and sequences. Harmonies, while never departing from a tonal basis, are often used colouristically and are frequently governed by linear part-writing. With works such as Talvine õhtu ('A Winter's Evening', 1915) and Maga, maga, Matsikene ('Sleep, Little Mats', 1922) he established the tradition of large-scale choral writing beloved by Estonian composers. Paabeli jõgede kaldail ('By the Rivers of Babylon', 1944), one of the Taaveti laulud ('Psalms of David') rediscovered in 1989, is based on the melodies and vocal traditions of the Eastern Orthodox church.

WORKS
(selective list)

Vocal: Nõmmelil [A Heath Flower] (A. Haava), chorus, 1912; Kuula valgusest imelist juttu [Listen to a Wonderful Tale about Light] (M. Heiberg), chorus, 1913; Taaveti laulud [Psalms of David] (1914–44): Ps lxxxiv; Ps xii; Ps civ; Õnnis on inimene [Happy is the Man]; Ps cxli; Ps cxxi; Ps cxxxvii; Laulja [The Singer] (K.J. Peterson), chorus, 1915; Talvine õhtu [A Winter's Evening] (V. Grünthal-Ridala), chorus, 1915; Meie err [Our Master], folksong, chorus, 1918; Sirisege, sirbikesed [Chirp, the Sickles], folksong, chorus, 1919; Meil aiaäärne tänavas [On My Beloved Country Lane], folksong, chorus, 1921; Maga, maga, Matsikene [Sleep, Little Mats], folksong, chorus, 1922; Unes nägin [In a Dream I Saw] (Haava), 1925; Requiem, T, mixed chorus, orch, org, 1927; Kalevipoeg nõiakoopas [Kalevipoeg in the Sorcerer's Cave] (cant., F.R. Kreutzwald), solo vv, mixed chorus, orch, 1953; hundreds of choral songs and hymn arrs.; *c*10 solo songs

Inst: Musica sacra, 6 religious songs, orch, 1943; Setu sümfoonia [Setu Sym.], orch, 1953; several suites on folk melodies for orch and band; chbr music, kbd works

Folksong collections held in the Estonian Folklore Archives, Literary Museum, Tartu

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Laanepõld: Cyrillus Kreek, 1889–1962 (Tallinn, 1974)
P. Kuusk: 'Cyrillus Kreek ja eesti rahvamuusika' [Cyrillus Kreek and Estonian folk music], Muusikalisi lehekülgi, no.3 (1983), 45–68
T. Lõhmuste and I. Potter, eds.: C. Kreek: Personaalnimestik [Personal bibliography] (Tallinn, 1989)

URVE LIPPUS

Krehbiel, Henry (Edward) (b Ann Arbor, 10 March 1854; d New York, 20 March 1923). American critic and writer on music. He studied law in Cincinnati, but became a reporter and critic for the Cincinnati Gazette. He was self-taught in music. His memory, pontifical tone and vast learning made him the acknowledged dean of New York music critics as critic of the New York Tribune from 1880 to 1923. By birth (both his parents were German-born) and intellectual orientation, he was a Germanophile who honoured the Classical symphonists with a purist's integrity. However, his breadth and fairmindedness were notable.

Krehbiel completed the first English-language edition of Thayer's Life of Ludwig van Beethoven – the monumental task of his last years – and wrote a dozen books. He also translated operas from French and German, composed exercises for the violin and edited collections of songs and arias. How to Listen to Music (1896) was reprinted 30 times. Chapters of Opera (1908) and More Chapters of Opera (1919) comprise a two-volume history of opera in New York that has not been superseded. An industrious student of music and ethnicity, he believed that musical expression relied upon 'dialects and idioms which are national or racial in origin and structure'. Afro-American Folksongs (1914) espoused the music of the black slave as the 'most beautiful and most vital in our folk song'. Dvořák's similar viewpoint reflected frequent contact with Krehbiel, who influentially championed the former's 'New World' Symphony. Krehbiel's closest friends included the conductor Anton Seidl, the key figure in an American Wagner movement of which Krehbiel was the central chronicler. He was also prominent as a lecturer and programme annotator.

After the turn of the 20th century, Krehbiel's taste became increasingly conservative. His insistence that art serve a moral purpose was at odds with the new modernism; he chafed at the Caruso cult and other harbingers of a less élitist artistic climate. In a notorious obituary documenting his fierce admiration for the fin-de-siècle achievements of Seidl and Dvořák, Krehbiel denounced Gustav Mahler, whose New York career he had followed, for rescoring Beethoven, composing polyglot symphonies and underestimating the sophistication of New York's concert and operatic culture. His review of the American première of Strauss's Salome (in Chapters of Opera) is a masterpiece of shrewd opprobrium. No subsequent New York music critic has played so influential a role within the city's community of artists.

WRITINGS

Notes on the Cultivation of Choral Music and the Oratorio Society of New York (New York, 1884)
Review of the New York Musical Season, i–v (New York, 1886–90)
Studies in the Wagnerian Drama (New York, 1891, 2/1893)
The Philharmonic Society of New York: a Memorial published on the Occasion of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Founding of the Philharmonic Society (New York, 1892)
How to Listen to Music (New York, 1896/R)
Music and Manners in the Classical Period (New York, 1898, 3/1899)
Chapters of Opera (New York, 1908, 3/1911)
A Book of Operas: their Histories, their Plots, and their Music (New York, 1909)
The Pianoforte and its Music (New York, 1911)
Afro-American Folksongs: a Study in Racial and National Music (New York, 1914)
A Second Book of Operas (New York, 1917)
More Chapters of Opera (New York, 1919)
ed.: A.W. Thayer: The Life of Ludwig van Beethoven (New York, 1921, rev. 2/1964 by E. Forbes)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Aldrich: 'Henry Edward Krehbiel', ML, iv (1923), 266–8 [obituary]
J. Horowitz: Understanding Toscanini (New York, 1987)
M. Beckerman: 'Henry Krehbiel, Antonín Dvořák, and the Symphony "From the New World"', Notes, xlix (1992–3), 447–73
J. Horowitz: Wagner Nights: an American History (Berkeley, 1994)
M. Grant: Maestros of the Pen: a History of Classical Music Criticism in America (Boston, 1998)

JOSEPH HOROWITZ

Krein [Kreyn]. Russian family of composers.

(1) Grigory Abramovich Krein [Kreyn] (b Nizhniy Novgorod, 6/18 March 1879; d Komarovo, nr Leningrad, 6 Jan 1955). He played the violin in a theatre orchestra in Tbilisi before entering the Moscow Conservatory, where he studied the instrument with Hřímaly and composition with Glière and Juon (1900–05). He then attended Reger's composition classes in Leipzig (1907–8). After teaching at the Moscow Conservatory, he lived for a while in Paris and Vienna (1926–34) where, with his son, he continued his studies. On his return to Russia, he held administrative positions. He shared with his brother Aleksandr an active interest in vernacular and sacred Jewish music, and a fascination with the work of Skryabin. However, from the outset Grigory's music distinguished itself from his brother's by its angularity, dense textures and terse, almost cerebral discourse: his harmonic language avoided explicit reliance on Jewish modes and chromatically altered dominant complexes. In several of the early piano works, languid diatonic themes develop to symphonic, highly chromatic climaxes; some of the op.5 preludes were written for Yelena Bekman-Shcherbina who gave the first performance of Skryabin's Sixth Sonata. Later works such as the Second Sonata combine impressionist colouring with an almost Expressionist harmonic language that convincingly incorporates melodic contours of ancient Jewish chant. With its fleeting glimpses of tonality amidst harmonic ambiguity, his mature language brought to Russian Jewish music a modernist European flavour.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Poėma no.1, vn, orch, 1922; Saul i David, sym. poem, op.26, ?1923; Cortège, op.31; Ballad, op.39, vn, orch, Poėma no.2, vn, orch, 1934; Vn Conc., 1934; Lenin: 3 simfonicheskiye ėpizoda, 1937; Conc.-Fantasy, vn, orch, 1939; Sym., 1946; Ballad, 1947

Chbr: Sonata no.1, op.11, vn, pf, 1913; Str Qt, 1915; Poėma, op.25, vn, pf, 1921; 2 préludes, opp.27–8, fl, str qt, pf; Sonata no.2, vn, pf, 1923; Yevreyskaya rapsodiya, op.32, cl, str qt, pf, 1926; 3 pièces, op.36, vc, pf; Pf Qt

Pf: Sonata no.1, op.2, 1906; 2 poèmes, op.5, 1905; 5 préludes, op.5a, ?1905; 3 fragments, op.6; 2 poèmes, op.10, ?1912; Poème, op.16; 3 poèmes, op.24, 1918–23; Sonata no.2, op.27 1924; Sonata no.3, op.29; Mon epitaphe, op.33

Other works: romances for 1v, pf, incl. Peintures vocales, opp.4, 8 and 21; incid music

Principal publishers: Zimmermann, Jürgenson, Gosizdat

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Sabaneyev: Modern Russian Composers (New York, 1927)
V. Shirinsky: 'Zhivoye iskusstvo' [A living art], SovM (1965), no.1, pp.158–9
L. Sitsky: Music of the Repressed Russian Avant Garde (Westport, CT, 1994), 225–9

(2) Aleksandr Abramovich Krein (b Nizhniy-Novgorod, 8/20 Oct 1883; d Staraya Ruza, Moscow region, 21 April 1951). Brother of (1) Grigory Abramovich Krein. Along with Grigory and his other five brothers, he received his first musical education from his father Abram, a badhan and klezmer musician and a collector of Jewish folk music, who had moved from his native Lithuania in 1870. At the age of 14 he entered the Moscow Conservatory, where he studied the cello with Aleksandr von Glehn; he also took composition classes with Leonid Nikolayev, Sergey Taneyev and Boleslav Yavorsky. He then studied music theory for one further year at the music school attached to the Moscow Philharmonic Society. His first works were published by Jürgenson in 1901, and by the end of that decade his music was regularly heard at chamber concerts in Moscow. He became a member of the Society for Jewish Folk Music, which commissioned a set of Yevreyskiye ėskizï ('Jewish Sketches') for clarinet and string quartet. This work met with such success that another set was requested; this Krein dedicated to his parents and the writing, with its direct allusion to Jewish domestic music, vividly recreates the sounds which must have filled the Krein household when Aleksandr was growing up. Krein returned to teach at the conservatory (1912–17) before he was appointed secretary of the artistic section of Muzo-Narkompros; he later served as the secretary of the academic and ethnographical sections of that organization. From 1922 he held a post as a jury member of the State Publishing House. During the 1920s he wrote music for several plays staged in the Habimah, the Ukrainian, the Moscow and the Belarusian Jewish theatres. The opera Zagmuk (1929–30) concerned the Jewish uprising in Babylon in the 8th century BCE and was his last work to show Jewish influence openly. That such subject matter was to be avoided as early as 1934 is demonstrated by the publication, in that year, of a Melodiya ('Melody'), op.43, for cello and piano; five years previously, Sabaneyev had listed this work in his book on Krein as Yevreyskaya melodiya. The Spanish-influenced ballet Laurentsiya written in the mid-1930s enjoyed some success but, while colourfully scored and undoubtedly the work of a talented composer, it is devoid of the singular harmonic and melodic invention of Krein's earlier music. Although some of Krein's later works (such as his Second Symphony written in 1944–6 during his wartime evacuation to Nal′chik) demonstrate his interest in Armenian, Syrian and Turkish folksong, they possess little of the colour and vitality which his Jewish roots and his harmonic adventurousness imparted to other compositions.

Krein's finest works were written between 1910 and about 1928. In these, he absorbed the contours and inflections of Jewish folk music into a harmonic language which, being characterized by the use of altered dominant 9th and 11th chords, is clearly related to that of Skryabin, with whom he became acquainted around 1910. Even his earliest works display the fervent, passionate expression which dominated his music of the 1910s and 20s. Relatively complex harmony, often based on dominant sonorities, is frequently presented within parallel octaves which delineate melody. In the Elegiya (1913) for piano trio and many works of his earlier period, a slowish triple metre is ornamented with chromatic voice leading between harmonies and arpeggiated melodic fragments. From 1910 onwards Krein used both secular and sacred Jewish material with growing frequency and confidence. Attracted to symbolist poetry in his early songs, he later wrote cycles to words by Jewish poets, and in these used a variety of Jewish musical materials within a harmonic context of considerable subtlety. When writing what are arguably his most impressive works – the First Symphony and Piano Sonata (1922 and 1923–5) – Krein employed ancient Hebrew melodies in a harmonic system which manages organically to combine, by virtue of their shared intervallic properties, elements of Skryabin's late language and modes found in Jewish folk music.

WORKS

Stage: Zagmuk (op, after A. Glebov), 1930; Laurentsiya (ballet, after L. de Vega: Fuente Ovejuna), 1937; Tat'yana: doch' naroda [Tat'yana: Daughter of the People] (ballet, V. Meshcheteli), 1940–42, rev. 1947

Orch: Poème, vc, orch, 1910; Fragment symphonique, op.14, 1912; Salome, op.19, 1914; Elegiya, str, op.21, 1917; Roza i krest' [The Rose and the Cross], op.26, 1918 [sym. fragments after A. Blok]; Sym. no.1, op.35, 1923–5; Sym. no.2, op.55, 1944–6; Suite from the Dancing Instructor (after L. de Vega), op.56, 1946

Vocal: Tol'ko lyubov' [Only Love], 5 songs, 1v, pf, op.17, 1914; Vo dni skorbi [In the Days of Struggle], 5 songs, 1v, pf, op.20, 1915; 3 pesni getto [3 Songs From the Ghetto] (Kh. Bilyak), 1v, pf, op.23, 1917; Roza i krest' (A. Blok), 4 songs, 1v, pf, op.25, 1918; 3 pesni (Oshanin), 1v, pf, op.27, ?1918; 2 yevreyskiye pesni [2 Jewish Songs] (L. Yaffe, O. Mandelstam), 1v, pf, op.29, 1918; Gazeli i pesni [Ghazels and Songs], 1v, pf, op.31, 1921; Kaddish (trad. texts, Oshanin), T, chorus, orch, op.33, 1921; Traurnaya oda pamyati Lenina [Funeral Ode in Memory of Lenin], chorus, orch, op.40, 1925–6; 2 yevreyskiye pesni (I. Charik, I. Kushnirov), 1v, pf, op.39, 1926; Ornamentï [Ornaments], 1v, pf, 1927 [vocalises]; 8 khor [8 Choruses], 1928; The USSR – Shock Brigade of the World Proletariat, sym. dithyramb, nar, chorus, orch, op.48, 1931–2; 6 romansov (I. Ehrenburg), op.54, 1944; Songs of the Stalinist Falcon (M. Gor'ky), Mez, chorus, orch, 1948–9

Chbr and solo inst: Fragment lyrique, 4 vc, op.1a, 1901; Prolog, va, pf, op.2a, 1902/1927 [arr. of 1st movement of Eskizï yunosti, op.2]; Poème, vc, pf, op.10, 1909–10 [arr. of work for vc, orch]; Yevreyskiye ėskizï [Jewish Sketches], vol. 1, cl, str qt, op.12, 1910; Yevreyskiye ėskizï, vol. 2, cl, str qt, op.13, 1910; Poème no.2, vn, pf, op.15, 1912; Elegiya, pf, trio, op.16, 1913; Yevreskoye kaprichchio [Jewish Caprice], vn, pf, op.24, 1917; Dve arii [2 Arias], vn, pf, op.41, 1926; Yevreyskaya melodiya [Jewish Melody], vc, pf, op.43, 1928; Str Qt no.2, 1950–51 [completed by Litinsky]

Pf: Ėskizï yunosti [Sketches of Youth], op.2, 1902; 5 prelyudiy/5 préludes, op.6; 2 poėma/2 poèmes, op.11, 1910; Triada poem/Triade de poèmes, op.18, 1915; 2 malen'kiye poėma/2 petites poèmes, op.30, 1920; Sonata, op.34, 1922; Tantseval'naya syuita [Dance Suite], op.44, 1928

Incid music for the theatre, opp.36–8

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Sabaneyev: A. Kreyn (Moscow, 1928)
L. Saminsky: Music of the Ghetto and the Bible (New York, 1931)
I. Bėlza: Handbook of Soviet Musicians (London, 1943)
Yu. Krein and N. Rogozhina: A. Kreyn (Moscow, 1964)
P.D. Roberts: Modernism in Russian Piano Music: Skriabin, Prokofiev and their Contemporaries (Bloomington, IN, 1993) [incl. analysis of the Piano Sonata, op.34]
L. Sitsky: Music of the Repressed Russian Avant Garde (Westport, CT, 1994)
J. Powell: After Scriabin: Six Composers and the Development of Russian Music (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1999)

(3) Yulian Grigor'yevich Krein (b Moscow, 20 Feb/5 March 1913; d 28 May 1996). Composer and musicologist, son of (1) Grigory Abramovich Krein. He studied composition with Dukas at the Ecole Normale in Paris, graduating in 1932, and lived in Moscow from 1934. His compositions developed under the influence of French music, but he also drew upon the 19th-century Russian tradition and on the innovations of Skryabin. As a result his music is complex and many-sided, its lyricism clearly expressed in melodic breadth and colourful harmony. The French connection is most evident in his orchestration, while the chamber pieces are more Romantic in style. A prolific composer and a noted musicologist, he also appeared frequently as a pianist.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Pf Conc. no.1, 1929; Razrusheniye [Destruction], sym. prelude, 1929; Vc Conc., 1929; 3 pf concs., 1929, 1942, 1943; Galateya, ballet (1934); Vesennyaya simfoniya [Spring Sym.], 1935–59; Simfonicheskaya ballada (1942); Arkticheskaya poėma, sym., 1943; Serenade, 1943; Vesennyaya syuita, 1948; Serebryanoye kopïttse [The Silver Hoof], after P. Bazhov, 1949; 3 poėmï 'Druz'yam mira' [To the Friends of Peace], 1953; Poėma-simfoniya, 1954; Poėma, vn, orch, 1956; Vn Conc., 1959; Liricheskaya oda, 1962; Skazka o rïbake i rïbke [Tale of the Fisher and the Fish], after A.S. Pushkin, 1970

Vocal: Rembrandt, vocal-sym. picture, 1962–9; songs

Chbr: Str Qt no.1, 1925; Str Qt no.2, 1927; Str Qt no.3, 1936; Str Qt no.4, 1943; Suite, vc, pf, 1928; Sonata no.1, vn, pf, 1948; Sonata-fantasia, vc, pf, 1955; Sonata, fl, pf, 1957; Pf Trio, 1958; Sonata, cl, pf, 1961; Sonata no.2, vn, pf, 1971; Sonata-poėma, vc, pf, 1972

Pf: 2 sonatas, 1924, 1955; Ballada, 1955; other pieces

Principal publishers: Muzika, Sovetskiy Kompozitor, Universal

WRITINGS

Manuel' de Fal'ya (Moscow, 1960)
Simfonicheskiye proizvedeniya Kloda Debyussi (Moscow, 1962)
Simfonicheskiye proizvedeniya Morisa Ravelya (Moscow, 1962) with N.I. Rogozhina: Aleksandr Kreyn (Moscow, 1964)
Kamerno-instrumental'nïye ansambli Debyussi i Ravelya (Moscow, 1966)
Stil' i kolorit v orkestre (Moscow, 1967)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Yu.N. Tyulin: Yulian Kreyn: ocherk zhizni i tvorchestva [Krein: sketch of his life and work] (Moscow, 1971)
G.B. Bernandt and I.M. Yampol'sky: Kto pisal o muzïke [Writers on music], ii (Moscow, 1974) [incl. list of writings]
N. Tolstïkh: 'Bït' samim soboy' [To be yourself], SovM (1985), no.6, pp.7–11
L. Sitsky: Music of the Repressed Russian Avant-Garde, 1900–1929 (Westport, CT, 1994)
Obituary, Muzïkal'noye obozreniye (1996), nos.7–8, p.18

JONATHAN POWELL (1, 2), GALINA GRIGOR'YEVA (3)

Kreinin, Julia. See KREYNINA, YULIYA VOLFOVNA.

Kreisler, Fritz (b Vienna, 2 Feb 1875; d New York, 29 Jan 1962). American violinist and composer of Austrian birth. He began to learn the violin at the age of four with his father, a doctor and enthusiastic amateur violinist. After lessons with Jacques Auber, he gained admission to the Musikverein Konservatorium at the age of seven – the youngest child ever to enter. For three years he studied the violin with Joseph Hellmesberger jr and theory with Bruckner. He gave his first performance there when he was nine and won the gold medal when he was ten – an unprecedented distinction. He then studied at the Paris Conservatoire under J.L. Massart, who had taught Wieniawski. Kreisler left the Conservatoire in 1887, sharing the premier prix with four other violinists, all some ten years older. From the age of 12 he had no further violin instruction.

In 1889–90 Kreisler toured the USA as assisting artist to Moriz Rosenthal, but with only moderate success. He returned to Vienna: two years at the Gymnasium and two as a pre-medical student were followed by military service. All this time, Kreisler barely touched the violin. However, once he decided on a musical career, he quickly regained his technique. In 1896 he applied to join the orchestra of the Vienna Hofoper but failed, allegedly because of poor sightreading. Two years later he had the satisfaction of scoring a notable success with the Vienna PO, actually the same ensemble that had denied him a place. A year later, on December 1899, his début with the Berlin Philharmonic under Nikisch marked the beginning of an international career. He reappeared in the USA during the 1900–01 season, then made his London début at a Philharmonic concert under Richter on 12 May 1902. In 1904 he was presented with the Philharmonic Society's gold medal. Elgar composed his Violin Concerto for Kreisler who gave its première on 10 November 1910 at Queen's Hall, with Elgar conducting.

At the outbreak of World War I Kreisler joined the Austrian Army. He was medically discharged after being wounded, and embarked for the USA (his wife's native country) in November 1914. However, anti-German feelings ran so high that he withdrew from the platform, reappearing in New York on 27 October 1919. From 1924 to 1934 he lived in Berlin. When Austria was annexed by the Nazis the French Government offered him citizenship. In 1939 he returned for good to the USA, and became an American citizen in 1943. A traffic accident in 1941 impaired his hearing and eyesight; nevertheless, he resumed his career. He made his last Carnegie Hall appearance on 1 November 1947, though he broadcast during the 1949–50 season. After that, his interest in the violin waned; he sold his collection of instruments and kept only an 1860 Vuillaume.

Kreisler was unique. Without exertion (he practised little) he achieved a seemingly effortless perfection. There was never any conscious technical display. The elegance of his bowing, the grace and charm of his phrasing, the vitality and boldness of his rhythm, and above all his tone of indescribable sweetness and expressiveness were marvelled at. Though not very large, his tone had unequalled carrying power because his bow applied just enough pressure without suppressing the natural vibrations of the strings. The matchless colour was achieved by vibrato in the style of Wieniawski who (in Kreisler's words) 'intensified the vibrato and brought it to heights never before achieved, so that it became known as the "French vibrato"'. However, Kreisler applied vibrato not only on sustained notes but also in faster passages which lost all dryness under his magic touch. His methods of bowing and fingering were equally personal. In fact his individual style was, as Flesch said, ahead of his time, and may explain his comparatively slow rise to fame. Yet there is hardly a violinist in the 20th century who has not acknowledged admiration of and indebtedness to Kreisler.

Kreisler was also a gifted composer. Among his original works are a string quartet, an operetta, Apple Blossoms (with Viktor Jacobi, 1919), cadenzas to the Beethoven and Brahms concertos, and numerous short pieces (Tambourin chinois, Caprice viennois etc.). He made many transcriptions and editions. In addition, he composed dozens of pieces in the 'olden style' which he ascribed to various 18th-century composers, such as Pugnani, Francoeur, Padre Martini etc. When Kreisler admitted in 1935 that these pieces were a hoax, many critics (including Ernest Newman) were indignant while others accepted it as a joke. It is strange indeed that so many experts were misled by Kreisler's impersonations; at any rate, these charming pieces continue to enrich the violin repertory.

Fritz Kreisler: portrait by Boris Chaliapin, gouache and coloured pencil, 1943 (National Portrait Gallery, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, DC)

WRITINGS

Four Weeks in the Trenches (Boston and New York, 1915)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CampbellGV; SchwarzGM
L.P. Lochner: Fritz Kreisler (New York, 1950/R) [with discography and repr. of the controversy with Newman]
F. Bonavia: 'Fritz Kreisler', MT, ciii (1962), 179
J.W. Hartnack: Grosse Geiger unserer Zeit (Munich, 1967, 4/1993)
J. Creighton: Discopaedia of the Violin, 1889–1971 (Toronto, 1974)
I. Yampol'sky: Frits Kreysler: zhizn' i tvorchestvo (Moscow, 1975)
The Strad, xcviii (1987) [Kreisler edition]
A.C. Bell: Fritz Kreisler Remembered: a Tribute (Braunton, 1992)
H. Adamson: 'Forgotten Treasure', The Strad, cvii (1996), 692–3

BORIS SCHWARZ

Kreith, Karl [Charles, Carlo] (b c1746; d Vienna, 22 Dec 1803). Flautist and composer. He was a musician in the Galician honorary guard from about 1782 to 1791, when he joined the Viennese Hofkapelle as a timpanist. He was esteemed as a virtuoso on the transverse flute, for which he wrote numerous compositions and tutors. His musical works found wide currency about 1800 in both aristocratic and bourgeois circles throughout Europe. In addition to many occasional works, his output comprises mainly chamber music, mostly for winds, as well as transcriptions for Harmoniemusik.

WORKS
(selective list)

6 Duetts, 2 fl (London, c1800)
Fl Conc., G, op.70 (Vienna, 1802)
12 Duetti, 2 hn (Vienna, 1802); ed. A. Suppan (Freiburg, 1994)
4 partitas: 2 in B♭, 2 cl, 2 hn, 2 bn, opp.57–58 (Vienna, n.d.); 2 in D, 2 cl, 2 hn, bn, opp.59–60 (Vienna, [1802])
3 Qts, flageolet, 2 vn, vc, op.93 (Vienna, 1803)
Qt, G, fl, vn, va, vc (Vienna, n.d.)
3 Terzetti, 2 cl, bn/vc (Vienna, n.d.)
6 originale ungarische Tänze, 2 fl (Brunswick, n.d.; Vienna, n.d.); ed. A. Suppan (Freiburg, 1992)
2 sonatas, cl, vn, A-Wgm; ed. A. Suppan (Vienna, 1996)

PEDAGOGICAL WORKS

Kurzgefasste Anleitung die Flöte zu spielen (Vienna, 1803), enlarged by F. Devienne (Vienna, n.d.)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KöchelKHM; WurzbachL
W. Suppan: 'Karl Kreith: Flötist, Komponist, Pädagoge der Haydn-Zeit', Neues Musikwissenschaftliches Jb, iv (1995), 47–76 [incl. detailed list of works]

WOLFGANG SUPPAN

Krejčí, Iša [František] (b Prague, 10 July 1904; d Prague, 6 March 1968). Czech composer and conductor. Born into a family of intellectuals (his father was an important Czech philosopher), he received a broad general education but held a lasting interest in history and the classical arts. From these stemmed his interest in Mozart, especially after acquiring a deeper knowledge of Die Zauberflöte in 1917. He read aesthetics, history and musicology at Prague University (1923–7), where he developed an interest in the works of Smetana, and concurrently attended the Prague Conservatory, studying composition with Jirák and conducting with Pavel Dědeček; in 1927–8 he attended Novák's masterclasses. After working as a répétiteur at the Bratislava Opera (1931–2), Krejčí returned to Prague and, together with Bořkovec, Ježek, Holzknecht and Martinů (who lived in Paris), founded the Mánes group, whose interests focussed on contemporary French music. Between 1934 and 1945 Krejčí was a conductor and producer at Prague radio, and conductor also of the Orchestral Association in Prague (from 1936). He was chief conductor and artistic director of the Olomouc Opera from 1945 to 1958, and in 1959 was appointed Dramaturg at the National Theatre in Prague.

As a conductor, he familiarized himself with current French music and the works of Stravinsky. As a composer he traced an individual path between the compositional complexity of the time and the piquant simplicity of the music of Les Six. Taking Mozart as his example, his works display a penchant towards well-defined forms and logical development. His first critical triumph was the Divertimento 'Kasace' of 1925. A filigreed work based on Classical forms, this piece established Krejčí as a Czech representative of neo-classicism. His later works reflect a growing interest in larger forms, more audacious harmony and exuberant rhythmic development. However, this structure of his works remained Classically symmetrical and their harmony generally diatonic. In cyclical forms he alternates large, melodious slow movements and lively movements full of temperament.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Malý balet [Little Ballet] (after V. Nezval), 1927; Antigona (stage cant., 1, after Sophocles), 1933, rev. 1959–62; Pozdvižení v Efesu [Uproar in Ephesus] (ob, 2, after W. Shakespeare: The Comedy of Errors), 1939–43; Temno [The Darkness] (dramatic scenes, Krejčí and Bachtík, after, A. Jirásek), 1944, rev. 1951;
Vocal: Zpěv zástupů [The Song of the Crowds] (cant. J. Hora), chorus, orch, 1925, orchd 1948; 6 písní [6 songs] (J. Neruda), Bar, pf, 1931, orchd; 4 madrigaly (K.H. Mácha), 1936; 5 písní (J.A. Comenius), 1938; Antické motivy (J.V. Sládek, Sophocles), low male v, pf, 1936, orchd 1940
Orch: Symfonietta-Divertimento, 1929; Suita z hudby ke komické opeře [Suite of Music from Comic Operas], 1933; Concertino, pf, ww, brass, perc, 1935; Concertino, vc, orch, 1936; Concertino, vc, orch, 1939; Suita, orch, 1939; 20 variací na vlastní téma v duchu národní písně [20 Variations on an Original Theme in the Style of a Folksong], 1946; Serenáda, orch, 1948; 14 variací na píseň 'Dobrú noc' [14 Variations on the Song 'Goodnight'], 1951; Sym. no.1, D, 1954; Sym. no.2, C♯, 1956; Sym. no.3, C, 1961; Sym. no.4, 1966; Vivat Rossini, ov., 1967
Chbr and solo inst: Divertimento 'Kasace' [Cassation], fl, cl, tpt, bn, 1925; Trio-Divertimento, ob, cl, bn, 1935; Trio, cl, db, pf, 1936; Divertimento, nonet, 1937; 3 scherzini, pf, 1953; Str Qt no.2, d, 1953; Str Qt no.3, 1960; Sonatina concertante, vc, pf, 1961; Wind Qnt, 1964; Trio, contralto, vn, vc, pf, 1965; 4 přídavkové kusy [4 encore pieces], vn, pf, 1966; Str Qt no.4, 1966; Str Qt no.5, 1967

Principal publisher: Český hudební fond, Supraphon, Panton

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS
V. Holzknecht: 'Iša Krejčí', HRo, vi (1953), 295
V. Gregor: 'Olomoucké působení Iši Krejčího' [Krejčí's activities in Olomouc], HRo, vii (1954), 496
J. Kasan: Novoklasicismus v díle Iši Krejčího [Neo-classicism in Krejčí's work] (diss., U. of Prague, 1956)
V. Holzknecht: Hudební skupina Mánesa [The musicial group Mánes] (Prague, 1968)
V. Holzknecht: Iša Krejčí (Prague, 1976)

JIŘÍ MACEK

Krejčí, Josef (b Milostín, nr Rakovník, 6 Feb 1822; d Prague, 19 Oct 1881). Czech composer, teacher and organist. Bohumír Štědroň (ČSHS) and others give his birth date as 17 December 1821. Krejčí's teachers included Robert Führer and Vitásek. He initially devoted himself to church music, establishing a reputation in Czech and German lands as an excellent organist, improviser and conductor. He held appointments at several Prague churches, and in 1858 he became director of the Prague Organ School, where his pupils included Dvořák. In 1865 he relinquished these posts after successfully competing against Smetana and others for the directorship of the Prague Conservatory. His incumbency, which lasted until 1881, was regarded by critics as a period of unhealthy cosmopolitanism, on account of his refusal to include contemporary Czech works in Conservatory concerts and his reluctance to allow pupils to participate in certain external Czech performances. His stance probably developed from a vitriolic dispute in 1860 over teaching appointments at the Organ School, which alienated him from formerly supportive influential nationalist circles. Previously he had played an important role in the Czech national revival. He wrote in Czech on music theory, and made an abortive attempt at a vernacular dictionary of musical terms. In 1848 he founded and edited the first independent Czech music periodical, Caecilie.

Krejčí composed mainly church works, some of which were published and popular in his lifetime. Particularly noteworthy are his two published masses, the second of which (no.4, 1857; dedicated to Liszt) is characterized by an assured handling of restricted resources and an expressive use of colouristic harmonic progression and chromatic melodic movement. His style was strongly influenced by Mendelssohn.

WORKS
(selective list)
many MSS in CZ-Pk

VOCAL

Das Labyrinth der Welt (orat, J. Wenzig, after J.A. Kominský), S, A, T, B, SATB, orch, op.35, 1857, inc.
Jubiläums Cantate, S, A, T, B, SATB, orch, op.37, 1857
4 masses, incl. no.1, F, S, A, T, B, SATB, orch, op.18 (Prague, 1852); no.4, a, S, A, T, B, SATB, op.25, 1857 (Prague, 1858)
Te Deum, D, S, A, T, B, SATB, orch, *c*1857; 1 other TeD
8 Responsorien in nativitate Domini, SATB, vc, db, org, op.26, *c*1854
2 Cz. choruses, TTBB, op.9 (Prague, n.d.)
many grads and offs

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Concert ov., d, op.42, 1865, Prague, 17 March 1867; rev., perf. Prague, 23 March 1872
Org: 5 Pastoral-Orgelvorspiele, op.8 (Prague, 1848); Praktische Elementar-Orgelkurs, 3 vols. (Prague, ?1848); Skladební obrazce ke tvoření preludií [Compositional Patterns to Create Preludes], 11 preludes, op.33 (Prague, 1858); Grosse Sonata, op.34, *c*1857; many other works
Pf: Deux pièces de salon en forme de mazurkas, op.7

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Meliš: 'Nynější stav hudby v Čechách vůbec a v Praze zvlášť' [The present state of music in Bohemia, with particular reference to Prague], Lumír, vii (1857), 1193 only
A.W. Ambros: Das Conservatorium zu Prag (Prague, 1858)
? J. Srb Debrnov: Obituary, Dalibor, iii (1881), 248–9, 257–8
J. Branberger: Konservatoř hudby v Praze [The Prague Conservatory of Music] (Prague, 1911; Ger. trans., 1911) [draws heavily on Ambros, op. cit.; incl. detailed work-list]
J.M. Květ: Mládí Antonína Dvořáka [The youth of Dvořák] (Prague, 1943), 84–7
J. Ludvová: Česká hudební teorie 1750–1850 [Czech music theory 1750–1850] (Prague, 1985), 22–3, 85–6

KARL STAPLETON

Krek, Uroš (b Ljubljana, 21 May 1922). Slovenian composer. He studied composition with Škerjanc at the Ljubljana Academy of Music, graduating in 1947. From 1950 to 1958 he was producer of orchestral music and director of the music programme for Ljubljana radio. He undertook research in the Ljubljana Ethnomusicological Institute (1958–67) and then taught composition at the Ljubljana Academy until his retirement in 1982. He is a member of the Slovenian Academy of Sciences and Arts. Krek's works, in a style first neo-classical then Expressionist, employ elements of Slovenian folk music and 12-note techniques.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Vn Conc., 1949; Sinfonietta, 1951; Mouvements concertants, 1955, rev. 1967; Sonatina, str, 1956; Rapsodični ples, 1959; Hn Conc., 1960; Inventiones ferales, vn, orch, 1962; Pic Concertino, 1967; Sinfonia per archi, 1970; Koncertni diptihon, vc, orch, 1985; Koncertna fantazija, cl, orch, 1987; Posvetilo [Dedication], 1989
Chbr and solo inst: Sonata, vn, pf, 1946; Thème varié, trbn, pf, 1968; Episodi concertanti, wind qnt, 1970; Sonata, 2 vn, 1972; Duo, vn, vc, 1974; Sur une mélodie, pf, 1977; Str Trio, 1977; Str Qt, 1980; Sonata, vc, pf, 1984; Streichsextett, 1990; Sarabanda per Nataša, cl, pf, 1993
Vocal: Staroegiptovske strofe [Ancient Egyptian strophes], T, str, 2 hp, 1967; Canticum Resianum, Mez, chbr orch, 1988; songs, choruses
Music for theatre, film, radio

Principal publishers: Edicije DSS, Breitkopf & Härtel, Peters

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Rijavec: 'Klangliche Realisierungen im Werk von Uroš Krek', MZ, xii (1976), 97–109
F. Križnar and T. Pinter: Sodobni slovenski skladatelji/Contemporary Slovenian Composers, ed. I. Bizjak (Ljubljana, 1997), 116–19, 290

ANDREJ RIJAVEC/IVAN KLEMENČIČ

Krellmann, Hanspeter (b Würzburg, 11 Jan 1935). German theatre and opera director and writer on music. He studied the piano at the Düsseldorf Conservatory (1955–8) and attended Cologne University, where he studied musicology with Fellerer, theatre history with Rolf Badenhausen, and ancient history (1958–62). He took the doctorate at Cologne in 1966 with a dissertation on Busoni and worked as a freelance writer on music, 1957–76. He was appointed chief Dramaturg of the Staatstheater, Darmstadt in 1976 and in 1982 he became press spokesman for the Bayerische Staatsoper, where he was made chief Dramaturg in 1984. His main interests are 20th-century composers and avant-garde music and he has written monographs on Webern and Gershwin; he has also edited chamber works by Brahms and he lectures on music at the University of Freiburg and on theatre at the University of Munich.

WRITINGS

Studien zu den Bearbeitungen Ferruccio Busonis (diss., U. of Cologne, 1966; Regensburg, 1966/R)
Ich war nie Avantgardist: Gespräche mit dem Komponisten Jürg Baur (Wiesbaden, 1968)
'Plädoyer für kurze Musik oder: gestaltete Verwirrung: Portrait des Komponisten Milko Kelemen', Musica, xxiii (1969), 555–8
'Stockhausen's Plea for Intuition: an Interview', World of Music, xii/2 (1970), 6–12
Anton Webern in Selbstzeugnisse und Bilddokumenten (Reinbek, 1975/R)
'Komposition als Moment der Verweigerung: Gespräch mit den Komponisten Peter Ruzicka', Musica, xxx (1976), 122–7
ed.: Stationen eines Dirigenten: Wolfgang Sawallisch (Munich, 1983/R)
George Gershwin (Reinbek, 1988/R; Jap. trans., 1993)
ed.: H. Rosendorfer: Don Ottavio erinnert sich: Unterhaltungen über die richtige Musik (Kassel, 1989)
'Zeitgenosse Paul Hindemith?', Hindemith-Jb 1990, 111–17
'Die Oper und ihr Publikum: über die notwendige Öffnung und Popularisierung des Theaters', Nationaltheater: die Bayerische Staatsoper, ed. H. Zehetmair and J. Schäder (Munich, 1992)
Edvard Grieg (forthcoming)

WILFRIED BRENNECKE/R

Kremastē. Sign used in pairs in Byzantine EKPHONETIC NOTATION.

Kremberg, Jakob [James] [Cranbrook, James; Cremberg, Jakob] (b Warsaw, *c*1650; bur. London, 20 Sept 1715). Composer, lutenist and music copyist of Polish birth, later active in England. He was registered at the University of Leipzig in 1672, became a chamber musician to the Duke-Administrator of Magdeburg in 1677, and joined the royal music at Stockholm the next year. He was an alto at the Dresden court between 1682 and at least 1691. Between 1693 and 1695 he directed the Hamburg opera with Johann Sigismund Kusser; he may have been the author of the libretto for Georg Bronner's opera Venus, oder Die siegende Liebe (1694; lost). Some time in the following two years he was at the University of Leiden, where he composed a setting of a poem by the physician and scientist Herman Boerhaave and perhaps taught John Clerk of Penicuik (Davidson).

Kremberg is next heard of advertising a concert series on 24 November 1697 at Hickford's Dancing School in London, claiming that he had 'lately come out of Italy'. Boerhaave told Clerk in a letter dated 9 February 1698 that Kremberg 'kept a band of fine musicians in London', who were praised for performing pieces celebrating the Peace of Ryswick, the king's birthday, the New Year and 'the elevation of the Count of Albermarle'. Furthermore, though he 'sang and played the lute at night by the bed of the King with his young son', he 'was not paid a single penny, rather he incurred immense expenses and ran up enormous debts'. Nothing more of him is known until 1702, when he is encountered in Scotland as music master to the children of Lady Grisell Baillie of Mellerstain House, Berwickshire. He finally received an English court post in April 1706, and was replaced by James Moore on 23 September 1715; he is presumably the 'James Cranbrook' who was buried three days earlier at St Anne's, Soho. He was survived by his wife Dorothea Sophia; the James Kremberg who had four children baptized at St Andrew's, Holborn, between 1715 and 1722 was presumably his son.

Kremberg was one of the more incompetent composers of the period, though that did not prevent him from writing some large-scale pieces, including A New-Framed Entertainment, a series of operatic scenes for a lost play similar to The Rehearsal, by the 2nd Duke of Buckingham. However, he is included in a list of leading lutenists in the Milleran manuscript (F-Pn Rés.823) and was an accomplished music copyist. All the surviving manuscripts of his compositions are in his elegant, distinctive hand, and he also copied GB-Lcm 779 (facs. in MLE, E1, 1990), a shortened English version of Giovanni Bononcini's Camilla possibly prepared for a court performance on 6 February 1707, and US-Wc M1515.A11 Case, a score of theatre suites by William Corbett, William Croft, John Eccles, James Paisible, Daniel Purcell and others, mainly copied from the Walsh series Harmonia Anglicana.

WORKS

Betrachtung der Welt (Ade O Weltigkeit!), 4vv, bc (Dresden, 1687); ed. in EDM, lxxix

Musicalische Gemüths-Ergötzung oder Arien (40 songs, 16 with verses by Kremberg), 1v, bc/lute/b viol/angélique/gui (Dresden, 1689); 3 ed. in Friedlaender, 1 ed. in Wolf

England's Glory (masque), for Queen Anne's birthday (London, 1706), music lost

A Collection of Easy and Familiar Aires, 2 rec; ov., passacaille, 3 rec (London, 1707), frag.

A New-Framed Entertainment (operatic scenes for a lost play), GB-Lcm

4 songs: Aurelia has sweet pleasing charms, 1v, vn/ob, hpd/bn; Farewell ye gilded follies, 1v, fl/vn, hpd; Lavinia has majestic charms, 1v, bc; Since I have seen Lucinda's charms, 1v, rec/vn, hpd, Och, US-LAuc

Setting of a poem by H. Boerhaave, ?1696/7, lost

Conc., C, 3 vn, opt. bc, S-Uu

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AshbeeR, ii, v; BDA; BDECM; FürstenauG, i; LS; NicollH; WolfW

M. Friedlaender: Das deutsche Lied im 18. Jahrhundert, i (Stuttgart and Berlin, 1902/R), 63

M. Tilmouth: 'A Calendar of References to Music in Newspapers Published in London and the Provinces (1660–1719)', RMARC, i (1961/R), esp. 21

D. Johnson: Music and Society in Lowland Scotland in the Eighteenth Century (London, 1972)

P. Davidson: 'Leo Scotiae Irritatus: Herman Boerhaave and John Clerk of Penicuik', The Great Emporium: the Low Countries as a Cultural Crossroads in the Renaissance and the Eighteenth Century, ed. C.C. Barfoot and R. Todd (Amsterdam, 1992), 155–94

PETER HOLMAN

Kremenliev, Boris (b Razlog, Bulgaria, 23 May 1911; d Los Angeles, 25 April 1988). American composer and ethnomusicologist. He came to the USA in 1929 and studied at DePaul University, Chicago (BM 1936, MM 1938), with Howard Hanson at the Eastman School (PhD 1942), and with Harris (composition) and Altschuler (conducting). During 1945–6 he was music director of the South German radio network; later he was appointed professor of composition at UCLA, from which he retired in 1978. He experimented with electronics and other new compositional resources, but then returned to a simpler style, colourful, rhythmically intense, terse and texturally unconventional; a shared cultural background led to some similarity with the music of Bartók. As an ethnomusicologist he concentrated on the folk music of Bulgaria and on Slav music in general. He has written a book, Bulgarian-Macedonian Folk Music (Berkeley, 1952), and many articles including several on 20th-century music. Kremenliev received grants from the American Philosophical Society (1955), the Ford Foundation (1962), the Creative Arts Institute (1966–7), and the Bulgarian Academy of Arts and Sciences (1979).

WORKS
(selective list)

Op: The Bridge (3, E. Kremenliev), 1966–

Orch: Sym. no.1 (Song Sym.), A, orch, 1940–41; The Odyssey of Runyon Jones (N. Corwin), 1946; 3 Village Sketches, band, 1949; Bulgarian Rhapsody, 1952; Elegy: June 5, 1968, 1968–9; Peasant Dance, 1984

Chbr and solo inst: 6 Miniatures, pf, 1952; Pf Sonata no.1, 1954; Str Qt no.1, 1954; Pf Sonata no.2, 1959; Str Qt no.2, 1965; Sonata, db, pf, 1966–7; Divertimento, vn, vc, 1967; Overtones, brass, 1983–4

Vocal: Song for Parting (E. Kremenliev), female vv, eng hn, str, 1949; Grapes (A.S. Pushkin), female vv, str qt, 1951; Facing West from California's Shores (W. Whitman), mixed vv, band, 1954; KOAN no.77 (E. Kremenliev), A, fl, cl, pf, perc, 1979; The Children (D. Dugau), S, pf, mand/vn, 1982

Crucifixion (film score), 1952 [on paintings of Rico Lebrun]; other incid music for stage, film, radio, TV

Principal publishers: Bruzzichelli, Foster, Leeds, Ocorr, Clayton Summy

WRITINGS

Bulgarian-Macedonian Folk Music (Berkeley, 1952)

'Some Social Aspects of Bulgarian Folksongs', Slavic Folklore, vi (1956), 112

'Types of Bulgarian Folk Songs', Slavonic and East European Review, xxxiv (1956), 335–76

'Some Observations on Stress in Balkan Music', Studies in Ethnomusicology, ed. M. Kolinski, ii (New York, 1965), 75–94

'Extension and its Effect in Bulgarian Folk Song', Selected Reports, i/1 (1966), 1–27
'The Influence of Folklore on the Modern Czech School of Composition', Czechoslovakia Past and Present, ed. M. Rechcigl, ii (The Hague, 1968), 1319–35
'Mnogoglasie: a Compositional Concept in Rural Bulgaria', Selected Reports in Ethnomusicology: Essays in Honour of Peter Crossley-Holland, ed. N. Marzac-Holland and N.A. Jairazbhoy (1983)

W. THOMAS MARROCCO/R

Kremer, Gidon (b Riga, 27 Feb 1947). Russian violinist of German parentage. He studied the violin with V. Sturesteps at the Latvian Academy of Music and with David Oystrakh and P. Bondarenko at the Moscow Conservatory (1965–73), during which time he won prizes in the Queen Elisabeth Competition in Brussels (1967), the Paganini and Montreal competitions (1969), and the Tchaikovsky prize in Moscow in 1970. Although this led to some 150 concerts in the USSR, for undivulged reasons he was not allowed to travel abroad for the next five years. In 1975 he was finally granted permission, and at his London début Karajan was in the audience and invited him to record the Brahms Violin Concerto and play at the opening concert of the Salzburg Festival with the Berlin PO. His New York début followed in 1977. Although Kremer is an eloquent exponent of the traditional Classical and Romantic repertory, he is also a strong advocate of contemporary music and has had a number of works written for him, of which he has given the first performances: these include Pärt's Tabula Rasa for two violins (with his first wife Tat'yana Grindenko, 1977); Schnittke's First Concerto grosso for two violins (1977), Violin Concerto no.4 (1984) and Trio (1985) and Denisov's Violin Concerto (1978). In recitals Kremer has been partnered by Martha Argerich, Oleg Maisenberg, Heinrich Schiff and others; he has also made over 300 recordings which include much contemporary repertory, notably works by Adams, Gubaydulina, Glass, Pärt and Schnittke. In 1981 he founded a chamber music festival at Lockenhaus in Austria, in which celebrated musicians from all over the world participate without fees. Kremer is a volatile, inspirational player with a dazzling virtuoso technique. He plays the 'ex-Baron Feilitsch' Stradivari, dated 1734. His autobiography, Kindheitssplitter, was published in Munich in 1993.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GMV
S. Tomes: 'Kremer v. Kremer', The Strad, xcv (1984), 422–7

MARGARET CAMPBELL

Kremlyov, Yuly Anatol'yevich (b Yessentuki, North Caucasus, 19 June 1908; d Leningrad, 19 Feb 1971). Russian musicologist. From 1925 he studied piano at the Leningrad Conservatory, but was compelled by a serious illness to abandon the course in 1928. He took up his musical studies again in 1929, graduated as an external student in 1933, and in the same year became a member of the Union of Soviet Composers. At about this time he began to write a series of short monographs on Russian and Western composers, including Borodin (1934), Liszt (1935), Mozart (1935), Bizet (1935) and Meyerbeer (1936), all published in Leningrad. From the late 1950s Kremlyov held positions on the editorial staff of Sovetskaya muzïka and the executive committee of the Soviet Composers' Union, and from 1957 was head of the music section at the Leningrad Institute of the Theatre, Music and Cinematography, which he had joined in 1937. He also produced a series of more extensive monographs on Chopin (1949, 3/1971), Grieg (1958), Solov'yov-Sedoy (1960), Debussy (1965), Massenet (1969) and Saint-Saëns (1970), all published in Moscow. He expressed his own views in many of his writings. He was particularly concerned with the importance of ideological contents in music, the decay of western culture in the 20th century and the struggle against modernism. He was granted his Kandidat degree in 1944, and his doctorate in 1963. Kremlyov composed a number of chamber works, including 14 piano sonatas.

WRITINGS

Leningradskaya gosudarstvennaya konservatoriya 1862–1937 [Leningrad State Conservatory] (Leningrad, 1938)
Tret'ya simfoniya A.N. Skryabina [Skryabin's Third Symphony] (Leningrad, 1941)
Frederik Shopen (Moscow, 1949; 3/1971)
Fortepiannïye sonatï Betkhovena (Moscow, 1953, 2/1970)
Voprosï muzïkal'noy ėstetiki [Problems of musical aesthetics] (Moscow, 1953)
Russkaya mïsl' o muzïke: ocherki istorii muzïkal'noy kritiki i ėstetiki v XIX veke [Russian thoughts on music: essays on the history of Russian music crticism and aesthetics in the 19th century] (Leningrad, 1954–60)
Simfonii P.I. Chaykovskogo (Moscow, 1955)
Ocherki po voprosam muzïkal'noy ėstetiki [Essays on the problems of musical aesthetics] (Moscow, 1957)
Ėsteticheskiye problemï sovetskoy muzïki [Aesthetic problems of Soviet music] (Leningrad, 1959)
Ėstetika prirodï v tvorchestve N.A. Rimskogo-Korsakova [The aesthetics of nature in the work of Rimsky-Korsakov] (Moscow, 1962)
'L'influence de Debussy: Russie', Debussy et l'évolution de la musique au XXe siècle: CNRS Paris 1962, 315–18
'Tendances réalistes de l'esthétique de Debussy', ibid., 189–98
Vïrazitel'nost' i izobrazitel'nost' muzïki [Expressiveness and descriptiveness of music] (Leningrad, 1962)
Poznavatel'naya rol' muzïki [The cognitive function of music] (Moscow, 1963)
Tikhon Khrennikov (Moscow, 1963)
Chto takoye muzïkal'naya tema [What a musical theme is] (Leningrad, 1964)
ed.: Voprosï teorii i ėstetiki muzïki [Questions of the theory and aesthetics of music] (Leningrad and Moscow, 1965) [incl. 'O ponyatiyakh formalizma i sotsialisticheskogo realizma' [On the concepts of formalism and socialist realism], iv, 29–52]
Ėsteticheskiye vzglyadï S.S. Prokof'yeva [Aesthetic views of Prokofiev] (Moscow and Leningrad, 1966)
O meste muzïki sredi iskusstv [On the place of music among the arts] (Moscow, 1966)
ed.: A. Ossovskiy: vospominaniya, issledovaniya [Reminiscences, researches] (Leningrad, 1968)
Natsional'nïye chertï russkoy muzïki [National features of Russian music] (Leningrad, 1968)
Proshloye i budushcheye romantizma [The past and future of Romanticism] (Moscow, 1968)
Izbrannïye stat'i i vïstupleniya [Collected articles and speeches] (Leningrad, 1969) [incl. list of musicological writings]
'Ucheniye Lenina o materialisticheskoy dialektike i nekotorïye voprosï muzïkal'noy nauki' [Lenin's teaching about materialist dialectics and some questions of musicology], Ucheniye Lenina i voprosï muzïkoznaniya [Lenin's teaching and questions of musical knowledge] (Leningrad, 1969), 77–109
Zhul' Massne [Jules Massenet] (Moscow, 1969)
Kamil' Sen-Sans (Leningrad, 1970)
'O burzhuaznoy ideologii v muzïke' [On bourgeois ideology in music], Lenin i muzïkal'naya kul'tura [Lenin and musical culture], ed. I. Prudnikova and K. Rozenshil'd (Moscow, 1970), 109–24
O roli razuma v vospriyatii proizvedeniya iskusstva [On the role of the intellect in the perception of works of art] (Moscow, 1970)
Ocherki tvorchestva i ėstetiki novoy venskoy shkolï [Essays on the work and aesthetics of the New Viennese School] (Leningrad, 1970)
ed.: A. Ossovskiy: muzïkal' no-kritischeskiye stat'i (1894–1912) [Critical articles on music] (Leningrad, 1971)
Yosef Gaydn [Haydn] (Moscow, 1972)

□

Kremsier (Ger.). See KROMĚŘÍŽ.

Kremsmünster. Benedictine abbey in Upper Austria. It was founded in 777 by Duke Tassilo of Bavaria to provide a Christian mission and to protect the area from the neighbouring Slavs and Hungarians. Plainchant was sung according to the Beneventan rite, which, along with the educational system, was modified according to the rules of Benedikt von Aniane of Aachen in 828. From that time until the 17th century there was an inner and an outer school: the latter was enlarged in 1549 into an Öffentliches Gymnasium. The abbey library has a rich collection of manuscripts, one of the most important in Europe. The Millenarius Minor Manuscript, a collection of gospels dating from the end of the 9th century, contains one of the earliest examples of neumatic notation; a number of manuscripts containing sequences and tropes give evidence of musical practice from the 11th century to the 14th. Polyphonic music found acceptance under the abbot Friedrich von Aich (abbot from 1274 to 1325) but contemporary manuscripts have not survived. The first organ was built before 1490; a splendid new organ was built in the abbey church by Gregor Ennser in 1515. The repertory by the end of the 16th century was dominated by Netherlanders and composers such as Lassus, Hassler and Regnart.

A wave of Italian influence, introduced by Alexander a Lacu from Lugano (abbot from 1601 to 1613) affected all artistic activity at Kremsmünster. The Ennser organ was replaced in 1623 by a more italianate instrument built by Andreas Puz of Passau, which in turn was replaced by an instrument made by Leopold Freundt in 1685. Alessandro Tadei (*c*1585–1667) became Kapellmeister in 1630; he was overshadowed by his successor Benedikt Lechler (1594–1657), who compiled several volumes of scores which give some insight into the progressive nature of the music collection (the Regenterei): the Mass repertory consisted primarily of works by Austrians (Stadlmayr, Straus, Lechler, Fux) and Italians (Valentini, Grandi, Banchieri, Verdina). Theatrical music can be traced from 1647, when a Stiftstheater was built. Incidental music for allegorical scenes, ballets and final choruses connected with Latin school dramas and dialogues became increasingly elaborate until these forms were banned in 1765. Such performances were given for visiting nobility, for the prelate and at the cloister school or, from 1744 to 1789, the Ritterakademie. Although personnel, including poets and composers, were usually drawn from the abbey's community, the influence of the Salzburg University theatre was strong from the beginning. Musical drama flourished between 1747 and 1783 under the direction of Franz Sparry (1715–67), a pupil of Leo, and Georg Pasterwiz (1730–1803), a pupil of Eberlin and a prolific composer. After 1771 the repertory was expanded to include Italian opere buffe and opere serie along with German operettas and Singspiele, some of the latter composed by Pasterwiz. This brilliant period faded with the reforms of Emperor Joseph II, and finally the Baroque theatre itself was demolished in 1804 to make room for a boarding school.

In place of opera a series of oratorio performances was initiated by music director Beda Plank (1794–1830) with Haydn's The Creation (1800) and The Seasons (1805); the last of these took place in 1914 with Rheinberger's Christophorus. Under Abbot Thomas Mitterndorfer (1840–60) a new organ with 61 stops was built by Ludwig Mooser (1854). Both Schubert and Bruckner maintained significant connections with Kremsmünster.

After World War II music was revitalized under the direction of the composer and musicologist Altman Kellner (1902–81) who succeeded Benno Feyrer, regens chori from 1908 to 1951. On Kellner's death Father Alfons Mandorfer (b 1933) was appointed regens chori. Johann Pirchner of Steinach, Tyrol, was commissioned to rebuild the great church organ along the lines of the Freundt instrument of 1685 and also to provide a new organ for the abbey's Marienkapelle (1972). A new 311-seat Stiftstheater was erected in 1956–7. Numerous manuscripts, including church music by Mozart and Michael Haydn and lieder by Schubert in contemporary copies, apparently stolen from Kremsmünster at the end of World War II, were returned to the abbey by the University of California, Berkeley, in 1990. The Regenterei now contains some 16,000 prints, autographs and manuscripts, making it the most significant monastic collection in Austria.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO (R.N. Freeman); MGG2 (R.N. Freeman, A. Kellner)
T. Hagn: Das Wirken der Benediktiner-Abtei Kremsmünster für Wissenschaft, Kunst und Jugendbildung (Linz, 1848)
G. Huemer: Die Pflege der Musik im Stifte Kremsmünster: Culturhistorischer Beitrag zur eilften Säcularfeier (Wels, 1877)
W. Neumüller and K. Holter: Die mittelalterlichen Bibliotheksverzeichnisse des Stiftes Kremsmünster (Linz, 1950)
A. Kellner: Musikgeschichte des Stiftes Kremsmünster (Kassel, 1956)
W. Lipphardt: 'Musik in den österreichischen Klöstern der Babenbergerzeit', Musicologica austriaca, ii (1979), 48–68
F.W. Riedel: 'Die Bedeutung der Musikpflege in den österreichischen Stiften zur Zeit von Joseph und Michael Haydn', KJb, lxxi (1987), 55–63

ALTMAN KELLNER/ROBERT N. FREEMAN

Krenek [Křenek], Ernst (b Vienna, 23 Aug 1900; d Palm Springs, CA, 22 Dec 1991). Austrian composer and writer, also active in Germany and the USA. One of the most prolific composers of the 20th century, he wrote in a wide variety of contemporary idioms.

Krenek began piano lessons at the age of six and was soon writing short piano pieces. In 1916 he began composition study with Schreker, whose emphasis on counterpoint prepared Krenek for Kurth's Lineare Kontrapunkte, a text that caused the young composer to conclude that 'music was not just a vague symbolization of emotion instinctively conjured up into pleasant sounding matter, but a precisely planned reflection of an autonomous system of streams of energy materialized in carefully controlled tonal patterns'. Conscripted into the Austrian Army during World War I, Krenek was posted to Vienna where he was able to continue his studies. In 1920 he followed Schreker to Berlin, where he attended the salon of Busoni, met Hermann Scherchen and befriended Eduard Erdmann and Artur Schnabel. Works from this period reflect Schreker's influence in their use of counterpoint and extended tonality.

The three years from 1921 to 1924 were musically productive for Krenek. With the performance of the First String Quartet at the 1921 Deutsches Tonkünstlerfest (Nuremberg), his mature compositional voice emerged. The stark dissonances and vigorous Bartókian rhythms of the quartet inspired more than 50 reviews, gaining Krenek a reputation that produced a contract with Universal Edition. He completed 18 works during these three years, among them the operas Die Zwingburg (1922), Orpheus und Eurydike (1923) and Der Sprung über den Schatten (1923). Most compositions received their premières within a year of completion. At the beginning of 1922 Krenek met Anna Mahler, the daughter of Gustav Mahler. Their relationship, providing him with an entrée into the Mahler circle, resulted in Franz Werfel's reworking of the libretto of Die Zwingburg and Alma Mahler's introduction to Alban Berg. Anna also asked Krenek to complete Mahler's Tenth Symphony; he edited the first and third movements of the work, but felt the remainder to be too undeveloped to justify completion artistically. The couple's marriage in 1924 lasted less than a year.

1. Ernst Krenek

In late 1922 Krenek was invited to join the board of the newly created ISCM. During the next three years many of his works were performed at ISCM concerts. He later served as president of the Austrian chapter of the society. After the enormous uproar created by the première of his Second Symphony in 1923 (Deutsches Tonkünstlerfest, Kassel), Krenek received a grant from Werner Reinhart that enabled him to live in Switzerland for a short time. Reinhart also introduced Krenek to Stravinsky and Rilke. Ordinarily opposed to musical settings of his texts, Rilke dedicated his cycle 'O Lacrymosa' to Krenek in the hope that it would be set to music, a project that was completed in 1926. In 1925 Krenek joined Paul Bekker at the Staatstheater Kassel. As assistant director Krenek composed incidental music, wrote notes for programme books and occasionally conducted.

In early 1925 Krenek travelled to Paris, where he met Les Six. Deciding that his music should become more accessible, he began sketching ideas for an opera. The completion of Jonny spielt auf (1925) marked a return to tonality and the beginning of what Krenek called his neo-Romantic period, influenced in part by his study of Schubert. The opera's première in early 1927 soon had Krenek riding a wave of success (fig.2). Three one-act operas were also completed: Der Diktator (1926), loosely based on the life of Mussolini; Das geheime Königreich (1926), a fairy tale; and Schwergewicht, oder Die Ehre der Nation (1928), a satire on sports hero-worship. After a second trip to Paris, during which he met Antheil, he settled in Vienna. He married Berta Hass [Hermann], a prominent actress, in 1928. Leben des Orest (1928–9), a grand opera, and Reisebuch aus den österreichischen Alpen (1929), a cycle of 20 songs extolling the Austrian countryside, also date from this period.

2. Scene in a Parisian hotel corridor (Part 1 scene iii) from Krenek's 'Jonny spielt auf', Neues Theater, Leipzig, 1927, with Max Spilcker (left) in the title role

On his return to Vienna, Krenek became good friends with Berg and Webern. Although he studied their scores, he did not discuss their music with them. He did engage in discussions with Adorno, however, with whom he had become friends in 1924. After both were appointed to the board of Anbruch in 1928, a debate between them over artistic responsibility appeared in print. Adorno argued that artists had a sociological responsibility to the conditions of the time, while Krenek maintained that artists were responsible only to a personal standard of merit. When Krenek received a commission from the Vienna Staatsoper in 1929, however, he decided to write a work based on the life of Emperor Charles V, reflecting the disintegration of society, extolling Austrian nationalism and employing the new 12-note compositional technique. A meeting with Karl Kraus in 1930 motivated two sets of songs on Kraus's texts (1931) that experiment with 12-note writing. Karl V, the first 12-note opera, was completed in 1933. Although political events cancelled its Viennese production, it was performed in Prague in 1938.

After regularly contributing to the arts page of the Frankfurter Zeitung from 1930 to 1933, Krenek could no longer write for the German press. The growing Nazi movement branded him a radical artist and banned his music and writings. In 1932 Krenek, Berg, Rudolph Ploderer and Willi Reich founded 23 (Dreiundzwandzig), a satirical magazine they continued to publish until 1937. In 1936 Krenek was also asked to prepare an edition of Monteverdi's L'incoronazione di Poppea for the Salzburg Opera Guild's American tour. He travelled with the company in 1937, presenting lecture recitals and recording his impressions and experiences for the Wiener Zeitung. It was on this trip that he first visited Los Angeles and became enamoured with the American West.

Shortly after his return to Europe the Nazis annexed Austria and Krenek emigrated to America, where he became a naturalized citizen. He taught at the Malkin Conservatory, Boston (1938–9), the University of Michigan summer school (1939), where his students included George Perle and Robert Erickson, and Vassar College (1939–42). Lamentatio Jeremiae prophetae (1941–2), written after a careful study of Ockeghem editions in the Vassar library, anticipated the serial techniques of Boulez and Stockhausen. In 1942 Krenek accepted a position at Hamline University, St Paul, Minnesota, where he taught until 1947. His close friendship with Mitropoulos and Krasner led to the foundation of the Minneapolis chapter of ISCM. Compositions from the Hamline years include Cantata for Wartime (1943), the Seventh String Quartet (1943–4), Santa Fe Timetable (1945), the chamber opera What Price Confidence? (1945), Symphonic Elegy (1946), dedicated to the memory of Webern, and the Fourth Symphony (1947).

In 1947, at the encouragement of Antheil, Krenek moved to Los Angeles, where he hoped to support himself through composition. When he found this to be impossible, he taught at small schools for a number of years. In 1949 he was appointed to a position at the Chicago Musical College (1949), but left Chicago in December due to the cold weather. Determined to live in the Los Angeles area, he divorced his wife and married the composer Gladys Nordenstrom in 1950. He returned to Europe to teach at the Darmstadt summer courses in 1950 and 1951; after an absence of two years (1952–3), however, he found his influence waning in the ascent of Boulez and Stockhausen. Many of his most important works were commissioned during this period, among them the chamber operas Dark Waters (1950) and The Bell Tower (1955–6), the fifth and sixth piano sonatas (1950, 1951), Eleven Transparencies (1954), for soprano and orchestra, and Pallas Athene weint (1952–5), a parable on the downfall of democracy dedicated to Adlai Stevenson.

In 1955 Krenek was invited by Eimert to work in his electronic music studio. This experience proved pivotal to Krenek's compositional style, resulting in Spiritus intelligentiae, sanctus (1955–6), a work for two voices and tape. The electronic medium motivated Krenek to develop a serial idiom; he became interested in the dialectic of predetermination and chance, as well as in the significance of time. As the Christian Gauss lecturer at Princeton University in the spring of 1957, Krenek learnt of the medieval poetic form Sestina, which seemed compatible with his serial ideas. In his composition Sestina (1957) he combined note row rotations with the medieval form. Many works composed in the following decade continued to employ serial techniques. In 1958 a renewed friendship with Stravinsky after years of estrangement, owing to a satirical remark made by Krenek about 12-note music at the 1925 Congress for Aesthetics, created many opportunities for the discussion of 12-note and serial procedures. He returned to Princeton in 1959 to lecture at the Seminars in Advanced Musical Studies.

In 1960 Krenek received several honours including the Silver Medal of Austria, the Gold Medal of Vienna, and memberships in the Berlin Academy of Arts, the Austrian State Academy of Music, Vienna, and the National Institute of Arts and Letters, New York. He moved to Palm Springs in 1966, where he served as an adviser in the formation of the music department at the University of California, San Diego (UCSD). During this time, collections of his essays and opera librettos were published. He also composed eight significant orchestral works, five major works for soprano and ensemble, two electronic works (along with several others including electronic music) and two television operas concerning chance and order (Ausgerechnet und verspielt, 1961; Der Zauberspiegel, 1963–6). He received commissions from the Hamburg State Opera for Der goldene Bock (1962–3), a work including elements of surrealism and the absurd, and Sardakai, oder Das kommt davon (1967–9), which makes use of ironic elements from the Così fan tutte story. His interest in serialism and time were often reflected in the titles of his instrumental music, such as Quaestio temporis (1959), From Three Make Seven (1960–61) and Instant Remembered (1967–8). Some of these works use timbres structurally, while others leave a number of parameters open to performer manipulation, or offer performers various ways to combine composed elements.

In 1970 Krenek was appointed to the post of Regent's Lecturer at UCSD. He was awarded the Cross of Austria and a Berlin Festival commission (Feiertags-Kantate) in 1975. During the last years of his life his compositional style became more relaxed, though he continued to use elements of 12-note and serial systems. Both his writings and his compositions, such as Spätlese (1972) for Fischer-Dieskau, became more introspective and biographical. The last works include the humorous television opera Flaschenpost vom Paradies (1972–3), vocal compositions such as They Knew What they Wanted (1977) and The Dissembler (1978), and three major orchestral compositions, most notably the autobiographical Arc of Life (1981). He summarized his compositional career in the Eighth String Quartet (1980–81), a work that quotes from his other quartets. The oratorio Opus sine nomine (1980–88) was his final large work. In 1982 he was appointed an honorary citizen of Vienna. He spent his remaining summers at the Arnold Schoenberg House in Mödling. In 1986 the first annual Krenek Prize for composition was established in Vienna.

WORKS

OPERAS

librettos by the composer unless otherwise stated

Die Zwingburg (scenic cant., 1, F. Werfel, after F. Demuth), op.14, 1922, Berlin, Staatsoper, 20 Oct 1924

Orpheus und Eurydike (3, O. Kokoschka), op.21, 1923, Kassel, Staats, 27 Nov 1926

Der Sprung über den Schatten (comic op, 3), op.17, 1923, Frankfurt, Opernhaus, 9 June 1924

Bluff (musical comedy, C. von Levetzov, after G. Gribble), op.36, 1924–5, withdrawn

Jonny spielt auf (2), op.45, 1925, Leipzig, Stadt, 10 Feb 1927

Der Diktator (tragic op, 1), op.49, 1926, Wiesbaden, Staats, 6 May 1928

Das geheime Königreich (fairy tale op, 1), op.50, 1926, Wiesbaden, Staats, 6 May 1928

Schwergewicht, oder Die Ehre der Nation (burlesque operetta, 1), op.55, 1927, Wiesbaden, Staats, 6 May 1928

Leben des Orest (grand op, 5), op.60, 1928–9, Leipzig, Neues, 19 Jan 1930

Kehraus um St Stephan (2), op.66, 1930, Vienna, Ronacher, 6 Dec 1990

Karl V (2), op.73, 1932–3, Prague, Neues Deutsches, 22 June 1938

Cefalo e Procri (It. op, 1, R. Küfferle, Ger. trans. Krenek), op.77, 1933–4, Venice, Goldoni, 15 Sept 1934

Die Krönung der Poppea (G.F. Busenello, Ger. trans. Krenek), op.80a, 1936, Vienna, Volksoper, 25 Sept 1937, orch of C. Monteverdi: L'incoronazione di Poppea

Tarquin (chbr op, 2, Eng. text by E. Lavery, Ger. text by M.-C. Schulte-Strahaus and P. Funk), op.90, 1940, Poughkeepsie, NY, Vassar College, 13 May 1941

What Price Confidence? [Vertrauenssache] (chbr op, 9 scenes), op.111, 1945, Saarbrücken, Stadt, 23 May 1962

Dark Waters [Dunkle Wasser] (1, after H. Melville: The Confidence Man), op.125, 1950, Los Angeles, U. of Southern California, 2 May 1951

Pallas Athene weint (3), op.144, 1952–5, Hamburg, Staatsoper, 17 Oct 1955

The Bell Tower [Der Glockenturm] (1, after Melville), op.153, 1955–6, Urbana, IL, U. of Illinois, 17 March 1957

Ausgerechnet und verspielt (TV op, 1), op.179, 1961, Österreichisches Fernsehen, 25 July 1962

Der goldene Bock [Chrysomallos] (4), op.179, 1962–3, Hamburg, Staatsoper, 16 June 1964

Der Zauberspiegel (TV op, 14 scenes), op.192, 1963–6, Bayerischer Fernsehen, 6 Sept 1967

Sardokai, oder Das kommt davon (Wenn Sardakai auf Reisen geht) (11 scenes), op.206, 1967–9, Hamburg, Staatsoper, 27 June 1970

Flaschenpost von Paradies, oder Der englische Ausflug (TV op), op.217, 1972–3, Österreichisches Fernsehen, 8 March 1974

OTHER STAGE

Ballets: Mammon (B. Balász, Ger. trans. H. Kröller), op.37, 1925; Der vertauschte Cupido, op.38, 1925 [after J.-P. Rameau]; Eight Column Line, op.85, 1939; Jest of Cards, op.162a, 1962 [arr. from Marginal Sounds, op.162]; Alpbach Qnt (choreog. Y. Georgi), op.180a, wind qnt, perc, 1962

Incid music: Das Gotteskind, op.42 (radio), 1925; Die Rache des verhöhnten Liebhabers, op.41 (E. Toller), 1925; Vom lieben Augustin, op.40 (Dietzenschmidt), 1925; A Midsummer Night's Dream, op.46 (W. Shakespeare), 1926; Der Triumph der Empfindsamkeit, op.43 (J.W. von Goethe), 1926; Marlborough s'en va-t-en guerre, op.52 (M. Achard), 1927; König Oedipus, op.188 (Sophocles), 1964

ORCHESTRAL

Syms.: no.1, op.7, 1921; no.2, op.12, 1922; no.3, op.16, 1922; Sym., op.34, wind, perc, 1924–5; Kleine Sinfonie, op.58, 1928; no.4, op.113, 1947; no.5, op.119, 1949; Sym. 'Pallas Athene', op.137, 1954

With solo inst(s): Conc. grosso no.1, op.10, 6 insts, str, 1921 [withdrawn]; Pf Conc. no.1, F♯, op.18, 1923; Concertino, op.27, fl, vn, hpd/pf, str, 1924; Conc. grosso no.2, op.25, 1924; Vn Conc. no.1, op.29, 1924; Pf. Conc. no.2, op.81, 1937; Little Conc., op.88, pf, org, chbr orch, 1939–40; Pf Conc. no.3, op.107, 1946; Conc., op.124, vn, pf, chbr orch, 1950; Pf Conc. no.4, op.123, 1950; Conc., op.126, hp, chbr orch, 1951; 2 Pf Conc., op.127, 1951; Vc Conc. no.1, op.133, 1953; Vn Conc. no.2, op.140, 1953–4; Suite, op.147a, fl, str, 1954; Capriccio, op.145, vc, small orch, 1955; Suite, op.148a, cl, str, 1955; Kitharaulos, op.213, ob, hp, small orch, 1971; Conc., op.230, org, str, 1979; Org Conc., op.235, 1982; Vc Conc. no.2, op.236, 1982

Other: Symphonische Musik no.1, op.11, ww, str, 1922; Symphonische Musik no.2, op.23, chbr orch, 1923 [withdrawn]; 7 Orchesterstücke, op.31, 1924; 3 Lustige Märsche, op.44, wind, 1926; Intrada, op.51a, wind, 1927; Potpourri, op.54, 1927; Theme and 13 Variations, op.69, 1931; Adagio and Fugue, op.78a, str, 1936; Campo Marzio, op.80, ov., 1937; Sym. Piece, op.86, str, 1939; I Wonder as I Wander, op.94, 1942 [variations on North Carolina folksong]; Tricks and Trifles, op.101, 1945 [arr. of Hurricane Variations]; Sym. elegy, op.105, str, 1946; Brazilian Sinfonietta, op.131, str, 1952; Scenes from the West, op.134, school orch, 1952–3; 7 Easy Pieces, op, 146, str, 1955; Kette, Kreis und Spiegel, op.160, 1956–7; Hexaedron, op.167, chbr orch, 1958; Quaestio temporis, op.170, small orch, 1959; From Three Make Seven, op.177, 1960–61; Nach wie von der Reihe nach, op.182, 2 spkrs, orch, 1962; 6 Profiles, op.203, 1965–8; Exercises of a Late Hour, op.200, small orch, tape, 1967; Horizon Circled, op.196, 1967; Instant Remembered, S, spkr, orch, tape, 1967–8; Perspectives, op.199, 1967; Fivefold Enfoldment, op.205, 1969; Statisch und ekstatisch, op.214, 1971–2; Auf- und Ablehnung, op.220, 1974; Von vorn herein, op.219, small orch, pf, cel, 1974; Dream Sequence, op.224, wind, 1975; Im Tal der Zeit, op.232, 1979; Arc of Life, op.234, chbr orch, 1981

CHORAL

Mixed vv: 3 Choruses (M. Claudius), op.22, unacc. chorus, 1923; Die Jahreszeiten (F. Hölderlin), op.35, 1925; 4 Choruses (J.W. von Goethe), op.47, unacc. chorus, 1926; Kleine Kantate, op.51, 1927, lost; 3 Choruses (G. Keller), op.61, 1929; 4 Austrian Folksongs, op.77a, 1934; Symeon der Stylit (orat), 1935–7, rev. 1987; Lamentatio Jeremiae prophetae, op.93, 1941–2; Santa Fe Timetable, op.102, 1945; O Would I Were, canon, op.109, 1946; 4 Choruses, op.138, mixed vv, org, 1953; Motette zur Opferung, op.141, 3vv, 1954; Ich singe wieder wenn es tagt (W. von der Vogelweide), op.151, mixed vv, str, 1955–6; Proprium missae in domenica III in quadragesima, op.143, 3vv, 1955; Psalmenverse zur Kommunion, op.149, 2–4vv, 1955; Guten Morgen, Amerika (C. Sandburg), op.159, 1956; Missa duodecim tonorum, op.165, mixed vv, org, 1957–8; 6 Motets (F. Kafka), op.169, 4vv, 1959; 3 Madrigals, 3 Motets, op.174, children's vv, 1960; Canon for Stravinsky's 80th Birthday (Krenek), op.181, 2vv, 1962; O Holy Ghost (J. Donne), op.186a, 1964; Glauben und wissen, op.186a, mixed vv, orch, 1966; Deutsche Messe, op.204, mixed vv, insts, 1968; 3 Lessons (Krenek), op.210, 1971; Settings of Poems by William Blake, op.226, 1976; Opus sine nomine (orat), op.238, 1980–88; For Myself, at Eightyfive, canon, op.238a, 4vv, ?1985

Female vv: 2 Choruses on Jacobean Poems (W.H. Drummond, W. Raleigh), op.87, 1939; Proprium missae in festo SS Innocentium martyrum, op.89, 1940; Cant. for Wartime (H. Melville), op.95, female vv, orch, 1943; Aegrotarit Ezechias, motet, op.103, 1944; 5 Prayers (Donne), op.97, 1944; In paradisum, motet, op.106, 1946; Remember Now, motet, op.115a, female vv, pf, 1947

Male vv: Jagd im Winter (F. Grillparzer), op.74, male vv, hn, timp, 1933

With solo vv: 4 kleine Männerchöre (Hölderlin), op.32, A, male vv, 1924; Kantate von der Vergänglichkeit des Irdischen (P. Fleming, A. Gryphius, other 17th-century Ger., trans. Krenek), op.72, S, mixed vv, pf, 1932; Proprium missae Trinitatis, op.195, S, mixed vv, insts, 1966–7; Messe 'Gib uns den Frieden', op.208, solo vv, mixed vv, insts, 1970; Feiertags-Kantate (Krenek), op.221, Mez, Bar, spkr, chorus, orch, 1974–5

SOLO VOCAL

With orch: Wechsellied zum Tanz (J.W. von Goethe), op.43a, S, orch, 1926; 4 Lieder (C. Günther, G.R. Weckherlin, P. Fleming), op.53, Mez, wind, 1927; Monolog der Stella (concert aria, Goethe), op.57a, S, orch, 1928; Durch die Nacht (song cycle, K. Kraus), op.67a, S, orch, 1930–31; Die Nachtigall (concert aria, Kraus), op.68a, coloratura S, orch, 1931; Medea (dramatic monologue, R. Jeffers, after Euripides), op.129, Mez, orch, 1951; 11 Transparencies, op.142, S, orch, 1954; The Dissembler (monologue, Krenek), op.229, Bar, chbr orch, 1978

With inst(s): Während der Trennung (P. Fleming), op.76, Mez, Bar, pf, 1933; The Holy Ghost's Ark (J. Donne), op.91a, Mez, 4 insts, 1941; La corona (Donne: 7 Sonnets), op.91, Mez, Bar, org, perc, 1941; Sestina (Krenek), op.161, S, 8 insts, 1957; 2 Zeitlieder (R. Pandula), op.215, Mez, str qt, 1972

Songs (1v, pf): 8 Lieder (G.H. Goering, F. Werfel, O. Krzyzanowski, F.G. Klopstock), op.9, 1921–2; 5 Lieder (G. Gezelle, Werfel), op.15, 1922; 5 Lieder (Krzyzanowski, Klopstock), op.19, 1923; 13 Lieder (Goering, H. Reinhart), op.30, 1924; O Lacrymosa (R.M. Rilke), op.48, 1926; 4 Lieder (17th-century Ger.), op.53, 1927, orchd 1927; 3 Lieder (Goethe), op.56, 1928; Reisebuch aus den österreichischen Alpen (Krenek), op.62, 1929; Fiedellieder (T. Storm, T. Mommsen), op.64, 1930; Gesänge des späten Jahres (Krenek), op.71, 1931; Das Schweigen (Gemminge), op.75, 1933; 5 Lieder (F. Kafka), op.82, 1937–8; The Ballad of the Railroads (Krenek), op.98, 1944; 4 Songs (G.M. Hopkins), op.112, 1946–7; 2 Sacred Songs, op.132, 1952; The Flea (Donne), op.175, 1960; Wechselrahmen (E. Barth), op.189, 1965; 3 Songs (L. von Sauter), op.216, 1972; Spätlese (Krenek), op.218, 1972; Two Silent Watchers (M. Rudulph), op.222, 1975; Albumblatt (Krenek), op.228, 1977

With tape: Spiritus intelligentiae, sanctus, op.152, 2 solo vv, tape, 1955–6; Quintina (Krenek), op.191, S, 6 insts, tape, 1965; They Knew What they Wanted (Krenek), op.227, nar, ob, pf, perc, tape, 1977

Unacc.: Étude, op.104, coloratura S, A, 1945

CHAMBER

3 or more insts: Serenade, op.4, cl, str trio, 1919; 4 str qts: no.1, op.6, 1921, no.2, op.8, 1921, no.3, op.20, 1923, no.4, op.24, 1923–4; Trio-Fantasie, op.63, pf trio, 1929; 3 str qts: no.5, op.65, 1930, no.6, op.78, 1936, no.7, op.96, 1943–4; Trio, op.108, vn, cl, pf, 1946; 5 Short Pieces, op.116; Str Qt, 1948; Str Trio, op.118, 1948–9; Parvula corona musicalis ad honorem Johannes Sebastiani Bach, op.122, str trio, 1950; Wind Qnt, op.130, 1952; Marginal Sounds, op.162, vn, pf, perc, 1957; Pentagram, op.163, wind qnt, 1957; Flötenstück neunphasig, op.171, fl, 6 pf, 1959; Hausmusik, op.172, various insts, 1959; Fibonacci mobile, op.187, str qt, pf 4 hands, 1964; Str Qt no.8, op.233, 1980–81; Streichtrio in 12 Stationen, op.235, str trio, 1985; Akrostichon, op.237a, 6 vc, 1987

1–2 insts: Sonata, f♯, op.3, vn, pf, 1919–20; Kleine Suite, op.28, cl, pf, 1924; Sonata, op.33, vn, 1924–5; Suite, op.84, vc, 1939; Sonata, op.92/3, va, 1942; Sonatina, op.92/2a, fl, va, 1942 [arr. op.92/2b, fl, cl, 1942]; Sonata, op.99, vn, pf, 1944–5; Sonata, op.115, vn, 1948; Sonata, op.117, va, pf, 1948; Phantasiestück, op.135, vc, pf, 1953; Suite, op.147, fl, pf, 1954; Sonata, op.150, hp, 1955; Suite, op.164, gui, 1957; Studien, op.184, vc, 1963; 4 Pieces, op.193, ob, pf, 1966; 5 Pieces, op.198, trbn, pf, 1967; Op.231, vn, org, 1979; Dyophonie, op.241, 2 vc, 1988; Op.239, hn, org, 1988; Suite, op.242, mand, gui, 1989

El-ac: San Fernando Sequence, op.185, tape, 1963; Quintona, op.190, tape, 1965; Doppelt beflügeltes Band, op.207, 2 pf, tape, 1969–70; Duo, op.209, fl, db, tape, 1970; Orga-nastro, op.212, org, tape, 1971

KEYBOARD

Pf: Double Fugue, op.1a, 1918; Sonata no.1, E♭, op.2, 1919; 5 Sonatinas, op.5, 1920; Tanzstudie, op.1b, 1920; Kleine Suite, op.13a, 1922; Toccata and Chaconne, op.13, 1922; 2 Suites, op.26, 1924; 5 Stücke, op.39, 1925; Sonata no.2, op.59, 1928; 4 Bagatelles, op.70, 4 hands, 1931; 12 Variations in 3 Movts, op.79, 1937; 12 Short Pieces, op.83, 1938; Sonata no.3, op.92/4, 1943; Hurricane Variations, op.100, 1944; 8 Pieces, op.110, 1946; Sonata no.4, op.114, 1948; George Washington Variations, op.120, 1950; Sonata no.5, op.121, 1950; Sonata no.6, op.128, 1951; 20 Miniatures, op.139, 1953–4; Echoes from Austria, op.166, 1958 [arr. Austrian folksongs]; 6 Vermessene, op.168, 1958; Basler Massarbeit, op.173, 2 pf, 1960; Piece, op.197, 1967; Sonata no.7, op.240, 1988

Other: Sonata, op.92/1, org, 1941; Organologia, op.180.5, org, 1962; Toccata, op.183, accdn, 1962; 10 Choral vorspiele, op.211, org, 1971; Four Winds, op.223, org, 1979; Acco-muuic, op.225, accdn, 1976

MSS in A-Wn, Wst, US-SPma, Wc, U. of California, San Diego

Principal publishers: Bärenreiter, Schott, Universal

WRITINGS

'Zur musikalichen Bearbeitung von Monteverdi's Poppea', SMz, lxxvi (1936), 545–55

Über neue Musik: sechs Vorlesungen zur Einführung in die theoretischen Grundlagen (Vienna, 1937/R; Eng. trans., rev. 1939/R as Music Here and Now)

'New Developments in the Twelve-tone Technique', MR, iv (1943), 81–97

'Gustav Mahler', in B. Walter: Gustav Mahler (Eng. trans., New York, 2/1941/R)

Selbstdarstellung (Zürich, 1948) [rev. and enlarged as 'Self Analysis', New Mexico Quarterly, xxiii (1953), 5–57]

Musik im goldenen Westen, ed. F. Saathen (Vienna, 1949)

Zur Sprache gebracht (Munich, 1958; Eng. trans. 1966 as Exploring Music) [essays]

Gedanken unterwegs, ed. F. Saathen (Munich, 1959) [essays]

'Extents and Limits of Serial Techniques', MQ, xlvi (1960), 210–32

Prosa, Drama, Verse (Munich, 1965)

Briefwechsel: Theodor W. Adorno und Ernst Krenek (Frankfurt, 1974)

Horizons Circled: Reflections on my Music (Berkeley, 1974)

Das musikdramatische Werk (Vienna, 1974–90) [librettos]

Elektro- Ton und Sphärenklang (Linz, 1980)

Im Zweifelsfalle (Vienna, 1984) [essays]

Der Hoffnungslose Radikalismus der Mitte: Briefwechsel Ernst Krenek–Friedrich T. Gubler, 1928–1939 (Vienna, 1989)

Franz Schubert: Ein Porträt (Tutzing, 1990)

Die amerikanischen Tagebücher, 1937–1942 (Vienna, 1992)

ed. S. Schulte: Im Atem der Zeit: Erinnerungen an die Moderne (Hamburg, 1998)

Many articles in Anbruch, Frankfurter Zeitung, Hamline University Bulletin, Measure [Chicago], Melos, Musica, Musical America, MQ, PNM, Prisma [Stockholm], University of New Mexico Quarterly; recorded interviews in US-NHoh

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R.Erickson: 'Křenek's Later Music', MR, ix (1948), 29–44

W. Grandi: Il sistema tonale ed il sontrappunto dodecafonia di Ernst Krenek (Rome, 1954)

L. Knessl: Ernst Krenek, Österreichische Komponisten des XX. Jahrhunderts, xii (Vienna, 1967)

W. Rogge: Ernst Kreneks Opern (Wolfenbüttel, 1970)

J.Hughes: 'Ernst Krenek Festival Concerts', MQ, lxi (1975), 464–70

H. Knoch: Orpheus und Eurydike (Regensburg, 1977)

C. Maurer Zenck: Ernst Krenek, ein Komponist im Exil (Vienna, 1980)

C.Hogan: 'Threni: Stravinsky's "Debt" to Krenek', Tempo, cxli (1982), 22–9

H.K. Metzger and R.Riehn, eds.: Ernst Krenek, Musik-Konzepte, xxxiv/xxxx (1984)

C. Maurer-Zenck: 'The Ship Loaded with Faith and Hope: Krenek's Karl V and the Viennese Politics of the Thirties', MQ, lxxi (Munich, 1985), 116–34

S.C. Cook: Opera for a New Republic: the Zeitopern of Krenek, Weill and Hindemith (Ann Arbor, 1988)

M. Staehle-Laburda: Ernst Krenek and the 12-Tone Technique (diss., U. of California, San Diego, 1989)

G.H. Bowles: Ernst Krenek: a Bio-Bibliography (New York, 1989)

Newsletter of the Ernst Krenek Archive (La Jolla, CA, 1990–)

J.L. Stewart: Ernst Krenek (Berkeley, 1991)

N.Rubey: Musikhandschriften in der Wiener Stadt-und Landesbibliothek: Ernst-Krenek-Archiv (Vienna, 1996)

GARRETT BOWLES

Krengel, Gregor (b Frankenstein, Silesia [now Ząbkowice Śląskie], ?1550–60; d after 1593). German lutenist and composer. He matriculated at the University of Frankfurt an der Oder in the summer of 1584. He was granted citizen's rights at Frankfurt on 23 November of that year and also apparently acquired property there by marriage. He later moved to Görlitz, where he is mentioned in the civic register on 12 July 1594. A woodcut portrait of him of 1592, showing him apparently in middle age, is extant (in A-Wgm; reproduced in Grimm, 101). He published Tabulatura nova continens selectissimas quasque cantiones ut sunt madrigalia, mutetae, paduanae et vilanellae, testudini sic aptatas, ut quilibet singulas duplici modo ludere et concinere possit (RISM 1584[14]; 3 songs ed. H. Bischoff, Alte Stücke und Weisen für doppelchörige Laute, 1924). This volume contains lute arrangements of 12 Italian madrigals and eight German songs by Jacob Regnart, two Latin motets in two partes by Lassus, two Latin hymns and four German songs by the Frankfurt Kantor Gregor Lange, and a German song by Henning Winstman, a Frankfurt student from Hamburg, as well as seven paduanas by Krengel himself. The transcriptions are printed at two different pitches on facing pages and are for a seven-course lute with the seventh string a 4th below the sixth. Both versions permit the use together of two lutes with different tunings. Unlike other lutenists, however, Krengel did not state the difference in pitch between the two lutes. One piece even appears in four versions. The style of the paduanas, which are in duple metre and without a Nachtanz, is motet-like and highly compact and appears to be strongly influenced by vocal writing. Krengel added that any text – Italian, German or Polish – may be sung to them.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrownI; EitnerQ; GerberNL; MGG1 (W. Boetticher)

J. Dieckmann: Die in deutscher Lautentabulatur überlieferten Tänze des 16. Jahrhunderts (Kassel, 1931)

H. Grimm: Meister der Renaissancemusik an der Viadrina (Frankfurt an der Oder, 1942)

V. Kłosowicz: 'Tabulatura lutniowa Gregora Krengla ze Zbiorów Biblioteki Uniwersyteckiejwe Wrocławiu', Tradycje śląskiej kultury muzycznej VI: Wrocław 1990, 61–81

HANS RADKE

Krenz, Jan (b Włocławek, 14 July 1926). Polish conductor and composer. He studied the piano, conducting and composition (with Sikorski) at the State Music College in Łódź, and made his début conducting the Łódź PO in 1945, followed in 1949 by opera and concerts with the Poznań PO, with which he also made gramophone records. In 1949 he was appointed assistant conductor of the Polish Radio National SO in Katowice, and succeeded Fitelberg as principal conductor in 1953, remaining until 1968, when he became principal conductor at the Warsaw Opera. He began to tour abroad with growing success during the 1950s, visiting Europe, Japan and Australia, and making his British début in 1961. He returned the next year with the Polish Radio National SO for concerts at the Edinburgh Festival and a British tour including his London début (October); he was praised for his firm control, vitality of spirit and lack of sentimentality. These qualities were confirmed when he returned to conduct contemporary Polish music at the 1967 Cheltenham Festival and at the Promenade Concerts with the Polish Radio National SO. From 1979 to 1982 he was Generalmusikdirektor in Bonn. He has given the premières of numerous Polish works, including Górecki's Symphony no.1 (1959). Krenz's compositions include a cantata, Dwa miasta ('Dialogue between Two Towns', 1950), a symphony (1950) and Symphonic Dance (1951), works for small orchestra and string orchestra, chamber works and songs with piano. After 1952 his compositions became fewer and he adopted a serial idiom and aleatory techniques, as in his Capriccio per 24 strumenti (1962). He received a Polish State Prize in 1955 and the Union of Polish Composers' Prize in 1968.

BOGUSŁAW SCHÄFFER/R

Kresánek, Jozef (b Čičmany, central Slovakia, 20 Dec 1913; d Bratislava, 14 March 1986). Slovak musicologist, teacher and composer. He studied composition at the conservatory in Prague with Karel and Novák and read musicology at the university under Nejedlý, Hutter and Zich. From 1944 to 1986 Kresánek taught musicology at Bratislava University (he was appointed professor in 1963), and from 1956 to 1964 he was director of the Institute of Musicology at the Slovak Academy of Sciences.

A scholar of impressive scope, his research concerns phenomenological-structural studies; the sociological interpretation of music; historical musicology; and analyses of works by Suchoň and Cikker. His compositions for the most part are influenced by Slovak folk music, a subject he approached systematically (following the example set by Bartók). Evidence of this influence is found in Kresánek's tendency towards polytonality, as in the Piano Trio (1939), for example, which juxtaposes diatonic melody and chromatic accompaniment, or elsewhere, where triadic harmony is combined with chords comprising 2nds and 4ths. Like Novák, he enjoyed capturing the lyrical or rhapsodic nature of certain folksongs. His output inclines towards cerebral yet playful miniatures, while later works possess an Apollonian sense of peace and subtlety, for example in the Piano Quintet and Tri piesne ('Three Songs') of 1975.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Pochod 1944 [March 1944], 1945; Suite no.1, 1951, rev. 1961; Suite no.2, 1953; Prelude and Toccata, 1960; Divertimento, 1981; Rhaspsody, 1986; arrs. incl. Tance zo zbierky Anny Szirmay-Keczerovej [Dances from the Collection of A. Szirmay-Keczer], str, 1967

Vocal: 3 piesne [3 Songs] (Slovak poets), T, orch, 1935–7; Hore ho! [Excelsior!] (cant., P. Országh Hviezdoslav), T, Bar, B, male chorus, orch, 1937; To je vojna! [That is War] (M. Rázus), song cycle, S, pf, 1956; Piesne dolnozemských Slovákov [Songs of Hung. Slovaks], folksong arrs., chorus, orch, 1956; 4 piesne (19th-century poems), T, pf, 1972; 3 piesne (I. Krasko), B-Bar, str, 1975; Som iba človek [I am only a Man] (Š. Žáry), song cycle, Mez/T, pf, 1980; Prírodné impresie [Impressions from Nature] (V. Turčány), female chorus, pf, 1984

Chbr and pf: Str Qt, 1935; 2 pf suites, 1936, 1938; Pf Trio, 1939; Scherzo, pf, 1943; Elégia, pf, 1943; 2 suites for vn, pf, 1947, 1951; Zbojnícka balada [Brigand Ballad], pf, *c*1951; Pf Qnt, 1975; Rubato e con brio, pf, 1985

MSS in SK-BRnm

Principal publishers: Opus, Slovenské hudobné vydavatel'stvo, Slovenský hudobný fond

WRITINGS

'The Work of Slovak Composers', The Slavonic and East European Review, xxv (1946), 171–5

Slovenská l'udová pieseň so stanoviska hudobného [Slovak folksong from a musical standpoint] (Bratislava, 1951, 2/1997)

'Bartóks Sammlung slowakischer Volkslieder', Studia memoriae Belae Bartók sacra (Budapest, 1956), 51–68

Národný umelec Eugen Suchoň [The national artist Suchoň] (Bratislava, 1961); repr. in J. Kresánek and I. Vajda: Eugen Suchoň (Bratislava, 1978)

Sociálna funkcia hudby [The social function of music] (Bratislava, 1961]

'Die Sammlung von Szirmay-Keczer', SMH, vi (1964), 39–66

Úvahy o hudbe [Essays on music] (Bratislava, 1965)

Základy hudobného myslenia [Fundaments of musical thinking] (Bratislava, 1977)

Tonalita (Bratislava, 1982)

'Hudba a človek' [Music and man], SH, xviii (1992), 342–90
Tektonika (Bratislava, 1994)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Hrušovský: Slovenská hudba v profiloch rozboroch [Slovak music in profiles and analyses] (Bratislava, 1964), 333–43
L. Burlas: 'Über das Lebenswerk des fünfundsechzigjährigen Jozef Kresánek', Musicologica Slovaca, vii (1978), 9–19
L. Burlas: Slovenská hudobná moderna [Slovak musical avant garde] (Bratislava, 1983), 159–61
J. Potúček: 'Súpis muzikologikých prác Jozefa Kresánka' [Bibliography of Kresánek's musicological writings], SH, xviii (1992), 390–95
N. Hrčková: Tradícia, modernosť a slovenská hudobná kultúra [Tradition, modernity and Slovak musical culture] (Bratislava, 1996), 72–7, 145–51, 239–50

VLADIMÍR ZVARA

Kress, Georg Philipp (b Darmstadt, bap. 10 Nov 1719; d Göttingen, 2 Feb 1779). German violinist and composer. He was the second son of Johann Jakob and Anna Maria Kress, both of whom died when he was young. By 1744 he was first violinist in the Mecklenburg court orchestra at Schwerin. In 1748 he obtained leave to visit Plön, where he was Konzertmeister from 21 February 1748 to 1 July 1751. In 1755 Kress was again in Schwerin, but left his court post in the summer of 1767 to become Konzertmeister at the University of Göttingen; the appointment dated from 23 November 1766.

Kress was widely acclaimed as a virtuoso violinist. His compositions excited less admiration; one critic described them as 'awkward, wooden and unmelodious'. Stylistically they owe something to the works of his godfather, Georg Philipp Telemann. Despite the connection with Telemann, lexicographers have long assumed that Kress's second Christian name was Friedrich: the error arose from the fact that many of his compositions with Italian titles bear the initials 'G.F.' (Giorgio Filippo). A trio for flute, viola da gamba and continuo (D-ROu), often ascribed to Georg Philipp, is probably by his elder brother, Ludwig Albrecht; a set of 11 pairs of minuets for violin and continuo (D-ROu) is probably by a G.A. Kress, son of the Stuttgart musician, Paul Kress.

WORKS

1 solo, vn (Nuremberg, 1764), lost
2 concs., D, g, vn/fl, vn, va, bc; 11 sonate à 4, vn/fl, vn, va, bc; 6 sonate à 4, 2 vn, va, bc; trio, fl, va d'amore, hpd/lute; 6 sonate, fl, bc; 6 sonate, fl, bc; 4 sonatas, fl, bc: all D-ROu
Sinfonia à 2 cori, 2 hn, 4 vn, 2 va, 2 bc; ov., 2 ob, 2 hn, 2 vn, va, bc: both D-SWl

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Noack: Musikgeschichte Darmstadts vom Mittelalter bis zur Goethezeit (Mainz, 1967), 221ff
G. Hart: 'Georg Philipp Kress', Mf, xxii (1969), 328–34
E. Noack: 'Zu Günter Harts Aufsatz Georg Philipp Kress', Mf, xxiii (1970), 191–2

PIPPA DRUMMOND

Kress, Johann Albrecht (b at or nr Nuremberg, Feb or March 1644; d Stuttgart, 23 July 1684). German composer. On 10 June 1660 he joined the Stuttgart Hofkapelle (where his brother Paul also worked) as a musician. In 1669 he became vice-Kapellmeister and from 1676 until his death acted as director of the Kapelle, since the Kapellmeister, J.F. Magg, was no longer able to carry out his duties. His contemporaries in Stuttgart regarded him highly as a composer, and he received special remuneration for his compositions several times. He was probably on good terms with P.F. Böddecker, organist of the collegiate church, who in his Manuductio nova added five instrumental parts to Kress's Jubilus Bernhardi. His output, which is exclusively sacred, belongs to the traditions of south German church music in the second half of the 17th century.

WORKS

Ein Gespräch-Lied über . . . Herrn Eberhardens, Hertzogens zu Würtemberg . . . Todesfall (Stuttgart, 1675)
Der süsse Name Jesu oder teutscher Jubilus Bernhardi, 3vv (Stuttgart, 1681); repr. in P.F. Böddecker: Manuductio nova methodico-practica bassum generalem (Stuttgart, 1701), augmented by 5 insts
Musicalische Seelen-Belustigung oder geistliche Concerten, 4vv, 6 insts ad lib (Stuttgart, 1681)
In te domine speravi, 1v, 2 cornettini, bc, D-Bsb
Es stehe Gott auf, 1688, 5vv, 2 vn, 3 viols, vle, 4 clarini, org; Ich ruf zu dir, Herr Jesu Christ, 4vv, 4 viols, vle, bn, bc; Wohl dem, der die Gottseligkeit und Furcht des Höchsten übet, 1692, 4vv, 2 vn, 3 viols, bc: F
Wie der Hirsch schreyet nach frischem Wasser, 1678, 4vv, 2 vn, org, F-Sm

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; GerberNL; MatthesonGEP; MGG1 (U. Siegele); WaltherML
J. Sittard: Zur Geschichte der Musik und des Theaters am württembergischen Hofe, i (Stuttgart, 1890–91/R), 58, 61–2
A. Bopp: 'Beiträge zur Geschichte der Stuttgarter Stiftsmusik', Jb für Statistik und Landeskunde 1910 (1911), 211–50

EBERHARD STIEFEL

Kress, Johann Jakob (b Walderbach, Regensburg, *c*1685; d Darmstadt, bur. 6 Nov 1728). German composer and violinist. He was the son of Johann Georg Kress of Walderbach. The family moved to Oettingen when Kress was still young; they can be traced there from 1696 onwards. At Oettingen Kress attended the Lateinschule and received a musical education at the expense of Prince Albrecht Ernst. He then obtained a post in the court orchestra under Kapellmeister Jakob Christian Hertel. In 1712 Kress was appointed to the Darmstadt court orchestra with a salary of 400 florins and gifts in kind. By 1719 his salary was in arrears and his financial situation had become increasingly precarious. On 10 November 1723 he handed in his resignation, whereupon the landgrave appointed him Konzertmeister with an additional allowance of 200 florins; he withdrew his resignation and remained at Darmstadt until his death.

Six violin concertos and 18 violin sonatas by him survive. The op.3 sonatas, which Kress engraved himself, were dedicated to the Prince of Oettingen; these unpretentious works are in four movements and mix church and chamber elements. The music is occasionally reminiscent of Handel.

Kress had five children by his marriage to Anna Maria Wöhler. Two of them, Ludwig Albrecht and Georg Philipp Kress, were also musicians. Telemann acted as godfather to Georg Philipp, who became a composer of some merit. Several manuscripts (D-ROs, SWl) mentioned by Eitner are signed with the initials 'G.F.' and are probably therefore by the son.

WORKS

Sei concerti a 5, vn, str, op.1 (Darmstadt, n.d.) [? = 6 vn concertos a 5, op.1, pubd Nuremberg, according to GerberL]
[6] Sonate, d, B, A, c, G, E♭, vn, vle/hpd (Darmstadt, 1730)
[6] Sonate da camera, A, B, d, a, D, e, vn, b/hpd, op.3 (Darmstadt, n.d.)
[6] Sonate da camera, D, e, A, G, E, d, vn, b/hpd, op.5 (Darmstadt, n.d.)
Solo a flute traversiere del Sigr. Gresh, D-ROs

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; MGG1 (F. Noack)
W. Nagel: 'Zur Geschichte der Musik am Hofe von Darmstadt', MMg, xxxii (1900), 1–16, 21–36, 41–57, 59–74, 79–95
E. Noack: Musikgeschichte Darmstadts vom Mittelalter bis zur Goethezeit (Mainz, 1967)

G. Hart: 'Georg Philipp Kress', Mf, xxii (1969), 328–34
E. Noack: 'Zu Günter Harts Aufsatz Georg Philipp Kress', Mf, xxiii (1970), 191–2

PIPPA DRUMMOND

Kretzschmar, (August Ferdinand) Hermann (b Olbernhau, Saxony, 19 Jan 1848; d Berlin, 10 May 1924). German musicologist and conductor. He was first taught music by his father, Karl Dankegott Kretzschmar, a choirmaster and organist, and at the age of 14 went to the Dresden Kreuzschule, where he studied composition until 1867 with J. Otto. In 1868 he studied musicology at the University of Leipzig with Oscar Paul, F. Ritschl and Woldemar Voigt, taking the doctorate in 1871 with a dissertation, written in Latin, on early notation and Guido of Arezzo. From 1869 to 1870 he also studied at the Leipzig Conservatory with Paul, E.F. Richter and Carl Reinecke. He became a teacher at the conservatory in 1871 and was also active as a conductor of several musical societies in Leipzig, including Euterpe and the Singakademie. A few of his compositions from the 1870s, mostly smaller vocal works, survive. Overwork forced him to give up his post at the conservatory in 1876. For a brief period he conducted at the Metz Stadttheater before moving to Rostock (1877) to become music director at the university; from 1880 he was also town music director there. Kretzschmar returned to Leipzig in 1887 as university music director and conductor of the students' choral union, Paulus. He conducted the choir founded by K. Riedel (1888–98) and played an important role as one of the founders of the new Bach-Gesellschaft. In 1890 he initiated a series of Akademische Orchesterkonzerte, whose programmes emphasized historical works (1890–95). He then gradually withdrew from practical music-making and turned to musicology. He moved to Berlin in 1904 to become professor of musicology at the university; he also succeeded Joachim as director of the Hochschule für Musik (1909–20) and Liliencron as general editor of the Denkmäler Deutscher Tonkunst (1912–18).

Next to Riemann and Spitta, Kretzschmar was one of the most important German music historians of his time. His early training at the Kreuzschule in music as a humanistic discipline, together with his practical choral experience, provided him with the foundation for his later work. He viewed music history as a history of culture and studied the interaction among the individual work of art, the circumstances of its composition and the social and cultural milieu of its time; thus he argued the case for musicology, but not as an independent discipline. He aimed to make music known to a wider audience and did much organizational and editorial work for the publication of early music. His writings range from work on Venetian opera, performing practice and Baroque Affektenlehre to the popular Führer durch den Konzertsaal; in the latter, Kretzschmar's debate with hermeneutics found practical use.

Kretzschmar was also the director of the Institut für Kirchenmusik in Berlin and was active as an educational adviser. He sought to remove musical education from its isolated position in the lecture hall and to make it available to a wider public; he was therefore concerned with teaching music in schools and private homes, as well as the further education of both professional and amateur musicians.

See also ANALYSIS, §II, 3.

EDITIONS

J.S. Bach's Handschrift in zeitlich geordneten Nachbildungen, Johann Sebastian Bachs Werke, xliv (Leipzig, 1894/R)
I.J. Holzbauer: Günther von Schwarzburg, Oper in drei Akten, DDT, viii–ix (1902/R)
J.E. Bach: Sammlung auserlesener Fabeln; V. Herbing: Musikalischer Versuch, DDT, xlii (1910/R)
Louis Ferdinand, Prinz von Preussen: Musikalische Werke (Leipzig, 1910)

WRITINGS
(selective list)

De signis musicis . . . (diss., U. of Leipzig, 1871; Leipzig, 1871)
Führer durch den Konzertsaal, i (Leipzig, 1887, since 3/1898 2 vols., rev. 7/1932 by F. Noack (vol. 1) and H. Botstiber (vol. 2)); ii/1 (Leipzig, 1888, rev. 5/1939 by H. Schnoor); ii/2 (Leipzig, 1890, 5/1939)
'Die venetianische Oper und die Werke Cavallis und Cestis', VMw, viii (1892), 1–76
Johann Sebastian Bachs Werke, xlvi (Leipzig, 1899/R) [with thematic catalogues of vocal and instrumental works, reports and indexes]
Musikalische Zeitfragen (Leipzig, 1903)
Gesammelte Aufsätze über Musik und Anderes aus den Grenzboten (Leipzig, 1910)
Gesammelte Aufsätze aus den Jahrbüchern der Musikbibliothek Peters (Leipzig, 1911/R)
Geschichte des neuen deutschen Liedes (Leipzig, 1911/R)
Geschichte der Oper (Leipzig, 1919/R)
Einführung in die Musikgeschichte (Leipzig, 1920/R)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

RiemannL 12
Festschrift Hermann Kretzschmar (Leipzig, 1918/R)
H. Abert: 'Zum Gedächtnis Hermann Kretzschmars', JbMP 1924, 9–23
G. Braun: Die Schulmusikerziehung in Preussen von den Falkschen Bestimmungen bis zur Kestenberg-Reform (Kassel, 1957)
R. Heinz: Geschichtsbegriff und Wissenschaftscharakter der Musikwissenschaft in der zweiten Hälfte des 19. Jahrhunderts (Regensburg, 1968)
W. Wiora, ed.: Die Ausbreitung des Historismus über die Musik (Regensburg, 1969)
H.D. Sommer: Praxisorientierte Musikwissenschaft: Studien zu Leben und Werk Hermann Kretzschmars (Munich and Salzburg, 1985) [with lists of compositions, editions and writings]
M. Pfeffer: Hermann Kretzschmar und die Musikpädagogik zwischen 1890 und 1915 (Mainz, 1992)
L.A. Rothfarb: 'Hermeneutics and Energetics: Analytical Alternatives in the early 1900s', JMT, xxxvi (1992), 43–68

GAYNOR G. JONES/BERND WIECHERT

Kreuder, Peter Paul (b Aachen, 18 Aug 1905; d Salzburg, 28 June 1981). German composer. After studying at musical academies in Munich and Hamburg he was musical director for Max Reinhardt's theatre in Berlin (1928–30) and for theatres in Munich (from 1930); he spent five years in South America (1945–50), conducting for radio, while still writing music for German films. In addition to a piano concerto, the operas Der Zerrissene (1940) and Der Postmeister (1966), several operettas and musicals, and music for over 150 films, Kreuder is known for numerous popular songs. He wrote two autobiographies, Schön war die Zeit (Munich, 1955) and Nur Puppen haben keine Tränen (Percha, 1971). (GänzlEMT)

□

Kreusser, Georg Anton (b Heidingsfeld, nr Würzburg, 27 Oct 1746; d Aschaffenburg, 1 Nov 1810). German composer. He received his early musical education in his native town. By 1759 he had arrived in Amsterdam, where he studied instrumental technique and composition under his elder brother Adam Kreusser (b Heidingsfeld, bap. 28 Nov 1732; d Amsterdam, 1791), who had been leader of the Amsterdam theatre orchestra since 1752. His first compositions were published in 1768, and from 1770 to 1771 he made a study tour of Italy and France. Returning to Amsterdam he lived as an independent composer, virtuoso and conductor. On 13 December 1773 he became deputy Konzertmeister and on 21 February 1774 Konzertmeister of the electoral Kapelle in Mainz. A new flowering in the musical life of Mainz began with Kreusser's appointment: for a long time he was the foremost court musician, and his works enjoyed great popularity. Only when Vincenzo Righini became Kapellmeister in 1787 did he lose his pre-eminence and something of his creative fervour. After the second occupation of Mainz by the French, Kreusser left the town in the winter of 1798–9 and settled in Aschaffenburg with most of the elector's court musicians. The Kapelle was not re-formed until 1810. He lived in seclusion until his death (not, as is sometimes asserted, as leader of the theatre orchestra in Frankfurt) and published only a few new compositions.

With J.F.X. Sterkel, Kreusser was the most significant Mainz composer of the second half of the 18th century. His achievement is most outstanding in his instrumental music. His style was formed by quite varied influences, so that he cannot be ascribed to any national school, and he stands somewhat apart from his contemporaries who formed the early Classical style between 1760 and 1780. The majority of his symphonies have three movements after the Italian pattern; even the earliest use a remarkably balanced three-part sonata form, and the independence of the middle parts and his increasingly skilful instrumentation were in advance of his time. His chamber music draws its inspiration more from France, and favours the two-movement form in concertante style. In his latter years Kreusser wrote mainly vocal music, of which his most important and best-known work is the oratorio Der Tod Jesu, after Ramler, which, like Graun's setting, was performed over a long period. Familiarity with his compositions spread far beyond his immediate circle, and they were highly regarded by such notable contemporaries as Leopold Mozart and Joseph Haydn.

WORKS

Catalogue: Peters (1975) [P]

Orch: 6 Syms., P1–6, op.2 (Amsterdam, 1769); Sinfonie périodique [Hummel] no.5, A, P7 (Amsterdam, 1769), ed. in The Symphony 1720–1840, ser. C, xiv (New York, 1985); 6 Syms., P8–13, op.5 (Amsterdam, 1770); 6 Syms., P15–20, op.7 (Amsterdam, 1772); 6 Syms., P21–6 (Amsterdam, 1774); 6 Syms., P27–32, op.9 (Berlin, ?1774–5); Hpd Conc., C, P56 (Amsterdam, *c*1775); Sinfonie périodique [Hummel], C, P33 (Berlin, 1776); 6 Syms., P34–9, op.1 (Offenbach, 1777); 3 Syms., P40–42, op.13 (Berlin, 1778); Sinfonie périodique [Hummel] no.31, E♭, P43 (Amsterdam, 1780); 6 Syms., P44–9, op.18 (Mainz, 1780); Sinfonie périodique [Schott] no.1, C, P50 (Mainz, 1786); Sym., f, P14, *c*1770–71; 2 syms., P51–2, *c*1783, D-HR, P52 ed. in The Symphony 1720–1840, ser. C, xiv (New York, 1985); 2 syms., P53–4, *c*1783; Serenade, D, P55, *c*1783, HR

Chbr: 6 Qnts, fl, vn, va, vc, bc, P57–62, op.10 (Berlin, 1775); 6 Qts, fl, vn, va, vc, P63–8, op.8 (Amsterdam, ?1773–4); 6 Str Qts, P69–74, op.12 (Berlin, 1778); 6 Str Qts, P75–80 (Paris, 1779); 3 Qts, fl, vn, va, vc, P87–92, op.8 bk 2 (Bonn, 1803); 6 Trios, 2 vn, bc, P90–95, op.1 (Amsterdam, 1768); 6 Trios, nos.1–3 for vn, va, vc, nos.4–6 for fl, vn, bc, P102–7, op.11 (Berlin, 1777); 6 Vn Duos, P108–13, op.3 (Amsterdam, 1770); Vn Sonata, P114, op.6 (Amsterdam, 1771); 6 Menuette und 12 Kontretänze, pf, P115 (Mainz, 1785); 6 str qts, P81–6, *c*1780; 6 trios, P96–101, *c*1770

Vocal: Der Tod Jesu (orat, K.W. Ramler), P117 (Mainz, 1783); 7 Lieder, Mez, pf, P116 (Mainz, 1802); 8 masses, P118–25, *c*1785–95

Numerous lost works

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Peters: Georg Anton Kreusser: ein Mainzer Instrumentalkomponist der Klassik (Munich, 1975) [incl. complete list of works]

H. Unverricht: 'Joseph Haydns briefliche und persönliche Begegnungen mit Mainzer Musikern', Florilegium musicologicum: Hellmut Federhofer zum 75. Geburtstag, ed. C.-H. Mahling (Tutzing, 1988), 427–43

EDITH PETERS

Kreutzbach. Danish-German family of organ builders and instrument makers. Urban Kreutzbach (b Copenhagen, 24 Aug 1796; d Borna, nr Leipzig, 20 Aug 1868), the son of a merchant, learnt cabinet making and travelled to Germany in about 1820. In 1830 he established himself as an organ builder in Borna. His instruments, splendid examples of the Saxon Silbermann tradition, are outstanding for their thoughtful specifications, fine voicing and strong, metallic tone. Notable ones include those at Ortmannsdorf (1856), Callenberg (1859), Glauchau-Jerisau (1860) and Dresden-Hosterwitz (1863). He invented a playing valve loop, and used a fairly high wind pressure in his instruments.

Richard Kreutzbach (b Borna, 27 July 1839; d Borna, 21 June 1903), Urban's son, continued throughout his lifetime in his father's business; he adopted pneumatic action, and built good organs without, however, ever equalling his father's mastery. He built instruments in the Stadtkirche, Johanngeorgenstadt, Erzgebirge (1872) and in Waldenburg, Saxony (1878–9). Another son, Emil Bernhard Hermann Kreutzbach (b Borna, 5 Dec 1843), also worked in his father's business, leaving it in 1875. Other employees of the firm, which produced approximately 300 instruments, included J.G. Bärmig, H. Beygang, W. Grisard, C. Ladegast, E. Müller and H. Walcker.

Julius Urban Kreutzbach (b Döbeln, 29 Nov 1845; d Leipzig, 22 Sept 1913), another relative, founded the famous Leipzig firm of piano makers that bears his name. Emil Müller (b Borna, 11 Oct 1857; d Pillnitz bei Dresden, 4 Oct 1928), a grandson of Urban Kreutzbach, who accomplished nothing of significance in organ building, took over J.G. Bärmig's works at Werdau in 1887 and made it the largest harmonium factory in Europe.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Oehme: Handbuch über ältere, neuere und neueste Orgelwerke im Königreiche Sachsen (Dresden, 1889–97/*R*1978, with suppl. and index by W. Hackel and U. Dähnert), iii

R. Fritzsche: Werdau und seine Industrie (Werdau, 1936), 117, 141

W. Hüttel: Musikgeschichte von Glauchau und Umgebung (Glauchau, 1995), 100, 104–10, 227–9

K. Walter: 'Der Orgelbau Urban Kreutzbachs in der Stadtkirche St Nikolai zu Geithain', Acta organologica, xxv (1997)

WALTER HÜTTEL

Kreutzer. French family of musicians.

(1) Rodolphe Kreutzer (b Versailles, 16 Nov 1766; d Geneva, 6 Jan 1831). Violinist, composer and teacher.

1. Life. 2. Violin playing. 3. Works.

1. LIFE. His father, a wind player, came from Breslau in about 1760 to play in the newly formed Swiss Guards of the Duke of Choiseul; he also played and taught the violin locally in Versailles but was not in the orchestra of the royal chapel. Rodolphe was the eldest of five surviving children and received his early musical education from his father. From 1778 Anton Stamitz taught him the violin and composition; on 25 May 1780 Kreutzer performed a concerto by his teacher at the Concert Spirituel, Paris, and was received as a prodigy. In 1782–3 he heard Viotti's solo violin performances and was influenced by his style of writing and playing (although he met Viotti, there is no evidence that he became his pupil). In May 1784 Kreutzer performed his own First Violin Concerto at the Concert Spirituel. After the death of his parents within three months (November 1784, January 1785) he came under the kindly influence of Marie Antoinette and the Count of Artois, who probably arranged his acceptance into the king's music during 1785. He wrote chamber music and played more of his own violin concertos, and by 1789 was a leading virtuoso; in that year he moved from Versailles to Paris.

No primary evidence has been discovered for Fétis's assertion that two operas by Kreutzer were privately produced under the queen's patronage in the closing years of the ancien régime. But a series of operatic works was brought out by Kreutzer from 1790, chiefly at the Comédie-Italienne, later Opéra-Comique. The two pieces which established his stage reputation were Paul et Virginie and Lodoiska; the latter was preferred to Cherubini's work of the same name, also first given in 1791.

The flood of energy that characterized the musical world of the Revolutionary period brought about the Institut National de Musique (1793), forerunner of the Conservatoire (1795); Kreutzer was attached to both, as professor of violin. He was to teach at the Conservatoire until 1826, and sat as a member of its council from 1825 to 1830. The famous 42 études ou caprices for violin (originally 40; the additional two may not be Kreutzer's) appeared initially in 1796, and were published by the Conservatoire.

Kreutzer made a successful concert tour of Italy in 1796: by this time he had composed at least eight violin concertos. During a second tour he was attached to Bernadotte's party on the latter's appointment as French ambassador to Vienna in February 1798; his activities included the removal of Italian manuscripts to France on Napoleon's orders. A Beethoven letter of 4 October 1804 reveals that the two men came into contact, and that Beethoven heard Kreutzer's playing. The Violin Sonata op.47 (called the 'Kreutzer' Sonata) dates however from 1802–3; the dedication to Kreutzer was made without the latter's knowledge, and the sonata was published in 1805. It is not thought that the work was ever played publicly by its dedicatee. His career in Paris from 1798 on was marked by particularly successful concert appearances at the Théâtre Feydeau and the Opéra, some of which were made jointly with Rode. When Rode departed for Russia in 1801 Kreutzer replaced him as solo violin of the Opéra; he joined Napoleon's chapel orchestra in 1802 and his private orchestra four years later.

The opera Astyanax (1801) was fairly successful; but it was Kreutzer's first ballet score, Paul et Virginie (1806), using music from the earlier opera, which appealed sufficiently to the public to hold the stage for 15 years. Aristippe (1808), a comedy on the popular Anacreon theme, also proved a success, and was given until 1830. The ballet Les amours d'Antoine et Cléopatre (1808), with its spectacular finale, was Kreutzer's third stage work to catch the public imagination. The biblical opera Abel (1810), though at first indifferently received, was revived (minus its second act) in 1823; Berlioz wrote an ecstatic letter of appreciation to the composer. From 1802 to 1811 Kreutzer was a partner in Le Magasin de Musique, a publishing and retail concern formed with Cherubini, Méhul, Rode, Isouard and Boieldieu.

While on holiday in 1810 he broke an arm in a carriage accident and his career as a soloist ended. Nevertheless he continued to play in ensembles and retained his official positions. After the Restoration in 1815 Kreutzer was named maître de la chapelle du roi; the next year he was created second conductor of the Opéra, then chief conductor in 1817. Habeneck replaced him in this post in 1824, the year in which Kreutzer became a Chevalier de la Légion d'Honneur. From 1824 to 1826 he took overall direction of music at the Opéra. In the spring of 1826 Berlioz approached him unsuccessfully with a view to having La révolution grecque performed at the Opéra's series of concerts spirituels. But by this time Kreutzer's own style could find little public favour and his last opera Matilde was refused by the Opéra. His health declined from 1826, when he retired from most of his public positions.

2. VIOLIN PLAYING. Spohr wrote of the Kreutzer brothers that 'of all the Parisian violinists, they are the most cultivated', and Beethoven declared of Rodolphe: 'I prefer his modesty and natural behaviour to all the exterior without any interior, which is characteristic of most virtuosos'. Together with Baillot and Rode, Kreutzer formed the founding trinity of the French violin school, which was marked by brilliance of style, objectivity of approach and lack of emphasis on the expansive type of lyricism (Spohr himself said that French slow concerto movements were regarded as mere interludes between the fast outer movements). Kreutzer, who played a Stradivari, possessed a full tone and used a predominantly legato style of bowing. Fétis praised his instinctive sense of phrase and his just intonation. Williams (1973) also noted the emphasis on legato and complete absence of spiccato bowing in Kreutzer's violin concertos, which also use neither extensive shifting of the left hand nor very high positions; moreover there is limited use of double stopping, even by comparison with Viotti's concertos. Kreutzer's numerous pupils included his brother (2) Jean Nicolas Auguste Kreutzer, Charles Lafont and Massart.

3. WORKS. Kreutzer's 42 études ou caprices (originally 40) for unaccompanied violin occupy an almost unique position in the literature of violin studies; Kreutzer met the challenge of the modern violin by aiming partly at fluency in contraction and extension of the left hand. As Szigeti (1969) pointed out, extensions and unisons were easier on the old short-necked violin; in the 'practically unknown nineteen Etudes-Caprices ... it is obvious that the great teacher was already conscious of the need for the "opening up" of the hand'. Owing to their fundamental musicality and approach, successive editors have brought the 42 études up to date either by adding new fingerings and bowings or by composing their own variants. Eisenberg in his edition (1920) claimed that Kreutzer anticipated this and taught more advanced versions of his caprices than those he published.

In his violin concertos Kreutzer adhered closely to contemporary forms. Williams asserted the influence of Stamitz in the earlier works, that of Viotti at its most powerful in the concertos of the 1790s, and increasing individuality in the final eight concertos. The solo violin parts become progressively more difficult throughout the canon, and the orchestration more sophisticated.

Much of Kreutzer's chamber music dates from the 1790s and reflects the style of his teachers. Concentrating later on stage productions, he achieved a measure of originality without ever producing a work of lasting value. His harmonic language is not without variety, but too often his musical thinking does not progress beyond simple melody and accompaniment; and while the melodies themselves betray Romantic turns of phrase even in the 1790s, they are not often memorable. Lodoiska and Abel are his worthiest achievements; the former is vivid in drama and colour, and has warmth of melody. Astyanax contains some striking final pages depicting the Greeks leaving Troy, and in Abel the purely musical quality runs at a consistently higher level. Biblical subject matter was topical (cf Méhul's Joseph, 1807, and Le Sueur's La mort d'Adam, 1809); in Kreutzer's opera the devils who forge the club of human destruction are the tempters of Cain, and as an apotheosis Abel is carried heavenwards. There are pages of large-scale conception, but the opening of the original Act 3, in which an exhausted Cain prays for sleep ('Doux sommeil'), contains some of Kreutzer's best music.

WORKS

selective list; printed works published in Paris unless otherwise stated

STAGE

first performed and published in full score in Paris unless otherwise stated

Jeanne d'Arc à Orléans (drame historique mêlé d'ariettes, 3, Desforges [P.J.B. Choudard]), Comédie-Italienne (Salle Favart), 10 May 1790, unpubd
Paul et Virginie (cmda, 3, E.G.F. de Favières), Comédie-Italienne (Salle Favart), 15 Jan 1791 (1791)
Lodoïska, ou Les tartares (cmda, 3, J.E.B. Dejaure), Comédie-Italienne (Salle Favart), 1 Aug 1791 (1792)
Charlotte et Werther (comédie, 1, Dejaure), Comédie-Italienne (Salle Favart), 1 Feb 1792, unpubd, F-R(m)
Le franc breton (comédie, 1, Dejaure), Comédie-Italienne (Salle Favart), 3 Nov 1792 (1803–10); collab. J.-P. Solié
Le siège de Lille [Cécile et Julien] (trait historique, 1, L.A.B. d'Antilly), Feydeau, 14 Nov 1792, extracts (1792), F-R(m)
La journée de Marathon (incid music, J.F. Guéroult), 1792, ov. (1794)
Le déserteur de la montagne de Ham (fait historique, 1, Dejaure), Comédie-Italienne (Salle Favart), 6 Feb 1793, unpubd
Le congrès des rois (cmda, 3, Desmaillot [A.F. Eve]), OC (Favart), 26 Feb 1794; collab. N.-M. Dalayrac, A.-E.-M. Grétry, E.-N. Méhul and 8 others, unpubd
Le lendemain de la bataille de Fleurus (impromptu, 1, d'Antilly), Egalité, 15 Oct 1794, unpubd
Encore un victoire, ou Les déserteurs liégeois (1, d'Antilly), OC (Favart), 30 Oct 1794, unpubd
On respire (cmda, 1, C.L. Tissot), OC (Favart), 9 March 1795, lib. (*c*1795)
Le brigand (drame mêlé d'ariettes, 3, F.-B. Hoffman), OC (Favart), 25 July 1795, F-Pc
La journée du 10 août 1792, ou La chute du dernier tyran (opéra, 4, G. Saulnier and Darrieux), Opéra, 10 Aug 1795, lib (1795)
Imogène, ou La gageure indiscrète (cmda, 3, Dejaure), OC (Favart), 27 April 1796, unpubd
Le petit page, ou La prison d'état (cmda, 1, R.C.G. de Pixérécourt and L.T. Lambert), Feydeau, 14 Feb 1800 (*c*1800); collab. N. Isouard
Flaminius à Corinthe (opéra, 1, Pixérécourt and Lambert), Opéra, 27 Feb 1801, Po (inc.); collab. Isouard
Astyanax (opéra, 3, Dejaure), Opéra, 12 April 1801, Po
Le baiser et la quittance, ou Une aventure de garnison (oc, 3, L.B. Picard, M. Dieulafoy and C. de Longchamps), OC (Feydeau), 18 June 1803, B-Bc; collab. A. Boieldieu, Isouard and Méhul
Harmodius et Aristogiton, 1804 (tragédie lyrique, E.-J.-B. Delrieu), unperf., lost
Les surprises, ou L'étourdi en voyage (2, C.A.B. Sewrin), OC (Feydeau), 2 Jan 1806, unpubd
Paul et Virginie (ballet-pantomime, 3), St Cloud, 12 June 1806, F-Po
François I, ou La fête mystérieuse (cmda, 2, Sewrin and A. de Chazet), OC (Feydeau), 14 March 1807 (*c*1807)
Les amours d'Antoine et Cléopâtre (ballet, 3, P. Aumer), Opéra, 8 March 1808, vs (Vienna, ?1809)
Aristippe (comédie lyrique, 2, P.F. Giraud and M.T. Leclercq), Opéra, 24 May 1808 (*c*1808), ov. ed. D. Charlton, The Symphony 1720–1840, ser. D, vii (New York and London, 1983)
Jadis et aujourd'hui (opéra bouffon, 1, Sewrin), OC (Feydeau), 29 Oct 1808 (*c*1808)
La fête de Mars (divertissement-pantomime, 1), Opéra, 26 Dec 1808, Po
Abel (tragédie lyrique, 3, Hoffman), Opéra, 23 March 1810, Po; rev. as La mort d'Abel (2), Opéra, 17 March 1823, vs (*c*1824)
Le triomphe du mois de mars (opéra-ballet, 1, E.M. Dupaty), Opéra, 27 March 1811, Po
L'homme sans façon, ou Les contrariétés (cmda, 3, Sewrin), OC (Feydeau), 7 Jan 1812 (*c*1812)
Le camp de Sobieski, ou Le triomphe des femmes (comédie mêlée de chant, 2, Dupaty), OC (Feydeau), 19 April 1813
Constance et Théodore, ou La prisonnière (oc, 2, B.-J. Marsollier des Vivetières), OC (Feydeau), 22 Nov 1813
L'oriflamme (opéra, 1, C.-G. Etienne and L.P.-M.-F. Baour-Lormian), Opéra, 1 Feb 1814, Pn, Po, I-PAc; (1814); collab. H.-M. Berton, Méhul and F. Paer
Les Béarnais, ou Henri IV en voyage (comédie mêlée de chants, 1, Sewrin), OC (Feydeau), 21 May 1814; collab. Boieldieu
La perruque et la redingote (oc, 3, A.E. Scribe), OC (Feydeau), 25 Jan 1815; collab. C.F. Kreubé
La princesse de Babylone (opéra, 3, L.J.B.E. Vigée), Opéra, 30 May 1815, F-Po
L'heureux retour (ballet, 1), Opéra, 25 July 1815, Po [collab. Berton, Persuis]
Le carnaval de Venise (ballet, 2), Opéra, 22 Feb 1816 [collab. Persuis]; rev. in 1 act, 7 Sept 1817, Po
Les dieux rivaux (opéra-ballet, 1, C. Briffaut and Dieulafoy), Opéra, 21 June 1816, Po; collab. G. Spontini, Persuis and Berton
Le maître et le valet (oc, 3, M. A. J. Gensoul), OC (Feydeau), 8 Aug 1816
La servante justifiée, ou La fête de Mathurine (ballet villageois, 1), Opéra, 30 Sept 1818, Po
Clari, ou La promesse de mariage (ballet-pantomime, 3), Opéra, 19 June 1820, Po
Blanche de Provence, ou La cour des fées (opéra, 1, M.E.G.M. Théaulon and de Rancé), Tuileries, 1 May 1821, Po; collab. Berton, Boieldieu, L. Cherubini and Paer
Le négociant de Hambourg (oc, 3, J.B.C. Vial and J.A. de R. St-Cyr), OC (Feydeau), 15 Oct 1821
Le paradis de Mahomet (oc, 3, Scribe and Mélesville [A.-H.-J. Duveyrier]), OC (Feydeau), 23 March 1822; collab. Kreubé
Ipsiboé (opéra, 4, M. de St-Lyon), Opéra, 31 March 1824, Po
Pharamond (opéra, 3, J.A.P.F. Ancelot, P.M.T.A. Guiraud and L.A. Soumet), Opéra, 10 June 1825, Pn, Po, R(m), vs (Paris, n.d.); collab. Berton and Boieldieu
Matilde, *c*1826–7 (3), unperf.
La Prise de Toulon par les Français (opéra, 3, d'Antilly), lib only publ, unperf, F-R(m)

ORCHESTRAL

Vn concs. (composition and publication dates from Williams, 1973): no.1, G, op.1, 1783–4 (*c*1801); no.2, A, op.2, 1784–5 (*c*1801); no.3, E, op.3, 1785 (*c*1800); no.4, C, op.4, 1786 (up to 1808); no.5, A, op.5, 1787 (by 1808); no.6, e, op.6, *c*1788 (?); no.7, A, op.7, *c*1790 (by 1808); no.8, d, op.8, *c*1795 (by 1809); no.9, e, op.9, by 1802 (Leipzig, by 1802); no.10, d, op.10, by 1802 (Leipzig, by 1802); no.11, C, op.11, by 1802 (Leipzig, by 1802); no.12, A, op.12, 1802–3 (Leipzig, *c*1803); no.13, D, op.A, 1803 (*c*1804); no.14, E, op.B, 1803–4 (*c*1804); no.15, A, op.C, 1804 (*c*1805); no.16, e, op.D, 1804 (Leipzig and Paris, *c*1805) [on themes by Haydn]; no.17, G, op.E, 1805 (*c*1807); no.18, e, op.F, 1805–9 (Offenbach, *c*1811); no.19, d, op.G, 1805–10 (?)
Sinfonia concertantes: no.1, F, 2 vn, *c*1793 (*c*1803); no.2, F, 2 vn, vc, *c*1794 (Offenbach, *c*1819) [?B-Bc]; no.3, E, 2 vn, 1803 (1803); no.4, F, 2 vn, F-Pc
Ouverture de la journée de marathon, ww, brass (1794)

CHAMBER

Qnt, ob/cl, str qt (between 1790 and 1799)
Str qts: 6 quatuors concertans (*c*1790); 3 qts, op.2 (Offenbach, *c*1795); 2 qts (Leipzig, between 1790 and 1799); 6 nouveaux quatuors, op.2, pt.1 (*c*1798)
Trios: Premier pot-pourri, vn solo, vn, b (*c*1800); Trio, ob/cl, bn, va (Offenbach, *c*1803); 3 trios brillans, 2 vn, b (*c*1803) [as op.16 (Leipzig, *c*1804)]
Duets: Duos, vn, va (Versailles, 1783); 3 vn duos, op.11, pt.2 (Offenbach, *c*1800); 3 vn duos, op.3 (between 1800 and 1809); 3 duos concertans, 2 vn, op.B (Offenbach, *c*1820); 6 nocturnes concertans, hp, vn (*c*1822) [collab. R.N.C. Bochsa]
Sonatas: 3 sonatas, vn, b, op.1 (between 1790 and 1799); 3 sonatas, vn, b, op.B (between 1790 and 1799); Grande sonate, vn, pf (?Paris, 1799); 3 sonates faciles, vn, b (before 1804); 3 sonatas, vn, b, op.2 (between 1800 and 1809)
Vn solo: 42 études ou caprices (1796), 1st extant edn. (*c*1807) [40 studies in *c*1807 print; other 2 ?authentic]; 18 nouveaux caprices ou études (Leipzig, *c*1815) [? later pubd as 19 études]

PEDAGOGICAL

Méthode de violon (1803) [collab. P.J.J. Rode, P.M. Baillot]

(2) Jean Nicolas Auguste Kreutzer (b Versailles, 3 Sept 1778; d Paris, 31 Aug 1832). Violinist and composer, brother of (1) Rodolphe Kreutzer. Having been taught the violin by his brother Rodolphe at home, he continued as his pupil while at the Paris Conservatoire, where he won the premier prix for violin in 1801. He joined the orchestra of the Théâtre Favart in 1798 and that of the Opéra in 1800 or 1801. He also became a member of the imperial chapel orchestra (1804), remaining there in the service of the Bourbons after the 1815 Restoration until 1830. On Rodolphe Kreutzer's retirement in 1826 he took charge of his Conservatoire class, although he had already been a member of the staff. He published two violin concertos, violin duos, three violin sonatas op.1 and other violin music. His playing style was less brilliant than Rodolphe's, though expressive and stylish.

(3) Léon Charles François Kreutzer (b Paris, 23 Sept 1817; d Vichy, 6 Oct 1868). Writer on music and composer, son of (2) Jean Nicolas Auguste Kreutzer. He studied the piano and composition privately. His cultural interests and independence of thought led him to music criticism; according to Fétis he began writing for L'union in 1840, concentrating on aspects of opera and operatic history. The series of articles 'De l'opéra en Europe' was published in the Revue et gazette musicale de Paris between 4 February and 23 September 1849. His work also appeared in the Revue contemporaine (from 1854), L'opinion publique and Le théâtre. In collaboration with Edouard Fournier he wrote the articles 'Opéra' and 'Opéra-Comique' in the Encyclopédie du XIXe siècle, later published as Essai sur l'art lyrique au théâtre (Paris, 1849).

Kreutzer's compositions, which attracted favourable comment from Fétis, are for the most part unpublished. His Symphony in F minor (privately printed, *c*1860) shows in its first and third movements excessively close adherence to Beethoven's symphonic form and style, but the remaining two movements are marked out by the inclusion of a battery of six saxophones and five saxhorns in addition to the normal orchestral wind. The fanfares that open the second movement and recur in the finale give the music an added dimension possibly inspired by Berlioz. Kreutzer also composed a symphony in B♭, about 50 songs, four string quartets, a piano trio, three piano sonatas, and other music for the piano and the organ. His two operas, Serafine and Les filles d'azur were not performed or published.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BerliozM; BrookSF; FétisB; EitnerQ; MoserGV; PierreH; ScheringGIK
'Nachrichten: gegenwärtiger Zustand der Musik in Paris', AMZ, ii (1799–1800), 713
'Rode, Baillot and Kreutzer's Method of Instruction for the Violin', Quarterly Musical Magazine and Review, vi (1824), 527
P.M.F. Baillot: L'art du violon (Paris, 1834)
L. Spohr: Selbstbiographie (Kassel and Göttingen, 1860–61; Eng. trans., 1865/R)
A. Jullien: Paris dilettante au commencement du siècle (Paris, 1884)
A. Pougin: Viotti et l'école moderne du violon (Paris, 1888)
H. Kling: Rodolphe Kreutzer (Brussels, 1898)
C. Pierre: Le Conservatoire national de musique et de déclamation (Paris, 1900)
J. Hardy: Rodolphe Kreutzer (Paris, 1910)
J.G. Prodhomme: 'Napoleon, Music and Musicians', MQ, v (1921), 579–605
J.L. Massart: L'art de travailler les études de Kreutzer (Paris, n.d.; Eng. trans., 1926)
C.W. Beaumont: Complete Book of Ballets (London, 1937, rev. 2/1949, enlarged 4/1956)
H. Gougelot: La romance française sous la Révolution et L'Empire (Melun, 1937–43)
B. Schwarz: 'Beethoven and the French Violin School', MQ, xliv (1958), 431–47
E. Forbes, ed.: Thayer's Life of Beethoven (Princeton, 1964, 2/1967)
H.-J. Nösselt: 'Rodolphe Kreutzer, der klassische Violinist', Das Orchester, xiv (1966), 421
J. Szigeti: Szigeti on the Violin (London, 1969)
H. Unverricht: Geschichte des Streichtrios (Tutzing, 1969)
D. Charlton: Orchestration and Orchestral Practice in Paris 1789–1810 (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1973)
M.R. Williams: The Violin Concertos of Rodolphe Kreutzer (diss., Indiana U., 1973)
M.E.C. Bartlet: 'Opera as Patriotic Ceremony: the Case of L'Oriflamme', IMSCR XIII: Strasbourg 1982, i, 327–39
W. Dean: 'French Opera', The Age of Beethoven 1790–1830, NOHM, viii (1982), 26–119
B. Schwartz: French Instrumental Music between the Revolutions (1789–1830) (New York, 1987)
K.J. Ellis: La revue et gazette musicale de Paris (1834–1880): the State of Music Criticism in Nineteenth-Century France (diss., U. of Oxford, 1991)
R. Legrand: 'L'information politique par l'opéra', Le tambour et la harpe, ed. J.-R. Julien and J. Mongrédien (Paris, 1991), 111–21
D. Charlton: 'On Redefinitions of Rescue Opera', Music and the French Revolution, ed. M. Boyd (Cambridge, 1992), 169–88
R. Macnutt: 'Early Acquisitions for the Paris Conservatoire Library: Rodolphe Kreutzer's Role in Obtaining Materials from Italy', Music Publishing & Collecting: Essays in Honor of Donald W. Krummel (Urbana, IL, 1994), 167–88

DAVID CHARLTON

Kreutzer [Kreuzer], Conradin [Conrad, Konradin] (b Messkirch, Baden, 22 Nov 1780; d Riga, 14 Dec 1849). German composer and conductor. The son of a Swabian burgher, he received his earliest musical training from the local choirmaster, J.B. Rieger. From 1789 he studied theory and the organ with Ernst Weinrauch and learnt to play a number of instruments at the Benedictine monastery of Zwiefalten. In 1798 or 1799 he became a student of law at the University of Freiburg, but after his father's death in 1800 he turned entirely to music. While still students he and friends performed his one-act Singspiel Die lächerliche Werbung. For the next three or four years he was probably in Switzerland; in 1804 he went to Vienna, where he met Haydn and was probably a pupil of Albrechtsberger. He gave music lessons and concerts in order to maintain himself, and continued to compose, though was unable to secure performances of his stage works in Vienna until 1810. From 1810 he toured Germany and elsewhere demonstrating Franz Leppich's semi-mechanical 'panmelodicon'. He spent the winter of 1811–12 in Stuttgart, where the operas Konradin von Schwaben and Feodora were successfully staged. Following Danzi's resignation Kreutzer was appointed Hofkapellmeister with effect from 10 July 1812. That autumn he married for the first time; his daughters Cäcilie and Marie (the latter from his second marriage) became singers. Although he gave up his Stuttgart post in 1816 owing to intrigues, his friendship there with the Swabian poet Johann Ludwig Uhland, one of Germany's foremost lyricists and ballad writers, was of far-reaching importance for his later development. The work from this period on which he based his highest hopes was the through-composed 'heroic opera' Orestes, with which he intended to bridge the gap between Gluck's two Iphigenia operas; after fruitless attempts to have it staged in Berlin, and then in Vienna, it was finally produced in Prague in 1818, but was a failure.

After he left Stuttgart Kreutzer spent some time at Schaffhausen before becoming Kapellmeister (1818–22) to Prince Carl Egon of Fürstenberg at Donaueschingen. He made several tours while still nominally engaged there, and the lyric-tragic monodrama Adele von Budoy dates from this period. It was commissioned for Anna Milder Hauptmann, but enjoyed success only when revised for Wilhelmine Schroder-Devrient at Vienna in 1823 under the title Cordelia; she also performed the role in Paris. Following the successful production of his opera Libussa in Vienna in 1822, Kreutzer was appointed Kapellmeister at the Kärntnertortheater; he held the post until 1827 and from 1829 to 1832. Between these spells at the Vienna court opera he was in Paris. In 1833 he moved to the suburban Theater in der Josefstadt, in response to an invitation from the ambitious director, Stöger. He was Kapellmeister there from 1833 to 1835, the period that saw the first performances of his two greatest successes, Das Nachtlager in Granada and Der Verschwender. 1833 saw the première in Berlin of Kreutzer's settling of Grillparzer's Melusina, which the poet had originally written for Beethoven in 1823. Although Kreutzer was back at the Kärntnertortheater from 1835, it was at the Josefstadt that the opera Die Höhle bei Waverley was given in 1837. In the 1840s he accompanied his daughters on concert tours and was city music director at Cologne, 1840–42, as well as working in Mainz, 1844–5. He was mentioned in 1846 as Nicolai's likely successor at the Vienna Hofoper, but the negotiations came to nothing and in 1848 he moved to Riga.

During the 1840s a number of German theatres staged Kreutzer's operas, though these were more succès d'estime than triumphs: Brunswick, Wiesbaden, Darmstadt, Hamburg and (posthumously) Kassel each staged one of his new operas in the years following his final departure from Vienna, but none of these houses seems to have invited him back to mount another. Tastes were changing; the esteemed master of Das Nachtlager and Der Verschwender had nothing original to offer a public that was experiencing the early operas of Wagner.

Kreutzer's music has never been entirely forgotten. His Uhland settings for male-voice chorus long remained popular. Das Nachtlager used to be revived occasionally in Germany and a few of the solo songs are still sometimes heard; above all, his score for Raimund's 'romantic magic tale' Der Verschwender continues to be performed regularly in Austria. Despite the power of some of the big numbers in Das Nachtlager and the sure sense of dramatic timing and instrumental colour in Der Verschwender (the beggar's song 'O hört des armen Mannes Bitte' is, with its haunting, melancholy beauty, not unworthy of Schubert; its insertion within a roistering chorus is a touch that Weber would have admired), Kreutzer is at his most characteristic in simple, expressive songs, such as the beggar's 'Habt Dank, ihr guten Leute' and Valentin's 'Da streiten sich die Leut herum' from Der Verschwender, and the once-famous romance 'Ein Schütz bin ich' from Das Nachtlager, or some of the atmospheric Uhland settings. His effective instrumentation and lively feeling for rhythm and local colour are shown in many of his works, probably nowhere to more telling effect than in the charming (and briefly poignant) Septet in E♭ op.62 for wind and strings. Several of his chamber works and songs have now been republished and many of his works have been recorded.

WORKS

printed works published in Vienna unless otherwise stated

principal sources for MSS and published works are A-Wdtö, Wgm, Wn, Wst; D-DO, Mbs, Rp

WJ – Vienna, Theater in der Josefstadt
WK – Vienna, Kärntnertortheater
WW – Vienna, Theater an der Wien

STAGE

all publications in vocal score

Die lächerliche Werbung (Spl, 1), Freiburg, *c*1800
Aesopin Phrygien [Aesop in Lydien] (op, 1, ? M. Stegmayer), ? Vienna, 1808; libretto rev. P.A. Wolff, Donaueshingen 1821, Stuttgart 1822
Die zwei Worte, oder Die Nacht im Walde (op, 1, after B.-J. Marsollier des Vivetières), Stuttgart, 1808 [or ?Vienna, 1803]
Jery und Bätely (Spl, 1, J.W. von Goethe), WK, 19 May 1810
Panthea, 1810 (op, 3), unperf.
Feodora (op, 1, A. von Kotzebue), Stuttgart, 1812 (Leipzig, n.d.)
Conradin von Schwaben (op, 3, K.B. Weitzmann), Stuttgart, 30 March 1812; rev., libretto by 'Bernd von Guseck' (recte Karl Gustav von Berneck), as Konradin, der letzte Hohenstaufe, 1847
Die Insulanerin (op, 2, J.F. Schlotterbeck, after P. Metastasio), Stuttgart, 25 March 1813; rev. as Die Insulanerinnen, WK, 11 Feb 1829
Der Taucher (romantische Oper, 2, S.G. Bürde, after F. Schiller), Stuttgart, 19 April 1813; rev. 1823 (Vienna, n.d.)
Alimon und Zaide, oder Der Prinz von Katanea (op, 3), Stuttgart, 24 Feb 1814 (Mainz, n.d.)
Die Nachtmütze (komische Oper, after Kotzebue: Die Schlafmütze des Propheten Elias), Stuttgart, 1814
Die Alpenhütte (op, 1, Kotzebue), Stuttgart, 1 March 1815 (Augsburg, n.d.)
Der Herr und sein Diener (op, 1, after Fr. orig.), Stuttgart, 30 Nov 1815
Orestes (heroic opera, 3), Prague, 6 May 1818
Adele von Budoy (1), Königsberg, 13 Aug 1821; rev. as Cordelia (lyric-tragedy op, P.A. Wolff), WK, 15 Feb 1823, arias (Vienna, *c*1823)
Libussa [Primislav] (romantische Oper, 3, J.K. Bernard), WK, 4 Dec 1822 (Vienna, n.d.)
Sigune (Nordic legend, 3, August Schuhmacher), WW, 20 Nov 1823 (Vienna, n.d.)
Die erfüllte Hoffnung (ländliche Szene, 1), WW, 2 Dec 1824
Die lustige Werbung (komische Oper, 2, C. B. [? R. B.], after Fr. orig.), WW, 27 June 1826
La folle de Glaris (op, 2, T.-M.-F. Sauvage), Paris, Odéon, 21 April 1827 [? same as Cordelia; addl music by J.-M. Payer]
L'eau de jouvenance (comic op, 2, F.-A. Duvert and Xavier [X.B. Saintine]), Paris, Odéon, 13 Oct 1827; as Die Vertüngungs-Essenz (Operette, 1, trans. K. von Braun), WK, 24 Sept 1838
Das Mädchen von Montfermeuil, oder Denise, das Milchmädchen (komische Oper, 5, Andreas Schumacher), WK, 3 Oct 1829
Baron Luft (Spl, 1, after Fr. orig.), WK, 20 Jan 1830
Die Jungfrau (romantische Oper, 3, Andreas Schumacher, after Mélesville [A.-H.-J. Duveyrier]), Prague, Nov 1831
Die Hochländerin, 1831 (op, 1), unperf.
Der Lastträger an der Themse (op, 3, H. Herzenskron), Prague, 16 Feb 1832
Melusine (romantische Oper, 3, F. Grillparzer), Berlin, Königstädtisches, 27 Feb 1833
Der Ring des Glückes, oder Die Quellenfürstin im Alpentale (Zauberspiel, 3, F.K. Weidmann), WJ, 19 Dec 1833
Das Nachtlager in [von] Granada (romantische Oper, 2, von Braun, after J.F. Kind), WJ, 13 Jan 1834 (Vienna, n.d.)
Der Verschwender (Zaubermärchen, 3, F. Raimund), WJ, 20 Feb 1834 (Vienna, n.d.)
Tom Rick, oder Der Pavian (komische Oper, 3, J. Kupelwieser, after Fr. orig.), WJ, 1 July 1834
Der Bräutigam in der Klemme (Spl, 1, Herzenskron), WJ, 24 June 1835
Traumleben, oder Zufriedenheit, die Quelle des Glückes (Zauberspiel, 3, F.X. Told), WJ, 10 Oct 1835
Die Höhle bei Waverley (3, G. Ott, after A. Oehlenschläger), WJ, 6 April 1837
Der Gang nach dem Eisenhammer [Fridolin] (romantische Oper, 3, J.A.F. Reil, after Schiller), WK, 16 Dec 1837
Die beiden Figaro (komische Oper, 2, G.F. Treitschke, after J.F. Jünger), Brunswick, 13 Aug 1840 (Brunswick, n.d.)

Der Edelknecht (op, 4, C. von Birch-Pfeiffer), Wiesbaden, 21 June 1842 (Brunswick, n.d.)
Des Sängers Fluch (op, 1, E. Pasqué, after J.L. Uhland), Darmstadt, 17 May 1846
Die Hochländerin am Kaukasus (romantische Oper, 3, Guseck), Hamburg, 6 or 16 Nov 1846 [? connected with Die Hochländerin, 1831]
Aurelia, oder Die Prinzessin von Bulgarien (romantische Oper, 3, C. Gollmick, after J.F. von Weissenthurn), ? Kassel, 20 Aug 1851

Undated works: Der Apollosaal (Spl, 1); Zenobia, unperf. [Kreutzer's final opera]; Das Bild der Landesmutter (occasional piece)
Other works: Der Eremit auf Formentera (incid music, Kotzebue), 1800–04; Fortunat (incid music, E. von Bauernfeld), 1835; 2 ballets, Vienna, 1814: Antonius und Kleopatra, Myrsileund Anteros; Szenen aus Goethes Faust, Donaueschingen, 4 Nov 1820, songs (Vienna, 1834); Die Höhle Soncha, oder Die vierzig Räuber (melodrama, 3, K. Treuhold), unperf. [?identical with F. Roser's work of same title, 1826]

OTHER WORKS

Vocal: Die Sendung Mosis (orat), Stuttgart, 1 Jan 1814; Die Friedensfeier (orat) masses and shorter liturgical works; occasional works, incl. hymns and cants.; over 150 lieder; numerous partsongs
Inst: 3 pf concs., B♭, op.42 (Leipzig, ?1819), C, op.50 (Bonn, ?1822), E♭, op.65 (Leipzig, ?1825); Variations, pf, orch, op.35 (Augsburg, n.d.); chbr works for str and ww in various combinations, incl. several with pf; numerous pf pieces, 2 hands and 4 hands

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W.H. Riehl: Musikalische Charakterköpfe, i (Stuttgart, 1853, 8/1899), 263–74
H. Weber: Neujahrsstück der Allgemeinen Musikgesellschaft in Zürich, lviii (1870)
R. Krauss: Das Stuttgarter Hoftheater von den ältesten Zeiten bis zur Gegenwart (Stuttgart, 1908)
A. Prümers: 'Aus Kreutzers Briefwechsel', Neue Musik-Zeitung, xxxiii (1912), 290
R. Rossmayer: Konradin Kreutzer als dramatischer Komponist (diss., U. of Vienna, 1928)
A. Landau: Das einstimmige Kunstlied Conradin Kreutzers und seine Stellung zum zeitgenössischen Lied in Schwaben (Leipzig, 1930/R)
A. Landau: 'Die Klavier-Musik Conradin Kreutzers', ZMw, xiii (1930–31), 80–83
A. Bauer: 150 Jahre Theater an der Wien (Zürich, 1952)
K. Goedeke and others: Grundriss zur Geschichte der deutschen Dichtung, xi/2 (Düsseldorf, 2/1953)
A. Bauer: Opern und Operetten in Wien (Graz and Cologne, 1955)
A. Bauer: Das Theater in der Josefstadt zu Wien (Vienna, 1957)
H. Leister: Conradin Kreutzers Lieder für Männerchor (diss., U. of Mainz, 1963)
R. Heinemann: 'Kreutzer, Konrad', Rheinische Musiker, iv, ed. K.G. Fellerer (Cologne, 1966), 59–64
L.E. Peake: 'Kreutzer's Wanderlieder: the other Winterreise', MQ, lxv (1979), 83–102
K.-P. Brecht: Conradin Kreutzer: Biographie und Werkverzeichnis (Messkirch, 1980)
E. Valentin: 'Die zwischen den Zeiten standen: ein Wort für und über Conradin Kreutzer', Lied und Chor, lxxii/11 (1980), 238–40

PETER BRANSCOMBE

Kreutzer, Leonid (b St Petersburg, 13 March 1884; d Tokyo, 30 Oct 1953). Russian pianist and teacher. He was a piano pupil of Yesipova at the St Petersburg Conservatory, where he also had lessons in composition from Glazunov. After spending two years in Leipzig, he went to Berlin in 1908 and from 1921 to 1933 served as a professor at the Hochschule für Musik. His pupils there included Franz Reizenstein, Peter Stadlen, Franz Osborn, Istvan Antal, Władysław Szpilman, Alexander Zakin and Karl-Ulrich Schnabel. Kreutzer gave recitals in the USA in 1926 and 1928. In 1935 he went to Japan, where he settled and worked both as teacher and performer. Throughout his career he was also active as a conductor. A refreshingly unmannered and spontaneous interpreter, Kreutzer was a noted Chopin player. Of particular interest among his recordings is a fine version of Schumann's Dichterliebe, sung in Japanese, in which he accompanies the Japanese tenor T. Kinoshita. Kreutzer composed some music, of which only the pantomime Der Gott und die Bajadere (1920) met with any success. In addition to editing works by Liszt and Chopin, he wrote Das normale Klavierpedal (Leipzig, 2/1928).

JAMES METHUEN-CAMPBELL

Kreuz (Ger.). See SHARP.

Kreuzer, Conradin. See KREUTZER, CONRADIN.

Kreyn. See KREIN family.

Kreynina [Kreinin], Yuliya [Julia] Volfovna (b Moscow, 20 July 1947). Russian musicologist, resident in Israel. She completed the MA in music theory with Kholopov at the Moscow Conservatory in 1971 and took the doctorate in 1976 at the All-Union Art Research Institute of Moscow with a disseration on Reger; during this period she also taught music theory at the Gnesin Music College (1970–80). She was a senior research fellow at the All-Union Research Institute (1979–94) and was appointed researcher and lecturer at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem in 1995. Her principal areas of research are 20th-century European composers, whose works she analyses in detail against the historical background of their lives. She was the first Russian musicologist to publish a monograph on Reger and her comprehensive study examines the role of J.S. Bach's works in Reger's music, Reger's relationship to Romanticism and Reger's influence on later composers such as Schoenberg and Hindemith. She has also investigated the biography and stylistic evolution of Ligeti in a collection of articles (1993), reinterpreting the 'Hungarian' elements of his compositions of the 1980s; her other writings include articles on Szymanowski, Lutosławski and Rihm. Through her writings, teaching and translations she strives to make modern music more popular in Russia and Israel and to promote closer relations between Russian and Israeli music scholars.

WRITINGS

'Notizen über Max Reger', Mitteilungen des Max-Reger-Instituts, xx, (1974), 73–7
'Reger in Russland', Max-Reger-Festschrift: 1973, ed. H. Oesterheld-Müller (Meiningen, 1974), 17–21
'O stile Lyutoslavskogo 60kh godov' [On the style of Lutosławski in the 1960s], Problemï muzïkal'noy nauki, iii (1975), 238–79
Maks Reger kak yavlenye nemetskoy muzïkal'noy kulturï [Max Reger as a phenomenon of German musical culture] (diss., All-Union Art Research Institute of Moscow, 1976)
'Shimanovsky v Rossii', RM, xxvii/1 (1983), 18 only ed., with I. Nikolskaya: K. Szymanowski : Vospominaniya, stat'i. publikatsii [Reminiscences, articles, publications] (Moscow, 1984)
Maks Reger zhizn' i tvorchestvo [Reger: life and work] (Moscow, 1991)
'D'yord' Ligeti i Vitold Lyutoslavsky paralleli i sopostavleniya' [Ligeti and Lutosławski: parallels and collations], Laudamus, ed. V. Zenova and M. Storozko (Moscow, 1992), 155–67
D'yord' Ligeti: lichnost' i tvorchestvo [Ligeti: work and personality] (Moscow, 1993) [incl. 'Lichnost' i tvorcheskaya sudba' [Personality and creative destiny], 15–24; 'Vengerskoye desyatiletiye: nachalo puti' [The Hungarian decade: the beginning of the way], 25–37; 'Gorkiy smekh: ob opere "Le Grand Macabre"' [Bitter laughter: on the opera 'Le Grand Macabre'], 76–90; '80-e godï: novoye prochteniye traditsii' [The 1980s: new reading of tradition], 91–112; 'Ligeti v zerkale svoikh suzhdeniy o musike' [Ligeti in the mirror of his opinions on music], 147–66]
'Kamernaya instrumental'naya muzïka kompozitorov Rossiyskoy Federatsii', Istoriya muzïki narodov SSSR, vi, ed. I. Nestyev

(Moscow, 1996) 134–54; vii, ed. G. Golovinsky (Moscow, 1997), 5–25
'Volfgang Rim i yego opera "Jakob Lents": o neoromanticheskikh tendentsiyakh v muzïke FRG', Zapadnoye iskusstvo. XX vek: sovremennïye iskaniya i kul'turnïye traditsii, ed. B. Zingermann (Moscow, 1997), 226–45

MARINA RITSAREVA

Křička, Jaroslav (b Kelč, Moravia, 27 Aug 1882; d Prague, 23 Jan 1969). Czech composer. He studied at the Prague Conservatory (1902–5) and became an associate of Vitězslav Novak. His education was continued in Berlin (1905–6), and then he worked in Yekaterinoslav (now Dnepropetrovsk) as a music teacher for three years. While there he composed an orchestral Elegie na smrt Rimského-Korsakova ('Elegy on the Death of Rimsky-Korsakov', 1908) and formed a friendship with Glazunov and Taneyev. He also conducted concerts of Czech music and contributed articles to Czech journals on Russian music. After returning home in 1909 he worked as a choirmaster, principally with the Prague Hlahol choir. With it he gave the premières of works by Novák (The Wedding Shift) and Janáček (The Eternal Gospel), and of the oratorio Jan Hus (1920) by Jeremiáš. In 1918 he was appointed professor of composition at the Prague Conservatory. He was later made rector of the conservatory, which office he held during the difficult years of the German occupation. The title of Merited Artist was bestowed on him by the liberated Czech Republic.

Křička's talent as a composer was best seen in small forms such as songs and choral works. His large output of stage works is varied: he achieved his greatest success with his children's operas, which were performed by professional and amateur ensembles, both in his own country and abroad; Clemens Krauss staged Max Brod's version of Bílý pán ('The Gentleman in White'), Spuk im Schloss, at the Staatsoper in Vienna in 1932. His music is fresh and lively, its clearcut melodic structures close to the simplicity of folksongs, which he adapted in large numbers. There is also much humour in his music, often turning into parody or grotesque elements. His early compositions show Russian influence; later ones reflect elements from Smetana and Dvořák as well as from Janáček and Novák, and many contemporary trends abroad, including jazz.

WORKS
(selective list)

OPERAS

Hipolyta (comic op, 3, J. Munk [pseud. of J. and P. Křička], after M. Hawlett: Ippolita in the Hills), Prague, National, 10 Oct 1917
Ogaři [Country Boys and their Games] (children's op, 2, O. Kalda), Nové Město na Moravě, 7 Sept 1919
Bílý pán, aneb Těžko se dnes duchům straší [The Gentleman in White, or No Haunts Left for Ghosts] (comic op, prol., 3, epilogue, J.L. Budín, after O. Wilde: The Canterville Ghost), 27 Nov 1929; rev. as Spuk im Schloss, oder Böse Zeiten für Gespenster, 1930 (M. Brod), Breslau, Stadt, 14 Nov 1931
Dobře to dopadlo, aneb Tlustý pradědeček, lupiči a detektivové [It Turned Out Well, or The Fat Great-Grandfather, Robbers and Detectives] (comic Spl for children, 2, J. Čapek), Prague, National, 29 Dec 1932
Král Lávra [King Lávra] (Spl with dancing, prol., 3, epilogue, Křička and J. Jenčík, after K.H. Borovský), Prague, National, 7 June 1940
Oživlé loutky [Revived Puppets] (Spl for children, J. Křička, after M. Kopecký: Krásná Dišperanda and Doktor Faust), Prague, Vinohrady, 26 April 1943
Psaníčko na cestách [Travelling Letter] (Spl for children, 5 scenes, J. and P. Křička, after K. Čapek: Postman's Tale), Prague, Vinohrady, 15 Jan 1944
Jáchym a Juliana (folk romance, 5 scenes, J. Křička, after B. Beneš-Buchlovan), 1947–8, Opava, Civic Theatre of Zdeněk Nejedlý, 22 Dec 1951
České jesličky [A Czech Crib] (Christmas op, prol., 3, epilogue, J. Port and B. Stejskal), 1937, Prague, Grand Opera of the Fifth of May, 15 Jan 1949
Kolébka [The Cradle] (musical comedy, 3, J. Křička, after A. Jirásek), Opava, Civic Theatre of Zdeněk Nejedlý, 25 Nov 1951
Kalhoty [The Trousers] (TV op, J. Křička, after P. Lambrosi), Czechoslovak TV, 25 Aug 1962

OTHER WORKS

Orch: Mládí [Youth], sym., d, op.3, 1905–6; Elegie na smrt Rimského-Korsakova, 1908; Idyllické scherzo, op.9, 1909; Modrý pták [The Bluebird], op.16, 1911; Adventus, sym. poem, op.33, 1912; Horácká suita [Highlander Suite], op.63, 1935; Symfonietta, str, op.77, 1942; Sinfonietta semplice, 1962; serenades
Choral: Sedmdesát tisíc [The 70,000] (P. Bezruč), op.4c, 1905; Pokušení na poušti [The Temptation in the Desert] (Bible), op.34, 1922; Zlodějka Jenny [Jenny the Thief] (P. Křička), op.47a, 1929; Tyrolské elegie [Tyrol Elegies] (K. Havlíček-Borovský), op.53, 1930; Moravská kantáta (J. Svítil-Kárník), op.65, 1936; Zlatý kolovrat [The Golden Spinning Wheel] (J.K. Erben), op.85, 1943; Requiem, 1949; 6 masses
Songs: Severní noci [Northern Nights] (K. Balmont), cycle [incl. Albatross]; Písně rozchodu [Songs of Departure] (O. Theer), 1916; Písně halasné [Vociferous Songs], 1950; Naše paní Božena Němcová [Our Mrs Božena Němcová], 1959
Chbr pieces and many songs incl. Albatross (K. Balmont)

Principal publisher: Hudební matice

WRITINGS

'Za Rimském-Korsakovem', HR, ii (1909), 9–12 [obituary]
'O Musorgském a jeho "Boris Godunovu"' [Musorgsky and his Boris Godunov], HR, iii (1910), 452–60
'Rimského-Korsakova "Letopis"' [Rimsky-Korsakov's 'autobiography'], HR, iii (1910), 140–44, 259–62
'Leoše Janáčka "Věčné evangelium"' [Leoš Janáček's The Eternal Gospel], HR, x (1916–17), 161–3
Ruská hudba: stručný přehled světské hudby umělé 19. věku [Russian music: a short survey of the secular art music of the 19th century] (Prague, 1922)
'O Janáčkových sborech' [Janáček's choruses], Listy Hudební matice, iv (1924–5), 12–18
'Na okraj některých Novákových partitur: o instrumentaci' [On the margin of several Novák scores: on instrumentation], Tempo [Prague], x (1930–31), 114–20
'Vzpomínám vděčně na Karla Kovařovice' [I remember Karel Kovařovic gratefully], Vzpomínáme Karla Kovařovice, ed. J. Petr (Prague, 1940), 104–14
Básnická mezihra [Poetic interlude] (Prague, 1943)
Hudba a film [Music and film] (Prague, 1943)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DČHK, ii, esp. 224–5, 233 [incl. further bibliography]; GroveO [incl. further bibliography]
J. Dostál: Jaroslav Křička (Prague, 1944)
J. Fialka: Soupis skladeb J. Křičky [List of Křička's works] (Bystřice pod Hostýnem, 1957)
J. Plavec: 'Přínos Jaroslava Křičky' [Křička's contribution], HRo, x (1957), 657–9

JOSEF PLAVEC, EVA HERRMANNOVÁ

Kriegck, Johann Jacob. See KRIEGK, JOHANN JACOB.

Krieger, Adam (b Driesen, nr Frankfurt an der Oder, 7 Jan 1634; d Dresden, 30 June 1666). German composer. From 1650 or 1651 on, Krieger lived in Leipzig as a part-time student at the university, and probably during this period he studied the organ with Scheidt at Halle. He was well known to the other students, and he no doubt composed many of his more risqué songs for them. His professional musical career began in 1655, when he succeeded Rosenmüller as organist of the Nicolaikirche, Leipzig. By 1657, when he published his Arien, the only collection of his secular songs to appear in his lifetime, he was already known for numerous sacred compositions more commensurate with his position. In the same year Johann Georg II, the Elector of Saxony, called him to Dresden to be his daughter's private keyboard instructor, and thereafter he was under the protection of this important patron of the arts. Also in 1657 the elector encouraged him to apply for the Kantor's position at the Thomaskirche, Leipzig, as successor to Tobias Michael. He was unsuccessful, however, since he refused to submit to the conditions of teaching children and composing on command. But he often travelled the short distance from Dresden to Leipzig to participate in musical events. From 1658 until his death Krieger also served as chamber and court organist at the electoral court. He was readily accepted by the literati assembled there, most notably by the court poet David Schirmer, with whom he sometimes collaborated. There is no evidence, however, that he had any significant contact with the aging Schütz, who had retired to nearby Weissenfels.

Although he lived only 32 years Krieger's fame as a composer of songs was well established before his death. The 110 songs in his two principal collections are his most important music, and with them he brought German song to a new peak of development, firmly establishing Italian expressiveness in a tradition hitherto dominated largely by simple strophic songs influenced by French and Dutch models. His songs are both traditional and of a newer type. The texts, several by Krieger himself, range from beautiful mythological-pastoral love scenes to bawdy drinking-poems. Most are set for one voice with continuo, but five in the earlier collection are for two or three voices, and 15 in the 1676 volume are for two to five voices. All have instrumental ritornellos.

Although no complete copy of the 1657 Arien survives, most of its contents have been reconstructed, principally by Helmuth Osthoff. The tunes alone are preserved in a late 17th-century Danish collection by A.D. Foss with new, psalm texts. As far as can be ascertained, all the arias are strophic, are set syllabically, and follow the models of Opitz; a few parody songs by Rist and Schwieger.

Most of the songs in the Neue Arien are strophic; each strophe is in binary or bar form and is followed by a ritornello for five instruments and continuo (the ritornellos to the ten extra works in the second edition were written by Johann Wilhelm Furchheim, who with Schirmer collected the songs). They thus resemble the simple strophic songs of the 1657 set, but some, with their use of dialogue, non-strophic poems and touching expressiveness, are more typical of Italian models. Nun sich der Tag geendet hat is an example of the older German type; it is based on Krieger's own Ihr schönsten Blumen in der Au of 1656, which in turn is based on a Dutch song by Jacob Cats and ultimately on a poem by Cervantes. The duet between 'Unfriendly Mopsa' and 'Enamoured Daphnis' (no.50), on the other hand, is an italianate, non-strophic dialogue; it begins with a symphony, and a duet refrain returns after sections of dialogue. Osthoff conjectured that some of these dramatic pieces were originally performed in stage productions, possibly operas, which had become popular in Dresden at the time. This is particularly likely in the case of the most famous lied from Neue Arien, Adonis' Tod, which is a bipartite strophic aria of intense expressiveness. Krieger's songs remained popular well into the 18th century, and some of the melodies were turned into chorales, a few of which appear in Bach's cantatas.

WORKS

SACRED

Cants.: An den Wassern zu Babel, 3vv, 2 vn, bc, D-Bsb mus.30215; Der Heiland erstehet, 2vv, 6 insts, lost; Ich lobe den Krieg, S-Uu Vok.mus.1.hdskr. 27:8; Ich preise dich, Herr, 4vv, 5 insts, bc, D-Bsb mus.30215; Meister, wir wissen, T, B, chorus, vn, cornett, trbn, bc, lost

Funeral songs, 4vv: Kommt meine Freunde, meine Lieben (Leipzig, 1654); Legt ein und scharrt mich in die Erde (Leipzig, 1656); O ihr schnöden Eitelkeiten (Leipzig, 1659); Ach, meine Eltern, in Saluberrima et necessaria concio (Coburg, 1667)

Aria: Nimm hin du teurer Sohn, 2vv, 2 vn, bc (Leipzig, 1656)

SECULAR

Song, Ihr schönsten Blumen in der Au, 1v, bc, in Thomas Ritzschens verteutschte Spanische Zigeunerin (Leipzig, 1656)

[50] Arien, 1–3vv, 2 vn, vle, bc (Leipzig, 1657); excerpts ed. in Osthoff (1929) and N. Schiørring: Det 16. og 17. århundredes verdslige danske visesang (Copenhagen, 1950)

[50] Neue Arien in 6 Zehen eingetheilet, 2, 3, 5vv, 2 vn, 2 va, bc (Dresden, 1667, enlarged 2/1676 with 10 addl songs, and with ritornellos by J.W. Furchheim; some ed. in DDT, xix (1905/R)

3 songs, D-Bsb

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (H. Osthoff)

H. Osthoff: Adam Krieger (1634–1666) (Leipzig, 1929/R)

R.H. Thomas: Poetry and Song in the German Baroque (Oxford, 1963)

J.H. Baron: Foreign Influences on the German Secular Solo Continuo Lied in the Mid-Seventeenth Century (diss., Brandeis U., 1967)

N. Schiørring: 'Wiedergefundene Melodien aus der verschollenen Adam-Krieger-Ariensammlung 1657', Festschrift für Walter Wiora, ed. L. Finscher and C.-H. Mahling (Kassel, 1967), 304–12

JOHN H. BARON

Krieger, Armando (b Buenos Aires, 7 May 1940). Argentine composer, pianist and conductor. He had piano lessons with John Montés and Roberto Kinsky, attended the Buenos Aires Municipal Conservatory and studied composition with Ginastera. As a pianist he has appeared throughout the Americas, introducing solo works by Hindemith, Messiaen, Boulez, Stockhausen, Pousseur and others, and taking part in local premières of concertos by Bach and Mozart. In 1963 he won a scholarship for two years' study at the Di Tella Institute, where his teachers included Copland, Dallapiccola, Maderna, Riccardo Malipiero and Messiaen. Another scholarship enabled him to continue piano studies with Loriod at the Mozarteum Argentino (1964). From this period he has been active in the Argentine avant garde as a composer and performer. He has directed the major orchestras of the country, is a permanent conductor at the Teatro Colón (he also conducts the Pequeña Opera de Cámara of Buenos Aires) and founded his own chamber orchestra, the Solistas de Música Contemporánea de Buenos Aires. In 1959 he and Gandini founded the Agrupación Euphonia, later called the Agrupación Música Viva, to promote the performance and study of contemporary music. His works have been widely performed, notably at the 1962 ISCM Festival (Elegía II), the 1966 Paris Biennale (Quartet no.1 for strings) and the Fourth Inter-American Music Festival at Washington, DC, in 1968. There he took the solo part in the first performance of his Métamorphose d'après une lecture de Kafka as well as playing, with the composer, in Gandini's Contrastes for two pianos and orchestra. Among the awards he has received are two Buenos Aires municipal prizes (1962 and 1965) and the first prize at the Rome Congress for the Freedom of Culture (1964, for the Cantata II). He has taught at the Escuela San Pablo, the Catholic University of Argentina, Buenos Aires University and the Instituto Superior de Arte at the Teatro Colón. Krieger started his early career as a composer under the influence of Webern but soon switched to an aleatory style. As a pianist he experimented with clusters, harmonics and other new sonorities. The results may be seen in such works as 60 (1960), Métamorphose … (1968) and Constelaciones (1969).

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Sym., str, 1959; Conc., 2 pf, orch, 1963; Métamorphose d'après une lecture de Kafka, pf, 15 insts, 1968; Ängst, 1970

Choral: Cantata II, S, female vv, orch, 1963; Elegía III (Bible), chorus, 1965; Cantata III (Sábato: Heroes y tumbas), speaker, solo vv, children's chorus, chorus, orch, org, 1969

Solo vocal: Cantata I, S, b cl, tpt, pf, cel, perc, vn, vc, 1959; Elegía II, A, 2 fl, pf, vib, 5 perc, 1962; Cuaderno de verano, 1v, pf, 1965; Tensiones III, 1v, ens, 1967; Cuaderno de otoño, 1v, pf, 1968; De muertes y resurrecciones, 1v, 5 insts, 1969

Chbr: Improvisaciones, fl, ob, cl, bn, 1958; Divertimento no.1, ob, cl, bn, 1959; Divertimento no.2, 2 ob, eng hn, 1959; Qt no.1, str, 1960; Elegía I, cl, pf, 1960; Aleatoria I, 10 wind, 1961; Aleatoria II, 7 insts, 1961; Duo, cl, vc, 1961; Qt no.2, fl, a sax, vib, va, 1961; Sonatina no.2, vn, pf, 1961; Tensiones II, 12 perc, 1961; 3 poemas sin nombre, 1962; 5 nocturnales, 1964

Kbd: Sonatina no.1, pf, 1958; 60 (Study in Sonorities), pf, 1960; Encadenamiento, pf, 1961; Tensiones I, 2 pf, 1961; Constelaciones, org, 1969

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Arizaga: Enciclopedia de la música argentina (Buenos Aires, 1971)
G. Béhague: Music in Latin America: an Introduction (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1979)
M. Ficher, F. Furman Schleifer and J.M. Furman: Latin American Classical Composers: a Biographical Dictionary (Lanham, MD, and London, 1996)

SUSANA SALGADO

Krieger, Edino (b Brusque, Santa Catarina, 17 March 1928). Brazilian composer, conductor and critic. He began violin studies at an early age with his father, a composer, conductor and founder of the local conservatory. A state scholarship took him in 1943 to Rio de Janeiro, where he studied the violin with Edith Reis at the conservatory and took lessons in harmony, counterpoint, fugue and composition with Koellreutter (1944–8). He became an active member of Koellreutter's Música Viva group, winning their prize in 1945 for the Woodwind Trio. In 1948 he won first prize at the Berkshire Music Center competition for Latin American composers. He then studied orchestration and composition with Copland, composition with Mennin at the Juilliard School (1948–9) and the violin with Nowinsky at the Henry Street Settlement School. While in New York he had several of his works performed, and he conducted the New York PO on 11 April 1949. Back in Rio he worked as a broadcaster and as music critic of the Tribuna da imprensa (1950–52). He organized concerts and competitions for contemporary music, and he was musical director and assistant conductor of the National SO. In 1955 he received a fellowship from the British Council to work with Berkeley for eight months at the Royal Academy of Music. The most important of his later appointments were as director of the art-music department of the Radio Jornal do Brasil, Rio (1963–73), professor of music at the Curitiba summer course (1964–8), professor of music at the Instituto Villa-Lobos (1968), general coordinator of the first and second Guanabara festivals (1969–70) and president of the Brazilian Society of Contemporary Music (1971–3). In the 1980s he consolidated his reputation as a skilled and efficient music administrator by directing the National Institute of Music of the National Foundation for the Arts (FUNARTE) (1981–9), holding the presidency of FUNARTE (1989–90), and organizing various events of the Bienal de Música Brasileira Contemporânea. Among other awards, he won the Shell Music Prize (1987). He became a life member (1994), then president (1997), of the Academia Brasileira de Música.

Krieger began composing in a late-Romantic and Impressionist manner, as in the Improviso for flute (1944). Koellreutter's influence turned him to the 12-note technique in such works as the Woodwind Trio and Música 1947 for string quartet, but about 1952 he abandoned serialism for a slightly nationalist, neo-classical style. The most original work of this period is Brasiliana (1960). His music after 1965 synthesizes the two previous styles, freely employing novel techniques together with elements characteristic of Brazilian popular music. His Variações elementares (1964), Ludus symphonicus (1966), commissioned for the Third Caracas Music Festival, and Estro armônico (1975) are recognized to be his most successful compositions. Though he wrote few works in the 1980s and 90s, his Romance de Santa Cecília (1989) won great acclaim at its première in Rio.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Movimento misto, 1947; Contrastes, 1949; Música 1952, str, 1952; Rondo fantasia, 1953; Chôro, fl, str, 1952; Suite, str, 1954; Abertura sinfônica, 1955; Concertante, pf, orch, 1955; Andante, str, 1956; Divertimento, str, 1959; Brasiliana, va/a sax, str, 1960; Variações elementares, str, 1964; Ludus symphonicus, 1966; Toccata, pf, orch, 1967; Convergências (ballet), 1968; Canticum naturale, 1972; Estro armônico, 1975

Chbr and solo inst: Improviso, fl, 1944; Trio, ob, cl, bn, 1945; Peça lenta, fl, str trio, 1946; Sonata breve, vn, 1947; Música 1947, str qt, 1947; Sonatina, fl, pf, 1947; Música de câmara, fl, tpt, timp, vn, 1948; Str Qt no.1, 1955; Ritmata, gui, 1974; Sonâncias, vn, 2 pf, 1975; Romanceiro, gui, *c*1985; 3 imagens de Nova Friburgo, hpd, str, 1988

Pf: Peça, 1945; Epigramas, 1947; Sonatina, 1947; Miniaturas, 1949; Música 1952, 1952; Sonata, duet, 1953; Sonata no.1, 1954; Preludio e fuga, 1954; Sonata no.2, 1956; Elementos, 1973

Vocal: Tem piedade de mim, 1v, pf, 1947; Melopéia, S, ob, t sax, trbn, va, 1949; 3 canções de Nicolás Guillén, 1v, pf, 1953; Tu e o vento, 1v, pf, 1954; Balada do desesperado, 1955; Desafio, 1v, pf, 1955; Canção do violeiro, 1956; Rio de Janeiro (stage orat), 1965; 3 cantos de amor e paz, chorus, orch, 1967; Fanfarras e sequências, chorus, orch, 1970; Romance de Santa Cecília, nar, S, children's chorus, orch, 1989

Principal publishers: Pan American Union, Peer, Universidade de Brasília, Vitali

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Compositores de América/Composers of the Americas, ed. Pan American Union, xiii (Washington DC, 1967) [biography, list of works]
G. Béhague: Music in Latin America: an Introduction (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1979)
J.M. Neves: Música brasileira contemporânea (São Paulo, 1981)
V. Mariz: História da música no Brasil (Rio de Janeiro, 1981, 4/1994)

GERARD BÉHAGUE

Krieger [Kruger], Johann [Kriegher, Giovanni] (b Nuremberg, bap. 1 Jan 1652; d Zittau, 18 July 1735). German composer and organist, younger brother of JOHANN PHILIPP KRIEGER. The Krieger family has been traced in Nuremberg from the late 16th century to 1925, when the last descendants were still practising the family trade of rugmaking. The chief source for Johann Krieger's biography is Mattheson (MatthesonGEP), who stated that he began his musical training with Heinrich Schwemmer, probably as his pupil at the Lateinschule attached to the church of St Sebaldus. Schwemmer was also Kapellmeister at this church, and Krieger sang treble in his choir for several years; he participated in a children's ballet in 1664. From 1661 to 1668 he had keyboard lessons from G.C. Wecker (another of whose pupils at that time was Pachelbel). The early years of Krieger's career are closely connected with the fortunes of his brother, through whom he obtained most of his positions. Mattheson stated that in 1671 he studied composition with his brother at Zeitz (although civic records there do not mention either of them) and that in 1672 he followed him to Bayreuth, where Johann Philipp had been appointed court organist. He was soon promoted to Kapellmeister and Johann took over the organist's post, which he held, according to Mattheson, until 1677; this is very likely, although the scanty city and court records of Bayreuth make no mention of him. When Johann Philipp became organist at the court at Halle in 1677, Johann soon appeared on the scene: he was probably employed for a short time as a chamber musician at the neighbouring city of Zeitz before his appointment in 1678 as Kapellmeister to Count Heinrich I nearby at Greiz.

After the count's death in 1680, he was appointed Kapellmeister of the neighbouring court of Duke Christian at Eisenberg. His last position, which he held for 53 years, was as organist of the Johanniskirche and director chori musici at Zittau. He played in his first service there on 5 April 1682; according to Mattheson he played in his last on 17 July 1735, the day before he died.

Johann Krieger has been praised for his contrapuntal skill, especially for his double fugues. Mattheson wrote in his Critica musica: 'Of the old excellent masters, I know of none who surpasses the Zittau Kapellmeister Johann Krieger in this [the writing of double fugues]. Of the younger composers, I have come across none who has such a skill in this as the Kapellmeister Handel'. Handel took a copy of Krieger's Anmuthige Clavier-Übung with him to England; he later gave it to his friend Bernard Granville, who wrote the following note in it: 'The printed book is by one of the celebrated Organ players of Germany; Mr. Handel in his youth formed himself a good deal on his plan, and said that Krieger was one of the best writers of his time for the Organ'. In contrast to the collections of the same name by Kuhnau (1689 and 1692) and Bach, which consist chiefly of partitas, Krieger's Clavier-Übung (published in 1698 but written about 1680) contains preludes, ricercares, fugues, fantasias, toccatas and a chaconne, which are not grouped together by key. The fugues have what were to be the essential traits of Bach's fugues – episodes, a restriction to one subject and an individuality of subject and answer – but they lack his ambitious harmony and especially his gift for melodic invention.

Krieger's skill as a contrapuntist is exemplified by no.15, a quadruple fugue, which is preceded by fugues (nos.11–14) on each of the four themes. In the ricercares the answer is always an inversion of the subject. The preludes, like those of Kuhnau (the opening movements of his suites) and J.C.F. Fischer (Les pièces de clavessin, 1696), are free developments of a rhythmic or a harmonic idea. Krieger's second collection of keyboard music is Sechs musicalische Partien, though it was published first, in 1697. To the Froberger type of suite, consisting usually of allemande, courante and sarabande and later a closing gigue, Krieger added a group of dances after the sarabande; Pachelbel, on the other hand, in his Hexachordum Apollinis (1699), placed the added group before the sarabande, while Bach put it before the gigue. Although the Musicalische Partien, like the Clavier-Übung, suffers somewhat from harmonic pallor and rhythmic sluggishness, Krieger nonetheless deserves to rank with Fischer, Kuhnau and Pachelbel as one of the outstanding German keyboard composers of the generation before Bach.

Krieger's other published volume, Neue musicalische Ergetzligkeit (1684), is a large collection of songs for one to four voices, all to texts by CHRISTIAN WEISE. Part i contains 30 strophic sacred songs, some with instrumental ritornellos. While these are in the simple lyrical style of songs written in Nuremberg at the time, the 34 secular strophic songs of part ii have freer, more ornamented melodic lines, which are appropriate to Weise's often satirical texts. Part iii contains arias – in fact strophic songs – from five Singspiels performed during the traditional Zittau Shrovetide festival in 1683 and 1684. There also survive some texts and arias from three other dramatic works by Krieger, performed at Zittau in 1688, 1717 and 1721 respectively, and he probably wrote at least one opera for the Eisenberg court. Zittau did not have its own opera; the Singspiels were performed by the pupils of the Gymnasium.

Titles of about 235 sacred vocal works by Krieger are known, but only 33 are extant, comprising 12 German cantatas, two Latin cantatas, several settings of the Sanctus, miscellaneous motets, Magnificat settings and solo and choral concertos. Five of the German cantatas are, for a composer working within the orbit of the Nuremberg school, rare examples of the late madrigal and mixed madrigal types, but they were all written in 1717, and by that time recitative, da capo arias and madrigal texts – the identifying features of these types of cantata – had become common practice. Krieger was thus no innovator, but compared with those of his brother, his cantatas are distinguished for their fugal movements, such as the triple counterpoint in the final movement of Gelobet sey der Herr, performed at Weissenfels (during Johann Philipp's tenure as Kapellmeister) in 1689.

WORKS

c225 lost works listed in DTB, xxx; see INSTRUMENTAL

VOCAL

for 4 voices with instrumental accompaniment unless otherwise stated; only surviving works are listed; dates are those of first performance, at Weissenfels

Cantatas: Confitebor tibi Domine, 1686, D-Bsb, GB-Lbl; Danket dem Herrn, 1687, ed. in DTB, x, Jg.vi/1 (1905/R); Danksaget dem Vater, 1688, D-Bsb; Der Herr ist mein Licht, 2vv, Bsb, S-Uu; Dies ist der Tag, 1687, D-Bsb; Dominus illuminatio mea, 1v, 1690, Dl, S-Uu; Frohlocket Gott in allen Landen, before 1717, D-ZI; Gelobet sey der Herr, 1698, ed. in DTB, x, Jg.vi/1 (1905/R); Gott ist unser Zuversicht, ZI; Halleluja, lobet den Herrn, 1685, ZI; Nun dancket alle Gott, 1717, ZI; Rühmet den Herrn, Bsb; Sulamith, auf, auf zum Waffen, 5vv, 1717, ZI; Zion jaucht mit Freuden, 1v, 1717, ZI

Motets: Also hat Gott die Welt geliebet, 4vv, insts, 1717, D-Bsb; Delectare in Domino, GB-Lbl; Ihr Feinde weichet weg, 4vv, insts, 1717, D-ZI; In te Domine speravi, 1v, S-Uu; Laudate Dominum omnes gentes, 5vv, D-Bsb; Laudate pueri Dominum, 3vv, insts, Dl

Mass movements: 2 Magnificat a 4, insts, D-Bsb; 5 Sanctus, 2, 4vv, insts, Bsb

Arias and songs: Neue musicalische Ergetzligkeit, das ist Unterschiedene Erfindungen welche Herr Christian Weise, in Zittau von geistlichen Andachten, Politischen Tugend-Liedern und

Theatralischen Sachen bishero gesetzet hat (Frankfurt and Leipzig, 1684/R), 2 pieces ed. in Eitner; 19 occasional songs for weddings or funerals, pubd individually (1684–97); 1 song, ZI

STAGE

unless otherwise stated, all are Singspiels, first performed in Zittau and now lost

† — printed in Neue musicalische Ergetzligkeit: see VOCAL above

Jakobs doppelte Heirat, 1682; Der verfolgte David, 2 March 1683, 3 arias†; Die sicilianische Argenis, 3 March 1683, 3 arias†; Von der verkehrten Welt (Lustspiel), 4 March 1683, lib D-ZI; Nebucadnezar, 15 Feb 1684, 7 vocal and inst movts†; Der schwedische Regner, 16 Feb 1684, 3 arias†; Der politische Quacksalber, 17 Feb 1684, 2 arias†; Die vierte Monarchie, ? Eisenberg, 1684 [see Böhme]; Der Amandus-Tag, 26 Oct 1688, lib ZI; Friedrich der Weise, 23 Nov 1717, arias and lib ZI; Die vormahlige zittauische Kirchen Reformation (Dramate), 4 Nov 1721, lib ZI

INSTRUMENTAL

Edition: Johann Krieger, Franz Xaver Anton Murschhauser und Johann Philipp Krieger: Gesammelte Werke für Orgel und Klavier, ed. M. Seiffert, DTB, xxx, Jg.xviii (1917) [S]

Allein Gott in der Höh sei Ehr, a 4, S; 6 musicalische Partien (Nuremberg, 1697), S; Anmuthige Clavier-Übung (Nuremberg, 1698), S; 3 fugues, fantasia, 3 preludes, 3 toccatas, US-NH: ed. in Die Orgel, ii/3 (Leipzig, 1957); Fuga, D-Mbs, S; 13 other kbd works, S

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MatthesonGEP

J. Mattheson: Critica musica (Hamburg, 1722–5/R)

J.G. Doppelmayr: Historische Nachricht von den nürnbergischen Mathematicis und Künstlern (Nuremberg, 1730)

R. Eitner: 'Johann Krieger', MMg, xxvii (1895), 129–43; suppl., 1–60

M. Seiffert: Introduction to Nürnberger Meister der zweiten Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts: Geistliche Konzerte und Kirchenkantaten, DTB, x, Jg.vi/1 (1905/R)

M. Seiffert: Introduction to Johann Krieger, Franz Xaver Anton Murschhauser und Johann Philipp Krieger: Gesammelte Werke für Orgel und Klavier, DTB, xxx, Jg.xviii (1917)

E.W. Böhme: Musik und Oper am Hofe Herzog Christians von Sachsen-Eisenberg (1677–1707) (Stadtroda, 1930)

F.W. Riedel: Quellenkundliche Beiträge zur Geschichte der Musik für Tasteninstrumente in der zweiten Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts (Kassel, 1960, 2/1990)

J.E. Thomas: The Keyboard Works of Johann Krieger (diss., Ohio State U., 1976)

H.E. Samuel: The Cantata in Nuremberg during the Seventeenth Century (Ann Arbor, 1982)

M.B. Stahlke: The Vocal Works of Johann Krieger (diss., U. of Southern California, forthcoming)

HAROLD E. SAMUEL

Krieger [Kriger, Krüger, Krugl], Johann Philipp [Kriegher, Giovanni Filippo] (b Nuremberg, bap. 27 Feb 1649; d Weissenfels, 6 Feb 1725). German composer, organist and keyboard player, elder brother of JOHANN KRIEGER. He was one of the outstanding German composers of his time, especially of church cantatas, of which he wrote over 2000 (nearly all lost); under his direction the cultivation of music at the small court at Weissenfels rose to the highest level of German court music.

1. LIFE. The chief sources for Krieger's biography (Doppelmayr and MatthesonGEP), who agree on its main events but vary in details and dates, only some of which can be substantiated from other sources. Mattheson told the following about his early musical training in Nuremberg: 'In his eighth year [he] began clavier lessons with Johann Drechsel [Johannes Dretzel], a pupil of Froberger; he also received instruction on various other instruments from the famous Gabriel Schütz'. According to Doppelmayr 'he progressed so rapidly in this [clavier lessons] that already at the age of nine he amazed large audiences with his playing; moreover, he was able to play any melody that was sung to him and to perform well-made arias that he himself had written'.

At the age of 14 or 16 Krieger went to Copenhagen to study organ playing with the royal Danish organist Johannes Schröder and composition with Kaspar Förster. Declining a position as organist at Christiania (Oslo) he returned to Nuremberg after a stay of four or five years in Copenhagen, either from 1663 to 1667 (Doppelmayr) or from 1665 to 1670 (Mattheson) – probably the latter. He cannot have remained long in Nuremberg, for Mattheson reported, confusingly, that he was both at Zeitz in 1670–71 and organist and later Kapellmeister at the court at Bayreuth between 1670 and 1672 (Doppelmayr has 1669–70 for the latter dates). According to Werner the civic records at Zeitz contain no mention of him or his brother, and, more confusingly still, records at Bayreuth list his name only in 1673, as court organist.

When Margrave Christian Ernst left the Bayreuth court in 1673 to join the war against France, Krieger was given permission to travel to Italy without loss of salary. He probably stayed there for about two years. Mattheson stated that in Venice he studied composition with Rosenmüller and the clavier with G.B. Volpe, and that in Rome he studied composition with A.M. Abbatini and the clavier and composition with Bernardo Pasquini. Immediately after his visit to Italy he played for the Emperor Leopold I in Vienna, in return for which, in a letter dated 10 October 1675, the emperor ennobled him and all his brothers and sisters. Krieger soon left Bayreuth for Frankfurt and Kassel and was offered positions in both cities. He apparently refused them or held them for only a short time, for on 2 November 1677 he accepted a position as organist at the court at Halle. When Duke August died in 1680 his successor, Johann Adolph I, moved the court to Weissenfels. Krieger went with him as Kapellmeister, a position he held until his death. For a time he also acted as musical adviser to the court at Eisenberg.

Before leaving for Weissenfels Krieger sold some music to the Marienkirche, Halle; a list of it, including seven of his own compositions and about 50 works by other German and Italian composers, is extant (it is printed in DDT, liii–liv). He compiled a more important document (also in DDT, liii–liv) during his years at Weissenfels: beginning in 1684 he maintained a catalogue of every vocal work he performed. After his death his son Johann Gotthilf (who succeeded his father as Kapellmeister until 1736) continued the catalogue until 1732; thus it lists the music performed at the court for almost 50 years (records for the year 1697–8 are lacking). It includes about 2000 of his own works, 225 by his brother Johann (also listed in DTB, xxx, Jg.xviii) and 475 by other German and Italian composers. Some of his teachers and the musicians he met in Italy – Förster, Rosenmüller, Carissimi, Francesco Foggia, Legrenzi and P.A. Ziani – are represented with several works each. Among the other Italian composers in the catalogue are Bertali, Cazzati, Ruggiero Fedeli, Filippini, Giannettini, Bonifatio Gratiani, Alessandro Melani and Peranda. Among the German composers are Beer, Bernhard, Capricornus, Erlebach, Kerll, Knüpfer, Printz and Theile; there are no works by Buxtehude, Schütz, Weckmann or Zachow. Very few 16th-century works were performed: Palestrina is represented by eight masses and two motets, Victoria by one mass; there are no works by Lassus or Andrea and Giovanni Gabrieli.

2. WORKS. Krieger provided the court at Weissenfels with secular as well as sacred music. Two published sets of trio sonatas – 12 for two violins and continuo (1688) and 12 for violin, bass viol and continuo (1693) – are, like Corelli's but unlike Biber's and Rosenmüller's, for only three instruments instead of four. The six suites of his Lustige Feld-Music (1704), for four wind instruments, are modelled on Lully's ballet suites. Eight 'sonatas' (all lost) performed at Weissenfels between 1685 and 1717 were for a large number of instruments (e.g. 'a 15' and 'for 3 choirs') and belong to the early history of the German concerto grosso. Although Krieger was a well-known performer on the clavier, only three keyboard works have survived: a passacaglia consisting of 45 variations on a six-bar theme, an aria with 24 variations and a toccata and fugue (all were edited in DTB, xxx, Jg.xviii, 1917: the manuscript sources are now lost).

Krieger is known to have written over 20 works for the stage including 18 operas to German texts, of which only some librettos and two published collections of arias are extant. Although some of his operas were performed at Brunswick, Dresden, Eisenberg, Hamburg and Leipzig, most of them were written for the court at Weissenfels, where Italian opera was not allowed. His arias, like those of Boxberg, Erlebach, Löhner and Strungk, are strophic songs with a syllabic setting of the text and simple harmony and rhythms; unlike those of J.W. Franck, Keiser and Kusser, they show no influence of the more developed Italian arias, in spite of Krieger's sojourn in Italy.

By far the largest part of his output consisted of cantatas. Whereas Bach wrote about 325 and Buxtehude about 400, over 2000 by Krieger are listed in his catalogue; only 76 are extant. As a cantata composer he is significant mainly for his adoption of madrigal verse for his texts; this has earned him the title of 'father of the new cantata'. While the so-called early German cantata uses biblical, chorale or ode texts (or combinations of all three), the 'new German cantata', modelled on the Italian secular cantata and opera, consists of a series of recitatives and arias, to which biblical verses and chorale stanzas were often later added. Texts for the new cantatas were first written by the pastor and poet ERDMANN NEUMEISTER, who in 1704 was appointed deacon at the Weissenfels court. His first yearly cycle of cantata texts, the Geistliche Cantaten statt einer Kirchen-Music, was not published until 1704, but Krieger clearly had access to some of them earlier. His setting of Rufet nicht die Weisheit was performed in 1699. Thus he had probably encouraged Neumeister to write the texts and undoubtedly advised the young poet as to their suitability for musical setting. While the music of his early cantatas is largely in the style of solo and choral concertos, Rufet nicht die Weisheit, the only extant setting by him of a text by Neumeister, includes recitative and, a rare form for him, the da capo aria. In general his cantatas are characterized by forthright melodic structure and simple harmony and rhythms. If they cannot be compared with Bach's, they are not unworthy to rank with those of Buxtehude and Pachelbel.

WORKS

Edition: Johann Philipp Krieger: 21 ausgewählte Kirchencompositionen, ed. M. Seiffert, DDT, liii–liv (1916) [incl. full list of works] [S] dates are of first performance unless otherwise stated

CANTATAS

Musicalischer Seelen-Friede, 1v, 1–2 vn obbl/ad lib (Nuremberg, 1697): Ach Herr, wie ist meiner Feinde so viel, 1693; Benedicam Dominum in omni tempore, 1695; Coeli enarrant gloriam Dei, 1693; Der Herr ist mein Licht, 1694; Ecce nunc benedicite Dominum, 1693; Es stehe Gott auf, 1693; Fortunae ne crede est, 1699; Freuet euch des Herrn, 1693; Gott, man lobet dich in der Stille, 1693; Herr, auf dich trau ich, 1702; Herr, warum trittest du so ferne, 1696; Ich harre des Herrn, 1689; Ich will den Herrn loben allezeit, 1693; Ich will in aller Noth, 1688; Lobe den Herrn, meine Seele, 1692; Meine Seele harret nur auf Gott, 1695; Quam admirabilis, quam venerabilis, 1690; Rühmet den Herrn, 1693; Singet dem Herrn alle Welt, 1690; Singet frölich Gotte, 1696

Absorta est mors in victoriam, 1v, dated 1670, S-Uu; Ad cantus ad sonos venite, 3vv, D-Bsb; Attendite verbum Domini, 3vv, 1688, Dl; Beati omnes qui timent Dominum, 3vv, dated 1672, S-Uu; Cantate Domino canticum novum, 4vv, dated 1681, D-Bsb, GB-Lbl, S-Uu; Cantate Domino canticum novum, 1v, D-Dl, ed. in Die Kantate, no.50 (Stuttgart, 1960); Christus hat ausgezogen, 4vv, 1690, Dl; Cor meum atque omnia mea, 5vv, 1687, Bsb, GB-Lbl; Crudelis infernus inimicus, 3vv, D-Bsb, Dl

Das ist meine Freude, 3vv, D-F; Der Herr ist mein Hirt, 1v, 1690, S; Die Gerechten werden weggerafft, 4vv, 1686, ed. in DTB, x, Jg.vi/1 (1905/R); Die Welt kann den Geist der Wahrheit nicht empfangen, 3vv, 1688, S; Diligam te Domine fortitudo mea, 3vv, dated *c*1670, S-Uu; Ecce quomodo moritur justus, 4vv, 1686, D-Dl; Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott, 4vv, 1688, S; Exulta, jubila, accurre laetare, 2vv, 1694, Bsb, S-Uu

Fahr hin, du schnöde Welt, 2vv, D-Bsb; Gott, du Brunnquell aller Güte, 4vv, 1687, Bsb; Haurietis aquas in gaudio, 5vv, dated 1681, S-Uu; Heut singt die werte Christenheit, 2vv, 1688, S, also ed. in Die Kantate, no.288 (Stuttgart, 1969); Ich bin eine Blume zu Saron, 2vv, ed. in Eitner; Ich freue mich dess, das mir geredt ist, 5vv, 1688, S; Ich freue mich in dem Herrn, 5vv, D-Bsb; Ich habe Lust abzuscheiden, 4vv, 1697, Dl; Ich lobe die Feder, 2vv, S-Uu; Ich verlasse mich auf Gottes Güte, 3vv, 1689, D-Bsb; Ihr Christen, freuet euch, 2vv, 1687, S

Laetare anima mea, 1v, 1690, S-Uu; Laudate Dominum omnes gentes, 3vv, 1688, D-Bsb; Laudate Dominum omnes gentes, 5vv, 1685, F-Ssp; Laudate pueri Dominum, 5vv, Ssp; Liebster Jesu, willst du scheiden, 4vv, 1687, S; Mein Gott, dein ist das alles, 3vv, D-Mbs; Mein Herz dichtet ein feines Lied, 8vv, 1691, S; Mein Vater nicht wie ich will, 5vv, dated 1697, Bsb; Nun danket alle Gott, 3vv, 1685, S-Uu; O Jesu, du mein Leben, 1v, 1688, S; Perfunde me gratia coelesti, 3vv, dated 1670, Uu; Preise, Jerusalem, den Herren, 4vv, S; Quis me territat quis me devorat, 3vv, 1690, D-Bsb, F-Pn; Quousque dormis infelix, 1v, S-Uu

Rufet nicht die Weisheit, 4vv, 1699, S; Sage mir, Schönster, 2vv, S; Schaffe in mir Gott ein reines Herz, 4vv, 1718, S; Singet dem Herrn ein neues Lied, 4vv, 1687, S, ed. in Die Kantate, no.188 (Stuttgart, 1964); Sit laus plena sit sonora, 4vv, 1691, D-Bsb; Surgite cum gaudio, 1v, 1688, Dl; Surgite cum gaudio, 1v, dated 1670, S-Uu: ed. in DTB, new ser., viii (1988); Träufelt, ihr Himmel, 1v, 1696, S; Trauriges Leben, betrübte Zeit, 4vv, 1694, D-Bsb; Uns ist ein Kind geboren, 3vv, S, also ed. H. Samuel (St Louis, 1964); Wacht auf, ihr Christen alle, 4vv, S; Was ist doch das Menschen Leben, 4vv, 1688, Bsb; Wenn du gegessen hast, 4vv, Bsb; Wo wilt du hin, 2vv, S

OTHER SACRED

Mass, 4vv, insts, S

Magnificat, 4vv, 1685, S

Gloria, 4vv, 1718, D-Bsb

Heilig, heilig, heilig, 4vv, S; ed. in Die Kantate, no.2 (Stuttgart, 1959)

In aeternum Domine, choral conc. 5vv, insts, 1688

O Jesu, meiner Seelen Leben, in H.G. Neuss: Heb-Opfer zum Bau der Hütten Gottes (Lüneburg, 1692)

SECULAR VOCAL

Auserlesene in denen dreyen Sing-Spielen Flora, Cecrops und Procris enthaltene Arien (Nuremberg, 1690); ed. in NM, clxxiv–clxxv (1930); 6 ed. in Eitner

Auserlesene Arien anderer Theil, welcher gezogen aus folgenden vier Sing-Spielen als Dem wiederkehrenden Phöbus, Der gedruckt- und wieder erquickten Ehe-Liebe, Dem wahrsagenden Wunderbrunnen und Dem grossmüthigen Scipio (Nuremberg, 1692)

STAGE

† – printed in Auserlesene … Arien: see SECULAR VOCAL above

‡ – printed in Auserlesene Arien anderer Theil: see SECULAR VOCAL above

WFH – Weissenfels, Hoftheater
Die drey Charites (serenata), Halle, Hof, 4 June 1681
Orpheus und Euridice, oder Der Höllen stürmende Liebeseifer, Eisenberg, 7 May 1683
Die bewährte Liebeskur, Eisenberg, 1684 [see Böhme]
Der Ursprung der römischen Monarchie, Eisenberg, 1684
Phöbus und Iris, WFH, 1685
Die glückliche Verbindung des Zephyr mit der Flora, WFH, 16 May 1687, arias†, lib pubd
Cecrops mit seinen drei Töchtern (3), WFH, 2 Nov 1688, arias†, lib pubd
Daniel in der Löwengrube, WFH, 1688
Flora, Ceres und Pomona (Masquerade), WFH, 1688, lib pubd [see Wagner]
Die gedrückte und wieder erquickte Eheliebe (Trauer-Freudenspiel), WFH, 1688, arias‡, lib pubd
Die ausgesöhnte Eifersucht, oder Cephalus und Procris (3), Weissenfels, 1689, arias†, lib pubd
Der grossmüthige Scipio (3, after N. Minato: Scipio affricano), Weissenfels, 2 Nov 1690, arias†, lib pubd
Der wahrsagende Wunderbrunnen (3), WFH, 1690, arias‡, lib pubd
Mars und Irene (Tafelmusik, P.C. Heustreu), 1692, lib pubd
Der wiederkehrende Phöbus (Spl), 1692, arias‡ [may be identical with Phöbus und Iris]
Ganymedes und Juvental (Tafelmusik: serenata, Heustreu), WFH, 1693, lib pubd
Herkules unter den Amazonen (5, F.C. Bressand), Brunswick, Hof, 1693, lib pubd
Der Wettstreit der Treue (3, Bressand), Brunswick, Hof, 1693, lib pubd
Chronus, Apollo, Fortuna, Constantia (Tafelmusik: serenata, Heustreu), WFH, 1695, lib pubd
Die lybische Thalestris, Weissenfels, 1696, lib pubd
Unterthänigstes Freuden-Opffer (Tafelmusik, A. Bohse), 1696, lib pubd
Tafelmusik bei der Rückkehr Johann Georgens und Friderica Elisabeth aus dem Emser Bade (Tafelmusik, J.A. Meister), 1707, lib pubd
Adelheid (3), WFH, 1710
Schleiffers Comoedia, lost [see Mersmann, pp.11 and 18, and Schwarzbeck, p.108]

INSTRUMENTAL

12 suonate, 2 vn, bc (Nuremberg, 1688); 1 ed. in Organum, iii/11 (Leipzig, 1926, 2/1952)
12 suonate, vn, b viol, bc (Nuremberg, 1693), ed. in DTB, new ser., viii (1988); nos.1–6 ed. R. Poirier (Montreal, 1982), 2 ed. in Eitner, 1 ed. in NM, cxxxv (1937)
Lustige Feld-Music, 4 wind insts (Nuremberg, 1704); 2 ed. in Eitner, 1 ed. in Organum, iii/9 (Leipzig, 1925, 2/1951)
Sonata, 2 vn, bc, F-Pn, ed. in Flores musicae, vii (Lausanne, 1958); Sonate, 1, 2 vn, va, bn, bc, S-Uu; Aria with 24 variations, Passacaglia, Toccata e fuga, kbd: ed. in DTB, xxx, Jg.xviii (1917)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MattheśonGEP
J.G. Doppelmayr: Historische Nachricht von den Nürnbergischen Mathematicis und Künstlern (Nuremberg, 1730)
R. Eitner: 'Johann Philipp Krieger', MMg, xxix (1897), 114–17; suppl., 1–128
H. Mersmann: Beiträge zur Ansbacher Musikgeschichte (Leipzig, 1916)
M. Seiffert: Introduction to Johann Philipp Krieger: 21 ausgewählte Kirchencompositionen, DDT, liii–liv (1916)
R. Wagner: 'Beiträge zur Lebensgeschichte Johann Philipp Kriegers und seines Schülers Nikolaus Deinl', ZMw, viii (1925–6), 146–60
F.W. Böhme: Musik und Oper am Hofe Herzog Christians von Sachsen-Eisenberg (1677–1707) (Stadtroda, 1930)
D.E. Stout: Four Cantatas by Johann Philipp Krieger (diss., Indiana U., 1966)
K.-J. Gundlach: Johann Philipp Krieger: das geistliche Vokalwerk (diss., Halle U., 1981)
H.E. Samuel: The Cantata in Nuremberg during the Seventeenth Century (Ann Arbor, 1982)
E.-M. Ranft: 'Zum Personalbestand der Weissenfelser Hofkapelle', Beiträge zur Bachforschung, vi (1987), 5–36
W. Felix: 'Johann Philipp Krieger und die Hofoper in Weissenfels', HJb 1990, 41–7
T. Fuchs: Studien zur Musikpflege in der Stadt Weissenfels (diss., Halle U., 1990)
W. Braun: 'Musiksatirische Kriege', AcM, lxiii (1991), 168–99
H. Schott: Johann Philipp Kriegers Kantatenwerk (diss., U. of Erlangen, in preparation)

HAROLD E. SAMUEL

Kriegher, Giovanni. See KRIEGER, JOHANN.

Kriegher, Giovanni Filippo. See KRIEGER, JOHANN PHILIPP.

Kriegk [Kriegck], Johann Jacob (b Bibra, nr Meiningen, 23 June 1750; d Meiningen, 24 Dec 1814). German violinist and cellist. He was the son of schoolmaster, Johann Kaspar Kriegk. His father died when he was six and his mother subsequently moved to Meiningen. He was then accepted as a chorister and, at the age of 11, a violinist in the court Kapelle at Meiningen. In 1769, while employed by the Landgrave of Hesse-Philippsthal, he visited the Netherlands and in 1773 he was first violinist at the City Theatre in Amsterdam, before going to Paris with the Marquis of Taillefer. There he was persuaded by J.L. Duport to exchange the violin for the cello and to study with him for a year. Upon the recommendation of the violinist Jarnowick, he entered the service of the Prince of Laval-Montmorency as a cellist, remaining in his employ for four years. His association with the leading Parisian musicians of the time allowed him to enter the élite music circles of Paris, where he quickly won a reputation as a virtuoso. In 1777 he returned to Meiningen, where he was appointed chamber musican and, in 1800 (not 1798), Konzertmeister. Among his eminent pupils was J.J.F. Dotzauer, who studied with him from 1799 to 1801. The Meiningen cellist Gustav Knoop (b Göttingen, 1805; d Philadelphia, 25 Dec 1849), who may have studied with Kriegk as a child, is purported to have married Kriegk's daughter in order to obtain the family violoncello.

Kriegk's four sonatas for cello, op.1, reveal a strong sense of melody and a preference for three-movement structure and rondo form. In addition to publication in Germany, Vidal noted that Nadermann offered the sonatas in Paris. Three concertos for cello were published between 1795 and 1798. Technically demanding, Kriegk's writing emulates Duport's virtuoso use of thumb position in the upper ranges of the cello, intricate string-crossing patterns, and double stops.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; FétisB; GerberNL; MGG1 (G. Kraft)
A. Vidal: Les instruments a archet, les feseurs, les joueurs d'instruments, leur histoire sur le continent Européen (Paris, 1877/R), ii, 358
E.S.J. van der Straeten: History of the Violoncello, the Viola da Gamba, their Precursors and Collateral Instruments (London, 1914/R)

G. KRAFT/VALERIE WALDEN

Kriesstein [Kriegstein], Melchior (b Basle, *c*1500; d Augsburg, 1572 or 1573). German printer. He was probably the son of the Georg Kriechstein cited as a printer in the Basle records of 1502. By 1525 Kriesstein had moved to Augsburg, where tax records from 1527 to 1573 list his name. After his death his son-in-law, Valentin SCHÖNIG, continued the business. Kriesstein's output was relatively small, and he is known mainly for his publication of Paul Hektor Mair's genealogy of Augsburg families, Augsburger Geschlechterbuch (1550), and of the collections of sacred music, mainly motets, but also a few masses and sacred lieder, edited by SIGMUND SALMINGER and JOHANN KUGELMANN, which contain numerous first editions and unica by German and Netherlandish composers. He also printed single works by Johannes Frosch, Ulrich Brätel and Mouton. Since Salminger edited even these items, Kriesstein himself was probably not musically trained. In addition, he printed various pamphlets, including reports of military actions against the Turks.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (F. Krautwurst)

A. Schmid: Ottaviano dei Petrucci da Fossombrone und seine Nachfolger im sechzehnten Jahrhunderte (Vienna, 1845/R), 162–70

B.A. Wallner: Musikalische Denkmäler der Steinätzkunst des 16. und 17. Jahrhunderts (Munich, 1912)

A. Dresler: Augsburg und die Frühgeschichte der Presse (Munich, 1952), 24–5

S.D. Jacoby: The Salminger Anthologies (diss., Ohio State U., 1985)

H.B. Lincoln: The Latin Motet: Indexes to Printed Collections, 1500–1600 (Ottawa, 1993)

MARIE LOUISE GÖLLNER

Kriger, Johann Philipp. See KRIEGER, JOHANN PHILIPP.

Krippellied [Krippelgesang, Krippenlied] (Ger.: 'crib song'). See WEIHNACHTSLIED.

Krips, Henry (b Vienna, 10 Feb 1912; d Adelaide, 25 Jan 1987). Australian conductor of Austrian birth, brother of JOSEF KRIPS. He studied at the Vienna Conservatory and University, and made his début in 1932 at the Burgtheater there. In 1933 he moved to Innsbruck, then to Salzburg (1934–5), and returned to Vienna until 1938, when he emigrated to Australia. He took Australian citizenship in 1944, having formed the Krips-de Vries Opera Company there, and also served as musical director for the Kirsova Ballet formed at Sydney in 1941.

From 1947 Krips worked for the ABC, as well as being principal conductor of the West Australian SO (Perth) from 1948 to 1972, and the South Australian SO (Adelaide) from 1949 to 1972. For more than 20 years he played a leading part in Australian and New Zealand musical life.

In 1972 he gave up his Australian appointments to live in London, where he had appeared as a guest conductor with the Sadler's Wells Opera from 1967, and conducted occasional concerts. His performances of Johann Strauss and Lehár were particularly admired. His compositions include opera, ballets, numerous songs and instrumental pieces.

NOËL GOODWIN

Krips, Josef (b Vienna, 8 April 1902; d Geneva, 13 Oct 1974). Austrian conductor, brother of HENRY KRIPS. He studied at the Vienna Academy with Mandyczewski and Weingartner, and made his concert and opera début as a conductor in 1921. He joined the Vienna Volksoper under Weingartner as chorus master and répétiteur (1921–4), and then went to the city theatres at Aussig (now Ústí nad Labem) as head of the opera department (1924–5); he was then at Dortmund (1925–6) and Karlsruhe as musical director (1926–33). In 1933 he became a resident conductor at the Vienna Staatsoper, and a professor at the Vienna Academy in 1935, but lost both positions on the Nazi annexation of Austria in 1938. After a season with the Belgrade Opera and Belgrade PO, his musical activities were suspended by the war.

From 1945 Krips played a leading part in reorganizing postwar musical life in Vienna, conducting the resumed performances by the Vienna Staatsoper at the Volksoper and the Theater an der Wien, and the Vienna PO and the Hofmusikkapelle at the Musikverein. In 1946 he reopened the Salzburg Festival conducting Don Giovanni, and returned there on several occasions. He also toured with the Vienna Staatsoper and Vienna PO to several European countries including Britain (1947), where he was appointed principal conductor of the LSO (1950–54) and much improved its musical standing. He later held similar appointments with the Buffalo PO (1954–63), the San Francisco SO (1963–70), where he was then accorded the title of conductor emeritus, and the Cincinnati May Festival (1954–60). He conducted Don Giovanni for his début with the Covent Garden Opera in 1963; from 1966 he was a guest conductor at the Metropolitan, and from 1970 at the Deutsche Oper, Berlin. Frequent tours with leading orchestras in Europe and North America, and many recordings, enhanced his reputation as a benevolent despot in performance, whose unaffected interpretations and warmth of expressive feeling served, in particular, as ideal introductions to the Viennese Classics for a postwar generation of concert-goers. Among his finest recordings are Mozart's mature symphonies, Die Entführung aus dem Serail, Don Giovanni, Schubert's Ninth Symphony and the complete Beethoven piano concertos (with Rubinstein).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Stoddard: 'Josef Krips', Symphony Conductors of the U.S.A. (New York, 1957)

J.L. Holmes: Conductors: a Record Collector's Guide (London, 1988), 152–5

NOËL GOODWIN

Krisanizh, Georgius. See KRIŽANIĆ, JURAJ.

Krismann, Franz Xaver. See CHRISMANN, FRANZ XAVER.

Kristiania. See OSLO.

Kriti (Sans.: 'a creation, a work'). In South Indian (Karnatak) art-music, a vocal composition, with text in Telugu or Sanskrit, set to a classical rāga and tāla. The subject of the poetry is normally devotional, but the artfulness of the musical setting and its suitability for improvised development are as important as its religious meaning, and distinguish the kriti from the purely devotional kīrtanam (see KĪRTANA). Thus a kriti is normally embellished with pre-composed variations (saṅgati), and in performance it may be preceded by an extended ālāpanam (see ĀLĀPA) and/or followed by improvised variations (niraval, svara-kalpanā) (see INDIA, §III, 5(iv)). The earliest kriti performed today are those of the 'Trinity' of Karnatak composers, MUTTUSVĀMĪ DĪKṢITAR (1775–1835), TYĀGARĀJA (1767–1847) and ŚYĀMA ŚĀSTRĪ (1762–1827).

RICHARD WIDDESS

Krivopolenova [née Kabalina], Mariya (Dmitrievna) (b Ust-'Ezhuga, Pinega district, Arkhangel region, Russia, 19 March 1843; d Veegory, Pinega district, 2 Feb 1924). Russian reciter, story-teller and bïlina performer. She came from a family of farmers. From 1915 to 1916 and in 1921 she toured Russian and Ukrainian cities including Moscow, St Petersburg and Vologda, accompanied by Olga Ozarovskaya. There are two principal collections of Krivopolenova's repertory. The first was recorded by Aleksandr Grigor'yev during 1900 and 1901 in the village of Shotogorka, where Krivopolenova lived after her marriage, and was published in 1904 with notation by I. Tezavrovsky. The other group was recorded by Olga Ozarovskaya and published in 1916 and 1922. Cylinder recordings of eight bïlinï performed by Krivopolenova in 1916 are housed in the archives of the Institute of Russian Literature in St Petersburg, and her rendition of the bïlina Vavilo i skomorokhi ('Vavilo and the Russian Minstrels') became famous. She was one of the outstanding bïlina performers of the Russian North.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A.D. Grigor'yev, ed.: Arkhangelskiye bïlinï i istoricheskiye pesni [Epic and historic songs of the Arkhangel region], i (Moscow, 1904)

M.D. Krivopolenova: Babushkinï starinï [Old Wives' tales] (Petrograd, 1916, 2/1922)

B.M. Sokolov: Skaziteli [The singers of tales] (Moscow, 1924)

M.D. Krivopolenova: Bïlinï, skomoroshinï, skazki [Epic songs, skomorokh songs, tales], ed. A.A. Morozova (Arkhangelsk, 1950)

Y.M. Sokolov: Russian Folklore (New York, 1950), 300, 316–17

Ye.V. Pomerantseva: Russkiye skazochniki [Russian story-tellers] (Moscow, 1976)

IZALY ZEMTSOVSKY

Križanić, Juraj [Krisanizh, Georgius; Crisanius, Georgius] (b Obrh, Western Croatia, 1617; d 1683). Croatian theologian, political philosopher and writer on music. He studied theology and law in Zagreb, Ljubljana, Graz, Bologna and Rome. As an expert in the theology and rites of the Orthodox Church he went on two important missions to Russia (1647 and 1659), the first time as an emissary of the Holy See, the second on his own initiative. During his second stay in Rome (1652–7) he became acquainted with Athanasius Kircher, whose example probably inspired him to write his Asserta musicalia, a treatise consisting of 20 succinct critical statements on various aspects of music theory. His views on temperament are similar to those of P.F. Valentini, Caramuel and, probably, Frescobaldi.

THEORETICAL WORKS

Asserta musicalia (Rome, 1656)

Nova inventa musica or Tabulae novae, exhibentes musicam (MS, 1657, I-Rn)

Novum instrumentum ad cantus mira facilitate componendos (Rome, 1658) [leaflet]

'De musica', Razgovori ob wladatelstwu [Conversations about governing] (MS, 1663–6, ?Moscow); trans. and ed. M. Malinar and R. Venturin, Politika (Zagreb, 1997)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Vidakoviić: Asserta musicalia (1656) Jurja Križanića i njegovi ostali radovi s područja glazbe [Križanić's Asserta musicalia and other musical works] (Zagreb, 1965; Eng. trans., 1967)

I. Golub: 'Juraj Križanić's "Asserta Musicalia" in Caramuel's Newly Discovered Autograph', IRASM, ix (1978), 219–78

L. Županović: Centuries of Croatian Music, i (Zagreb, 1984), 162–4

Znanstveni skup u povodu 300. obljetnice smrti Jurja Križanića: Zagreb 1983 [Scientific meeting on the occasion of the 300th anniversary of Križanić's death] [incl. I. Špralja: 'Asserta musicalia i Nova inventa musica J. Križanića', 7–17; P. Barbieri: 'Križanić, Caramuel e P.F. Valentini sulla divisione dell'ottava musicale', 19–40; M. Steiner: 'Nova inventa musica Jurja Križanića', 41–5]

BOJAN BUJIĆ/STANISLAV TUKSAR

Křížkovský, (Karel) Pavel (b Kreuzendorf [now Holasovice], Silesia, 9 Jan 1820; d Brno, 8 May 1885). Czech composer and choirmaster. He came from that part of Silesia now belonging to the Czech Republic, but which at the time of his childhood was strongly germanized, and whose cultural centre was Troppau (now Opava). His first contact with music came from his uncles, who were village musicians, and he acquired a rudimentary musical education from the choirmaster Alois Urbánek in the church choir at Neplachovice (near Holasovice) and later as a chorister of the monastery church at Opava. He then studied at the German Gymnasium at Opava (1833–9); after leaving in 1839 he entered the philosophy faculty in Olomouc, but poverty compelled him to give up his studies. On returning to Opava he qualified as a teacher and taught Czech as an assistant schoolmaster at Jamnice (1841–3). In autumn 1843 he went to Brno to resume his study of philosophy, and he spent most of the rest of his life in the Moravian capital.

After settling in Brno, Křížkovský set about developing his musical talent. As a student he founded and conducted a choir and apparently studied theory with Gottfried Rieger; some of his first attempts at composition date from this time. In 1845 he joined the Augustinian monastery in Old Brno, which in the first half of the 19th century was a significant centre of musical life for the whole of Moravia. From 1846 to 1850 he studied theology, and in 1848 he took orders and was appointed choirmaster of the Augustinian church and of the monastery foundation, in which Janáček later received his first musical training. He also became a founder of the Männergesangverein (1848). Although he tried to broaden the city's musical horizons by introducing works of Michael and Joseph Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Cherubini and Spohr at cantata and chamber concerts (he was the violinist of a Brno string quartet), he also promoted Czech hymn singing in church, and at concerts gave works by Czech composers (including himself) in the Czech language. By this time he was a supporter of Czech cultural and political nationalism and pan-Slavism, strongly influenced by the theology professor and Moravian folksong collector František Sušil. A sign of his feelings was his reversion to the original Czech spelling of his name instead of the germanized 'Krischkowsky'. After 1848 his growing national consciousness also marked his compositions; he was especially active as a choral composer, and from 1860 to 1863 was choirmaster of the Beseda Brněnská music society. His concerts during these years took him to Prague (1861) and included a concert in Brno (1863), which celebrated the 1000th anniversary of the arrival of SS Cyril and Methodius in Moravia and was attended by leading representatives of Czech political life. The Prague concert earned him Smetana's highest appreciation (for both performance and composition), but pressure from the ecclesiastical authorities forced him to abandon secular music and devote his activities as composer and conductor to sacred music along the lines of the contemporary Cecilian reforms. His creative work had begun with promising secular choruses to Czech words but now closed with occasional church compositions on Latin and Czech texts. In 1872 Křížkovský was transferred to Olomouc, where he became choirmaster at the cathedral until 1883 when, as a result of a heart attack, he returned to Brno.

Křížkovský belonged to the founding generation of Czech national music. His choral settings of folksongs from Sušil's collections typify the so-called 'ohlasy národních písní' ('folksong echoes') later developed by Janáček, Dvořák, Novák, Suk and Martinů, in which Křížkovský generally made use of authentic folktunes with their original texts. In the first of them, the chorus Čáry ('Enchantment'), he set the unaltered folk melody in Classical harmony and arranged it for four voices, while retaining the simple strophic structure of the original song; later, however, he treated the folksongs more freely, reshaping their melodies and recasting them in more advanced musical forms. In Odpadlý od srdca ('The Faithless Heart'), for example, he borrowed only some characteristic intervals and rhythmic patterns from the original melody; in other compositions he avoided the characteristic Moravian melodic tendency towards the flattened 7th (used freely by Janáček), and arranged the folksongs in Classical harmonic and melodic patterns, as in the chorus Zatoč se ('Turn Round') and the unaccompanied chorus Odvedeného prosba ('The Recruit's Prayer'). Křížkovský's 'folksong echoes' also show a formal inclination to the Classical style; from the motivic material he constructed symmetrical phrases and developed them into two- or three-section song forms, large rondos, as in the 1860 version of Utonulá ('The Drowned Maiden'), or variations, as in Odvedeného prosba ('The Recruit's Prayer'), Zatoč se ('Turn around'), Dar za lásku ('The Love-Gift') and Výprask ('A Thrashing'). His compositions are chiefly homophonic; in the larger dramatic choruses, such as The Drowned Maiden and The Recruit's Prayer, the texture becomes more animated, and only in the cantatas, such as Sv. Cyrill a Methoděj ('SS Cyril and Methodius'), does it become genuinely contrapuntal.

Although Křížkovský's secular choral idiom follows the popular Liedertafel tradition, imported into Moravia from Germany, 'he was able to feel the spirit of the songs he selected, and from this he let the composition grow . . . he thereby served the songs and served Czech music' (Janáček). The fact that his art songs and sacred works lack the invention and inspiration of his folk-based compositions indicates both the significance and limitations of his contribution to the rise and development of Czech national music.

WORKS

Edition: P. Křížkovský: Skladebné dílo [Works], i, ed. V. Steinman and J. Racek (Prague, 1949) [K]
(selective list)

SACRED

Stationes pro Festo SS Corporis Christi, S, A, T, B, mixed vv, orch, 1845–6
Mass, c, male vv, *c*1848
Mass 'Vokalmesse', G, male vv, org ad lib (Brno, 1911)
Vater unser, Ave Maria, male vv, *c*1848
Communionlied: Welch ein Himmel, solo vv, mixed vv, *c*1848
Salve regina, mixed vv, 1853
Christus factus est obediens, off, ?male vv, 1855
9 responsories for the Office of the Dead, mixed vv, org, 1855 (Brno, n.d.)
Svatý, svatý zpíváme [Holy, holy we sing], male vv, ?1857–9, version for mixed vv (Brno, 1904)
Te Deum, mixed vv, chbr orch, org, *c*1860
Ejhle, oltář Hospodinův září [Behold, the Lord's altar is ablaze] (J. Soukup), ?vv, org, 1863–4 [orig. title: Ejhle, svatý Velehrad už září (Behold, holy Velehrad is ablaze)]
Die Hirten von Bethlehem (L. Knopp), Liederspiel, mixed vv, hmn/org (Vienna, 1871)
Offertorium plurimum martyrum, mixed vv, *c*1873 (Brno, 1904)
Diffusa est, grad, vv, 1874
Te Deum, mixed vv, Cecilie, ii (1875), suppl.
Litaniae lauretanae, mixed vv, Cecilie, ii (1875), suppl.; iii (1876), suppl.
Dextera Domini, off, mixed vv
Haec dies, grad, mixed vv, *c*1878
Missa propria pro Sabbato Sancto, vv, org, *c*1878
Requiem, 3 male vv, org, Cecilie, v (1878), suppl.

SECULAR CHORAL

Čáry [Enchantment] (trad.), vv, 1848, K
Die Universität (L.A. Frankl), male vv, 1848, K
Prosba o převoz [A Request to the Ferryman] (trad.), male vv, 1848 (Brno, 1904), K [orig. title: Převozníček]
Utonulá [The Drowned Maiden] (trad.), male vv, 1848, rev. 1860 (Prague, 1861); orig. and rev. versions (Prague, 1927), K
Věrný do smrti [Faithful until Death], Šavlička (Šablenka) [Little Sabre]: (trad.), male vv, 1848 (Brno, 1904), K
Dar za lásku [The Love-Gift] (trad.), male vv, 1849, rev. 1855 for mixed vv (Brno, 1904), rev. 1861 for male vv (Prague, 1863), K
Odpadlý od srdca [The Faithless Heart] (trad.), 1849 (Prague, 1864), K [orig. title: Dívča (Maiden)]
Rozchodná [Song of Parting] (trad.), male vv, 1850 (Prague, 1898), K
Sv. Cyrill a Methoděj [SS Cyril and Methodius] (F. Sušil), cant., male vv, 1850 (Brno, n.d.), rev. 1861 with pf/band acc. (Prague, 1895), K
Zatoč se [Turn Round] (trad.), male vv, 1851, rev. 1860 (Brno, 1904); orig. and rev. versions (Prague, 1927), K
Odvedeného prosba [The Recruit's Prayer] (trad.), ?male vv, 1857–61 (Brno, 1904), rev. 1862 (Prague, 1863), K
Výprask [A Thrashing] (trad.), male vv, ?before 1859, rev. 1866 with T solo, pf acc. (Brno, 1904), K
Žaloba [The Complaint] (trad.), vv, *c*1859, Dalibor, v (1881), K
Pastýř a poutníci [The Shepherd and the Pilgrims] (Sušil), T, Bar, mixed vv, 1865 (Brno, ?1866), K
Zahrada boží [God's Garden] (trad.), male vv, ?1867 (Brno, 1867), K
Zpěv pohřební (Zpěv u hrobu) [Funeral Song (Song at the Grave)] (Sušil), male vv, ?1868 (Brno, 1904), K
Jest jaro [It's Spring], male vv, 1881 (Prague, 1881), K
Vesna [Spring], male vv, Dalibor, v (1881), K

SONGS

for solo voice and piano unless otherwise stated

Aj, vy bratří, aj, jonáci! [O you Brothers, Youths!] (?Křížkovský), 1848 (Brno, 1930), K
22 písní pro školy [Songs for Schools], 3vv, 1855 (Brno, 1856, 2/1858), K
Kalina [The Guelder Rose] (trad.), *c*1862 (Prague, 1890), K
Zábrana [Hindrance] (trad.), T, pf, *c*1863 (Brno, 1863), K
Zahučaly hory [The Mountains Roared] (trad.), *c*1864 (Prague, 1883), K
Klekání [The Angelus], B-Bar, pf, *c*1866 (Brno, 1904), K
Jeseň a máj [Autumn and Maytime] (Soukup), 1870 (Prague, n.d.)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Geisler: Pavel Křížkovský: nástín života i působení jeho uměleckého [Pavel Křížkovský: an outline of his life and artistic activities] (Prague, 1886)
L. Janáček: 'Pavla Křížkovského význam v lidové hudbě moravské a v české hudbě vůbec' [Křížkovský's importance for Moravian folk music and Czech music generally], Český lid, xi (1902), 257–63; repr. Leoš Janáček: O lidové písni a lidové hudbě, ed. J. Vysloužil (Prague, 1955), 169–76; abridged Ger. trans., Leoš Janáček: Musik des Lebens (Leipzig, 1979), 87–9
K. Eichler: Životopis a skladby P. Křížkovského [The life and works of Pavel Křížkovský] (Brno, 1904) [incl. list of works]
E. Axman: Morava v české hudbě XIX. století [Moravia in Czech music of the 19th century] (Prague, 1920), 66–92
P.K. Mach: Křížkovský und der kirchliche Knabengesang (Brno, 1936)
J. Racek: Pavel Křížkovský: prameny, literatura a ikonografie [Křížkovský: sources, bibliography and iconography] (Olomouc, 1946)
T. Straková: 'Pavel Křížkovský, tvůrce české hudby z ducha lidového' [Pavel Křížkovský, creator of Czech music from the spirit of the people], Pavel Křížkovský, tvůrce české hudby z ducha lidového, Moravské Muzeum v Brně, 27 November 1955 – 1956 (Brno, 1955), 8–28 [exhibition catalogue]
V. Gregor: Obrozenská hudba na Moravě a ve Slezsku [Music of the National Revival in Moravia and Silesia] (Prague, 1983), 150–70
J. Trojanová: Pavel Křížkovský, 9.1.1820–8.5.1885: personální bibliografie (Brno, 1985)
J. Trojan: 'Hynek Vojáček – vzpomínky hudebníka předbřezného Brna: ke stému výročí úmrtí Pavla Křížkovského, klasika českého sborového zpěvu na Moravě' [Hynek Vojáček – reminiscences of a musician in pre-March Brno: on the 100th anniversary of the death of Pavel Křížkovský, a classic of the Czech chorus in Moravia], Vlastivědný věstník moravský, xxxviii (1988), 23–33
V. Gregor and M. Malura: Pavel Křížkovský ve světle písemné pozustalosti [Pavel Křížkovský in the light of surviving written documents] (Opava, 1996)

JIŘÍ VYSLOUŽIL

Križman, Frančisek Ksaver. See CHRISMANN, FRANZ XAVER.

Krob, Josef Theodor. See KROV, JOSEF THEODOR.

Kroepfl [Kröpfl], Francisco (b Szeged, 26 Feb 1931). Argentine composer and teacher of Hungarian origin. He settled in Buenos Aires in 1932 and studied composition with Paz. From adolescence he became absorbed by the problems of new compositional developments, and in particular of electronic music. In 1950 he joined the Agrupación Nueva Música, becoming its director in 1956. He translated and provided a foreword for the Spanish edition of the electronic music issue (no.1) of Die Reihe (Buenos Aires, 1958), and in 1959 he was called upon to organize and direct the Estudio de Fonología Musical at Buenos Aires University, the first permanent electronic music studio in Argentina. He was also made director, on its creation, of the Laboratorio de Música Electrónica at the Di Tella Institute and given the title of professor. Kroepfl has also taught at the Centro de Estudios Superiores de Arte of Buenos Aires University, and he held the post of musical assessor at the Museo Nacional de Bellas Artes, Buenos Aires.

Kroepfl is one of the most prominent composers of the Argentine avant garde, though his output also includes music based on conventional methods. One of his major tape compositions is Diálogos I, planned in December 1964 and realized at the Di Tella Institute studios late in 1965. The music is made up of sine waves and filtered white noise, and it was included in a concert of tape pieces at the 1968 Inter-American Music Festival in Washington, DC. Kroepfl has also composed a good deal of instrumental and electronic music for films and audio-visual spectacles: his score for Dimensión, made by the film institute of Buenos Aires University, won the Bucranio di Bronzo at the 1961 Parma Festival of Artistic and Scientific Short Films, and he won first prize for his contribution to the Siam di Tella Pavilion at the National Agriculture and Industry Exhibition (1964). His first electronic pieces were influenced by Paz, but later his treatment of sound became more complex, a development which reached its peak in the 1960s with the Ejercicios, which explore various technical problems.

WORKS
(selective list)

Inst: 3 Pf Pieces, 1948; Música para fl y cl, 1951; Música para 4 insts, 1952; Pf Variations, 1952; 2 estudios, prepared pf, 1953; Música para cl, 1956; Música para pf, 1958; Música a 6 (Móvil I), 1959; Música para 25 insts, 1960; Música para 3 perc y sonidos electronicos, 1962; Móvil II, pf, 1962; Acciones para pf (Movil III), 1962–6; Forma versus textura, 4 jazz insts, 1967; Ideas asociadas, ens, 1969

Vocal: 4 canciones de Aldo, S, fl, cl, 1952; Música para S, cl, tpt, vn, pf, 1953; 3 canciones de Mario Porro, S, ens, 1954–6; Música 1957, S, vib, gui, pf, perc, 1957; La piel de cada dia (R.C. Aguirre), S, ens, 1v on tape, 1959

Tape: Ejercicio de texturas, 1960; Ejercicios con impulsos, 1961; Ejercicios de movimentos, 1962; Ejercicio con ruido coloreado, 1962; Diálogos I, 1964–5; Diálogos II, 1965; Diálogos IIb, 1966; Diálogos III, 1968; Variante, 3 tape rec, 1969

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Arizaga: Enciclopedia de la música argentina (Buenos Aires, 1971)
G. Béhague: Music in Latin America: an Introduction (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1979)
M. Ficher, M. Furman Schleifer and J.M. Furman: Latin American Classical Composers: a Biographical Dictionary (Lanham, MD, and London, 1996)

SUSANA SALGADO

Kroff, Josef Theodor. See KROV, JOSEF THEODOR.

Krogh, Grethe (b Viborg, 7 Nov 1928). Danish organist. She graduated from the Royal Danish Academy of Music in 1951 with diplomas in piano, organ and harpsichord, and made her début on both piano and organ in 1953. She was appointed organist at the church in Nykøbing Mors in 1954. A French government scholarship in 1955 enabled her to study French music with André Marchal (organ) and Antoine Reboulot (piano) in Paris, followed by masterclasses with Marie-Claire Alain. She was assistant professor of organ at the University of Arkansas, 1959–60, organist at the Christianskirken, Århus, 1960–64, and organist at the historic Holmens Kirke in Copenhagen, 1964–9. In 1965 she was appointed to teach at the Royal Danish Academy of Music, becoming a professor in 1969 and serving as chairman of the organ department from 1970 to 1990; she gave up her teaching positions in 1990 to concentrate on performing.

As a recitalist, Krogh has played throughout Europe, the former Soviet Union, Canada and the USA. Although she specializes in French repertory from the Baroque to the 20th century, she is also noted for her performances and recordings of Nielsen and works by more contemporary composers, many written specially for her. She is internationally regarded as a teacher and has served on numerous competition juries, including Chartres and Nuremberg. In 1974 she was awarded the Knighthood of the Order of Dannebrog and was again honoured in 1982.

INGA HULGAARD

Krogh, Torben (Thorberg) (b Copenhagen, 21 April 1895; d Copenhagen, 10 Feb 1970). Danish theatre historian. He studied at the Copenhagen Conservatory (1914–17) and, until 1919, at the University of Copenhagen, but went to German universities for further studies in music history and psychology under Johannes Wolf and Carl Stumpf and theatre history under Max Hermann. He took the doctorate in Berlin in 1922 (and in Denmark in 1924). From 1924 to 1929 he was opera producer at the Royal Theatre in Copenhagen, and lectured on the history of music and the theatre. He also edited the theatre's programmes, and was its librarian. In 1950 he became professor of opera history and aesthetics at the University of Copenhagen, moving to the chair of theatre history and aesthetics in 1953; he retired in 1966.

Krogh was the first in Denmark to emphasize the importance of source material as a basis for theatre-history research, an attitude supported by his deep knowledge of the cultural life of Europe, especially its theatre, from classical Greece onwards. He believed that each period has its own system of theatre with a specific structure which must be analysed on the basis of lists of properties, account books, iconographical material, etc. He pursued this theory, both in his writing and in his lectures, through every topic that he dealt with.

WRITINGS

'De første Forsøg paa at skabe en Opera i det danske Sprog' [The first attempt to create an opera in the Danish language], Aarbog for Musik 1922, 123–58
Zur Geschichte des dänischen Singspiels im 18. Jahrhundert (diss., U. of Berlin, 1922, Copenhagen, 1924)
'Ariearterne i det 18de aarhundrede', Aarbog for Musik 1923, 94–114
'Det tyske Operaselskabs besøg i København under Frederik IV', Aarbog for Musik 1924, 88–160

'Reinhard Keiser in Kopenhagen', Musikwissenschaftliche Beiträge: Festschrift für Johannes Wolf, ed. W. Lott, H. Osthoff and W. Wolffheim (Berlin, 1929/R), 79–87
Studier over de sceniske Opførelser af Holbergs Komedier i de første Aar paa den genoprettede Danske skueplads [A study of the performances of Holberg's comedies during the first years of the rebuilt Danish Theatre] (Copenhagen, 1929)
Studier over Harlekinaden paa den Danske skueplads (Copenhagen, 1931)
Danske Teaterbilleder fra det 18de Aarhundrede: en teaterhistorisk Undersøgelse (Copenhagen, 1932/R)
Hofballetten under Christian IV og Frederik III: en teaterhistorisk Studie (Copenhagen, 1939)
Aeldre dansk Teater: en teaterhistorisk Undersøgelse (Copenhagen, 1940)
Heibergs Vaudeviller: Studier over Motiver og Melodier (Copenhagen, 1942)
Holberg i det Kgl. Teaters aeldste Regieprotokoller (Copenhagen, 1943)
Bellman som musikalisk Digter (Copenhagen, 1945)
Skuespilleren i det 18de Aarhundrede: belyst gennem danske Kilder (Copenhagen, 1948)
ed., with S. Kragh-Jacobsen: Den Kongelige danske ballet (Copenhagen, 1952) [incl. 'Fra hofballetten over Galeottis århundrede til Bournonville', 1–192]
'Molieres Don Juan i Komediehuset på Kongens Nytorv', Festskrift udgivet af Københavns Universitet (Copenhagen, 1964), 5–102

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Musik og Teater (Copenhagen, 1955) [Festschrift for Krogh's 60th birthday, incl. list of writings, 231–42]
F.J. Billeskov Jansen: 'Torben Krogh', Festskrift udgivet af Københavns Universitet (Copenhagen, 1970), 198–204

NANNA SCHIØDT

Krogulski, Józef Władysław (b Tarnów, 4 Oct 1815; d Warsaw, 9 Jan 1842). Polish pianist, conductor, teacher and composer. He studied the piano with his father, the composer Michał Krogulski, and performed to critical acclaim as a pianist in 1825 in various Polish towns and in Berlin, Dresden and Leipzig. From June 1828, partly because of health problems, he settled in Warsaw and concentrated on composition and teaching, studying composition under Elsner and Kurpiński. In 1834, probably prompted by Elsner, he turned his attention to choral singing. He organized and led amateur choirs in Warsaw churches, including the Piarists' church, which performed many of his own compositions as well as works by Haydn, Cherubini and Méhul.

Krogulski's works show the influence of Elsner and Kurpiński. In contrast to his piano works, his choral compositions, in particular the cantatas and masses with Polish texts, remained in the repertory until the end of the 19th century.

WORKS
(selective list)

MSS in PL-CZ, Kj, Wn, Wtm

Oj, żoneczka [Oh, my Little Wife] (comic op, C.T. and J.H. Cogniard), Warsaw, 28 Oct 1833
Choral: Karawana w pustyniach Arabistanu [Caravan in the Arabian Desert] (cant.), d, chorus, orch, Warsaw, 8 April 1835; Oratorium na Wielki piątek [Orat for Good Friday], Warsaw, 17 April 1835; Vespers, E, Warsaw, 1836; Miserere (orat), e, SATB, chorus, orch, Warsaw, 9 April 1841; 10 masses; other works; solo songs
Inst: Ov., d, orch, *c*1831; 2 pf concs., E, Warsaw, 15 Dec 1830, b, Warsaw, 13 April 1832; Octet, d, Warsaw, 16 April 1834; Str qt; Pf qt; Sonata, pf; La bella cracoviena, pf (Leipzig, 1837); other pf miniatures

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EMuz (B. Chmara-Żaczkiewicz); SMP
J.M. Wiślicki: 'Wspomnienie Józefa Krogulskiego, artysty i kompozytora' [In memory of Krogulski, artist and composer], Gazeta codzienna, xiii (14 Jan 1842)
J.M. Wiślicki: Krogulski jako kompozytor religijny [Krogulski as a religious composer] (Warsaw, 1843)
W. Hordyński: Józef Władysław Krogulski: życiorys i twórczość fortepianowa [Biography and piano works] (diss., U. of Kraków, 1939)

BARBARA CHMARA-ŻACZKIEWICZ

Krohn, Ernst C(hristopher) (b New York, 23 Dec 1888; d Santa Fe, 21 March 1975). American musicologist and music bibliographer. He studied the piano with Ottmar Moll (1900–13); he was named Moll's first assistant and continued to teach with him until 1934. From 1920 he studied music history privately. He was a lecturer in music history at Washington University, St Louis (1938–53), and director of music at St Louis University (1953–63). In 1963 he was appointed honorary curator of the Gaylord Music Library of Washington University.

Krohn was noted as a chronicler of the musical history of Missouri. His A Century of Missouri Music is based on a series of articles originally published in 1923, and Krohn added details of the growth of musical activities in his adopted state, particularly in the St Louis area. As a piano teacher he wrote numerous compositions and articles on piano teaching; from 1910 to 1950 he was an assistant editor for the Shattinger Piano & Music Co. of St Louis.

WRITINGS

'The Bibliography of Music', MQ, v (1919), 231–54
A Century of Missouri Music (St Louis, 1924; repr. 1971 as Missouri Music) [repr. incl. 'A Bibliography of the Writings and Compositions of Ernst C. Krohn', 317–21]
'Die Musikwissenschaft in Amerika', ZMw, viii (1925–6), 297–308; ix (1926–7), 365–7
'Alexander Reinagle as Sonatist', MQ, xviii (1932), 140–49
The History of Music: an Index to the Literature Available in a Selected Group of Musicological Publications (St Louis, 1952/R)
'Vatican Music Collections on Microfilm at St. Louis University', Caecilia [New York], lxxxiv (1957), 95
'Music in the Vatican Film Library at St. Louis University', Notes, xiv (1956–7), 317–24
'Some Solo Cantatas of Alessandro Stradella', Manuscripta, ii (1958), 3–15
'The Nova Musica of Johannes Ciconia', Manuscripta, v (1961), 3–16
'The Development of Modern Musicology', in L.B. Spiess: Historical Musicology: a Reference Manual for Research in Music (Brooklyn, NY, 1963/R), 153–72
'Musical Festschriften and Related Publications', Notes, xxi (1963–4), 94–106
'Musical Mechanical Figures in Formal Gardens', Manuscripta, xi (1967), 151–5
'Nelson Kneass, Minstrel Singer and Composer', Yearbook for Inter-American Musical Research, vii (1971), 17–42
'On Classifying Sheet Music', Notes, xxvi (1969–70), 473–8
Music Publishing in the Middle Western States before the Civil War (Detroit, 1972)
ed. J.B. Clark: Music Publishing in St. Louis (Warren, MI, 1988)

PAULA MORGAN

Krohn, Ilmari (Henrik Reinhold) (b Helsinki, 8 Nov 1867; d Helsinki, 25 April 1960). Finnish musicologist and composer. He studied music theory, the piano, organ and composition in Helsinki with Richard Faltin (1885–6), and continued his studies at the Leipzig Conservatory (1886–90) and at Helsinki University (MA 1894), where he took the doctorate in 1900 with a dissertation on Finnish sacred folk tunes; he also had a period of study in Weimar with Baussner (1909). Having collected folk music in Finland (1886, 1890, 1897–8) and Sweden (1897) he did extensive fieldwork in central Europe (1900, 1902, 1905, 1908, 1914, 1919, 1923 and 1930). Besides his activities as a music critic, choral conductor and organist he held appointments as a lecturer in music in Helsinki at the Music Institute (1900–01, 1905, 1907, 1914–16), the Philharmonic Orchestra School (1900–01, 1904–14), the Church Music Institute (1923–30, 1933–44) and at the university (1900–18), where he became the first professor of musicology (1918–35). In 1910 he founded the Finnish section of the International Musical Society; he was the founder (1916) and chairman (1917–39) of the Finnish Musicological Society and a leading member of other music organizations, especially church music commissions. His many academic honours included an honorary doctorate of theology from Helsinki University (1955).

Krohn was the founder of Finnish musicology. His research was primarily in two areas: folk music and music theory, especially formal analysis. He published three large volumes of Finnish folk music (1893–1933) systematized according to the methods he devised. Developing the theoretical methods formulated by Riemann, he provided in his five comprehensive textbooks (1914–37) the Finnish terminology for the subject and the basis of subsequent Finnish music education. His interest in rhythmic analysis led him to evolve a hierarchy of musical forms from the smallest possible units to works on the scale of the Ring. Towards the end of his life he published large and detailed programmatic analyses of the symphonies of Sibelius and Bruckner, comparable to Lorenz's studies of Wagner. They have been criticized for a certain Christian-patriotic naivety, but have also attracted interest by virtue of their hermeneutic approach. Krohn's compositions are primarily sacred and include two oratorios, Ikiaartehet ('Eternal Treasures', 1912) and Voittajat ('The Conquerors', 1935), a St John Passion (1940), the opera Tuhotulva ('The Flood', 1918), cantatas, psalms and other church music.

WRITINGS

'La chanson populaire en Finlande', 2nd International Folk-Lore Congress: London 1891, 241–5

'De la mesure à 5 temps dans la musique populaire finnoise', Congrès d'histoire de la musique: Paris 1900 (Paris, 1901), 241–5; also in SIMG, ii (1900–01), 142–6

Über die Art und Entstehung der geistlichen Volksmelodien in Finnland (diss., U. of Helsinki, 1900; Helsinki, 1899)

'Melodien der Berg-Tscheremissen und Wotjaken', SIMG, iii (1901–2), 430–38

'Welche ist die beste Methode um Volks- und volksmässige Melodien nach ihrer melodischen (nicht textlichen) Beschaffenheit lexikalisch zu ordnen?', SIMG, iv (1902–3), 634–60

'Zweckmässige Notation von Psalmen und anderen rezitativischen Gesängen', 'Zur Einheitlichkeit der Notenschlüssel', 'Über das lexikalische Ordnen von Volksmelodien', 'Das akustische Harmonium der Universität zu Helsingfors', IMusSCR II: Basle 1906, 47–8, 55–6, 66–74, 75–83

'Über die typischen Merkmale der finnischen Volksmelodien in den Abteilungen A I und A II', 'Reform der Taktbezeichnung', IMusSCR III: Vienna 1909, 230–33, 386–402

Musiikin teorian oppijakso [Principles of music theory], i: Rytmioppi; ii: Säveloppi; iii: Harmoniaoppi; iv: Polyfoniaoppi; v: Muoto-oppi (Porvoo, 1911–37, vol.i rev. 2/1958)

Puhdasvireisen säveltapailun opas [Guide to solfège in natural tuning] (Helsinki, 1911)

'Über die Methode der musikalischen Analyse', IMusSCR IV: London 1911, 250–8

'Mongolische Melodien', ZMw, iii (1920–21), 65–82

'Lohengrins formbyggnad', STMf, iv (1922), 1–25

'Erneuerung des musiktheoretischen Unterrichts I–III', Bulletin de la Société 'Union musicologique', iii (1923), 2–15; iv (1924), 128–41; v (1925), 194–206

'Die Entwicklung der Opernform in Wagners Frühwerken', Bayreuther Festspielführer 1924

'Die Kirchentonarten', Musikwissenschaftlicher Kongress: Basle 1924, 220–30

'Zur Analyse des Konsonanzgehalts', Festskrift tillägnad Hugo Pipping (Helsungfors, 1924), 303–17

'Methode für Ausbildung zur Melodik', Deutsche Musikgesellschaft: Kongress I: Leipzig 1925, 190–98

'Puccini: Butterfly', Gedenkboek aangeboden aan Dr. D.F. Scheurleer (The Hague, 1925), 181–90

'Psalmengesang in der Volkssprache', Festschrift Peter Wagner zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. K. Weinmann (Leipzig, 1926/R), 118–23

'Die Form des ersten Satzes der Mondscheinsonate', Musikhistorischer Kongress: Vienna 1927, 58–65

'Fr. Aug. Gevaerts Stellung zum gregorianischen Gesang', IMSCR I: Liège 1930, 158–64

'Der tonale Charakter gregorianischer Rezitative', Studien zur Musikgeschichte: Festschrift für Guido Adler (Vienna, 1930/R), 33–44

Die Sammlung und Erforschung der Volksmusik in Finnland (Helsinki, 1933)

Die finnische Volksmusik (Griefswald, 1935)

Liturgisen sävellystyylin opas [The liturgical style of composition] (Porvoo, 1940)

Der Formenbau in den Symphonien von Jean Sibelius (Helsinki, 1942)

'Módszertani kérdések az összehasonlító népdalkutatásban' [Methods of comparative folk melody research], Emlékkönyv Kodály Zoltán hatvanadik születésnapjára, ed. B. Gunda (Budapest, 1943), 97–110

Der lutherische Choral in Finnland (Åbo, 1944); also in Festskrift til O.M. Sandvik, ed. O. Gurvin (Oslo, 1945), 122–47

Der Stimmungsgehalt der Symphonien von Jean Sibelius (Helsinki, 1945–6)

Anton Bruckners Symphonien: Untersuchung über Formenbau und Stimmungsgehalt (Helsinki, 1955–7)

'Formale und ideelle Einheitlichkeit der Symphonien Anton Bruckners', Musikwissenschaftlicher Kongress: Vienna 1956, 313–17

FOLKSONG EDITIONS

Suomen kansan sävelmiä [Folktunes of the Finnish people] (Helsinki and Jyväskylä, 1893–1933)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Juhlakirja Ilmari Krohn'ille (Helsinki, 1927)

'Ilmari Krohn zum 70. Geburtstag', Musiikkitieto (1937), [special issue]

I. Krohn: Sävelmuistoja elämäni varrelta [Memoirs] (Porvoo, 1951)

N.-E. Ringbom: 'Ilmari Krohn 90 Jahre alt', Mf, xi (1958), 1–2

M. Hela: 'Suomen musiikin kunniavanhuksen mentyä' [The grand old man of Finnish music has passed], Suomen musiikin vuosikirja 1959–60, 8–12

T. Kuusisto: 'Ilmari Krohn', Musiikkimme ellispäivää (Porvoo, 1965), 162–5

E. Linnala: 'Ilmari Krohn opettajana' [Krohn as teacher], Suomen musiikin vuosikirja 1966–67 (1967), 72–4 [with Eng. summary]

M. Huttunen: Modernin musiikinhistoriankirjoituksen synty Suomessa [The beginnings of modern music history writing in Finland] (diss., U. of Turku, 1993)

M. Huttunen: 'Systematiikan ja historian yhteys Ilmari Krohnin tieteellisessä tuotannossa' [The interplay of history and theory in Ilmari Krohn's analysis], Musiikki, xxiii/3–4 (1993), 95–117

ERKKI SALMENHAARA

Kröll, Georg (b Linz am Rhein, 3 May 1934). German composer and pianist. He studied at the Cologne Musikhochschule, where his teachers included Frank Martin and Bernd Alois Zimmermann. He also took courses at the Gaudeamus Foundation (1959–61) and the Internationale Ferienkurse für Neue Musik, Darmstadt (1962), with Pousser, Boulez, Maderna and others. As a member of Gruppe 8 (1969–72) he participated in the performance of outdoor and communal compositions. From 1964 to 1997 he taught at the Rheinische Musikschule, Cologne. His many distinctions include a scholarship from the Villa Massimo, Rome (1969–70).

Kröll's early compositions were influenced by the music of Schoenberg, Stravinsky, Bartók and Boulez. Magnificat (1958), his first mature work, uses serial techniques.

Around 1970 he adopted the idea, previously explored by Zimmermann, Ligeti and others, of overcoming the small units inherent in serial thinking by composing with multiple layers of sound. During the 1970s he worked increasingly towards achieving aural transparency through a reduction in complexity. At the same time, his long-standing interest in early music exerted a strong influence. Much of the chamber music, a large part of his output, is written for unusual combinations of instruments; Pezzi bassi ed alti (1986), for example, is scored for double bass, harp, celeste and percussion. The potential conflict arising from such instrumental combinations is often treated thematically. Using serial techniques, Kröll has developed a dialectic between simple (partly motivic) and complex configurations. His finely wrought syntheses of timbres, especially in his earlier works, suggests a comparison with Kurtág.

WORKS
(selective list)

Magnificat, S, 6 insts, 1958; Variationen, orch, 1965; Invocazioni, wind qnt, 1969; Stilleben, orch, 1969–70; Parodia ad Perotinum, orch, 1970–71; Sonata no.2, vc, pf, 1971; Wir haben keinerlei Fähigkeit aus der Klosterneuburgerstrasse wegzugehen, aria, Mez, insts, 1974; Szene (H.G. Adler), motet, nar, S, elec org, 1975; Capriccio sopra mi, str trio, 1982; Dekatom, pf trio, 1984; Pezzi bassi ed alti, db, hp, cel, perc, 1986; 5 Versetten, sax qt, 1986; Omaggio, pf trio, 1989; Qt, bar sax, trbn, vc, pf, 1993; Qt 96, str qt, 1996

Principal publishers: Moeck, Schott, Edition Gravis

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KdG (J.P. Hiekel)

J.P. Hiekel: 'Zu einigen Aspekten der Musik Georg Krölls', Georg Kröll (Neuss, 1996), 25–65

JÖRN PETER HIEKEL

Kroll, William (b New York, 30 Jan 1901; d Boston, 10 March 1980). American violinist. He studied at the Berlin Hochschule with Marteau (1911–14), made his début in New York in 1915, and continued his studies with the violinist Franz Kneisel and the theorist P. Goetschius at the Institute of Musical Art, New York (1917–22). As a soloist, and chamber music player with groups such as the Elshuco Trio (1922–9), the Coolidge Quartet (1936–44) and the Kroll Quartet (1944–69), he toured extensively in the USA, Mexico, Canada and Europe. In 1958–9 he played sonatas with Arthur Balsam, mainly in Europe. In 1942 he was awarded the Coolidge Medal for services to chamber music.

Kroll taught at the Institute of Musical Art (1922–38), at the Peabody Conservatory (1947–65) and at the Cleveland Institute (1964–7). In 1943 he joined the staff of the Mannes College, New York, and in 1949 began teaching at Tanglewood. In 1969 he was appointed professor of the violin at Queens College, New York. He published works for string quartet, chamber orchestra and solo violin. Kroll's playing combined vigour and elegance, and he was at his best in chamber music. He played the 'ex-Ernst' Stradivari of 1709.

BORIS SCHWARZ/MARGARET CAMPBELL

Krombholc, Jaroslav (b Prague, 30 Jan 1918; d Prague, 16 July 1983). Czech conductor. At the Prague Conservatory and the Master School (1937–42) he studied with Novák and Talich, attended Hába's quarter-tone classes and, at Prague University, Zdeněk Nejedlý's lectures. He joined the National Theatre staff in 1940 and in 1942 Talich entrusted him with the première of Bořkovec's Satyr. He also worked at the E.F. Burian Theatre and with the Czech PO. In 1944 he became head of the Ostrava Opera, but in 1945 he returned to Prague, where he was appointed conductor and a member of the management of the National Theatre, eventually becoming one of its leading musical personalities. In 1973 he was also appointed chief conductor of the Prague RSO.

Central to Krombholc's career was opera. Here he displayed sensitivity to drama and also the experience gained from working with the prominent Czech men of the theatre, E.F. Burian and Pujman. In 1949 and 1955 he won state prizes for his outstanding performances of Dalibor and Libuše. His interpretation of Fibich was regarded as a model. He achieved significant success with Ostrčil's Honza's Kingdom, Foerster's Eva, Jeremiáš's The Brothers Karamazov, Burian's Maryša, Kubelík's Veronika and the operas of Novák, Cikker and Suchoň. Outside Czechoslovakia he was known for his appearances at the Vienna Staatsoper, where he first conducted in 1959, Covent Garden, Budapest, Stuttgart, and at the Holland and Edinburgh festivals; as the conductor of the National Theatre company on its foreign tours; and for his many excellent recordings. Krombholc also had a wide concert repertory: his interpretations of Smetana's Má vlast, Ostrčil, Suk, Hindemith, Kodály, Orff, Milhaud and Schoenberg particularly give evidence of his exceptional learning. He toured in South America, was a frequent guest in England and Vienna, and appeared in Italy, the USSR and Germany. He composed a symphony (1942), chamber and vocal works.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Karásek: 'S Jaroslavem Krombholcem' [With Jaroslav Krombholc], HRo, xiii (1960), 10–13

J. Kozák: Českoslovenští koncertní umělci a komorní soubory [Czechoslovak concert artists and chamber ensembles] (Prague, 1964), 325–7

B. Karásek: 'Český dirigent' [The Czech conductor], HRo, xxi (1968), 22–3

V. Procházka: Národní divadlo a jeho předchůdci [The National Theatre and its predecessors] (Prague, 1988) [incl. list of repertory and discography]

ALENA NĚMCOVÁ

Kromer, Marcin (b Biecz, nr Tarnów, 1512; d Lidzbark, north-west of Warsaw, 23 March 1589). Polish historian, theologian and music theorist. He studied at the Jagellonian University, Kraków, from 1528 to 1530, and from 1537 to 1540 in Padua and Bologna. In the interim he had been employed by the court and lived in Vilnius. From 1540, back in Poland, he embarked on an ecclesiastical career, first as rector of Biecz (1542), then as parish priest at Wiślica and Sandomierz and as canon at Kielce. He took an active part in the Counter-Reformation in Poland, being largely responsible for inviting Jesuits into the country. He was also active as a diplomat: from 1545 to 1558 he was the secretary of the king's chancellory, and during this period he travelled abroad several times, visiting Rome and Vienna. In 1570 Kromer was nominated as the coadjutor to the see of Ermeland (Varmia) and in 1579 became its bishop, remaining in this post until his death.

Kromer's historical and literary works are of particular significance in the evolution of Polish culture, and draw heavily on knowledge gleaned during his reorganization of state archives in Kraków. His musical writings, Musicae elementa (Kraków, 1532, incomplete; facs. in MMP, ser.D, ii, 1975) and De musica figurata (published jointly with Sebastian z Felsztyna's Opusculum musices noviter congestum, Kraków, 1534, 1539; facs. of both in MMP, ser.D, iv, 1976) are less important. Musicae elementa concerns elementary principles of music, and mainly follows the usual 16th-century pattern, beginning with a long praise of music in verse ('Encomium musicae') in which the author considered, among other things, the ethical attributes of musical scales. De musica figurata (trans. and ed. A. Seay, Colorado Springs, 1980), devoted to mensural theory, appears to depend on the views of Tinctoris and Adam von Fulda.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PSB

A. Chybiński: Teoria mensuralna w polskiej literaturze muzycznej pierwszej połowy XVI wieku [Mensural theory in Polish music literature of the first half of the 16th century] (Kraków, 1912)

J. Reiss: Książki o muzyce od XV do XVII wieku w Bibljotece Jagiellońskiej [Books on music from the 15th to 17th centuries in the Jagellonian library] (Kraków, 1924–38)

Z.M. Szweykowski, ed.: Z dziejów polskiej kultury muzycznej [From the history of Polish musical culture], i (Kraków, 1958)

E. Witkowska-Zaremba: Ars musica w krakowskich traktatach muzycznych XVI wieku [Ars musica in 16th-century musical treatises from Kraków] (Kraków, 1986)

ELŻBIETA WITKOWSKA-ZAREMBA

Kroměříž (Ger. Kremsier; Lat. Cremsirium). Town in central Moravia in the Czech Republic. Kroměříž was the residence of the bishops of Olomouc from the 13th century onwards. In 1260 Bishop Jindřich Zdík had the church of St Mořic built there, and founded a collegiate chapter. The episcopal Kapelle was based in Kroměříž from the second half of the 14th century. Bishop Jan ze Středy (1364–80) employed a figellator, a player on the ala bohemica and a good singer as succentor. After the 16th century the church of St Mořic also had an organ. Bishop Stanislav Pavlovský (1579–98) employed Jacobus Handl Gallus, who dedicated many works to him, as his praefectus capellae in the years 1579–85. Gallus was succeeded by Andreas Ostermayer, who held the post until 1588. The Kapelle at this time comprised ten musicians in all: the rector chori, the organist, five adult choristers and two trebles, and a trumpeter. Pavlovský's successor, Cardinal Franz Dietrichstein (1599–1636), preferred to stay in his family residence of Mikulov, where he had several Italian composers in his service (Carolo Abbate, Giovanni Battista Aloisi, Claudio Cocchi and Vincenzo Scapitta). Archduke-Bishop Leopold Wilhelm (1637–62) usually lived outside his diocese, but the administrator of his estates appointed in 1644, Johann Nikolaus Reiter von Hornberg, maintained active relations with a number of composers, including Alberich Mazak, Adam Michna, Wendelin Hueber and Johann Kaspar Kerll. In 1643, when Torstenson's army burnt the town, musical life there was almost entirely extinguished.

One of the most brilliant periods in the history of Kroměříž was the period under the rule of Bishop Karl Liechtenstein-Castelcorno (1664–95), who not only rebuilt the residence and the town but also maintained a well-equipped Kapelle. Its Kapellmeister was the trumpeter and composer Pavel Vejvanovský, and around 1668–70 Biber was a chamberlain there. Even after his flight to Salzburg he sent works of his to Kroměříž. The bishop's chaplain in 1674–8 was Philipp Jakob Rittler. The bishop also had close connections with Johann Heinrich Schmelzer, who regularly provided him with the imperial Hofkapelle's latest pieces. Since the imperial court organist Alessandro Poglietti needed the bishop's help over an inheritance, he too provided him with compositions. In this way Liechtenstein was able to build up a fine collection of music, originally numbering some 1400 works, of which 1152 survive. The Liechtenstein music collection represents the greatest collection of 17th-century church and dance music in central Europe, and is our main source of knowledge of the music of the court of Leopold I. It includes some 130 compositions by Vejvanovský and the only autograph manuscripts of Biber. Unfortunately nothing remains of the 60 musical instruments, which included some made by Jakob Stainer and Niccolò Amati.

In the era of Cardinal Wolfgang Hannibal von Schrattenbach (1711–38) Italian opera and oratorio came to Kroměříž. Schrattenbach's Kapellmeister was Válav Matyáš Gurecký, and Carlo Tessarini was employed in the years 1736–8. Singers from the Piarist college in Kroměříž joined the episcopal Kapelle for performances of opera.

Under Bishop Leopold Egk von Hungersbach (1758–60) the Kapelle performed only early Classical instrumental music. The Kapellmeister was Anton Neumann, and among the musicians was the French horn and baryton virtuoso Karl Franz. The catalogue of music performed by the Kapelle in 1760 includes the earliest mention of Joseph Haydn's Symphony no.1. After Neumann's departure in 1762 musicians of little significance held the post of Kapellmeister. Curiously, no printed or manuscript music of the first half of the 18th century survives in the archives.

The first archbishop of Olomouc, Anton Theodor Colloredo-Waldsee (1777–1811), appointed Ignaz Küffel his director of music in 1780–82, and the post was held from 1788 to 1811 by the violin virtuoso, opera conductor and composer Franz Götz. Most of the Colloredo collection of music has been preserved; it includes works from the 1760s, and consists predominantly of symphonies, chamber music, music for wind band and works for piano or harpsichord. Among the composers represented, the most outstanding are J.C. Bach, Boccherini, Dittersdorf, Haydn, Koželuh, Mozart, Paisiello, Pleyel, J.A. Štěpán, Vaňhal and Wagenseil.

After the economic bankruptcy of the empire in 1811, the bishops maintained only the obligatory trumpeters and a wind band. This state of affairs prevailed under Archbishop Maria Thadäus Trautmannsdorf (1811–19) and Cardinal Archduke Rudolph von Habsburg (1819–31). He too maintained an eight-man wind band as part of his bodyguard. Well known for his friendship with Beethoven, Archduke Rudolph ceased to devote any time to music when he was appointed archbishop. After his death, he left his large collection of music to the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde in Vienna, but his own works remained in Olomouc and are now in the archiepiscopal music archives in Kroměříž. No wind-band music from the period when he was archbishop has been preserved. Rudolph's successors no longer maintained any musical ensembles, though there are documents recording that the last trumpeters were still employed in 1849.

Music in the town's parish church of the Panna Marie was provided by the rector of the civic school. The town musicians (known as Thurner) also played there, as well as in the church of St Mořic. Jan Leopold Kunert (1784–1865), appointed a town musician in 1811, was also distinguished as a composer. The musical seminary of the Piarist college founded by Bishop Liechtenstein in 1687 was of great importance to the musical education of the young. Some 400 musicians were trained in this seminary between 1708 and 1835. After 1768 the college had its own church, where oratorios were performed.

In 1863 the choir Moravan was founded in Kroměříž and became very active in concerts, performing major cantatas by Dvořák and even some operas. In 1903 its conductor Ferdinand Vach (1860–1939) founded the Pěvecké sdružení moravských učitelů (Moravian Teachers' Choral Society), which became famous for its performances of Janáček's works for male-voice chorus. Since 1962 the chamber choir Moravští Madrigalisté has been active in Kroměříž, under its choirmaster Jiří Šafařík.

The Higher Music School of Kroměříž was founded in 1949, and in 1971 became the Pavel Vejvanovský Conservatory. Since 1991 there has been a church conservatory, run on an ecumenical basis.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Památník pěvecko-hudebního spolku Moravan v Kroměříži 1862–1932 [Memorial volume of the Moravan choral society in Kroměříž] (Kroměříž, 1933)
J. Sehnal: 'Pohled do instrumentáře kroměřížskébiskupské kapely 17. a 18. století' [A glimpse into the instrumentarium of the Kroměříž episcopal orchestra of the 17th and 18th centuries], Umění a svět, ii–iii (1959), 53–91
J. Sehnal: 'Ze života hudebníků kroměřížskébiskupské kapely v 17. století' [The lives of musicians of the Kroměříž bishop's chapel in the 17th century], Hudobnovedné štúdie, vii (1966), 122–34
J. Sehnal: 'Die Musikkapelle des Olmützer Bischofs Maximilian Hamilton (1761–1776)', Mf, xxiv (1971), 411–17
J. Sehnal: 'Das Musikinventar des Olmützer Bischofs Leopold Egk aus dem Jahr 1760 als Quelle vorklassischer Instrumentalmusik', AMw, xxix (1972), 285–317
C.A. Otto: Seventeenth-Century Music from Kroměříž, Czechoslovakia: a Catalog of the Liechtenstein Music Collection on Microfilm at Syracuse University (Syracuse, NY, 1977/R)
J. Sehnal: 'Die Musikkapelle des Olmützer Erzbischofs Anton Theodor Colloredo-Waldsee (1777–1811)', Die Musik auf den Adelssitzen rund um Wien: Oberschützen 1975, 132–50 [Haydn Yearbook 1978]
J. Bombera: 'K významu Liechtensteinova zpěváckého semináře v Kroměříži' [The significance of the Liechtenstein singers' seminary in Kroměříž], HV, xvi (1979), 331–9
J. Sehnal: 'Jakob Stainers Beziehung zur Kremsierer Musikkapelle', Jakob Stainer und seine Zeit: Innsbruck 1983, 23–8
J. Sehnal: 'Hudební inventář Kroměříže z roku 1659' [The musical inventory in Kroměříž in 1659], SPFFBU, H19–20 (1984), 71–6
J. Bombera: 'Pěvecký seminář v Kroměříži' [The Kroměříž choir school], Studie muzea Kroměřížska (1989), 52–73
J. Sehnal: 'Heinrich Bibers Beziehungen zu Kremsier', De editione musices: Festschrift Gerhard Croll, ed. W. Gratzer and A. Lindmayr (Laaber, 1992), 315–27
J. Sehnal: 'Die Harmoniemusik in Mähren von 1750–1840', Kongressberichte Oberschützen/Burgenland 1988, Toblach/Südtirol 1990, ed. B. Habla, Alta musica, xiv (1992), 237–87
J. Sehnal: 'Salzburger Musikhandschriften aus dem 17. Jh. in Kroměříž', Festschrift Hubert Unverricht zum 65. Geburtstag, ed. K. Schlager (Tutzing, 1992), 255–73
J. Sehnal: Pavel Vejvanovský a biskupská kapela v Kroměříži [Pavel Vejvanovský and the episcopal orchestra at Kroměříž] (Kroměříž, 1993)
Musik des 17. Jahrhunderts und Pavel Vejvanovský: Kroměříž 1994
J. Sehnal: 'Die adeligen Musikkapellen im 17. und 18. Jahrhundert in Mähren', Studies in Music History Presented to H.C. Robbins Landon on his Seventieth Birthday, ed. O. Biba and D.W. Jones (London, 1996), 196–201
J. Sehnal and J. Pešková: Caroli de Liechtenstein-Castelcorno episcopi Olomucensis operum artis musicae collectio Cremsirii reservata (Prague, 1998)

JIŘÍ SEHNAL

Krommer, Franz (Vinzenz) [Kramář, František Vincenc] (b Kamenice u Třebíče, 27 Nov 1759; d Vienna, 8 Jan 1831). Czech composer. He was the son of the innkeeper and later mayor of Kamenice Georg Krommer (Jiří Kramář, 1737–1810), and the nephew of the composer and choirmaster Anton Matthias Krommer. He is often known as 'Krommer-Kramář'.

From the age of 14 until Krommer was 17 he was taught the violin and organ by his uncle in Turan; he taught himself theory. After about 1777 Krommer was temporary organist in Turan. In 1785 he moved to Vienna and after staying for one year found employment as a violinist in the orchestra of the Duke of Styrum in Simontornya (Hungary). Two years later he was promoted to the post of musical director. Towards the end of 1790 he became Kapellmeister of Pécs Cathedral; after 1793 he acted as Kapellmeister and composer in the service of a Duke Karolyi and later of Prince Antal Grassalkovich de Gyarak.

Returning to Vienna in 1795, Krommer presumably taught composition before being appointed Kapellmeister to Duke Ignaz Fuchs in 1798. In 1806 he applied, unsuccessfully, to join the Vienna Hofkapelle as a violinist; after 1810 he was employed as Ballett-Kapellmeister of the Vienna Hoftheater. On 14 June 1815 he was appointed Kammertürhüter to the emperor, and in this office accompanied Emperor Franz I to Paris and Padua in the same year, and to Verona, Milan and Venice in 1816. From 13 September 1818 until his death he succeeded Leopold Anton Kozeluch as the last official director of chamber music and court composer to the Habsburg emperors.

Krommer was one of the most successful of the many influential Czech composers in Vienna at the turn of the 18th century. His creative output comprises over 300 works, although he only began to publish them in later years. Krommer's reputation is attested by the rapid spread of his compositions in reprints and arrangements by German, Danish, French, English, Italian and American publishers, and equally by his honorary membership of the Istituto Filarmonico in Venice, the Philharmonic Society in Ljubljana, the Musikverein in Innsbruck and the conservatories in Paris (1815), Milan (1818) and Vienna (1826). With the exception of piano works, lieder and operas, Krommer cultivated all the musical genres of his time, and was regarded (with Haydn) as the leading composer of string quartets, and as a serious rival of Beethoven. The present view, however, places his solo concertos for wind instruments as his most individual accomplishments. In his symphonies, solo concertos and chamber music he followed the style of Haydn and Mozart, and yet his modes of expression extend from the galant style of the earlier 18th century to Romanticism. His violin duets have proved to be his most lasting works: they were still in use at the end of the 19th century as instructive pieces for students. His violin concertos, however, are largely forgotten: they were modelled on those of Pierre Rode, and the demands of their solo parts allow some insight into Krommer's own ability on the violin; but his chamber music with piano shows a lack of familiarity with the technical possibilities of keyboard instruments. His numerous dances, marches and compositions for brass band, all within the Viennese tradition for these genres, are of special interest when compared with similar works by Beethoven.

Krommer's son August Krommer (b Vienna, 1807; d Vienna, 27 March 1842), an insurance agent in Vienna, was for a time a violinist in the orchestra of the Burgtheater, and also appeared in public as a pianist in 1833.

WORKS

ORCHESTRAL

printed works published in Offenbach unless otherwise stated

Syms.: op.12 (1798); op.40 (1803); op.62 (1808), autograph 1807, A-Wgm; op.102 (n.d.); op.105 (?1820); no.6, autograph 1823, Wgm; no.9, 1830, Wn; 2 lost

Concs.: 3 for fl, ob, vn, op.18 (1799), opp.38–9 (1803); 2 for fl, cl, vn, opp.70, 80 (Vienna, ?1808); 2 for 2 cl, op.35 (?1802), op.91 (?1815); 2 for fl, no.1, op.30 (Vienna, 1802), op.86 (Vienna, n.d.) [arr. as Cl Conc. (n.d.)]; 2 for ob, op.37 (1803), op.52 (Vienna, 1805) [arr. as Cl Conc. (n.d.)], ed. in MAB, xxvii (1956); 1 for cl, op.36 (1803), ed. in MAB, xiii (1953); 9 for vn, no.1 (Vienna, 1802), nos.2–5, opp.41–4 (Vienna, 1803), op.61 (1808), op.64 (?1808), op.81 (Vienna, after 1826), 1 in Wgm

Wind insts: 3 partitas a 10, op.45 (Vienna, 1803); 15 marches a 10, 6 pubd (Vienna, 1803), 6 as op.31 (n.d.), 3 as op.60 (Vienna, ?1808); Harmonie-Musik a 9, i–x (Vienna, 1808–?1810); Märsche für türkische Musik, opp.97–100 (Vienna, 1818); Volkslied (Vienna, 1827); 3 partitas a 10, Wn

CHAMBER

printed works published in Vienna unless otherwise stated

Qnts: 26 for 2 vn, 2 va, vc, 3 as op.8 (Offenbach, 1797), 3 as op.11 (Offenbach, 1798), 6 as op.25 (1802–3), 2 as opp.70, 80 (Offenbach, 1817), 3 as op.88 (?1809), 3 as op.100 (Milan, ?1822), 6 as opp.106–7 (Offenbach, *c*1825); 9 for fl, vn, 2 va, vc, op.49 (1804), op.55 (1805), op.58 (?1808), op.63 (Offenbach, ?1808), op.66 (?1809), op.92 (?1823) [2 extracts, autograph, Wgm], op.101 (1820), op.104 (1821), op.109 (n.d.); 1 for cl, vn, 2 va, vc, op.95 (Offenbach, n.d.)

Str qts (pubd in groups of 3 unless otherwise stated): op.1 (Offenbach, 1793), op.3 (Offenbach, 1793), op.4 (Offenbach, 1794), op.5 (Augsburg, 1796) [1 ed. in MAB, v (1949)], op.7 (Augsburg, 1797), op.10 (Offenbach, 1798), op.16 (1798), op.18 (1800), op.19 (1801), 1 as op.23 (1802), op.24 (1802), op.26 (London, *c*1800), op.34 (1803), op.48 (1804), op.50 (1804), op.53 (1804), op.54 (1805), op.56 (1805), op.68 (?1808), op.72 (Paris, n.d.), op.74 (?1808), op.85 (?1809), op.90 (?1809), op.92 (Milan, 1816), op.103 (*c*1821); 12 valses viennoises (Paris, n.d.)

Other qts: 9 for fl, str, op.13 (Offenbach, 1798), op.17 (1799), op.59 (n.d.), op.75 (?1808), op.89 (Offenbach, ?1820), op.90 (1820), opp.93–4 (Offenbach, ?1820), op.97 (Augsburg, n.d.); 5 for cl, str, 2 as op.21 (Offenbach, 1802), op.69 (Bonn, n.d.), op.82 (Offenbach, ?1816), op.83 (Offenbach, *c*1816); 2 for bn, 2 va, vc, op.46 (1804); 2 for pf, str, op.95 (1817), B♭ (Florence, n.d.)

2–3 insts: 27 vn duos (pubd in groups of 3), op.2 (Offenbach, 1793), op.6 (Offenbach, 1796), op.20 (London, *c*1810), op.22 (?1800) [1 ed. in Hausmusik, clxxiii (Vienna, 1958)], op.33 (1802), op.35 (?1805), op.51 (?1805), op.94 (1816), op.110 (1829); 2 sets of variations, vn, db, opp.9, 14 (1797); Sonata, vn, db, op.15 (1799); 3 sonatas, vn, va, op.27 (n.d.), op.42 (1802), op.45 (Paris, n.d.); Trio, pf, va, vc, op.32 (1802); 13 pièces, 2 cl, va, op.47 (1804); 2 trios, pf, vn, vc, opp.84, 87 (?1808–9); Str Trio, op.96 (1818); 6 sonatas, vn, pf (Offenbach, n.d.)

OTHER WORKS

Vocal: 2 masses, 4vv, orch, org, C, op.108 (Offenbach, *c*1825), d (Florence, 1842); Ave Maria, 2 Pange lingua, 2 Tantum ergo, 4vv, insts, A-Wn

Arrs.: 3 pf sonatas, 4 hands (Leipzig, n.d.); 21 works, arr. 2 fl (Offenbach, n.d.); Petits airs et rondeaux, vn, pf (Offenbach, n.d.); single kbd works, incl. dances and marches, pubd Copenhagen, Mannheim, Berlin

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'Der Compositeur Franz Krommer', Notizen-Blatt der historischstatistischen Section der Kais. Königl. mährisch-schlesischen Gesellschaft zur Förderung des Ackerbaues, der Natur- und Landeskunde (1859), 37

H. Walter: Franz Krommer: sein Leben und Werk mit besonderer Berücksichtigung der Streichquartette (diss., U. of Vienna, 1932)

Z. Zouhar, ed.: František Vincenc Kramář = François Krommer: 1759–1959: vyběrová bibliografie [Selective bibliography] (Brno, 1959)

K. Padrta: František Vincenc Kramář-Krommer: studie k životopismým a slohovým otázkám [Bibliographical and stylistic questions] (Brno, 1966)

K. Padrta: 'Die Menuett-Typen im Werke des Komponisten Kramář-Krommer', SPFFBU, H2 (1967), 31–41

K. Padrta: 'Pobyt F.V. Kramare-Krommera v Mad'arsku' [Krommer's stay in Hungary], HV, iv (1967), 148–61

B. Geist: 'Nález Kramářovy 7. symfonie' [The discovery of Krommer's 7th Symphony], HV, v (1968), 139–46

D. Evans: Franz Krommer (1759–1831) and his Music for Clarinet (diss., Indiana U., 1987)

M.H. Mailman: An Interpretive Approach to Two Wind Partitas of Franz Vincent Krommer: Partita in F, op.57 (1808) and Partita in E♭, op.79 (1810) (diss., U. of North Texas, 1995)

OTHMAR WESSELY

Kronos Quartet. American string quartet. It was founded in Seattle in 1973 by David Harrington, James Shaellenberger, Tim Kilian and Walter Gray. It underwent several personnel changes – Shaellenberger being replaced in turn by Roy Lewis (1975–7) and Ella Gray (1977–8), and Kilian being succeeded by Michael Jones (1976–7) and Hank Dutt – before transferring to San Francisco in 1978. At that point John Sherba came in as second violinist and Joan Dutcher Jeanrenaud as cellist to join Harrington and Dutt. For a time the group was based at Mills College, Oakland, but since 1982 it has been resident at the University of Southern California. It made its New York début in 1984 and has toured Europe, Africa, South America and East Asia. In San Francisco it gives an annual series of concerts and has its own radio programme. The Kronos Quartet's appetite for new music has become legendary and, along with the Arditti Quartet, it played a major role in the revival of the string quartet medium in the last quarter of the 20th century. It has given over 400 premières, among them those of Hamza El Din's Escalay, Górecki's Already it is dusk, Gubaydulina's Fourth Quartet, Thomas Oboe Lee's Third Quartet, Terry Riley's Salome Dances for Peace, Sallinen's Pieces of Mosaic, Sculthorpe's 10th and 11th quartets and Irkanda IV (in the version for string quartet), John Zorn's The Dead Man and pieces by Cage, István Márta, Rihm and Kevin Volans. Morton Feldman wrote his four-hour Second Quartet and 80-minute Piano Quintet for the group, which has also had a close relationship with Philip Glass. Its enterprising recitals mix new music and 20th-century classics by composers such as Ives, Nancarrow, Schoenberg, Webern, Berg, Bartók and Shostakovich with transcriptions of jazz and rock music. Among its many recordings, two of the most compelling are George Crumb's Black Angels and Steve Reich's Different Trains, a haunting work dedicated to the ensemble.

TULLY POTTER

Kronstadt (Ger.). See BRAŞOV.

Kroó, György (b Budapest, 26 Aug 1926; d Budapest, 12 Nov 1997). Hungarian musicologist. He studied the violin with Dezső Rados at the Liszt Academy, where he also studied musicology with Szabolcsi and Bartha (1951–6); he graduated in 1956 with a dissertation on Bartók's A fából faragott királyfi ('The Wooden Prince'). In 1957 he became head of the music education section of Hungarian Radio and was guest lecturer (1960), associate professor (1967), professor of musicology (1969) and head of the musicology faculty (1973–96) of the Liszt Academy. He took the CSc in 1964 with a dissertation on the 'rescue' opera, and was awarded the Erkel Prize in 1963. In 1960 he became the Hungarian Radio representative at the annual Rostrum of Composers at UNESCO; in 1967–8 he toured the USA as a Ford scholar. In 1983 he was awarded the doctorate for his book on Wagner's Ring. He received the grand prize of the Arts Foundation (1987), and, for his critical work, the Hemingway (1994) and Széchényi prizes (1995). He was posthumously awarded Hungarian Radio's Prize for Excellence in recognition of his life's work.

As a music historian, critic and teacher, Kroó exerted a decisive influence on Hungarian musical culture for several decades. His capacity for a universal outlook and his high standards played a significant role in forming the views of his pupils and successive generations. His critical and analytical appraisals, which appeared both in journals and on Hungarian Radio, became an intrinsic part of musical life; they continue to play an important educational role. As an academic, it was mainly in the areas of 19th-century music, the works of Béla Bartók and contemporary Hungarian music that he brought to light new discoveries and connections. Aside from biographies of Berlioz, Wagner and Schumann he produced a number of large-scale studies (Liszt, Brahms) of the period. His scholarly temperament is perhaps best represented by his work on Wagner's Ring. He embraces the totality of Wagner's compositional thinking by exploring the relations between the textual source, the Germanic legends and the libretto; inspecting the tools of composition; discovering the connections between leitmotifs and presenting the character developments of Wotan and Brünnhilde. The Wagner cult in Hungary has also been nourished by Kroó's Hungarian editions of Wagner's writings and Cosima's diaries (Budapest, 1983). His studies of Bartók span the whole length of his career and include articles, books and a CD-ROM, which appeared in 1995. His other main area of research is the French rescue opera and its influence on operatic history; in his monograph on Szabolcsi (1994), he passes on the aesthetic methodology and cultural legacy which he himself also represented.

WRITINGS

'Liszt Ferenc: Magyar arcképek' [Liszt: Hungarian historical portraits], Új zenei szemle, vii/1 (1956), 9–17 with others: Mozart operái: hat tanulmány (Budapest, 1956) [incl. 'Szöketés a szerájból' [Die Entführung aus dem Serail], 25–87; 'A varázsfuvola' [Die Zauberflöte], 257–365]
Robert Schumann (Budapest, 1958)
Hector Berlioz (Budapest, 1960)
'A romantikus szonáta néhány problémája Chopin-nél és Lisztnél' [Some problems of the Romantic sonata in Chopin and Liszt], Magyar zene, i/1–6 (1960–61), 23–37; Ger. trans. in The Works of Frederick Chopin: Warsaw 1960, 319–23
'Duke Bluebeard's Castle', SMH, i (1961), 251–340
'Vázlat a forradalmi opera történetéhez' [Main features of a history of revolutionary opera], ZT, ix (1961), 243–51 [with Ger. summary]
Bartók Béla szinpadi müvei [Bartók's stage works] (Budapest, 1962)
'Monotematika és dramaturgia Bartók színpadi műveiben' [Monothematicism and dramaturgy in Bartók's stage works], ZT, x (1962), 31–53; Ger. trans. in Liszt – Bartók: Budapest 1961, 449–76
Wenn Schumann ein Tagebuch geführt hätte (Budapest, 1962)
A 'szabaditó' opera [The 'rescue' opera] (diss., Hungarian Academy of Sciences, 1964; Budapest, 1966)
Muzsikáló zenetörténet [History of music], i, iii (Budapest, 1964, 1966) [incl. discs]
Richard Wagner (Budapest, 1968)
'Bartók Concert in New York on July 2, 1944', SMH, xi (1969), 253–7
'Unrealized Plans and Ideas for Projects by Bartók', SMH, xii (1970), 11–27
A magyar zeneszerzés 25 éve [25 years of Hungarian composition] (Budapest, 1971)
Bartók kalauz [A guide to Bartók] (Budapest, 1971; Eng. trans., 1974)
A magyar zeneszerzés 30 éve [30 years of Hungarian composition] (Budapest, 1975)
Rácz Aladár (Budapest, 1979) [incl. discs]
'Licht-Alberichs Lehrjahre', SMH, xxii (1980), 11–136
Ungarische Musik gestern und heute (Budapest, 1980)
'Bartók dramaturgiai koncepciójának fejlődése a színpadi művek genezisének tükrében' [The development of Bartók's dramatic conception as reflected in the genesis of the stage works], Magyar zene, xxii (1981), 135–62
'Data on the Genesis of Duke Bluebeard's Castle', SMH, xxiii (1981), 79–123
A mikrofonnál Kroó György: új zenei újság [Kroó at the microphone: the New Journal of Music] (Budapest, 1981–98)
La musique hongroise contemporaine (Budapest, 1981)
'Bartók and Hungarian Music (1945–1981)', Bartók and Kodály Revisited: Bloomington, IN, 1982, 133–46
'Sketches to the Closing Section of Kodály's Song "The Approaching Winter"', Kodály Conference: Budapest 1982, 105–12
'New Hungarian Music', Notes, xxix (1982–3), 43–71
Heilawâc, avagy Délutáni álom a kanapén: négy tanulmány a Nibelung gyűrűjéről [Heilawâc, or Afternoon slumber on the settee: four studies on The Ring of the Nibelung] (Budapest, 1983)
'Euryanthe és Lohengrin', Magyar zene, xxvi (1985), 36–48
Az első zarándokév: az Albumtól a Suite-ig [The first Year of Pilgrimage: from the Album to the Suite] (Budapest, 1986)
'"La ligne intérieure": the Years of Transformation on the "Album d'un voyageur"', SMH, xxviii (1986), 249–60
'Rückblick aus dem Jahre 1855', Das Weimarer Schaffen Franz Liszts und seine Ausstrahlung auf die Weltmusikkultur: Weimar 1986, 79–88
'Réminişcences de "Boccanegra": Verdi és Liszt', Magyar zene, xxxi (1990), 175–86
'Années de pélerinage, première année: Versions and Variants: a Challenge to the Thematic Catalogue', SMH, xxxiv (1992), 405–26
'Music for the Stage', 'Cantata profana', The Bartók Companion, ed. M. Gillies (London, 1993), 349–84, 424–37
Szabolcsi Bence (Budapest, 1994)
'Bartók and Dukas', Hungarian Quarterly, xxxvi (1995), 42–54
'Les dits de Péter Bornemisza de György Kurtág', György Kurtág: entretiens, textes, écrits sur son oeuvre, ed. P. Albéra and others (Geneva, 1995), 99–144
'Richard Wagner: a nyitányról' [Wagner on the overture], Magyar zene, xxxv (1995), 111–16
'Johannes Brahms (1833–1897)', Muzsika, x2/11–12 (1997), 24–9, 13–16
'Die Musikdramen von Richard Wagner', Opera: Komponisten, Werke, Interpreten, ed. A. Batta (Cologne, 1999)

ZSUZSANNA DOMOKOS

Kropfgans [Kropffgans, Kropfganss], Johann (b Breslau [now Wrocław], 14 Oct 1708; *d c*1771). German lutenist and composer. He probably received his earliest lessons from his father, also called Johann (b Neustadt an der Orla, 12 Sept 1668; d after 1731), who had studied with the eminent lutenists Le Sage de Richée and S.L. Weiss and was active as a lutenist and merchant in Breslau. The younger Johann's brother Johann Gottfried (b Breslau, 17 Dec 1714) was also a lutenist and composer, and it is possible that, with such similar names, biographies of the three musicians have been somewhat confused. Johann's sister Johanna Eleonora (b Breslau, 5 Nov 1710) also played the lute.

By 1732 Kropfgans had impressed J.G. Walther with his ability to extemporize, play thoroughbass, transpose and compose for his instrument. Soon after 1735 he became, like his father, a pupil of Weiss when he joined the private Kapelle of the Saxon chief minister, Count Heinrich von Brühl. In 1737 he visited Berlin and in summer 1739 joined Weiss and Wilhelm Friedemann Bach to visit J.S. Bach in Leipzig, where, according to the report of a family member, there was 'extra-special music' during their four-week stay. After Brühl's death in 1763 Kropfgans moved to Leipzig, where he was active as a freelance musician and member of J.A. Hiller's Grosses Concert, performing regularly in concerts until 1769. It is said that 'he displayed on these occasions his fluency in accompanying recitative on the theorbo and with his instrument was much in demand for all operas and oratorios'.

Kropfgans's music for his instrument was extensive, to judge from that listed in various Breitkopf catalogues, but only a tiny proportion has survived. The extant solo works are mostly minuets or character pieces in a light, galant style, possibly intended for amateurs. The chamber music is notable for the independence of some of the cello parts. Kropfgans seems also to have made something of a speciality of arranging vocal music for the lute; three of the four sets of Hiller operetta arrangements listed in Breitkopf's catalogues were probably his work.

WORKS

SOLO LUTE

6 menuets, F, g, G, G, D, D; menuet La jardiniaire, F; menuet and double, B♭; menuet a bonne nuit, B♭; Pastorella, C; Le postillon, D; Presto, B♭; sinfonia, D: all D-Mbs 5362

3 partitas, F, G, G, LEm III.11.64

Lost, listed in Breitkopf catalogues, 1760–61: 3 sonates pour le lut, op.1 (pubd Nuremberg); arrs. of arias by Hasse, Porpora and ?Hiller

ENSEMBLE

2 concs., d, C, D-LEm III.11.64 (lute pt only)

Sonata a 3, F, Bsb Mus.ms.12165

2 divertimentos, B♭, F; conc., c; Sonatine pour la divertissement, D, lute, vn, vc/lute, hpd (attrib. 'Pichler' in B-Br II.4089); Trietto, C (lute pt only); trio, B♭ (lute pt only); 2 trios, C, G: all Br II.4088

Lost, listed in Breitkopf catalogues, 1760–61: 6 duets, 2 lutes; qt, lute, fl, vn, vc; 32 trios, lute, vn/fl, vc

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; GerberL; WaltherML

E.G. Baron: Historisch-theoretische und practische Untersuchung des Instruments der Lauten (Nuremberg, 1727/R; Eng. trans., 1976)

J.A. Hiller: Lebensbeschreibung berühmter Musikgelehrten und Tonkünstler neurer Zeit, i (Leipzig, 1784), 70

C.J.A. Hoffman: Die Tonkünstler Schlesiens (Breslau, 1830), 269

T. Crawford: 'Haydn's Music for Lute', Le luth et sa musique II: Tours 1980, 69–85

T. Crawford: 'Contemporary Lute Arrangements of Hasse's Vocal and Instrumental Music', Johann Adolf Hasse und Polen: Warsaw 1993, 73–95

TIM CRAWFORD

Kropfreiter, Augustinus Franz (b Hargelsberg, nr St Florian, 9 Sept 1936). Austrian composer and organist. After schooling in Linz he entered the Augustinian monastery of St Florian as a choirman. There he had his first tuition in music theory, with Johann Krichbaum; he continued his studies with Eder at the Bruckner-Konservatorium in Linz (1954–5) and at the Vienna Musikhochschule (1956–60), where he studied composition with Tittel and the organ with Walter Pach. He then returned to St Florian as organist; in 1965 he took over the direction of the monastery choir and the instruction of the boys' choir. He has travelled extensively in western Europe as organist and improviser and has broadcast and made recordings on the Bruckner organ at St Florian.

Kropfreiter's earliest published compositions show the influence of Hindemithian counterpoint on the one hand and the harmonic colouring of Martin and Alain on the other; polyphonic textures and, to a large extent, polytonality have continued to characterize his style. While vocal and organ works dominate his output, his increasing involvement with orchestral and chamber music composition has brought with it a broadening of his music's expressive range.

WORKS

(selective list)

Orch: Hpd Conc., 1960; Gui Conc., 1965; Sinfonia, str, 1975; Sinfonia concertante, wind qnt, str, 1979; Conc., cl, chbr orch, 1982; Conc., org, orch, 1984; Conc., str, 1984; Sym. no.1, 1985; Sinfonia, str, 1985; Sym. no.2, 1990; Sym. no.3, 1994–5; Metamorphosen über ein Thema von Anton Bruckner, 1995–6

Vocal: Geistliche Gesänge, S, org, 1961, and Bar, org, 1963; In memoriam (R.M. Rilke), S, fl, va, vc, 1963; Altdorfer-Passion, A, Bar, 11 insts, 1965; Vom Baum des Lebens (H. Hesse), A, chbr orch, 1974; Kirchenliedsätze, 3/4 pt mixed chorus, 1978; Severin (orat), solo vv, chorus, org, orch, 1980–81; Missa choralis 'Orbis factor', mixed chorus, opt. congregation, org, 1982; Galgenlieder (C. Morgenstern), Bar, pf, 1983; Deutsche Messe, 3 pt chorus of high vv, org, 1985; Stabat Mater, mixed chorus, 1986; Grazer Messe, chorus, 6 brass, org, 1987; Missa 'Cantores Dei', chorus, 6 brass, 1988; Brixener Dom-Festmesse, chorus, org, 1992; Soliloquia (St Augustinus), Bar, chorus, org, orch, 1993; Ein Haus aus Stein (D. Dunkl), 3 songs, S, pf, 1994

Chbr and solo inst: Conc. responsoriale, hpd, org, 1966; Wind Qnt, 1968; 5 Aphorismen, cl, pf, 1970; Konzertante Musik, org, 10 wind, 1974; Divertimento I, wind qnt, 1977; Divertimento II, wind qt, 1980; Sonata, gui, 1983; Sonata, cl, pf, 1986; Duo concertante, cl, vc, 1988; Trio, cl, vc, pf, 1989; Meditation mit Variationen, 11 brass, 1989; Torrö, wind octet, 1994

Org: Dreifaltigkeits-Triptychon, 1959; Introduction and Passacaglia, 1961; Sonatas, 1961; Der grimmig Tod mit seinem Pfeil, 1961; Sonata, 1967; Partita on Es kommt ein Schiff geladen, 1971; Signum, 1976; In dich hab'ich gehoffet, Herr, 1981; Marienkroner Magnificat, 1987; Fanal, 1992

Principal publisher: Doblinger, Breitkopf und Härtel

BIBLIOGRAPHY

LZMÖ [incl. fuller work-list and bibliography]

M. Ank: 'Der Orgelstil des Augustin Franz Kropfreiter', Music und Kirche, lii (1982), 74–82

H. Goertz: 'Kropfreiter, Augustinus Franz', Beiträge '94: Österreichische Komponisten unserer Zeit (Kässel, 1994), 82–3

HANS-HUBERT SCHÖNZELER/R

Kropstein, Nikolaus (b Zwickau, *c*1492; d Schneeberg, 1562). German pastor and composer. He studied in Leipzig from 1512 (but was sent down) and in Wittenberg, where he matriculated on 6 May 1513. From 1527 he was a Lutheran priest in Burgstein, near Plauen, from 1534 a deacon at St Katharinen, Zwickau, and from 1539 a priest in Geyer. In 1554 he became archdeacon in Schneeberg, where he remained until his death.

With Thomas Popel, Valentin Rab and others, Kropstein belongs to the number of early Protestant composers in the Erzgebirge whose religious attitude and musical activities had received their impetus from Wittenberg, the centre of the Lutheran Reformation. He probably maintained connections with Georg Rhau and Wittenberg University established in his student days, for his 13 works appear in Wittenberg sources (RISM 1542[12]; D-Dl 1/D/3; Z 73; H-BA 22–3). The texts and dates of the compositions suggest that some were intended as comments on the religious and political events of the period 1547–50: the Schmalkalden war, Charles V's antagonism towards Protestantism, and the Augsburg and Leipzig Interims. (Two pieces are in modern editions: one in K. Ameln and C. Mahrenholz, Handbuch der deutschen evangelischen Kirchenmusik, i/2, Göttingen, 1942; one in EDM, 1st ser., xxi, 1942/R.)

Few works by Kropstein survive and most that do are mere fragments. His motet Nimm von uns Herr, on the cantus firmus Aufer a nobis, is technically accomplished, alternating full-voice sections with passages for few voices, and using imitation, declamation and rhetorical figures in a mainly polyphonic texture. Although there are no German psalm motets by Kropstein, his other German works place him close to Stoltzer's followers.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Albrecht: 'Zwei Quellen zur deutschen Musikgeschichte der Reformationszeit', Mf, i (1948), 242–85
W. Dehnhard: Die deutsche Psalmmotette in der Reformationszeit (Wiesbaden, 1971)
W. Steude: Die Musiksammelhandschriften des 16. und 17. Jahrhunderts in der Sächsischen Landesbibliothek zu Dresden (Wilhelmshaven, 1974)
W. Steude: Untersuchungen zur mitteldeutschen Musiküberlieferung und Musikpflege im 16. Jahrhundert (Leipzig, 1978)

WOLFRAM STEUDE

Kroshner, Mikhail Yefimovich (b Kiev, 1900; d Minsk, 1942). Belarusian composer. Kroshner studied the piano at colleges in Kiev, Moscow and Sverdlovsk; in 1931 he began studying composition with Zolotaryov in Sverdlovsk, and in 1933 he moved to Minsk with his teacher, graduating in 1937 from the conservatory there. From 1933 to 1938 he was an accompanist at the Belarusian Theatre of Opera and Ballet.

Kroshner's career as a composer is closely associated with Belarus. He made many arrangements of Belarusian folk music, and wrote dance suites, and sets of variations for piano and for orchestra based on these sources. His work in the theatre and his practical knowledge of the stage resulted in Kroshner's most significant work – the ballet Solovey ('The Nightingale'), after the tale by Zmitrok Byadulya, 1939. The tragic theme of the love between the serf artists Simon (the nightingale) and Zosya is reflected in lyrical music which, while possessing a picturesque quality (the folk colouring is reflected in the orchestra's imitation of the fife and cimbalom), has a well-developed ethnographic character. Particularly captivating is the popular character of the music of the well-known songs 'Oy, palïn moy, palïnochek', 'Perapyolachka', 'Lyavonikha', 'Pol'ka-Yanka', 'Bul'ba' and a number of Polish dances. The ballet was staged successfully in Minsk, Moscow and Odessa in 1939 and 1940. The lyrical aspects of Kroshner's style are evident in his romances set to words by Pushkin, Yanka Kupala and Yakub Kolos. Kroshner also enjoyed working on folksong arrangements of the eastern European Jews (ashkenazim); his arrangements of Jewish songs of the 18th and 19th centuries were set out in the form of the romance-scena. His sensitivity to the modal character of the songs and the decorative ornamentation in the texture bring Kroshner's arrangements close to the style of the composers of the St Petersburg school of the early 20th century. Kroshner was killed in the Minsk ghetto in 1942 and the majority of his papers were destroyed.

WORKS

Stage: Solovey [The Nightingale] (ballet, after Z. Byadulya), 1939
Inst: Tanseval'naya syuita [Dance Suite], orch; Kaprichchio [Caprice], vn, pf; Variatsii na belorusskuyu temu [Variations on a Belarusian Theme], pf Choral: Utoplennitsa [The Drowned Girl] (A.S. Pushkin), cant., 1930s; choruses to words by V. Lebedev-Kumach, A. Surkov and N. Korolyova, 1935–9
Songs (for 1v, pf): 3 yevreyskiye pesni (starogo bïta) [3 Jewish Songs (of the Old Way of Life)], 1939; Moyey lyubimoy [To my Favourite] (Ya. Kolos); Sosna [The Pine] (Ya. Kupala); Sozhzhonnoye pis'mo [The Burnt Letter] (Pushkin); Tsvetok [A Flower] (Pushkin)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Aladov: 'Muzïka belorusskoy respubliki' [The music of the Belarusian republic], SovM (1939), nos.9–10, pp.62–4
A. Livshits: 'Pervïy belorusskiy balet 'Solovey' M. Kroshnera' [The first Belarusian ballet: 'The Nightingale' by Kroshner], SovM (1939), no.11, pp.75–80
G. Tsitovich and I. Nisnevich, eds.: Muzïka BSSR (Moscow, 1958), 141
Yu. Churko: 'Sozdaniye pervogo natsional'nogo spektaklya v belorusskom baletnom teatre' [The creation of the first national production in the Belarusian ballet theatre], Vestsi AN BSSR (1963), no.2, pp.96–105
L. Mezentseva: 'Mikhail Kroshner', Nedopetïye pesni (Moscow, 1975), 3
D. Zhuravlyov: 'Kroshner, M. Ye', Kompozitorï sovetskoy Belarusi (Minsk, 1966, 2/1978)
D. Zhuravlyov: 'Kroshner, M. Ye', Belorusskaya èntsiklopediya literaturï i iskusstva (Minsk, 1986)

TAISIYA SHCHERBAKOVA

Kross, Siegfried (b Wuppertal, 24 Aug 1930). German musicologist. He studied musicology with Gurlitt at Freiburg University and with Schmidt-Görg at Bonn University. After working at the Beethoven Archiv (1954), he took the doctorate at Bonn University in 1957 with a dissertation on Brahms's choral works. Later he was an assistant of the musicology institute there (1960–66), completing his Habilitation in 1966 with a thesis on Telemann's instrumental concertos; he was then appointed lecturer (1967) and professor (1970). He was made editor of the collected edition Dokumentation zur Geschichte des deutschen Liedes in 1973. He retired in 1995. His research has been mainly concerned with music of the 18th and 19th centuries, especially that of Brahms, and the music history of the lower Rhine.

WRITINGS

Die Chorwerke von Johannes Brahms (diss., U. of Bonn, 1957; Berlin, 1958, 2/1963; Eng. version, American Choral Review, xxv/4 (1983) [whole issue])
Das Instrumentalkonzert bei Georg Philipp Telemann (Habilitationsschrift, U. of Bonn, 1966; Tutzing, 1969)
ed., with H. Schmidt: Colloquium amicorum: Joseph Schmidt-Görg zum 70. Geburtstag (Bonn, 1967) [incl. 'Musikalische Strukturen als literarische Form: zu Thomas Manns Faustus-Roman', 217–27]
'Telemann und die Aufklärung', Musicae scientiae collectanea: Festschrift Karl Gustav Fellerer, ed. H. Hüschen (Cologne, 1973), 284–96
'Brahms, der unromantische Romantiker', Hamburger Brahms-Studien, i (1974), 25–43
ed.: Briefe und Notizen Robert und Clara Schumanns (Bonn, 1978, 2/1982)
'Aus der Frühgeschichte von Schumanns Neue Zeitschrift für Musik', Mf, xxxiv (1981), 423–45
'Brahms und Schumann', Brahms-Studien, iv (1981), 7–44
Brahms-Bibliographie (Tutzing, 1983)
'Brahms the Symphonist', Brahms Studies, ed. R. Pascall (Cambridge, 1983), 65–89 [Ger. orig., Brahms-Studien, v, 1983, 65–89]
'Mattheson und Gottsched', New Mattheson Studies, ed. G. Buelow and H.J. Marx (Cambridge, 1983), 327–44
Geschichte des deutschen Liedes (Darmstadt, 1989)
ed.: Musikalische Rheinromantik (Kassel, 1989)
'Thematic Structure and Formal Processes in Brahms's Sonata Movements', Brahms Studies: Analytical and Historical Perspectives, ed. G. Bozard (Oxford, 1990), 423–43
ed.: Probleme der symphonischen Tradition im 19. Jahrhundert (Tutzing, 1990) [incl. 'Das "Zweite Zeitalter der Symphonie": Ideologie und Realität', 11–36]
Johannes Brahms, i–ii (Bonn, 1997)

EDITIONS

Ludwig van Beethoven: Werke: neue Ausgabe sämtlicher Werke, vii/5: Variationen für Klavier (Munich, 1961); iv/1: Klavierquintett und Klavierquartette (Munich, 1964)

Georg Philipp Telemann: Musikalische Werke, xxiii: Zwölf Violinkonzerte (Kassel, 1973); xxvi: Konzerte für mehrere Instrumente (Kassel, 1989)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Emans and M. Wendt, eds.: Beiträge zur Geschichte des Konzerts: Festschrift Siegfried Kross zum 60. Geburtstag (Bonn, 1990) [incl. list of pubns, 444–9]

WOLFRAM STEINBECK

Kroupalon [kroupezion] (Gk., pl. kroupala; kroupezai). See SCABELLUM.

Krov [Krob, Krow, Kroff], Josef Theodor (b Nové Strašecí, 19 Dec 1797; d Draguignan, nr Nice, 1 March 1859). Bohemian singer, teacher and composer. He was educated at the Piarist Gymnasium in Prague and studied philosophy and law; at the same time he studied the cello and singing and became a theory pupil of Tomášek. In 1823–4 he took part in several early Czech operas given by a circle of patriots in Prague, and later he became a professional singer. He worked in Budapest, Munich and Stuttgart. In 1831 he moved to Mainz, but was soon forced into exile because of his nationalist sympathies. He therefore moved to Amsterdam, and in 1835 to London where he established himself as a popular teacher among the aristocracy. Poor health forced him into early retirement, and he spent the last year of his life in Switzerland and southern France.

Krov's compositional output almost exclusively comprises songs and choruses, cast in the prevailing popular style of the early 19th century. He is known particularly for his drinking-song Těšme se blahou nadějí ('Blissfully hoping we will enjoy'). Written between 1823 and 1825 to a text by Václav Hanka, the song grew to take on patriotic connotations; Krov's authorship fell into oblivion in his own country and for some time the tune was taken for an early Hussite hymn. As such it was anonymously printed and also transcribed for piano by Liszt. Meanwhile the song had been published by Schott (Mainz, 1831) under Krov's name and with additional German words by the pseudonymous Workiński as Polen wird für ewig Polen; in this form it achieved immense popularity, despite suppression by the state censor. It was extensively quoted by Balfe in The Bohemian Girl and František Škroup in his incidental music to J.J. Kolár's nationalist play Žižková smrt ['Žižka's death'].

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS

E. Meliš: 'Josef Theodor Krov', Dalibor, ii (1859), 209–11, 217–18, 225–6

B. Štědroň: Husitské náměty v české a světové hudbě [Hussite melodies in Czech and world music] (Prague, 1953)

GRACIAN ČERNUŠAK/KARL STAPLETON

Kroyer, Theodor (b Munich, 9 Sept 1873; d Wiesbaden, 12 Jan 1945). German musicologist. He initially studied theology, but changed to music, attending both the university and academy in Munich; his teachers were Sandberger and Rheinberger. After taking the doctorate at Munich in 1897 with a dissertation on chromaticism in the Italian madrigal, he became music critic to the Munich Allgemeine Zeitung, a post he held until 1907. In 1902 he completed his Habilitation at Munich with a work on Senfl and became reader in 1907. In 1920 he succeeded Hermann Abert as professor at Heidelberg, moving to Leipzig as professor in 1923, where he founded and edited Publikationen älterer Musik which was intended as a supplement to Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst. He also did valuable work in building up the Leipzig music department and in 1926 he arranged the acquisition by Leipzig of the musical instruments from the Heyer collection in Cologne. In 1932 he was appointed to the newly created chair of musicology at Cologne, where he remained until his retirement in 1938.

Kroyer's work was largely concerned with 16th-century vocal music: of his many writings in the field, his work on the Italian madrigal, on Senfl and Aichinger, and his critical editions of their music was of importance. At the same time he was fully aware of contemporary trends in music and as a music critic in Munich was one of the earliest to recognize the importance of Reger; his books on his teacher, Rheinberger (1916), and on his contemporary, Walter Courvoisier (1929), remain definitive. Kroyer's papers are housed in the manuscript division of the Bayerische Staatsbibliothek.

WRITINGS

Die Anfänge der Chromatik im Italienischen Madrigal des XVI. Jahrhunderts (diss., U. of Munich, 1897; enlarged Leipzig, 1902/R)

Ludwig Senfl und sein Motettenstil (Habilitationsschrift, U. of Munich; Munich, 1902)

'Dialog und Echo in der alten Chormusik', JbMP 1909, 13–32

'Zum Akzidentienproblem im Ausgang des 16. Jahrh.', IMusSCR III: Vienna 1909, 112–24

Joseph Rheinberger (Regensburg and Rome, 1916/R)

'A capella oder Conserto?', Festschrift Hermann Kretzschmar (Leipzig, 1918), 65–73

'Die Musica speculativa des Magister Erasmus Heritius', Festschrift zum 50. Geburtstag Adolf Sandberger (Munich, 1918), 65–120

'Die circumpolare Oper: zur Wagnergeschichte', JbMP 1919, 16–33

'Neue Musik', Literarischer Handweiser, lvi (1920), 161–6

'Die threnodische Bedeutung der Quart in der Mensuralmusik', Musikwissenschaftlicher Kongress: Basle 1924, 231–42

'Das Orgelbuch Cod. M153 der Münchner Universitätsbibliothek', Deutsche Musikgesellschaft: Kongress I: Leipzig 1925, 339–40

'Zur Aufführungspraxis', Gedenkboek aangeboden an Dr. D.F. Scheurleer (The Hague, 1925), 191–200

'Gregor Aichinger als Politiker', Festschrift Peter Wagner, ed. K. Weinmann (Leipzig, 1926/R), 128–32

'Beethoven in seinen Symphonien', Beethoven–Almanach der Deutschen Musikbücherei auf das Jahr 1927, ed. G. Bosse (Regensburg, 1927), 283–94

'Zwischen Renaissance und Barock', JbMP 1927, 45–54

Walter Courvoisier (Munich, 1929)

'Die Wiedererweckung des historischen Klangbildes in der musikalischen Denkmalpraxis', Mitteilungen der Internationalen Gesellschaft für Musikwissenschaft, ii (1930), 61–4, 79–83

'Zur Chiavetten-Frage', Studien zur Musikgeschichte: Festschrift für Guido Adler (Vienna, 1930/R), 107–15; see also ZMw, xiii (1930–31), 494–500

'Die authentische Bruckner-Biographie', ZfM, Jg.99 (1932), 864–7

'Die barocke Anabasis', ZfM, Jg.100 (1933), 899–905

'Das A-capella-Ideal', AcM, vi (1934), 152–69

'Von der Musica reservata des 16. Jahrhunderts', Festschrift Heinrich Wölfflin zum siebzigsten Geburtstage (Dresden, 1935), 127–44

EDITIONS

with A. Thürlings: Ludwig Senfl: Werke: I. Teil, DTB, v, Jg.iii/2 (1903)

Gregor Aichinger: Ausgewählte Werke, DTB, xviii, Jg.x/1 (1909)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Zenck, H. Schultz and W. Gerstenberg, eds.: Theodor Kroyer: Festschrift (Regensburg, 1933) [incl. biographical information, 5–7]

H. Zenck: 'Theodor Kroyer (1873–1945)', Mf, i (1948), 81–91

W. Gerstenberg: 'Kroyer, Theodor', Rheinische Musiker, ii, ed. K.G. Fellerer (Cologne, 1962) [incl. extensive list of writings]

HUGH COBBE/PAMELA M. POTTER

Krstić, Petar (b Belgrade, 18 Feb/2 March 1877; d Belgrade, 21 Jan 1957). Serbian composer. He studied composition with Robert Fuchs and musicology with Guido Adler in Vienna before working as a conductor of opera and theatre music. He was director of both the Serbian music school (1914–21) and the Stanković music school (1921–4) in Belgrade, conductor of the Stanković Music Society's choir and orchestra and head of Radio Belgrade's music department; from 1922 he was also editor of Muzički glasnik ('Musical Herald').

Most of his compositions show the influence of urban folk music that includes oriental elements; this is particularly true of the incidental music. His music drama Zulumćar ('The Hooligan' 1927), is a Romantic, lyric work with distinct solo and ensemble numbers. Of his remaining works, the choruses without folk melodies – the most accomplished of his choruses – contain psychological references to the text, a skilful declamatory style and a neo-Romantic type of harmony; examples are Devojka i vetar ('The Girl and the Wind') and Od vrbe svirala ('A Pipe Made of Willow'). As a writer on music he contributed to the journals Muzički glasnik and Pravda.

WORKS

Ops: Zulumćar [The Hooligan] (musical drama, 3, after S. Ćorović), 1927; Ženidba Janković Stojana [The Marriage of Janković Stojan] (3), 1948

Incid music: On [He], 1903; Koštana, 1907; Miloš i Vukosava, 1908; U dobri čas hajduci [Just in Time, Brigand], 1908; Kosovska tragedija [The Kosovo Tragedy], 1912; Snežana i 7 patuljaka [Snow White and the 7 Dwarfs], 1912; Kneginja Maja [Princess Maja], 1923

Orch: Suite, str, 1901; Scherzo, d, 1902; Patetična uvertira [Pathetic Ov.], 1903; 3 srpske igre [3 Serbian Dances], 1904; Na Liparu [On Lipar], ov., 1905

Choral: Seljančice [Peasant Songs]; Sumoran dân [A Sombre Day]; Devojka i vetar [The Girl and the Wind]; Od vrbe svirala [A Pipe Made of Willow]; Grakni gavrane [The Croak]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Peričić: Muzički stvaraoci u Srbjii [Musical creators in Serbia] (Belgrade, 1969)

S. Đurić-Klajn: A Survey of Serbian Music Through the Ages (Belgrade, 1972)

ROKSANDA PEJOVIĆ

Kruchinina, Al'bina Nikandrovna (b Adygalau, Khabarovsk, 12 July 1943). Russian musicologist. She studied at Leningrad Conservatory (1965–71, then undertook postgraduate studies 1972–5), specializing in the history of ancient Russian music with Maksim Viktorovich Brazhnikov and was also influenced by Yekaterina Aleksandrovna Ruch'evskaya and Sergey Nikolayevich Bogoyavlensky. She received the Kandidat degree with a dissertation on Russian music theory in 1980. Her career began at the Saltïkov-Shchedrin State Public Library (now the National Library of Russia) as keeper of music manuscripts in the department of manuscripts and rare books (1975–80). From 1980 she taught at Leningrad Conservatory and became pro-rector of scientific research (1983–7). In 1992 she became head of department of music ethnography and ancient Russian vocal art.

Her main area of study focusses on the history, theory and poetics of ancient Russian vocal art, deciphering monodic notation, and the analysis of the traditions of employing old Russian melody types among modern composers.

WRITINGS

with B.A. Sindin: 'Pervoye posobiye po muzïkal'noy kompozitsii' [The first handbook on musical composition], Pamyatniki kul'turï: novïye otkrïtiya (Leningrad, 1977), 298–302

'Pevcheskiye rukopisi biblioteki Novgorodskogo Sofiyskogo sobora' [The singers' manuscripts in the library of the Sofiya Cathedral in Novgorod], Problemï istochnikovedcheskogo izucheniya rukopisnïkh i staropechatnïkh istochnikov (Leningrad, 1979), 120–31

'O semiyografii popevok znamennogo raspeva' [On the signs in the popevka used in znamennïy chant], Voprosï istorii i teorii drevnerusskoy muzïki (Leningrad, 1979), 148–59

Popevka v russkoy muzïkal'noy teorii XVII veka [The popevka in Russian music theory of the 17th century] (diss., Leningrad Conservatory, 1979)

ed., with A.S. Belonenko: Problemï istorii i teorii drevnerusskoy muzïki [Problems of the history and theory of Old Russian music] (Leningrad, 1979)

'Istoriko-patrioticheskaya traditsiya otechestvennoy khorovoy muzïki' [The historical and patriotic tradition of Russian choral music], Problemï istorii i teorii russkoy khorovoy muzïki (Leningrad, 1984), 5–15

'O tekstologicheskom izuchenii pamyatnikov drevnerusskogo pevcheskogo iskusstva' [On the textological study of monuments of the old Russian art of singing], Musica antiqua: Folla musica, iii/4 (1985), 5–20

ed., with S.P. Kravchenko: Problemï deshifrovki drevnerussikh notatsiy [The problems of transcribing Old Russian notation] (Leningrad, 1987)

'Drevnerusskiye klyuchi k tvorchestvu Sviridova' [The old Russian keys to Sviridov's creative work], Muzïkal'nïy mir Sviridova [Sviridov's musical world], ed. A. Belonenko (Moscow, 1990), 124–33

'O muzïkal'noy poètike pesnopeniy znamennogo rospeva: itogi izucheniya 'China noshchi Svyatogo Pyatka' [On the musical poetics of the canticles in znamennïy chant: the results of studying 'The night services of Holy Friday'], Pevcheskoye iskusstvo pravoslavnogo mira [The art of singing in the Orthodox world] (Moscow, 1992), 130–42

Rukopisnïye knigi sobraniya M.P. Pogodina: katalog [The manuscript books in the collection of M.P. Pogodin: A catalogue] (Leningrad, 1992)

'O vzaimodeystvii slova i rospeva v drevnerusskom pesnopenii' [On the interaction of the word and the chant in old Russian chanting], Tsennostnïy mir russkoy kul'turï (St Petersburg, 1995), 104–27

'Pesnopeniya v chest' prepodobnogo Kirilla v rukopisnoy traditsii Kirillo-Belozerskogo monastïrya' [Canticles in honour of St Kirill in the manuscript tradition of the Kirillo-Belozerskiy Monastery], Peterburgskiy muzïkal'nïy arkhiv, i (1997), 60–67

IRINA FEDOTOVNA BEZUGLOVA

Krueger, Felix (b Posen [now Poznań], 10 Aug 1874; d Basle, 25 Feb 1948). German psychologist. He studied under Theodor Lipps and Hans Cornelius in Munich, where he took the doctorate in 1897 with a dissertation on Den Begriff des absolut Wertvollen. He then became an assistant at the Physiological Institute in Kiel and in 1903 completed the Habilitation under Wilhelm Wundt at Leipzig with a work on the consciousness of consonance; three years later he went to Buenos Aires, where he was active in organizing psychological studies (1906–8). After a short stay in Leipzig, he was appointed lecturer in Halle (1910) and then taught at Columbia University (1912–13). In 1917 he succeeded Wundt as lecturer in Leipzig, where he founded the 'Second Leipzig School' of psychologists. Although named president of Leipzig University in 1935, he was forced to retire on political grounds three years later. In 1945 he emigrated to Basle, where he remained until his death. His early works dealt with psychology and musicology; he did outstanding work on the psychology of sound and phonetics, especially in developing his much-discussed theory of consonances. His influence on the psychology of hearing and music gained wide recognition after his death.

WRITINGS

'Beobachtungen an Zweiklängen', Philosophische Studien, xvii (1900), 307–79, 568–664

'Über Konsonanz und Dissonanz', Congrès international de psychologie: Paris 1900, 455–6

'Zur Theorie der Combinationstöne', Philosophische Studien, xviii (1901), 185–216
Das Bewusstsein der Konsonanz (Habilitationsschrift, U. of Kiel, 1903; Leipzig, 1903)
'Die Theorie der Konsonanz', Psychologische Studien, i (1905–6), 305–87; ii (1906–7), 205–55; iv (1908–9), 201–82; v (1909–10), 274–411
'Mitbewegungen beim Singen, Sprechen und Hören', ZIMG, xi (1909–10), 180–91, 205
'Consonance and Dissonance', Journal of Philosophy, Psychology and Scientific Method, x (1913), 158–60
Über Entwicklungspsychologie, ihre sachliche und geschichtliche Notwendigkeit (Leipzig, 1915)
Das Wesen der Gefühle (Leipzig, 1928, 5/1937); Eng. trans. in Feelings and Emotions [Wittenberg 1927], ed. M.L. Reymert (Worcester, MA, 1928/R), 58–88
Die Lehre von dem Ganzen: Seele, Gemeinschaft und das Gottliche (Berne, 1948)
ed. E. Heuss: Zur Philosophie und Psychologie der Ganzheit: Schriften aus den Jahren 1918–1940 (Berlin, 1953) [collection of his most important writings, 1918–40]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Stumpf: 'Differenztöne und Konsonanz', Zeitschrift für Psychologie, no.39 (1905), 269–83; no.59 (1911), 161–75
R. Odebrecht: Gefühl und Ganzheit: der Ideengehalt der Psychologie Felix Kruegers (Berlin, 1929)
A. Wellek: 'Die Aufspaltung der "Tonhöhe" in der Hornbostelschen Gehörpsychologie und die Konsonanztheorien von Hornbostel und Krueger', ZMw, xvi (1934), 481–96, 537
O. Buss: Die Ganzheitspsychologie Felix Kruegers (Munich, 1934)
A. Wellek: Das Problem des seelischen Seins: die Strukturtheorie Felix Kruegers, Deutung und Kritik (Leipzig, 1941, 2/1953)
A. Wellek: Die Wiederherstellung der Seelenwissenschaft im Lebenswerk Felix Kruegers (Hamburg, 1950, 2/1968)
H. Husmann: Vom Wesen der Konsonanz (Heidelberg, 1953)
A. Wellek: 'Krueger, Felix', Encyclopedia of Philosophy, ed. P. Edwards (New York,1967/R)

ALFRED GRANT GOODMAN

Krug, Arnold (b Hamburg, 16 Oct 1849; d Hamburg, 4 Aug 1904). German pianist, conductor and composer. As a child he studied music first with his father, Diederich Krug, and then with Cornelius Gurlitt, an organist, choir director and composer in Altona. He entered the Leipzig Conservatory in 1868 and in the following year was awarded the Mozart Scholarship. He completed his piano studies with Reinecke and in Berlin with Eduard Frank; there he also studied composition with Friedrich Kiel. At the age of 23 he became a piano teacher at the Stern Conservatory in Berlin, and in 1877–8 travelled as a Meyerbeer Scholar in Italy and France. He subsequently lived in Hamburg as a music teacher (from 1885 at the Conservatory), as a choir director and as conductor of the Altona Singakademie and the Hamburg Liedertafel.

Being in contact with the Classical–Romantic tradition and under the spell of the works of Brahms, Krug composed vocal music of all genres except opera, mostly with chorus or for chorus a cappella. He was also a versatile instrumental composer; with his String Sextet op.68 he participated in the attempt by the violin maker Alfred Stelzner to enrich the string family with a violotta, an instrument whose register lay between the viola and the cello, and a cellone, an instrument between the cello and the double bass.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (K. Stephenson) [with complete list of works]
J. Sittard: Geschichte des Musik- und Concertwesens in Hamburg (Altona and Leipzig, 1890/R)
K. Stephenson: Hundert Jahre Philharmonische Gesellschaft in Hamburg (Hamburg, 1928)

KURT STEPHENSON

Krug, Diederich (b Hamburg, 25 May 1821; d Hamburg, 7 April 1880). German pianist and composer, father of Arnold Krug. He was a pupil of the renowned Hamburg piano teacher Jakob Schmitt. He became well known in Germany and England primarily through his piano pieces, about 350 in number, and could adjust his style to the taste and virtuosity of the diverse circles of amateurs who played his works. Among his nine didactic works for piano, mostly for beginners, the Schule der Technik op.75 is the most noteworthy.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Sittard: Geschichte des Musik- und Concertwesens in Hamburg (Altona and Leipzig, 1890/R)
K. Stephenson: Hundert Jahre Philharmonische Gesellschaft in Hamburg (Hamburg, 1928)

KURT STEPHENSON

Krüger, Eduard (b Lüneburg, 9 Dec 1807; d Göttingen, 8 Nov 1885). German writer on music. After attending the University of Berlin, where he heard Hegel lecture on aesthetics, he studied at the University of Göttingen, graduating in 1830 with a dissertation on Greek music in Pindar's time. From 1833 until 1851 he taught at the Gymnasium in Emden, where he conducted the local choral society in works by Haydn and, especially, Handel. After beginning an enthusiastic correspondence with Schumann in 1838, Krüger quickly became a respected contributor to the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik with essays on early music, sacred music, music criticism and aesthetics. He dedicated his Piano Quartet of 1847 to Schumann and reviewed several of Schumann's works, but the friendship ended after Krüger's unfavourable review of Genoveva in 1851. Unsympathetic to the aims of the New German School, he stopped contributing to the journal after 1853.

In 1851 Krüger was appointed chief school inspector for East Friesland and moved to Aurich; during his time there he published his Evangelisches Choralbuch für Kirche, Schule und Haus. In 1859 he moved to Göttingen, where he worked at the university as a librarian and choir director before becoming associate professor in the faculty of philosophy, where he lectured on music history, in 1862. He contributed to the Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung during its revival, 1866–82. Krüger remained alert to new developments throughout his life: in Musikalische Briefe aus der neuesten Zeit (1870) Brahms's German Requiem is discussed in the form of letters between 'Florestan' and 'Eusebius'. In 1873 he sponsored, with the philosopher Hermann Lotze, his colleague at Göttingen, Hugo Riemann's dissertation Über das musikalische Hören, which had been rejected at the University of Leipzig. Three years later he founded with Herold and Schöberlein, also at Göttingen, the liturgical music journal Siona.

Krüger was an iconoclast who, during an era defined by partisan debates on music, never aligned himself with any single viewpoint. He disputed Hegel's views on music; occasionally judged the music of Mendelssohn and Schumann severely; had no sympathy with Wagnerian music aesthetics, and rejected Hanslick's formalist arguments (Hanslick had attacked Krüger in Vom Musikalisch-Schönen, 1854). He considered himself part of a 'critical-historical', rather than an artistically creative, era.

WRITINGS

De musicis graecorum organis circa Pindari tempora florentibus (diss., U. of Göttingen, 1830)

Grundriss der Metrik antiker und moderner Sprachen (Emden, 1838)
'Laien, Dilettanten, Künstler', NZM, xi (1839), 33ff
'Betrachtungen über Kritik u. Philosophie der Kunst', NZM, xiv (1841), 131ff
'Hegel's Philosophie der Musik', NZM, xvii (1842), 25ff
'Die Aesthetik der Tonkunst nach Kahlert', NZM, xxv (1846), 171ff
'Eine Aufführung des Messias in Emden', AMZ, xlviii (1846), 778–80 [under pseud. Dr. P.]
'Die Wiederbelebung des evangelischen Kirchengesanges', AMZ, xlviii (1846), 569–75, 585–90
Beiträge für Leben und Wissenschaft der Tonkunst (Leipzig, 1847)
'Beziehungen zwischen Kunst und Politik', AMZ, l (1848), 401–5, 481–8, 842–3
'Über den Zusammenhang zwischen Musik und Politik', AMZ, l (1848), 538–42 [under pseud. F. Schnell]
'Eindruck und Ausdruck', AMZ, l (1848), 817–20
'Judenthümliches', NZM, xxxiv (1850), 145–7
Evangelisches Choralbuch für Kirche, Schule und Haus (Aurich, 1855)
System der Tonkunst (Leipzig, 1866)
Musikalische Briefe aus der neuesten Zeit (Münster,1870)
Articles in Neue Berliner Musikzeitung (1849–), reviews in NZM (1839–53), AMZ (1845–82),Göttingischer Gelehrter Anzeiger (1861–77)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Nauenburg: 'Kritische Paraphrasen über Dr. E. Krügers Beiträge für Leben und Wissenschaft der Tonkunst', AMZ, xlix (1847), 753–7, 769–76, 785–90
A. Prüfer, ed.: Briefwechsel zwischen Carl von Winterfeld und Eduard Krüger (Leipzig, 1898)
K. Hoppenrath: Eduard Krüger: Leben und Wirken eines Musikgelehrten zwischen Schumannscher Tradition und Neudeutscher Schule (diss., U. of Göttingen, 1964)
W. Boetticher: 'Eduard Krüger als Professor der Musikgeschichte an der Georgia Augusta', Musikwissenschaft und Musikpflege an der Georg-August-Universität Göttingen, ed. M. Staehelin (Göttingen, 1987), 78–89
D. Mintz: '1848, Anti-Semitism, and the Mendelssohn Reception', Mendelssohn Studies, ed. R.L. Todd (Cambridge, 1992), 126–48
J. Daverio: 'Schumann's "New Genre for the Concert Hall": Das Paradies und die Peri in the Eyes of a Contemporary', Schumann and his World, ed. R.L. Todd (Princeton, NJ, 1994), 129–55
S. Pederson: 'Romantic Music under Siege in 1848', Music Theory in the Age of Romanticism, ed. I. Bent (Cambridge, 1996), 57–74

SANNA PEDERSON

Kruger, Johann. See KRIEGER, JOHANN.

Krüger [Krugl], Johann Philipp. See KRIEGER, JOHANN PHILIPP.

Kruglikov, Semyon Nikolayevich (b Moscow, 25 May/6 June 1851; d Moscow, 9/22 February 1910). Russian music critic and teacher. He studied physics and mathematics at Moscow University and mining and forestry in St Petersburg, taking a diploma as a civil engineer. He came into contact with The Five, and with Balakirev was one of the organizers of the Free School of Music in St Petersburg. He studied music theory with Rimsky-Korsakov in the 1870s and became involved with Kerzin's Circle of Music Lovers, publicized the works of The Five and assisted in the production of operas by Cui and Rimsky-Korsakov in Moscow. In 1881 he began teaching music theory and harmony at the P. Shostakovsky School of Music and Drama (from 1883 the School of Music and Drama of the Moscow Philharmonic Society); he was director of the college and professor of composition from 1898 to 1901. He was in charge of repertory at the Moscow Private Russian Opera from 1897 to 1899 and director of the Moscow Synodal School of Church Singing from 1907 to 1910.

From the turn of the century Kruglikov embraced the works of Rachmaninoff and Skryabin, and showed a lively interest in the music of Wagner and Strauss. He contributed a number of penetrating opinions to the debate on new directions in art in the early 20th century. His writings include a review of the activities of the Moscow Philharmonic Society School of Music and Drama (Moscow, 1888) and biographical articles on contemporary Russian composers. His career as a critic started in 1881; he wrote criticism for many Moscow newspapers and periodicals, under a variety of pseudonyms.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'Pamyati S.N. Kruglikova' [Recollections of Kruglikov], Muzïkal'nïy truzhenik (1910), no.5, p.4 only
G. Bernandt and I. Yampol'sky: Kto pisal o muzïke [Writers on music], ii (Moscow, 1974), 94–7
A. Stupel': Russkaya mïsl' o muzïke 1895–1917 [Russian thinking on music] (Leningrad, 1980), 169–72

LARISA GEORGIEVNA DANKO

Kruijsen, Bernard. See KRUYSEN, BERNARD.

Krull, Annie [Maria Anna] (b nr Rostock, 12 Jan 1876; d Schwerin, 14 June 1947). German soprano. She studied in Berlin and made her début at Plauen in 1898. In 1901 she sang in the premières of Strauss's Feuersnot and Paderewski's Manru, both in Dresden, where she established herself as principal dramatic soprano until 1912. She created the title role in Strauss's Elektra in 1909, repeating the role in 1910 under Beecham at Covent Garden, where she was compared to her disadvantage with London's first Electra, Edyth Walker. Salome was another role in which she was much admired. She spent her last seasons at Mannheim, Weimar and Schwerin, where in 1916 she retired to teach. Her recordings include Act 2 of Tannhäuser (1909) in which her Elisabeth is strongly characterized and finely sung.

J.B. STEANE

Krumlovsky, Claus (b Luxembourg, 24 December 1930; d Luxembourg, 17 March 2000). Luxembourg pianist and composer. He studied in Luxembourg, in Cologne (with Hans Anwander and Hans Mersmann) and in Saarbrücken (with Karl Ristenpart, conducting, Heinrich Konietzky, composition and Alexander Sellier, piano). He worked at Saarbrücken Rundfunk and RTL Luxembourg, and then as a music teacher in Luxembourg.

In his works a neo-classical style is prevalent, although he also includes atonal, polyrhythmic and serial elements; however, his musical material is treated in a personal and intelligible manner. Avoiding superfluous elaboration, his compositions are demanding for the performer but accessible for the listener. His music is vivacious and uncomplicated, often composed within classical forms but open to new techniques, as in the Saxophone Quartet (1958) and the Concertino for alto saxophone and orchestra (1961). His works have been performed in many European countries and in the USA, and his pedagogical works are on the syllabuses of well-known academies of music, conservatories and universities.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Concertino, pf, orch, 1956; Pf Conc., 1959; Concertino, sax, orch, 1961; Mouvements, pf, orch, 1963; Concertino da camera, ob, str, 1965; Sinfonietta, str, 1965; 3 Lieder, S, orch, 1966; Musica da camera, cl, vib, str, 1966; Concertino, cl, str, 1966; Marche burlesque, orch, 1968; Concertino, fl, str, 1971; Trbn Conc., 1978
Chbr: 2 sonatines, 1 suite, pf, 1952; Sonatine, cl, pf, 1957; Sax Qt, 1958; Pf Trio no.1, 1959; Pf Trio no.2, 1961; 11 Lieder, 1v, pf,

1961; Suite gaie, 11 insts, 1959; Cl Qt, 1964; Sonata, vn, pf, 1965; Sonata, sax, pf, 1966; Sonatine, db, pf, 1966; Str Qt, 1966; Sonata, vn, wind qnt, 1967; Pf Sonata no.1, 1971, Sonata, ob, pf, 1972; Sonatina, tpt, cl, bn, 1974; Trio d'anches, 1974; Trbn e Qt, 1977; Cl Trio, 1983

Principal publisher: Alphonse Leduc, Tritonus

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Wagner: Luxemburger Komponisten heute (Luxembourg, 1986)
L. Weber: 'Portrait de Claus Krumlovsky', Nos Cahiers, i (1985), 99–110

LOLL WEBER

Krummacher, Friedhelm (Gustav Adolf) (b Berlin, 22 Jan 1936). German musicologist. After qualifying as a music teacher, he studied musicology at the Freie Universität, Berlin, and at the universities of Marburg and Uppsala with Dräger, Ruhnke and Ingmar Bengtsson. He took the doctorate at the Freie Universität in 1964 and worked as an assistant lecturer (1965–72) at Erlangen University, where he completed the Habilitation in 1972 with the study Mendelssohn, der Komponist. He continued to work at Erlangen as an external lecturer until 1975, when he spent one year as professor at the Musikhochschule, Detmold. He was appointed professor of musicology at Kiel University in 1976; he was also the founding director of the department for cultural studies at the Humboldt University, Berlin, of which he was made an honorary member in 1995. He was appointed director of the Brahms collected edition in 1983 and is a member of the editorial boards of the collected editions of Mendelssohn and Buxtehude. He has also edited and contributed to four congress reports for the series Kieler Schriften zur Musikwissenschaft. His principal areas of research are North German church and organ music from the 16th to the 18th century, music aesthetics, the history of the string quartet and the composers J.S. Bach, Mendelssohn, Brahms, Mahler and Reger.

WRITINGS

'Zur Quellenlage von M. Weckmanns geistlichen Vokalwerken', Gemeinde Gottes in dieser Welt: Festgabe für Friedrich Wilhelm Krummacher, ed. F. Bartsch and W. Rautenberg (Berlin, 1961), 188–218

Die Uberlieferung der Choralbearbeitungen in der frühen evangelischen Kantate (diss., Freie Universität, Berlin, 1964; Berlin, 1965)

'Orgel- und Vokalmusik im Oeuvre norddeutscher Organisten um Buxtehude', DAM, v (1966–7), 63–90

'"... fein und geistreich genug": Versuch über Mendelssohns Musik zum Sommernachtstraum', 'Zur Kompositionsart Mendelssohns: Thesen am Beispiel der Streichquartette', Das Problem Mendelssohn: Berlin 1972, 89–117, 169–84

Mendelssohn, der Komponist: Studien zur Kammermusik für Streicher (Habilitationsschrift, U. of Erlangen, 1972; Munich, 1978)

'Textauslegung und Satzstruktur in Bachs Motetten', BJb 1974, 5–43

'Bachs Vokalmusik als Problem der Analyse', Bachforschung und Bachinterpretation heute: Marburg 1978, 97–126

Die Choralbearbeitung in der protestantischen Figuralmusik zwischen Schütz und Bach (Kassel, 1978)

'Kunstreligion und religiöse Musik: zur ästhetischen Problematik geistlicher Musik im 19. Jahrhundert', Mf, xxxii (1979), 365–93

'Rezeptionsgeschichte als Problem der Musikwissenschaft', JbSIM 1979–80, 154–70

'Stylus phantasticus und phantastische Musik: kompositorische Verfahren in Toccaten von Frescobaldi und Buxtehude', Schütz-Jb 1980, 7–77

'Synthesis des Disparaten: zu Beethovens späten Quartetten und ihrer frühen Rezeption', AMf, xxxvii (1980), 99–134

'Mendelssohn's Late Chamber Music: some Autograph Sources Recovered', Mendelssohn and Schumann: Essays on their Music and its Context, ed. J. Finson and L.R. Todd (Durham, NC, 1984), 71–84

'Komponieren als Anpassung? Über Mendelssohns Kirchenmusik im Verhältnis zu England', Deutsch-englische Musikbeziehungen, ed. W. Konold (Tutzing, 1985), 132–56; Eng. trans. in Mendelssohn Studies, ed. R.L. Todd (Cambridge, 1992), 80–105

'"An Goethe vorbei"? Gedanken zu Schumanns Faust-Szenen', Analytica: Studies in the Description and Analysis of Music in Honour of Ingmar Bengtsson (Stockholm, 1985), 187–202

'Bach's Free Organ Music and the Stylus Phantasticus', J.S. Bach as Organist, ed. G. Stauffer and E. May (Bloomington, 1986), 157–71

'Schema und Varietas: zu Josquins Missa "Malheur me bat"', Festschrift Martin Ruhnke zum 65. Geburtstag (Neuhausen-Stuttgart, 1986), 185–202

'Typus–Situation–Charakter: Händels dramatische Kunst im Oratorium Jephta', SMN, xii (1986), 101–34

'Zwischen Avantgarde und Konvention: Regers Kammermusik in der Gattungsgeschichte', Colloque franco-allemand: Paris 1987, 65–89

ed., with H. Danuser: Rezeptionsästhetik und Rezeptionsgeschichte in der Musikwissenschaft: Hanover 1988 [incl. 'Wissenschaftsgeschichte und Werkrezeption: die "alten Niederländer" im 19. Jahrhundert', 205–22]

'Traditionen der Choraltropierung in Bachs frühem Vokalwerk', Das Frühwerk Johann Sebastian Bachs: Rostock 1990, 217–40

'Symphonische Verfahren in Haydns späten Messen', Das musikalische Kunstwerk: Festschrift Carl Dahlhaus, ed. H. Danuser and others (Laaber, 1988), 455–81

'Bachs frühe Kantaten im Kontext der Tradition; Mf, xliv (1991), 9–32

Gustav Mahlers III. Symphonie: Welt im Widerbild (Kassel, 1991)

'Bach, Berlin und Mendelssohn: über Mendelssohns kompositorische Bachrezeption', JbSIM 1993, 43–78

'Händels Verhältnis zur Tradition der lutherischen Kirchenmusik', Göttinger Händel-Beiträge, v (1993), 65–94

'Schubert als Konstrukteur: Finale und Zyklus im G-Dur-Quartett D 997', AMw, lxi (1994), 26–50

'Streichquartett F-Dur op.135', Beethoven: Interpretationen seiner Werke, ed. A. Riethmuller, C. Dahlhaus and A.L. Ringer (Laaber, 1994), ii, 347–64

'Reception and Analysis:: on the Brahms Quartets Op.51 Nos.1 and 2', 19CM, xviii (1994), 23–45

Bachs Zyklus der Choralkantaten: Aufgaben und Lösungen (Göttingen, 1995)

'"Neue" Kirchenmusik und romantischer Historismus', Alte Musik im 20. Jahrhundert, Wandlungen und Formen ihrer Rezeption, ed. G. Schubert (Mainz, 1995), 72–92

'Requiem für Mignon: Goethes Worte in Schumanns Musik', Georg Friedrich Händel: ein Lebensinhalt: Gedenkschrift für Bernd Baselt, ed. K. Hortschansky and K. Musketa (Halle, 1995), 261–87

Musik im Norden: Abhandlungen zur nordeuropäischen Musikgeschichte, ed. S. Oechsle and others (Kassel, 1996)

'Art-History-Religion: On Mendelssohn's Oratorios St. Paul and Elijah', The Mendelssohn Companion, ed. D. Seaton (forthcoming)

CHRISTIAN BERGER

Krummel, D(onald) W(illiam) (b Sioux City, IA, 12 July 1929). American music librarian and bibliographer. He was educated at the University of Michigan, where he received the BMus in 1951, the MMus in 1953 and the MA in library science in 1954. He was awarded the PhD, also in library science, in 1958. He taught at the University of Michigan from 1952 to 1956; from 1956 to 1961 he was a reference librarian in the music division of the Library of Congress. In 1962 he joined the Newberry Library, Chicago, first as head of the reference department, then as associate librarian. In 1970 he was appointed professor of library science and of music at the University of Illinois. He held a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1976–7, and was director of the Resources of American Music History project for the National Endowment for the Humanities from 1976 to 1979.

Krummel's principal fields of research are music printing and publishing and early American music. In his dissertation and subsequent writings he has been concerned with the dating of 18th-century music prints, particularly by American publishers; he has employed both cultural and bibliographical evidence, including graphic analysis, or the study of the printed musical page. Krummel has been an active member of the Music Library Association and IAML. He was also compiler of the quarterly book list for the Musical Quarterly (1957–60).

WRITINGS

Philadelphia Music Engraving and Publishing, 1800–1820: a Study in Bibliography and Cultural History (diss., U. of Michigan, 1958)
'Graphic Analysis: its Application to Early American Engraved Music', Notes, xvi (1958–9), 213–33 with J.B. Coover: 'Current National Bibliographies: their Music Coverage', Notes, xvii (1959–60), 375–84
'Late 18th Century French Music Publishers' Catalogs in the Library of Congress', FAM, vii (1960), 61–4
'The Newberry Library, Chicago', FAM, xvi (1969), 119–24
Bibliotheca Bolduaniana: a Renaissance Music Bibliography (Detroit, 1972)
Guide for Dating Early Published Music (Hackensack, NJ, 1974)
English Music Printing, 1553–1700 (London, 1975)
'Musical Functions and Bibliographical Forms', The Library, 5th ser., xxi (1976), 327–50
ed.: Bibliographical Inventory to the Early Music in the Newberry Library, Chicago, Illinois (Boston, 1977)
'Little RAMH, Who Made Thee? Observations on an American Music Census', Notes, xxxvii (1980), 227–38 Resources of American Music History: a Directory of Source Materials from Colonial Times to World War II (Urbana, IL, 1981) with R. Crawford: 'Early American Music Printing and Publishing', Printing and Society in Early America, ed. W.L. Joyce (Worcester, MA, 1983), 186–227
Bibliographies: their Aims and Methods (London, 1984)
'The Origins of Modern Music Classification', Festschrift Albi Rosenthal, ed. R. Elvers (Tutzing, 1984), 181–98
'Early German Partbook Type Faces', Gutenburg Jb, lx (1985), 80–98
'The Beginnings of Current National Bibliography for German Music', Richard S. Hill: Tributes, ed. C.J. Bradley and J.B. Coover (Detroit, 1987), 307–29
Bibliographical Handbook of American Music (Urbana, IL, 1987)
The Memory of Sound: Observations on the History of Music on Paper (Washington DC, 1988)
'The Presence of the Note: Modern Music Publishing', Modern Music Librarianship: Essays in Honor of Ruth Watanabe, ed. A. Mann (Stuyvesant, NY, 1989), 41–58
'Accustomed to the Interface: Observations on the Bibliography of American Music', A Celebration of American Music: Words and Music in Honor of H. Wiley Hitchcock, ed. R.A. Crawford, R.A. Lott and C.J. Oja (Ann Arbor, 1990), 427–38
'Searching and Sorting on the Slippery Slope: Periodical Publications of Victorian Music', Notes, xlvi (1990), 593–608
The Literature of Music Bibliography: an Account of the Writings on the History of Music Printing & Publishing (Berkeley, 1992)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Hunter, ed.: Music Publishing & Collecting: Essays in Honor of Donald W. Krummel (Urbana, IL, 1994) [incl. list of writings]

PAULA MORGAN

Krummhorn (i) [Krumbhorn] (Ger.). See CRUMHORN.

Krummhorn (ii). See under ORGAN STOP (Cromorne).

Krumpholtz [Krumpholz]. Bohemian family of musicians.

(1) Jean-Baptiste [Johann Baptist, Jan Křtitel] Krumpholtz (b Prague, 5 Aug 1747; d Paris, 19 Feb 1790). Harpist, composer and instrument designer. He was born into an impoverished family which was in bond to the Bohemian counts Kinský. His father was a bandmaster to the count and taught his son the horn. With the installation of a new count in 1758 Krumpholtz was sent on a court stipend to study music in Vienna, with the understanding that he perfect his horn playing; the boy's decision to concentrate instead on the harp, his mother's instrument, later led to conflict with the count. From Vienna he went to Flanders and France with an uncle (who probably married the 'Meyer' often named as Krumpholtz's first wife), presumably as hornist in a regimental band. Returning to Prague in 1771, he met and impressed the violinist Václav Pichl and pianist F.X. Dušek, who sent him to Vienna with recommendations to Haydn and others. There in 1773, after a successful concert at the Burgtheater, Haydn took him on as a composition pupil and as solo harpist in Count Esterhazy's retinue.

In 1776, with Haydn's support, Krumpholtz undertook a long concert tour of Europe. He performed in Leipzig on a 'harpe organisée', probably the earliest of his attempted improvements to the instrument (a 'harpe organisée' was later marketed by Cousineau in Paris). Arriving in Metz, he worked intensively at further improvements for six months in the workshop of the instrument maker Christian Steckler, whose daughter Anne-Marie became his protégée (see (3) below). In 1777 he arrived in Paris to complete his tour, taking the girl with him. After a brief marriage (1778) to Marguérite Gilbert (daughter of the Parisian harp maker C. Gilbert) which ended in his wife's death in childbirth, Krumpholtz, who had now adopted the name Jean-Baptiste, married his young pupil. Three children were born to the couple, but by 1788 Anne-Marie had taken a lover, apparently the brilliant young pianist J.L. Dussek, with whom she soon eloped to London. Krumpholtz drowned himself in the Seine in 1790.

Krumpholtz was the most gifted and acclaimed harp virtuoso of the late 18th century and a prolific composer for the instrument. He is no less important for his efforts to perfect the harp. In 1785 the Parisian firm of NADERMAN built an instrument to Krumpholtz's specification (described in the preface to his sonatas op.14), with 24 strings, eight of which were metal, and with an eighth pedal that opened five shutters in the resonator; the instrument was played by his wife before the Académie, who in 1787 wrote to Krumpholtz in recognition of its virtues. The instrument is now in the Vienna Kunsthistorisches Museum. At the same concert Krumpholtz accompanied his wife on a 'pianoforte contrabasse', or 'clavichorde à marteau', made by Erard, again from his specifications. Other improvements by him were incorporated after his death into the Erard harp at the beginning of the 19th century, the prototype of the modern double-action harp.

Krumpholtz's concertos, sonatas and variations for harp, which appeared in Paris from about 1775 (many were later reprinted in London), became staples of the repertory and are still highly respected. They contributed to the instrument's rapidly evolving technique, taking increasing advantage of the modulatory possibilities of the new pedal harp at the same time as he was perfecting its mechanism. The variations combine idiomatic harp writing with fertile invention. Many of his later sonatas are programmatic. After his death a harp method, said to have been written by him for a German baroness, was published by J.M. Plane, together with a brief autobiography, as Principes pour la harpe (Paris, 1800/R).

WORKS

published in Paris unless otherwise stated

Edition: Jean-Baptiste Krumpholtz: Oeuvres choisies pour harpe, ed. M.-F. Thiernesse-Baux (Paris, *c*1982) [T-B]

Orch: 2 hp concs., op.4 (*c*1777), no.2 ed. F. Schroeder (Adliswil, 1971); 2 hp concs., op.6 (*c*1777); 5me conc., hp, op.7 (*c*1778), ed. M. Zunovoy-Skai'ska (Moscow, 1962); 6me conc., hp, op.9 (*c*1785), ed. in T-B; 2 simphonies, hp, opt. acc. 2 vn, 2 hn, fl, b, op.11 (1787), ed. in T-B; 1 conc., arr. kbd, orch, in Storace's Collection of Original Harpsichord Music, ii (London, 1789)

Hp sonatas: 6, acc. vn, op.1 (*c*1775); 4, acc. vn, db, 2 hn, op.3 (*c*1776), no.2 ed. in T-B; 6, nos.1–5 acc. vn/fl, op.8 (*c*1780), nos.1–4 ed. H. Avesian and P. Fischer (Vienna, VA, 1987), no.5 ed. S. Mildonian (New York, 1975), no.6 ed. in T-B; 1 in Recueil, op.10 (*c*1787) [see below]; 4 sonates non difficilles, opt. acc. vn, vc, op.12 (*c*1787), ed. A. Lawson (Ross, CA, 1970); Collection de pièces de différens genres distribuées en 6 sonates, hp/pf, opp.13–14 (*c*1788) [4 with vn acc.], nos.1–4 ed. A. Lawson Aber (Ross, CA, 1974), no.6 ed. M.X. Johnstone (South Pasadena, CA, 1955); 4 sonates en forme de scènes de différens caractères, hp/pf, op.15 (*c*1788), 1 ed. H.J. Zingel (Mainz, 1966), 2 ed. in T-B; 4 sonates chantantes, opt. acc.: vn, b, op.16 (*c*1788), no.3 ed. in T-B; 3 sonates ... dont la 1er en forme de scène, acc. vn, op.17 (*c*1789), no.1 ed. in T-B; 2 sonates en forme de scènes, hp/pf, op.18 (*c*1789), no.1 ed. A. Lawson Aber (Ross, CA, 1974)

Other works: Recueil de 12 préludes et petits airs, hp, op.2 (*c*1776), ed. in T-B; 2 duos, 2 hp/(hp, kbd), op.5 (*c*1777), also arr. as Simphonies concertantes, hp, acc. vn, fl, bn, 2 hn, db (*c*1777); Recueil contenant différens petits airs variés, 1 sonate et 1 petit duo, 2 hps, op.10 (*c*1787); Andante, hp, acc. vn, op.19 (*c*1789), arr. of J. Haydn: Sym., H I:53/II, ed. in T-B; several songs, sets of variations; pieces in several 18th-century anthologies

(2) Wenzel [Václav] Krumpholtz (b ?Budenice, nr Zlonice, *c*1750; d Vienna, 2 May 1817). Violinist, brother of (1) Jean-Baptiste Krumpholtz. After serving in the orchestra of Prince Esterházy he became a violinist at the court opera in Vienna (1796). His name is immortalized by his friendship with Beethoven, who is said to have laid aside much of his customary reserve with Krumpholtz. He was one of the first to recognize Beethoven's genius, and he inspired others with his own enthusiasm, as his friend Czerny mentioned. According to Ries, Krumpholtz gave Beethoven some instruction on the violin in Vienna. He also played the mandolin. Beethoven must have felt his death deeply, for on the following day he composed the 'Gesang der Mönche' WoO104 (from Schiller's Wilhelm Tell) for three men's voices 'in commemoration of the sudden and unexpected death of our Krumpholtz'. Wenzel's compositions include two works for solo violin (Abendunterhaltung, Vienna, n.d.; Eine Viertelstude für eine Violine, Vienna and Pest, n.d.), which demonstrate his awareness of the new Parisian style of violin playing, and a lied Das Blümchen der Liebe und Chloe.

(3) Anne-Marie Krumpholtz [née Steckler or Stekler] (b Metz, 10 Aug 1766; d London, 15 Nov 1813). French harpist and composer. Thought to be the daughter of the harp maker Christian Steckler of Metz, she studied the harp with Jean-Baptiste Krumpholtz, whom she married in 1783. She performed in Paris at the Concert Spirituel during the years 1779 to 1784. She is said to have eloped to England with an unknown lover, and was active there as a harpist in 1788. She continued to perform until 1803; her compositions continued to be published until shortly before her death. She played in her own benefit concerts and at Salomon's concerts, with Haydn, J.L. Dussek, Mme Mara, Sophia Corri (later Mme Dussek) and other great artists of the day. The reviewer of the Oracle (10 March 1792) wrote: 'Mme Krumpholtz is without doubt the first Player we have'. She frequently performed J.L. Dussek's music for harp and piano with him, which may be why he has been proposed as the unknown lover, even though he did not go to London until 1789.

Her published music, all printed in London about 1810, comprises mostly fashionable harp arrangements of well-known tunes and themes and variations – enormously popular music which found a ready market as domestic music for young women. She apparently also composed serious sonatas.

Anne-Marie Krumpholtz died of apoplexy. Her daughter, Fanny Pittar, was also a composer who similarly composed short pieces for harp or piano (several published in London *c*1812–17). An autograph manuscript of her harp compositions, dated 1811 (GB-Lbl Add.49288; ed. U.M. Rempel, Chicago, 1994), contains 20 works, including waltzes, variations, marches, rondos and allegrettos, and several fragments. V. Krumpholtz, whose music for harp was published in London (Quadrille, *c*1820, and an arrangement of Le rantz des vaches , or Un souvenir des vallées suisses, *c*1825), may have been Fanny's younger sister.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PierreH

F.G. Wegeler and F. Ries: Biographische Notizen über Ludwig van Beethoven (Koblenz, 1838/R, suppl. 1845/R; rev. 2/1906 by A.C. Kalischer; Eng. trans., 1987)

C.F. Pohl: Mozart und Haydn in London (Vienna, 1867/R)

H. Tribout de Morembert: Anne-Marie Steckler: une virtuose de la harpe au XVIIIe siècle (Metz, 1962)

W. Kolneder, ed.: C. Czerny: Erinnerungen aus meinem Leben (Strasbourg, 1968), 11ff

F. Vernillat: 'La littérature de la harpe en France au XVIIIe siècle', RMFC, ix (1969), 162–85

U. Rempel: 'Fanny Krumpholtz and her Milieu', American Harp Journal, v/4 (1976), 11–15

U. Rempel: 'The Perils of Secondary Sources: an Annotated Bibliography of Encyclopedic and Dictionary Sources Relating to the Harpist Members of the Krumpholtz Family', American Harp Journal, vii/3 (1980), 25–30

R. Rensch: Harps and Harpists (Bloomington, IN, 1989)

S.V. Klíma: 'Hudebníci Václav a Jan Křtitel Krumpholzovi', HRo, xlvi (1993), 284–6

B. Garvey Jackson: 'Say can you Deny me': a Guide to Surviving Music by Women from the 16th through the 18th Centuries (Fayetteville, AR, 1994)

U.M. Rempel: 'Madame Krumpholtz', 'Fanny Krumpholtz Pittar', Women Composers: Music Through the Ages, iii: Composers from 1700–1799: Keyboard Music, ed. M.F. Schleifer and S. Glickman (New York, 1998), 55–87, 263–77

M. Müller: Jan Křtitel Krumpholtz 1747–1790 (Prague, 1999)

ANNA TUHÁČKOVÁ (1), C.F. POHL/HANS J. ZINGEL (2), BARBARA GARVEY JACKSON, URSULA M. REMPEL (3)

Krupa, Gene [Eugene Bertram] (b Chicago, 15 Jan 1909; d Yonkers, NY, 16 Oct 1973). American jazz drummer and bandleader. He first attracted attention through his recordings made with McKenzie and Condon's Chicagoans (1927). After playing in numerous commercial orchestras and studio and pit bands in New York he joined Benny Goodman in late 1934, but left in 1938 to form his own big band. The band enjoyed great popularity and critical success during the early 1940s; it included sideman Roy Eldridge and singer Anita O'Day, both of whom were featured on the recording Let me off uptown (1941, OK). Krupa rejoined Goodman briefly late in 1943 before touring with Tommy Dorsey. He led another orchestra from 1944 to 1951 and thereafter toured regularly with Jazz at the Philharmonic. He spent the last 20 years of his life teaching, studying timpani, classical techniques and various ethnic drumming concepts (mainly African and Caribbean), and occasionally leading his own small groups.

Building on the formative influences of Baby Dodds, Zutty Singleton and, later, the virtuoso drumming of Chick Webb, Krupa soon became the first major jazz soloist on his instrument; thanks to an extraordinary aptitude for showmanship, he was also celebrated as a national idol of the swing era. Although he developed into a superb craftsman, his playing was often marred by a lack of swing, a heavy-handed approach (especially during his years with Goodman) and a tendency towards exhibitionism and vulgar technical display. Nonetheless, paradoxically, his commitment to jazz was genuine and unswerving, as was reflected brilliantly in his own bands. It is ironic that he is remembered more for his bombastic solo on Goodman's Sing, sing, sing (1937, Vic.) than for the many tasteful recordings he made with his own groups in later years. Krupa was not only the first major popular drum soloist, but also the ultimate enthusiast; his contribution to jazz drumming remains unique.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SchullerEJ
R. Blesh: 'Drummin' Man', Combo, USA: Eight Lives in Jazz (Philadelphia, 1971/R), 134–60
T.D. Brown: A History and Analysis of Jazz Drumming to 1942 (diss., U. of Michigan, 1976), 208–99
K. Stratemann: Buddy Rich and Gene Krupa: a Filmo-discography (Lübbecke, 1980)
C. Garrod and B. Korst: Gene Krupa and his Orchestra, i:1935–1946, ii: 1947–1973 (Zephyrhills, FL, 1984) [discography]
E. Ronowski: Gene Krupa: seine Musik auf Schallplatten, 1927–1973: Biographie und Diskographie (Dassel, 1985)
B. Crowther: Gene Krupa (Tunbridge Wells, 1987) [incl. discography]
B.H. Klauber: World of Gene Krupa: That Legendary Drummin' Man (Ventura, CA, 1990)
B. Korall: 'Gene Krupa (1907–1973)', Drummin' Man: the Heartbeat of Jazz: the Swing Era (New York, 1990), 41–88

GUNTHER SCHULLER

Krupowicz, Stanisław (b Grodno, 25 Nov 1952). Polish composer. He studied mathematics at Warsaw University (1971–6) and composition with Baird and Kotoński at the Warsaw Academy of Music (1975–81). From 1984 he studied at Stanford (DMA 1989), where he subsequently became a research associate, working on computer analyses of the shape of the violin. In 1991 he was awarded a Leverhulme fellowship to study computer music at Glasgow University. He has won composition prizes in Europe and the United States.

While his electroacoustic and computer generated music is highly accomplished, his music is best known for its slant on musical styles and aesthetics. Together with Pawel Szymański, he is responsible for coining the term 'surconventionalism', a postmodern concept involving musical hybridism and dislocation, as in fin de siècle. His chamber music is often highly lyrical, whether as part of lapidary dissonances, as in Ardo 4031; (bi)tonal episodes, found in the Second Quartet for example; or his use of parody, namely the appearance of L'homme armé in the Concerto for tenor saxophone and computers (1987). His Symphony (1980) and Pewien szczególny przypadek pewnego uogólnionego kanonu w kwarcie i kwincie ('A certain case of a certain generalized canon at the 4th and 5th', 1983) are typical of his bold and astute method of organizing the musical material.

WORKS
(selective list)

El-ac: Fassquel, fl+b fl, 2 synths, 1979; Music for S, tape, 1984; Thus Spake Bosch, tape, 1985; Wariacje pożegnalne na temat Mozarta [Farewell Variations on a Theme by Mozart], amp str qt, tape, 1986; Conc., t sax, cptrs, 1987; Zmierzch [Nightfall] (O. de Miłosz), tape, 1986, collab. T. Miłosz and I. Mowitz; Tylko Beatrycze [Only Beatrice] (B. Leśmian), str qt, tape, 1988; Alcoforado, tape, 1989; Smoking Room Blues, MIDI ens, 1991; A Lighter Shade of Grey, vn, tape, 1992; Pewne szczególne przypadki uogólnionej kadencji wielkiej doskonałej [Certain Cases of the Generalized Mixed Cadence], synths, cptrs, 1995

Other: 4 utwory [4 Pieces], pf, 1975; Introdukcja i passacaglia, str qt, 1976; De metamusicae (Plato, Aristotle, Epicurus), ens, 1977; Stochos, org, 1977; Komentarz [Commentary], chorus, 1978, arr. S, 2 choruses, 1996; Ardo 4031, wind qnt, 1979; Epiphora, 44 str, 1979; Sym., 1980; Tempo 72, amp hpd, str, 1981; Easter Disloyalty of CD, any insts, 1982; Str Qt no.2, 1982; Pewne szczególny przypadek pewnego uogólnionego kanonu w kwarcie i kwincie [A certain case of a certain generalized canon at the 4th and 5th], S, cl, str trio, db, perc, gui, pf, 1983; Unquestioned Answer, variation on a theme by Ives, chbr orch, 1984; Half a dozen chaste stanzas, pf, 1985; Fin de siècle, orch, 1993; Happy Winds to the Rose no.3, cl, trbn, vc, pf, 1995; Polonez 1995, orch, 1995; Oratorium na Boże Narodzenie [Christmas Orat], solo vv, chorus, orch, 1997

Film scores, incid music

Principal publishers: Agencja Autorska, Brevis

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Szczepańska: 'Neotonalizm: kształt realny czy widmowy?' [Neotonalism: a real or ghostly form?], RM, xxviii/12 (1984), 7–8 [on String Quartet no.2]
E. Szczepańska: 'O komponowaniu muzyki komputerowej o jej perspektywach oraz o . . . pudle rezonansowym skrzypiec stradivariusa' [On composing computer music, its prospects as well as . . . the soundbox of a Stradivarius violin], RM, xxxiii (1989), no.12, pp.3–5; no.13, pp.6–8
S. Krupowicz and B. Skalmierski: 'Toward an Explanation of the Shape of the Violin', Computer Music Conference: San Jose, CA, 1992, 136–9; repr. as 'Cold Rib Bending as an Explanation for the Shape of the Violin', CAS Journal, ii/3 (1993), 9–13
E. Gajkowskiej: 'O matematyce, muzyce i pogodzie' ['On mathematics, music and the weather'], RM, xxxviii/11 (1994), 1, 3 [interview]

ADRIAN THOMAS

Krusceniski [Riccioni, née Kruszelnicka], Salomea [Krushel'nytska, Solomiya] (b Bilyavyntsi, Halychyna [now Tarnopol'] province, 11/23 Sept 1872; d L'viv, 16 Nov 1952). Ukrainian soprano, active also in Italy, Spain and Argentina. She studied with Valery Wysocki in Lemberg (now L'viv) and made her début there in 1893, then appeared at Kraków. In 1895 she continued her studies at Milan with Fausta Crespi and during the 1895–6 season at Cremona she appeared in Puccini's Manon Lescaut and in Les Huguenots. Until 1902 she sang mostly in Odessa, Warsaw and St Petersburg, but a brilliant début at the S Carlo, Naples, in 1903 inaugurated her career in the leading theatres of Italy (La Scala in 1906–7, 1909 and 1915), Spain and Buenos Aires (1906–11 and 1913). She became Italian by marriage in 1910 and retired from the stage in the early 1920s, continuing her concert career until 1929.

A woman of singular beauty and complex personality, she had a flexible, warm and well-focussed voice. At first a fine interpreter of Meyerbeer and Verdi, she later appeared in Catalani's Loreley, Madama Butterfly (in the revised version at Brescia in 1904), Adriana Lecouvreur and, during the same period, in the works of Wagner (particularly as Brünnhilde) and of Strauss (Salome, Elektra). Though passionate in temperament, Krusceniski avoided the vulgar over-exuberance of many singing actresses of the verismo period. She was in fact guided by original and subtle ideas about the theatre, which in some roles, such as Aida and Salome, led her to a highly stylized characterization, marked by hieratic attitudes or an enigmatic oriental languor.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ES (R. Celletti); GV (R. Celletti; R. Vegeto)
E. Arnosi and J. Dennis: 'Salomea Kruszelnicka', Record Collector, xviii (1968–9), 77–88 [with discography by R.L. Autrey]
M. Scott: The Record of Singing, i (London, 1977), 153–4
M. Holovashchenko, ed.: Solomiya Krushel'nytska: spohady, materiyaly, lystuvannya [Recollections, documents, correspondence] (Kiev, 1978–9)

RODOLFO CELLETTI/VALERIA PREGLIASCO GUALERZI

Kruse, Bjørn Howard (b London, 14 Aug 1946). Norwegian composer. He grew up in England, in the USA and in Norway, studying at UCLA and at the Norwegian State Academy of Music, where he was taught by Finn Mortensen. He received his diploma in composition in 1977. He is now professor at the Academy and serves on various boards and committees. In his music Kruse began as a performer and arranger within jazz and popular music, from which elements are still to be found in his later works. He has won several prizes and awards, and especially his vocal music is much in demand. His dramatic music has been performed in several countries, and his concertos are noted for their inventiveness.

WORKS

Dramatic: Et sjakkspil [A Game of Chess] (TV op, A. Feldborg), 1979; Fredrik (musical play, L. Lionni), 1980; Du skal ikke elske din skjebne (rock chbr op, T. Hoel), 1983; Nils Holgersson (op, S. Lagerlöf), 1986; Adam (op-musical, P.A. Kruse), 1987; Twins (B. Grimsrud), live elecs, 1994

Orch: Claws, 1977; Concert Ov., pf, brass band, 1982; Lakris, conc., cl, orch, 1984; Metall, 1984; At Akershus, nar, girls' choir, sym. band, 1989; Flo og fjaere, equal vv, orch, 1993; Sax Conc., t sax, orch, 1991; Marine Fanfare Fantasia, sym. band, 1995

Chbr: Statement, sax qt, 1973; Wind Qnt no.2, 1978; Colors for Saxophones, 1979; Animal – The Tale of a Compulsive Intruder, fl, cl, vn, vc, pf, perc, 1980; Ouverture to a Novel, nar, fl, cl, vn, vc, pf, vib, 1983; Quartetto buffo, ob, vn, va, vc, 1985; Ornament, B♭ cl, str qt, 1987; Syntax, B♭ cl, 2 perc, 1987; Ghirlanda, 2 pf, 2 perc, 1988; The Secret of Gyda, s sax, pf, 1989; Trio campanello, B♭ cl, trbn, pf, 1989; Synergo, S, Mez, vn, gui, pf/accdn, 1990; Fonografi no.1, ob, cl, s sax, tpt, pf, perc, elec gui, 1992; Boogie Retention, 2 pf, 8 hands, 1992; Exhale, accdn, perc, 1992; Croquis, fl, perc, 1993; Panem et circenses, fl, cl, 2 synth, 1 perc, 1993; Kairos, vn, org, 1996; Pre pandemonium, B♭ cl, 1997

Vocal: Die Luft (C. Morgenstern), mixed choir, 1976; Suoni della voce, mixed choir, 1978; Vaer utålmodig menneske (I. Hagerup), mixed choir, 1981; Elements (E. Skeie), equal vv, 1984; 9 Norwegian Folktunes, mixed choir, 1984; Jarrama II (G. Ekelöf), B-Bar, perc, 1987; Le voci di sempre (S. Polizzotto Allegra), male A, T, T, B, 1987; Dove la luca (G. Ungaretti), 4 male vv, 1992; Dagen er runnen, og den er din (K.K. Øygard), mixed choir, tpt, 1995; Missa pro defunctis bello secundo mundi, 2vv, mixed choir, nar, timp, 1995; Song for Winter (S.A. Sabut), mixed choir, 1996; Vanitas – Mary Magdalena at her Mirror, 6vv, 1996

WRITINGS

Bruksmusikkarrangering (Oslo, 1978)
Jazzteori (Oslo, 1980)
Den tenkende kunster – komposisjon og dramaturgi som prosess og metode (Oslo, 1995)

ARVID O. VOLLSNES

Kruse, Johann Secundus (b Melbourne, 23 March 1859; d London, 14 Oct 1927). Australian violinist of German descent. He appeared in public at nine years of age, playing at the first desk in the philharmonic concerts of his native town. In 1875 he went to Berlin to study with Joachim at the Hochschule für Musik, where he was later appointed professor. He became principal violin and sub-conductor of the Berlin Philharmonic Society in 1882 and also founded a string quartet. In 1885 he visited Australia, but was called back by Joachim to relieve him of some of his work at the Hochschule, where he taught until 1891, relinquishing the post to go to Bremen as leader of the philharmonic orchestra.

In October 1892 Kruse joined the Joachim Quartet as second violin, though still resident at Bremen, where he also founded a quartet of his own. In 1897 he moved to London, where he again founded a quartet and gave concerts. In 1902 he took over two concert series, organized an orchestral series under Weingartner in 1902–3, a Beethoven festival in 1903 and a further festival in 1904. He was involved in chamber concerts in 1921 and in 1926 reappeared as leader of a new string quartet.

W.W. COBBETT/R

Kruspe, Friedrich Wilhelm (b Erfurt, 26 Sept 1838; d Erfurt, 25 October 1911). German woodwind instrument maker. He was the younger son of the woodwind and brass instrument maker Franz Carl Kruspe (b Mülhausen, 1808; d Erfurt, 1885). After training with his father, Friedrich Wilhelm studied in Vienna with F. Hell and A. Nechwalsky (1855–6), then in Munich with J.G. Ottensteiner (1857–60), making the acquaintance of Theobald Boehm and the clarinettist Bärmann during his stay. In 1860 he went to Paris to work with Triébert on double reed instruments. He rejoined his father in the family business in 1861, and succeeded him in 1872. In 1881 he was awarded the Royal Prussian silver state medal and in 1885 was appointed Court Maker to Fürst Günther of Sondershausen. He retired in 1902.

Friedrich Wilhelm was an outstanding innovator who devised improvements to all woodwind instruments; in particular his flute, subsequently known as the 'Schwedler-Kruspe Reform flute', had a redesigned bore, mouth-hole and keywork; his oboe had newly-developed keywork, while the 'System Kruspe clarinet' became the preferred model throughout Germany; his reform-model bassoon, first exhibited in Chicago in 1893, was built in three joints and had redesigned keywork. After his death, the 'C. Kruspe/Erfurt' firm was managed by his second son Eduard (1871–1919). In 1920 it was bought by G.H. Hüller/Schöneck and it dissolved in 1980. Friedrich Wilhelm's elder son Carl jr (1865–1929) established his own workshop in Leipzig in 1893, also collaborating with Schwedler on his later reform flute models. (WaterhouseLangwillI).

Kruspe, Johann Eduard (b Erfurt, 1831; d Erfurt, 1919). German brass instrument maker, elder brother of FRIEDRICH WILHELM KRUSPE. He founded the firm of Ed. Kruspe on 2 January 1864 when he purchased a brass instrument-making business from Carl Zielsdorf; the firm still trades under the name of Ed. Kruspe. On 1 April 1893 the firm was taken over by Fritz Kruspe (b Erfurt, *c*1862; d Erfurt, 1909), who, together with a nephew of the distinguished horn player Friedrich Gumbert, produced the first 'combined double horn' in F/B♭ (patented in 1897). The association between player and craftsman is particularly strong in the history of this firm; Georg Wendler, at one time principal horn of the Boston SO, married Fritz Kruspe's daughter and took over the business in 1928. On his retirement in 1955, the affairs of the firm were managed by Rudi Schneider, an apprentice who became the owner in 1961. In 1979 his former apprentice Peter Heldmann became proprietor. Since reunification, this former East German company has continued to maintain its tradition as a small workshop for handcrafted instruments of high quality (horn, trombone and tuba), now since 1996 relocated in Wutha-Farnroda near Eisenach. All Kruspe horns have a characteristic tone, rather less brilliant than some other makes but very popular with some players.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Waterhouse-LangwillI
R. Morley-Pegge: The French Horn (London, 1960, 2/1973)

FRANK HAWKINS

Krustev, Venelin. See KRASTEV, VENELIN.

Kruszelnicka, Salomea. See KRUSCENISKI, SALOMEA.

Kruyf, Ton de (b Leerdam, 3 Oct 1937). Dutch composer. He was self-taught until 1966, when he studied composition with Fortner, though by that time he had already made a reputation with the orchestral Cinq impromptus (1958) and the sonatina for flute (1960). His early compositions are mostly founded on 12-note techniques. De Kruyf won a major success with Einst dem Grau for mezzo-soprano and ensemble (1964), which was performed at the 1965 ISCM Festival. During the 1960s his technique became more serial, as seen in Chronologie II (1967) and Sinfonia II (1968). A lyrical element, however, is always discernible in these works. In the 1970s, which began with a mixed reception of his opera Spinoza at the 1971 Holland Festival, De Kruyf concentrated increasingly on his lyrical gifts (e.g. Adagio in memoriam Wolfgang Fortner, 1987).

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Spinoza (op, 2, D.F. Frank), 1971; Quauhquauhtinchan in den vreemde (radiophonic op, H. Mullisch), Mez, nar, chorus, orch, 1971; Inaugurazione (monodrama, San Segonda), Mez, small orch, 1974

Orch: Mouvements symphoniques, 1955, rev. 1966; 5 impromptus, 1958; Chronologie II, 1967; Sinfonia II (Öxnaltsymfonie), 1968; Serenata, 1969; Quatre pas de deux, fl, orch, 1972; Canti e capricci, vc, chbr orch, 1984; Adagio in memoriam Wolfgang Fortner, 1987; Intrada, wind orch, 1989; Himalaya, 5 ballet scenes, 1995; Canto di speranza, vn, orch, 1998

Vocal: Einst dem Grau (P. Klee), Mez, orch, 1964; Pour faire le portrait d'un oiseau (J. Prévert), Mez, orch, 1965; Meditations, Bar, pf, str ens, 1976; Ode to the West Wind, chorus, orch, 1978; Cantate (Petronius, Ovid), T, chorus, ens, 1978

Inst: Sgrafitti, pf, 1960; Sonatine, fl, pf, 1960; Partita, str qt, 1962; Sonate, vc, 1964; Pas de deux, fl, pf, 1968; Mosaico, ob, str trio, 1969; Séance, perc, pf, hp, 1969; Musica portuensis, sax qt, 1984; 7 Preludes, vib, xylorimba, 1996; Arcadia, pf, 1996

Principal publishers: Bote & Bock, Donemus

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Vermeulen: 'Serenata by Ton de Kruyf', Sonorum speculum, no.40 (1969), 23–8
E. Vermeulen: 'Ton de Kruyf's opera Spinoza', Sonorum speculum, no.47 (1971), 1–14

JOS WOUTERS/LEO SAMAMA

Kruysen [Kruijsen], (René) Bernard (b Montreux, 28 March 1933). Dutch baritone. Descended from a family of artists, he studied originally at the Academy of Design in The Hague, then from 1953 at The Hague Conservatory. A scholarship from the French government enabled him to study with Pierre Bernac. Although he made his début in opera, and frequently performed as a soloist in oratorio and concerts, he was best known for his solo recitals, especially of French song. A fastidious artist, he had an ample, burnished tone, and held in fine balance the detailed inflections and the fuller design of each song. In France he was recognized as one of the greatest interpreters, and several of his recordings of mélodies received awards. He gave recitals with Poulenc and Hans Henkemans, among others, and had a strong partnership with the pianist Noël Lee. In addition, he represented his country at the world championships in spear fishing, and made underwater films with apparatus that he developed himself.

TRUUS DE LEUR/R

Kryukov, Vladimir Nikolayevich (b Moscow, 9/22 July 1902; d Staraya Ruza, nr Moscow, 14 June 1960). Russian composer. He studied under Myaskovsky at the Moscow Conservatory until 1925 and worked as a broadcasting editor (1930–31, 1950–51), music director of the Theatre of the Revolution (1933–5), director of the Moscow PO (1949–50) and composition teacher at the Gnesin Institute (1957–9). Like many of his Russian contemporaries, Kryukov was influenced by Skryabin's music during the 1920s; his later works are less progressive in style.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Korol' na ploshchadi [The King on the Square] (op, after A. Blok), 1925; Stantsionnïy smotritel' [The Postmaster] (op, M. Aliger, after A. Pushkin), 1938–40; Lev Gurïch Sinichkin (musical comedy, E. and M. Galperin, after V. Lensky), 1945; Dmitriy Donskoy (op, K. Kristi), 1947; Razlom [Breakage] (op, B. Lavrenyov), 1948; music for the theatre, cinema and radio

Orch: Neznakomka [The Unknown Woman], sym. prologue to Blok's play, 1923; Suite, 1929; 1920 god [The Year 1920], 1930; 9 yanvarya [9 Jan], 1931; Yevreyskaya uvertyura [Hebrew Ov.], 1933; Simfoniya-rapsodiya; Russkaya rapsodiya, 1944; Cl Concertino, 1945; Ballade, 1951; Sinfonietta, 1951; Cheshskaya rapsodiya [Czech Rhapsody], 1952; Pf Conc., 1953; Conc.-Poem, tpt, orch, 1954; Ov., folk orch, 1954; Syuita na ital'yanskiye temi [Suite on Italian Themes], 1954; Bronenosets Potyomkin [Battleship Potemkin], 1955; Hn Conc. (1957)

Chbr: Sonata, va, pf, 1919–20, rev. 1933; 4 Pieces, va/vc, pf (1930); Sonata, vn, pf, 1946; 2 Pieces, vn, pf (1950); 5 Pieces, vn/va, pf (1959)

Pf: Pieces, 1920; 3 sonatas, 1921, 1924, 1931; 4 Pieces, 1952; Sonatina, 1952; Indoneziyskiye peyzazhï [Indonesian Landscapes], 1953; Rhapsody no.2 (1958)

Vocal: 2 song cycles (Blok), 1v, pf, 1926, 1935; Oktyabrskaya kantata (A. Barto), children's chorus, 1947; O Moskve [On Moscow] (song cycle, A. Lugin), 1947; other song cycles

Principal publishers: Soviet State Publishing House, Universal, Sikorski

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BDRSC; SKM
V. Belyayev: 'Moskauer Komponisten', Musikblätter des Anbruch, vii (1925), 171–4, esp. 173
'V.N. Kryukov', Sovremennaya muzïka, viii (1925), 43
P.D. Roberts: Modernism in Russian Piano Music: Scriabin, Prokofiev, and their Russian Contemporaries (Bloomington, IN, 1993)

DETLEF GOJOWY

Krzanowski, Andrzej (b Bielsko-Biała, 9 April 1951; d Czechowice-Dziedzice, 1 Oct 1990). Polish composer and accordionist. He studied composition with Górecki and the accordion with Joachim Pichura at the Katowice Academy of Music (1971–5), where he taught upon graduation. He won a number of composition awards, including the prize of the Carl Maria von Weber International Competition in Dresden (1978, 1979) and the Lutosławski scholarship (1986); in 1988 he composed Relief IX in Glasgow on a grant from the Scottish Arts Council. As a performer, he appeared at many festivals of contemporary music.

Krzanowski was one of the most adventurous Polish composers of his generation, particularly in mixed media, computer music and in his use of extended playing techniques for the accordion. For his instrument he left a vast amount of music (six volumes have so far been published), of which arguably most remarkable are the experimental elements of the Audycja (programme) cycle (1973–82) and the detailed counterpoint of Alkagran (1980). The range of Krzanowski's musical expression is also in evidence in the chamber and orchestral works: brash extroversion marks the Canti di Wratislavia, while Relief IV for soprano and tubular bells and the Second Symphony are lyrical and introspective. He was just as concerned with formal cohesion, as his mastery of long-range tonal and motivic argument in the Symphony demonstrates.

WORKS
(selective list)

Prelude, accdn, 1970; 3 utwory [3 Pieces], ob, tpt, 1972; Studium I, accdn, orch, 1973; Audycja I [Programme I] (J. Bieriezin), spkr, ens, 1973; Str Qt no.1, 1973–6, arr. str qt, tape and quadraphonic sound diffusion, 1976; Partita, ob, cl, bn, 1974; Audycja IV [Programme IV] (Z. Dolecki), spkr, accdn, siren, cymbals, tape, 1975; Canti di Wratislavia, orch, 1976; 3 etiudy (Dolecki), S, fl, perc, 1976; Transpainting (audio-visual spectacle, K. Urbański), insts ens, tape, 1977; Con vigore, conc., 8 pfmrs, 1978; Str Qt no.2, 1978; Study no.4, accdn, 1978; Sonata, tuba, 1978; Conc. for Orch, 1978–81; Alkagran, 5 accdn, 1980; Salve Regina, boys'/female chorus, opt. org, 1981; Wiatr echo niesie po polanie [The Wind Carries the Echo over the Glade], accdn, amp hpd, 1981; Audycja VI [Programme VI] (J. Słowacki), S, str qt, 1982; Reminiscenza, accdn, cl, vn, vc, 1983, arr. str qt, 1984; Sym. no.2, 13 str, 1984; Gdzie kończy się tęcza [Where the Rainbow Ends], b cl, perc, 1985; Relief IV, S, tubular bells, 1985; Str Qt no.3, 1988; Relief IX, str qt, tape, 1988; Sonata, gui, 1990

Principal publishers: PWM, Agencja Autorska

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EMuz (L. Polony)
K. Baculewski: 'The New Generation of Polish Composers: II', Polish Music, no.1 (1978), 28–32

ADRIAN THOMAS

Krzesichleb, Piotr. See ARTOMIUS, PIOTR.

Krzyżanowski, Ignacy (b Opatów, Kielce, 24 Dec 1826; d Warsaw, 10 Feb 1905). Polish composer and pianist. He was not related to Justyna Krzyżanowska, Chopin's mother, as was long believed. He studied the piano with his father in Kraków and harmony with Mirecki, and later at the Paris Conservatoire with H. Colet (from 1843). He also took a few lessons from Chopin. As a pianist Krzyżanowski was recognized as an outstanding musician, notably by Thalberg, and his playing was marked by a light, singing, soft tone. In 1848, on Chopin's advice, he went on a concert tour to London where he had considerable success; however, he was eventually obliged to give up touring because of eye illness. From 1850 he lived in Warsaw, concentrating on teaching; he was quickly recognized as one of the best piano teachers in Warsaw. Krzyżanowski's compositions, apart from his songs and three youthful works for violin and for cello, consist exclusively of piano music, most of which was published in Warsaw, Germany, Italy and Russia. His style shows a marked influence of Chopin, especially in form, melody and accompaniment figuration. He also co-founded the Warsaw Music Society and published articles on music in the Polish magazines Ruch muzyczny, Echo muzyczne and Bluszcz.

WORKS

Pf: Andante cantabile, E♭, op.17 (Warsaw, *c*1852–9); Scherzo, c, op.21 (Warsaw, 1858); Polonaise, A, op.37 (Berlin, *c*1874–9); Sonata, b♭, op.45 (Wrocław, 1882); other polonaises, mazurkas, krakowiaks, waltzes, nocturnes, and impromptus
Other works: Vn Sonata; Vc Sonata; Romance, vn; songs

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EMuz (I. Spóz)
W. Poźniak: 'Muzyka fortepianowa po Chopinie' [Piano music after Chopin], Z dziejów polskiej kultury muzycznej, ii, ed. A. Nowak-Romanowicz and others (Kraków, 1966), 522

ZOFIA CHECHLIŃSKA

Krzyżanowski, Stanisław Andrzej (b Laszki Wielkie, nr Lemberg [now L'viv], 15 Feb 1836; d Kraków, 11 Oct 1922). Polish bookseller and music publisher. From 1855 he worked in various bookshops in Lemberg, Chernovtsy, Leipzig and Kraków, where in 1870 he founded his own bookshop and swiftly developed it into one of the leading Polish music firms. He specialized in publishing the music of contemporary Polish composers, including J.K. Gall, Noskowski, Szopski, Żeleński, Ignacy Friedman, Niewiadomski, Świerzyński and Wroński. His bookshop also imported the latest editions from abroad, and provided a music lending library, amounting to 16,000 items in 1885. From 1879 Krzyżanowski also managed a concert bureau, organizing performances in Kraków by many prominent virtuosos, notably Anton Rubinstein (1879), Joachim and Brahms (1880), Paderewski (1883 and later), Sarasate, Hofmann, Friedman, Eugène Ysaÿe and others. The versatility of Krzyżanowski's firm was of great importance to musical life in Kraków, and his bookshop soon became an artistic centre. In 1908 the firm was taken over by his son Marian Krzyżanowski (1880–1964), who directed it to 1964, from 1950 solely as a second-hand bookshop.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PSB (B. Łopuszański); PSB ('Krzyżanowski, Marian', F. Pieczątkowski)
J.W. Reiss: Almanach muzyczny Krakowa 1780–1914, i (Kraków, 1939), 154ff
I. Lechiert: 'Krzyżanowski (1) Stanisław Andrzej', Słownik pracowników książkl polskiej [Dictionary of the Polish book trade], ed. I. Treichel (Warsaw, 1972)

KORNEL MICHAŁOWSKI

Ktesibios. See CTESIBIUS.

Kuba, Ludvík (b Poděbrady, Bohemia, 16 April 1863; d Prague, 30 Nov 1956). Czech folksong collector, writer and painter. After studying at the Prague Organ School under Skuherský (1877–9) and at a teachers' training college in Kutná Hora (1879–83), he became a village schoolmaster for a few years. He abandoned this in 1885 to devote himself wholly to his life-work, the assembly of a vast collection of Slavonic folk music (Slovanstvo ve svých zpěvech), which he had begun to publish privately in 1884. His research took him all over the Slavonic world: particularly valuable for instance are his notations of Russian folk polyphony and of the south Slav duets. He was equally gifted as a painter; his works blend impressionism with realism, taking much of their subject matter from his travels. When discouraged by lack of interest in his folksong research, Kuba returned to painting and studied further in Prague (1891–3), Paris (1894–5) and Munich (1896–1904). He then lived in Vienna before returning to Prague in 1911. After the establishment of the Czechoslovak Republic in 1918, Kuba found active support from President Masaryk for his folksong collection, and the entire project was finally completed in 1929 with the appearance of the 15th volume. Official recognition followed: he received an honorary doctorate from Prague University in 1936 and was made National Artist in 1945.

WRITINGS

O písni slovanské [On Slavonic song] (Prague, 1922)
Cesty za slovanskou písní (1855–1929) [Journeys in search of Slavonic song] (Prague, 1933–5, 2/1953)
ed. V. Fiala: Křížem krážem slovenským světem [Criss-cross through the Slavonic world] (Prague, 1956)

FOLKSONG EDITIONS

Slovanstvo ve svých zpěvech [The Slavonic world in its songs] (Pardubice, 1884–1929)
Nowa zběrka melodiji k hornjolužiskim pěsnjam [A new collection of tunes to Lower Lusatian songs] (Budyšin, 1887)
Pjesme i napjevi iz Bosne i Hercegovine [Songs and tunes from Bosnia and Hercegovina] (Sarajevo, 1906–9, rev. 2/1984 by C. Rihtman)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Páta: Ludvík Kuba: stručný nákres života a díla [Ludvik Kuba: a brief outline of his life and works] (Prague, 1926)
L. Kuba: Zaschlá paleta: paměti [A dried-up palette: memoirs] (Prague, 1955, 2/1958)
J. Stanislav: Ludvík Kuba: zakladatel slovenské hudební folkloristiky [Kuba: founder of Slovak musical folklore studies] (Prague, 1963)
Ludvík Kuba a slovanská etnografie: Poděbrady 1986 [Kuba and Slavonic ethnography]

JOHN TYRRELL

Kubelík, Jan (b Michle, nr Prague, 5 July 1880; d Prague, 5 Dec 1940). Czech violinist and composer, father of RAFAEL KUBELÍK. His talent was encouraged from early childhood, and he studied the violin with Otakar Ševčík at the Prague Conservatory, as well as composition with Foerster and others. At the outset of his career in 1898 he was acclaimed as 'a second Paganini' in Vienna and other cities, including London, where he made his début in 1900 at a Richter concert in St James's Hall. He toured the USA from 1901, as well as South America, East Asia, Australia and Africa in later years. His financial rewards enabled him to support the Czech PO in a financial crisis in 1901 and to organize a British tour for it in 1902, when it performed as the Kubelík Bohemian Orchestra from Prague; that year he received the Royal Philharmonic Society gold medal. Kubelík was regarded as an outstanding exponent of the Ševčík violin method, and the essence of his art was his absolute technical mastery of a wide repertory and his depth of musical perception. He had an active concert career of over 40 years, retiring after a celebratory season of ten Prague concerts (1939–40), during which he performed nearly 50 works. His last concert was given for a student audience at the Smetana Hall, Prague, on 8 May 1940. He played a violin by Guarneri del Gesù, presented to him in Vienna in 1899, and then two by Stradivari, of which the first, dated 1678, was presented to him in 1901 by Lord Walter Palmer, and the second, dated 1715 and called the 'Emperor', was bought for him in London in 1910. As a composer he showed more taste and sense of tone colour than originality in a number of works, including a symphony, six violin concertos, and works for violin and piano. He wrote his own cadenzas for several concertos including those by Beethoven, Brahms and Tchaikovsky, as well as for a concerto by Foerster which was composed for him. Among his eight children his daughter Anita (Anna) became a violinist and his son RAFAEL KUBELÍK a conductor.

Jan Kubelík

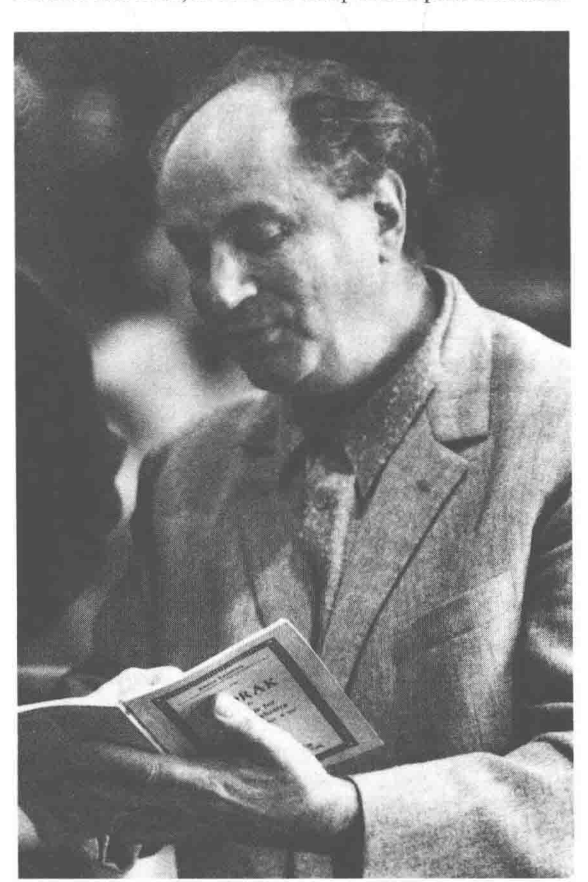
BIBLIOGRAPHY



O. Nedbal: 'Ze vzpomínek na Jana Kubelíka' [From the recollections of Jan Kubelík], Tempo [Prague] (1929–30), 324–7
B. Voldan: Skladby Jana Kubelíka [Jan Kubelík's compositions] (Prague, 1933)
K. Hoffmeister: Jan Kubelík (Prague, 1941)
H. Doležil: Mistr houslí Jan Kubelík [Jan Kubelík: master of the violin] (Prague, 1941)
J. Dostál, ed.: Jan Kubelík (Prague, 1942) [incl. list of works and discography]
J. Creighton: Discopaedia of the Violin (Toronto, 1974, 2/1994)
J. Vratislavský: Jan Kubelík (Prague, 1978)
F. Žídek: Čeští houslisté tří století [Czech violinists of three centuries] (Prague, 1982), 134–43

GRACIAN ČERNUŠÁK, ALENA NĚMCOVÁ

Kubelík, Rafael (Jeronym) (b Býchory, nr Prague, 29 June 1914; d Lucerne, 11 Aug 1996). Swiss conductor and composer of Czech birth, son of the violinist JAN KUBELÍK and Countess Marianne Csaky-Szell. At an early age he showed exceptional promise on both the piano and the violin, and at 14 entered the Prague Conservatory, studying those two instruments, composition and conducting. At 19 he made his début as a conductor with the Czech PO, to which he was appointed two years later, bringing it to Britain in 1937 and 1938. He was musical director of the Brno Opera (where he gave the Czech première of Les Troyens) from 1939 to 1941, when the Nazis closed the theatre, whereupon he returned to Prague and the Czech PO as its chief conductor. He held this post until 1948, when because of the communist takeover he decided to defect while at the Edinburgh Festival to conduct Don Giovanni. After refusing offers from the BBC (where he was much liked), he accepted the position of musical director of the Chicago SO, but resigned after three years, having been savagely attacked not, as has often been claimed, for having too limited a repertory but, on the contrary, for introducing too many (about 60) new works, for demanding exhaustive rehearsals and for engaging several black artists. He toured the USA with the Concertgebouw Orchestra, had a brilliant success with Janáček's Kát'a Kabanová at Sadler's Wells in London in 1954, and the following year was nominated musical director of Covent Garden. There he gave local premières of Les Troyens (1957) and Janáček's Jenůfa (1956) and notable performances of, among others, Otello and Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg, and declared a policy of concentrating on a resident company singing in English.

Virulent attacks by Beecham on the Covent Garden management and its engagement of foreign conductors led him to withdraw and devote himself to symphonic work, conducting and recording with the Vienna PO, Israel PO, Boston SO and other orchestras. A large number of recordings (including acclaimed sets of the Mahler symphonies and the Dvořák tone poems) were made with the Bavarian RSO, whose principal conductor he became in 1961. Kubelík's 18 years in this appointment were the happiest and most fruitful of his career: besides public appearances, he took the orchestra on various foreign tours. In 1967 he became a Swiss citizen, and acted as adviser to the Lucerne Festival. In addition to his Munich activities, in 1973 he accepted the post of musical director of the Metropolitan Opera; but the general manager who had appointed him died before he arrived, and finding conditions unacceptable he resigned less than a year later. Increasing ill-health, particularly arthritis, forced him to give up his Munich post (he had to break off during a performance of Mahler's Ninth Symphony), and in 1985 he virtually retired from conducting, though in 1990 he made a courageous appearance with the Czech PO at the Prague Spring (which, years before, he had helped to found) in Smetana's Má vlast. He was showered with honours from many countries.

Rafael Kubelík, 1969

Kubelík was perhaps most at ease in the symphonic repertory, in particular the symphonies of Schumann and Brahms (all of which he recorded) and the works of his fellow-countrymen (Martinů, Janáček etc.) and of Mahler, which suited his romantic, rhythmically flexible approach. He gave the premières of several works by Martinů, Martin's 6 Monologe aus 'Jedermann' (1949) and Schoenberg's Die Jakobsleiter (1961). He was greatly respected and liked by orchestras everywhere, though it was sometimes felt that he talked too much at rehearsals. As a composer in a neo-Romantic idiom his output included the operas Veronika (1947, Brno), Cornelia Faroli (1972, Augsburg), Daybreak, Císařovy nové šaty ('The Emperor's New Clothes') and Květinky malé Idy ('The Flowers of Little Ida'); three requiem settings, a Stabat mater and an a cappella mass; three symphonies and other orchestral works; concertos for violin and cello; six string quartets, a piano trio, piano sonatinas and songs. He married the violinist Lála (Ludmila) Bertlová in 1942 and the soprano Elsie Morison (who had sung The Bartered Bride with him in London) in 1963.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Rosenthal: 'Pen Portrait: Rafael Kubelík', MT, xcviii (1957), 606 only

H. Rosenthal: Two Centuries of Opera at Covent Garden (London, 1958)

J.H. Sutcliffe: 'Kubelík Speaks: the Met's Forthcoming Music Director', ON, xxxvi/1 (1971–2), 6–7

N. Kenyon: The BBC Symphony Orchestra (London, 1981)

J. Holmes: Conductors on Record (Westport, CT, 1982)

R. Temple Savage: 'A Voice from the Pit', Opera, xxxviii (1987), 25–9

LIONEL SALTER

Kubička, Víazoslav (b Bratislava, 11 Oct 1953). Slovak composer. He studied composition with Pospíšil at the Conservatory in Bratislava (1970–75) and then with Cikker at the Academy of Music and Dramatic Art (until 1980). From 1979 to 1991 he was classical music editor with Czechoslovak Radio, Bratislava, and Dramaturg of the station's Experimental Studio. In 1991 he founded a private recording studio.

Kubička's career as a composer has developed along coherent lines. In early works he was inspired mainly by Janáček, Stravinsky and Zeljenka. His technique relies on strong, rhythmical motifs subjected to gradual transformations, while the forms of his works are characterized by laconicism and brevity, often causing fragmentariness. He displays a predilection for chamber music, especially piano pieces, though he has also written important works for orchestra and in the electronic medium. In a technical as well as aesthetic sense, many of his works are inspired by the visual arts. His Fantázia for flute and piano was placed ninth at the 1981 UNESCO International Rostrum in Paris.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Dramatická predohras [Dramatic Ov.], op.3, 1980; Dozrievanie [Ripening], ov, op.26, 1984; Fantázia, op.36, vc, orch, 1985; Hpd Conc., op.39, str, 1986; B Cl Conc., op.63, str, 1989; Fantázia-koncert, op.64, 2 vn, str, 1989; Jesenná hudba [Autumn Music], op.73, vn, str, 1990

Chbr and solo inst: Fantázia, op.1, fl, pf, 1979; Qnt, op.18, cl, vn, va, vc, pf, 1982; Úsilie [Effort], op.14, 2 cl, 1982; Cesta [Way], op.20, cl, vc, pf, 1983; Volanie [Calling], op.15, cl, pf, 1983; Capriccio, op.25, hpd, 1984; Jesenná sonáta, op.24, vn, pf, 1984; Qnt, op.23, fl, ob, vc, bn, cimb, 1984; Rozlúčka, op.34, str qt, 1985; Sonata, op.35, vc, pf, 1985; Trio 'Goya', op.33, fl, vc, cimb, 1985

Vocal: 2 oslovenia [2 Addresses] (K. Belicová, C. Baudelaire), op.5, S, pf, 1980; Je ticho už [Everything is Silent Now], op.22, S, tape, 1984; Satyr a nymfa, op.32, S, cl, tape, 1985

Other el-ac: Venované Musorgskému [Dedicated to Musorgsky], op.7, 1981; ... a plakal by aj kameň [... and even the stone would weep], op.10, 1982; Cesta [Way], 1991

For children: Poďte so mnou do lesa [Come with Me to the Wood], op.12, pf, 1982; 5 príbehov [5 Stories], op.11, pf, 1982; Malé more [Little Sea], op.17 , pf, 1983; Cyklus skladieb [Cycle of Pieces], op.29, cl, pf, 1985; Cyklus skladieb, op.31, a sax, pf, 1985

Principal recording companies: Centre for Electroacoustic and Computer Music (Bratislava), Opus

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Kaduch: Česká a slovenská elektroakustická hudba 1964–1994: osobní slovník [Czech and Slovak electro-acoustic music 1964–1994: a biographical dictionary] (Ostrava, 1994), esp. 86–7

J. Půriš and V. Godár, eds.: 'Slovenská elektroakustická hudba', SH, xxii (1996), 1–2

VLADIMÍR GODÁR

Kubik, Gail (Thompson) (b South Coffeyville, OK, 5 Sept 1914; d West Covina, CA, 20 July 1984). American composer. At the age of 15 he won a full scholarship to the Eastman School, where he studied the violin with Samuel Belov and composition with Bernard Rogers and Edward Royce (1930–34). He then continued his compositional studies with Sowerby at the American Conservatory in Chicago (MM, 1935) and with Piston and Boulanger at Harvard University (1937–8). After serving as staff composer and programme adviser for NBC radio in New York (1940–41) and music consultant to the Office of War Information film bureau (1942–3), he joined the First Motion Picture Unit of the US Army Air Corps. He remained there until 1946, gaining a reputation as one of the foremost composers for wartime documentaries. His receipt of the Rome Prize in 1950 inaugurated the first of two long periods spent in Europe (1950–55, 1959–67). From 1970 until his retirement in 1980 he was composer-in-residence at Scripps College in Claremont, California. His awards include two Guggenheim Fellowships (1944, 1965) and the Pulitzer Prize, which, as the youngest recipient to date, he won for his Symphony Concertante in 1952. His Second and Third Symphonies were commissioned respectively by the Louisville Orchestra and the New York PO.

Kubik's music, though often dissonant, remains essentially tonal, notable for its rhythmic vitality and virtuosity as well as its fine craftsmanship and orchestration. Equally adept at writing for the concert hall as for broadcast media, he derived many of his concert works from his scores for film, radio and television. For much of his career he was considered a modernist: the trenchant idiom of his music for William Wyler's film The Desperate Hours led the studio, Paramount, to cut much of it and, in an unprecedented gesture, return the music rights to him. In later life, however, he felt ill at ease with changing musical styles, and his attempts to come to terms with the 12-note technique meant that he composed little between 1959 and 1967. His finest work is to be found in his film scores, vocal compositions and chamber music.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Puck: a Legend of Bethlehem (radio score), 1940; Thunderbolt (film score), 1945; A Mirror for the Sky (folk op), 1946; C-Man (film score), 1949; Gerald McBoing-Boing (film score), 1950, concert version for nar, 9 insts, perc, 1950; The Miner's Daughter (film score), 1950; The Desperate Hours (film score), 1955; The Silent Sentinel (TV score), 1958

Orch: Variations on a 13th-Century Troubadour Song, 1935, rev. 1937; Vn Conc., 1939–40, rev. 1941; Scherzo, 1941; Folk Song Suite, 1941–4; Memphis Belle, spkr, orch, 1944; Sym no.1, E♭, 1947–9; Sym. concertante, pf, va, tpt, orch, 1951, rev. 1953; Thunderbolt Ov., 1953; Sym. no.2, F, 1954–6; Sym. no.3, 1956; Scenes, 1964; Prayer and Toccata, org, chbr orch, 1969; Pastorale and Spring Valley Ov., 1947 and 1969–73

Band: Stewball, 1942; Fanfare and March, 1945; Fanfare for One World, 1947

Vocal: In Praise of Johnny Appleseed (V. Lindsay), B-Bar, chorus, orch, 1938, rev. 1961; Litany and Prayer, male chorus, brass, perc, 1943–5; Boston Baked Beans: a New England Fable, S, Bar, cl, tpt, pf, db, 1950; Fables in Song (T. Roethke), Mez/Bar, pf, 1950–69; A Christmas Set (medieval), chbr chorus, chbr orch, 1968; A Record of our Time (cant.), nar, chorus, orch, 1970; Scholastica, unacc., 1972; Magic, Magic, Magic!, A, chbr chorus, chbr orch, 1973–6

Chbr and solo inst: Trivialities, fl, hn, str qt, 1934–6; Pf Trio, a, 1934; Celebrations and Epilogue, pf, 1938–50; Song and Scherzo, 2 pf, 1940, rev. 1961; Pf Sonatina, 1941; Sonatina, vn, pf, 1941; Sonata, vn, pf, 1947; Divertimento no.1, 13 players, 1958; Divertimento no.2, 8 players, 1958; Intermezzo: Music for Cleveland, pf, 1967; Music for Bells, handbells, 1969; 5 Theatrical Sketches (Divertimento no.3), pf trio, 1970–71; Sym., E♭, 2 pf, 1979 [based on Sym. no.1]

Principal publishers: Boosey & Hawkes, Chappell, Colombo, MCA, Paramount, Ricordi, G. Schirmer, Southern

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EwenD

M.D. Lyall: The Piano Music of Gail Kubik (DMA diss., Peabody Institute, Johns Hopkins U., 1980) [incl. further bibliography]

A. Cochran: 'Kubik, Gail T.', American National Biography, ed. J.A. Garraty and M.C. Carnes (New York, 1998)

ALFRED W. COCHRAN

Kubik, Gerhard [Akaning'a] (b Vienna, 10 Dec 1934). Austrian ethnomusicologist. He took the doctorate in 1971 at the University of Vienna with a dissertation on Mukanda boys' initiation rites in eastern Angola and he was awarded the Habilitation in 1980 for his Theory of African Music, a collection of essays written between 1964 and 1977. He was appointed external lecturer at Vienna in 1970, lecturer in 1980 and subsequently professor; he was also appointed professor at the Institute for Ethnology and Africa Studies at the University of Mainz, associate of the Centre for Social Research at the University of Malawi and honorary fellow of the Royal Anthropological Institute of Great Britain. He has conducted fieldwork in 16 sub-Saharan countries beginning in 1959 and he extended his work in 1974 to Venezuela and Brazil: his research resulted in probably the most comprehensive collection of documented recordings of African and diasporic music, as well as of oral literature, ever compiled (over 26,000 items; see Kubik, 1968). His areas of research include oral literature, systems of traditional education, secret societies, mask construction and performance, African systems of ideographic writing, Bantu language cognition and the psychology of culture contact. In addition to publishing over 220 writings, he is also a member of the last surviving South African kwela jazz band, Donald Kachamba's Kwela Band, in which he plays the clarinet and guitar.

WRITINGS

'The Structure of Kiganda Xylophone Music', AfM, ii/3 (1960), 6–30
Mehrstimmigkeit und Tonsysteme in Zentral- und Ostafrika: Bemerkungen zu den eigenen, im Phonogrammarchiv der Österreichischen Akademie der Wissenschaften archivierten Expeditionsaufnahmen (Vienna, 1968)
'Afrikanische Elemente im Jazz: Jazzelemente in der popularen Musik Afrikas', Jazzforschung, i (1969), 84–98
'Composition Techniques in Kiganda Xylophone Music with an Introduction into some Kiganda Musical Concepts', AfM, iv/3 (1969), 22–72; repr. in Theory of African Music (1980)
'Transmission et transcription des éléments de musique instrumentale africaine', Bulletin of the International Committee on Urgent Anthropological and Ethnological Research, xi (1969), 47–61
'Construction and Structure of the Amadinda Music of the Buganda', Musik als Gestalt und Erlebnis: Festschrift Walter Graf, ed. E. Schenk (Vienna, 1970), 109–37
Música tradicional e aculturada dos !Kung' de Angola (Lisbon, 1970)
Die Institution 'Mukanda' und assoziierte Einrichtungen bei den Vambwela/Vankangala und verwandten Ethnien in Südostangola (diss., U. of Vienna, 1971)
'Transcription of African Music from Silent Film: Theory and Methods', AfM, v/2 (1972), 28–39; repr. in Theory of African Music (1980)
Musiek van de Humbi en de Handa uit Angola (Tervuren, 1973) [in Dutch, Ger., with summaries in Eng., Fr.]
'Daniel Kachamba's Solo Guitar Music', Jazzforschung, viii (1976), 159–95
'Perzeptorische und kognitive Grundlagen der Musikgestaltung in Schwarzafrika', Musicologica austriaca, i (1977), 35–90; Eng. trans. in Theory of African Music (1980)
'Harp Music of the Azande and Related People in the Central African Republic', Folk Harp Journal, nos.21–2 (1978), 16–24, 26–9; repr. in Theory of African Music (1980)
Angolan Traits in Black Music, Games and Dances of Brazil (Lisbon, 1979); summary in IMSCR XII: Berkeley 1977, 66–74
'Donald Kachamba's Montage Recordings: Aspects of Urban Music History in Malawi', African Urban Studies, new ser., no.6 (1979–80), 89–122
Theory of African Music (Wilhelmshaven, 1994) [Eng. trans. of Habilitationsschrift, U. of Vienna, 1980]
'Neo-Traditional Popular Music in East Africa since 1945', Popular Music, i (1981), 83–104
Ostafrika, Musikgeschichte in Bildern, i/10 (Leipzig, 1982)
'Kognitive Grundlagen afrikanischer Musik', Musik in Afrika, ed. A. Simon (Berlin, 1983), 327–400
'A Structural Examination of Homophonic Multi-Part Singing in East and Central Africa', AnM, xxxix–xl (1984–5), 27–58
'African Tone Systems: a Reassessment', YIFMC, xvii (1985), 31–63
'The Mkangala Mouth-Bow: an Instrument for Young Women in Malawi', YTM, xiii (1986), 3–11
'Stability and Change in African Musical Traditions', World of Music, xxviii/1 (1986), 44–68
'African Space/Time Concepts and the Tusona Ideographs in Luchazi Culture with a Discussion of Possible Cross-Parallels in Music', AfM, vi/4 (1987), 53–89
Malawian Music: a Framework for Analysis (Zomba, Malawi, 1987)
'Nsenga-Shona Harmonic Patterns and the San Heritage in Southern Africa', EthM, xxxii (1988), 39–76
Zum Verstehen afrikanischer Musik: ausgewählte Aufsätze (Leipzig, 1988)
'The Southern Periphery: Banjo Traditions in Zambia and Malawi', World of Music, xxxi/1 (1989), 3–29
Westafrika, Musikgeschichte in Bildern, i/9 (Leipzig, 1989)
'Drum Patterns in the Batuque of Benedito Caxias', LAMR, xi (1990), 115–81
'Documentation in the Field: Scientific Strategies and the Psychology of Culture Contact', Music in the Dialogue of Cultures: Traditional Music and Cultural Policy, ed. M.P. Baumann (Wilhelmshaven, 1991), 318–35
Extensionen afrikanischer Kulturen in Brasilien (Aachen, 1991)
'"Muxima Ngola": Veränderungen und Strömungen in den Musikkulturen Angolas im 20. Jahrhundert', Populäre Musik in Afrika, ed. V. Erlmann (Berlin, 1991), 201–71
'Theorie, Aufführungspraxis und Kompositionstechniken der Hofmusik von Buganda: ein Leitfaden zur Komposition in einer ostafrikanischen Musikkultur', HJM, xi (1991), 23–162
'Analoge Strukturen im auditiven und visuellen Bereich afrikanischer künstlerischer Gestaltung', Jb Bayerische Akademie der Schönen Künste, vi (1992), 326–68; repr. in Kunst verstehen – Musik verstehen, ed. S. Mauser (Laaber, 1993), 151–91
Makisi – Nyau – Mapiko: Maskentraditionen im Bantu-sprachigen Afrika (Munich, 1993)
'Transplantation of African Musical Cultures into the New World', Slavery in the Americas, ed. W. Binder (Würzburg, 1993), 421–52
African Music for Schools: a Teachers' Manual (Windhoek, Namibia, 1994)
'Erbstücke eines Kalucazi-Dorfvorstehers: Chief Kajimo Makeche', Franz Födermayr zum 60. Geburtstag: Beiträge zu Methode und Problematik der systematischen, ethnologischen und historischen Musikwissenschaft, ed. E.T. Hilscher and T. Antonicek (Tutzing, 1994), 297–326
'Ethnicity, Cultural Identity, and the Psychology of Culture Contact', Music and Black Ethnicity: the Caribbean and South America, ed. G.H. Béhague (New Brunswick, NJ, 1994), 17–46
'Namibia-Survey 1991–1993: Landesweite Bestandaufnahme von Musiktraditionen und Oralliteratur', EM: annuario degli archivi di etnomusicologia dell'accademia nazionale de Santa Cecilia, ii (1994), 151–209
'Cultural Interchange between Angola and Portugal in the Field of Music from the 16th Century to the Present', Portugal and the World: the Encounter of Cultures in Music, ed. S. el-S. Castelo-Branco (Lisbon, 1996), 395–419
'Unterricht im Yoruba-Trommeln: Alfons M. Dauer und meine Forschungen in Westafrika 1960', ... und der Jazz ist nicht von Dauer: Aspekte afro-amerikanischer Musik: Festschrift für Alfons Michael Dauer, ed. B. Hoffmann and H. Rösing (Karben, 1998)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. de Oliveira Pinto: 'Une expérience transculturelle: entretien avec Gerhard Kubik', Cahiers de musiques traditionelles, vii (1994), 211–27
A. Schmidhofer and D. Schuller, eds.: For Gerhard Kubik: Festschrift (Frankfurt, 1994) [incl. list of pubns and recordings, 605–25]

GREGORY F. BARZ

Kubík, Ladislav (b Prague, 26 Aug 1946). Czech composer. From 1963 to 1970 he studied composition under Hlobil and Pauer at the Prague Academy; as a postgraduate there he studied music theory with Janeček (1970–72) and continued his composition studies with Pauer (1980–85). From 1971 to 1983 he was editor and then editor-in-chief of the music department of Czechoslovak Radio in Prague. From 1983 to 1990 he served as general secretary of the Union of Czech composers. He has taught composition and orchestration at the Prague Conservatory (1973–6) and lectured on contemporary music at Charles University, Prague. In 1990–91 he was visiting scholar at the University of South Florida and the Florida State University, becoming a full professor of composition at the latter in 1992. In 1994 he was appointed president of the Czech-American Summer Music Institute, and has since founded and sponsored the biannual Ladislav Kubík International Prize in composition. He is the recipient of numerous awards, among them two UNESCO prizes (1974, 1978) and first prize of the International Franz Kafka Competition.

His works successfully combine new techniques such as aleatoricism and timbre music with traditional tectonic principles and motivic development with the aim of building communicative structures.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Solaris (radio op, S. Lem), 1976; Zpěv člověka [Song of Man] (ballet fantasy), 1984
Orch: Sym. no.1, 1970; Pf Conc., 1974; Vn Conc., 1980; Conc. grosso, vn, pf, perc, str, 1987; Sym. no.2 after S. Dali: Discovery of America, wind, perc, 1993; Conc., hpd, chbr orch, 1995; Jacob's Well, 1997; Pf Conc., 1999; Sinfonietta, chbr orch, 1999

Vocal: Nářek bojovníkovy ženy [The Lament of a Warrior's Wife] (trad. Vietnamese), S, chbr ens, 1974; Slova [Words] (J. Žáček, M. Procházková, M. Rúfus), Mez, small orch, 1982; Triptych (F. Kafka): The Way, Ct, chbr ens, 1993; The River in Spring, Mez, perc, 1996; In Night, Bar, chbr ens, 1997

Chbr and solo inst: 3 skladby [3 Pieces], pf, 1969; Str Qt, 1981; 2 episody [2 episodes], b cl, perc, pf, 1986; Str Qt, 1986; Pf Trio, 1987; Divertimento, 8 wind, 1988; The Late Afternoon of a Faun, fl, perc, 1992; Angels and Airplanes after paintings by Kandinsky, Lissitzky and Goncharova, ob, cl, bn, pf, 1994

Principal publisher: Panton

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Havlík: 'Orchestrální tvorba Ladislava Kubíka z let 1970–1980' [Kubík's orchestral works from the years 1970–1980], HV, xxiv (1987), 208–41

JAN DEHNER

Kubín, Rudolf (b Ostrava, 10 Jan 1909; d Ostrava, 11 Jan 1973). Czech composer. He studied the cello with Julius Junek and composition with Hába at the Prague Conservatory (1924–9). In 1929 he joined the Prague RO as a cellist and from 1935 he worked alternately in Ostrava and Brno as music director of Czech Radio. After World War II he helped found the Ostrava branch of the Czech Composers' Union, and was its first president (1949–55). He also took part in the establishment of the Ostrava Higher Music Teaching College (which he directed in 1953–4), later re-formed as the conservatory, where he was director in 1958–60. Kubín was further involved in forming the Ostrava State PO (later renamed the Janáček PO) in 1954.

Beyond its stylistic variety Kubín's music exhibits two characteristic traits: direct, folk-like melodic invention and a concern for expressiveness that is sometimes allowed to overrule formal dictates. His early works, influenced by Hába, employed quarter-tones and also took ideas from contemporary dance music. His interest in light music was reflected in his musical comedy Letní noc ('Summer Night'), the first Czech radio opera. The 1930s brought a change to a style marked by Expressionism and by the work of Stravinsky, Hindemith, Honegger and Janáček. Kubín's music of this time is harsh, impulsive and rhythmically emphatic; a fine example is the Symfonietta (1936). His postwar works are simpler and tend to synthesize his earlier techniques; they are also touched by the socialist-realist aesthetic, notably in the cycle of symphonic poems Ostrava and the opera Naši furianti ('Our Swaggerers'). The latter's Smetana-like style, realism and folk-like musical language were intended to make it as appealing as possible to a working-class audience.

Among his operetta and folk operas Děvčátko z kolonie ('The Girl from the Mining Settlement', 1942) was especially successful. After the première of the revised version (10 September 1955) some of its songs became popular and were published and recorded separately.

WORKS
(selective list)

OPERAS

Žena, která zdělila muže [The Woman who did down Men]/Ženich z prérie [The Bridegroom from the Prairie] (operetta, 3, F. Lašek and F. Balej), Prague, Vinohrady Comic Opera, 29 March 1930

Tři mušketýři [The Three Musketeers]/Královnin náhrdelník [The Queen's Necklace] (musical comedy, 3, K. Musil and V. Nečas, after A. Dumas), Prague, Uranie, 19 April 1931

Letní noc [Summer Night] (radio op, 1, M. Kareš), 1931, Czech Radio, 26 Sept 1931

Kavalír [The Cavalier] (operetta, 3, L. Pohl), 1932, unperf.

Cirkus života [Circus of Life] (operetta, 3, Kareš), Prague, Big Operetta, 15 May 1933

Děvčátko z kolonie [The Girl from the Mining Settlement] (operetta, 3, V. Poláček and V. Ruml), Ostrava, Moravian-Silesian, 22 March 1942, rev. (lib. by K. Melichar-Skoumal), Ostrava, 10 Sept 1955

Naši furianti [Our Swaggerers] (comic op, 3, Pohl, after L. Stroupežnický), 1942–3, rev. version, Ostrava, 18 Sept 1949

Selský kníže [The Village Prince] (operetta-burlesque, 3, Pohl), Prague, Comic Opera, 10 April 1947

Koleje mládí [The Ways of Youth] (play with song and dance, 2, J. Plachetka), Brno, Reduta, 15 Sept 1949

Pasekáři [People of the Glades] (operetta, 3, Kubín, M. Vyoral and A. Koreček, after F. Sokol-Tůma), 1950–51, rev. version, Ostrava, State, 30 April 1954

OTHER WORKS

Orch: Česká předehra [Czech Ov.], 1932; Symfonietta, orch, org, 1936; Zpěv uhlí [Song of the Coal], sym. ov., 1936; Koncertantní symfonie, 4 hn, orch, 1937; Trbn Conc., 1937; Cl Conc., 1939; Vn Conc. no.1, 1940; Accdn Conc., 1950; Ostrava: Vítězství [Victory], Maryčka Magdónova, Ostrava, V Beskydách [In the Beskydy Mountains], Ocelové srdce [Steel Heart], sym. poems, 1950–51; Julius Fučík, ov., 1953; Vn Conc., no.2, 1960; Tuba Concertino, 1962; Vzpomínka [Reminiscence], sym., 1968

Cants.: Jáma Pokrok [The 'Progress' Mine] (A. Vojkůvka), 1937; Píseň o domovině [A Song of the Homeland] (V. Martínek), 1938; Ze tmy na světlo [From Darkness to Light] (V. Závada), 1949

Songs and song cycles: Ostrava (P. Bezruč), Bar, male chorus, orch, 1932; Zpěvy staré Francie [Songs of Old France] (J. Tiersot), S, small orch, 1944; Zpěvy anglických havířů [Songs of the English Miners] (A.L. Lloyd), 1v, pf, 1957; Stojí za to žít [It's Worth Living For] (E.F. Burian), T, pf, 1958; Zpěvy albánského lidu [Songs of the Albanian People], 1v, pf, 1958; Zpěvy polských horníků [Songs of the Polish Miners] (A. Dygacz), 1v, pf, 1959

Chbr and solo inst: Suite no.1, 1/4-tone pf, 1925; Fantasie no.1, 1/4-tone pf, 1926; 5 Pieces, vc, 1/4-tone pf, 1926; Fantasie no.2, 1/4-tone pf, 1927; Pf Pieces, 1/4-tone pf, 1927; Suite no.2, 1/4-tone pf, 1927

Principal publishers: Panton, State Publishing House, Supraphon

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS

V. Gregor: Rudolf Kubín: obraz života a díla [Kubín: a picture of his life and work] (Ostrava, 1975)

V. Gregor: 'Hornické inspirace Rudolf Kubína' [Miner inspiration in Rudolf Kubín], OM, iii (1971), 147–54

R. Smetana, ed.: Dějiny české hudební kultury 1890–1945 [The history of Czech musical culture 1890–1945], ii (Prague, 1981), 241–2, 251 [incl. further bibliography]

OLDŘICH PUKL, HELENA HAVLÍKOVÁ

Kubisch, Christina (b Bremen, 31 Jan 1948). German composer and sound-installation artist. She studied at the Akademie der Bildenden Künste in Stuttgart (1967–8) and at the Musikhochschulen in Hamburg, Graz and Zürich (1969–74). In 1974 she moved to Milan, where she studied at the Milan Conservatory with Donatoni and Paccagnini. In performance events of the 1970s she began to integrate spatial areas and unusual performance techniques. After studying electrical engineering at the technical institute in Milan (1980–81), she concentrated on sound installations and sound sculptures, working with electro-magnetic earphones that interact with electric cables to depict the history and structure of spaces. Lighting has played an important role in her works from 1986 (see illustration). In 1991 she began to use solar energy, increasing the fluidity of transitions between the visible and the audible, the natural and the technological. She has taught at art colleges in Münster, Berlin and Paris (from 1990) and was appointed professor of music at the Hochschule für Bildende Künste, Saarbrücken, in 1994. Her many honours include membership in the Berlin Akademie der Künste (from 1997) and the Heidelberg Prize for Women Artists (1999).

Christina Kubisch's sound installation 'Klangzelt', Gesellschaft für Aktuelle Kunst, Bremen, 1987

WORKS
(selective list)

Single installations: Christina Kubisch, Milan, 1976; Kubisch und Plessi, Aachen and Antwerp, 1978; A History in Soundcards, La Spezia, 1979; Modern Art Galerie, Vienna, 1979; Ecoutez le murs, Lyons, 1981; Retroscena – un percorso magnetico, Milan, 1982; On Air, Monte San Savino, 1984; Senteiri magnetici, Morimondo, 1984; Klanginstallationene, Bremen, 1985; Magnetic Air, Vercelli, 1985; Iter magneticum, Berlin, 1986; Soundscape, Amsterdam, 1986; Planetarium, Eindhoven, 1987; Kraterzonen, Berlin, 1988; Landscape, Canada, 1989; Orte der Zeit, Schwäbisch Hall and Munich, 1989; Grenzgänge, Heilbronn, 1990; Landschaft, Kassel, 1990; Magnetic Forest, Kyoto, 1991; Music Between Parallel Wires, Japan, 1991; Nachzeit, Berlin, 1991; ALBA, New Zealand, 1992; Colunas sonoras, Munich, 1992; Natura morte, Berlin, 1992; The True and the False, Tokyo, 1992; Azur, Neuenkirchen, 1993; consecutio temporum I–III, Kleve, Berlin and Rio de Janeiro, 1994; Watching Out, London, 1994; Acht Säulen und ein Raum, Ulm, 1996; Zwischenräume, Saarbrücken, 1996; Dodici luci e undici suoni, Rome, 1997; Über die Stille, Bremen, 1997; Mausoleum, Berlin, 1998

Groups of installations: Frauen, Kunst – Neue Tendenzen, Innsbruck, 1975; Foto e idea, Parma, 1976; 02 23 03, Montreal, 1977; Künstlerinnen International von 1877–1977, Berlin, 1977; European Artists, New York, 1978; materializzazione del linguaggio, Venice, 1978; Audio Scene, Vienna, 1979; Sprachen jenseits von Dichtung, Münster, 1979; Für Augen und Ohren, Berlin, 1980; Das graphische Bild von Musik, Vienna, 1980; Eine Nacht in der Oper, Graz, 1981; Aperto, Venice, 1982; Voix et son, Paris, 1982; aktuell '83, Munich, 1983; Geo d'arta, Vienna, 1983; Installation und Performance im Stadtraum, Münster, 1984; Alles und noch viel mehr, Berne, 1985; Gaudeamus Music Week, Amsterdam, 1985; Ein anderes Klima, Düsseldorf, 1986; Muziek Aktuel, The Hague, 1986; Animal Art, Graz, 1987; documenta 8, Kassel, 1987; Audiowerkstatt, Berlin, 1988; Stanze del Tempo, Milan, 1988; ars viva, Hamburg, 1989; Blau, Bauhaus, Dessau, 1992; Die sehnsucht der elektronischen Medien nach der Natur, Schwäbisch Gmünd, 1992; Achetas Space, Athens, 1993; Donaueschinger Musiktage, 1993; Memento, Prague, 1994; Poiesis, Hamburg, 1994; Prison Sentences, Philadelphia, 1995; Sound Art '95, Hanover, 1995; Kunst im Kasten, Berlin, 1996; sonambiente – festival hören und sehen, Berlin, 1996; Donaueschinger Musiktage, 1997; in medias res, Istanbul, 1997; Kunst unter Tage, St Ingbert, 1998; post naturam – nach der Natur, Münster and Darmstadt, 1998; Sound Art in Germany, Sydney, 1998

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. de la Motte-Haber: Musik und Bildende Kunst (Laaber, 1990)
M. Helmig, ed.: Klangportraits 6 (Berlin, 1991)

BETTINA BRAND

Kubo, Mayako (b Kobe, 5 Dec 1947). German composer of Japanese birth. She studied composition in Vienna with Haubenstock-Ramati and in Germany with Lachenmann. In 1985 she settled in Berlin. Her compositional style shows the influence of her piano training (in Tokyo and Vienna) and her study of electro-acoustic music. A renunciation of stylistic unity, characterized by changes from one medium or genre to another, is central to her musical aesthetic. Her works often contain references to literature, current events and biographical material, and quote from German and Japanese folksong, Viennese waltzes and other musical sources. Some of her compositions are emphatically experimental, employing unconventional performance techniques to produce 'noise'.

An analysis of structurally and socially conditioned violence is a common thread running through Kubo's works. In radio plays such as Ich bin 99 Jahre alt (1988), she uses speech to comment on social development; in the Klavierstück für zwei Hände 'Das Lied vom armen Mann' (1980) and Yasuko II (1996), borrowed folk material helps to illustrate the violence to which people are exposed in different societies. Her output also contains a number of compositions, including Studie für Fingerhut (1986) and the opera Rashomon (1994–6), that expose rape as the worst abuse of power.

WORKS
(selective list)

DRAMATIC

Radio plays: Was ist für Sie Elektronische Musik?, 1977, collab. K. Abe; Ich bin 99 Jahre alt, 1988; Mother, Children, Lovers, People II, 1988; Vater! Gesang einer verlerene Figur, 1992

Other: Spinnfaden (ballet), chorus, orch, 1979–80; Mothers, Children, Lovers, People I (ballet), tape, 1981–2; Schweigen (chbr op, prol, 3 scenes), 1v, ens, 1983–4; Montaru 3b, 2 actors, fl, vn, sax, perc, 1989; Rashomon (op, 2, Kubo, after R. Akutagawa: Im Dickicht), 1994–6, Graz, 29 Sept 1996

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Arachnoidea, 1980; Umsteigen, 4 str qt, str, 1981; Pf Conc., 1985–6; Röslein, Röslein, orch, vn obbl, 1993; Yasuko II, chbr orch, 1996

Chbr and solo inst: Aktionen, fl, pf, 1978; Suite Sumi-e, str qt, 1978–9; In und Yo, fl, ob, cl, vn, vc, 2 perc, 1979; Miniatur I, ens, 1982; No.91 Vorspiel-Nachspiel, cl, b cl, 1983; Le mie passacaglie, 2 gui, 1984; Mythos der Kopierer, 5 pfmrs, 1988; Auf den Sa(e)iten, gui, str qt, 1989; Musikalische Landschaft I 'Natur', sax, trbn, 2 gui, perc, 1989; La suite ritrovata, Baroque lute, 1990; Ich kann es aber durch Töne, 2 fl, 1991; Versuch über den Turm von Pisa mit einem Nachspiel, 2 gui, 1992; 5 Mauer-Frag., fl + pic + b fl, cl + b cl, vn, va, vc, pf, 1994; Yasuko I, fl, basset-hn, 1995; Schachspiel für 16 junge Musiker, 2 fl, 2 rec, 2 vn, 2 gui, 8 accdn, 1996

Pf: Studie für Fingerhut, 1986; Berlinisches Tagebuch, 1990; Tableaux für junge Pianisten, 6 hands, 1991; Tokyo-Notizen, 4 hands, 1993

VOCAL

Yogi, chorus, 1979; Masago-Lieder (R. Akutagawa), Mez, chbr ens, 1992; Dokoedemo, S, vn, 1993; 2 italienische Lieder, S, pf, 1993; Imakosowa – Brich auf! (D. Kunikida), S, ww, perc, pf, 1995; 6 Volkslieder (E. Herbeck), A, perc, 1995–6; Ritual für Träume, S, shō, 1996

ELECTRO-ACOUSTIC

Iterum meditemur for Hiroshima, trbn, tape, 1978; Bach-Variationen, 8-track tape, 1980; Klavierstück für zwei Hände 'Das Lied vom armen Mann', pf, perc, tape rec, 1980; Bach-Variationen, improvising inst, tape, 1982–4; Musikalische Landschaft II 'Stadtmusik', sax, trbn, vn, gui, perc, tape, 1989; Am Fenster, 2 fl, 2 voicetriggers, 1990; Tanz der zwölf Kimonos, 3 dancers, sax, perc, live elecs, 1991

Principal publishers: Ariadne, Breitkopf & Härtel, Verlag Neue Musik

CHRISTIAN SCHEIB

Kučera, Václav (b Prague, 29 April 1929). Czech composer, musicologist and administrator. In 1948 he entered Charles University, Prague, to read musicology, music teaching and aesthetics; he then spent five years in Moscow (1951–6) studying composition with Shebalin at the conservatory and musicology with R.I. Gruber and Tsukkerman. On his return he was appointed head of the department of foreign music at Czech Radio in Prague, moving in 1959 to take charge of the department for the study of contemporary music in the Union of Czech Composers. From 1962 to 1969 he worked in the institute for musicology of the Czechoslovak Academy of Sciences, and in 1969 he was made general secretary of the Union of Czech Composers. In 1975 he was appointed to the chair of composition at the Prague Academy of Musical Arts (AMU), becoming professor in 1988.

During the 1950s his music was deeply influenced by folklore and retained close links with Romanticism. He became acquainted with the new music of western Europe in the mid-1960s, and this changed his development. From that time he made considerable use of electronic means, working at the electronic music studio of Czech Radio in Plzeň. His work from the end of the 1970s and early 80s is characterized by transparency and simplified form and means of expression, all of which has strengthened the monumental nature of his work. This shift is also evident from his choice of subject matter, dominated now by an interest in Czech history and culture. In the 1980s Kučera turned increasingly towards vocal genres. He is recipient of the Queen Marie-José prize (1970, for Obraz, 'Picture'), the Italia Prize (1972, for Lidice) and the award of the Union of Czech Composers (1983, for the string quartet Vědomí souvislostí, 'Consciousness of Continuities').

He has given papers at international television conferences in Prague (1985, 1986).

WORKS
(selective list)

ORCHESTRAL

Sym., 1962; Krysař [The Pied Piper], fl, 2 chbr orch, 1969; Obraz [Picture], pf, orch, 1966–70; Salut, 1975; Operand, chbr orch, 1979; Život bez chyby [Life without Fault] (ballet, 1, V. Jindrová), 1979; Avanti, 1981; Balada a romance, chbr orch, 1984; Concierto imaginativo, gui, str, 1994; Criterion, 1997; Guitariana, gui orch/gui qt, 1997; Vzývání radosti [Invocation of Joy], gui orch/gui qt, 1997; Hovory důvěrné [Intimate Conversations], double concertino, b cl, pf, str, 1998

VOCAL

Modrá planeta [The Blue Planet], male chorus, 1964; Amoroso (cycle), Mez, fl, hp, 1975; Orbis pictus, chorus, ancient insts, 1975; Zpívéme o jara [Singing about Spring] (M. Florien), children's chorus, 1977; Galantní písně [Gallant Songs] (V. Lucemburský), Mez, fl, cl, va, 1978; Catharsis (W. Shakespeare), S, chbr ens, 1979; Pták [The Bird] (V. Závada), spkr, str qt, mar, 1983; Maluje malíř [The Painter is Painting] (J. Brukner), children's chorus, 1984; Hořké a jiné písně [Bitter and Other Songs] (J. Kainar), S, pf, 1986; Vážná chvíle [A Serious Hour] (R.M. Rilke), S, gui, 1986; Svoboda [Freedom] (P. Eluard), male chorus, 1991; Son 3 notti che non dormo, children's chorus, pf, 1994; Pax et libertas (Kučera), chorus, 1996

OTHER WORKS

Chbr and solo inst: Dramas, 9 insts, 1961; Protests, vn, pf, tmp, 1963; Genesis, fl, hp, 1965; Hic sunt homines, pf qt, 1965; Spectra, dulcimer, 1965; Diptychon, fl, b cl, pf, perc, 1966; Duodrama, b cl, pf, 1967; To Be, perc qt, 1968; Invariant, b cl, pf, tape, 1969; Argot, brass qnt, 1970; Scenario, fl, vn, va, vc, 1970; Diario, gui, 1971; Taboo a due boemi, b cl, pf, perc, 1972; Manifest jara 'Na parnět prazskélo Května 1945' [Spring Manifesto 'In Memory of Prague May 1945'], 4 players, 1974; Vědomí souvislostí [Consciousness of Continuities], str qt, 1976; Aforimy [Aphorisms], vn, pf, 1978; Epigramy [Epigrams], vn, vc, 1978; Horizonty [Horizons], 5 players, 1978; Rosen für Rose, hp, 1980; Science Fiction, jazz qnt, 1980; Akvarely [Aquarelles], fl, gui, 1981; Capriccia [Capriccios] vn, gui, 1982; Kardiogramy, pf, 1983; Erupce [Eruptions], 5 vc, 1984; Novely, gui, 1984; Goghův autoportrét [Gogh's Self-Portrait], b cl, 1985; Prazské ritornely [Prague Ritornelles], b cl, pf, 1986; Předobrazy [Prefigurations] 'Homage to Hans Arp', gui, 1986; Ex abrupto, 2 perc, 1987; Duettina, ob, bn, 1988; Elegie, va, 1988; Pieter Breughel Inspirations, fl, b cl, pf, 1988; Consonanza, 2 ob, eng hn, 1990; Pastoralissimo, hn, 1990; Slavnosti Fantazie [Celebrations of Fantasy], 2 gui, 1991; Oraculum, b cl, hp, 1992; Arcades, trbn, pf, 1993; Ladění [Tuning], pf, 1994; Metathesis, b cl, pf, 1998; Mimesis, dulcimer, hp, 1998

Tape: Labyrinth, Pastorale, Spiral (ballet), 1968; Kinechromie, 1969; Lidice, radio fresco, 1972; Spartacus, 1976

Principal publishers: Panton, Supraphon

WRITINGS

ed.: M.P. Musorgskij: Hudba života (Prague, 1959) [correspondence, documents, etc.]

'Vývoj a obsah Asafjevovy intonačni teorie' [Development and content of Asaf'yev's intonation theory], HV (1961), no.4, pp.7–21

Talent, mistrovství, světový názor [Talent, mastery, world view] (Prague, 1962)

'K problematice uměleckého obrazu v hudbě' [The problem of artistic depiction in music], HV, ii (1965), 553–66
'Variační proces jako transformace významových kvalit modelu', Nové cesty hudby, ii (1970), 183–215 with others: Dějiny české hudební kultury 1890–1945 [History of Czech music culture 1890–1945], ed. R. Smetana, i (Prague, 1972)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS
V. Bokůvková: 'Elektronické studio v Plzni', OM, iv (1972), 161–9
J. Doubravová: 'Tvůrčí estetika Václava Kučery' [The aesthetics of Kučera], HRo, xxxvi (1983), 322–4
J. Doubravová: 'Zápas o současnost nikdy nekončí' [The struggle for contemporaneity never ends], HRo, xlii (1989), 242–5 [interview]
J. Havlík: 'Autorský večer V. Kučery a P. Ebena' [An evening with Kučera and Eben], HRo, xlii (1989), 205 only

OLDŘICH PUKL/JAROMÍR HAVLÍK (text), JAN LEDEČ (work-list, bibliography)

Kuchař [Kucharsch, Kucharz, Kucharž], Jan Křtitel [Johann Baptist] (b Choteč, nr Jičín, 5 March 1751; d Prague, 18 Feb 1829). Czech organist, composer and music teacher. He acquired his basic musical education in Vrchlabí with the cantor and organist A. Tham, and continued learning the organ at the Jesuit colleges at Königgrätz (now Hradec Králové) and Jičín. He completed his musical training with J.N. Seger in Prague, and became the organist of St Jindřich (1772–90). On 1 September 1790 he was appointed organist of the abbey church at the Premonstratensian Strahov monastery in Prague and held this post under the choirmasters Dlabač (1788–1807) and Strniště (from 1807) until his death. From about 1791 to 1797 he was also maestro di cappella of the Italian Opera in Prague. He was active as a teacher of singing, the piano and composition, and as a performer on the harpsichord, piano, musical glasses and mandolin. As an organist he performed in many public concerts, including the Prague performance of Haydn's The Creation (1800). His abilities as an organist were highly praised, particularly by J.G. Naumann. Kuchař's son Joseph, a Premonstratensian at Strahov (under the name Candidus), also played the organ and piano.

Kuchař was an important champion of Mozart in Prague (in Don Giovanni the words 'Si eccelente è il vostro cuoco' are referring directly to Kuchař ('cook' in Czech), who was a member of the Prague opera orchestra at the time of the première). He was the first to arrange vocal scores of Mozart's operas, starting with Le nozze di Figaro (advertised in June 1787). He also composed recitatives for an Italian version of Die Zauberflöte which was performed at the Nostitzsches Nationaltheater in Prague in 1794 and probably also in Dresden and Leipzig performances that year. Despite Kuchař's contemporary esteem, his extant compositions are not above average quality for the Classical period. Only a few of the organ fantasias and preludes are notable for their hints of early Romanticism.

WORKS

MSS mainly in CZ-Bm, Pk, Pnm, Pu

Org: Partita, D-Bsb; Fantasia, g, ed. in MAB, xii (1953, 3/1973); Fantasia, e, ed. M. Šlechta in Oblíbené varhanní skladby (Prague, 1970); Fantasia, d, ed. in MVH, xxi (1968, 5/1989); Fantasia, E♭, 1 movt ed. in MVH, xxi (1968, 3/1974); 4 preludes, ed. [C.F. Pitsch] in Museum für Orgel-Spieler (Prague, 1832–4), 1 ed. F. Bachtík and S. Jiránek in Škola na varhany (Prague, n.d.), 1 ed. Šlechta in Organistae bohemici (Prague, 1970, 2/1972); Fugue, a, ed. in Museum für Orgel-Spieler (Prague, 1832–4), Škola na varhany (Prague, n.d.), DČHP, no.153 (1958); Pastorella, D, ed. in Organistae bohemici (Prague, 1970, 2/1972), MVH, lvi (1991); [untitled], 1826, frag. CZ-Pnm; 2 concs., A (inc.), F (doubtful); others, lost

Vocal: O salutaris hostia, motet, org concertante; 3 gratulatory cants., incl. Cantata Miloni abbati, CZ-Pnm; Gratulatory song (B.J. Dlabač), for V. Raitolar, mayor of Nebušice, 1v; other sacred works, incl. arrs. of hymns, songs, org accs. for plainchant, some lost

Other: Balli tedeschi, orch [for A. Salieri: La grotta di Trofonio], Prague, 1785, also arr. hpd/pf; vocal scores of Mozart: Le nozze di Figaro, Il dissoluto punito (Don Giovanni) [also arr. str qt, CZ-Bm], Così fan tutte, Il flauto magico (Die Zauberflöte) [with recits], La clemenza di Tito; sonatas, pf 2/4 hands, lost; others, pf/glass harmonica/mand, lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GerberNL; MGG1 (J. Bužga)
J.F. von Schönfeld, ed.: Jb der Tonkunst von Wien und Prag (Vienna, 1796/R), 123, 151
G.J. Dlabacž: Allgemeines historisches Künstler-Lexikon (Prague, 1815/R), ii, 148ff; iii, 258
P. Nettl: 'Der erste Klavierauszug des Don Giovanni', Mitteilungen der Internationalen Stiftung Mozarteum, no.16 (1956), 36–8
W. Schuh: 'Il flauto magico', Umgang mit Musik (Zürich, 1970, 2/1971), 22–36
Z. Pilková: 'Doba osvícenského absolutismu (1740–1810)' [The age of enlightened absolutism], Hudba v českých dějinách: od středověku do nové doby [Music in Czech history: from the Middle Ages to the modern era] (Prague, 1983, 2/1989), 211–84, esp. 218, 271–2, 278, 318
J. Pešková and T. Volek, eds.: Mozartův Don Giovanni: výstava k 200. výročí světové premiéry v Praze 1787–1987 [Mozart's Don Giovanni: an exhibition to mark the 2nd centenary of the world première in Prague] (Prague, 1987)
V. Ptáčkova, ed.: Mozartův Don Giovanni v Praze (Prague, 1987)
J. Berkovec: Musicalia v pražském periodickém tisku 18. století [Music references in 18th-century Prague periodicals] (Prague, 1989), 106
V. Kyas: 'Otazníky nad Kuchařovým originálem: Brněnský klavírní výtah Mozartova Dona Giovanniho v úpravě J.K. Kuchaře' [Concerning Kuchař's source: the piano arrangement of Mozart's Don Giovanni by J.K. Kuchař], OMm xxiv (1992), 104–10 [the arr., not in Kuchař's hand, seems earlier than the Prague version]

MILAN POŠTOLKA

Küchler [Kücheler, Kichler, Kiechler], Johann (b Quedlinburg, 1738; d Mainz, 16 Jan 1790). German bassoonist and composer. According to Eitner, he spent seven years in France and six in the Palatinate, apparently in military bands. He was in Paris in the 1770s, and served as a composer and musicien du roi at the court in Versailles. In 1780 he became a supernumerary in the Hofkapelle in Bonn, and he received a post as court bassoonist there in 1781; his activity in Bonn apparently ended in 1786, though it was not until March 1788 that his name was removed from the court rolls (Braubach). He appeared in Paris in the 1780s, playing in the orchestra of the Concert Spirituel. On 1 January 1788 he was at the electoral court in Mainz as second bassoonist (his son Friedrich had already been first bassoonist there for two years). Küchler was a recognized instrumental composer in his own time, and his works lie within the stylistic range of the Mannheim school. He was famous mainly as a bassoon virtuoso in the 1780s, when both C.G. Neefe (in Cramer's Magazin der Musik, i, 1783/R, 386) and Forkel praised his playing.

WORKS

Azalia [Azakia] (op), Bonn, 1782 or 1783, cited in EitnerQ

Orch: 1ère sinfonie concertante, orch/str qt (Paris, n.d.), lost; 3me sinfonie concertante, B♭, orch/str qt (Paris, n.d.); 2 syms. with obbl bn, cited in FétisB; Concerto a violino principale (Versailles, n.d.); Bn Conc., B♭, D-SWl

Chbr: 6 quatuors concertante, cl, vn, va, bn/vc [op.1] (Paris, 1773); 6 quartetti concertanti, str qt, op.4 (Paris, 1774); 6 Duos, 2 cl, op.4 (Paris, 1774); Str Trios, op.4 (Paris, 1777), lost; Str Qt (Paris, 1780 or 1781), lost; 6 quatuors, cl, vn, va, bn/vc, op.4 (Paris, n.d.); 6

trios concertants, 2 vn, b, op.3 (Paris, n.d.); 6 Duos, 2 vn, cited in FétisB

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ
J.N. Forkel: Musikalischer Almanach für Deutschland ... 1784 (Leipzig, 1783/R), 148
E. Forbes, ed.: Thayer's Life of Beethoven (Princeton, NJ, 1964, 2/1967)
M. Braubach: 'Die Mitglieder der Hofmusik unter den vier letzten Kurfürsten von Köln', Colloquium amicorum: Joseph Schmidt-Görg zum 70. Geburtstag, ed. S. Kross and H. Schmidt (Bonn, 1967), 26–63
U. Rau: Die Kammermusik für Klarinette und Streichinstrumente im Zeitalter der Wiener Klassik (diss., U. of Saarbrücken, 1975)
J. Newhill: 'The Contribution of the Mannheim School to Clarinet Literature', MR, xl (1979), 90–122

ULRICH RAU

Kücken, Friedrich Wilhelm (b Bleckede, Hanover, 16 Nov 1810; d Schwerin, 3 April 1882). German conductor and composer. He learnt the piano at an early age and played chamber music at home before moving to Schwerin, where he studied thoroughbass with Friedrich Lührss, the piano with Paul Aron and George Rettberg as well as the violin and flute; he joined the theatre orchestra as second flautist, later becoming violist and first violinist. Due to the success of his song Ach, wie wärs möglich dann the Grand Duke Paul Friedrich von Mecklenburg-Schwerin invited him to court. In 1832 he went to Berlin for further instruction in counterpoint with Joseph Birnbach; he composed more songs, instrumental music and an opera Die Flucht nach der Schweiz, which was first performed on 26 February 1839. He studied counterpoint with Sechter in Vienna (1841–3) and was active in Switzerland before making a trip to Paris to study orchestration with Halévy and vocal writing with Bordogni. His best-known opera, Der Prätendent, was written in Paris and first performed in Stuttgart (1847). Kücken returned to Germany in 1847 and from 1851 until his retirement in 1861 held important conducting posts at the Stuttgart court theatre.

Kücken's reputation as a composer rests mainly on his solo songs and duets, which were performed in London, Paris and Moscow. Works such as Das Mädchen von Juda were especially popular in London, where his works were published by Wessel. He captured the mood of the text in the accompaniment (as in the strophic Maurisches Ständchen) or in folklike settings (Herzallerliebstes Schatzerl and Gretelein); other songs are characterized by more subtle harmonies (Wasserfahrt) or melodic simplicity (Du bist wie eine Blume). Besides his two operas, he also wrote choral works, piano pieces and other instrumental works.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ADB (R. Eitner)
Obituaries, AMz, new ser., xvii (1882), 253–4, 268–70; Neue Musik-Zeitung, iii (1882), nos.9–10

GAYNOR G. JONES

Kuckertz, Josef (b Würseln, nr Aachen, 24 Nov 1930; d Berlin, 25 March 1996). German ethnomusicologist. After studying choral conducting at the Rheinische Musikschule in Cologne, Kuckertz studied musicology from 1957 to 1962 at Cologne University with Karl Gustav Fellerer and Marius Schneider. He took the doctorate with Schneider in 1962 with a dissertation on Romanian colinde collected by Bartók. Subsequently he became assistant lecturer at the musicology institute at Cologne University, where he completed his Habilitation in musicology in 1967 with a work on form and melodic structure of south Indian music. He was appointed professor at the department of ethnomusicology of Cologne University in 1970, and in 1980 he became professor of comparative musicology at the Freie Universität, Berlin, a post he held until his death. He was also editor of the Jahrbuch für musikalische Volks- und Völkerkunde (1977–96) and Beiträge zur Ethnomusikologie (1980–96). He was awarded an honorary doctorate from the Pontificio Istituto di Musica Sacra, Rome, in 1986. The focal point of his research was the musical traditions of South Asia, particularly southern India, and the Middle East. Most of his fieldwork was conducted in India and in Iran. His work was largely concerned with melodic structures and the relationships between classical music, regional folk music and local 'tribal' music.

WRITINGS

Gestaltvariation in den von Bartók gesammelten rumänischen Colinden (diss., U. of Cologne, 1962; Regensburg, 1963)
'Zum Formempfinden in der indischen Musik', MF, xvii (1964), 414–20
'Die metrische Konzeption des Geistlichen Konzerts "Venite Filiae Sion" von Cornelius Burgh', Studien zur Musikgeschichte des Rheinlands, iii (Cologne, 1965), 22–7
Form und Melodiebildung der karnatischen Musik Südindiens im Umkreis der vorderorientalischen und der nordindischen Kunstmusik (Habilitationsschrift, U. of Cologne, 1967; Wiesbaden, 1970)
'Der Tāla in der südindischen Kunstmusik', Jb für musikalische Volks- und Völkerkunde, iii (1967), 85–9, 134–7
'Die Satztechnik in den mehrstimmigen Messordinarien des 14. Jahrhunderts', KJb, lii (1968), 45–70
'Die Melodietypen der westsyrischen liturgischen Gesänge', KJb, liii (1969), 61–98
'Bākhāṃ-Songs from Jammu, North India', Yugoslav Folklore Association: Congress XVII: Poreč 1970, 351–4
'Origin and Development of the Rabāb', Sangeet natak, xv (1970), 16–30
'Gesänge der Toḍa', Musicae scientiae collectanea: Festschrift Karl Gustav Fellerer, ed. H. Hüschen (Cologne, 1973), 297–315
'Die Kunstmusik Südindiens im 19. Jahrhundert', Musikkulturen Asiens, Afrikas und Ozeaniens im 19. Jahrhundert, ed. R. Günther (Regensburg, 1973), 97–130
'Die klassische Musik Indiens und ihre Aufnahme in Europa im 20. Jahrhundert', AMw, xxxi (1974), 170–84; Eng. trans. as 'Reception of Classical Indian Music in Western Countries during the 20th Century', Journal of the Indian Musicological Society, vii/4 (1976), 5–14
'Fragen zur Übertragung einheimischer Musik in den Gottesdienst', 'Indische Musik', Musica indigena: Rome 1975, 26–35
'Musik in Asien', Musik International, ed. E. Pütz, H.W. Schmidt and K. Stockhausen, Die Garbe: Musikkunde, v (Cologne, 1975), 223–90, 370–91
'Origin and Construction of the Melodies in Baul Songs of Bengal', YIFMC, vii (1975), 85–91 with M.T. Massoudieh: 'Volksgesänge aus Iran', Beiträge zur Musik des Vorderen Orients und seinen Einflussbereichen: Kurt Reinhard zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. A. Simon, Baessler-Archiv, new ser., xxiii/1 (Berlin, 1975), 217–29 with M.T. Massoudieh: Musik in Būšehr (Süd-Iran) (Munich, 1976)
'Gesänge der Santāl', Neue ethnomusikologische Forschungen: Festschrift Felix Hoerburger, ed. P. Baumann, R.M. Brandl and K. Reinhard (Laaber, 1977), 209–20
'Konstante Faktoren und Komponenten in der mündlichen Überlieferung der indischen Musik', Mitteilungen der Deutschen Gesellschaft für Musik des Orients, xiv (1977), 82–6
'Struktur und Aufführung mittelalterlicher Gesänge aus der Perspektive vorderorientalischer Musik', Basler Jb für historische Musikpraxis, i (1978), 95–110
'Tāla, Takt und Trommelspiel: zum Metrum und Rhythmus in der abendländischen, der vorderorientalischen und der indischen Musik', Musik und Bildung, xi/10 (1979), 597–602
'Zur Niederschrift der Musik aussereuropäischer Kulturen', Notenschrift und Aufführung, ed. T. Göllner (Tutzing, 1980), 15–40

'Der südindische Rāga Khamās', Ars musica, musica scientia: Festschrift Heinrich Hüschen, ed. D. Altenburg (Cologne, 1980), 319–30 with B. Chaitanya Deva: Bhārūḍ, vāghyā-muralī and the Daff-gān of the Deccan: Studies in the Regional Folk Music of South India (Munich, 1981)
'Die Begriffe "Tradition" und "Geschichtlichkeit" in der ethnomusikologischen Forschung', GFMKB: Bayreuth 1981, 42–8
'Cooperation as a Process of Learning: Experience from India (with a note by B. Chaitanya Deva)', Musikologische Feldforschung: Aufgaben, Erfahrungen, Techniken (Hamburg, 1981), 66–75
Musik in Asien, i: Indien und der Vordere Orient (Kassel, 1981)
'Mehrstimmigkeit in Indien', Musica antiqua, VI: Bydgoszcz 1982, 499–512
'Bartóks Volksmusikforschung: aus der Sicht der Vergleichenden Musikwissenschaft', ÖMz, xxxix (1984), 78–85
'Frauengesänge aus Badāmi in Karnataka, Südindien', Musikalische Volkskunde-Aktuell: Festschrift für Ernst Klusen, ed. G. Noll and M. Bröcker (Bonn, 1984), 279–87
'Der südindische Rāga Āhirī', Weine, meine Laute ...': Gedenkschrift Kurt Reinhard, ed. C. Ahrens and others (Laaber, 1984), 171–84
'Der singende Mensch', Musices aptatio: liber annuarius 1986, 167–78
'Folk Songs in Karnataka', Journal of the Music Academy Madras, lxiv (1988), 170–79
'Die Oboe in der musikalischen Hochkunst, der Volks- und Stammesmusik Indiens', Jb für musikalische Volks- und Völkerkunde, xiii (1988), 54–8
'Skala und Melodie "im Rāga": zum Gestaltungsprinzip der südindischen Musik', Maqām – Raga – Zeilenmelodik: Berlin 1988, 277–86
'The Rāga-System of South India', The Śāstric Tradition in Indian Arts: Heidelberg 1986 (Wiesbaden, 1989), 379–92
'Wort und Melodie in südindischen Bhajan-Gesängen', Die Sprache der Musik: Festschrift Klaus Wolfgang Niemöller, ed. J.P. Fricke and others (Regensburg, 1989), 347–60
ed., with others: Neue Musik und Tradition: Festschrift für Rudolf Stephan (Laaber, 1990) [incl. 'Die Vergleichende Musikwissenschaft in Berlin – Ansätze und Erfahrungen', 559–70]
'Songs of Brahmans in South Karnataka, India', Tradition and its Future in Music: Osaka 1990 (Tokyo, 1991), 187–96
'Presentations of musicians in concerts and workshops', Music in the Dialogue of Cultures: Traditional Music and Cultural Policy, ed. M.P. Baumann (Wilhelmshaven, 1991), 248–54
'Musikalische Werke im Kontakt zwischen den Traditionen Europas und Asiens', Beziehungen zwischen Orient und Okzident: Abhandlungen zur Geschichte der Geowissenschaften und Religion/Umwelt-Forschung, viii/2, ed. M. Büttner and W. Leitner (Bochum, 1993), 95–122; Eng. trans. in Music Cultures in Interaction (Tokyo, 1994), 33–59
'Bartóks frühe Transkription und künstlerische Bearbeitung von Volksmelodien', Neues musikwissenschaftliches Jb, ii (1993), 145–65
'Mündlichkeit und Schriftlichkeit in der nicht-abendländischen Musik', Festschrift zum 60. Geburtstag von Wolfgang Suppan, ed. B. Habla (Tutzing, 1993), 155–66
'Das Skalensystem der altmesopotamischen Musik', Baghdader Mitteilungen, xxiv (1993), 185–91
'The Oboe and its Music in Asia', 'Reaction to European Music in India from the 18th to the Early 20th Century', Music Cultures in Interaction (Tokyo, 1994), 25–32, 225–230
'Religiöser Gesang zwischen Volkslied und Rāga-Melodik in Karnataka, Südindien', Vergleichend-systematische Musikwissenschaft: Franz Födermayr zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. E.T. Hilscher and T. Antonicek (Tutzing, 1994), 277–95
'Zur Situation der Vergleichenden Musikwissenschaft in Berlin', JbSIM (1994), 417–25
'Zum Verständnis der Worte in den Gesängen von Tyāgarāja', Festschrift Klaus Bruhn zur Vollendung des 65. Lebensjahres, ed. N. Balbir and J.K. Bautze (Reinbek, 1994), 361–73
'Ethnomusikologie im Umkreis der Wissenschaften', MF, xlviii (1995), 117–30
'Geschichte und Konzepte der indischen Musik', Indien: Kultur, Geschichte, Politik, Umwelt, Wirtschaft: ein Handbuch, ed. D. Rothermund (Munich, 1995), 295–315
'Modus und Melodie im persischen Dastgāh Homāyūn', Studien zur Musikgeschichte: eine Festschrift für Ludwig Finscher, ed. A. Laubenthal and K. Kusan-Windweh (Kassel, 1995), 773–81
'Was ist indische Musik?', AMw, liii (1996), 91–104
'Gedanken zum Modus und zur Melodie eines koptischen Gesangs', Kirchenmusik in Geschichte und Gegenwart: Festschrift Hans Schmidt, ed. H. Klein and K.W. Niemöller (Cologne, 1998), 55–62

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Schumacher, ed.: Von der Vielfalt musikalischer Kultur: Festschrift für Josef Kuckertz (Salzburg, 1992) [incl. list of pubns, 599–614]
'Mündliche Überlieferung und historisches Bewussstein', Ethnomusikologie und Historische Musikwissenschaft: Gemeinsame Ziele, gleiche Methoden?, ed. C.H. Mahling and St. Münch (Tutzing, 1997), 69–74
ed. S. Thielemann: Essays On Indian Music by Josef Kuckertz, Journal of the Indian Musicological Society, xxix (1998) [incl biographical sketch, i–ii; list of pubns, 182–98]

HANS HEINRICH EGGEBRECHT/RÜDIGER SCHUMACHER

Kuckuck (Ger.). A bird-imitating ORGAN STOP (Vogelgesang).

Kučukalić, Zija (b Sarajevo, 25 Feb 1929). Bosnian-Hercegovinan musicologist. He graduated in art history (1953) and music history (1954) from Zagreb University, later specializing at the Sorbonne (1963) and Darmstadt. He studied with Dragotin Cvetko at Ljubljana University, gaining the PhD in 1968 with a dissertation on Serbian Romantic song. He worked briefly as a producer at Radio Sarajevo before joining the Sarajevo Music Academy (1957), rising to assistant professor (1961) and professor (1975). He was editor-in-chief of Zvuk (1967–86), and graduated in systematic musicology from Amsterdam University in 1987. In 1992 he moved to the Netherlands, where he became a freelance musicologist and lecturer.

His musicological interests include the music of the southern Slav peoples, and the aesthetics and phenomenology of music. His textbook on music appreciation, Osnove muzičkog obrazovanja (1966), has undergone numerous reprints and translations.

WRITINGS

Likovi savremenih bosansko-hercegovačkih kompozitora [Portraits of contemporary Bosnian and Hercegovinan composers] (Sarajevo, 1961)
Dvadeset godina Sarajevske opere [20 years of Sarajevo opera] (Sarajevo, 1966)
Osnove muzičkog obrazovanja [Fundamentals of music education] (Sarajevo, 1966, 12/1978)
The Development of Musical Culture in Bosnia and Herzegovina (Sarajevo, 1967)
'Samospevi Josifa Marinkovića' [Marinković's Lieder], MZ, iii (1967), 68–76
'Die Tonkunst Bosniens und der Herzegowina in Vergangenheit und Gegenwart', Zvuk, nos.77–8 (1967), 33–43
'Folk Music as an Influence on Art Music in Yugoslavia', Yugoslav-American Seminar on Music: Sveti Stefan 1968, 179–84
Razvojne karakteristike i dostignuća srpske romantične solo-pjesme [Characteristics of the development and achievements of Serbian Romantic solo song] (diss., U. of Ljubljana, 1968; Sarajevo, 1975 as Srpska romantična solo pjesme)
'Samospevi Petra Konjovića' [Konjović's Lieder], MZ, x (1974), 15–26
Dvadeset godina Udruženja kompozitora BiH [20 years of the Union of Composers of Bosnia and Hercegovina] (Sarajevo, 1975)
Romantična solo-pjesma u Srbiji [Romantic song in Serbia] (Sarajevo, 1975)
Muzička umjetnosti [The art of music] (Sarajevo, 1981, 4/1985)
'Počeci razvoja profesionalne muzičke djelatnosti u Bosni i Hercegovini' [The beginnings of the development of professional musical activities in Bosnia and Hercegovina], MZ, xvii (1981), 61–8
'Die Identität des Künstlerischen Musikwerks', IRASM, xviii (1987), 181–204
Die Struktur des Kunstwerks, mit besonderer Berücksichtigung der Musik (Amsterdam, 1987)
Muzička kultura (Sarajevo, 1988)

ZDRAVKO BLAŽEKOVIĆ

Kuczynski, Paul (b Berlin, 10 Nov 1846; d Berlin, 21 Oct 1897). German composer. He studied with Bülow and Friedrich Kiel. By profession a banker, he was friendly with a number of musicians, especially Adolf Jensen, whose personality and music influenced him; he published Jensen's letters to him, Aus Briefen Adolf Jensens (Berlin, 1879). His connections with Bayreuth are reflected in his Erlebnisse und Gedanken, Dichtungen zu Musikwerken (Berlin, 1898). His compositions include vocal and instrumental works, and he was also said to be an excellent pianist.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. von Hanstein, ed.: Musiker-und Dichterbriefe von Paul Kuczynski (Berlin, 1900)
A. Niggli: Adolf Jensen (Berlin, 1900)

JOHN WARRACK

Kudryashov, Yury Vasil'yevich (b Kostroma, 9 Dec 1929). Russian musicologist. He graduated in 1962 from the Belorussian State Conservatory, Minsk, having studied with Mukharinskaya, and took the Kandidat degree in 1977 at the Leningrad Institute of Theatre, Music and Cinematography with a study on Webern. From 1982 to 1993 he held a senior post at the Institute (later the Zubov Institute for the History of the Arts, St Petersburg). Kudryashov is a specialist in both medieval and 20th-century music. He was the first scholar in the former Soviet Union to have his studies on Webern published; in his unpublished book Ladovïye sistemï zapadnoyevropeyskoy muzïki XX veka ('The Modal Systems of 20th-Century Western European Music', completed 1987), he analysed works by a wide range of composers, including Schoenberg, Messiaen, Golïshev, Vïshnegradsky, Penderecki, Ives and Cowell. He expanded Yavorsky's system of analysis based on the lad ('mode'), classifying them into several types: the duoladovay tonikal'no-tsentralizirovannay model ('tonic-centred dual modes') which belong to the diatonic system; the atonal'nïy monolad ('atonal single modes') created by tritones and seconds (these may be subdivided into those with a sense of tonic and those without); and the sonorno-ladovïye sistemï ('modal systems based on resonances').

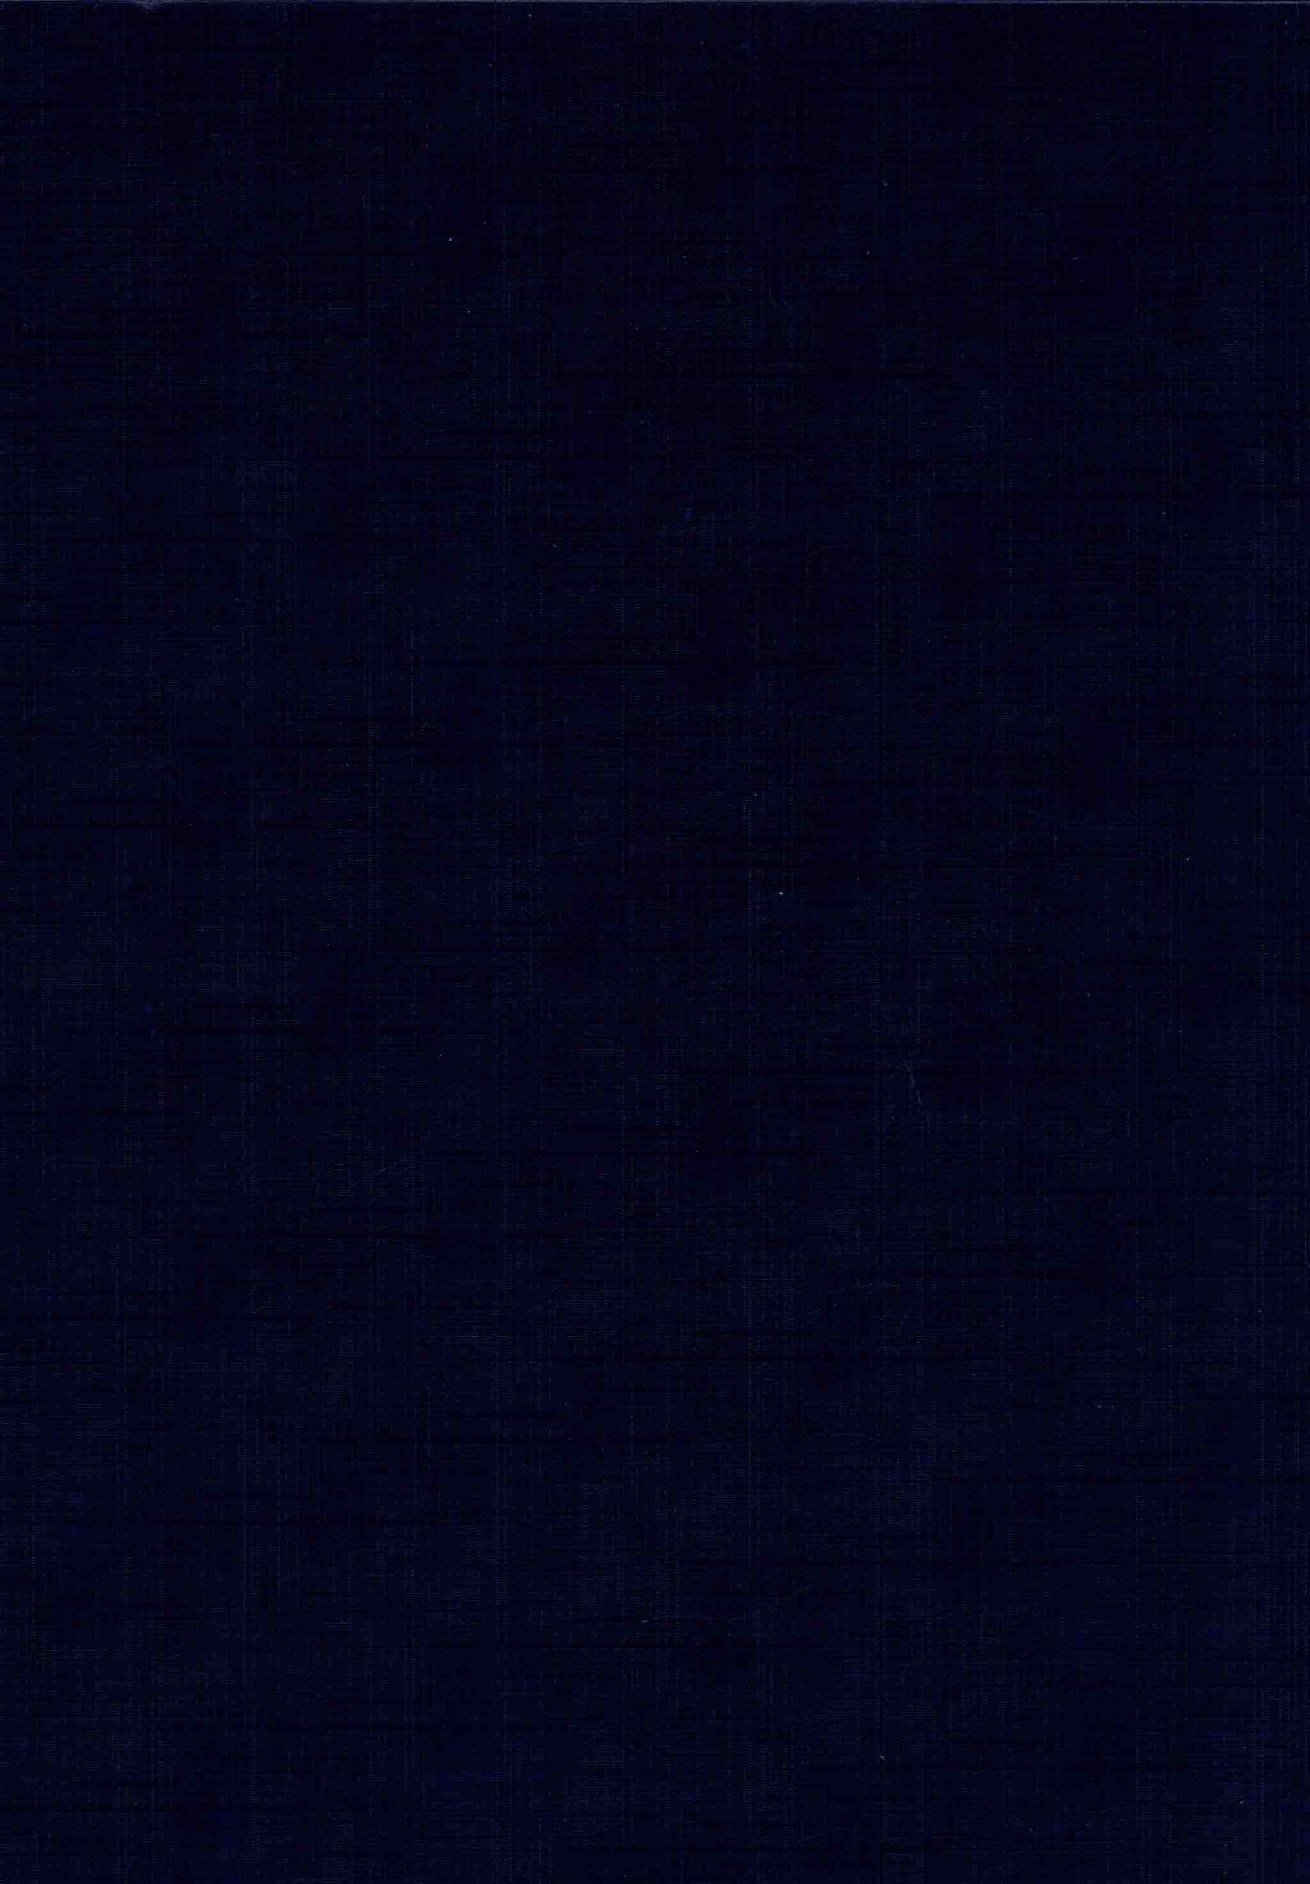
WRITINGS

'Goket v muzïke srednikh vekov' [The hocket in the music of the Middle Ages], Problemï muzïkal'noy nauki, iii (1975), 322–44
Khudozhestvennoye mirovozzreniye Antona Veberna [The artistic world outlook of Anton Webern] (CSc diss., U. of Leningrad, 1977)
'Ėlementï srednevekovoy i rannerenessansnoy polifonii v tvorchestve Veberna' [Elements of the polyphony of the Middle Ages and the Early Renaissance in the work of Webern], Muzïkal'naya klassika i sovremennost', ed. A.L. Porfir'yeva (Leningrad, 1983), 122–58
'Vliyaniye Debyussi na tembrovoye mïshleniye XX veka' [The influence of Debussy on the concept of timbre in the 20th century], Problemï muzïkal'noy nauki, vi (1985), 244–82
'Portret khudozhnika i kompozitora Yefima Golïsheva' [A portrait of the painter and composer Yefim Golïshev], Ėvolyutsionnïye protsessï muzïkal'nogo mïshleniya, ed. A.L. Porfir'yeva (Leningrad, 1986), 119–40
'Muzïkal'naya gotika messï Giyoma de Masho' [Gothic music in the mass of Guillaume de Machaut], Muzïkal'naya kul'tura srednevekov'ya: teoriya, praktika, traditsiya, ed. V.G. Kartsovnik (Leningrad, 1988), 105–28 [with Eng. summary]
ed.: Aspektï teoreticheskogo muzïkoznaniya [Aspects of theoretical musicology] (Leningrad, 1989) [incl. 'Katekhizis teorii sonornogo lada' [The catechism of the resonant mode], 123–43]
'Sonorno-funktsïonal'naya osnova muzïkal'nogo mïshleniya' [The resonant and functional basis of musical thinking], Problemï muzïkoznaniya: muzïka, yazïk, traditsiya, ed. V.G. Kartsovnik (Leningrad, 1990), 60–67



ANDREY YUR'EVICH KOLESNIKOV

Kuen, Johannes. See KHUEN, JOHANNES.

Kuerti, Anton (b Vienna, 21 July 1938). American pianist, teacher and composer, active also in Canada. He studied at the Cleveland Institute of Music with Arthur Loesser, and at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia with Rudolf Serkin. His first appearance with an orchestra was in 1948, with the Boston Pops Orchestra. In 1957 he played with the New York PO and the Cleveland Orchestra, and the next year with the Philadelphia Orchestra. He began to perform regularly with the Toronto SO from 1961 and the Montreal SO from 1963, and made his British début with the LSO in 1965. In 1965 he became professor and pianist-in-residence at the University of Toronto.

His main repertory comprises Beethoven, Schumann, Schubert and Skryabin, but he also plays much Canadian music, and gave the first performances of Oskar Morawetz's Piano Concerto (1963) and Suite (1968), and S.C. Eckhardt-Gramatté's Piano Concerto (1967). He has appeared at music festivals worldwide, and is a founder-member of the Marlboro Trio and founder of the Festival of Sound, Ontario. In 1974–5 he recorded and performed in Toronto and Ottawa the complete Beethoven piano sonatas. Other recordings include the complete Schubert sonatas and the piano concertos of Mendelssohn. His compositions include a symphony Epomeo, a violin sonata, the Linden Suite for piano, works for cello and piano, two string quartets, a concerto for piano (1985), Piano Man Suite (1986) and a clarinet trio (1989). Kuerti, who became a naturalized Canadian, is also a prominent figure in Canadian political life.

T. BROWN/JESSICA DUCHEN

[General Information]
书名=新格罗夫音乐与音乐家辞典　第2版　13
作者=斯坦利·萨迪（STANLEY SADIE）主编
页数=950
SS号=13762888
DX号=
出版日期=2012.10
出版社=长沙湖南文艺出版社